Instead of being able leisurel to pick and choose and deliberately to arm ourselves, relying upon the then existing stability on the other side of the Atlantic, we are not only compelled to arm ourselves entirely by our own efofrts but to do so at the very time when it is imperative that our American industry and plant should be working at top speed to furnish vital weapons of defense to Great Britain in order that she may meet the crisis which is confronting her this Spring and Summer, and thus preserve her fleet as a bulwark in the Atlantic Ocean.

Asks Flexible Means to Act

I think it is manifest that in such a situation every possible effort should be made to simplify all steps in the production of the munitions which in the last analysis are to constitute our defense. I also think it is manifest that expeditious means and clear authority must be provided to assure the prompt distribution of munitions to countries whose defense is important to us. Te be alert in our defense we must have flexible means with which to act.

It is the essence of the President's plan, as I understand it, that the United States shall become virtually the sole purchasing unit for war materials to be ordered from the manufacturers of this country; that there will thus be constituted one great funnel through which all the production of such materials in this country will be ordered and through which the materials, when finished, will flow from the production lines, and that, consistent with our national policy as it has been enunciated and endorsed by the Congress and the people, we shall then be in a position to apportion these munitions among ourselves and other democracies, whose defense is important to us.

This plan has many advantages. It will eliminate the competition of many different purchasing agencies from different countries. I am informed that there are or have been at least a dozen different purchasing commissions from foreign countries operating in this country since the outbreak of this war.

Advantage of One Purchaser

It has also the advantage of enamely, members of the American Government.

Naturally, our conduct at such times will be governed by the interests of the defense of this country. Far from being a surrender of our rights to other interests, however worthy, the provisions of this bill make it possible to place in American hands this important power and responsibility.

Finds Statutes in Conflict

I wish to emphasize another feature of the bill. It gives authority to the Commander-in-Chief to authorize the transfer, sale, lease or other disposition of defense articles on such terms as he deems satisfactory. There are many existing statutes which relate to the disposition of War Department material, and authority to dispose of many types of military equipment can now be found in those statutes. But these statutes have been passed sporadically during a long period of time and have never been codified or revised so as to form a reasonable or workable program of action.

On rather short notice I have had prepared a compilation of such statutes; and that compilation is at the disposition of this committee. The terms and conditions imposed on the transfer vary with the different types of equipment in a way which is haphazard and in many cases totally unrelated to existing conditions. In many cases any efforts to dispose expeditiously of a complete unit of military equipment cannot be effected without enormous delay. In many cases the conditions imposed by the existing statutes are virtually impossible of fulfillment, although other practicable terms equally beneficial to the United States could be easily suggested.

Often the statute will authorize the disposition of the component parts of a unit and yet it will not authorize the disposition of the complete unit equipped to function as an effective weapon. In such a confused situation of the law, you can see how impossible it would be thereunder to render the effective aid to Great Britain which is called for in the present crisis.

If we wish to proceed in a prompt and effective manner, it is essential in my judgment that the Congress provide now in one bill specific and clear authority to transfer all kinds of military equipment, limited only to the determination by the Commander in Chief of considerations necessary for our own defense. Such authority is contained in Paragraph 3 (a) of this bill.

Compares Existing Legislation

I think it may be well to call the attention of this committee to the fact that this bill is not a radical departure from existing legislation. Under the so-called Pittman act (Pub. Rec. Resolution 83, Seventy-sixth Congress), enacted on June 15, 1940, the President may do for American republics many of the things that "are proposed to be authorized in this act for all democracies whose defense is important to us.

Under the Pittman act the President may authorize the manufacture in government factories and arsenals of coast defense articles, anti-aircraft material, and ammunition therefor. For the benefit of American republics he may authorize the procurement or sale of such material, and may use government officials to test, prove, or repair it, and he may also authorize the construction of their vessels of war in our shipyards, the manufacture of armament and equipment for such vessels in government arsenals, as well as other acts of this nature, including the communication of government plans and specifications and information relating to the defense articles covered by that act.

I think it is manifest that today the defense of Great Britain is of at least as great concern to the United States as, say, the defense of Paraguay.

To summarize: I feel that the proposed bill is a forthright and clear grant of power which will enable the President to place in operation the best and simplest plan to carry out a national policy many times stated and endorsed. It substantially assists us in the job of caring for our own needs and the needs of those whose defense is a matter of vital importance to us.

But it leaves in our hands the power to determine at the time when the munitions are completed the country which shall receive them, and thus to insure that this vital decision is made solely in the interest of the defense of the United States. I therefore urge that it be given prompt and favorable consideration by your committee.

The proposed bill will permit such a plan to be carried out, inasmuch as it will empower the President to authorize existing government departments to procure munitions for other countries.

The plan also authorizes the utilization of our existing government establishments for the general defense. The Government of the United States has in the past spent many millions of dollars in the erection and maintenance of our arsenals, in the training of the men who operate them, and in the establishment of inspection forces and proving grounds.

These establishments are designed for the production of munitions of war. In a peaceful democracy such as ours they are the very spearhead of an armament production effort. But under existing law it is, in most cases, impossible to use those facilities except for the particular needs of our own armed forces.

For Full Armament Use

The proposed bill will enable these facilities to be used for the benefit of the countries which the President shall designate. Thus they may be used to their fullest extent not only for our own direct defense, but for our indirect defense by making them available to others where our own interests so require. If we are to render material aid to Great Britain, it would appear that we should certainly be in a position to supplement the efforts of our private industry by the special skill, knowledge and equipment of the only existing American munitions industry—namely, our governmental arsenals.

Finally, and perhaps most important of all, is the degree of control which, under the plan described above, it is possible to retain in the hands of this government with respect to the distribution of the munitions of defense. Not only will this bill permit the authority of our government to be placed behind the solution of our over-all defense production, but it likewise enables us to control the distribution of the products of this program when they are ready for delivery.

The munitions of defense can and will be distributed in accordance with strategic conditions which obtain at the time of the distribution. Those who are interested primarily in the defense of this country and this hemisphere will be the ones who will make the plans for distribution—

Hoover's Aid Stand

[By the Associated Press]

New York, Jan. 16—Former President Herbert Hoover called on the House Foreign Affairs Committee today to write into the aid-to-Britain bill positive definitions of the power to be given President Roosevelt.

In a letter to Committee Chairman Sol Bloom (Dem., N. Y.), who said on Tuesday that the committee would be glad to hear all opponents and supporters of the measure, Hoover said:

"There is unfortunately growing up in the country a bitterness of discussion which it seems to me in the interest of national unity could be allayed by the committee. This division lies largely in the interpretations and implications in respect to the powers proposed to be conferred in this bill and its meaning."

Favors Aid, Opposes War

Saying he favored extending "every practicable aid, short of war, to Britain" but did "not approve of our joining in the war," Hoover listed several points on which the controversy centered.

"For example," he wrote, "citizens of high patriotic thought and experience, who desire to support the President, believe that under the bill and even without any supplemental action by the Congress:

"That battleships and other naval vessels could be given away;

Secretary of War Stimson's Statement

By The Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 16—The text of Secretary Stimson's statement before the House Foreign Affairs Committee on the Aid-to-Britain Bill was as follows:

In what I have to say upon this bill I propose to confine myself, so far as possible, to the matters which have come under my observation as Secretary of War. In respect to the wider aspects of world conditions which the bill is designed to meet, I assume that you gentlemen have been fully advised by the Secretary of State. And in respect to the financial questions of credit, security and international exchange which may be involved in the transactions made possible by this bill, I assume that you have been advised by the Secretary of the Treasury.

Furthermore, I assume that this bill is based upon the proposition that the effective defense of this country in the pending emergency depends in large part upon our

STANDS BY DATA ON BRITISH FUND

Morgenthau Insists Assets Are $1,775,000,000.

Washington, Jan. 16 (A. P.).—Secretary Morgenthau said today that, to the best of his knowledge, the Churchill government in London had no assets available for American purchases besides the $1,775,000,000 of gold, cash and securities which he reported to Congress yesterday.

The Treasury head, at a press conference, described the figures which he presented to the House Foreign Affairs Committee yesterday as the best figures available, and said they left out no wealth, convertible into American dollars, which the Churchill government "could lay its hands on."

Mr. Morgenthau yesterday gave the committee this overall picture of the British financial situation as far as purchases in this country are concerned:

Britain will require $3,019,000,000 in dollar exchange this year. She anticipates dollar-exchange receipts of $1,555,000,000, leaving an operating deficit of $1,464,000,000. To meet this deficit the $1,775,000,000 store of assets must be drawn upon, so that it is estimated that by the year-end only $311,000,000 of the assets will be left to the British.

To his press conference Mr. Morgenthau explained that although the estimate of assets did not contain values for Canadian and other empire investments in the United States, those resources were not available to London.

Declining to estimate the value of these additional assets, he said:

"The British empire is a family and it has the same problems as a human family. Just because some members of the family may have some assets does not necessarily mean that they belong to the rest of the family."

Asked whether England should not be forced to go to the rest of the British empire for financial aid before asking it of America, the Secretary declared:

"All I can say about that is that I favor the lending bill."

Mr. Morgenthau also was asked why the figures he presented to Congress yesterday differed widely from some published estimates of the Commerce Department and Federal Reserve Board. He answered that the other agencies had merely been using the best guesses available to them, while he had received confidential information on actual assets from the British Treasury. The figures were brought to him recently by Sir Frederick Phillips, Under-Secretary of the British Treasury.

Yesterday's figures, Mr. Morgenthau added, also included all the gold production of the British Empire, except for Canada's production, which he explained was kept by Canada for its own needs.

The Secretary said that other agencies had no authentic figures since the war began, and errors in estimates by them were caused by ignorance of the fact that $335,000,000 of British - owned American securities already had been liquidated in this country, and many other securities had depreciated in value since the estimates were made.

Lindbergh's Disavowal

Col. Charles A. Lindbergh said today that while he had attempted to co-operate with all American organizations opposed to our entering the war in Europe" he had no connection with the No Foreign War Committee.

His statement, telegraphed to the Associated Press from Huntington, L. I., said in part:

"Shortly after the No Foreign War campaign was launched in Washington, I agreed to speak at an opening meeting in St. Louis providing certain conditions were met. These conditions were not met, and since that time the No Foreign War campaign has undergone reorganization.

"I attended a number of conferences when its successor, the No Foreign War Committee, was being formed, but found myself unable to support the methods and policies adopted by the new organization. I have at no time been a member of the committee, nor have I contributed to its financial support. My belief that it would be disastrous for this country to enter the war remains unchanged, and I intend to continue the stand I have taken against our participation."

Answering Thomas, He Declares In Favor Of All Necessary Support President Requires To Combat "Most Serious Crisis"

> "I, who opposed Franklin Roosevelt, call upon all Americans to give him such power in this most severe crisis I believe, in the history of America, so that we can debate with him again in another free election."
> —Wendell Willkie

[By the Associated Press]

New York, Jan. 16—Challenging Socialist Leader Norman Thomas' opposition to the President's "lease-lend" proposal for aid to Great Britain, Wendell L. Willkie called upon "all Americans" tonight to give President Roosevelt all the power he needed" so that we can debate with him again in another free election."

Called from the audience to comment on Thomas' speech at "America's Town Meeting of the Air," Willkie asserted that "we shall not preserve this great standard of living in America by withdrawing within ourselves"

Expanding Trade Held Key To Future

"It is only in expanding trade, in the opening of the world's markets, in the peace that will come after the crushing of dictatorship," he said, "that America can go on to its true development.

"I, who opposed Franklin Roosevelt, call upon all Americans to give him such power in this most severe crisis I believe, in the history of America, so that we can debate with him again in another free election."

"If I believed," Willkie added, "that Britain could collapse and America could survive economically, then I would not take a single risk in involving this country in any international entanglements."

Would Grant Extraordinary Powers

"But if on the other hand I believed, as I do believe, that if Britain collapses within a few years the free way of life will pass from America, then even I who opposed the election of Franklin Roosevelt with all my being, would grant to him such extraordinary powers.

"We shall not keep America out of war by mere strong statements that she is to stay out of war. We will keep America out of war if we supply to the fighting men of Britain sufficient resources so they may crush and defeat the ruthless dictatorship of Hitler."

Thomas argued "No one man should be trusted with these powers," and declared the "lend-lease" bill would "set up a dictatorship in the United States and . . . authorize the dictator to wage . . . undeclared war with whatever enemy he selects."

Willkie Ready With Retort

Thomas said the people had an opportunity to vote just for President Roosevelt or Mr. Willkie in the last election.

From the audience Willkie retorted: "Yes, and as I remember it, they had the same privilege of voting for Mr. Thomas."

"Mr. Thomas went all over this broad country of ours preaching the same doctrine of narrow isolation that he preaches here tonight," Willkie said later. "If I recall the results of the mandate of the American people, Mr. Roosevelt got some 27,000,000 votes; I got some 23,000,000 votes, and I have never seen a public record of how many Mr. Thomas got."

"Never Hinted At Such Power"

Thomas commented: "But yesterday the President and Mr. Willkie were vieing for a popular mandate, they never hinted at such power as the President nows asks with Mr. Willkie's indorsement."

Willkie announced Sunday his approval of the Administration bill.

Before tonight's scheduled debate between Thomas and Dr. Frank Kingdon, chairman of the New York chapter of the Committee to Defend America by Aiding the Allies, Willkie received an ovation from the audience as he entered Town Hall with his wife. He was applauded often during his remarks, especially when he called for support of the President.

Grave Threat To Nation Seen

Kingdon upheld the bill, stating that "the conferring of special power upon the Executive in times of emergency is a proved and characteristic technique of democracy." He declared this country faced the gravest "threat against our national independence" in its history, and said its defense lay in British victory.

Urges Fleet To Britain's Aid

Champaign, Ill., Jan. 16 (AP)—Admiral Yates Stirling, Jr., U. S. N., retired, declaring "we're at war now," urged tonight that the United States fleet be concentrated in the Atlantic to provide an immediate convoy for war material being shipped to Great Britain.

Nazis Report New Bombing Of Illustrious

Assert Three Bombs Hit Plane Carrier in Port, Presumed To Be Malta

British Crew Sinks The Southampton

London Reveals Loss of Cruiser, Crippled and Fired in Raid Jan. 10

By The Associated Press

BERLIN, Jan. 17 (Friday).—Informed sources said early today that German dive bombers had attacked the British aircraft carrier Illustrious on Thursday for the second time in six days, scoring three direct hits.

The same sources said the attack took place "in a British naval fortress in the Mediterranean, where a number of bombs were dropped."

[The 23,000-ton Illustrious made port in the Mediterranean under her own power Wednesday, after being damaged in a seven-hour attack by forty German dive bombers on Jan. 10. Dispatches from Valetta, Malta, told of a heavy raid by dive bombers on that island naval base Thursday, and presumably that was where the Illustrious was attacked for the second time.]

One heavy bomb and two medium bombs hit the Illustrious in the Thursday attack, the Germans said, and, "despite fierce anti-aircraft fire, only one German bomber has failed to return."

The Germans said they had made a direct hit on a steamer in the same engagement.

British Sink the Southampton

LONDON, Jan. 16 (AP).—The 9,100-ton cruiser Southampton has been sent to the bottom as the first major British casualty in the struggle between Nazi dive bombers and the British fleet now developing fiercely in the Mediterranean.

The Admiralty announced tonight that the Southampton, hard hit on Jan. 10 in the first engagement by German aerial formations sent to cooperate with the Italians in an effort to break British sea power, had been sunk subsequently by her own command.

While she was being towed, crippled, to port, it was explained, fire broke out on board, and there was nothing left to do but to sink her in the sea.

The Southampton was damaged in October, 1939, a month after the start of the war, when Nazi planes bombed the Firth of Forth at Edinburgh, Scotland. The British acknowledged slight damage to the bow. The ship was one of the two escorting cruisers which accompanied the Empress of Australia in the summer of 1939 when the liner brought King George VI and Queen Elizabeth to Canada. She later visited Boston.

Fourth Cruiser To Be Lost

She was the fourth British cruiser lost since the war began—there were sixty-four in service at its outbreak—and the largest warship yet lost as a result of air attack.

"The great majority of her crew have been saved," the Admiralty said.

[The Southampton, launched in 1936, had a normal complement of 700 men, according to "Jane's Fighting Ships," and was equipped with twelve 6-inch guns, eight 4-inch guns, one 3.7-inch howitzer and twenty smaller guns, in addition to six 21-inch torpedo tubes. Other cruisers lost by Great Britain include the 9,550-ton Effingham, the 4,180-ton anti-aircraft cruiser Calypso and the 4,290-ton anti-aircraft cruiser Curley, which was sunk off Norway while under the command of Capt. B. C. E. Brooke, R. N., who was in command of the Southampton when she was set on fire by the Nazi bombers last week.

[The Rome newspaper "Il Giornale d'Italia" asserted on Thursday that the 22,600-ton British aircraft carrier Eagle had been torpedoed recently by an Italian plane, between Tobruk, Libya, and the Greek island of Crete, according to The Associated Press.]

Naval circles here asserted that the loss of the Southampton "doesn't prove anything" in the classic debate on the degree of vulnerability of the modern warship to air attack. It was not bombs but fire that finished her off, they said. They added that the assault was probably carried out in perfect conditions by hand-picked bomber pilots who had to fly only twenty to thirty miles from their base.

While the British were revising their losses upward—the Southampton previously had been listed merely as damaged along with the aircraft carrier Illustrious and the 1,335-ton destroyer Gallant, while twelve of the attacking planes were reported shot down—they also marked up a higher score against the Axis.

The Royal Air Force declared that in a previously reported British raid on Catania, Sicily, the main German aerial center in the Mediterranean, it had been determined that between thirty and forty planes were either "burnt out or severely damaged."

Also, in the running battle in the Mediterranean the British submarine Pandora was credited with having sunk two Italian supply ships of about 5,000 tons each, both while they were heading for Libya to help feed the Italian armies in Africa.

With all this, the R. A. F. is carrying out a continuing aerial offensive, preparatory to the grand assault by British field forces against Tobruk, Libya, where an estimated 30,000 Italian regulars await the showdown.

Bengasi, 200 miles to the west of Tobruk, was hard hit by British bombers through the nights of Jan. 13-14 and Jan. 14-15, a communique announced today.

The main piers of the harbor were bombed, it was said, harbor buildings were set aflame and Italian shipping was attacked. The Benina airdrome serving Bengasi was machine-gunned, the communique added. Two Italian planes were set afire and "a number" of others damaged.

In the whole area between Tobruk and Derna—a distance of nearly 100 miles—British pilots on patrol were declared to have met no Italian challenge.

Recapitulating attacks upon the captured El Adem airdrome, the largest in Libya and the air base for Tobruk, the Air Ministry said that the skeletons of eighty-seven Italian planes now "rot and bleach in the sun" there.

Malta Is Attacked Fiercely

VALETTA, Malta, Jan. 16 (AP).—Dive bombers attacked this harbor and town this afternoon in a prolonged assault. There was a continuous explosion of bombs, and guns of all calibers roared at the persistent invaders.

Yesterday a hostile plane, curiously marked with a red cross, made a long reconnaissance over the island. Last night there was more reconnaissance and then a prolonged attempt to bomb selected targets, the night's alerts covering a period of almost four hours—a record here.

In both attacks—those of last night and today—there was an undetermined number of casualties. British sources said the raiders' losses were "substantial," and that R. A. F. fighters suffered no damage.

[Since German dive bombers have started a thrust in the Mediterranean, it appeared likely that the Malta attack was delivered by Nazis. It also appeared possible that the red cross seen might be a special German insignia adopted for flyers on duty in the Mediterranean.]

Lieut. Comdr. Balfour Killed

VANCOUVER, Jan. 16 (CP).—The British Admiralty has informed Mrs. Sydney Harrington Balfour, of Vancouver, that her husband, Lieut. Comdr. Balfour, of the cruiser Southampton, brother of Capt. Harold Balfour, British Under Secretary of State for Air, has been killed in action.

The cable did not say in what action Lieut. Comdr. Balfour lost his life.

Balfour was in the real estate business here for eleven years before the outbreak of war, when he volunteered for service. He was in the Royal Navy in the last war.

He served as liaison officer with French forces at the fall of Narvik, Norway, last year and received the French Croix de Guerre for "standing firm and resolute under very heavy bombardment and advancing under heavy firing."

Hit on Another Carrier Claimed

ROME, Jan. 16 (AP).—The report of the Axis on its bomb and torpedo offensive against British sea power in the Mediterranean was further filled in today by the assertion of a Rome newspaper that the 22,600-ton aircraft carrier Eagle had been torpedoed.

At the same time the High Command acknowledged a new night attack by British planes on Catania, Sicily [supposed to be the main base for the German dive bombers now cooperating with the Italian Air Force]. The damage was minor, the High Command communiqué said, and "a few" persons were killed or injured.

[Catania was bombed also last Sunday night, according to the British. In that attack, the Royal Air Force reported yesterday at Cairo, between thirty and forty aircraft were either destroyed or damaged.]

The Giornale d'Italia, reporting the attack on the Eagle, a converted battleship, asserted that a wave-skimming Italian torpedo plane had scored a hit on her recently between Tobruk, Libya, and the Greek island of Crete.

At the same time the Italians credited two of their submarines with the torpedoing of a British light cruiser in the Mediterranean and the sinking of a British merchant ship in the Atlantic.

The cruiser, which was reported to have been attacked Friday night, was not identified, but the sunken merchant vessel was said to have been the Ardabham. [The communiqué presumably referred to the 4,980-ton freighter Ardanbhan, from which Mackay Radio intercepted a message last Dec. 27 saying she had been torpedoed about 600 miles off Scotland.]

R. A. F. Batters Wilhelmshaven In Greatest Raid

Flyers 'Stoke' Huge Fires With Bombs for 5 Hours; Emden, Bremerhaven Hit

By The Associated Press

LONDON, Jan. 16.—With a bright moon and the glare of fires set by their first bombs to light the way, Royal Air Force crews battered at German North Sea bases over night, the Air Ministry said today, raiding docks at Emden and Bremerhaven and leaving Wilhelmshaven "a waste of flame."

For Wilhelmshaven, main base for the Reich's North Sea fleet, it was the fortieth and the greatest British attack in the air war, it was said here. The Air Ministry news service said the Wilhelmshaven raid was made in two installments—from 8 p. m. until soon after midnight and then again from 5 to 6 a. m.

"It was more like stoking than bombing," one pilot said. "We just shoveled our bombs into the fires and watched them increase."

Homeward-bound airmen said they could see a ruddy glare in the sky for 130 miles. All of the bombers but one came back, the British said, and it had reported "mission completed" before its radio went dead.

[The German high command acknowledged that twenty persons were killed and thirty-five injured in the Wilhelmshaven attack, saying "several incendiaries flamed in the harbor section." The British caused no "noteworthy damage," a German communique insisted.

[Italy announced that British planes had raided Catania, the German dive-bomber base in Sicily, during Wednesday night, killing "some" persons, wounding "a few," and causing "slight" damage, The United Press said.]

The R. A. F. centered its Wilhelmshaven attack on Bauhafen, a harbor where lie some of Germany's most vital slipways, docks engineering works, storehouses, assembling sheds, armorplate shops foundries, iron works and gun stores.

One stick of bombs evidently touched off explosive stores. The pilot said two explosions followed the bursting bombs, and these threw debris 1,000 feet into the air.

A half square mile of fire was noted west of Bauhafen, while by the power station, north of the harbor, flames burned "even more fiercely than elsewhere."

The Britons had to pass through a "prodigious" anti-aircraft barrage, the news service bulletin said, and one plane was illuminated four times by searchlights while ground gunners tried to pick it off.

Emden, which escaped lightly by comparison, lies on the west of that strategic hump of northwest German coastline which curves into the North Sea and Wilhelmshaven on the east. Bremerhaven is farther east, across the estuary of the Weser River from Wilhelmshaven.

Docks at Rotterdam and Flushing, "invasion ports" in the Netherlands, also were bombed, the Air Ministry said, along with airdromes in northwest Germany and the Netherlands, while aircraft of the British coastal command attacked the German submarine base at Brest, in occupied France.

BENGAZI IS BOMBED AGAIN

British Strike Hard at Town in Libya—Rome Says R. A. F. Plane Was Shot Down

WITH BRITISH FORCES OUTSIDE TOBRUK, Libya, Jan. 16 (AP)—Burrowed within the semi-circle of a thirty-mile defense line, which includes a ten-foot tank trap, the 30,000 Italian regulars at Tobruk apparently have been ordered to resist the pending British assault to the death.

The function of this prospective defense, the British believe, is to permit the remainder of Marshal Rodolfo Graziani's hard-pressed African army to reorganize in the Bengazi region, about 200 miles west of Tobruk.

The presence of German dive-bombers in the Mediterranean and the possibility that their activity may be extended to North Africa has become a most important factor in this arena. The British declare that Italy herself can no longer be regarded as a serious threat; but if the Germans get in, the problem may become difficult. So far, no German planes have appeared in Libya and the Italian air force in the area is not active.

Tobruk Likened to Bardia

With British armored units to the west of Tobruk's coast-to-coast defense semi-circle, and infantry and artillery to the east and south while warships keep watch on the Mediterranean shore of the Italian base, the British say that Tobruk's position is about the same as Bardia's a week before it fell Jan. 5 to the British offensive into Libya.

The field guns thunder intermittently. By moonlight British patrols penetrate the Tobruk defense zone for sporadic skirmishes. The massing of British men and material continues.

The Italians have one large naval gun—the British call it "Tobruk Tom"—and it provides the heaviest of the defensive shelling. The British are trying hard to silence it. Otherwise, the Italian artillery action usually is weak.

In the Bardia region, 70 miles east of Tobruk, the round-up of prisoners who fled in the final chaos of British occupation is continuing. Most of these men greet capture as deliverance from the waterless desert.

At Solum, Egypt, near Bardia, barbed wire that the Italians had strung along the frontier was used to make a stockade. Many of the men are bitter over what they say was the Italian High Command's failure to deliver air and naval aid. When Italian planes raided Solum recently, dropping bombs near the stockade, some of the prisoners broke into an anti-Fascist song.

The captives are fed largely on captured Italian supplies, and each gets a quart of water daily. The more seriously wounded were moved in British ambulances to British field hospitals and others to hospital tents in Bardia, where British and Italian physicians work over them, side by side.

Tobruk To Be Held Stubbornly, Belief

By Edward Kennedy

Associated Press Foreign Correspondent

With British Forces Outside Tobruk, Libya, Jan. 16 (AP)—Guarded by a thirty-mile defense line against massing British assault forces, the garrison of beleaguered port of Tobruk, estimated at 30,000 Italian regulars, apparently has been ordered to hold out as long as possible.

British soldiers, breathing sand-free air for the first time in a week, are redoubling preparations for the grand assault.

Same As Bardia's

Tobruk's position is about the same from a military point of view as Bardia's was a week before it fell January 5 to the British offensive into Libya.

British armored units are to the west and British infantry and artillery to the east and south, while warships keep watch on the Mediterranean front of this Italian base. Big guns are firing and patrols engage defense units in sporadic skirmishing.

Civilians Removed

With moon-lit nights it is doubtful that even small boats can evade the British watchers and make supply contact with Tobruk, as was done for some time at Bardia.

All civilians were removed from Tobruk before the British arrived. The fortifications, though not so strong as Bardia's, extend over a longer line, running six to seven miles inland from coastal points east and west of the town.

The defense include a recently dug ditch, ten feet deep and ten feet wide.

Apparently the garrison has orders to hold out long enough to enable other parts of Marshal Rodolfo Graziani's hard-pressed army to organize in the Bengasi region, about 200 miles west of Tobruk.

Firing Just "Taste"

This correspondent has stood behind cannon firing salvoes into Tobruk but, as the artillerymen said, these were just a taste of the bombardment to come when the big assault starts.

Guns from the Italian fortifications around the port are replying, sometimes with a show of energy, but usually weakly.

(At Cairo, British general headquarters issued this communique: "No change in situation. On all fronts active patrolling continues.")

British Bomb Bengasi Twice

R. A. F. Also Raids Benina—Italians Fight Foe in Desert—Tobruk Assault Near

Cairo, Jan. 16 (A. P.).—British bombers and fighting planes, protecting the ground forces as they mass around Tobruk, Libya, for a final assault on that important Italian base, have made two smashing attacks on Bengasi and another on Benina airdrome, a Royal Air Force communique said today.

The aerial activity was carried on, too, in Italian East Africa, where Assab was raided Tuesday night and bombs were dropped on stores and warehouses. Asmara was attacked Monday night.

Bengasi lies 200 miles west of Tobruk and it is there that the Italians are believed to be shaping new lines of resistance in the event Tobruk should fall. Benina is the town's airport.

Italians Fight Foe in Desert.

Rome, Jan. 16 (A. P.).—Fighting on the North African front was reported today by the Italian High Command to be centering around the oasis of Giarabub, key point in the Libyan desert some 150 miles southeast of To-

...uk. The communique told of engagements in which fast columns of Italian troops had participated, but did not indicate the outcome of these operations.

Activity in the Tobruk zone was said to be limited largely to artillery exchanges, while Italian planes were reported to have bombed highways and British supply depots to the south and east.

Four U. S. Naval Observers in Mediterranean; Fifth Will Join British Soon as Air Attache

By The Associated Press.

WITH THE BRITISH MEDITERRANEAN FLEET, Jan. 16—The United States, closely watching British Fleet operations in the Mediterranean, has boosted its staff of official observers to four, with a fifth expected to arrive soon.

To help gather data that British Fleet officers say should be invaluable to the United States Navy Department in connection with its vast construction program, Lieut.-Comdr. James Fife Jr. of Reno, Nev., until recently assistant naval attaché at London, has joined Lieut.-Comdrs. Kenneth P. Hartman of Philadelphia and John N. Opie 3d of Long Beach, Calif., as observers with the Eastern Mediterranean units. Lieut.-Comdr. Augustus D. Clark of New York is with the Western Mediterranean Squadron.

Lieut.-Comdr. Hartman, who was aboard the aircraft carrier Illustrious during the seven hours she was attacked by German dive bombers Jan. 10 off Sicily, and Lieut.-Comdrs. Opie and Clark also were on the London Naval Attaché's staff, which was enlarged soon after the European war started.

The rapidly developing field of naval air operations will bring an aeronautics expert, Lieut.-Comdr. Steadman Teller of Locust Valley, N. Y., to the Mediterranean soon. He is expected to be assigned to an aircraft carrier.

The observers send their confidential reports to the United States Embassy at London, which relays them to the Navy Department at Washington.

Lieut.-Comdrs. Hartman, Opie and Clark, who have been aboard different units in all operations of the British Fleet here, have obtained a comprehensive picture of the Mediterranean warfare.

Berlin Admits Wilhelmshaven Raid Killed 20

Denies R. A. F. Damaged Naval Base; 'Rolling' Attack on British City

BERLIN, Jan. 16 (AP).—Twenty persons were killed and thirty-five injured and several houses were set afire in a British air raid last night on the major naval port of Wilhelmshaven, the German High Command announced today.

The daily communique said, however, that, although "several incendiaries flamed in the harbor section," they caused no "noteworthy damage" and that spreading of the house fires was "prevented by the efficiency of air-raids precautions and self-protection squads." The attack on Wilhelmshaven was one o. several carried out on places in northern Germany, the communique declared.

The high command reported a "rolling raid" last night on war-essential objectives in a central England city, lesser attacks on London and a raid on Dover, in which several direct hits were scored on the railway station. The Luftwaffe "bombed a troop camp and another objective in southern England" in daylight raids yesterday and continued its mining of British harbors, it added.

D. N. B., official German news agency, reported that German planes on reconnaissance today near Orford Ness, a headland on England's southeastern coast, sighted a large convoy accompanied by a number of naval vessels and immediately attacfied. One 4,000-ton merchant ship was hit and sunk, D. N. B. said.

The agency also reported that German dive bombers had effectively attacked the railroad station at Dover again today. Amplifying the communique's report of yesterday's attack on the Dover station, D. N. B. declared the switching yards, the canal and port of Dover were heavily bombed and fires started which were visible from a great distance. Attacks were also aimed yesterday at a machine and automobile works in middle England, D. N. B. said.

The high command said three British planes were shot down in air battles yesterday, while the Germans suffered no losses.

Only a few British planes succeeded in breaking through the anti-aircraft barrage of German defenses last night, informed sources said. Two hospitals and a number of apartment houses were reported struck by bombs.

GREEKS CAPTURE IMPORTANT POSTS

Continue Advance Despite Severe Snowstorms

Athens, Jan. 16 (A. P.).—Surprise infantry attacks were reported today to have enabled Greek fighters to occupy important mountain heights in the central Albanian battlefront despite severe snowstorms followed by a heavy rain.

Intensive artillery fire along most of the front went on despite the snow and rain, it was reported. Aside from the surprise attacks on the central sector, spokesmen said, infantry action was limited to mopping up operations against isolated Italian units and to collecting and sorting Fascist war materials taken last week.

A raid by an Italian submarine on a lone policeman sitting on the shore of an Aegean isle was revealed by the Ministry of Home Security. The submarine machine-gunned the policeman unsuccessfully from close range, a Ministry spokesman said, and then made off.

Rome, Jan. 16 (A. P.).—A quick reaction by Italian troops was reported by the Italian High Command today to have resulted in the repulse of Greek attacks on the Albanian battlefront. The communique failed to say where the attacks took place and gave no other details.

Greeks Push On Through Snow, Capture Patrol

Italian Division Reported Hard Pressed; Fighting Rages Beyond Klisura

ATHENS, Jan. 17 (Friday) (AP).—The Greeks announced continuing successes against Italy on the Albanian front yesterday despite snow and rain, which reduced the scale of operations. The high command communique early today reported merely: "Restricted action; we took some prisoners."

A Greek government official, elaborating on this, reported: "In the southern sector a Greek patrol engaged an Italian patrol of the same strength. The result of this engagement has been that the whole Italian patrol was taken prisoner."

He added that according to information just obtained "An Italian division has suffered such heavy losses that it has been necessary to reform it with men and equipment recently sent over from Italy." He did not say when or where this occurred.

The Greek Ministry of Home Security reported "no air raids on Greece," and added that it had just learned that four additional "Greek notables" had been abducted by the Italians when retreating from the Igoumenitsa sector of Greece in the early stages of the war.

Fascism Is Doomed, Air Minister Asserts

[By the Associated Press]

Glasgow, Scotland, Jan. 16—Air Minister Sir Archibald Sinclair told a Glasgow public meeting tonight that Fascism is "doomed" and that Italy is "in deadly peril of complete Nazi domination."

He declared there would be no relaxation of the British war effort until the power of Adolf Hitler and Hermann Wilhelm Goering and "all those evil men who now rule Germany is finally and utterly destroyed."

Sir Archibald asserted that Italy had been brought to "the edge of destruction by the infatuated ambition" of Premier Mussolini.

"Slavery And Ruin"

Mussolini's policy led Italy into "disaster and impoverishment," he said.

"Friends of Italy must hope that the strong Italian forces will break the grip of the Fascist bosses before they drag Italy down with them into German slavery and ruin," Sir Archibald said.

He said that British victories in Egypt and Libya show "the pattern of close, smooth-working cooperation" among the army, navy and air force.

Sir Archibald gave this tabulation of planes lost by both sides thus far in the Mediterranean conflict by fronts:

LIBYAN—205 Italian (90 in the air and 115 aground), 17 British.

GREEK—56 Italian, 19 British.

MALTA—42 Italian, 25 British.

He also disclosed that Britain had given Greece "some" aircraft to be flown by Greek pilots.

He asserted that the R. A. F. entered 1941 "stronger than ever before in men and machines" and that efforts to solve the problem of night raids on Britain had "not gone altogether unrewarded."

"No decisive result can be expected immediately," he said, "but as we gain experience and are able to hand it on to an increasing number of pilots, crew and workers of all kinds in this field, we can hope to inflict on night bombers a rate of casualties which will gradually increase and at length become sufficiently high to be a substantial deterrent."

Discusses U. S. Aid

Turning to aid from the United States, he said that "if Hitler and his German dupes dare raise their eyes they will see the writing upon the wall of Congress—the aid to Britain bill."

But he said Britain would have to "pass through many dangers" before American aid becomes fully effective, but asserted Britain has some "surprises" in store for the Nazis. Britons themselves must be prepared for surprises and disappointments, he said.

"We shall be assailed from the sky, from under the sea and perhaps by land," Sir Archibald said. "We can afford to relax not one single precaution against invasion—constant vigilance is required."

German Fire Bombs Are Showered Over Three British Towns

[By the Associated Press]

London, Friday, Jan. 17—German raiders showered two west English towns with fire bombs last night while limiting their assaults on London.

An east coast town also was the target for incendiary bombs, but there were no reports on damage or casualties.

These assaults came amid indications that Britain's constant research on the problem of night defense against bombers had not, in the word of Air Minister Sir Archibald Sinclair, "gone altogether unrewarded."

One Gets Two Planes

"No decisive result can be expected immediately," he told a Glasgow audience, and an Air Ministry news service bulletin cautiously credited one of the increasing number of night fighter planes being used with shooting down two German bombers last night, one over London and the other over Essex.

LONDON TO REMOVE MANY YOUNGSTERS

London, Jan. 16 (A. P.).—Malcolm MacDonald, Minister of Health, ordered today the compulsory removal from the Greater London area of all children under 14 considered likely to suffer "in mind or body" from air attacks if they remain in or near the capital.

The order supplements a recent defense regulation which authorized the medical examination of any child under 14 likely to suffer by remaining in London. It applies to the city of London, to metropolitan bureaus and most of the boroughs on the outskirts of the capital.

Every Briton From 16-60 Is Subject to Fire Duty

Women Will Be Called Only in Gravest Emergency

LONDON, Jan. 16 (AP). — Herbert Morrison, Minister of Home Security, signed last night a draft order which would compel all Britons the ages of sixteen years and sixty to register for duty as fire guards. Women will be required to register along with men under this most drastic civilian call of the war but will be called only in extreme cases.

Every one, including the wealthy, must be pepared to give forty-eight hours a month without pay. The only persons exempted are those in the fighting services and auxiliaries.

The effective date of the order has not been set, but publication was expected within a few days.

BRITISH AVIATOR IS KILLED

Led First Raid On Germany Day After War Started

London, Jan. 16 (AP)—William Ian Scott, 26-year-old flyer who led the first British air raid on Germany in this war, was listed officially today as "presumed killed in action."

The initial R. A. F. assault was directed against the German naval bases at Kiel and Wilhelmshaven September 4, 1939, the day after Britain declared war.

8 R. A. F. Aces Among 25 Men Decorated By King

Group Of Flyers Have Accounted For 58 Enemy Planes—Queen Watches Ceremony

London, Jan. 16 (AP)—Eight R. A. F. officers who have accounted for a total of fifty-eight enemy planes were among twenty-five men decorated by King George today.

Portsmouth Damage Listed

LONDON, Jan. 16 (AP).—The government disclosed today that the Guildhall (Municipal Building), the Royal Hospital and the Hippodrome Theater were damaged in recent Nazi raids on Portsmouth.

Raider Victims Going to Manila

MANILA, P. I., Jan. 16 (AP).—Authorities were informed today that ninety-eight Filipino seamen, survivors from three British ships sunk by German sea raiders off Australia last December, were en route to Manila aboard the steamship Kamo Maru, due Sunday.

Day's Second Attack

It was the day's second attack upon the English, for the news agency Havas, government-controlled, blamed the British troops who retreated last spring from Flanders for the current shortage of food in France.

Havas republished a dispatch from DNB, official German news agency, stating that Germany was sending 600,000 tons of potatoes to the occupied and unoccupied zones of France and 100,000 tons of sugar.

Food "Destroyed"

"This," the French agency went on, "is of the greatest importance since the stock of food for the French population was destroyed by English troops during the retreat from Belgium and northern France. Now England tries by all means to halt the transport of food from the United States to France."

Two days ago, a simlar attack on Britain, charging her with having weakened Spanish-French control of the Western Hemisphere, came from the authorized French source.

[This anti-British campaign appears to have got under way at about the time that Pierre Etienne Flandin, Foreign Minister, added to his functions by taking over control of the French press, radio and cinema.]

"Victims Of The English"

In answer to an appeal to Latin Americans and Spaniards made by Duff Cooper, January 10, the French spokesman asserted that the Latins had been "perpetually the victims of the English."

The British, he said, had treated the French Canadians "like the Irish—that is to say like dogs."

He accused the British of taking from France Canada, India, Egypt and the Suez Canal. He blamed Britain for the "abasement" of Spain, the "vassalage" of Portugal, and the sanctions of 1935 against Italy—a step which the French "did everything possible to prevent."

"God Save The King" Stolen From France, Is Cry In Vichy

Anthem Written For Louis XIV, Says Spokesman. Canada And Egypt Also Declared English Loot

[By the Associated Press]

Vichy, France, Jan. 16—An authorized source who for more than two weeks has taken a violently anti-British tone asserted today that the British stole Canada and Egypt from France and the anthem "God Save the King" as well.

The words and music for that hymn, he asserted, was in fact written for Louis XIV.

This was in answer to a broadcast made January 14 by Alfred Duff Cooper, British Minister of Information, who asserted among other things that French newspapers were now simply "the German press printed in French."

Leahy Still Kept Indoors by Fever

Vichy, Jan. 16 (A. P.).—A continued fever and cough today compelled Admiral William D. Leahy, American Ambassador to France, to delay his return to his desk until next week. He has been forced by illness to remain at his home since early in the week.

Soviet and Nazi Moves Keeping Balkans Jittery

Bessarabia Border Clashes Accompany Talk Reich to Absorb Rumania Wholly

BELGRADE, Jan. 16 (AP).—Repeated border clashes on the Russian-Rumanian frontier, cancellation of passenger-rail traffic in Hungary and reports that Germany formally would take over Rumania combined tonight to keep the Balkans in a state of disturbed anxiety.

An announcement at Budapest that all traffic on Hungarian railroads except for international trains would be suspended at midnight led to a supposition in diplomatic circles here that the German military command, which is now running the Hungarian railroads, had found drastic steps necessary to complete the projected movement of 300,000 German troops with full motorized equipment during January.

Rumanian rail traffic, except for movements of German military trains, is virtually at a standstill already. Thirty per cent of Yugoslavia's trains have been taken off, presumably to accelerate the shipment of supplies being demanded by the Reich.

Some diplomatic quarters suggested that Fuehrer Adolf Hitler wanted complete control of Rumania, which the Nazis already have converted into a military center. It is believed generally that the new Nazi Minister to Rumania, Baron Manfred von Killinger, will be gauleiter (Nazi district leader) if a protectorate is in fact declared.

Difficulties met by the Germans in controlling the Rumanians, moving military trains, billeting troops, speeding production and smothering potential conflicts between the Rumanian Army and the Iron Guard—all these are cited in German quarters as reasons for an undisguised protectorate to safeguard the campaign ground of a new German southeastern expeditionary force.

Meantime, there are signs of growing Russian-Rumanian friction. A high diplomatic source said tonight that an average of five to ten Rumanian guards were being killed nightly in clashes on the Bessarabian-Bukovina frontiers.

One theory is that the Russians are using these incidents to test how far Germany's "rubber fence" might stretch—that is, how far the Nazis might back up Rumania in case the Soviet demanded Moldavia and Northern Dobruja from Rumania. Although the clashes are officially denied, a diplomatic source said they were causing worry in the Rumanian Government.

British Confer in Ankara

ANKARA, Jan. 16 (AP).—A British Army-Navy-Air Force delegation continued conferences with the Turkish high command today, with the whole field of possible British-Turkish military co-operation believed to be under discussion. It was expected that the conference would end tonight and that the Britons would leave tomorrow to return to Egypt.

REDS HAIL LEFTIST PARLEY IN BRITAIN

Soviet Press Plays Up "People's Convention" Held In London

Sees New Step Toward Union Of Workers And Democratic Elements

[By the Associated Press]

Moscow, Jan. 16—A "people's convention" in London last Sunday which urged creation of a new British Government to make a "people's peace" and establish friendship with Soviet Russia was hailed today by Tass as "a new step toward union of the workers' class and democratic elements in England."

The Tass account of the convention, to which Izvestia, the Government paper, devoted half a page, attributed the following statements to convention speakers:

"England is almost in a state of war with the U. S. S. R. because she maintains in London the Polish Government which declared war on the Soviet Union. . . .

Cannot Cooperate

"The Soviet Union cannot cooperate with England until there is a (British) Government which really and sincerely will cooperate with the Soviet Union."

The news agency added its own comment that "what deserves attention is that, among the delegates, there were many soldiers and pilots, the best representatives of the English people, ready to carry on the struggle against reaction within the country and against foreign enemies."

Better Relations Seen

In London, a responsible Soviet source asserted there was "hope, but nothing more tangible," that, with Anthony Eden as Foreign Secretary, trade and political relations between the Soviet Union and Britain might improve.

"If Britain wants bigger trade with us, we are very happy," the spokesman said. "But each time since the start of the war that there has been a chance of better relations, someone or some group in Britain sabotaged the opportunity."

The statement came in connection with a denial of reports that Russia contemplated either buying or building 200 merchant ships to carry oil, cotton, corn and other supplies from the Americas.

Attended By 2,000

The "people's convention" in London, attended by approximately 2,000, adopted resolutions calling for a "people's government" to take over major industries, banks and land transportation.

The resolutions, submitted by Denis Pritt, a former Labor party member, also asked friendship with the Soviet, a "people's peace," better living conditions, independence for India and restoration of all trade-union rights.

Pritt said the policy of the group was "to offer to the peoples of the enemy a peace of no annexations, no reparations or indemnities, with liberty to all peoples to determine their own destiny."

PRINCE MADE GENERAL

Umberto Is Promoted in Italian Army.

Rome, Jan. 16 (A. P.).—The promotion of Crown Prince Umberto to the rank of general of the army was disclosed today in an exchange of telegrams between Premier Mussolini and King Victor Emmanuel.

The Prince served as commander of the forces in the west which fought against France and prior to that was an inspector-general of infantry.

Nazi Flyers Aiding Italy Said to Speak Arabic

Berlin Says They Have Special Qualities for African Fighting

BERLIN, Jan. 16 (AP).—Knowledge of Arabic was one of the many prerequisites for German flyers to serve in Fuehrer Adolf Hitler's present Mediterranean squadron, authorized sources said tonight.

Most of the pilots, wireless operators and mechanics of this squadron once lived in Arabic countries. In this connection it was recalled that the late Italian Air Marshal Italo Balbo, during his term as Governor-General of Italian Libya, frequently invited German flyers there for glider competitions in the desert.

Many of these friends of Balbo have now turned up in the picked Mediterranean squad assisting Italy in her struggle with British air, sea and land forces.

There also have been added to what has become known as Hitler's "general staff south," a number of men who fought with the famous German Condor Legion on the side of the Nationalists during the Spanish civil war.

With a view to fighting alongside their Italian comrades in the Mediterranean and later service in regained African colonies, the men were inoculated against tropical diseases and were schooled on living conditions and sanitation by medical experts familiar with tropical problems.

Besides equipping the warplanes with the most modern and effective bombs, guns and shells, the German air command also installed, in place of ordinary carburetors, a new kind of compressor which inforced sources declared was capable of keeping sand out of motors.

Nazis Include Belgium And Find Reich Is Big

BERLIN, Jan. 16 (AP).—A newspaper computation of the area of "greater Germany" today included Belgium and said that the Reich thus was second in size only to Russia in Europe.

The newspaper "Krakauer Zeitung," listing various measurements of the new Germany, said: "The approximate area of today's greater Germany, including Alsace and Belgium, but excluding the Protectorate-General government (an area around Warsaw, Poland), is 835,000 square kilometers (322,393 square miles), securing for Germany first place for size in Europe after Russia."

GERMAN BISHOP TO CALL ON POPE

Other Catholic Leaders Also Expected to Visit Rome.

Berlin, Jan. 16 (A. P.).—The Bishop of Muenster, Count Clemens von Gaalen, is preparing to leave for Rome within a few days on invitation of Pope Pius XII, reliable persons said tonight.

Whether other leaders of the Catholic Church in Germany also will go to Rome still is uncertain, it was said. It was regarded as probable, however, that they would go and the impression prevailed that there would either be a conference of German bishops at the Vatican or that they would be received individually.

SEES HULL I ASION

Berlin Says Question of Russia Was Dodged.

Berlin, Jan. 16 (A. P.).—Secretary of State Hull's remarks before the House Foreign Affairs Committee in Washington interested official Germany for two reasons, authorized sources said today:

Second, because of "his veiled threats against Japanese expansionist intentions."

Beyond that, they said, there was nothing new and Mr. Hull merely trod the path of President Roosevelt.

To a question whether renewed diplomatic activity had set in between Madrid and Berlin, these sources replied that diplomatic activity between the two friendly nations had never changed as regards its intensiveness and its friendly character.

Spanish Press Asserts Aid-To-Britain Bill Affects South America

Madrid, Jan. 16 (AP)—The aid-to-England bill before the United States Congress is "diametrically opposed to international neutrality laws," the Spanish press commented today, and "specifically affects Spanish-American countries."

Commenting on the clause which would place United States ports at the disposal of the British fleet, the newspaper El Alcazar said:

"This allows the same process to be used by Germany in Japan."

In an almost identical article the newspaper Informaciones commented:

"If the bill passes, Germany has the right to demand that South American countries allow her warships to be repaired in their Atlantic and Pacific ports."

TOKIO ADVISES U. S. TO KEEP FLEET AT HOME

Its Presence at Hawaii Is Called a Challenge by Foreign Office Organ.

Tokio, Jan. 16 (A. P.).—The Foreign Office-controlled Japan Times suggested today that the best way of keeping President Roosevelt's pledge that no troops will be sent to foreign soil would be to withdraw the American Navy to home waters.

The Tokio press, meanwhile, urged the Government to hasten Japan's southward program and be ready for resolute action to offset British and American influence in East Asia.

"Huge overseas naval concentrations are equivalent to extension of national boundaries," the Japan Times declared. "In America's case, they suggest a dictatorship over the parallels of a latitude below Pearl Harbor; an invitation to others to keep away; therefore a challenge and a threat, preliminaries to hostilities; hence a contradiction of America's announced policy of keeping its fighting sons at home."

Headlines Accuse Hull.

The Government Information Bureau declined to comment on the statement of the American Secretary of State, Cordell Hull, before the House Foreign Affairs Committee yesterday envisioning encroachment by the Axis Powers on the Western Hemisphere in the event of their defeat of Great Britain.

However, the bureau plans to issue a statement tomorrow, and it was said authoritatively that the attitude taken will probably be that the only purpose of certain of Mr. Hull's remarks was to regiment American opinion against Japan.

The Japanese press splashed the Hull story. A typical headline was that in Yomiuri: "America Trembles at the Shadow Over the Pacific; Hull Misrepresents Japan, Frantically Seeking Passage of Aid-for-Britain Bill."

Domei, the Japanese news agency, said that the United States gives the impression that it assumes an attitude of raising trouble where there is no cause in the face of a series of peaceful statements "from responsible Japanese, including the Foreign Minister, Yosuke Matsuoka."

Sees Tricky Hand of U. S.

Newspapers accused Great Britain of instigating the current border fighting between French Indo-China and Thailand, while seeking an economic rapprochement with Indo-China, and "it should be borne in mind," the newspaper Hochi commented," that the tricky hand of the United States is pulling the strings behind the blind action of Britain."

The press generally declared that Indo-China was the keystone of the Japanese Southward Program and Yomiuri advised the Government to "make a courageous, bold advance, because Japan has already been besieged by the influence of Britain and America." This newspaper mentioned the Dutch East Indies as another spot where peaceful negotiations may fail because of Anglo-American political and economic control.

Nichi Nichi declared that if the present negotiations between Indo-China and Japan should fail to show good headway, "it is possible that anti-Japanese countries would take advantage of the situation to start making trouble."

The paper warned: "Against that possibility Japan must be fully prepared and must act quickly."

Birth Rate Falling.

At home, Asahi declared the Japanese birth rate is declining and the death rate increasing, and an effort to reverse this trend, a population-encouragement plan was ready for presentation to the Cabinet. The Cabinet-planning board proposes a four-point program to foster earlier and more prolific marriages, it continued. One measure, it said, would be a tax on bachelors, the proceeds of which would be used to pay bonuses to large families. The present marriage age for men averages 28, and for women 22 years.

Other points include increased medical attention for infants and priority rights to limited medical supplies for them; the development of a land program for encouragement of the agricultural population, and the establishment of a population bureau under the Ministry of Welfare.

Domei, the Japanese news agency, reported that the Agriculture Ministry was encouraging goat raising to offset the shortage of cow's milk, which now is distributed mostly to babies and invalids.

Japanese Inspect Indo-China.

Hanoi, Jan. 16 (A. P.).—Japanese Vice-Admiral Yorio Sawamoto began an inspection of Japanese naval and military bases in Indo-China today. A similar inspection was made last week by the Japanese Vice-Minister of War.

The French, meanwhile, reported that they had inflicted heavy losses on Thai (Siamese) forces in a clash near Pakse.

Chinese Troops on March.

Shanghai, Jan. 16 (A. P.).—The Chinese press reported today that regular Chinese Army troops are moving steadily into Chekiang and Kiangsu provinces with the ultimate intention of surrounding the Japanese in Shanghai and Hangchow and other important cities in preparation for a possible big spring offensive, and that the Chinese had already retaken a number of towns.

The reports were regarded as interesting in connection with the Chungking Government's recent order to the Chinese Communists to withdraw their Fourth Route Army northward from the Yangtze River. The Fourth Route Army, of 100,000 men, has been occupying the region around Nanking for the last eighteen months, and from that position would be able to control the rich Yangtze valley cities in the event of a Japanese withdrawal.

TOKYO PRESS ASSAILS HULL FOR AID STAND

"Clear Challenge To Axis Short Of Ultimatum," It Says Of Testimony

"Outrageous Utterance," Asahi Adds—Pacific Fleet Called Threat

[By the Associated Press]

Tokyo, Friday, Jan. 17—The Japanese press produced today the bitterest criticism of America in recent months, declaring that United States Secretary of State Hull's declaration of Wednesday before the United States House Foreign Affairs Committee was "a clear challenge to the Axis short of an ultimatum."

[Editor's Note—Mr. Hull, urging passage of the lease-lend "aid for Britain" bill, envisaged that the danger to the United States would be "multiplied many fold" if Japan, Germany and Italy gained control of the high seas.]

The newspaper comments, both in editorials and in critical Page 1 stories, reflected the country's sharp reaction, which already has become perceptible.

Fleet Called Challenge.

They followed up comments yesterday by the Japanese Times, a newspaper controlled by the Foreign Office, describing the United States Pacific fleet concentrations as "a challenge and a threat" and advising President Roosevelt to withdraw the warships from Hawaii as the best way to keep American troops out of foreign wars.

American Secretary of State," accused the United States of intending to control New Zealand, Australia, Singapore and the East Indies.

Pending a statement expected today from the information bureau chief, Nobufumi Ito, the authoritative Japanese attitude was stated to be that the purpose of some of Hull's remarks was "to regiment United States opinion against Japan."

One vernacular newspaper's headline said: "America trembles at the shadow over the Pacific; Hull misrepresents Japan, frantically seeking passage of aid-for-Britain bill."

Domei broadcast from Tokyo that directors of the National Service Association, an influential patriotic organization, discussed the "unfriendly" attitude of the United States toward tri-partite pact powers and decided on a program to "unify public opinion to tide Japan over the difficult situation."

"Going Long Way Around"

The Japan Times said:

"To the Japanese it looks very much like the United States is going the long way around for sending armed forces into the scene of action abroad by maintenance of a fleet at Hawaii.

"The best way to insure the President's pledge of no troops on foreign soil would be to withdraw the navy to home waters. Hawaii may be 'a home away from home,' but it shouldn't be a permament station for the bulk of the fleet.

"Huge overseas naval concentrations are equivalent to an extension of national boundaries."

Domei quoted "diplomatic observers" as seeing in Hull's remarks a further manifestation of American misunderstanding of the "real intention of the Axis powers to establish a new world order." The agency said there was "some fe. that the United States' attitude may extend the China affair and the European war into a world war."

Canadian-American Air Bases Protested

New York, Jan. 16 (AP)—The Domei radio quoted the newspaper Hochi Shimbun tonight as saying that construction of proposed Canadian-American air base along the Canadian west coast "will be regarded as a continuation of the horseshoe shaped encirclement of Japan by the Washington Government."

Batavia On Japan

[By the Associated Press]

Batavia, Netherlands East Indies, Jan. 16—The Netherlands East Indies Government grants no preferential economic treatment to any nation and intends to continue this policy with respect to Japan, H. J. Van Mook, Commercial Minister Extraordinary, asserted today.

He said in an interview that an amicable atmosphere marked present negotiations with the Japanese trade delegation and that there was no reason to believe this would change.

Prepared For Eventualities

Informed opinion, however, was unanimous that any Japanese attempts to high pressure the Dutch into an agreement would be met with counter-pressure and that the island government was prepared to meet all eventualities.

A Japanese mission, headed by Kenkichi Yoshizawa, ex-Foreign Minister, is here attempting to conclude contracts for raw materials, particularly rubber and tin.

A previous mission, headed by Ichizo Kobayashi, Minister of Commerce, concluded contracts calling for the sale of 1,800,000 tons of oil products to Japan yearly, but Japanese have declared this figure too small.

Van Mook said the islands were agreeable to entering into closer commercial relations with Japan, a partner in the Axis, subject to certain conditions.

Would Grant Concessions

"This Government is at war with Germany, therefore we are immediately concerned with supplying ourselves and our allies with necessary materials," the Minister said.

"Our general policy is against granting preferential economic status to any nation. Prior contracts also affect the situation." (Although Germany has occupied the Netherlands, the East Indies Government obeys the orders of Queen Wilhelmina's Government, in exile in England.)

Van Mook said the Netherlands East Indies were not unwilling to give Japan concessions to exploit undeveloped areas.

"Anyone can open a business here," he said. "However, Japanese labor cannot be used therein, unless native workmen are unable to work."

French Rush Soldiers To Stem Thai Advance

Prepare To Make Stand At Pakse In Indo-China, Where Mekong River Is Mile Wide

Saigon, French Indo-China, Jan. 16 (AP)—The French rushed reinforcements up to the important town of Pakse tonight and prepared to make a stand against 1,500 Thai troops who, with artillery, tanks and cavalry, have pushed 200 French soldiers fifteen miles eastward from the border in two days of fighting.

Although outnumbered, the French expressed confidence they would hold the frequently-bombed town because the Mekong, on which it fronts, is a mile wide at that point.

Meanwhile, on instructions from Vichy, Gov. Jean Decoux ordered the Belgian, Dutch and Norwegian consulates in Saigon to close. The United States consul was expected to look after Belgian interests and the Swedish consul the others.

Havana, Jan. 16 (AP)—The Cuban Cabinet, after a long night meeting spent studying the international situation, announced today that "Cuba is side by side with the United States" and will give all possible cooperation to safeguard civilization and democracy.

No Trace of Airliner

RIO DE JANEIRO, Jan. 16 (AP).—Brazilian ships and airplanes searching off the coast today found no trace of the Italian airliner Ibayr, forced to alight with a disabled motor, or any of the 10 persons aboard the craft.

FRENCH FREIGHTER PACED BY WARSHIP

Mendoza Tries Fourth Time to Pierce Blockade

Montevideo, Jan. 16 (A. P.).—The 8,199-ton French freighter Mendoza and the British auxiliary cruiser Asturias played tag today along the imaginary line defining territorial waters. The Mendoza was still inside the line, untouchable; once outside, she becomes subject to search and possible seizure, because she is attempting to run the British blockade to France with a cargo of food.

Reports from the village of Puerto la Paloma, 120 miles up the coast, said she was carefully following the shore line, about two miles out, while the Asturias was pacing her, five [illegible] away. The Mendoza steame[illegible] last night from [illegible] after turning b[illegible] previous attemp[illegible] blockade.

Uruguay was still concerned, meanwhile, with the intercepting of the Mendoza by the Asturias on Sunday night, and an unofficial report said that the Montevideo Government has concluded that the action occurred within Uruguayan territorial waters; that representations have been made to the British Minister, and that a note is being drafted to be sent to the Pan American Neutrality Committee in Rio de Janeiro protesting against violation of the 300-mile neutrality belt established by the American republics at the Panama conference.

FIRST LEAD MENDOZA

PORTO ALEGRE, BRAZIL, JAN. 16-(AP)-THE FRENCH FREIGHTER MENDOZA, AFTER IDLING SEVERAL HOURS TONIGHT OFF SOUTHERN BRAZIL, HAS RESUMED HER CAUTIOUS VOYAGE NORTHWARD INSIDE TERRITORIAL WATERS, THIS TIME TRAILED BY THE BRITISH AUXILIARY CRUISER ERICKSEN, THE RIO GRANDE PORT CAPTAIN REPORTED.

HE DID NOT SAY WHAT HAD BECOME OF THE BRITISH AUXILIARY CRUISER ASTURIAS, WHICH THWARTED THREE ATTEMPTS OF THE MENDOZA TO LEAVE PUNTA DEL ESTE, URUGUAY, AND WHICH TRAILED HER TO RIO GRANDE.

THE 8,199-TON MENDOZA IS SEEKING TO REACH FRANCE WITH A CARGO OF FOOD THROUGH THE BRITISH BLOCKADE.

THE BRITISH APPARENTLY ARE DETERMINED TO KEEP WATCH ON HER UNTIL SHE HAS TO LEAVE THE SHELTER OF NEUTRAL WATERS.

FOLO PORTO ALEGRE MENDOZA

MONTEVIDEO, URUGUAY, JAN 16-(AP)-FOREIGN MINISTER ALBERTO GUANI TONIGHT ANNOUNCED "SATISFACTORY SETTLEMENT" OF THE DIPLOMATIC INCIDENT OCCASIONED BY THE BRITISH CRUISER ASTURIAS' ALLEGED INTERCEPTION OF THE FRENCH MERCHANT SHIP MENDOZA WITHIN URUGUYAN TERRITORIAL WATERS ON A FRUSTRATED BLOCKADE-RUNNING ATTEMPT LAST MONDAY.

GUANI SAID THE LONDON FOREIGN OFFICE HAD GIVEN AMPLE EXPLANATION.

MONTEVIDEO, URUGUAY, JAN. 16-(AP)-NINE PERSONS, INCLUDING TWO OFFICERS OF THE ITALIAN FREIGHTER ADAMELLO WHICH HAS BEEN TIED UP HER SINCE ITALY ENTERED THE WAR, WERE ARRESTED TONIGHT IN DISTURBANCES ATTENDING THE FIRST SHOWING OF CHARLES CHAPLIN'S MOTION PICTURE "THE GREAT DICTATOR."

DISTRIBUTORS FOR THE FILM ANNOUNCED, MEANWHILE, CANCELLATION OF A PLAN TO OPERATE FERRY SERVICE BETWEEN BUENOS AIRES AND COLONIA, WHE THE PICTURE IS SCHEDULED TO OPEN TOMORROW. SALE OF COMBINED TICKETS FOR THE MOVIE AND FERRY TRIP ACROSS THE RIVER PLATE, WHICH WOULD TAKE ABOUT THREE HOURS, ALREADY HAD STARTED.

IT WAS REPORTED HERE THAT PRESSURE EXERTED BY THE ARGENTINE FOREIGN MINISTRY CAUSED THE NAVIGATION COMPANY TO WITHDRAW FROM THE PLAN.

HAMILTON, BERMUDA, JAN.16-(AP)-BRITISH CENSORS IN BERMUDA SUFFERED IN PARCHED SILENCE TODAY WHILE THE GOVERNMENT DEBATED THEIR REQUEST FOR A LIQUOR LICENSE.

THE SITUATION WAS FROUGHT WITH FROTHY COMPLICATIONS.

HOUSED IN A HOTEL, THE CENSORS ASKED FOR A HOTEL LIQUOR LICENSE SO THEY MIGHT SERVE DRINKS ON THE PREMISES, BUT THEIR APPEAL WAS BLOCKED BY THE DISTRICT LICENSING AUTHORITY.

DOGGEDLY THE CENSORS CARRIED THEIR THIRST TO THE ISLAND'S GOVERNING ASSEMBLY, WHICH WRANGLED OVER THE REQUEST ALL YESTERDAY AFTERNOON.

ULTIMATELY, IT WAS THOUGHT, THE REQUEST WILL BE GRANTED.

Torpedoed 650 Miles Off Ireland, British Motor Ship Reports

New York, Jan. 16 (AP)—The British motor ship Zealandic, 10,578 tons, reported tonight that she had been torpedoed approximately 650 miles northwest of Londonderry, Ireland.

The freighter gave her position, in calls received here, as "latitude 58.28 north, longitude 20.43 west." A 482-foot ship out of Southampton, the Zealandic customarily trades between England and New Zealand.

Her S S S was the first heard here in several days. Maritime circles said it indicated clearing weather in the North Atlantic or the use of submarines large enough to stand the punishment of winter storms.

The naval base at Wilhelmshaven was the main objective of last night's operations by the Bomber Command. Attacks which continued throughout the night caused extensive fires in the target areas.

Docks at Emden, Bremerhaven, Rotterdam and Flushing also were bombed, as well as airdromes and other targets in Northwest Germany and Holland. The harbor at Brest was again attacked by a force of Coastal Command aircraft.

During last night enemy aircraft crossed the east coast and dropped bombs, mainly high explosives, on several coast towns and in the Midlands. Bombs were also dropped in the London area, including a considerable number of incendiaries, which were soon, however, extinguished.

Outside London the casualties reported were very few, most of them occurring when several houses were demolished at one point in the Midlands.

In London also the total reported is not heavy, most of them being due to one bomb which demolished a building occupied by a number of persons.

Damage throughout the country was not extensive. Fighters and A. A. (anti-aircraft) guns were in action and one enemy bomber is known to have been destroyed.

The Ministries of Air and Home Security also issued the following communiqué:

There has been very little enemy air activity over this country today. Bombs were dropped at two points in East Kent. No damage or casualties were caused. A second enemy bomber was destroyed during last night by our night patrols.

An Admiralty communiqué follows:

The Board of Admiralty regrets to announce that H. M. S. Southampton (Captain B. C. B. Brooke, R. N.) has become a total loss.

As announced on the 14th of January, H. M. S. Southampton was hit during an air attack on our ships in the Mediterranean.

Fire broke out on board. As a result of the damage the fire later attained such proportion that it became necessary to abandon ship.

H. M. S. Southampton had subsequently to be sunk by our own forces when it was found impracticable to tow her into port. The great majority of the crew have been saved.

Another Admiralty communiqué states:

Information has been received that H. M. S. Submarine Pandora (Lieut. Comdr. J. W. Linton, R. N.) has sunk two Italian supply ships in the Central Mediterranean.

Both the enemy supply ships were about 5,000 tons and both were southbound. One of them was seen to have a deck cargo of motor transport.

Bengazi was raided by bombers of the R. A. F. during the nights of Jan. 13-14 and 14-15. The main mole of the harbor was bombed and large fires were caused among buildings around the customs houses. A heavy explosion occurred at the base of the mole. Other bombs hit buildings on the quayside and straddled government buildings. Shipping also was attacked.

On the return journey our aircraft machine-gunned the Benina airdrome and two enemy aircraft were set on fire and destroyed and damage caused to a number of others.

In the forward area between Tobruk and Derna our fighters maintained constant patrols but no engagements with the enemy took place.

Photographic reconnaissance over Catania, Sicily, shows that the raid carried out during the night of Jan. 12-13, referred to in the communiqué of Jan. 14, was more effective than at first thought.

Between thirty and forty aircraft were seen to be either burned out or severely damaged. One hangar on the west side of the airdrome was completely wrecked. Another was very badly damaged and a third was seen to have been hit. The administrative buildings were heavily damaged and many bomb craters were observed on the airdrome itself.

In Italian East Africa, Assab was raided during the night of Jan. 14-15, attacks being made on stores and warehouses. All bombs burst in the target area, one very large fire being started which was visible for thirty-five miles. Asmara was raided on the previous night with considerable effect. From all operations our aircraft returned safely with the exception of one fighter shot down in Libya.

Greek

ATHENS, Jan. 16 (UP)—The Greek War Ministry communiqué tonight said:

There was local action only. Some prisoners were taken.

A Ministry of Public Security communiqué said:

All quiet.

Italian

ROME, Jan. 16 (AP)—The Italian High Command issued this communiqué today:

On the Greek front enemy attacks have been repulsed by the quick reaction of our troops.

In Cyrenaica [Libya] there was the usual activity of artillery on the Tobruk front and by our swift columns in the Jarabub zone.

Our planes bombed roads, supply posts and enemy preparations southeast of Tobruk.

An enemy plane on a scouting flight over Tobruk was shot down by naval anti-aircraft defense.

In East Africa there was some artillery action on the Sudan front. The base of Port Sudan was hit by our air force.

The enemy made an air raid on Assab, causing slight damage.

One of our submarines, commanded by Commander Mario Spano, torpedoed an enemy light cruiser in the Mediterranean the night of Jan. 10.

Another submarine of ours, commanded by Commander Vittorio Raccanelli, sank the 5,000-ton British steamer Ardabham in the Atlantic. [Presumably the 4,980-ton Ardanbhan was meant.]

Enemy planes bombed Catania last night, causing little damage, several victims and a few wounded.

German

BERLIN, Jan. 16 (AP)—The German High Command issued this communiqué today:

In the course of armed day reconnaissance yesterday the Luftwaffe bombed a troop camp and another objective in Southern England.

Combat formations made a rolling raid on war vital objectives in one Central English city last night despite unfavorable weather. Small scale attacks also were made on London.

English harbors were mined.

The enemy dropped incendiaries and explosive bombs at several places in Northern Germany last night. Several house fires were started at Wilhelmshaven. Spreading of fires was prevented by the efficiency of self-protection squads.

Several incendiaries flamed in the harbor section without, however, causing noteworthy damage. Wilhelmshaven losses were twenty dead and thirty-five injured.

Nazi Planes in Mediterranean Suggest Effort to Break Blockade

By DEWITT MACKENZIE.

The German aerial offensive against the British fleet in the central Mediterranean has the early appearance of being preliminary to a dual effort—to save what is left of Mussolini's big Libyan army from destruction and to prevent British support from reaching the Greeks in Albania.

An initial objective would seem to be to smash a hole in the British blockade and re-establish water communications between Italy and Marshal Graziani's forces in Africa for re-enforcements and supplies.

While the Nazi offensive has not begun as a major affair, it obviously might develop into something more elaborate should fortune smile on it. Hitler is a gambling opportunist and generally quick to take advantage of openings—and they call him "Lucky Hitler" in Germany.

However, the Nazis can succeed only if they establish supremacy over the Royal Air Force in the Mediterranean zone.

Offensive Is Finished.

The Axis partners may be able to run the gantlet and carry some help to Graziani. They may even bolster him so that he can maintain himself against attack at his chief base in the port of Tripoli.

But this in itself won't save the rest of Italy's African possessions, which have begun to rock with the Fascist defeat in Libya. Graziani's shattered army is finished as an offensive force for the time being.

Military circles in London believe Hitler may be planning to send German troops to Graziani's aid, if the blockade can be breached. That might be a good move for the Axis, for the purpose of defending fortified areas like the ports of Tripoli and Bengasi. The Germans are powerful fighters and might instill new spirit into the Fascist army.

However, Nazi troops would be handicapped in actual desert warfare, since that calls for highly specialized training. There is little in the German lexicon of war to compare with the science of campaigning over an ocean of sand.

I really must record, however, that one of the most brilliant tricks ever tried in such warfare was credited to the ingenuity of German Army officers. This was in August of 1916, during the world war, at the time of the battle in the Sinai Desert east of the Suez Canal.

Smart Desert Trick.

The Turks, partly officered by Germans, had confounded most military experts by marching an army of some 14,000 across the waterless desert. That was astounding enough, but a real seven-day mystery was created by the fact that they dragged heavy artillery through the deep, loose sand. The British sweated much before they finally hit on the answer, which was this:

"There grows in the desert a little plant, like a cactus, which is as tough and wiry as a bunch of steel springs. The German engineers had hit upon the scheme of making a sort of railroad track, the width of a gun carriage, by digging shallow parallel trenches and filling them with the springy plant. Over this unique track the guns rolled as easy as you please and were brought into play against the British.

LONDON, JAN 16-(AP)-RESPONSIBLE SOVIET SOURCES IN LONDON DENIED TODAY THAT RUSSIA WAS BUILDING OR BUYING 200 MERCHANT SHIPS TO TRANSPORT PRODUCE FROM THE AMERICAS TO RUSSIAN PORTS.

"THE SOVIET HAS ENOUGH SHIPS OF ITS OWN," SAID ONE "TO TRANSPORT ITS NEEDS."

YESTERDAY THE BRITISH MINISTER OF ECONOMIC WARFARE, HUGH DALTON, WAS SAID TO BE INVESTIGATING A REPORT THAT THE SOVIET PROPOSED TO FORM A 200-SHIP FLEET TO CARRY PRODUCTS FROM THE AMERICAS--PRINCIPALLY GRAIN FROM SOUTH AMERICA.

ASSERTING RUSSIA'S INDUSTRIES ARE GROWING STEADILY, THE SOVIET SOURCE SAID "WE NEED OIL, COTTON AND DOZENS OF OTHER IMPORTS FROM THE UNITED STATES AND OTHER NATIONS TO MAINTAIN TOP PRODUCTION." HE SUGGESTED, HOWEVER, THAT IT WAS NO BUSINESS OF BRITAIN'S HOW RUSSIA TRANSPORTED THEM.

BERLIN, JAN. 16-(AP)-GERMAN INVASION OF BRITAIN IN THE FALL OF 1940 "WOULD HAVE SPARED THE ENGLISH PEOPLE SOME DISTRESS AND GRIEF BECAUSE THE PRESENT FORM OF AERIAL WARFARE WHICH WAS CONJURED UP BY CHURCHILL WOULD HAVE BEEN AVOIDED," ADOLF HITLER'S VOELKISCHER BEOBACHTER OBSERVED TODAY.

THE QUESTION AS TO WHY THERE WAS NO INVASION AFTER THE RETREAT AT DUNKERQUE AND AFTER FRANCE'S DEFEAT WILL BE ANSWERED BY GERMANY AT THE OPPORTUNE TIME AND "NOT ONLY WITH WORDS," THE PAPER SAID, WARNING THAT THE BRITISH MUST KEEP ON EXPECTING IT.

IT ADDED THAT VAINLY-WAITED INVASION HAD WORSENED ENGLAND'S STRATEGIC POSITION AND SAID THE NEXT SIX MONTHS WOULD NOT BE IDLY WASTED BY THE REICH.

IT HELD THAT UNITED STATES AID COULD NOT BE EXTENSIVE IN THAT PERIOD BECAUSE EXPERIENCE TAUGHT THAT IT WAS A LONG WAY FROM THE DRAFTING BOARD TO PRODUCTION.

HITLER'S STATEMENT THAT GERMANY HAD PLENTY OF SUBMARINES WILL GAIN IMPORT DURING THE SIX-MONTH PERIOD, THE PAPER CONCLUDED, BECAUSE AMERICAN AID ULTIMATELY WAS NOT ONLY A PRODUCTION BUT A SUPPLY PROBLEM.

THE PRESS LOYAL TO VIDKUN QUISLING, THE NORWEGIAN NAZI LEADER, CURRENTLY IS RAGING AGAINST CROWN PRINCESS MARTHA, ALLEGEDLY BECAUSE OF A RADIO ADDRESS SHE MADE FROM BOSTON SOME TIME AGO.

BUDAPEST, JAN. 16-(AP)-AN OFFICIAL ANNOUNCEMENT SAID TODAY ALL TRAFFIC ON HUNGARIAN RAILWAYS, EXCEPT INTERNATIONAL TRAINS, WOULD BE SUSPENDED AT MIDNIGHT. IT WAS INDICATED THE SUSPENSION WOULD LAST THREE DAYS.

THE REASONS GIVEN FOR THE ORDER WERE UNFAVORABLE WEATHER, TECHNICAL DIFFICULTIES AND LACK OF FOREIGN CONNECTIONS. THE POPULATION WAS ASKED TO ABSTAIN FROM TRAVELING. INTERNATIONAL TRAINS AND BUSES WILL OPERATE ONLY ON A RESTRICTED SCALE.

BUENOS AIRES, JAN 16-(AP)-ACTING PRESIDENT RAMON S.CASTILLO DEMANDED AN END TO "OBSTRUCTIONIST" TACTICS TODAY IN A SHARPLY WORDED NOTE TO THE ARGENTINE CONGRESS, WHERE THE RADICAL PARTY MAJORITY IN THE CHAMBER OF DEPUTIES HAD REFUSED TO PASS THE 1941 BUDGET AND OTHER FINANCIAL MEASURES.

POLITICAL OBSERVERS SAW IN THE MESSAGE A STRONG HINT THAT CASTILLO WAS CONSIDERING CLOSING THE EXTRAORDINARY SESSION OF THE CONGRESS AND RULING THE NATION THROUGH ADMINISTRATIVE DECREES UNLESS THE OPPOSITION COOPERATED ON LEGISLATION.

THE NEWSPAPER LA NACION SAID THAT THE ACTING PRESIDENT CONSIDERED AS "SUBVERSIVE" THE ACTION OF THE RADICAL BLOC IN BRINGING POLITICAL QUESTIONS INTO CONGRESS DURING THE SPECIAL SESSION WITHOUT APPROVAL OF THE CHIEF EXECUTIVE.

BUENOS AIRES, JAN.16-(AP)-THE GOVERNMENT IN A MESSAGE TO THE ARGENTINE CONGRESS TODAY APPEALED TO POLITICAL FACTIONS TO LAY ASIDE THEIR DIFFERENCES AND TAKE CONCERTED ACTION ON ECONOMIC REFORMS TO MEET THE CRISIS BROUGHT ON BY THE EUROPEAN WAR.

THE APPEAL WAS CONSIDERED IMPORTANT IN VIEW OF THE ACUTE CONTROVERSY BETWEEN THE RADICAL AND CONSERVATIVE PARTIES OVER ELECTIONS IN THE PROVINCES OF SANTA FE AND MENDOZA, WHERE THE RADICALS CHARGED THAT CONSERVATIVES WON THROUGH FRAUD.

BROAD EMERGENCY POWERS ALREADY AVAILABLE TO PRESIDENT

MOST OF THEM UNUSED
SINCE WORLD WAR (970)

BY THEODORE F.KOOP

15

(ADVANCE) WASHINGTON,JAN 16-(AP)-THE BROAD AUTHORITY WHICH THE PENDING AID-TO-BRITAIN MEASURE WOULD GRANT PRESIDENT ROOSEVELT WOULD AUGMENT A WIDE VARIETY OF EMERGENCY POWERS WHICH HE IS RESERVING FOR POSSIBLE USE IN DEFENSE DEVELOPMENTS.

MOST OF THESE EMERGENCY POWERS, AFFECTING SUCH PHASES OF AMERICAN LIFE AS COMMERCE, TRANSPORTATION AND COMMUNICATIONS, WERE WRITTEN INTO LAW WHEN THE UNITED STATES WAS AT WAR IN 1917-18. THEY HAVE REMAINED INACTIVE ON THE STATUTE BOOKS SINCE THE ARMISTICE.

SOME CAN BE MADE EFFECTIVE ONLY IN WARTIME; OTHERS CAN BE PUT INTO EFFECT BY EXECUTIVE ORDER IF WAR IS DECLARED "IMMINENT" OR WHEN THE PRESIDENT PROCLAIMS A "NATIONAL EMERGENCY."

MR.ROOSEVELT ANNOUNCED A "NATIONAL EMERGENCY" SHORTLY AFTER THE EUROPEAN WAR BROKE OUT IN SEPTEMBER, 1939, BUT HE SAID THE SITUATION THEN REQUIRED THE EXERCISE OF ONLY A LIMITED NUMBER OF THESE SPECIAL POWERS.

FOR EXAMPLE, HE MADE USE OF LAWS EMPOWERING HIM TO INCREASE THE STRENGTH OF THE ARMY, NAVY, MARINE CORPS AND NATIONAL GUARD; TO EXPAND THE FEDERAL BUREAU OF INVESTIGATION, AND TO ALLOCATE $500,000 TO BRING HOME AMERICANS STRANDED IN EUROPE.

SINCE THEN, CONGRESS HAS VOTED THE PRESIDENT NEW TYPES OF AUTHORITY UNDER THE DEFENSE PROGRAM. THE CONSCRIPTION LAW INCLUDES A PROVISION THAT THE PRESIDENT CAN TAKE OVER AND OPERATE ON A RENTAL BASIS INDUSTRIAL PLANTS FROM WHICH THE GOVERNMENT COULD NOT OBTAIN DEFENSE ORDERS AS EXPEDITIOUSLY AS DEEMED NECESSARY.

THE OLD LAWS AND DEFENSE LEGISLATION ENACTED WITHIN THE LAST YEAR, IN THE OPINION OF ADMINISTRATION LAWYERS, GIVE THE PRESIDENT SUFFICIENT AUTHORITY FOR HANDLING ANY PROBLEMS LIKELY TO ARISE WHILE THE NATION IS BEING ARMED.

THESE LEGAL EXPERTS SAY THERE IS NOT MUCH POSSIBILITY OR NECESSITY FOR THE PRESIDENT'S ISSUING ANY PROCLAMATION OF SO-CALLED "TOTAL EMERGENCY." MR.ROOSEVELT HIMSELF TOLD A RECENT PRESS CONFERENCE THAT SUCH A QUESTION WAS LEGALISTIC AND TECHNICAL.

INSTEAD OF BY A BLANKET PROCLAMATION, FEDERAL ATTORNEYS SAY, ADDITIONAL EMERGENCY POWERS WOULD BE APPLIED STEP BY STEP AS NEEDED. A SEPARATE EXECUTIVE ORDER WOULD BE REQUIRED TO MAKE EACH ONE EFFECTIVE.

MOST AUTHORITIES AGREE THE PRESIDENTIAL POWERS ARE EXTREMELY BROAD. DISCUSSING THEM IN AN ADDRESS IN NOVEMBER, 1939, SENATOR TAFT (R-OHIO) SAID:

"IT IS VERY DIFFICULT FOR ANYONE TO QUESTION THE EXECUTIVE POWERS IN THE COURT IN MOST CASES, SO THAT MANY EMERGENCY POWERS IN PRACTICE ARE ACTUALLY MUCH BROADER THAN ATTORNEYS ARE LIKELY TO REALIZE ON A FIRST READING OF THE STATUTES."

A SUBCOMMITTEE OF THE HOUSE JUDICIARY COMMITTEE HAS BEEN CANVASSING THE STATUTES APPLICABLE TO PRESENT CONDITIONS TO DETERMINE WHETHER ANY REVISIONS MIGHT BE NECESSARY IN THE NEAR FUTURE. IT HAS NOT MADE PUBLIC ANY OF ITS DECISIONS OR THE LIST OF LAWS INVOLVED.

THE ONLY OTHER RECENT FEDERAL ATTEMPT TO LIST THE PRESIDENT'S EMERGENCY POWERS WAS MADE IN OCTOBER, 1939, WHEN THE ATTORNEY GENERAL'S OFFICE SUMMARIZED THEM AT THE REQUEST OF THE SENATE.

"IT IS NOT CLAIMED THAT THIS LIST IS COMPLETE," WROTE FRANK MURPHY, THEN ATTORNEY GENERAL. "INDEED, ACCURACY IN THIS RESPECT CAN BE ASSURED ONLY BY CAREFUL AND PAINSTAKING SEARCH OF THE ENTIRE BODY OF THE FEDERAL STATUTORY LAW. X X X

"YOU ARE AWARE, OF COURSE, THAT THE EXECUTIVE HAS POWERS NOT ENUMERATED IN THE STATUTES--POWERS DERIVED NOT FROM STATUTORY GRANTS, BUT FROM THE CONSTITUTION. X X X THESE CONSTITUTIONAL POWERS HAVE NEVER BEEN SPECIFICALLY DEFINED, AND IN FACT CANNOT BE, SINCE THEIR EXTENT AND LIMITATIONS ARE LARGELY DEPENDENT UPON CONDITIONS AND CIRCUMSTANCES."

(THE CONSTITUTION GIVES THE PRESIDENT, AMONG OTHER THINGS, WIDE POWERS AS COMMANDER-IN-CHIEF OF THE ARMY AND NAVY.)

THE ATTORNEY GENERAL'S REPORT LISTED THE FOLLOWING AMONG THE MAJOR EMERGENCY POWERS OF THE CHIEF EXECUTIVE:

TO TAKE POSSESSION OF ANY TRANSPORTATION SYSTEM (WARTIME ONLY) AND TO DEMAND PREFERENCE FOR SHIPMENT OF TROOPS AND WAR MATERIAL (WARTIME OR THREATENED WAR).

TO FORBID FEDERAL RESERVE BANKS TO DO BUSINESS EXCEPT UNDER TREASURY REGULATIONS, AND TO SUSPEND TRADING ON SECURITIES EXCHANGES FOR 90 DAYS.

TO INVESTIGATE, REGULATE OR PROHIBIT TRANSACTIONS IN FOREIGN EXCHANGE, AND EXPORT, HOARDING, MELTING OR EARMARKING OF GOLD OR SILVER COIN, BULLION OR CURRENCY.

TO APPOINT ARMY AND NAVY OFFICERS TO HIGHER TEMPORARY GRADES AND TO CALL BACK RETIRED OFFICERS (WARTIME ONLY).

TO PLACE THE COAST GUARD UNDER AUTHORITY OF THE NAVY.

TO PROHIBIT OR RESTRICT IMPORTATION OF ARTICLES FROM A COUNTRY WHICH RESTRICTS IMPORTATION OF UNITED STATES PRODUCTS (DURING A WAR IN WHICH THE UNITED STATES IS NOT ENGAGED).

TO REFUSE CLEARANCE TO VESSELS OF A BELLIGERENT COUNTRY WHICH DISCRIMINATES AGAINST AMERICAN VESSELS OR CITIZENS (DURING A WAR IN WHICH THE UNITED STATES IS NOT ENGAGED).

TO TAKE OVER POWER HOUSES, DAMS, CONDUITS AND RESERVOIRS FOR MAKING MUNITIONS.

TO LET THE FEDERAL POWER COMMISSION REQUIRE TEMPORARY CONNECTIONS AND TRANSMISSION OF ELECTRICAL ENERGY WHENEVER IT DETERMINES THAT WAR OR A SUDDEN INCREASE IN DEMANDS FOR ELECTRICAL ENERGY REQUIRES IT.

TO COMPEL ANY VESSEL TO LEAVE UNITED STATES WATERS IN CASES WHERE BY LAW OR TREATY IT SHOULD NOT REMAIN, AND SIMILARLY TO PREVENT [illegible]EIGN VESSEL FROM DEPARTING.

TO DETAIN ANY VESSEL WHOSE PRINCIPAL CARGO IS ARMS AND AMMUNITION HEN IT APPEARS LIKELY TO BE USED AGAINST NATIONS AT PEACE WITH THE NITED STATES, UNTIL THE PRESIDENT CAN DECIDE THE CASE.

TO WITHHOLD CLEARANCE FROM ANY VESSEL WHEN THERE IS CAUSE TO BELIEVE HAT IT IS ABOUT TO CARRY FUEL, ARMS, ETC., TO A WARSHIP OF A BELLI-

GERENT NATION IN VIOLATION OF UNITED STATES LAWS OR TREATIES.

TO REQUIRE THE MASTER OF A DOMESTIC OR FOREIGN VESSEL TO STATE ON OATH ANY INTENDED TRANSSHIPMENT OF CARGO TO OTHER VESSELS IN PORT OR AT SEA.

TO REMOVE DUTIES FROM IMPORTED FOOD, CLOTHING, AND MEDICAL SUPPLIES FOR EMERGENCY RELIEF WORK.

TO IMPOSE ADDITIONAL RESTRICTIONS ON THE DEPARTURE OF PERSONS FROM AND THEIR ENTRY INTO THE UNITED STATES (WARTIME ONLY).

TO WAIVE OR MODIFY THE MONTHLY APPORTIONMENT OF APPROPRIATIONS FOR GOVERNMENTAL DEPARTMENTS.

TO TAKE ACTION IN RESPECT TO CREDIT EXPANSION WHEN AN ECONOMIC EMERGENCY SO REQUIRES.

TO EMPLOY ARMED VESSELS TO SUPPRESS PIRACY (LAWS OF 1819 AND 1861).

TO ORDER THE NATIONAL GUARD AND ARMY AND NAVAL RESERVES TO ACTIVE DUTY.

TO ORDER CERTAIN INVENTIONS KEPT SECRET AND TO WITHHOLD PATENTS (WARTIME ONLY).

TO UTILIZE THE SERVICES OF THE AMERICAN RED CROSS (WARTIME OR IMMINENT WAR).

TO SUSPEND THE LAW PROHIBITING MORE THAN EIGHT HOURS' WORK IN ONE DAY BY PERSONS ENGAGED ON GOVERNMENT CONTRACTS, WHEN MILITARY PURPOSES REQUIRE. (THE PRESIDENT SUSPENDED THIS LAW FOR CERTAIN WORKERS ON THE NEW ATLANTIC AND CARIBBEAN NAVAL BASES.)

TO REFUSE TRANSFER OF VESSELS TO FOREIGN REGISTRY OR OWNERSHIP, TO TERMINATE CHARTERS OF MARITIME COMMISSION VESSELS, AND TO AUTHORIZE THE MARITIME COMMISSION TO REQUISITION ANY AMERICAN VESSEL.

TO SUSPEND RULES ABOUT TRANSMISSION OF RADIO AND WIRE COMMUNICATIONS (DURING WAR, DISASTER, OR EMERGENCY) AND TO REQUIRE PRIORITY FOR DEFENSE COMMUNICATIONS (WARTIME).

TO PLACE AN ARMY OFFICER IN EXCLUSIVE CHARGE OF PANAMA CANAL OPERATIONS.

TO RESTRAIN ALL NATIONALS OF A HOSTILE COUNTRY 14 YEARS OLD OR OVER (WARTIME OR THREATENED INVASION).

TO DESIGNATE PROHIBITED PLACES UNDER ESPIONAGE LAWS.

TO ACQUIRE LAND FOR MILITARY PURPOSES (WARTIME OR IMMINENT WAR).

TO REGULATE THE MOVEMENT OF VESSELS IN AMERICAN TERRITORIAL WATERS.

WASHINGTON, JAN 16-(AP)-CONGRESS RECEIVED A REQUEST FROM PRESIDENT ROOSEVELT TODAY FOR AUTHORITY TO PROCEED WITH IMMEDIATE "EMERGENCY" CONSTRUCTION OF 200 CARGO SHIPS, AND A RECOMMENDATION FROM THE HOUSE NAVAL COMMITTEE THAT 400 SUBCHASERS AND OTHER SMALL CRAFT BE ADDED TO THE FLEET.

THE 600 VESSELS WOULD COST ABOUT $800,000,000, AND IN ADDITION WOULD REQUIRE A VAST EXPANSION OF SHIPBUILDING FACILITIES.

MR.ROOSEVELT, WHO HAD DISCLOSED PREVIOUSLY THAT THE CARGO SHIP PROGRAM WAS BEING DRAFTED, SENT A SPECIAL MESSAGE TO THE LEGISLATORS ASSERTING HE WAS "CONVINCED THAT THE NATIONAL INTEREST DEMANDS THAT IMMEDIATE STEPS BE TAKEN UPON AN EMERGENCY BASIS TO PROVIDE AGAINST THE EFFECT UPON THE UNITED STATES OF A POSSIBLE WORLD SHORTAGE" OF SUCH VESSELS.

HE ASKED FOR SPEEDY PROVISION OF $313,500,000 FOR THE WORK, INCLUDING THE ESTABLISHMENT OF SPECIAL BUILDING WAYS. AN ADDITIONAL $36,500,000, HE EXPLAINED, WILL BE ALLOCATED FROM EMERGENCY FUNDS PLACED AT HIS DISPOSAL.

WHEN THE PRESIDENTIAL MESSAGE WAS READ, REPRESENTATIVE MARCANTONIO (AL-NY) AROSE IN THE HOUSE AND INQUIRED WHETHER THE CARGO SHIPS WERE TO BE USED TO TRANSPORT TROOPS TO FOREIGN CONFLICTS "OR TO TRANSPORT GOODS WHICH WILL BE FOLLOWED BY TROOPS." REPRESENTATIVE TINKHAM (R-MASS) WHO HAD THE FLOOR AT THE TIME, REPLIED THAT ANSWERS WOULD BE SOUGHT TO THOSE QUESTIONS DURING HEARINGS ON THE ADMINISTRATION'S BRITISH-AID BILL.

IN ADDITION TO THE 400 NEW SMALL CRAFT FOR THE FLEET, WHICH WOULD COST APPROXIMATELY $465,000,000, FULLY EQUIPPED, THE NAVAL COMMITTEE ALSO RECOMMENDED A $315,000,000 EXPANSION OF SHIPBUILDING FACILITIES AND A $194,000,000 INCREASE IN THE NATION'S ORDNANCE PLANTS.

REAR ADMIRAL W.R.FURLONG, CHIEF OF NAVAL ORDNANCE, TOLD THE COMMITTEE THERE WAS AN URGENT NEED FOR EXTRA CAPACITY TO PRODUCE ANTIAIRCRAFT GUNS. BESIDES THOSE REQUIRED FOR THE FLEET'S FIGHTING SHIPS, GREAT NUMBERS OF THEM WOULD BE NEEDED FOR MERCHANT VESSELS IN EVENT OF WAR, HE SAID.

INCLUDING $300,000,000 PROPOSED YESTERDAY FOR STRENGTHENING THE FLEET'S DEFENSES AGAINST AERIAL ATTACKS, THE COMMITTEE'S RECOMMENDATIONS OF THE LAST TWO DAYS WOULD ADD $1,209,000,000 TO THE COST OF THE TWO-OVEAN NAVY, FOR WHICH CONTRACTS IN EXCESS OF $7,000,000,000 ALREADY HAVE BEEN LET.

PRESIDENT ROOSEVELT, IN URGING "IMMEDIATE AND FAVORABLE" CONSIDERATION FOR THE CARGO SHIP PROGRAM, TOLD CONGRESS HE FELT CONSTRUCTION OF THE 200 STEEL SHIPS SHOULD BE UNDERTAKEN WITH THE LEAST POSSIBLE DELAY AND THAT THEY SHOULD BE OF "SUCH TYPE AND DESIGN AS WILL PERMIT OF THEIR MOST RAPID CONSTRUCTION."

"SUCH A PROGRAM OF EMERGENCY SHIPBUILDING SHOULD BE ENTIRELY DISTINCT FROM THE LONG-RANGE CONSTRUCTION PROGRAM WITH WHICH THE U.S.MARITIME COMMISSION IS PROCEEDING UNDER THE 1936 MERCHANT MARINE ACT, AND INTERFERENCE WITH THAT PROGRAM, MUST BE AVOIDED," THE PRESIDENT WROTE.

"ADDITIONAL SHIPWAYS AND OTHER NECESSARY SHIPYARDS FOR THE BUILDING OF THESE EMERGENCY CARGO SHIPS SHOULD THEREFORE BE PROVIDED, SO FAR AS NECESSARY, SPECIFICALLY FOR THAT PURPOSE, IN THE SIMPLEST POSSIBLE MANNER AND IN THE SHORTEST POSSIBLE TIME."

THE CHIEF EXECUTIVE SAID THAT TITLE TO THE FACILITIES SHOULD IN MOST INSTANCES VEST IN THE GOVERNMENT, BUT ADDED THAT THE MANAGERIAL ABILITIES OF PRIVATE CONTRACTORS MUST BE UTILIZED TO THE UTMOST.

Paris, In Grip Of Occupati Rule, Rapidly Approaches Old 'G Paree'

No Famine, Or General Disorder During German Occupation Noted By American Reporter

ART. I

By ROY P. PORTER
Associated Press Correspondent

New York, Jan. 13—Paris, though suffering from a bad case of "occupation jitters" under German military rule, was moving rapidly toward the "Gay Paree" of former times when I left there the second week in December.

There was no famine. There were, however, deficiency diseases and digestive troubles. There were recurring, temporary shortages of some foodstuffs.

There was no general disorder. There were isolated, localized "incidents," largely provoked by Latin tempers, sometimes heightened by too much wine.

There was no organized resistance to the German invasion. There were growing signs of commercial and industrial collaboration between French businessmen and their German supervisors.

French Tired Of War

The reason for all this is that the German army is seeking to win rather than antagonize, to control rather than conquer—and the French, tired of war and eager for peaceful living, are taking what is at present the only way left open to them.

It's not fun to live in occupied France any more than it's fun for any people to live under any kind of military occupation authority. A serious transport problem, due largely to disorganized requisitioning of trucks and cars by the French themselves before the occupation, has resulted in intermittent food shortages.

Most of the foodstuffs still are available, with the exception of coffee. The real job is to move these supplies in from the regions where they are grown.

Leather And Soap Scarce

Many other necessities are hard to find. Leather is short because many tanneries were damaged or are unable to get skins in from the unoccupied part of the country.

Soap is scarce because the oils used in its manufacture come principally from North Africa to factories in southern unoccupied France.

Sugar is beginning to be lacking because the beet fields in the north, uncultivated and torn up by military operations, will produce only about twenty-five per cent. of the normal crop.

The most strictly rationed food is meat, because it's difficult to move in large quantities and more difficult to keep in a country where there is little refrigeration. France does not raise enough live stock for her normal consumption.

Three Meatless Days

But any Parisian or any foreigner, if he manages well, can eat and eat enough to keep healthy for the present. No one knows what the future may bring.

Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday of each week are nominally meatless days. That means you can't have beef, veal, lamb, pork or any other animal flesh which Americans call meat. But you can eat fish, rabbit, chicken or any other fowl.

Thursday the lid comes off and beefsteaks appear again, while Friday is still a meat day, even for the Catholics, who have been granted a special dispensation to eat meat on fast days by the Archbishop of Paris.

Saturday and Sunday you can eat almost anything you please, if it's available. But there are additional complications. If you order meat for lunch in a restaurant, you can't also have cheese for the same meal. And on only one night a week—Sunday—are meat dishes allowed for dinner.

Rationing is strictly supervised by German agricultural experts who have surveyed existing food stocks. Actual enforcement is left up to the French administration.

The basis of the system is a little brown book, pasted up with coupons. Once a month, depending on highly complicated French red tape, each resident exchanges certain coupons for sheets of blue, or green, or purple tickets, each marked for a specific amount of a commodity. Whether it's in a store or a restaurant, you must hand in your tickets before you get what you've ordered.

Of course, there's cheating and bootlegging. But the penalties upon conviction are severe, running from stiff fines to temporary or permanent closing of establishments violating the regulations.

Synthetic Coffee

The dangers of rationing to the individual are evident. If you blow yourself to a big beef roast early in the month, you may end up eating fish for a week at the end of the same month. It's the old salary check problem: Stretch it out and you'll be all right, spend it all at once and you'll find yourself short.

The coffee situation is different, because most of it comes from Latin America and must run the British blockade. I once heard a young—and beautiful—girl say: "I'd sell my soul for a cup of real coffee." But no one had any.

In the place of real coffee, Frenchmen drink what they call blends, but what blends! Acorns, barley, chicoree, roots of many types and malt, mixed in with perhaps twenty per cent. real coffee. It's hot and if you hold your nose you can get it down. The French have found that a shot of brandy, of which there is a plentiful supply, helps the taste.

Potatoes Plentiful

However, coffee always has been expensive in France and much of the population, especially in the north, rarely used coffee except on special occasions.

Potatoes, with a fairly normal crop in the Brittany area, are becoming more and more plentiful, but here again, the principal problem is the shortage of trucks and gasoline for civilian use.

German army units have all the gasoline they need, part of it synthetic from the huge refining plants in their own country, the rest from stocks seized in France. Now they are releasing a part of this latter to aid in transportation of foodstuffs.

All these complications in diet, living conditions and the general difficulty in daliy existence have brought on a variety of physical ailments which Parisians called "occupationitis."

Types Of Ailments

Almost everyone has several and many as high as half a dozen. They show themselves in various symptoms—upset stomach, colds and coughs, rashes, extreme fatigue, night blindness or neuralgia.

Not even the German occupation forces are spared, although army doctors do their best to keep officers and men in good condition. One young lieutenant from Berlin used to exchange notes with me almost every day on how our similar cases of skin rash were progressing.

Doctors are not certain about the exact causes of most of these conditions. They say they apparently result from combinations of certain deficiencies in diet complicated by depression and worry over the uncertainty of war developments. Night blindness is attributed to deficiency of vitamin A.

By far the worst ailment has been pronounced by medical men as a type of "confusional insanity." Many in Paris have it in a more or less serious degree. This term does not mean that those affected actually are insane. It is closer to the American expression "jitters."

Lose Sense Of Proportion

When you get that way, you lose some of your sense of proportion. You find that even the simplest tasks are extremely fatiguing. You find that you must steel yourself to carry out what plans you have made, whether they concern your office or your social life. You simply "don't give a damn about anything."

For some people, the opposite reaction results. They find a false physical stimulation which forces them to stay up late, expend a great deal of energy without accomplishing much, eat and drink more than is good for them and keep going at such a pace that eventually they end up exhausted.

Along with these jitters, there's a new wave of night blindness, dangerous in a city of almost complete blackouts from sunset to sunrise.

These people can't see in the dark, their eyes cannot accustom themselves to even dimly lighted streets, and minor accidents, such as walking into walls, lampposts and park benches, are frequent. Driving after dark is impossible.

Fresh Fruit Recommended

Dr. Daniel P. O'Brien, Paris representative of the Rockefeller Foundation, who recently returned to this country, said night blindness is directly connected with vitamin deficiencies, but that undoubtedly the blackouts and nervous strain have aggravated the French brand. Like the rest of us in Paris, he has had a touch of it from time to time.

One of the best ways we found of fighting off these complications was to eat as much fresh fruit as was available, and particularly Spanish oranges, big and juicy, which now have started to come into the occupied territory.

Some people found that going "on the wagon" helped, while others got steadily worse when they gave up their cocktails or highballs.

One druggist told me sales of aspirin and sedatives were mounting rapidly as people's nerves got more ragged. Many of my friends have been forced to take treatments at the American Hospital for bad cases of nervous indigestion and even mild forms of dysentery.

Epidemic Of Colds

With winter coming on when I left, there was a renewed epidemic of chest and head colds, caused by living in unheated apartments or working in unheated offices. The French administration has recognized the dangers of this situation and has been working hard to speed up the deliveries of coal to the capital from the northern mines.

There again it is a simple problem of transportation, since the mines have been working regular schedules since the end of hostilities.

Amicable Relations Between French And Nazis Found Slowly Developing

"Very Correct" Conduct Of German Forces Due To Strict Orders, American Reporter Says

Roy P. Porter, back in the United States after working for six months under the German military rule in the occupied zone of France, tells how the Nazi soldiers get along with the French.

By ROY P. PORTER
Associated Press Correspondent

New York, Jan. 14—Ask almost any Frenchman you meet in Paris what he thinks of the attitude of the German occupation forces, and his reply will be: "Very correct."

What he means is that the individual German officer or soldier, obeying strict orders, has been conducting himself politely and courteously.

He doesn't shove women and children out of his way off the sidewalk. He does'nt order the best table in a restaurant vacated because he and his blond secretary want to sit there. He doesn't smoke in the subway any more, since the company put up the "Rauchen verboten" signs.

Germans Like Paris

He does sometimes give up his seat to French women in subway trains and busses, often more quickly than his French or American companions. If he is an officer he often takes his foreign friends in his car if they have neither an automobile nor gasoline. He has, on certain occasions, helped out his French acquaintances by "lending" them eat or butter tickets from his more than adequate food coupons.

Outside of the fact that he has been ordered to behave himself and try to make the French like him, he does this because he likes Paris, its world famous food, its beautiful, well-dressed women and its returning atmosphere of gayety and amusement.

The French have been slow to react to this correctness. Suspicious by nature, they see an obvious German attempt to win them over.

Three Distinct Periods

The French have progressed through three distinct periods since that June morning when German mechanized and motorized units rolled into the capital.

The first, during the long procession into Paris, was complete apathy. The second reaction followed quickly, perhaps a week or ten days after the occupation, when they awoke from their stunned state to realize that the German military actually had taken control of all public and private business under strict military regulations.

This gave rise to a series of incidents. German soldiers were attacked, not with weapons, because the French have none, but with the hard heels and fists of groups of wine-inflamed "patriots." Germans were shoved "accidentally" off street corners, jostled in subways, insulted and laughed at in French, and generally "plagued."

Business Expanding

The Germans proved to the French that they could take it as well as give it, and the third stage—an amicable relationship bordering in many cases on friendship—slowly is developing. Then too, the French have taken a new view of the situation for two reasons:

Business, always under supervision, has been expanding gradually until most of the stores and shops are operating as nearly normally as possible. This means money in French pockets and consequent happiness in French hearts.

The number of German troops, particularly in the Paris region, has been steadily declining, leading Frenchmen to believe the worst days of the occupation are about over.

No official figures ever have been given as to the actual number of troops brought in with the occupation forces, but a good German military source hinted at around 600,000.

Estimated At 150,000

Today it seems safe to estimate that not more than 150,000, including staff officers and men, are on regular duty in the northern occupied zone. There are, of course, many, many thousands more in the military zone along the English Channel ports and the French-Belgian frontier, but these are air force and combat troops engaged in operations against the British Isles.

All these occupation troops are under the direct control of the Wehrmacht—the German national defense forces—as distinguished from the National Socialist party organization. They are soldiers and disciplined like soldiers. They are under orders to wear their uniforms at all times so that there can be no mistake about their identity.

But even then little misunderstandings occur. The wife of an American correspondent, who speaks German better than she does French, bumped into a noncommissioned officer one evening.

German Backed Away

"Watch where you're going," he growled.

"Whom do you think you're talking to?" she retorted.

"Just because you speak German don't try to start an argument with me," he answered.

"If you don't like it, take me to your superior officer and we'll see,' she answered spunkily.

The German backed away, saluted and disappeared.

One of the major French complaints against the Germans is the buying they have done in French shops with their "occupation marks." This money, distributed by a Reichsbank office in Paris, is the official currency with which the occupation forces are paid. It is stabilized at the rate of 1 mark to 20 francs, but has little real value because the Bank of France will have to retire it all when a peace treaty finally is signed. Financial authorities have estimated the cost of the occupation at about 4,000,000 francs a day.

Germans Bought Heavily

The Germans, in the first months of the occupation, bought such large quantities of cloth, shoes, silk stockings, shirts, socks, underwear, perfume, candy, jewelry and other articles that the military was forced to limit the weight of packages which could be sent or taken to Germany. Since then, the buying has declined, but there are empty shelves in many stores.

Even so, it was good business for many French merchants. One storekeeper told me he had moved out old stocks which he'd had in his basement for years. He was a little dubious about the money he had received in exchange for his merchandise, but his bank had allowed him to credit it was all right.

Social life between the French and Germans is on the upgrade. Before I left in December, I went to several cocktail and dinner parties in French homes where German officers were present. One, at the Ritz Hotel, was particularly amusing because a German officer and a former French officer found they had been attached to opposing units during battles along the Aisne river and threshed out the whole campaign again, each pointing out to the other the advantages that had been missed.

Angry About Stories

One thing that makes both the Germans and French angry is the number of rumors which have either no basis in fact or tell only part of the story.

There has been a great outcry in some countries about the number of Parisians run down by German automobiles in the nightly blackouts. It is true that there have been an undetermined number of fatalities and injuries when Frenchmen have been hit by German cars. But it is also true that German soldiers have been run down by their own cars.

Another story which raised a furore was that all the historic statues in the Place de la Concorde were being torn down by German labor troops. All still were in place when I left early in December.

Various reports have been made about German occupation of the Duke and Duchess of Windsor's palatial town house on the Boulevard Suchet. After investigating these reports no less than half a dozen times, I can say the house appears to be exactly as it was left one June morning when the Windsors, accompanied by Sir Charles and Lady Mendl (Elsie de Wolfe), drove southward out of Paris.

Denies Students Were Killed

Probably the most exaggerated of the rumors was that hundreds of French students were mowed down by German machine guns during demonstrations on the Champs Elysees on November 11, Armistice Day. French and German sources in Paris, supported by neutral eyewitnesses, including myself, are agreed that there is no evidence of any student being shot or killed.

Some were injured when German automobiles were run into the crowd to break up the parade.

Many students were detained temporarily at French police stations, charged with violating the regulation prohibiting public demonstrations without official permission.

One of Chief of Police Roger Langeron's assistants told me: "Certainly, there were some injured when German cars and soldiers, aided by regular French police, broke up the parade. Several revolver shots were fired into the air. But the whole affair wasn't much different from the street fights we've been having for years among our own political factions."

A report that definitely is untrue is that listening to all stations except those of the German official radio is prohibited to French radio audiences in the occupied territory.

Counterfeit Orders Figured In Defeat Of French Army

German Agents Wearing Republic's Uniforms Had Major Role, Says American Reporter

Roy P. Porter, who covered the Blitzkrieg in France and then worked for six months under the German military rule of the occupied zone, relates details of the French army's internal collapse and anecdotes of the "phony war" period.

By ROY P. PORTER
Associated Press Correspondent

New York, Jan. 15—French military men declare that German agents, sometimes working behind the French lines in French uniforms during actual fighting, played a tremendous role in the military campaign which resulted in the occupation of two-thirds of France.

The French called this secret work espionage and sabotage. The Germans regarded it as the same systematic campaign of exterior and interior forces working together which brought German occupation of other lands.

It was harder to recognize in France because the counter-espionage service shut off all information with the declaration of war and zealous censors clamped down.

Active Throughout Country

Beginning long before war actually threatened, French authorities are convinced, German agents carried on—not only in Paris but throughout France—a carefully planned campaign which came to a head when invading German armies swept through the remnants of badly equipped and morally disintegrated French defense units.

Many French offiers say they are sure there was a gigantic spy ring operating inside the French army.

One young French officer whom I know, commanding a tank unit near Sedan, was maneuvering his equipment from position to position in early June fighting in an effort to halt the advance of the German Panzer divisions.

Given Order By "Captain"

In the midst of the battle, a French army motorcycle with sidecar raced up to him. A man in French captain's uniform excitedly told him he had new orders from field headquarters and handed him what appeared to be an official command to withdraw.

It was signed and stamped and, when I saw it later, it looked exactly as an army order should.

Yet, when the withdrawal had been effected—leaving a wide gap between the French supporting units through which the Germans poured unhindered—French field headquarters reprimanded the tank commander for abandoning his position without direct orders. The young officer produced the paper and the brigade commander pronounced it false.

Batteries Are Misled

A similar instance occurred in the German fight to cross the Meuse river. Two field artillery batteries received an order by telephone to withdraw to a specified position on the south side of the Meuse, where, they were told, additional guns were being placed to strengthen the defenses.

When the batteries arrived they found the position had been shifted days before and German units were already encircling them. They were forced to abandon their guns and ammunition to escape being taken prisoners.

As the Germans moved through northern France toward the English Channel in the westward push, British soldiers at Rennes received an order to load and evacuate a trainload of heavy and light ammunition.

Marked For Nazi Bombers

Working all night, in continuous shifts, they had the shells ready to move early on a Saturday. The order came through the train was to leave at 10 A. M.

The British went about other business, but were surprised to wake up Sunday and find the train still standing in the yards. The same morning German bombers came roaring over, made straight for the munitions train, scored direct hits and destroyed it.

Several days later intelligence officers discovered that during the night of Saturday to Sunday, after the train's departure had been delayed by ready to leave "before the Boches get here."

Stories Of Fraternizing Censored

A day or so after the occupation I met him on one of the boulevards dressed in a German captain's uniform!

"You never suspected it!" he laughed. "But don't feel badly about it. Neither did the French!"

Before the Blitzkreig started and during the winter lull in fighting fraternizing between French and German soldiers produced many stories. French censors nearly always blue-penciled such accounts.

Hunter Gets Six Germans

There's the yarn—perhaps true—about the French non-commissioned officer who won the Croix de Guerre for capturing six German soldiers single-handed. What happened, it is said, was that he was out hunting rabbits, against military orders, and saw one hope over a hedge.

He ran up, poked his rifle over the hedge and, to his amazement, found he had six Germans covered. He marched them back, received congratulations from his commander and was cited and decorated later. The rabbit got away.

The story of the four little pigs is famous in Paris. I heard it first-hand from a French friend who swears he was involved.

French and German outposts, he told me, faced each other on two ridges in the Saar region. In the valley between, there was a village, abandoned by all inhabitants except an old man who had a wine shop. Every afternoon from 2 to 4 o'clock, French soldiers would go into the village for a glass of wine. Promptly at 4 o'clock they'd leave, and the Germans would take their places until 6 o'clock.

One day the French, on their way to the bistro, caught four pigs in the woods. They put them in an empty house, and after they'd had their wine, carried off two. The others they left with a note in German saying, "For our German comrades."

The next day, when they came back, they found the last two pigs gone and a note, in French, tacked to the wall: "Thanks for the pigs, from your German comrades."

false orders, someone had painted tops of the freight cars white, giving the German aviators a perfect target.

Had Plans Of Maginot Line

When the German forces marched into the Maginot Line, their engineers carried with them complete plans, drawn to scale, of the major defense works, including equipment inside, the numbers of the garrisons divided into officers and men, and the location and firing power of each gun turret.

I have seen these plans, labeled in German and signed by those who did the drawing. Some were dated as far back as 1937. Only in a few instances did the drawings have to be corrected and then only to include recent improvements.

One man I know—an Alsatian—was connected with the mechanical department of a newspaper. I saw him several days before the Germans entered Paris, when he told me he was getting

Second Contest Inside Own Lines, On Disorganization In France, Porter Says

Work To Gear Production To German Economy Began While Bombs Still Fell

This is the last of four articles on important aspects of the situation in German-occupied France. It was written by a correspondent just back from six months in Paris and other parts of the occupied zone.

By ROY PORTER
Associated Press Correspondent

New York, Jan. 16—The German forces in occupied France are engaged in two wars.

The first is the continuing military campaign against England.

The second is the struggle to reorganize occupied France's industrial and agricultural production to coincide with German economy.

First Time In History

A high German military official told me recently:

"It's the first time in history an occupation force ever carried on continuing war against an enemy nation and at the same time conducted an economic reorganization with both operations based in the same territory."

It was only a matter of days after the army marched into Paris that the economic experts followed on their heels. They were all in uniform, directly connected with the German Wehrmacht, and established headquarters under the military administration in the occupied territory.

Columns Pushing South

The mechanized columns still were pushing southward. Bordeaux still was in the process of being occupied. Troops and material were being shifted from one location to another to meet changing, purely military situations.

But even before the ruins of shattered towns had ceased smoking, even before the dive-bombers had finished their clattering flights over Paris rooftops, the economists had gone to work on a carefully laid-out plan.

Today that plan is in operation. But also in operation is the German military campaign against England, based at newly constructed airports in occupied territory and fortified coastal cities.

Production Surveyed

One of the first things the economic experts did was to undertake a large-scale survey of French production, its possibilities and how it had been affected by the war.

Specially trained observers toured the various zones. Some of the things they learned and later announced were:

France's beet sugar crop could be estimated at about twenty per cent of the normal yield. This was the basis for new restrictions on sugar and the substitution of saccharine in some regions.

Grape Crop Hard Hit

France's truck gardens, mostly north and west of Paris, had not been cultivated because of the mass evacuation of men for military service and later withdrawal of the remaining civilians. This caused a forecast of possible shortages of carrots, beans, potatoes, cabbage and other vegetables.

Military operations in the Champagne district around Rheims, Chalons-sur-Marne and Epernay resulted in an almost total loss of grapes this year for most of the old established cellars.

In addition, lack of cultivation of vineyards in other near-by districts led to the prophecy that the Champagne crop would need at least two years before returning to normal.

Factories Inspected

Textile factories in the north underwent a close and painstaking inspection. Engineers brought from Germany inspected French factories and made recommendations on possible ways to increase their output. French engineers were sent to look over German factories.

Experts estimated the amount of cloth on hand was sufficient to last about a year, after which new weaving schedules would be begun on a "standardized" pattern.

The Cognac district in southwestern France, where the famous brandy is produced, was inspected and the crop was found nearly normal.

Mining Suffers Setback

Coal mining in the north around Lille and Valenciennes was found to be suffering a serious setback, due to antiquated equipment and flooded shafts.

All types of transportation—rail, road and river—were the objects of careful studies.

IN EACH PARTICULAR CASE, THE GERMANS ARRIVED WITH PRODUCTION FIGURES FOR VARIOUS INDUSTRIES COMPILED OVER A PERIOD SOMETIMES EXTENDING TEN YEARS BACK. IN MANY CASES, THESE FIGURES SHOWED A DECLINE OF AS HIGH AS 20 PERCENT DURING THE LAST FIVE YEARS.

EXPERT SAID, "OUR JOB IS TO GET PRODUCTION BACK TO WHAT IT USED TO BE," ONE "AND THEN TO FIGURE OUT HOW WE CAN INCREASE THIS PRODUCTION TO ITS FULLEST POSSIBLE EXTENT."

30.21 7005

ALL OF THESE SURVEYS AND RECOMMENDATIONS RESULTED IN A SERIES OF REGULATIONS AND DECREES, SOME ISSUED BY THE OFFICE OF THE MILITARY GOVERNOR FOR THE OCCUPIED TERRITORY AND OTHERS FROM REGIONAL OFFICES.

IN A NUMBER OF INSTANCES, DECREES CONFLICTED.

I REMEMBER ONE MIXUP ON SUGAR RATIONING. IN ONE REGION WHERE STOCKS WERE AMPLE, THE MONTHLY RATION WAS REDUCED WITH THE IDEA OF SAVING THE SURPLUS FOR FUTURE USE. YET, ANOTHER OFFICE REQUISITIONE PART OF THIS SAME SURPLUS TO MEET A SHORTAGE IN AN ADJOINING DEPARTM THE TWO ORDERS HAD TO BE RECONCILED BEFORE EITHER COULD BECOME EFFEC IVE.

OTHER EXAMPLES OF CONFUSION BECAME SO FREQUENT THAT THE HEAD OF ONE OF THE ECONOMIC DEPARTMENTS SAID NOT LONG AGO: "IT BEGINS TO LOOK AS IF WE WERE NOT ONLY ORGANIZED FOR THIS JOB BUT MAYBE OVER-ORGANIZED." SO THE AID OF A FEW EFFICIENT RED-TAPE CUTTERS WAS SOUGHT AND RECEIVED AND THINGS BEGAN TO MOVE MORE SMOOTHLY.

EARLY IN THE OCCUPATION AND DURING THE PERIOD WHEN STOCKS OF AVAILABLE FOODSTUFFS WERE FAR BELOW THE AMOUNT REQUIRED, MANY MERCHANTS ARBITRARILY BEGAN TO BOOST THEIR PRICES.

THIS CONSTITUTED WHAT THE GERMANS CALLED BLUNTLY A "THREAT TO THE NATIONAL ECONOMY" AND RESULTED IN A DRASTIC PRICE-FIXING DECREE. ALL MERCHANTS, WHETHER ENGAGED IN WHOLESALE OR RETAIL BUSINESS, WERE FORCED TO STABILIZE THEIR PRICES AT THE FIGURES QUOTED ON MAY 1, 1940. NO INCREASES COULD BE MADE EXCEPT THOSE APPROVED BY DEPARTMENTAL COMMITTEES.

STOREKEEPERS WHO BOOTLEGGED OR CHEATED WERE GIVEN STIFF FINES, JAIL TERMS OR, FOR REPEATED OFFENSES, SUFFERED TEMPORARY OR PERMANENT CLOSING OF THEIR ESTABLISHMENTS. WHEN THE PENALTIES FAILED TO ELIMINATE THE ABUSES, THE FINES WERE BOOSTED UNTIL NOW A CONVICTED VIOLATOR MAY BE ASSESSED AS HIGH AS ONE MILLION FRANCS ($20,000.)

TWO MONTHS AGO, IN PARIS, A MANUFACTURER DREW A FINE TOTALLING 900,000 FRANCS FOR DISOBEYING THE PRICE FIXING REGULATION.

Glasgow, Jan. 17—Prime Minister Winston Churchill, with Harry Hopkins sitting on the platform beside him, declared tonight in an unheralded speech: "We do not require in 1941 large armies from overseas," but he added that Britain would need "far more" American weapons, ships and airplanes than she can pay for.

With little cheer to give Britons for the months ahead, Churchill said, nevertheless: "Whatever the suffering, we shall not fail mankind at this turning point of its fortunes!"

Introduces Hopkins

Gesturing to Hopkins, sitting quietly with his face half hidden in his hand, Churchill declared:

"Mr. Hopkins has come in order to put himself in the closest relation with things here.

"He soon will return to report to his famous chief the impressions he has gathered in our islands. We don't require in 1941 large armies from overseas. What we do require are weapons, ships and airplanes.

Will Pay For All They Can

"All that we can pay for we will pay for, but we will require far more than we shall be able to pay for.

"And I watch with deep emotion the stirring processes by which the democracy of the great American republic is establishing its laws and formulating its decisions in order to make sure that the British Commonwealth of nations is able to maintain, as it is maintaining at the present time, the front line of civilization and of progress."

The Prime Minister's speech followed a tour of the city's defense organizations during which he made an earlier impromptu talk in the open air.

Watches A. R. P. Workers

Hopkins and Mrs. Churchill were in his party. During the afternoon tour, Hopkins watched carefully a parade of air raid precautions services and evidently was impressed with the equipment and the enthusiasm of the workers.

Churchill declared himself confident of Britain's ultimate victory, stated that his aim was to remove Hitlerism from Europe, and insisted that if Hitler had found invasion of Britain difficult in July and September it would not become easier by February, March or April.

Britain, he said, has millions of armed men and scores of well-equipped units capable of meeting a landing force and engaging them with good prospects of success.

"No Hopes Of Easy Passage"

He told his audience they could "hold no hopes of an easy passage—before us lie dangers. I hardly like to say as great as those through which we have passed, but at any rate dangers which if we neglect anything will be fatal, mortal.

"Before us lie many months of having to endure bombardment of our cities and industrial areas without the power to make equal reply. Before us lie sufferings and tribulations. I am not one who pretends that smooth courses are open to us or that our experiences during this year are going to be deprived of terrible characteristics.

"But what the end will be I cannot have the slightest doubt," he then declared emphatically.

"Will Not Fail Mankind"

"The two dictators are already endeavoring to feed their people with every kind of optimistic tale but here we have made up our minds; here we look at facts with unillusioned eyes because we are conscious of the rightness of our cause and because we are determined that whatever the cost, whatever sufferings, we will not fail mankind at this turning point in its fortunes.'

Turing to Hitler's invasion chances Churchill declared:

"That bad man has never had so great a need as he has now to strike Britain from his path. He is master of a great part of Europe. His armies can move almost wherever they will upon the Continent. He holds down eight or ten countries by force, by secret police and by still more odious local Quislings.

Hatred Is Built Up

"But every day this occupation of Austria, Czecho-Slovakia, Poland, Norway, Denmark, Holland, Belgium, France—and presently perhaps Italy—lasts, is built up a volume of hatred for the Nazi creed and for the German name which generations and perhaps centuries hardly will efface.'

"It is for Herr Hitler a matter of supreme consequence to break down the resistance of Great Britain and thus rivet effectively the shackles he has prepared for the people of Europe. But it is one thing to have a need and another to be able to satisfy that need.

"We in this island stand foursquare in the path of European dictators. Their threats will not apall us. It is certain that if Herr Hitler found the invasion of this island difficult in July, he found it more difficult in September; and if he found it difficult in September, it will not have become easier by February or March or April.

"Eternal Vigilance"

"But remember that the price of safety is eternal vigilance. The reason one feels a confidence that this man's concentrated hatred will not be effective against our island is because every one of us is up and doing: is because there will be ceaseless attention paid by all our forces to every sign of enemy preparations and because we know that we now have millions of armed men and scores of well-equipped units capable of meeting a landing force and of engaging them with good prospects of success."

Speaking on British victories in the middle East, Churchill declared, "that offensive has succeeded—I confess it frankly—far beyond our dreams. Now nearly 30,000 prisoners have been taken, and perhaps there are more to come.

"Now that eight or nine divisions of Italian troops, well equipped, have been dashed out of existence with inconceivably small losses, some people may be inclined to underrate the enormous hazards and difficulties which seemed to lie about it before it was accomplished.

"A Risk Well Run"

"To march across seventy or eighty miles of waterless desert to strike down superior forces who had been intrenched for upward of three months, to break the whole resisting power of an army which was advancing to the attack of Egypt, to do all that so surely seemed a task of the very greatest hazard. It was a risk well run.

"We ran risks here to make it possible, and those generals, Wavell and Wilson, and Air Marshal Longmore, they also ran grave risks with great success."

But the results, he said, gave "opportunity to address ourselves to the problems of the perils of 1941 with far greater advantages than were at our disposal six or eight months ago."

In acknowledging the cheers of Clydeside industrial crowds in the afternoon, Churchill declared that a British victory would "be only a stimulus to further efforts to conquer ourselves and make our country as worthy in the days of peace as it is proving in the hours of war. . . ."

Not At End Of Road Yet

"Do not suppose," he went on, "that we are at the end of the road yet. Though long and hard it may be, I have absolutely no doubt we shall win a complete and decisive victory over the forces of evil."

He thanked the people for their greeting, but "far more for the part you are taking in this great crusade to keep the liberties of mankind free from one of the most dangerous assaults ever launched against them.

"The question is such a simple one. Are we to move steadily forward and have freedom or are we to be put back into the Middle Ages by a totalitarian system that crushes all forms of individual life and has for its aim little less than the subjugation of Europe and little more than the gratification of gangster appetites?"

Will Carry Us Forward

Churchill concluded:

"We are given as our priceless spirit the faith to supply what human judgment cannot outline or know, and that faith will carry us forward through this struggle at the head of a liberated Europe.

"It will carry us forward when these countries which I have mentioned, who are now subjugated and trampled down, will bless the British name, and we shall be able to hand on to those in this island who come after us, to our children and grandchildren, a record of duty done which will not have been surpassed in all the rugged annals of our island home."

"The next step will be an expeditionary force. Every American ought to realize that Mr. Roosevelt is leading us down the road to war, not step by step, but leap by leap.

"For Morale's Sake."

"It has come to me from several reliable sources that Mr. Churchill has been insisting on a declaration of war by this country, not with the idea of our sending an expeditionary force immediately, but with the idea of bolstering the morale of the smaller nations of Europe as well as the morale of his own people. Also my information is that Mr. Hopkins was sent to England for the purpose of determining just what immediate steps could be taken short of a declaration of war.

"Regardless of how many denials there may be, the fog is gradually being lifted and the American people soon will be able to get a correct picture of what the Administration program is.

"Let nobody be fooled. The final goal will be complete and total war."

British Want U.S. In War: Wheeler

Washington, D. C., Jan. 17 (AP).—Senator Wheeler (D-Mont.) said tonight he had learned from "several reliable sources" that Prime Minister Churchill has been "insisting on a declaration of war by this country" and that Harry Hopkins was sent to London by President Roosevelt to determine "what immediate steps can be taken short of a war declaration."

(At the White House, Presidential aides said they had never heard of the report which Wheeler said he had received)

Wheeler made his statement in commenting on a speech by Churchill tonight in Glasgow in Hopkins' presence.

Says They Want Men.

Wheeler said that "my understanding is that they (the British) not only want planes and ships at this time but they also want pilots to man the planes and sailors to man the ships.

BACKS ALL-OUT BRITISH AID; KNOX CITES AXIS SEA POWER

Washington, Jan. 17 (A. P.). — Secretary Stimson, urging swift congressional action on the British-aid bill said today he was apprehensive "as to the possibility of a crisis . . . within the next sixty or at least ninety days."

The Secretary of War made the statement without immediate elaboration during testimony before the House Foreign Affairs Committee in behalf of legislation to give President Roosevelt broad powers to advance armaments to Britain. Replying to a question by Representative Luther A. Johnson, Democrat, of Texas, Secretary Stimson said:

"I cannot state too emphatically the apprehension I feel as to the possibility of a crisis, which I think even my friends on the right would recognize as a crisis, within the next sixty or at least ninety days." By "friends on the right" he referred to Republican members of the committee.

Enough to Aid British.

Responding to inquiries by Representative Jonkman, Republican, of Michigan, Secretary Stimson expressed the opinion that the legislation would not lead this country into war. The Michigan Representative began by asking the Secretary if the aid proposed in the bill was necessary to prevent the defeat of Great Britain.

"In my opinion," said Secretary Stimson, "I think it very probably is."

Representative Arnold, Democrat, of Illinois, then asked this question:

"Is it your opinion that, sooner or later, if Britain fails, we would be in the war, with our loans and our manpower?"

"That's my opinion," Secretary Stimson replied.

Idea of Board Rejected.

Previously, he had rejected as dangerous a suggestion that the broad powers proposed for the President be vested in a board or commission, but he said that he had no objection to a two-year limit on the presidential exercise of such powers.

War Secretary Scoffs at Idea of a Board in Full Control.

NO ARMING DELAY WANTED

His attitude was expressed in an exchange with Representative Mundt, Republican, of South Dakota, at a hearing by the House Foreign Affairs Committee on lease-lend legislation.

"Anything that contributes to unnecessary delay—and a board does that—would be a danger," the War Department head declared. Much discussion centered on costs of the vast effort to send war supplies to nations resisting aggression.

Asked by Representative Stearns, Republican, of New Hampshire, if he believed that by aiding Britain this country would have to spend less than would be necessary in defending itself alone, the Cabinet officer said: "I think certainly it would."

Responsibilities Safe.

Remarking that no President had "rushed this country into war," Secretary Stimson said that Congress could "safely rest" with Mr. Roosevelt the responsibilities proposed for him.

Discussing the program with the committee, the War Department chief was led by Representative Tinkham, Republican, of Massachusetts, into a discussion of the discretion the President would have in determining nations to whom the United States might send aid.

Secretary Stimson prefaced his remarks by saying that he had observed closely many Presidents and had been impressed with their sense of responsibility and asserted that no President had plunged this country into war. "In the light of that," he said, "while Congress could take the risk of naming the countries, I think that they could safely rest the responsibility of that with the present President of the United States."

"Fantastic and preposterous" was his description of a suggestion that the lend-lease bill was drawn to permit the purchase by this country of the British and French navies. Mr. Tinkham read to the Secretary a newspaper story which quoted unnamed persons as saying that the bill purposely was drawn that way.

Mr. Tinkham inquired if under the measure's broad wording such purchases could be made. "I haven't considered it in that light," was the reply.

Clings to Opinion.

Mr. Tinkham at another point asserted: "You objected yesterday to a clause to prevent our warships from going to England or belligerent waters. Is that still your opinion?"

"Yes, that is my opinion, most certainly," Secretary Stimson replied. "No one can foresee what situation might arise that would make it most important, for defense, not offense, to send our warships into belligerent waters."

Secretary Stimson said that there were countless circumstances under which the United States might wish to send the fleet abroad on a mission which would be defensive, rather than offensive, and that he did not care to speculate on them.

"Do you think our warships should convoy ships to England?" Mr. Tinkham inquired. "Nothing in the bill touches on that," the witness replied.

Naval Aid an Issue.

The question if aid-to-Britain should, if necessary, include more of the United States Navy's fighting ships assumed the proportions of a major issue today.

When the "sell-our-navy" point came up in the House Committee's discussions, Secretary Stimson said that there was no authority in the bill to permit the President to sell parts of the navy and that while the authority might exist elsewhere, "the assumption that the President would ever use it and sell the navy is fantastic." Representative Rogers, Republican, of Massachusetts, asked the Secretary if he were satisfied with the defense program.

"No," he replied emphatically "I'm not satisfied at all. I wish we were all through and ready."

Representative Vorys, Republican, of Ohio, asked:

"Should we have a definite, formal understanding as to the disposition of the British Fleet before we embark on this program?"

Question Explored.

"That question," Mr. Stimson said, "was considered very carefully last summer. We asked for and were given the very strongest assurances that one democracy can give another."

Secretary Stimson repeatedly declined to answer "in this atmosphere" questions by Mr. Vorys as to the possibility of defeat of the Axis Powers.

As the committee hearings proceeded, friends and foes of the measure kept up a spirited informal debate on Capitol Hill.

Senator Nye, Republican, of North Dakota, one of the opposition stalwarts, asserted that chances for its defeat were better than the initial prospects had been for beating President Roosevelt's unsuccessful Supreme Court reorganization bill.

He pronounced the measure "so bad I don't believe any amount of amending could make it acceptable."

Senator Austin of Vermont, acting Republican leader, however, sided with administration forces in predicting the bill's passage

Navy Secretary Says We're Outnumbered Two to One and Face Attack if England Is Crushed.

Washington, Jan. 17 (A. P.).—Secretary Knox said today that "if England is completely destroyed, we will be attacked," during testimony advocating congressional approval of the administration's British-aid bill. The word "will" was stressed in his reply to a question from Representative Rogers, Republican, of Massachusetts, while the Secretary of the Navy was on the stand before the House Foreign Affairs Committee. Col. Knox added that it was "speculation" to say when or where that attack would come.

Asked by Representative Fish, Republican, of New York, if he would oppose amendments to the bill which would prevent President Roosevelt from disposing of any part of the present navy or from using warships for convoy purposes, Col. Knox replied:

"I'm opposed to tying our hands in any particular until we know the conditions we'll have to meet. We've already made some mistakes in that direction." He did not amplify this remark.

Axis Sea Power Cited.

"I've been here six months and I've never seen any man more devoted to the best interests of the navy than Franklin D. Roosevelt," Col. Knox said. "The last thing I conceive of is that he would give away the navy."

The Secretary testified that the navy was stronger for having swapped fifty destroyers for eight naval bases, but that he was opposed to releasing more of the fleet. He said that the lease-lend bill was "in our own best interests" and that the navy would be heavily outnumbered by the fleets of the Axis Powers if British sea power should be destroyed.

The United States needs time to perfect its defenses, Col. Knox said in his prepared statement, reminding the committee that the two-ocean naval construction program under way would take six years to complete. "Only Britain and its fleet can give us that time and they need our help to survive," he warned the committeemen.

Col. Knox presented figures showing that the United States fleet had 322 fighting ships on January 1, compared with an estimated 658 in the navies of Germany, Italy and Japan. By next January, he said, the figures would be United States 342, Axis Powers 803, while for January 1, 1943, he rated comparative strengths, United States 422, Axis Powers 962.

Underseas Menace.

Throughout the three-year period, the figures showed the United States outnumbered in every fleet category from battleships to submarines. Col. Knox forecast the greatest increase in Axis strength in submarines. He placed the present Axis undersea fleet at 284 and estimated it at 500 by 1943.

Col. Knox said that if the United States "does not wish to face the consequences of the establishment in South America of aggressive military power, we should now prevent Germany from overturning the British sea power which holds the Nazis in Europe."

"If Germany becomes free to move across the ocean for the conquest of new territories," he continued, "she most probably will move first into South America to get hold of that great storehouse of national wealth."

It is only by the combined sea power of the United States and Great Britain, Col. Knox said, that the Atlantic and Pacific have "served as barriers against the acquisitive designs of aggressive Powers." For 125 years, he asserted, British naval power has not threatened the United States.

This Government proclaimed the Monroe Doctrine in 1823 to keep the New World from being conquered by the Holy Alliance, he said, adding: "We were successful in maintaining that doctrine only because of the support of Great Britain, whose overwhelming fleet could prevent overseas aggression from Europe."

He said that the full organization of American resources would permit help to Britain and at the same time the preparation of strong American defenses.

"The cost to us in money, effort and sacrifice will be great—but that cost will be far greater, even in the immediate future, should we now stand aside and let Britain fall," he said. The present war, Col. Knox contended, is "fundamentally, an attempt by Germany to seize control of the sea from Great Britain."

Two-Ocean Navy.

He said that since the world war the United States had maintained "a one-ocean navy in the Pacific and that navy has proved adequate in both directions only because the existence and the deployment of the British Navy gave us security in the Atlantic."

"In effect," he continued, "both we and the British Commonwealth of Nations actually have had a two-ocean navy, operated for a single peaceful purpose."

"We still have a one-ocean navy. We are building a two-ocean navy, but its structure will not be completed for six years. We need to complete that structure, as fast as we can, because the other part of our two-ocean navy is now in grave danger."

The British navy can survive only if the British Isles survive. Should the British Isles fall, we can only believe that the British navy, which never runs from danger, will fall at the same time. I think we can safely assume that the British navy will share the fate of the courageous nation that supports it."

Should that come to pass, he said, "our fleet would necessarily be divided, to meet danger in both oceans. Whether it would be strong enough to protect even the regions nearest to us is a matter that can not now be foretold.

"Once we lose the power to control even a part of those seas (surrounding the hemisphere), inevitably the wars of Europe and Asia will be transferred to the Americas."

Knox Statement on War Aid

WASHINGTON, Jan. 17 (AP).—Following is the text of the statement by Secretary of the Navy Frank Knox before the House Foreign Affairs Committee today:

I presume I am called before you because I am charged with the responsibility, as Secretary of the Navy, of preparing our first line of defense—the Navy—against whatever dangers the future may hold.

It is almost impossible to exaggerate the importance of sea power to our country and to our entire western world. It has been because of the existence of sea power, exercised by two nations, Great Britain and ourselves, that both the Atlantic and the Pacific have served as barriers against acquisitive designs of aggressive powers.

If you will glance at the map you will readily observe that there are but three exits into the Atlantic in Europe, the channels of the North Sea (north of the British Isles), the English Channel itself, and the Straits of Gibraltar. Our entire western world has been safe from attack from Europe because the British fleet has always stood sentinel at these three exits into the ocean, and the British policy, for many years, has accepted, and assisted us in the maintenance of, the Monroe Doctrine. That has sufficed to make the Atlantic barrier secure.

The war in Europe must be looked upon as the latest of a long succession of attempts by dictators to establish rule over all Europe and, eventually, to establish dominion over a large portion of the world. Like all its predecessors, the Nazi regime has found that the power of its armies alone cannot establish that rule, because Europe is not self-supporting in raw materials, and the Nazi armies are powerless to obtain these materials unless they have control of the sea.

Sea Power at Stake

Great Britain has never been powerful enough to support an army strong enough to conquer Europe and to hold it under control. That nation has been enabled to survive against conquest through control of the seas between those islands and the continent of Europe, and also to stifle the expanding military powers on the Continent by denying them access to the sources of raw materials.

The struggle now going on is, fundamentally, an attempt by Germany to seize control of the sea from Great Britain. That is the reason why, from a military viewpoint, the war has so vital an interest to the United States. Our nation has evolved without particular hindrance from Britain's control of a large part of the sea. But I believe it would be very different were control to pass to Germany, and were she able to send her armies into other parts of the world, and there lay tribute of raw materials for further building up her powers of oppression.

If Germany becomes free to move across the ocean for the conquest of new territories, she most probably will move first into South America, to get hold of that great storehouse of national wealth. If the United States does not wish to face the consequences of the establishment in South America of aggressive military power, we should now prevent Germany from overturning the British sea power which holds the Nazis in Europe.

The Monroe Doctrine

For 118 years the Monroe Doctrine has been the one national policy firmly and continuously maintained by the American people. This doctrine, which forbids the extension in the Western Hemisphere of non-American military and political control, was enunciated for the purpose of preserving the territorial, economic and social integrity of the United States. Our statesmen clearly foresaw that we ourselves could be safe from aggression only by keeping safe the whole of the American hemisphere. The United States, under that policy, has progressed from weakness to strength. The other nations of this hemisphere have also been enabled to develop their own civilizations, free from the fear of sudden foreign conquest.

The United States proclaimed the Monroe Doctrine to keep the New World from being conquered by the Holy Alliance, which was the triple axis of 1823. We were successful in maintaining that doctrine only because of the support of Great Britain, whose overwhelming fleet could prevent overseas aggression from Europe.

Our nation thus could develop because of the fortunate circumstance of the great oceans to the east and the west. Military power has not been able to cross these oceans, nor ever will be, without the support of naval power superior to our own. British naval power has not threatened us for 125 years, and during that time no other European naval power could touch us, since they feared the British Fleet.

During the early period of our national existence there was no danger in the Pacific, and our merchants were as free as any one else to trade with Asia. No aggressive military dictatorship in the Far East then disturbed the peace of other nations. There was no threat in the Atlantic because the balance of power in Europe permitted no aggression against us. We did not need a great Navy nor a large Army.

Only during the last fifty years has it become necessary for us to develop a strong navy. The circumstances that rendered a strong navy essential to our safety were the construction of a German navy to back aggression toward distant lands; and Japan's expansion into the peaceful lands beyond her borders.

During the years before the World War we were threatened by German naval power, because that power was directed against the continued existence of Great Britain and its powerful navy. To meet German aggression, the United States built its Atlantic Fleet. We had only a weak Pacific Fleet, but we served notice of our interest in two oceans when President Theodore Roosevelt gave a practical demonstration of United States naval strength by sending the Atlantic Fleet around the world.

All doubtless remember that the World War gave Japan her chance for expansion throughout the islands of the Pacific, and remember that this was the occasion of her twenty-one demands upon China. We were able to check Japan's further aggressions by moving our entire fleet to the Pacific when the conclusion of the World War eliminated the German fleet in the Atlantic. Since that time we have maintained a one-ocean navy in the Pacific, and that navy has proved adequate in both directions only because the existence and the deployment of the British Navy gave us security in the Atlantic. In effect, both we and the British Commonwealth of Nations actually have had a two-ocean navy, operated for a single peaceful purpose.

Two-Ocean Navy on Way

We still have a one-ocean navy. We are building a two-ocean navy, but its structure will not be completed for six years. We need to complete that structure as fast as we can, because the other part of our present two-ocean navy is now in grave danger. The British Navy can survive only if the British Isles survive. Should the British Isles fall, we can only believe that the British Navy, which never runs from danger, will fall at the same time. I think we can safely assume that the British Navy will share the fate of the courageous nation that supports it.

Last year the Congress was solemnly warned by the chief of naval operations of the grave threat to the freedom of the United States and its sister American republics which would exist were Britain to suffer defeat. The naval forces now in the possession of the Axis powers, or which are under construction, would greatly outnumber our own. Our fleet would necessarily be divided, to meet danger in both oceans. Whether it would be strong enough to protect even the regions nearest to us is a matter that cannot now be foretold. Certainly we could not project our strength across two wide oceans. With the Navy retained at home, we could not do much to prevent Japan from extending its sway over all of eastern Asia, nor could we prevent the establishment of strong military base areas in southern Europe and in Africa to threaten our neighbors to the south.

Hemisphere Defense

To keep our land secure we must prevent the establishment of strong aggressive military power in any part of the New World. We can keep non-American military power out of our hemisphere only through being able to control the seas that surround its shores. Once we lose the power to control even a part of those seas, inevitably the wars of Europe and Asia will be transferred to the Americas.

We need time to build ships and to train their crews. We need time to build up our outlying bases so that we can operate our fleets as a screen for our continent. We need time to train our armies, to accumulate war stores, to gear our industry for defense.

Only Great Britain and its fleet can give us that time. And they need our help to survive.

If we fully organize the mental and material resources of the American people, we can give Britain that help and simultaneously can build a strong military defense for ourselves. The cost to us in money, effort and sacrifice will be great—but that cost will be far greater, even in the immediate future, should we now stand aside and let Britain fall.

We are a strong nation, though our military strength is still largely potential. I believe that the American people have what it takes in character, courage and wisdom to guard this country and to guard this hemisphere. But to keep from engaging in a desperate struggle in American territory, they need time to make ready their arms. They can get time to make ready and still can maintain their essential interests throughout the world, only so long as Britain and its fleet survive. With our unstinted help, I firmly believe that Britain cannot be defeated.

We will act in our own best national interests, therefore, if while increasing our naval power as fast as we can we provide the British Commonwealth with the means that will bring her through this tragic crisis.

Comparative Naval Strengths

WASHINGTON, Jan. 17 (AP).—Following is a table of naval strength submitted by Secretary Knox to the House Foreign Affairs Committee.

Estimated Approximate Total Combatant Tonnage Built, Jan. 1, 1941

United States	Germany-Italy	Germany-Italy-Japan	Germany-Italy-Japan-France
1,250,000	850,000	1,835,000	2,145,000

Estimated Comparative Strengths in Types
(Does not include France)

	JAN. 1, 1941		JAN. 1, 1942		JAN. 1, 1943
	U. S.	Axis	U. S.	Axis	U. S.	Axis
Battleships	15	20	17	22	18	28
Aircraft carriers	6	8	6	8	7	8
Cruisers	37	75	37	81	45	101
Destroyers	159	271	174	292	219	325
Submarines	105	284	108	400	133	500
Total fighting craft	322	658	342	803	422	962

Note: France has as immediately effective units: 1 battleship, 1 aircraft carrier, 14 cruisers, 52 destroyers and 60 submarines. It is now reported that no new construction is contemplated.

Wheeler Request

[By the Associated Press]

Washington, Jan. 17—Senator Burton K. Wheeler (Dem., Mont.) demanded today that President Roosevelt give the public or Congress all reports from Ambassador Joseph P. Kennedy and former Ambassador William C. Bullitt prior to the European war.

The Montana Senator, foe of the Administration's British-aid bill, talked with Kennedy, envoy to Great Britain, last night after the latter had visited the President.

Should Go To Committees

If Mr. Roosevelt did not wish to publish the reports, Wheeler said, they at least should be made available to the Senate and House Foreign Affairs committees.

Kennedy will make a nation-wide radio address tomorrow night giving his views on the Administration's foreign policies.

President Roosevelt was asked at his press conference whether he had received the same impression which seemed to be abroad in Washington, that Kennedy was not entirely in favor of the British aid bill. The Chief Executive suggested that the public should determine the envoy's stand from his speech rather than from what it reads in newspapers.

Speaking For Himself

He said he did not have the faintest idea whether Kennedy, who has submitted his resignation, still would be Ambassador to England when he speaks tomorrow. He said he thought Kennedy wanted to speak for himself instead of having the press speak for him.

Mr. Roosevelt said he had not considered the question of a successor to Kennedy recently, but still had the same individual in mind. To a question about reports that John G. Winant, former Governor of New Hampshire, would get the London post, he said he was sorry, but that information had not come from sources close to the White House.

There also have been rumors that Mayor Fiorello Laguardia, of New York, might be offered the post, but the President said he never had discussed this question. All he knew about the matter, he explained, was that political statements along that line had been issued in New York.

Cow-Over-The-Moon Topic, He Dubs That

[By the Associated Press]

Washington, Jan. 17 — President Roosevelt, at his press conference today, said a provision to let the War and Navy Secretaries buy war materiel from friendly nations was put in the lease-lend bill to aid Britain as a precaution.

In a world of change, he told reporters, every twenty-four hours something might turn up to make it necessary to add to American defenses. Advising against jumping at conclusions, he said the provision was just a precautionary measure for American defense.

Allied Navy Purchase Rumor

The President had been questioned about a newspaper story which quoted unnamed persons as saying the bill was drawn that way so as to permit this country to purchase the British and French navies.

Mr. Roosevelt replied that he supposed Congress might authorize him to acquire the Germany Navy, too, and asked whether newsmen did not think the discussion was awfully, awfully cow-jumps-over-the-moon business.

Won't Sell U. S. Fleet

At first the President misinterpreted the inquiry to understand that the press was asking for comment on the possibility of disposing of the United States Navy to Britain.

Talking on that matter, he remarked somewhat sarcastically that nothing in the bill would prohibit his doing what might be a dangerous thing—standing on his head. But he added with a chuckle that the President of the United States does not except to stand on his head, has no desire to do so and similarly has no desire to get rid of the navy.

He was asked whether, since he did not intend to make any transfer of the fleet, he would have any objections to a restriction in the measure on such a transfer.

Sarcastically, he said he supposed we had better put in also a prohibition on his standing on his head.

Mr. Roosevelt threw back his head and laughed uproariously when someone inquired whether he had discussed the legislation with Archbishop Amleto Cicognani, the Apostolic Delegate from the Vatican, who called on him earlier in the week. He shook his head in the negative.

Navy Yard Speedup

In another field of the defense program, Mr. Roosevelt said it was old news that navy yards would go on a three-shift basis. He said he had announced last August that they would do so as soon as they could, whenever the need arose.

No Executive order will be required to adjust the work-week of navy yard employes, he said. A three-shift basis, he asserted, will mean merely that three men will be employed on a particular job instead of one.

Dismisses Other Reports

He dismissed as just an Italian newspaper report a question about a story that army and navy chieftains had advised him his policy of aid to Britain was wrong.

And he brushed aside as a Japanese newspaper report suggestions emanating from Japan that the United States' Pacific fleet be recalled from Hawaii.

Mr. Roosevelt answered in the negative an inquiry on whether he had received word recently from the British concerning urgent need for aid.

Green Backs Principles Of British Aid Program

Washington, Jan. 17 (AP)—William Green, president of the American Federation of Labor, said today: "It is my opinion that the general principles" of the Administration's British-aid bill should be made law.

His position was made known in a telegram to Representative Fish (Rep., N. Y.), ranking Republican on the House Foreign Affairs Committee and opponent of the bill. The telegram, as made public by Green, said:

"I am in disagreement with you and your associates in opposition to the general principles of the lease-lend bill now pending in Congress. While some details of the bill should be amended it is my opinion that the general principles of this measure should be enacted into law. I regret for this reason I cannot join with you and your associates in opposition to this measure as set forth in your telegram received today."

ALL-OUT WAR AID URGED BY BYRNES

JAN 18 1941

Says If Britain Holds Hitler For Year, We Can Hold Him Forever

Senator Gillette, On Other Hand, Sees Great Peril In Administration Plans

[By the Associated Press]

Washington, Jan. 17—Taking widely divergent views on the question of whether Great Britain is fighting a war for the benefit of the United States, Senator Byrnes (Dem., S. C.) and Senator Gillette (Dem., Iowa) tonight broadcast their opinions over a national radio hookup.

Senator Byrnes declared that if Great Britain can "hold Hitler for a year, we can hold him forever."

Senator Gillette contended that "if we are to gamble the entire resources of the United States on a throw of the dice based on the argument 'this is our war,' the American people are entitled to complete facts and proof beyond doubt that this great gamble is now essential."

Byrnes Urges Quick Action

Senator Byrnes urged speedy action on the pending Administration bill which would give President Roosevelt wide powers to lend, lease or transfer military equipment to nations fighting aggressors.

"Let us face the facts," Byrnes said. "The reason we are feverishly working to provide an army and navy is to defend ourselves against the Axis powers.

"If we could be certain that Britain would defeat Hitler, we could and would stop appropriating money for military purposes. But we cannot be certain of it. We are certain only that each day Britain holds Hitler we are better able to defend America.

Aid—Not Sympathy

"If Britain can hold Hitler for a year we can hold him forever. Self-preservation, therefore, demands that we now give Britain aid instead of sympathy."

Byrnes, one of the Administration's chief lieutenants in Congress, said opponents of the bill had attempted to "strike fear into the hearts of American fathers and mothers" by charging that it would be a step toward involvement in war.

"The President and the Congress of the United States have no intention of sending an American expeditionary force to Europe," he said. "Even if we were willing to send men, the military leaders of Britain say they do not want them."

War Debts "Beside Point"

The contention that the United States should not furnish aid to Britain because that country had not paid its World War debt, he said, was beside the point, adding:

"Free men do not stamp the dollar mark on their liberty."

Senator Gillette, pleading against war involvement, said:

"Under our form of government the representatives of the people in Congress are entitled to complete facts and proof. In this momentous decision these representatives must have conclusive proof and facts on which to base such a decision. The burden of proof lies with those who insist that the representatives must take this step without any alternative.

"As a member of the Foreign Relations Committee and the Naval Affairs Committee in the Senate, I say no such facts and proof have been given us.

Sees Serious Threat

"I can see in the outcome of the wars of Europe and Asia the possibility of serious threat to America. I will work, vote and speak for every effort and proposal to prepare ourselves as fully as can be done to meet such a possible threat or contingency, and to the full limit or our needs and resources.

"But I not support any proposal to dissipate these defense needs and our resources now and leave America defenseless or greatly weakened by participation in any degree in a foreign conflict which means war now and is war now; however carefully we attempt to sugar-coat the destroying pill by disguising its contents with the phrases and gloss of sophistry."

If he believed Great Britain were "actually fighting our war," he said, he "would vote for a declaration of war tomorrow, and go to her assistance with all our power, men and resources."

One pilot was quoted as saying that it was "more like a polar expedition than a raid." Again and again ice covered cockpit windows and gun turrets and instruments were rendered useless by the cold. One plane was struck by lightning and the second pilot disabled, while lightning tore away the radio aerial of another bomber.

R. A. F. BOMBS PORTS ALONG FRENCH COAST

JAN 18 1941

London, Jan. 17 (A. P.).—British bombers roared across the channel in brilliant sunlight today and the rumble of heavy explosions along the German-occupied French coast indicated that an intense bombing attack was on from the Calais area to Boulogne.

The daylight foray followed the second successive night of heavy raids on Wilhelmshaven, Germany's great North Sea naval base, and the Air Ministry said that the Royal Air Force also had smashed at the German port of Emden, the Belgian port of Ostend and at Calais and Boulogne over night.

Like a Polar Expedition.

The assault on Wilhelmshaven was carried out in "some of the worst weather winter can make," the Air Ministry news service said.

The raiders spent several hours over the area, with their attack centered on Bristol. They also struck at London and at towns in the southeast, south and southwest, the Government reported. It said the number of casualties was not large.

(In Berlin, the high command said German combat units last night "successfully attacked a western English port and objectives in Southern England." The British, according to the communique, lost five planes yesterday and the day before.)

Some Buildings Damaged

A communique issued before it was permissible to name Bristol had said:

"A number of fires, some of them serious, were started in a town in the west country. These were effectively brought under control by the fire services, but some damage was done to commercial and other buildings."

An official announcement said that "an enemy bomber was shot down into the sea off the north coast of Scotland this morning."

Thousands of incendiaries, in addition to explosives, were reported to have been dropped on an unidentified south coast town last night. More than sixty fires were started in that attack, the town's longest of the war, but it was said that damage was slight, because virtually every building had a fire-watcher. (This city could have

Damage Is Slight After Long Attack

London, Jan. 17—About 100 fires were started in Bristol last night when waves of German planes poured incendiary and explosive bombs on that vital west coast shipping area.

been Southampton, Portsmouth or Plymouth.)

In one western city a number of persons were killed when the police and fire stations were hit.

London had two alerts, the result of quick thrusts by German bombers, both of which drew intense anti-aircraft fire at the capital's outskirts. Some bombs fell, but no serious damage was reported.

Forty-Five Killed In "Hostel"

Rescue squads digging through the ruins of a bombed hostel—a four-story building where men bought what they hoped would be a night's sleep for 15 or 20 cents—removed seven more bodies today, bringing to forty-five the number believed to have died. The hostel—which was more like an American rooming house than a hotel—crumbled after a direct hit Wednesday night.

Laboring under screened lights all last night despite two raid alarms, the 200 fireman and soldier rescuers took forty-five of the trapped men from the wreckage alive before the ruins became silent—indicating that the remainder were either dear or too badly hurt to cry out.

The blast was so powerful that it did not leave a single brick in place. Most of the survivors were taken out yesterday.

More Nurses Asked

Health Minister Malcolm Macdonald broadcast an appeal for more nurses today, declaring that "we shall want fewer fighters as well as fire fighters in the next few months."

He said there was a definite shortage of nurses and they must "see to it that the dramatic appeal of war wounded does not make them neglect the more normal but equally important work of defending the public health against disease."

The R. A. F.'s daylight bombers streaked across the Channel without fighter escorts but at great height.

Minglinig with the deep thunder of bursting bombs, which continued for more than an hour, were sharper explosions thought to be anti-aircraft fire.

Despite the handicaps, the Air Ministry communique said, the attack was steady and hard.

"Aircraft first on the scene caused many fires and later arrivals reported that these had reached very large proportions, especially in the area of the railway station and of the oil storage tanks," the communique said. "Many explosions were seen."

NAZIS LAUNCH POST-MIDNIGHT RAID ON LONDON

Attack Follows Earlier Assault On West England Town

Bombers Met By Heaviest A. A. Fire Ever Reported In That Area

[By the Associated Press]

London, Saturday, Jan. 18—German raiders swooped in on London shortly after midnight and soon the explosion of falling bombs and roar of the anti-aircraft batteries could be heard.

The attack came after earlier raiders concentrated on a west English town.

This foray was met by the heaviest anti-aircraft fire ever reported from the district. Houses were declared shaken, not by bombs, but by the fury of the British ground defenses.

Incendiary bombs rained on one town, but alert fire watchers quickly dealt with them, and no blazes were reported.

French Coast Pounded

During daylight yesterday, British airmen gave their attention to Nazi bases in occupied France after their forty-first night raid on the German naval base of Wilhelmshaven in weather described as more suitable to a polar expedition than bombers.

R. A. F. squadrons nosed into a Channel mist and headed for France in bright sunlight. Thereafter, explosions could be heard along the Kentish coast, but whether they were British guns hammering objectives across the Channel or bombs could not be determined.

Late last night firemen in Bristol stamped out the embers left by Thursday's shower of incendiaries from German raiders.

100 Fires Started

One hundred fires, some of which the British acknowledged were serious, were started in this western coastal city, but authorities reported at least sixty were extinguished within ten minutes.

Pilots returning from the Wilhelmshaven foray, termed "highly successful" although lighter than the previous night's assault, declared they flew through "ghastly" static and lightning storms which in one case set a bomber afire.

Bomb racks, gun turrets, cockpit windows and instruments were frozen up again and again.

Despite this weather, the Air Ministry said the attack was "steady and hard" and "many fires soon sprang up and were methodically increased."

Oil Tanks Attacked

An earlier communique said the railroad station and oil storage tanks were in the blazing area.

The second pilot of the bomber struck by lightning was disabled, and the aerial of another raider was hit by a bolt.

A comrade of the injured pilot reported:

"Enormous amounts of static made the radio absolutely useless and for two hours blue flames cracked all over the machine.

"Just before we reached Wilhelmshaven there was a small flash inside the plane, followed by a blinding burst. Flame shot from one end of the craft to the other and blue flames were sparking off airscrews.

Hit By Lightning

"The climax came when the plane was struck in front (by lightning). The front turret must have taken the full force of the flash. I could not see for several minutes. Everything was a purple haze.

"Through the side window I saw a flame coming up so we bombed some guns and turned back for home. . . . We landed at the base with the aircraft still coated with ice."

The British acknowledged the loss of five planes during the continental operations. They extended also to the German port of Emden; Ostend, in Belgium, and Calais and Boulogne, in occupied France.

Nazis Report R. A. F. Raids

BERLIN, Jan. 17 (AP).—A few British planes scattered bombs over northwestern Germany early last evening, slightly damaging a number of buildings, the official German news agency, D. N. B., reported today. It said incendiary bombs had started a fire in a school in an unidentified city, but declared there were no civilian casualties.

Authorized sources reported the sinking of the 10,000-ton freighter Brisbane by a German surface craft, but gave no details.

["Lloyd's Register of Shipping" does not list a Brisbane of 10,000 tons, although the Brisbane Star, a 12,791-ton British vessel is listed. The only other Brisbane is a 207-ton Grimsby trawler.]

German planes on armed reconnaissance yesterday scored hits on three merchant ships, totaling 13,000 tons, west of northern Scotland and off the English southeast coast, the high command said in its daily communique.

BRITISH AGAIN BLAST NAZI AIR BASE IN ITALY

R. A. F. Leaves Fires And Explosions Erupting At Catania, Sicily

[By the Associated Press]

Cairo, Egypt, Jan. 17—A new and heavy British aerial attack which left fires and explosions erupting in the Axis airdrome at Catania, Sicily—the nest from which Nazi dive bombers have been harrying the British Mediterranean fleet—was reported today by the Royal Air Force.

This assault, one more in a continuing series in which the British claim that some forty aircraft already had been destroyed at Catania, was declared to have left "several" more Axis planes ablaze on the ground. Others were reported to have exploded.

Base Heavily Attacked

The base itself was said to have been heavily damaged, a hangar left covered by a sheet of flame visible fifty miles away and the administration buildings set afire.

The raid was carried out through late Wednesday night and yesterday morning, and the British said they had no losses.

Base Used By Nazis

It is from Catania that the Germans have been springing out against British shipping and the British Navy, one of their heaviest thrusts having been a long and violent dive-bombing attack yesterday on the British naval base at Valletta, Malta.

Against this assault the British claimed a successful defense, during which ten of the attacking planes were shot down.

A communique by the R. A. F. called it "a very heavy raid," and declared that while there was no damage to "R. A. F. property," civilian property "suffered considerably."

[The communique made no mention of German and Italian assertions that in the raid the 23,000-ton British aircraft carrier Illustrious, already damaged in an engagement Jan. 10, had been hard hit again and perhaps knocked out of the war; that a British merchant ship was hit squarely by "the heaviest-caliber bombs" and that a British arsenal was bombed.

[The Italians asserted also that a British cruiser was "seriously damaged." The Germans made no mention of that, nor did they say anything about the Italian statement that the Nazis had been aided by Italian escort planes.]

British Bomb Sicilian Air Base

Planes Fired at Catania as Nazis Report Hitting Illustrious Again at Malta.

Cairo, Jan. 17 (A. P.).—The British air force announced today another raid on the airdrome at Catania, Sicily, reported to be the base for German dive bombers in the Axis offensive against the British Mediterranean Fleet. Buildings and several aircraft were fired Wednesday night, said the communique.

"A heavy explosion and a large fire were caused at the northwest hangar by the first aircraft over the target," it asserted. "This fire burnt fiercely throughout the attack and was visible from over fifty miles away. It assisted following aircraft to identify the target."

The subsequent bombardment started fires among administrative buildings and near another hangar, where grounded planes were ignited, the communique said. Explosions also were reported among grounded craft on another part of the field. All the attacking aircraft returned safely.

British Claim Air Victory At Malta

[By the Associated Press]

Valletta, Malta, Jan. 17—Ten German or Italian planes were shot down during a heavy dive-bombing attack yesterday on the harbor and city here, British authorities announced today. Three other attacking planes were reported damaged.

The battle against the low-flying bombing and machine-gun attacks of the Axis warplanes ranged along the whole coastal area, with British machine guns chattering from roofs and windows.

The British said that although there was some property damage there was very little of military importance, while civilian casualties were "slight."

REPORTS HIT ON SUBMARINE

Collier Sarastone's Skipper Says Raider Was Disabled

GIBRALTAR, Jan. 17 (AP)—The 12-pound gun of a Welsh collier was credited today with disabling an Axis submarine in a running fight off Lisbon, Portugal.

"The submarine was left helpless and afire, like a smoking cigar," said a crew member of the 2,473-ton collier, Sarastone, which put in there from Lisbon.

Captain John Herbert said the submarine challenged the collier after she had been forced by boiler trouble to leave a convoy. The submarine fired a warning shot, Captain Herbert said, and followed with five shells from 4,000 yards. They fell "uncomfortably close."

Then Jim O'Neill manned the collier's lone 12-pounder and waited for the submarine to edge nearer.

"When it was about 2,000 yards off O'Neill opened fire," Captain Herbert continued. "His first shot fell short but in perfect line. He fired again; a direct hit.

"We all shouted, 'Go on, O'Neill; give it to him.'

"His second shot fell at the base of the aftergun, putting it out of action and causing yellow smoke to rise."

Nazi Planes Damaged Cruiser in Raid on Malta, Italy Claims

New Hits Reported Scored On British Plane Carrier Illustrious at Valletta

By the Associated Press.

ROME, Jan. 17.—The Italian high command reported today that waves of German bombers seriously damaged a British cruiser at Malta besides scoring new hits on the aircraft carrier Illustrious and hitting a merchant vessel.

(The high command, in making the cruiser claim, and Stefani, official Italian news agency, in circulating a glowing account of the Germans' "brilliant action," outdid the Berlin report of the attack. The Berlin communique cited only the aircraft carrier Illustrious and the merchant ship. It was a repeat bombardment for the carrier.

(British authorities at Valletta, Malta, declared today that 10 German or Italian warplanes were shot down in the attack yesterday, and that three more were damaged.

(In Cairo the British Royal Air Force announced that another air raid had been made on the Italian airdrome at Catania, Sicily, Wednesday night. Catania is reported to be the base for German dive bombers in the axis offensive against the British Mediterranean fleet.)

Stefani said great quantities of heavy and medium caliber bombs and "tons" of incendiaries were dumped on Valletta, Maltese capital; its arsenal, ships in the harbor and other of "the most important objectives on the island."

"Fires and devastation," Stefani declared, resulted "almost everywhere in the arsenal and harbor of Valletta."

The agency called it "a most violent mass bombing action," and added:

"During the German air force's action the enemy's anti-aircraft reaction was most violent. Weather conditions, although bad, failed to hinder the brilliant action of the German Air Corps."

One German plane failed to return from the raid, the high command said. The action took place yesterday afternoon.

Italian airmen participated only as fighter escorts for the German bombing formations, the high command disclosed, and there they were in company with German fighter pilots. (The German high command made no mention of Italian help.)

It was the first German raid on Malta and by far the most effective thus far of all its bombardments—hitherto the exclusive work of the Italian Air Force.

Two Cruisers Claimed.

A Naval Ministry spokesman insisted that two British cruisers "were most probably sunk" in the Sicilian Straits battle January 10 instead of only one, as the British announced.

The spokesman said the declaration that two cruisers were lost was based on a report by air observers that the cruiser Southampton went down in flames far from the spot where another vessel was seen gravely damaged. The second vessel was said to have been of the 5,450-ton Dido class.

It was the first German raid on Malta, and was reported by far the most effective of all its bombardments—hitherto the exclusive work of the Italian Air Force.

The Illustrious, which reportedly went to Malta after suffering "serious damage" in the German and Italian attacks on a British convoy a week ago, was hit by bombs of heavy and medium calibers, the communique said.

"The arsenal and port works (at Malta) were effectively hammered by accurate and direct fire," the communique said. "A German plane failed to return."

Italians Identify Sunken Submarine as Greek

ROME, Jan. 17 (AP).—The Italian high command reported today that a submarine rammed and sunk by an Italian torpedo boat December 29 had been identified as the Greek Proteus, of French construction.

The Proteus, a 225-foot, 770-ton undersea boat, was constructed at Nantes in October, 1927. Her normal complement was 41 men.

On the Albanian land front the high command reported only "local actions," in which "we inflicted considerable losses on the enemy."

Arsenal at Valletta Hit, Germans Declare

BERLIN, Jan. 17 (AP).—German planes, smashing at British naval power at one of its Mediterranean citadels, Malta, were reported by the high command today to have scored "several direct hits of heavy and medium caliber" yesterday on the aircraft carrier Illustrious, already "badly damaged" by Stuka dive bombers on January 10.

Numerous German bombs dropped in the attack on the Port of Valletta, Malta, were said to have struck an arsenal. A merchant ship also was "struck directly by heaviest caliber bombs," the high command said in reporting the "excellent effect" of the raid early yesterday afternoon.

Informed German sources declared that the 23,000-ton Illustrious probably had been knocked out of the war.

Battle Raged Intermittently.

The Illustrious was first hit while in the Straits of Sicily after German Stukas and Italian torpedo planes joined for the first time in an offensive test of axis planes against British sea power.

The battle has raged intermittently since, with axis planes ranging hundreds of miles over the Mediterranean in search of British warcraft.

While Stukas roared over the Mediterranean, other German planes on armed reconnaissance yesterday scored hits on three merchant ships totaling 13,000 tons, west of Northern Scotland and off the English southeast coast, the high command said in its daily communique.

Last night, it said, combat units "successfully attacked Western English port and objectives in Southern England" while "minor" forces of the R. A. F. "dropped a few incendiaries and explosives on the Reich's territory" but caused "only small damage to buildings."

The British, according to the communique, lost five planes yesterday and the day before.

Planes Attack Convoy.

DNB, official news agency, said German warplanes attacked a British convoy near the Hebrides Islands, off Scotland, yesterday noon and scored hits on one 5,000-ton merchantman and another of 4,000 tons. Another 4,000-ton freighter was sunk off Orford Ness, on England's east coast, and left listing, DNB said.

It said that "a harbor city of Western England, especially important for grain imports," was the objective of assaults by heavy German air squadrons last night. (The British identified this as Bristol.)

[The Illustrious was previously reported to have reached an unidentified Mediterranean port under her own power, but admittedly crippled. Dispatches from Valletta, Malta, said that German planes carried out a prolonged assault on that British base yesterday, and there were an undisclosed number of casualties. British spokesmen added, however, that the raiders' losses were substantial.]

CLAIM BATTLESHIP HIT

BERLIN, Jan. 17 (AP).—The official German news agency, DNB, said today the British battleship Malaya reached Gibraltar showing extensive damage from the attack on a British flotilla made Jan. 10 by German and Italian planes. The agency asserted the British tried to conceal the identity of the 31,000-ton vessel and to hide traces of damage.

Greeks Place Italian Losses in Albania At 70,000 Men

Claim One-Third of Enemy Forces Have Been Knocked Out of War

By the Associated Press.

ATHENS, Jan. 17.—New but ill-defined gains in the Tepeleni area and the region north of Klisura were reported today in Greek dispatches while the Greek press claimed that one-third of Italy's forces in Albania had been knocked out of war.

Dispatches told of capture of additional prisoners, materials and important positions after fierce but unsuccessful Italian counter-attacks during the day and night of Wednesday.

These counter-attacks, "with a view to recapture of positions of secondary importance," one dispatch said, all were "repelled with heavy losses." Operations were hampered by a heavy winter rain.

One-third of Entire Force.

The Greek press estimated Italian losses in Albania at 70,000—killed, wounded prisoners and those sent back to Italy for frostbite treatment. The newspapers said this represented one-third of the entire Facist force in Albania at the start of the war.

(Italian casualities in the war against Greece, up to December 31, were announced officially at Rome January 11, as 12,377.)

The Greek high command had said that bad weather limited Albanian operations to patrol activities which had resulted in capture of prisoners.

Captured in South.

A government spokesman said the prisoners were captured on the southern front, where the Greeks are attempting to drive toward the seaport of Valona.

Recapitulating the results of recent fighting, the spokesman said one Fascist division had suffered such heavy losses that the Italians had had to reorganize it with men and equipment "recently sent over from Italy."

Athens Also Claims Torpedoing Of Two Italian Warships

[By the Associated Press]

Athens, Saturday, Jan. 18 — The Greek high command announced early today that 1,000 soldiers of Italy's "Wolves of Tuscany" division had been captured in Albania, and a Government spokesman said two Italian "warships" carrying other reinforcements from Italy had been torpedoed in the Adriatic Sea.

Italy's famous "Lupi Di Toscana" troops belonged to the Seventy-seventh Regiment of the newly arrived Seventh Division, commanded by Colonel Meneghetti, and had been sent hurriedly to Albania to hold up the Greek advance, the Greeks said.

Many Officers Captured

Many officers were included in the 1,000 prisoners who, the Greeks said, were captured by skillful Greek strategy which overwhelmed a fortified Italian position northwest of Klisura.

Valona, one of the immediate goals of the Greeks in their northward drive, was bombed heavily again, the spokesman said.

The torpedoed Italian "warships" were identified as the Liguria and the Lombardia.

[At London, "The Daily Mail" attributed to the Athens radio a report that the vessels were troopships, the Liguria of 15,354 tons and the Lombardia of 20,066 tons. The authoritative naval handbook, "Jane's Fighting Ships," lists neither ship. "Lloyds Register" lists an Italian Liguria, a commercial vessel of 174 tons.]

The spokesman's announcement was made in connection with his statement that of prisoners taken many had been part of Italy's famous Lupi di Toscana (Wolves of Tuscany) division and had been embarked from Brindisi. Italian prisoners, the spokesman added, said there were "many deserters" at the embarkation, which, he said, was followed by torpedo attacks on the two vessels.

The Greeks contended today that a third of Italy's forces in Albania had been killed, wounded, captured or taken home for frostbite treatment, and dispatches from the front reported new but ill-defined gains in Greece's counter-invasion.

Newspapers estimated the Italian losses at a total of 70,000.

[Officially, Italy has acknowledged 12,377 casualties in the war with Greece up to December 31. The war started October 28.]

New Gains Reported

Meanwhile, dispatches from the front yesterday said the Greek counter-invasion had gained territory both in the Tepeleni area and the region north of Klisura. Klisura is in Greek hands, Tepeleni in Italian.

The advances, however, were of a "local nature," it was said, because of continued bad weather. Snowstorms have given way to heavy rain.

Nevertheless, the Greeks were reported to have taken "considerable important positions," war materials and additional prisoners. Evidently the gains came after the reported shattering of Italian counter-attacks through Wednesday and Wednesday night.

Counter-Blow Repelled

"The Italians attempted again to counter-attack, with a view to recapture of positions of secondary importance," said one dispatch. "All these counter-attacks, however, were repelled with terrific losses."

North of Klisura the Italians were reported moving supplies that had been concentrated there. This was construed by the Greeks as a precaution to avert repetition of the Italian loss of large quantities of material when Klisura fell.

Hand-To-Hand Fighting Near Klisura Reported

At the Yugoslav-Albanian Frontier, Jan. 17 (AP)—Bitter hand-to-hand fighting in the central sector between Tepeleni and Klisura was reported today, with both the Greeks and Italians concentrating troops on that front.

Some military experts believe a decisive battle soon will take place there. The Greeks have taken Klisura but not Tepeleni.

In the northern sector near Pogradetz artillery duels were reported, but troop movements were halted by floods.

JAN 18 1941

The Greeks have captured war material of nearly every sort but say they have rarely found food. Many captured areas have been scraped clean of livestock, potatoes, onions and practically everything else edible, the Greeks say.

By J. WES GALLAGHER,
Associated Press War Correspondent.

WITH THE GREEK ARMY ON THE ALBANIAN CENTRAL FRONT, Jan. 17.—Greek fighting men are battling the Italians with captured Italian ammunition fired from captured Italian guns.

A Greek commander in an observation post on a mile-high peak handed me his binoculars and pointed out a line of shell bursts.

"Italian shells," he said with a grin.

They were fired at, and not by, Italian troops.

Many Greek soldiers are being schooled just behind the front in how to use the captured weapons and the gaily-colored Italian ammunition. Graduation exercises from this short course consist of stepping up to the firing line and going into action with an Italian trench mortar or Fiat machine gun.

(Many recent communiques from the Greek high command have reported the seizure of Italian mortars. The war bulletin of January 8 said a whole company of them had been taken and a communique the next day reported the capture of 20 more.)

The mortar, which the Greeks say is about the best of Italian weapons in this terrain, is a small, black, snub-nosed gun, looking very much like a toy cannon. Far from being a toy, it fires a projectile which resembles a miniature airplane bomb.

The Greeks seem to enjoy chucking the red and black shells into the mouth of the mortar and watching their looping flight and ultimate explosion 400 yards away.

The explosion is extremely noisy and accompanied by a great red glare. The Greeks say their own mortars are just as effective but not nearly as spectacular.

Another color-note on this drab battlefront is the bright red of captured Italian hand grenades, stacked neatly about Greek outposts in readiness for use against their makers.

Even the Italian artillery shells are brightly colored, in marked contrast with the gray-green of the Greek-made munitions.

In addition to captured Italian weapons, the Greeks rely on their mobile artillery, which they say will outshoot the Fascist weapons.

Somewhere Off the Grecian Coast, Jan. 17—A group of young Italians, their frayed uniforms still soiled with blood from the lost battle of Klisura, are squeezed in the dark hold of a Greek prison ship nearing Piræus.

Whispering below noise of engines, they curse the war, their sickness from bad Albanian water, their high officers who let them be caught in a Greek trap. But they are glad to be alive.

Not many hours ago Italian bombers very nearly killed them all, as they huddled in a dugout near the docks during a raid on a small northern Greek port.

Flying so high that they were mere silvery specks, the Fascist planes dropped more than 300 bombs.

Hugging the earth and sweating with the nervousness that even veterans feel when the bombs scream down, some of these young prisoners prayed repeatedly while buildings were smashed into matchwood a few hundred feet away.

When the attack paused at dusk, they shuffled aboard the tramp freighter, carrying slabs of brown bread, moist white cheese and oranges the Greeks had given them. For these Alpine troops—among the finest in the Italian armies—this prison ship offered a welcome refuge.

Conscripts in the early twenties, reared from childhood under Fascism, the Italians arrived in Albania two days before Christmas and were thrown immediately against the Greeks in the Klisura sector. Their resistance at the front line was tough, superior to anything heretofore shown by the Black Shirt companies. Yet, the Greek charges broke them.

Now, on a voyage through the mine fields, their war weariness was expressed in a single word: "Enough."

The Greeks treat them well, and give the wounded extra blankets and the best sleeping spaces.

The squat merchant captain, standing beside a machine gun on his bomb-damaged bridge, tells you:

"It is in the Greek heart to hate fiercely in battle and then pity the enemy when he is helpless. These prisoners are only boys who obeyed orders."

Reich Reported Trying Peace Drive In Greece

Sofia, Jan. 17 (AP)—A highly reliable informant said tonight that Germany was endeavoring to end the Italian-Greek war by negotiations in Athens.

One informant suggested the presence of German troops in Rumania was part of a "diplomatic argument" designed to spur peace negotiations with Greece.

[In Berlin, authorized sources said there was no change whatever in German relations with Greece, and therefore it could be denied, they said, that German diplomatic activity had been intensified in Athens. Germany has maintained her normal mission in Athens throughout the Greek-Italian hostilities.]

Intervention Or Peace?

German sources here did not rule out the possibility of armed Nazi intervention in the Greek-Italian war, but declared Germany certainly would welcome a peaceful settlement.

It was believed by some informants here that Germany in attempting to negotiate peace would indorse proposals that Greece reasonably could accept even if they gave Italy a poor return for her war efforts.

These sources pointed out it obviously was to Germany's interest to prevent an Italian rout, and that aid and advice to Italy was directed to that end.

THERE HAVE BEEN SOME REPORTS THAT PART OF THE NEGOTIATIONS WERE BEING CARRIED ON IN SOFIA FOLLOWING A SERIES OF VISITS TO THE FOREIGN OFFICE HERE THE LAST THREE DAYS BY GERMAN, GREEK, YUGOSLAV, AND SOVIET MINISTERS.

BUT BULGARIAN OFFICIAL SOURCES SAID THIS WAS NOT SO, AND THAT PRESUMABLY THE DIPLOMATS HAD CALLED SEEKING INFORMATION ON BULGARIA'S POSITION. (GERMAN TROOPS PROBABLY WOULD GO THROUGH BULGARIA TO REACH GREECE).

Balkans Face Famine; Axis Activity Blamed

Belgrade, Jan. 17 (AP)—Southeastern Europe—already forced to eat stale black bread and pay exorbitant prices for essential foodstuffs—now is facing new shortages because, officials say, so many rail lines have been commandeered for Nazi troop movements and Italian and German shipments of war materials.

Dispatches from Hungary and Rumania report that in many towns where ordinary supplies have been cut off by German use of railroads the inhabitants have appealed for commodities by truck to prevent rioting and famine.

Yugoslav Rails Jammed

Similarly, Italian demands for quick delivery of vast quantities of Rumanian oil to bolster her dwindling supplies are said to have jammed Yugoslav railways as far as Trieste, causing a serious curtailment of food shipments.

The Hungarian food problem is reflected in a new Government order halving the amount of food each householder has been allowed to keep on hand—fifty pounds of flour, four pounds of dried vegetables, six pounds of fats.

Rumanian reaction to skyrocketing prices was said to have brought several public demonstrations, including one in a Bucharest public market in which one person was killed and several others injured.

Bread Sales Curbed

Nearly all the southeastern European governments have restricted bread sales to black loaves two and three days old. Rumanian officials found flour consumption was reduced drastically by this order until the people learned they could make the bread more palatable by toasting. Now a new order forbids serving of toast in restaurants, dining cars and other public eating places.

Iron Guard squads are said to be raiding homes in many parts of Rumania, seizing what they consider to be more than normal supplies of food and selling them in public markets.

Nazis Having Trouble

Even the commissar of the German expeditionary force in Rumania is finding difficulty in getting enough food for his several hundred thousand soldiers. One Bucharest report said the Germans faced the necessity of importing sixty per cent. of the food needed by their troops in a country from which they had expected to obtain vast food exports.

Already long lines of Danish freight cars are arriving in Rumania, bringing dairy products for the Nazi army.

Ration cards have appeared in several large Yugoslav cities. Many city housewives, unable to buy lard, scour the countryside looking for peasants who will sell fats.

In Rumania, eggs, which a few months ago sold at less than five cents a dozen, now bring more than 50 cents in "egg speakeasies."

Bulgaria's native cheese, one of the principal foods, can be had only with ration cards.

All traffic on Hungarian railroads, except international trains, was suspended last night, adding to the general apprehension. The stoppage was taken to mean that the German military authorities had found that drastic step necessary to complete their projected movement into Rumania of 300,000 troops with full motorized equipment before the end of January.

A highly placed diplomat said that repeated clashes had occurred on the Russo-Rumanian border and that an average of from five to ten Rumanian frontier guards are being slain every night. One belief expressed here is that these clashes—which have been denied officially—are being used by the Russians to test how far the Nazis might fall back in Rumania should the Soviet demand the provinces of Moldavia and northern Dobruja from Rumania.

Balkan Towns Short of Food

Seizure of Rail Lines for Axis War Moves Cuts Supplies in Rumania and Hungary.

Belgrade, Jan. 17 (A. P.).—Serious food shortages have resulted in many southeastern Europe areas from the commandeering of railway lines for Nazi troops and war material for Italy and Germany, it was reported here today.

Many towns in Rumania and Hungary, cut off from the rail supplies by the German military operations, are reported already to be running out of food. In some cases appeals have been made to the Budapest and Bucharest governments to rush commodities by highway to prevent riots and famine.

Food shipments in Yugoslavia have been curtailed by jamming of rail lines with long strings of tank cars, carrying Rumanian oil to Italy.

Other Causes of Tension

Signs of increasing friction between Soviet Russia and Rumania, and diplomatic reports that Adolf Hitler intends to take over Rumania and make it a German protectorate also kept the Balkans in a state of anxiety today.

Russia took Bessarabia and northern Bucovina from Rumania by an ultimatum last June. Moldavia and northern Dobruja border on these ceded territories, deepef within Rumania.

Reports persisted that a deal was possible whereby Soviet Russia would be given a free hand in these provinces in return for allowing Germany a free hand in Bulgaria.

Diplomats said it was generally believed that if Hitler should formally take over Rumania, which is already a Nazi troop center, the new German Minister to Bucharest, Baron Manfred von Killinger, would be Gauleiter (Nazi district leader) in the protectorate. The reasons cited in German quarters for the establishment of a Rumanian Protectorate included the difficulties encountered in smothering potential conflicts between the Rumanian army and the Iron Guard; and in moving military trains, billeting troops, speeding up production and controlling the Rumanian populace.

Yugoslavs Intern 6 Italians

BELGRADE, Jan. 17 (AP).—Six crewmen of an Italian plane were interned yesterday by Yugoslav officials after their bomb-laden machine landed at the Adriatic port of Bar. The crew gave no explanation of their presence in the area. The plane apparently was functioning perfectly.

Hitler-Mussolini Talk 'Likely' This Week-End

Balkan Reports Indicate Meeting Is Scheduled

BERNE, Jan. 17 (AP).—Reports reaching diplomatic quarters here from Axis and Balkan capitals tonight indicated a meeting between Fuehrer Adolf Hitler and Premier Benito Mussolini this week end was "quite likely."

There was no indication as to when or where the meeting was to take place, but it was believed such a conference would be concerned mainly with means of giving additional Nazi aid to Italy in the Fascist campaign against the Greeks in Albania and the British in North Africa.

(There was a report Friday night from Sofia, Bulgaria, that German diplomats at Athens were seeking to end the war between Italy and Greece.

Il Duce Cancels Engagement

ROME, Jan. 17 (AP).—Premier Mussolini's scheduled personal appearance on Sunday to award prizes to Italian farmers in the country's campaign for self-sufficiency in wheat-growing has been canceled, it was learned tonight.

NEW FRENCH-NAZI PARLEY INDICATED

Darlan Leaves Vichy, Presumably To Consult German Authorities

Petain Sees Herriot—Formation Of "Consultative Assembly" Expected

[By the Associated Press]

Bern, Jan. 17—In full uniform, Admiral Jean Darlan, French Secretary of State for Navy and emissary in past negotiations with Germany, left Vichy today, headed for occupied France, it was reported authoritatively.

Presumably Darlan went to consult German authorities. Last month he was said to have delivered a letter from Marshal Henri Philippe Petain, Chief of State, to Adolf Hitler, outlining Petain's terms for collaboration with Germany.

Petain Receives Herriot

Word of his departure followed closely upon reports that Petain had received Edouard Herriot, who at various times was Premier and President of the Chamber of Deputies when France was still a republic and had a Parliament. This was the first notice the old marshal had taken of the "elder statesman" since the republican Parliament voted its powers to Petain and passed out of existence.

It was believed that the meeting was a prelude to formation of a "consultative assembly" to share certain responsibilities with Petain and his Ministers. This was forecast by Vichy more than a month ago after Pierre Laval was ousted as Vice-Premier and Foreign Minister.

Speculation Over Socialists

Herriot, it was said, may be given a seat in the Assembly. Similar speculation as regards three Socialist former deputies was aroused by their being received by Petain's Foreign Minister, Pierre-Etienne Flandin.

These three are Paul Faure, prewar head of the minority wing of Leon Blum's Socialist party, and Rene Brunet and Jean Barthelemy. The assembly is expected to include a number of Senators and Deputies heretofore left out of the Vichy Government's activities.

HERRIOT AT VICHY

Former Premier Reported Received by Petain.

Berne, Jan. 17 (A. P.).—Edouard, Herriot, former Premier, former President of the Chamber and elder statesman of republican France, was received today by the Chief of State, Marshal Petain, according to authoritative reports from Vichy.

It was the first notice that Marshal Petain has taken of the dean of the French Parliament since the republican Chamber and Senate passed out of existence by voting all its powers over to the Chief of State. It was believed the meeting was a prelude to the formation of a consultative assembly in which M. Herriot may be given a seat.

RAIL WRECK IN FRANCE

Berlin-bound Express Runs Off Track Near Paris.

VICHY, Jan. 17 (A. P.).—French newspapers published a report from Paris today that the Paris-Berlin express train was derailed several minutes after it left the North Station in Paris yesterday. Three persons were injured slightly. Passengers were able to take another train a few minutes later.

It was the second recent derailment of an international express in occupied France. The Hendaye-Paris train from Spain left the rails January 10 near Hendaye.

Former Premiers Edouard Daladier and Leon Blum, former Generalissimo Gustave Gamelin and others were accused of betraying their duties. Former Premier Paul Reynaud was charged with embezzling public funds.

Vichy to Control Shipping Line

VICHY, France, Jan. 17 (AP)—The French Admiralty announced today that the important steamship company Messageries Maritimes would be placed under government control. The company handled most French traffic in the Mediterranean, with Africa and with the Far East.

FOREIGN MINISTER PIERRE-ETIENNE FLANDIN RECEIVED PAUL FAURE, PRE-WAR HEAD OF THE MINORITY WING OF LEON BLUM'S SOCIALIST PARTY, ALONG WITH TWO OTHER SOCIALIST FORMER DEPUTIES, RENE BRUNET AND JEAN BARTHELEMY.

THE FLANDIN CONVERSATIONS ALSO WERE REPORTED LINKED WITH THE PROJECTED CONSULTATIVE ASSEMBLY WHICH IS EXPECTED TO INCLUDE A NUMBER OF FORMER SENATORS AND DEPUTIES HERETOFORE LEFT OUT OF THE VICHY GOVERNMENT'S ACTIVITIES.

ADMIRAL JEAN DARLAN, FRENCH NAVAL MINISTER, WAS REPORTED TO HAVE LEFT VICHY AND IT WAS BELIEVED HE HAD GONE TO THE OCCUPIED ZONE TO CONSULT GERMAN AUTHORITIES.

German Requisitions Being Paid by French

By the Associated Press.

VICHY, France, Jan. 17.—The French Finance Ministry delegate in Paris announced today that, on order of the German high command, German requisitions made since June 25 are being paid now by the French administration.

The requisitions call for supplies of all kinds, including privately owned automobiles, ships and airplanes.

Ex-French Premiers Face Early Trial

Ambassador Leahy Is Better.

Vichy, Jan. 17 (A. P.).—United States Ambassador Admiral William D. Leahy's condition was reported improved today as his temperature dropped to normal. At the embassy it was said he would remain indoors at least until Monday, however.

Sinclair Asserts Flyers Will Win War for Britain

Will 'Blaze Way to Victory in Coming Year,' He Predicts

GLASGOW, Jan. 17 (AP).—Air Minister Sir Archibald Sinclair declared in a speech here today that the Royal Air Force would "blaze the way to victory in the coming year."

"Whether or not the goal will be reached is not for any of us to say," Sir Archibald continued, "but I strongly believe we shall see before the end of the year the path to victory before us."

He asserted that the R. A. F. would "go on striking far heavier blows on the vitals of Germany and Italy."

"The eight-gun fighter, with the skill of our pilots, has given us mastery of the skies over Britain, but it is not the last word," he said. "We shall go on to other forms of armament in the months that lie ahead."

Addressing Glasgow University students, Sir Archibald said that Great Britain's Hurricane and Spitfire fighting planes had "obtained mastery of the skies over this country and over Egypt and Libya."

Britain's bombers, he said, "at present in numbers are only a fraction of the German air force, but all through this year they are going to increase in quality and power and are going to play a great part in preparing the way for victory over the Nazis."

ore Destroyers eeded to Combat U-Boats, Cross Says

By the Associated Press.

LONDON, Jan. 17.—Minister of Shipping Ronald H. Cross re-emphasized today Britain's need for more destroyers to combat German U-boats and reduce "the unquestionably serious" losses of British shipping.

Despite a "welcome diminution" of losses in recent weeks, the minister said he was not willing to assume "that the future will be so agreeable."

"We know how to cope with the submarine today. Given the equipment, destroyers and aircraft, I am sure we can subdue this menace," he said.

Britain already has acquired 50 destroyers from the United States.

British Request U. S. View on Hemisphere Contraband Base

Control Station Possibly Would Be Set Up In West Indies

JAN 18 1941

By the Associated Press.

LONDON, Jan. 17.—An authoritative source today said Britain was seeking the United States views on establishment of a British contraband control base in the Western Hemisphere, possibly in the West Indies.

There is nothing to stop the British from establishing such a control base in the West Indies, this source added, but he said that because of "close relations" between Britain and the United States the British were seeking Washington's views.

If a control station were set up in the West Indies the most likely port would be Trinidad, he said.

The base would be designed to halt trade between the Americas and Germany in goods the British class as contraband, it was said.

There now is reported to be a leakage through the British blockade of cotton, grain and oil plant machinery which is shipped through the Panama Canal to the Pacific, thence to the Russian port of Vladivostok and from there to Germany via the Trans-Siberian Railroad.

The British estimate that the Trans-Siberian can carry 500,000 tons of war goods a month for Germany.

Pacific 'Leakage'

JAN 18 1941

Washington, Jan. 17 (AP)—Secretary of State Cordell Hull indicated today that the question of Russian purchases in the United States and of a possible "leakage" of supplies to Germany through the Pacific had been raised at various times in Anglo-American conversations.

American Shares Award for Jervis Bay Convoy Feat

LONDON, Jan. 17 (AP).—The crew of the San Demetrio, one of the convoy ships saved last fall by the British merchant cruiser Jervis Bay, won an award of £14,700 sterling (about $58,000) in court today for salvaging the damaged tanker and taking her 700 miles across the Atlantic to Ireland.

The owners of the ship, which was worth £250,000 ($1,000,000) and which carried a cargo valued at £60,000 ($240,000), paid the costs of the action. The judge praised the crew's achievement as unprecedented. Second Officer Hawkins and Chief Engineer C. Pollard each received £2,000 ($8,000).

An American member of the crew, Ross Preston, received £1,000 ($4,000) and the San Demetrio's red ensign, at the unanimous request of the rest of the crew.

"I dwell with pleasure on this incident," the judge said, "for I am sure Ross Preston is a man of the quality to treasure this piece of bunting—the only flag remaining on board the San Demetrio."

[The Jervis Bay sacrificed itself and was sunk in a hopeless fight with a German raider on November 5, in mid-Atlantic, to protect the escape of twenty-nine ships in a convoy bound from an eastern Canadian port to Britain.]

Polish Leader Makes Gift to British

London, Jan. 17 (A. P.).—Gen. Wladyslaw Sikorski, Premier of the Polish Government in exile, contributed £540 (about $1,800) today toward the rebuilding of the famous Guildhall (municipal building), which had been damaged by German bombs.

Prime Minister Churchill, in acknowledgement, described the gift as "a moving token which will stir the hearts of every one in this city and empire."

Britain Bars Livestock Imports From Ireland

By the Associated Press.

DUBLIN, Eire, Jan. 17.—The government Information Bureau announced today that the British Agricultural Department had barred importation into Britain of cattle, pigs, sheep and goats from Eire, Northern Ireland and the Isle of Man because of an outbreak of the hoof and mouth disease in County Derry.

Eire Parliament Hears Of Loss of 9 Irish Ships

War Sinkings Cited in Debate on Supply Needs

DUBLIN, Jan. 17 (AP).—Nine ships of Irish registry and flying the Irish flag have been sunk off Eire's (Ireland's) coasts during the war, Sean Lemass, Minister of Supplies, asserted today in a parliamentary debate on Eire's supply needs.

The disclosure came after John MacIntee, Minister for Industry and Commerce, said Eire would be compelled to rely on her own resources for shipping. Great Britain, he said, was helpful in supplying shipping in the early stage of the war but was now in a changed situation.

Most incoming cargoes are usually brought on neutral ships chartered by Irish agencies, Macintee said.

'All-Weather Bomber' Latest Boast Of Nazis In Sea War

JAN 18 1941

New-Type Plane Credited With Sinking "Numerous British Ships Far Out In Atlantic"

[By the Associated Press]

Berlin, Saturday, Jan. 18—Informed Germans said tonight the Reich was using a new "all-weather bomber" for sinking British ships far at sea.

The plane has four motors and a wide cruising range, plus a heavy bomb load and "numerous machine guns and cannon," the sources said. It carries a crew of six.

"It recently sank numerous British ships far out in the Atlantic," they said.

The new plane is called the Focke-Wulf Courier, developed from the F W 200 Condor, a commercial plane which made flights to New York and Tokyo. Few details were disclosed except that the four BMW-Bramo motors give the Courier "a high speed."

The deicing system on the new craft, informed persons said, enables the carrying out of attacks under all weather conditions.

Receives British Officers.

Ankara, Jan. 17 (A. P.).—President Ismet Inonu and the Turkish Foreign Minister Sukru Saracoglu, today received the British Ambassador, Sir Hughe Knatchbull-Hugessen, and officers of the British Middle East Command who are in Ankara for conversations with the Turkish High Command.

The British officers, among whom are Admiral Sir Howard Kelly, Lieut.-Gen. Sir James Marshall-Cornwall and Air Vice Marshal T. W. Elmhurst, have been here for two days reviewing the military situation with Turkish officers.

2 Thai Ships Reported Sunk By French Units

Saigon, French Indo-China, Jan. 17 (AP)—Units of the French Asiatic Squadron were reported today to have virtually wiped out a three-ship Thai (Siamese) flotilla while the jungles of western Cambodia yielded a story of how nearly 600 invading cavalrymen from Thailand perished in a machine-gun trap.

The French, however, acknowledged they were withdrawing on land in this undeclared war to what is known as "the Little Maginot Line" shielding Sisophon, eastern Cambodia railhead some fifty miles inside the Indo-China frontier.

Tanks were supporting the Thai advance.

Destroyers Probably Involved

The naval engagement was described as the first of importance since intermittent fighting began September 28.

The French said "several" of their warships (probably destroyers) came upon three Thai craft while the latter were firing at a French patrol plane in the Gulf of Siam, attacked them, sank two and severely damaged the third.

The size or classification of the ships was not given.

Legionnaires Set Death Trap

An American oilman, the representative of the Texas Company, told of the death trap set on January 10 by French Foreign Legionnaires on a road hemmed in by jungle, and from which only three Thai troopers out of a whole column managed to get out alive.

The French placed machine guns along the road, hidden in the foliage, and opened fire when the column was 500 yards distant.

The inexperienced troopers and horses alike were cut down in fifteen minutes. The French guns fired so fast, the oilman was told, that they were overheated and ruined.

French Admit 66 Casualties

This was on the road to Sisophon, where the French admit but sixty-six casualties.

French planes were said to have started large fires on three principal Thai airports, Aranya, Wadhana and Prachinburi. Bangkok had an air-raid alarm Thursday night.

Two Thailand Warships Sunk, French Claim

JAN 18 1941

Third Is Reported Severely Damaged In Gulf of Siam

BACKGROUND—

Thailand (Siam) raised claims to parts of French Indo-China following fall of France last June. Negotiations on Thai-Indo-China relations were carried on for some time, but broke down, and tension recently flared into open fighting, with Thai troops invading Indo-Chinese territory.

By the Associated Press.

SAIGON, Indo-China, Jan. 17.—The French Asiatic squadron was declared by French sources today to have sunk two Thai warships and severely damaged a third in the first important naval engagement in the undeclared war between Indo-China and Thailand (Siam).

The encounter was said to have occurred in the Gulf of Siam, where the Thai ships were said to have been firing on a French patrol plane. The size and classifications of the ships were not stated. "Several" French units participated.

Air Successes Claimed.

The French claimed aerial successes, also, against the Thai forces, but admitted they were forced to retreat on land as the invading Thai soldiers forged toward Sisophon, Western Cambodia railhead

Fighting a rearguard action against strong tank and infantry forces, the French withdrew to what they call their "little Maginot Line" defending Sisophon, where the railway from Southeastern Indo-China meets the highway running to the Thai border. The French admitted 66 casualties, but said the Thailand forces lost 600 men.

French planes severely bombed three main Thailand airports, Aranya, Wadhana and Prachinburi.

600 Lost in Trap.

The American representative of the Texas Co., who returned from the Cambodia front, told of a French military death trap in which nearly 600 green Thai cavalrymen lost their lives January 10.

He said the French, retiring from Poipet along the road to Sisophon, set up machine guns on both sides of a jungle-lined lane. When an entire column of Thai horsemen were within 500 yards of the death stretch, the French Foreign Legion gunners opened fire, mowing down men and horses in 15 minutes of slaughter.

Only three of the Thailand troopers emerged alive, he said.

Bangkok was under a blackout last night.

The Thai high command announced "a highly successful advance" into Cambodia in which several French prisoners and the colors of the 5th French Indo-China Battalion were captured.

It is doubtful if any French naval units larger than destroyers remain in Asiatic waters. The Thai Navy has 4 cruisers and 14 destroyers. Most of these were built in Japan or Italy.

Thai Army Attacking In 5 Sectors, Says Bangkok

Bangkok, Thailand, Jan., 17 (AP)—Large-scale, coordinated offensives are being carried on by the Thai army in five sectors along the 1,000-mile frontier between Thailand (Siam) and French Indo-China, and several Indo-China districts already have been occupied, the Bangkok radio reported tonight.

Thai officials have been installed in these regions and the populations "liberated," declared the broadcast.

[Thailand holds that large areas of western Indo-China were taken away from her by the French and that their populations are largely Thai.]

Bangkok was under a blackout last night.

The Thai high command announced "a highly successful advance" into Cambodia in which several French prisoners and the colors of the Fifth French Indo-China Battalion were captured.

TOKYO PAPER URGES 'RESCUE' OF INDO GROUP

Nichi Nichi Calls For Release Of Natives Ruled By Frenchmen

Demands Speedy Conclusion Of Negotiations By Economic Missions

[By the Associated Press]

Tokyo, Saturday, Jan. 18—The influential newspaper Nichi Nichi called today for Japanese action to "rescue the natives of Indo-China" from French rule and expressed growing Japanese impatience over the slow course of negotiations for an economic pact with Indo-China.

"Inseparable relations exist between the Greater East Asia sphere of coprosperity (Japan's projected Asia-East Indies bloc) and the release from oppression of races living in southern Asia," declared Nichi Nichi.

"This principle applies to Indo-China, where 23,000,000 natives are ruled by 30,000 Frenchmen.

Emphasizes Need For Pact.

"Again we emphasize the need of a speedy conclusion of the economic negotiations.

"At the same time Japan must carry out measures to rescue the natives of Indo-China and enable them to enjoy their heaven-ordained happiness."

The negotiations began in earnest January 6, with Rene Robin, specially dispatched from Vichy, and Hajime Matsumiya, holding ambassadorial rank, heading the delegations. Experts from France and Indo-China are assisting Robin.

Would Supplement Bases

Japanese leaders have indicated that they hoped to reach an accord giving Japan economic concessions of wide scope, supplementing the military foothold she already has gained through the establishment of army and air bases in northern Indo-China.

Difficulties have arisen, however, chiefly from the fact that hitherto Japanese purchases from Indo-China have been about thirteen times Japanese sales there.

The Japanese hope now to supply Indo-China wants for manufactured goods previously imported from France.

Japan in return would obtain large quantities of rice, her food staple, and such war essentials as rubber, tin and tungsten, of which the United States hitherto has imported considerable quantities from Indo-China.

Interested In Hull's Stand

French delegation members intimated they had read with keen interest accounts of Secretary of State Cordell Hull's testimony before the House Foreign Affairs Committee dealing with dangers to the United States from Japanese expansion.

Close observers have expressed belief the French are trying to keep the negotiations to a deliberate pace despite Japanese insistence on speed.

[The Vichy Government has accorded Indo-China autonomy in tariff and other economic matters, giving the colonial administration virtually a free hand to cope with Japanese pressure. A Hanoi report said Maj. Gen. Raishiro Sumita, head of the Japanese military mission in Indo-China, had left for Tokyo after a tour of southern Indo-China. Japanese army and naval officers recently have visited Indo-China.]

Matsuoka May Reply To Hull on Tuesday; Press Assails U. S.

Bitterest Criticism in Months Directed at America by Japanese

By the Associated Press.

TOKIO, Jan. 17.—With the Japanese press already assailing United States Secretary of State Hull's testimony on United States defense needs as "a clear challenge to the axis, short of an ultimatum," it was reported today that Foreign Minister Yosuke Matsuoka was preparing to reply with a speech in Parliament next Tuesday.

Moreover, Domei, Japanese news agency announced, Premier Prince Fumimaro Konoye soon will clarify for the public his cabinet's policies.

Testifying Wednesday before the House Foreign Affairs Committee in Washington, Secretary Hull asserted that danger to the United States would be "multiplied many fold" if Japan, Germany and Italy, signatories of an all-for-one and one-for-all military alliance, gained control of the high seas.

Bitter Criticism.

Pending any official presentation of Japan's attitude, the press singled out such statements by Mr. Hull for the bitterest criticism directed at Washington in many months.

Expressions in many Japanese quarters indicated that the Secretary of State's remarks had produced deeper anxiety here than any development since Washington last October advised United States citizens to withdraw from the Orient.

It was indicated that high officials had debated most of today the advisability of making an immediate reply to Mr. Hull and then decided against it.

Assurances that the Cabinet Information Bureau would issue a reply to Mr. Hull today fell through on Domei's announcement tonight that none was forthcoming.

Inquiries an hour and a quarter earlier had brought the bureau's reply that a statement had been drafted and was being translated into English.

Third Meeting of Week.

High military and cabinet officials met with Premier Konoye for the third time this week as Japan's reaction to the United States' attitude in the Far East was reflected in bitter anti-American comment in the press.

Foreign observers expressed belief the almost unprecedented series of conferences was indicative of closer co-operation between the cabinet and army and navy chieftains.

They noted that today's conference, which took place in the premier's home and lasted 45 minutes, was attended by the War and Naval Ministers, the Ministers of Home and Foreign Affairs and high-ranking officers of both army and navy. Domei said "vital questions" were discussed.

Konoye's Group Meets Today.

The powerful "Imperial Rule Assistance Association," headed by Premier Konoye, also was scheduled to meet today to discuss the advisability of a nation-wide expression of the people's "sentiments toward the aggressive attitude of the United States."

In its attack on the Secretary of State, the newspaper Yomiuri called Mr. Hull's statement an example of America's "pig-headed anti-Japanism" and said his criticisms of the axis powers were prompted by "malice and hatred."

Referring to Mr. Hull's assertion that the United States has made no threats toward Japan, Yomiuri asked:

"Has a more transparent, barefaced lie ever been uttered by any statesman in the world before?"

Asahi, which headlined its editorial "Outrageous Utterances by the American Secretary of State," accused the United States of seeking to control the East Indies, Australia, New Zealand and Singapore.

It declared Mr. Hull's conception of freedom of the seas would be consistent only if the United States remained east of the 180th meridian.

"Instead," it said, "the United States is using the situation as a pretext for interference in other areas and is endeavoring to check the proper rights of other countries to go forward."

Asahi added that "the Secretary's arguments are nothing but a mixed exposition of American sentiments, which are megalomaniac on one hand, yet tainted with a fear complex amounting to a phobia. It is apparent that the United States, in its future course, will care little about reason or logic."

NIGHT LEAD JAPANESE

TOKYO, JAN 18-(SATURDAY)-(AP)-THE GRAVITY OF JAPANESE-AMERICAN RELATIONS WAS EXPECTED TO BE THE KEY TOPIC OF A SECRET SESSION OF THE DIET NEXT TUESDAY AS TODAY'S PRESS STILL RAGED AGAINST U.S. SECRETARY OF STATE HULL'S TESTIMONY BEFORE THE HOUSE FOREIGN AFFAIRS COMMITTEE.

THE NEWSPAPER YOMIURI SAID THE JAPANESE GOVERNMENT HAD DECIDED "DEFINITELY TO IGNORE" THE DECLARATION IN WHICH HULL ASSERTED THAT DANGER TO THE UNITED STATES WOULD BE "MULTIPLIED MANY FOLD" IF THE MILITARY ALLIES, JAPAN, GERMANY, AND ITALY GAIN CONTROL OF THE HIGH SEAS.

OTHER PAPERS CALLED THE STATEMENT A "BAREFACED LIE," AND "OUTRAGEOUS UTTERANCE," AND THERE WERE ACCUSATIONS THAT THE UNITED STATES SOUGHT TO CONTROL THE EAST INDIES, AUSTRALIA, NEW ZEALAND, AND SINGAPORE.

THERE WERE INDICATIONS THAT HIGH OFFICIALS HAD DEBATED MOST OF YESTERDAY WHETHER TO MAKE AN IMMEDIATE REPLY TO HULL.

OTHER PROBABLE SUBJECTS TO BE TAKEN UP AT NEXT WEEK'S SECRET SESSIONS ARE THE LAPSED FISHERIES PACT WITH SOVIET RUSSIA, THE STATUS OF THE "CHINA AFFAIR," AND PROGRESS OF TRADE NEGOTIATIONS WITH FRENCH INDO-CHINA.

MENDOZA STEAMS ON

Now in Brazilian Waters in Bid to Run Blockade.

Porto Alegre, Brazil, Jan. 17 (A. P.).—Trailed by a British cruiser, the French freighter Mendoza was today reported moving slowly northward safely inside Brazilian territorial waters. Loaded with a cargo of food for blockaded France, she idled for several hours at the port of Rio Grande last night and then resumed her cautious journey.

The Rio Grande port captain reported that the cruiser Ericksen had replaced the British auxiliary cruiser Asturias as the guarding vessel. Three times in the last week the Asturias forced the Mendoza to turn back when she attempted to leave Uruguay without a navicert for her cargo.

Another communique of the Ministries of Air and Home Security:

Last night bombs were dropped at several places in the west of England and at a few widely scattered points in the southeast, south and southwest.

A number of fires, some of them serious, were started in a town in the west country. These were effectively brought under control by the fire services, but some damage was done to commercial and other buildings. The number of casualties was not large.

In several other places some damage was done to houses, but very few casualties are reported.

An Air Ministry communique:

Severe icing conditions and electrical storms last night did not prevent Royal Air Force bombers from once more making the naval base at Wilhelmshaven their main objective. Though the attack was on a smaller scale than on the previous night, highly successful results were achieved.

Aircraft first on the scene caused many fires, and later arrivals reported that these had reached very large proportions, especially in the area of the railway station and of the oil storage tanks. Many explosions were seen.

Other aircraft attacked docks at Emden, Boulogne and Calais, a railway junction at Ostend, and an airdrome in occupied France.

From all these operations, five of our aircraft are missing.

War Communiques

British

LONDON, Jan. 17 (AP).—A communique of the Ministries of Air and Home Security:

During daylight today enemy air activity has been on a very small scale. A single enemy aircraft dropped a bomb in east Kent this morning, but no damage or casualties were caused.

Earlier this morning an enemy bomber was shot down by our fighters into the sea north of Scotland.

CAIRO, Egypt, Jan. 17 (AP).—The British general headquarters communique:

On all fronts, no change in the situation.

The Royal Air Force communique:

A further raid was carried out during the night of Jan. 15-16 by bombing aircraft of the R. A. F. on Catania, Sicily.

A heavy explosion and a large fire were caused at the northwest hangar by the first aircraft over the target. This fire burned fiercely throughout the attack and was visible from over fifty miles away. It assisted the following aircraft to identify the target.

In addition, a large fire was caused among the administrative buildings and another near the east hangar, where several aircraft were observed to be ablaze. Explosions were also caused among aircraft dispersed along the south boundary of the airdrome.

All our aircraft returned safely from this successful operation.

In the western desert, Derna was raided, bombs dropping on the military barracks.

A very heavy raid was carried out by a large force of enemy aircraft on Malta yesterday. Escorted by CR 42's (Italian fighter planes), German aircraft—Junkers 87's and 88's—dive-bombed the harbor.

Our fighters engaged the enemy, five of which were destroyed. Five others were shot down by anti-aircraft.

No damage occurred to R. A. F. property, but civilian property suffered considerably.

Greek

ATHENS, Jan. 17 (AP).—The Greek high command communique:

During today's successful operations we captured a fortified point. One thousand prisoners, including many officers and commanding officers of the 77th Regiment of the newly arrived division, "the Wolves of Tuscany," commanded by Col. Meneghetti, were taken.

The Ministry of Home Security communique:

There were no raids on Greece today.

According to supplementary reports from competent police authorities, among the Greeks abducted by the Italians during the retreat from Argyrokastron were twenty-four notables, including one priest. Their fate is unknown.

German

BERLIN, Jan. 17 (AP).—The German high command communique:

In the early afternoon hours German combat planes attacked English naval forces at Port Valletta on Malta with excellent effect. On an airplane carrier badly damaged on Jan. 10 several direct hits of heavy and medium caliber were scored. Furthermore, numerous bombs struck the arsenal. One merchantman was struck directly by the heaviest caliber bombs.

The English cruiser Southampton, which was badly hit in raids by German and Italian combat units on Jan. 10, was so damaged that she has sunk, meanwhile.

In the course of armed reconnaissance during the day yesterday several bomb hits were scored on three merchantmen, totaling 13,000 tons, west of northern Scotland and off the English coast.

Last night fighting squadrons successfully attacking a western English port and objectives in southern England.

Last night minor enemy forces dropped a few indendiaries and explosives in the Reich's territory.

The enemy lost a total of five planes yesterday and on Jan. 15.

Italian

ROME, Jan. 17 (AP).—The Italian high command communique:

On the Greek front in local actions we inflicted considerable losses on the enemy.

In Cirenaica (Libya) there was artillery and patrol activity.

In East Africa there was normal artillery activity in the Gallabat zone. The enemy bombed some places in Somaliland without causing damage.

Bombing formations of the German Air Corps, escorted by German and Italian fighter planes, intensively bombed the naval base at Valletta on Malta in successive waves. The action was carried out with decision and audacity.

The aircraft carrier Illustrious, which had gone to Malta because of serious damage suffered during the previous attack, was hit with heavy and medium caliber bombs. A cruiser and steamship also were seriously damaged. The arsenal and port works were effectively hammered by direct, accurate fire. One German plane failed to return.

A submarine rammed on Dec. 29, as reported on Jan. 9, was identified as the Greek Proteus. This submarine, of French construction, displaced 700 (metric) tons on the surface and 930 submerged.

During the enemy raid on Catania the night of Jan. 12 the anti-aircraft defense shot down another plane in addition to that reported on Jan. 13.

Hitler and Stimson Statements Point to Britain's Main Handicap

By DEWITT MACKENZIE.

Berlin and Washington yesterday produced striking authoritative statements which, while purely coincidental, would seem to be so closely associated in idea as to demand consideration in relation to each other.

One was contained in an article in Adolf Hitler's newspaper, Voelkischer Beobachter, and therefore stamped with official approval. The other developed in Secretary of War Stimson's testimony before the House Foreign Affairs Committee.

Hitler's paper said the Fuehrer's statement that Germany has plenty of submarines will gain import during the next six months, because American aid for Britain ultimately will be a problem not only of production but of supply.

Secretary Stimson objected to writing into the lease-lend bill any prohibition against releasing American warships to Britain or any other nation.

Mr. Stimson didn't specify the conditions under which it might be desirable to make a transfer. However, it would be very easy to offer an interpretation which would make his statement a corollary to the claim by Hitler's paper.

Threat to Deliveries

The Fuehrer's journal in effect threatens that the German submarine offensive will prevent the delivery of American supplies to Britain.

Whether Hitler has plenty of U-boats depends on what he means by "plenty." Be that as may, observers generally agree that he has obviously enough to have created a very dangerous situation for British shipping.

The remark that American aid will be a problem not only of production but of supply is a long-headed observation. There is nothing more certain than that this is true, and it is a vital point which a lot of people have been overlooking.

Obviously it will avail little in the way of help for Britain if we produce mountains of supplies and they can't be delivered.

Should the British be unable to cope with this menace, there inevitably must arrive a moment of grave crisis. England is largely dependent on sea-borne supplies both for subsistence and war supplies.

All Leads to Invasion

But that isn't the whole picture. Hitler is waging a dual offensive. The submarine drive is one half of it. His terrific assault by air is the other. And both of these lead toward the projected invasion of England with troops, which he would calculate to be the knockout blow.

Britain's problem is to counter these offensives in time. She is handicapped by several circumstances. One is the shortage of destroyers and the other, light, fast warships to act as convoys and submarine hunters.

Should Hitler be able to unleash more U-boats, England's need of warships will increase. If the time arrives when Hitler can make his great gamble at invasion, men-of-war will be a crying need to blast the Nazi transports.

That is why one wonders whether Secretary Stimson might have had something of the sort in mind.

Reich Base In Haiti?

[By the Associated Press]

New York, Jan. 17—A Canadian Press correspondent at Nassau, the Bahamas, reported today that William Alexander Simms, of Dayton, Ohio, had told him of finding a secret German air base at aiti.

According to the dispatch, Mr. Simms arrived at Nassau yesterday with his wife after a three-week tour of the West Indies in a private plane, and reported discovery of the airport as a chance aerial observation.

The location given for the reported airport, near Gonaives, Haiti, is only about 160 miles airline from Guantanamo, United States base on the coast of southeast Cuba. In Washington, however, officials of the State and Navy departments said they had heard nothing concerning a Nazi air base in Haiti.

On his arrival at Port au Prince, the Canadian press report said, quoting Mr. Simms, he complimented the hotel manager on the fine airport being built and the manager replied that as far as he knew the site in question was only a salt desert.

Returning later to the Haitian city, the report continued, Mr. Simms was told by the hotel manager that he had reported the conversation to the Government and that its investigation had disclosed that during the past year German farmers in the island republic had bought the area in small plots on the pretext of wanting to farm.

"The Government," it concluded, "found they had leveled the ground and camouflaged their activities with trees and shrubs erected in boxes.

"The area in question is eighteen miles by six. The Government informed the Germans they lacked proper title to the land and dispossessed them."

Says Report Is Unfounded.

Port Au Prince, Haiti, Jan. 17 (A. P.).—An investigation by competent officials of rumors of a secret Nazi landing field in Haiti has proved them unfounded, authorities said today.

However, a large salt flat, twenty miles northwest of Gonaives, probably is the most ideal natural landing field in the West Indies. It is one by five miles in area and is crossed by a road running to Anserouge. Jewish refugees are developing mineral springs near the flat.

U. S. GETS NEW AIR-BASE SITE AT ST. LUCIA

To Build One For Land, One For Sea Planes On Caribbean Island

[By the Associated Press]

Washington, Jan. 17 — The United States will establish a land plane air base—as well as a sea plane base—at St. Lucia, British Caribbean island, it was announced tonight.

Rights to bases at St. Lucia, Newfoundland, Bermuda, the Bahamas, Jamaica, Antigua, Trinidad, and British Guiana, were received by the United States in exchange for fifty World War destroyers.

Announced By Hull

Disclosure than a land plane base would be established at St. Lucia came in an announcement by Secretary of State Hull that agreement had been reached on the site for it. Mr. Hull made public this statement by the Governor of St. Lucia:

"Final agreement has now been reached between the United States and British Governments in regard to the location of the sites in St. Lucia which, in accordance with the agreement of September 2 are to be leased to the United States Government for the establishment of air bases in the island.

"In addition to the site at Gros Islet Bay which, as has already been announced, is to be leased for the establishment of a sea plane base, it has now been agreed at the request of the United States government to lease to them a site for a land plane base at Vieuxfort."

Is Near Martinique

St. Lucia is almost within sight of Martinique, the French-owned island which has figured in discussions between American and French authorities because of concern in some quarters that the island and French warships and planes there might be taken over by Germany.

The largest island in the Windward group, St. Lucia is approximately 300 miles north of Venezuela. Geographically, it is a fortress with mountains rising out of the sea to a height of 4,000 feet. The island's only useful harbor is at Port Castries on the west coast.

Captain Tells How Nazi Raider Posed As British, Seized Tanker

Skpper And Crew Put Ashore At Kobe—Vessel And Cargo Of Benzine Confiscated

[By the Associated Press]

San Pedro, Cal., Jan. 17—A skipper's story of the seizure in Asiatic waters of his benzine-laden tanker by a German auxiliary cruiser was told today by Capt. Lief Krogh.

Arriving with five members of his crew, the former skipper of the Norwegian tanker Ole Jacobs said he was en route from Singaport to Colombo the night of November 10 when:

"The Nazi signaled us with the blinker to heave to. He said he was a British warship and wanted to inspect us.

Guns Useless

"Not until Nazi officers and a prize crew came alongside in a small boat did we know we were in the hands of Germans.

"I had my gun crew at their stations, but I quickly saw it would be useless to give battle because the raider could have blasted us out of the wate rwith a single salvo.

"Leaving myself and two of my officers aboard the Ole Jacobs, the Nazis took the rest of my crew to the raider and escorted the Ole Jacobs to Kobe, Japan, where the German ship lay outside the harbor while the tanker she took away from me proceeded into port."

The captured Norwegians were put ashore at Kobe, Captain Krogh said, and two days later the German prize crew sailed the tanker to sea, evidently to act as a fuel ship for the Nazi raiding flotilla in Asiatic waters.

The 8,300-ton tanker carried 50,000 barrels of benzine. Captain Krogh said he had given his word he would not divulge any of the identifying characteristics of the raider.

Crew member who arrived with Captain Krogh on the freighter Torrens said, however, it appeared to be a former merchantman of 10,000 tons and was heavily armed with five-inch guns, two torpedo tubes, an anti-aircraft gun and a battery of machine guns.

Not Von Luckner

They added they did not believe its commander was Count Felix von Luckner, World War raider who has ben reported active again in the South Pacific.

Captain and crew members said they were subjected to strict discipline, but were not ill treated.

The other twenty members of the Ole Jacobs' crew remained in Japan to await passage to the United States.

Talks With Mexico On Joint Defenses To Start Next Week

Negotiations Also Will Seek Stronger Bond Of Friendship

BACKGROUND—

Long controversy over compensation has followed Mexican expropriation of American, British and Dutch oil properties in March, 1938. Mexico rejected Secretary of State Hull's proposal for arbitration of the dispute last spring. In addition, United States has extensive claims against Mexico for expropriation of farm lands prior to August 30, 1927.

By LLOYD LEHRBAS,
Associated Press Staff Writer.

The United States and Mexico, it was learned today, will open formal negotiations immediately after President Roosevelt's inauguration next week, with the objectives a stronger bond of "good-neighbor" friendship and close collaboration in inter-American defense plans.

By reaching a satisfactory settlement on "every problem between the two nations," it was said, Mexican officials plan to lay the foundation for a far-reaching program of military and economic co-operation of vital importance to the defense of the Western Hemisphere.

Preliminary talks here and in Mexico City over a period of several months, it was said, have laid the grounwork for the diplomatic discussions which are expected to produce mutually advantageous agreements on the oil and agrarian expropriation claims questions and other long-pending problems.

Najera and Welles to Meet.

The forthcoming negotiations, it was learned, will be between Francisco Castillo Najera, the Mexican Ambassador and Sumner Welles, Undersecretary of State.

While the financial aspects of any settlements are important—and may total millions of dollars—officials here emphasized the greater importance of a friendly understanding enabling Mexico and the United States to work together closely on inter-American defense plans in co-operation with the other American republics.

No official announcement has been made on the agenda for the negotiations, which may start Wednesday or Thursday.

Informed sources said, however, that a major topic of immediate interest was a proposal for a mutual agreement—possibly patterned after the Canadian-American pact already in effect—designed to fit into the general, unified program for hemisphere defense.

Mexican Naval Bases

One proposal advanced envisions construction by Mexico of new or enlarged naval bases in Magdalena Bay (Lower California) and at Acapulco, on the West Coast, for the protection of the Panama Canal and possibly one or two others at strategic points on the Gulf of Mexico.

The bases would be constructed, under this plan, with funds lent Mexico by the United States, but Mexico would retain full sovereignty.

Other defense proposals may include:

Increase and modernization of the Mexican Army, Navy and air force, with assistance from United States military missions similar to those already assigned to some South and Central American republics.

Assignment of Mexican officers to United States military units and schools.

U. S. Claims Included.

Extension and improvement of Mexican airfields so they may be utilized in an emergency by United States service planes.

Rapid completion of the Mexican section of the Pan-American Highway.

Lease to the United States of the railway across the Tehauntepec Isthmus in Southern Mexico as a parallel overland route to the Panama Canal.

Among the major problems to be solved as a prelude to closer and more friendly collaboration are settlement of United States claims resulting from expropriation of land under Mexico's agrarian program and the Mexican government's expropriation of American, British and Dutch oil properties in March, 1938.

Two Ships Torpedoed

[By the Associated Press]

New York, Jan. 17—Two large British vessels—the 14,935-ton passenger liner Almeda Star and the 10,578-ton freighter Zealandic—were torpedoed overnight in the same general area northwest of Londonderry, Ireland, causing New York maritime circles to theorize today that the Nazis had thrown into the sea warfare submarines large enough to stand the punishment of winter storms.

The SSS signals from the two ships, the first heard in several days, crackled through the air waves less than eight hours apart. They gave no indication whether the ships were sinking or whether they could make a port.

Zealandic Was First

The Zealandic, a 482-foot ship out of Southampton, was first to signal. Shortly after 5 P. M. yesterday she reported being torpedoed approximately 650 miles northwest of Londonderry and gave her position as "latitude 58.28 north, longitude 20.43 west."

That was the only word from the Zealandic, which customarily trades between England and New Zealand.

Then, at 12.49 A. M. today, the Almeda Star radioed that she had been hit approximately 350 miles northwest of Londonderry. She gave her position as "latitude 59.16 north, longitude 13.40 west."

Classified As "Pirate"

The Almeda Star, which was 578 feet long and had twin screws, figured in the news September 30, 1939, when she arrived armed at Rio de Janeiro. On November 14, 1939, Nazis classified her as a "pirate ship" and declared she would be sunk without warning because she carried arms.

Built in 1926 at Birkenhead and owned by Blue Star Line, Ltd., she had traded between England, France and South America before the latest war.

4,500 Officers

The committee unanimously recommended the measure after amending it so that one hundred instead of fifty members of the navy and marine corps enlisted reserves could be appointed to the academy each year.

Nimitz said that under the reserve midshipmen training plan the navy would have about 4,500 young officers ready by late summer to fill positions on the fighting ships.

A total of 6,649 of those young reserists have had cruise training since June, Nimitz said, and 5,382 of them are going through selected training schools ashore.

About 500 already have accepted active duty with the fleet. They are not required to go on active duty unless they are willing, in advance of hostilities.

Hershey Bans Draft Action in Cases of Strikes

Rules Out Reclassifying of Workers in Walkouts as Ryan Parley Deadlocks

WASHINGTON, Jan. 17 (AP).—Draft headquarters ruled out today any use of the selective service law to bring pressure on defense workers not to strike.

Brig. Gen. Lewis B. Hershey, acting director of selective service, said that a change in the classification of a draft registrant because of a strike would be "contrary to the intent of the law." He added:

"The selective service system is not in a position to use induction as a threat to force a man to do something or to restrain him from a course of action."

The state board had advised local boards that a strike would necessitate reclassification of men whose military training had been deferred because of the essential nature of their peace-time jobs.

Richard T. Frankensteen, negotiator for the Congress of Industrial Organizations United Automobile Workers, had protested in a telegram to President Roosevelt that a ruling of the California draft board carried an implied threat that employees of the Ryan Aeronautical Company, of San Diego, Calif., might be drafted if they struck.

Navy Already Using War Training Plans

[By the Associated Press]

Washington, Jan. 17—Rear Admiral Chester W. Nimitz told the House Naval Committee today that for more than six months the navy has been traniing hundreds of reserve midshipmen under a plan originally intended for use after mobilization for war.

Nimitz, chief of the Bureau of Navigation, was testifying on a bill to permit members of Congress to appoint one additional midshipman apiece to the Naval Academy, in order to increase the supply of officers.

Implied Australian Pledge To America Given By Casey

His Country Is Able And Ready To Aid If U. S. Becomes Involved In War In Pacific, Minister Declares

[By the Associated Press]

Boston, Jan. 17—An implied pledge of Australian cooperation in event of American involvement in war in the Pacific came tonight from Richard G. Casey, Australian Minister to the United States.

"No one can tell what turn this war will take as time goes on," Casey said in an address before the Society of the Sons of the American Revolution.

Australia Able And Ready

"But I can assure you," he continued, "that Australia is ready and able to play its part in any extended field of operations if by evil chance this should come about.

"And I venture to believe that it is not a matter of indifference to you that there exists, diametrically across the Pacific from you, a large area peopled by a robust and friendly race with substantial forces of trained men and the means and ability to provide most of their own munitions and weapons.

"And, more important perhaps than material weapons, is the spirit with which we enter a struggle against the forces of evil."

U. S. And Britain As "Scissors"

Casey, who has participated in extended Anglo-American diplomatic conversations in Washington on defense problems in the Pacific, especially since Japan joined Germany and Italy in the tri-power alliance, compared the United States and the British Empire in an earlier speech today with "two blades of a pair of scissors—they must work together to do the job."

In a luncheon address before the Boston Chamber of Commerce, Casey asserted the continued existence of the British Empire and the United States was so essential to each other as to constitute "a compelling case for cooperation, each in his own sphere."

BARUCH ADVOCATES ONE DEFENSE HEAD

Tells Industrial Leaders One Man Should Be Responsible For Mobilization

Cites World War Rule "Committees For Counsel, Single Head For Action"

[By the Associated Press]

New York, Jan. 17 — Bernard M. Baruch, chairman of the War Industries Board during the World War, has advocated to important industrial leaders that mobilization for total defense should be intrusted to a single responsible head, it was learned today.

Baruch, who at a private meeting on December 9 spoke to a group of industrialists and economists under auspices of the National Industrial Conference Board, allowed his remarks to be made public today.

Price Fixing Necessary

He said price fixing was a necessary outcome of a system of priorities for Government needs over those of the ordinary consumer, and that of all the methods suggested, "I know of none which has so few objections as that of placing a ceiling over all prices of goods, services, rents, everything, as of a date before declaration of war, when there is some relationship between the activities within and without the nation, such as now."

Regarding labor, Baruch said:

"We heard much talk about labor's demands. There are certain statutes on the books. They should be observed and modified only in an emergency. War should be no reason for changing any status quo ante unless it should become self-evident."

World War Rule Cited

While the World War production czar mentioned neither of these men by name, he cited this rule of the 1917-18 setup:

"Committees for counsel, a single responsible head for action."

Other steps which Baruch recommended included:

A strict system of compulsory priorities over men, money, materials and transportation.

A "ceiling" on prices, with changes to be made only with the consent of a Government body.

Limitation on profits.

Payment of as high a proportion as possible of defense costs through increased taxation.

"Taxation should be increased to pay as we go as far as possible—and I think we can go very far," Baruch said.

Insisted On 'Work—Or Fight'

Baruch recalled that in 1917-18 the Government had not attempted to tell workers where or for whom to work, but that it had insisted on the principle "Work—or fight."

"The draft of men for industrial employment is not only impossible, it is wholly unnecessary," was the World War plan and was adequate today, Baruch indicated.

"Labor already has an agency within the Government and on the present Defense Commission. I think labor should be given broader representation in the conduct of the war," Baruch said.

AIRCRAFT ADVISERS

Stettinius Names Five to A in Production.

Washington, Jan. 17 (A. P.) Representatives of the aircr industry and Government of cials were appointed today to ac vise the defense priorities boarc on the division of restricted com mercial aircraft production among airlines. Edward R. Stettinius Jr., director of priorities in the new office of production management, selected five members of a commercial aircraft priorities committee established last week. The group is headed by Arthur B. Whiteside, president of Dun & Bradstreet, New York.

7 Red Cross Workers Are To Sail For Europe

Representatives Leave Today For Posts In Spain And France.

To Distribute Supplies

Washington, Jan. 17 (AP)—Seven American Red Cross representatives will sail from Jersey City Saturday aboard the Excalibur to supervise distribution of relief supplies in France and Spain.

They include Col. Cary I. Crockett, U. S. A. (retired), New York, who will direct the distribution in Spain; Nat C. Wilson, Washington, associate director; Charles W. Carr, accountant, and two staff men, A. K. Thorn, Jr., Clarksburg, W. Va., and Stephen Girard, St. Louis. All will work in Spain.

Those going to France, where they wil report to Richard L. Allen, Red Cross delegate, will be Leslie C. Bell, Alexandria, Va., and J. V. O'Brien, Roosevelt, Long Island.

MENUHIN IN CLASS 1

Concert Violinist Ready to Serve in Army.

Frt Wayne, Ind., Jan. 17 (A. P.).—Yehudi Menuhin, twenty-four-year-old concert violinist who has be rated Class 1 in the draft, says he will be happy to serve.

Menuhin's wife called from New York city after his arrival here for a concert tonight to tell him that his local draft board at Los Angeles, Cal., had given him a Class 1 rating.

"If my country needs me, I shall be glad to serve," he told newsmen. "Of course I shall be happy to do my bit."

Board members granted Menuhin a ninety-day leave, beginning April 1, to permit a South American concert tour. The musician has two children.

Testifies After 60-Mile Ride In An Ambulance

Princess Stephanie At Closed Hearing Explains Why She Ignored Immigration Order

Palto Alto, Cal., Jan. 17 (AP)—Hungarian Princess Stephanie Hohenlohe-Waldenburg rode sixty miles in an ambulance today before telling a closed deportation hearing in her own apartment why she ignored an order to leave this country by January 11.

The Princess, described by her physician as highly upset, was driven the thirty miles to San Francisco, where the hearing originally had been scheduled. After a hurried consultation between her attorneys and immigration officers, however, the private ambulance brought her back.

I. F. Wixon, new District Director of Immigration in San Francisco, said he did not know how soon a decision would be announced in the case by Washington officials, to whom a transcript of the proceedings will be sent

KNOX-SOUTH AMERICA

WASHINGTON,JAN.17-(AP)-SECRETARY OF THE NAVY KNOX TODAY SUGGESTED THE UNITED STATES ALLOW A "COMPLETE FREE EXCHANGE OF GOODS AND FREEDOM OF TRADE" IN COMMERCE WITH SOUTH AMERICA.

AFTER REP.SIKES (D-FLA) HAD ASKED WHETHER KNOX KNEW OF ANY BETTER METHOD OF WESTERN HEMISPHERE DEFENSE THAN THE PENDING BILL, KNOX REPLIED:

"I'VE GOT A RATHER RADICAL SUGGESTION WHICH WILL SHOCK SOME OF MY REPUBLICAN FRIENDS HERE BUT I THINK THE BEST THING WE CAN DO IS TO TREAT SOUTH AMERICA THE WAY WE TREATED THE GREAT WEST AND HAVE A COMPLETE FREE EXCHANGE OF GOODS AND FREEDOM OF TRADE.

"IF WE REMOVE EVERY LAST BARRIED FROM THAT TRADE WE'LL TIE THEM TO US WITH ECONOMIC BANDS OF STEEL."

Night Lead Irish

Dublin, Jan. 17-(AP)--The war-born problem of food supplies for Eire was brought home today by Prime Minister Eamon De Valera's appeal to housewives to use potatoes and oatmeal instead of bread and the disclosure before parliament that nine ships of Irish registry have been sunk thus far.

The prime minister said there was no need for panic, but asserted, "We are in a war situation and will be affected as much as people at war.

"This war is only beginning, as far as one can see, and greater hardships will be inflicted on every country."

Sean Lemass, Eire minister of supply, disclosed the shipping losses during a parliamentary debate, but details were not supplied.

Another angle on the food question was an outbreak of hoof and mouth disease among cattle in northern ireland, which caused britain to ban livestock imports from Eire, Northern Ireland and the Isle of Man.

Cattlemen said they expected the ban to be lifted in a few days, as veterinaries busily combated the disease in the vicinity of Londonderry.

In Eire's parliamentary discussion, John McIntee, minister of industry and commerce, said most cargoes coming to Ireland were in chartered neutral ships and that the British had been helpful in the early stages of the war. Now, he warned, Eire will be compelled to rely on her own resources.

Frank Aiken, minister for defense coordination, declared he preferred to give the price of 30 ships (possibly $24,000,000) as extra pay to farmers to produce more wheat.

LATE '41 AID SEEN BY KNUDSEN

SAYS WE CAN'T MAKE MORE ARMS UNDER LEASE BILL UNTIL YEAR'S END

Production Chief Discloses the Equipping of Our Army Is Lagging.

BUT IS FOR LENDING BILL

Says Munitions for Abroad Would Have to Come From Our Stocks.

Washington, Jan. 18 (A. P.).—President Roosevelt's defense-production chief told Congress today that it would be late 1941 before this country could supply any great amount of aid to Great Britain under the lend-lease bill unless products are taken out of existing facilities.

William S. Knudsen, director-general of production management, recommended passage of the legislation to lend and lease munitions of war to Britain for her fight with the Axis Powers on the ground that this is part of our own defense.

Appearing before the House Foreign Affairs Committee, Mr. Knudsen was asked by Representative Rogers, Republican, of Massachusetts, whether he was satisfied with the defense program.

"Well, I think we are doing as well as could be expected," Mr. Knudsen replied. "I think we are doing fairly well. The real showing won't start until the tools are ready."

Representative Chiperfield, Republican, of Illinois, asked this: If arrangements were made to give England credit, such as repealing certain provisions of the neutrality and Johnson acts, wouldn't the same objective of British aid be accomplished as is sought in the bill?

Sees No Difference.

"I don't see any difference between the bill and your statement," Mr. Knudsen replied.

"We, therefore, could accomplish this without giving all these broad powers to any one man," Mr. Chiperfield commented.

"That one man happens to be my boss," Mr. Knudsen said with a laugh.

In response to other questions, Mr. Knudsen told the committee that it would probably be the end of 1942 before the present defense program calling for complete equipment for 1,200,000 men and heavy items such as shells, powder, machine-guns and heavy guns for an additional 800,000 men, would be completed.

He said that the original schedules called for completion by July 1, 1942, but that delays in production of the heavy items were slowing it down.

Collateral Suggested.

Mrs. Rogers wanted to know whether an effort should not be made to have Britain put up collateral for war supplies in the form of tin, rubber or aluminum in order to protect the finances of the United States.

"Well, it's nice to have collateral," Mr. Knudsen replied, "but aren't we a little beyond that point now?"

He emphatically said that he did not believe the lease-lend bill would commit the United States to policing the world, as suggested by Mrs. Rogers.

"I think defense of this country is the primary reason for this bill," Mr. Knudsen said, "whether you do it directly or indirectly."

"But in doing so, you are policing the world," persisted Mrs. Rogers.

"You are simply taking care of yourself," Mr. Knudsen replied.

The question of a division of authority between Mr. Knudsen and Sidney Hillman, associate director-general of the OPM, cropped up again when Representative Vorys, Republican, of Ohio, asked whether Mr. Knudsen felt any legal limitations on his authority that might be hampering the program.

"No, sir," Mr. Knudsen replied.

"There are two heads to your organization, aren't there?" Mr. Vorys asked.

"Yes," replied Mr. Knudsen.

"Did you ever work in an organization with two heads to it before?"

"Well," Mr. Knudsen replied amid laughter, "there was a chairman where I worked."

Roosevelt Asks Hull To Confer With Willkie On Foreign Policy

Says He Is Head.

When Representative Fish, Republican, of New York, took up the questioning, he inquired whether Mr. Knudsen was the head of the defense production program.

Mr. Knudsen replied crisply, "Yes, sir."

"Then you're the head and not Mr. Hillman?" Mr. Fish asked.

"Well, he's my co-director," Mr Knudsen replied.

Mr. Fish said he wanted to know who was boss.

Mr. Knudsen replied that the four directors made the policies and added: "They are carried out by Mr. Hillman and myself." The other two are Secretaries Stimson and Knox.

What Bill Won't Do.

Mr. Knudsen told reporters later that he had been trying to point out that while the existing British orders for munitions would go ahead without interruption, the mere enactment of the lend-lease bill would not automatically increase the flow of weapons to Britain.

"If the President wants to make available more of our own equipment to the British, it's all right with me," he said.

Representative Arnold, Democrat, of Illinois, asked Mr. Knudsen whether he believed that the United States would become involved in war with the Axis Powers if Britain falls.

"I think we would," Mr. Knudsen replied.

At another point he said that he thought "the quicker we get armed 100 per cent the less chance there is of war," but he emphasized that his previous statement as to the consequences of a British defeat still stands.

Relations With Roosevelt.

Asked what his relations had been with President Roosevelt, Mr. Knudsen said with a smile:

"Why I haven't had any finer treatment from anybody around here. Naturally I stick to my last, but whenever I have gone to the President with anything concerning my work, I have always gotten the most prompt action."

When Representative Fish congratulated Mr. Knudsen on not having mentioned an impending crisis to Britain, such as has been referred to by several Cabinet officers, he spoke up quickly to add that he had heard of the crisis, too.

"I don't know first hand," he added. "I only know what Mr. Hull said."

Mr. Fish endeavored to draw from Mr. Knudsen a statement that nothing in the bill would affect production within the ne ninety days or possibly si months.

"You've asked me a question can't answer," Mr. Knudsen re plied, asserting that he would have to study the bill and would give Mr. Fish a reply over the week end.

"I want the people to und stand," Mr. Fish comment "that under this bill not one sh any munitions or any planes v be produced within the next months or possibly a year."

Answering questions by Rep sentative Mundt, Republican, of South Dakota, Mr. Knudsen expressed preference for the proposed program over the present system of independent purchasing by the United States, on one hand, and the British Purchasing Commission on the other.

Mr. Mundt argued that if Britain's dollar purchasing power were renewed the objectives of the bill would be accomplished.

"I like to have one order of one kind of material from one place," Mr. Knudsen asserted.

He expressed the belief that the general purchasing program would be improved by the standardization that would result from the bill. American types of equipment would be manufactured both for the United States and for the British, he said.

President Pledges 'Full Information'

[By the Associated Press]

Washington, Jan. 18—The White House announced today that President Roosevelt had requested Secretary of State Cordell Hull to give Wendell L. Willkie full information on European conditions and United States policies when he confers tomorrow with the 1940 Republican Presidential candidate.

The State Department said previously that the Secretary of State would receive Willkie at his hotel apartment at 3.30 P. M. tomorrow for an "exchange of views."

Willkie Asks Conference

A White House Secretary told reporters that the President had received no request from Willkie for a White House conference before Willkie leaves Wednesday for Europe, but that the Chief Executive would be glad to receive Willkie if such a request were received either directly or indirectly.

Stephen Early, the Presidential Secretary, said:

"The President has asked the Secretary of State, who has an appointment with Mr. Willkie, to give him all information the Government has received on conditions abroad and to outline fully to him the policies of this Government and the reasons therefore."

Early's statement was made in response to reporters' inquiries.

State Department officials said that the engagement had been made at Willkie's request, presumably for an exchange of views on American-British relations before he goes to London on Wednesday for a first-hand investigation, and that Secretary Hull would have no comment on their conversations, now or later.

Impossible To Appear

(Willkie earlier had notified the House Foreign Affairs Committee that his impending trip to Europe made it impossible for him to appear as a witness before that committee.)

Willkie has announced that he will go by clipper on Wednesday to Lisbon and is expected to transfer there to a British plane for London. He is expected to confer with a number of British leaders.

Willkie has no official status, but was granted a passport by the State Department in view of the special circumstances.

Threatened With Subpœna

New York, Jan. 18 (AP)—Wendell L. Willkie said today he would be "delighted" to appear before the House Foreign Affairs Committee conducting hearings on the British aid bill but that it would be impossible for him to do so before leaving for Europe Wednesday.

The 1940 Republican Presidential candidate first laughed heartily, when advised that Representative George H. Tinkham (Rep., Mass.) had sought to subpoena him to testify, had questioned his "competency to advise the American people on foreign policy" and expressed belief Willkie was going to England as an emissary of President Roosevelt.

Then he said:

"Of course, I'd be glad to appear before the committee, but I have to take three shots in the arm—for typhus and smallpox—before leaving for Europe Wednesday and with other things I have to do it will be physically impossible to go before the committee before I go."

To Pay Own Expense

He added that he was "going to England on my own account, paying my own expenses and represeting no one but myself."

(In London Arthur Evans, member of Parliament for Cardiff, South Wales, cabled an invitations to Willkie today to address members of the British group of the Inter-Parliamentary Union at the House of Commons on the "aid for Britain bill' now being considered in the United States Congress.)

Earlier his office had announced he would confer with Secretary of State Hull in Washington tomorrow. Willkie made no further comment on the subject.

WAR PRESSURE DENIED BY HULL

WASHINGTON, Jan. 18 (AP).—Secretary Hull said today he had no information from any source that Great Britain was attempting to have the United States declare war on the Axis powers.

He made the assertion after reporters had asked him at his press conference to comment on a statement by Senator Wheeler (D., Mont.). Wheeler said last night that he had learned from "reliable sources" that Prime Minister Churchill had been "insisting on a declaration of war by this country."

Hull also said no serious questions involving trans-shipment of war materials from South or Central American nations to Russia—from where they might be sent to Germany—had been called to the attention of the State Department.

Failure to Get Willkie's Story Causes Dispute in Committee

Investigators of Aid Hear He Hasn't Time to Appear—Roosevelt Releases Data to Him.

Washington, Jan. 18 (A.P.).—Representative Tinkham, Republican, of Massachusetts, announced today that he would ask the House Foreign Affairs Committee to subpœna Wendell L. Willkie to testify on the British aid bill after the Republican presidential candidate had notified the committee his impending trip to Europe made it impossible for him to appear.

Mr. Tinkham was informed by Representative Bloom, Democrat, of New York, that the committee did not have the power to issue a subpœna.

After the hearing Mr. Tinkham angrily told newspaper men that he wanted to know "what competency Mr. Willkie had to advise the American people on foreign policy nearly every morning."

He said he had no information on the purpose of Mr. Willkie's proposed visit to England, but added, "I certainly think it's a possibility that Mr. Willkie is going there as an emissary of Mr. Roosevelt."

Mr. Bloom said that Mr. Tinkham would have to take his word for it that Mr. Willkie wished to appear but could not work in an appearance before the committee in the brief time remaining before he leaves for Europe on Wednesday.

Mr. Bloom said that Mr. Willkie was willing to appear on Monday, which is Inauguration Day, but could not come to Washington any other time.

Kennedy Is Called.

After hearing William S. Knudsen, defense production chief, the committee recessed today until Tuesday. Representative Fish, Republican, of New York, told reporters he had telegraphed Joseph P. Kennedy, Ambassador to Britain, asking whether he could appear on Tuesday in place of Mr. Willkie.

The White House announced today that President Roosevelt had requested Secretary Hull to give Mr. Willkie full information on European conditions and United States policies when he confers tomorrow with the 1940 candidate.

The State Department said previously that the Secretary of State would receive Mr. Willkie at his hotel apartment at 3:30 P. M. tomorrow for an "exchange of views."

A White House secretary told reporters that the President had received no request from Mr. Willkie for a conference before Mr. Willkie leaves on Wednesday for Europe, but that the President would be glad to receive Mr. Willkie if such a request were received either directly or indirectly.

Request to Hull.

Stephen Early, a presidential secretary said:

"The President has asked the Secretary of State, who has an appointment with Mr. Willkie, to give him all information the Government has received on conditions abroad and to outline fully to him the policies of this Government and the reasons therefore."

Mr. Early's statement was made in response to reporters' inquiries.

Mr. Willkie has announced he will go by clipper on Wednesday to Lisbon, and is expected to transfer there to a British plane for London.

Mr. Willkie has no official status, but got a passport from the State Department in view of the special circumstances.

Would Be Delighted.

Wendell L. Willkie said today he "would be delighted to call Secretary Hull and make arrangements for a conference with President Roosevelt" before leaving for England to get a first-hand picture of the situation there.

He said he would be delighted also to appear before the House Foreign Affairs Committee but that it would be impossible before he left for Europe.

He first laughed heartily when told about Representative Tinkham, then said:

"Of course I'd be delighted to appear before the committee, but I have to take three shots in the arm—for typhus and smallpox—before leaving for Europe on Wednesday, and with other things I have to do it will be physically impossible to go before the committee before I go."

He added that he was going to England on his own account, paying his own expenses and representing no one but himself.

WILLKIE WARNS G. O. P. AGAINST ISOLATION ROLE

Says Party Could Never Regain Power By Blind Opposition

Urges Aid Bill Support Denies He'll Represent Others Abroad

[By the Associated Press]

New York, Jan. 18—Wendell L. Willkie warned his fellow partisans today that the Republican party would sound the death knell of its own hopes to regain national leadership if it blindly opposed the "lease-lend" bill to aid Britain and became an isolationist party.

The erstwhile Republican candidate for President appeared before 1,600 celebrants at the Women's National Republican Club annual banquet at the Hotel Astor, extemporaneously told them that he desired revisions in the bill to limit the President's power, and then asserted:

"But let me say to you that if the Republican party in the year of 1941 makes a blind opposition to this bill and allows itself to be presented to the American people as the isolationist party, it will never again gain control of the American Government."

Guest Of Honor

Willkie appeared as guest of honor at the observance of the twentieth anniversary of the club's founding.

Willkie said in his broadcast speech he did not "presume to speak for all in the party."

"I speak as Wendell Willkie to you fellow Republicans saying what is in my heart and what I think will ultimately bring the Republican party to full power in the American system of government," he added.

He said this nation could not "remove itself from the world."

"We cannot be indifferent to what happens in Europe," he said as the audience applauded. "We cannot forget the fighting men of Britain. They are defending our liberty as well as theirs.

Fears For Fate Of Liberty

"If they are permitted to fail, I say to you quite deliberately that I do not believe liberty can survive here. I take issue with all who say we can survive with freedom in a totalitarian world."

Willkie then reiterated his qualified support of President Roosevelt's "lend-lease" proposal, but emphasized that "this bill must be modified in several respects and particularly in one—the extraordinary power granted must automatically come back to the people on a definite date."

Referring to President Roosevelt, Willkie added:

"I beg of you—I plead with you—you people who believe as I do in our great system of government—ease do not in blind opposition—do not because of hate of an individual—and of all persons in the United States I have least cause to hold a brief for him—forget the critical world situation which confronts us and in which America is a part."

"Criticize Justly"

He urged the women to call upon Republican Congressmen to scrutinize the bill, criticize it justly and debate it thoroughly, but to demand that they "not vote to render America or its Chief Executive impotent to preserve liberty in Britain; in her preservation of that way of life the hope of preserving it in America will be assured."

Willkie had said earlier he would be "delighted" to appear before the House Foreign Affairs Committee conducting hearings on the British aid bill but that it would be impossible for him to do so before leaving for Europe Wednesday.

The 1940 Republican Presidential candidate first laughed heartily, when advised that Representative Tinkham (Rep., Mass.) had sought to subpoena him to testify, had questioned his "competency to advise the American people on foreign policy" and expressed belief Willkie was going to England as an emissary of President Roosevelt.

Willkie said he "would be delighted to call on Secretary Hull in Washington and make arrangements for a conference with President Roosevelt" before leaving for England.

Legion Sending Mission To Britain on War Study

Warner and Two Others Plan Civilian Defense Survey

WASHINGTON, Jan. 18 (AP).—The American Legion announced tonight that Milo J. Warner, its national commander, would head a delegation of three legionnaires who will visit Great Britain to study problems of civilian defense. Warner will select the other two members of the group.

The State Department agreed today to issue passports for the visit, which Warner said was being undertaken "with a view to gaining information by first-hand studies to supplement official and unofficial reports now available to the legion which would be of assistance to the legion's efforts to aid the United States in preparing this country for national defense."

The group intends to leave by clipper within two weeks.

KENNEDY URGES DEFEAT OF LEASE-LEND BILL, BUT FAVORS FULL BRITISH AID

Ambassador Asks English Give Us All Assets We Can Use

Suggests U. S. Make Gifts Of Arms When Funds Run Out

Text of Joseph P. Kennedy's speech will be found on Page 8.

[By the Associated Press]

New York, Jan. 18—Joseph P. Kennedy, retiring Ambassador to Great Britain, urged tonight that the United States "give the utmost aid to England," but said he did not feel the nation's immediate danger justified passage of the "lease-lend" bill in its present form.

He declared that this country's aid to Britain "should not and must not go to the point where war becomes inevitable."

Opposed To Bill

The "lend-lease" bill, he said, conferred upon President Roosevelt "authority unheard of in our history," and he commented:

"I am unable to agree with the proponents of this bill that it has yet been shown that we face such immediate danger as to justify this surrender of the authority and responsibility of the Congress. I believe that after the hearings have been completed there will be revealed less drastic ways of meeting the problem of adequate authority for the President."

Once a bill had become law, Kennedy said in a broadcast address, it was the duty of every American to "rally behind the President."

Must Rearm

Regardless of what this nation's foreign policy should be, he said, "we must go 'all out' for rearmament."

"It is only in this way," he said, "that the American people can realize their national policy of security and their desire to help England. The more we rearm, the larger our arsenal, the more we shall have available for England. There is no need to fear if we prepare."

Not Our Battle

Kennedy said one argument advanced as to why we should get into the war was that "England is fighting our battle."

"England is not fighting our battle," he said. "This is not our war. We were not consulted when it began. We had no veto power over its continuance."

Kennedy asserted that "a just peace at this time does not appear to be in the cards," adding that "Hitler has slammed the door on peace."

War Not Necessary

He said that the American people did not have to go to war "unless we are attacked" and declared that "the real defeatists are those who have given up hope that America can stay out of the war."

"The American people want to avoid war," he said. "If the leaders keep constantly before them what war means in terms of human tragedy, if Congress is ever alert to the dangers of involvement, the national determination will be translated into effective action and this country will not go to war."

Discussing how this country could aid Britain, he said he believed the British should "make available to us all the assets we can use."

Would Prefer Gifts

"If after the resources of Great Britain were used up, it were still sound American policy to assist them," he said, "I would prefer that it be done through outright gifts, since I would not expect that loans could be repaid."

Kennedy said that we should not give the British "beyond the absolute minimum necessary for our own protection" and declared that where the line was to be drawn should be determined by President Roosevelt, together with trained army and navy experts.

"They know best what we can spare," he said. "The American people have confidence in them and will trust their judgment. They have taken an oath to defend this country and that means defend it against all aggressors."

Could Give Guns

Kennedy declared that "under our policy" we could give the British guns, ammunition, airplanes and "everything that doesn't make war inevitable."

"Because aid to England is part of a constructive American policy to safeguard America," he said, "we should go to the very limit in our assistance, but not to a point which would endanger our protection."

Many Americans, Kennedy said, feared that Hitler would declare war on the United States if this country continued to aid Britain.

Self-Interest Rules

"Don't forget," he said, "that Hitler will declare war on this country or will make an attack, only when he thinks such action is for his very best interests. This country certainly has committed acts sufficiently unneutral to justify a less despotic tyrant than Hitler to declare war. The American

WAR IS NOT INEVITABLE FOR U. S., DIPLOMAT SAYS

[By the Associated Press]

New York, Jan. 18—The text of Joseph P. Kennedy's broadcast speech tonight follows:

Shortly after I came home from London, I spoke over the radio for the reelection of President Roosevelt. I declared then that my sincere judgment was that we ought to stay out of war—that we could stay out of war. I urged that we give England all possible aid. I feel the same way about it today.

Since then there have appeared many false statements regarding my views on foreign policy. Moreover, there is a growing confusion and a reliance upon emotion which strikes me as altogether unnecessary and extremely harmful.

Tonight I hope to set forth as clearly as possible my views on some phases of the great issue confronting the American people. It is my earnest desire that I may be of some assistance in helping my fellow-citizens to form a clearer understanding of the burning issue of our foreign policy.

Attacks Intolerance

The saddest feature of recent months is the growth of intolerance. Honest men's motives are being attacked. Many Americans, including myself, have been subjected to deliberate smear campaigns merely because we differed from an articulate minority. A few ruthless and irresponsible Washington columnists have claimed for themselves the right to speak for the nation. The reputation of the American press for fairness is being compromised by the tactics of these men.

This habit of smearing an opponent because you disagree with what he stands for is a distinct menace to our free institutions. How can we maintain national unity when the motives of patriotic men are indiscriminately assailed?

Intolerance brews intolerance, and the whole country suffers. No matter who wins this war, America faces most critical times. If at this early date intolerance of contrary opinions flourishes, our future is dark indeed.

Aggressive Minority

A favorite device of an aggressive minority is to call any American questioning the likelihood of a British victory an "apostle of gloom"—a defeatist. I always believed that when the American people sent an Ambassador to a foreign country they expected him to report the facts to his Government as he saw them, the bright side and the dark side—the good things and the bad things—the strength and the weaknesses.

I never thought that it was my function to report pleasant stories that were not true. Everyone will agree that had I, as your Ambassador, reported to our Government anything but the truth as I saw it, I would have been false to my trust—I would have betrayed my country.

Sought Information

When I reported to our Government the seriousness of the problems that faced the British people I did it in considerable detail, and purposely, because I wanted our Government to have all the information possible affecting the plight of Great Britain so that this country in the days to come could guide itself more intelligently in its foreign policy regardless of what the outcome of the war might be.

As support for the charge that I am an apostle of gloom, it is said that I have predicted the defeat of Great Britain. That statement is not true. I am aware of and have reported on the serious obstacles to British victory. I know many of Britain's weaknesses, but a prediction can be based only on a complete knowledge of the strength and weaknesses of both sides.

There are many phenomena in this war which defy explanation even by the most expert. If the German air force can practically destroy a city in a one-night raid as in Coventry, why is it that it has failed to wipe out industrial England in a series of these raids?

Knows No Answer

If, as we know, England can live only if her ports remain open, why has not the German air force concentrated its efforts on closing these ports by aerial bombardment? It has made but few raids on Liverpool and Bristol and those only recently. What is the answer? I don't know. Apparently no one does.

The morale of the British nation defies description. It is as fine a display of human courage as has ever been witnessed. But what do we know about the morale of the German army or of the German people? Have they this quality of toughness or are they brittle after eight years of tyranny?

These are but a few of the unknown elements which may well determine the final outcome. Thus a prediction now of England's defeat would be senseless. One can recognize the enormous difficulties facing Britain without foreseeing its defeat.

Called "Appeaser"

Another label used as a smear against certain citizens who favor keeping America out of the war is the word "appeaser." I have been called one. Here is my answer. If by that word, now possessed of hateful implications, it is charged that I advocate a deal with the dictators contrary to the British desires, or that I advocate placing any trust or confidence in their promises, the charge is false and malicious. The word of these tyrants has been shown to be worthless. They themselves proclaim that their promises are sham.

But, if I am called an appeaser because I oppose the entrance of this country into the present war, I cheerfully plead guilty. So must everyone of you who want to keep America out of war.

The term "warmonger" is another example of this unfortunate trend. Such a charge does not help us in deciding what is best for our country. We ought to be done with this sort of stuff which only confuses and divides. We ought to give a fair hearing to all sides. In that way we will be right and united.

Particularly Violent

This smear campaign is particularly violent against many of our citizens who desire this country's influence to be used in an effort to bring about a just and lasting peace. These men feel that we are already on a toboggan ride toward involvement in the European war.

They believe that as long as this war continues there is the ever-increasing possibility—yes, probability—that we ourselves will become involved, bringing ruin to our civilization and an end to our democratic form of life. We cannot blame these men for working for peace. Such an impulse springs from the oldest and most constant of man's desires.

Of course, it is only too true that a just peace at this time does not appear to be in the cards. Hitler, the man who wanted war, has slammed the door on peace. To all the world he has proclaimed that he, Hitler, wages total war for a new world order—a new world where our society of justice according to law cannot even exist.

Realizing, therefore, that we cannot hope for a just peace in the near future, let us consider what should be America's policy.

Since my return home, what has impressed me most is the growing conflict in the minds of the American people over the two courses of action which the vast majority of Americans advocate—aiding Britain and staying out of war. Nearly all the American people want to aid Britain, and practically all of the same people want to stay out of war.

See Inconsistency

But they are beginning to feel that these policies may prove inconsistent. When they try to reconcile them in their own minds they become confused. If one emphasizes aid to Britain he thereby risks entering the war. If, on the other hand, he emphasizes avoidance of war, he minimizes the aid to Britain. I think that these policies can be applied without confusion and without risk of contradiction.

We need but apply the test which should motivate every one of us. Whenever the issue is raised, whether for the President, the Congress, the army or the navy, the test for any proposal should be—what is best for the United States of America.

In considering what is best for the United States, let us look at the problem of aid to Britain. I favor now, as I did in my talk for the President, that we give the utmost aid to England. By so doing we will be assisting a nation which the American people want to see win. But, more than that, by helping Britain we will be securing for ourselves the most precious commodity we need—time—time to rearm.

U. S. Not Prepared

If, and God forbid, England were to be defeated quickly and the Germans succeed to the British navy, this country now is not prepared to defend its own shores, let alone the North American continent.

It is true that we are awake at last and we are preparing. In this modern war where industry is more vital than man power an awakened America can speedily make its gigantic power felt by all the world. England's spirited defense is affording us precious time for rearming. It is consequently to our interest that England be aided in her courageous battle.

No one will seriously urge that we should give beyond the absolute minimum necessary for our own protection. Where that line is to be drawn is to be determined by the President acting with our trained experts of the army and the navy. They know best what we can spare.

Have Confidence

The American people have confidence in them and will trust their judgment. They have taken an oath to defend this country and that means defend it against all aggressors. However, because in addition to wanting to aid Britain the American people want to stay out of war, this aid should not and must not go to the point where war becomes inevitable.

So far as financing the assistance we give to Great Britain is concerned, my personal opinion is that the British ought to make available to us all the assets we can use. If after the resources of Great Britain were used up it were still sound American policy to assist them I would prefer that it be done through outright gifts, since I would not expect that loans could be repaid.

Under our policy we can give them guns; we can give them ammunition, we can give them airplanes; we can give them everything that doesn't make war inevitable. Because aid to England is part of a constructive American policy to safeguard America we should go to the very limit in our assistance, but not to a point which would endanger our own protection.

Declaration Outmoded

Many Americans fear that Hitler will declare war on us if we continue to aid Great Britain. To declare a state of war is a bit outmoded in these days of unbridled force. Don't forget that Hitler will declare war on this country, or will make an attack, only when he thinks that such action is for his best interests. This country certainly has committed acts sufficiently unneutral to justify a less despotic tyrant than Hitler to declare war. The American people obviously have not the slightest desire to remain neutral in the face of the aggression of the Axis powers.

It is not surprising that we desire Hitler's defeat. The English are defending a society which respects law and which upholds the dignity of the individual. All of us want very much to see destroyed once and for all the attempted decivilization of the world in the name of Nazi pagan philosophy.

Groups Not Far Apart

Despite the growing hysteria, despite all the clamor and the shouting, despite all the charges and countercharges, the various groups in America are not far apart. Only a very few Americans want to go to war. I respect their sincerity, but I prefer the judgment of the great majority who believe that to go to war is not for our best interests.

Who really wants war? Certainly the isolationists (with whom I cannot sympathize) do not want war. The President has declared on many occasions that he does not want war. Congress surely is dedicated to the task of keeping us at peace. Why, then, all the shouting?

Perhaps it is due to a certain fatalistic attitude, lately noticeable, to the effect that no matter what we do we are bound to be drawn into the war as an active combatant. These people who have lost hope for peace in America, I say, are the real defeatists. With such a position, I flatly disagree.

No Need For War

Unless we are attacked, the American people do not have to go to war. They will not go to war if they will to stay out of war. There will be no American intervention while there continues to be free and open discussion, while the people know all the facts, and while our system of popular government functions.

There are those who say if we stay out and Hitler wins we will be subject to a military attack by a combination of the totalitarian powers. On this question of a threatened invasion of our country, I said in my speech favoring the reelection of President Roosevelt that I have been a witness to a small but brave air force holding at bay an overwhelmingly superior air armada and preventing an invasion over but twenty miles of water.

After the fall of France and the retreat of Dunkirk the English defenses were in a deplorable state. Vast quantities of arms and ammunition had been destroyed and captured.

people obviously have not had the slightest desire to remain neutral in the face of the aggression of the Axis powers."

Kennedy said that only a very few Americans wanted to go to war, and the great majority felt that war was "not for our best interests."

Attack Is Factor

"Unless we are attacked," he said, "the American people do not have to go to war. They will not go to war if they will to stay out of war."

Kennedy said he regarded it "impossible" for a foreign power to invade this country, and likewise regarded it "impossible for us to invade Europe."

"Frankly," he said, "if I could be assured that America, unprepared as she now is, could be declaring war on Germany, within the space of, say, a year end the threat of German domination, I would be in favor of declaring war right now.

U. S. Not Prepared

"The inescapable point, however, is that we are not prepared to fight a war—even a defensive one—at the moment, let alone an offensive one. Furthermore, could anyone make a safe prediction that the war would be ended in a year, or even two, with that help we would be able to send?

"As I said in my speech for the President (declaring for the reelection of Mr. Roosevelt), I cannot see where we could get the ships to carry the necessary army and equipment for our participation in the war. Further than that, I really don't know where our army would go if we started off to fight a war."

There are those, he said, who say "we can go to war and yet not use our man power."

"Sounds Feasible"

"This sounds feasible," he commented. "Would it be feasible six months hence? I do not believe it. To me, we are either all the way in the war or all the way out of it. Even if it appears to be feasible today, let us not forget that never in the history of mankind have events taken place with such lightning speed."

Kennedy, noting that Prime Minister Winston Churchill had said yesterday, "We do not require in 1941 large armies from overseas," asked:

"Does that mean our boys are expected over there in 1942?"

There had been no debate on this country's "war aims," in the event we went to war, he said. He asked, "Are we to sign a blank check?"

30.24 -7031

Only a miracle had rescued its army. Even hunting rifles were being collected in England in order to equip part of their fighting forces. In spite of such handicaps, and in spite of the fact that the conquest of the British isles would have given Hitler domination of Europe, the Germans have never been able to secure a foothold on that island.

Mentions Risk

Consider what it means to transport troops and ammunition over 3,000 miles of storm-tossed ocean; consider what risks are involved in seeking to pierce naval and air defenses. What would our enemies use as bases for their planes, what as bases for their shipping? I have read that Dakar in Africa is only five or six hours by plane to the most easterly point of South America. But I am assuming that our policy with the other Americas will guarantee mutual protection.

But suppose a foreign power, by guile coercion or subversive activities, should secure the support of any of the countries in this hemisphere. We certainly have a right to expect that in their own self-interest the other countries of this hemisphere will, through diplomacy or force or both, insist that the principle of the Monroe Doctrine be maintained.

Severe Handicap

And mind you, even after an enemy had flown across an ocean, it would be faced with the problem of maintaining its forces and supplies large enough to cope with the resources of the North American content which would speedily be brought to bear against them.

Remember that the experience in this war to date indicates that ships even though protected with naval strength, face severe handicaps in seeking to land in the face of an attacking air force operating from a land base.

Reports from the Mediterranean seem to support this contention. Moreover, it is still very difficult to transport many tanks or many pieces of heavy ammunition in airplanes. I hope, therefore, that I am not too cheerful or too optimistic when I express confidence that we in America can successfully defend ourselves, assuming we avail ourselves of the opportunity to make ourselves strong.

And why shouldn't we have such confidence in ourselves? After all, we are a country of 130,000,000 people with a great record for vigor, ingenuity and bravery. For the life of me, I cannot understand why the tale of a great military machine 3,000 miles away should make us fear for our security. Let America devote its energies to armaments—those energies which have heretofore followed peaceful pursuits—and I have little doubt but that we can be secure against any power or group of powers in the wide world.

Another point frequently stressed in debates about our foreign policy is that if the Germans win, totalitarian system will ruin us economically. Let me state, first of all, that I believe that with the declaration of war on September 3, 1939, America's economy entered an acute phase. I opposed the war because I believed that the day Europe went to war, regardless of whether we ever participated, our problems from that minute on became critical.

I quite agree that if England were to win this war we would be a great deal better off than we would be if England lost. There is no argument on that score.

Point Of Argument

The point of argument, however, is on the question of whether to help England win the war we should get into the war ourselves, thus exhausting our own resources so as to threaten our whole civilization. Frankly, if I could be assured that America, unprepared as she now is, could by declaring war on Germany, within the space of say a year end the threat of German domination, I would be in favor of declaring war right now.

The inescapable point, however, is that we are not prepared to fight a war—even a defensive one—at the moment, let alone an offensive one. Furthermore, could anyone make a safe prediction that the war would be ended in a year, or even two with what help we would be able to send? As I said in my speech for the President, I cannot see where we could get the ships to carry the necessary army and equipment for our participation in the war.

Further than that, I really don't know where our army would go if we started off to fight a war. Just as I regard it impossible for a foreign power to invade this country, so do I regard it impossible for us to invade Europe.

Invasion Attempt

The British say that they have approximately one and one-half million soldiers under arms. Assuming that all those men could be used in an attempt to invade Europe and were not necessary for the protection of the Mediterranean or their own [illegible] and home, I fail to see by what process th[illegible] 6,000,000 Germans under arms woul[illegible] be overwhelmed.

It certainly can't be lurking in th[illegible] minds of even the most rabid inter[illegible] ventionists that we could send int[illegible] this kind of a war a sufficiently larg[illegible] expeditionary force to make up fo[illegible] the disproportion between the Germ[illegible] and the English military forces.

There are those who say, "Ah, bu[illegible] we can go to war and yet not use ou[illegible] man power." This sounds feasible to[illegible] day. Would it be feasible six month[illegible] hence? I do not believe it. To me w[illegible] are either all the way in the war o[illegible] all the way out of it. Even if it appear[illegible] to be feasible today, let us not forge[illegible] that never in the history of mankin[illegible] have events taken place with suc[illegible] lightning speed. Last February som[illegible] were calling it a "phony" war.

Germans Struck

In May the Germans struck. In sixt[illegible] days Hitler had conquered a large pa[illegible] of Europe. If we go to war our ma[illegible] power cannot be preserved from bat[illegible] tle. Only yesterday Mr. Churchill sai[illegible] "we do not require in 1941 large armie[illegible] from overseas." Does that mean ou[illegible] boys are expected over there in 1942

What would be our war aims? W[illegible] have not had any debate on that score[illegible] We certainly are not going into th[illegible] war just to underwrite the war aim[illegible] of another country without knowin[illegible] what they are. Germany under Hitle[illegible] has no war aims except to dominat[illegible] the world. She probably could no[illegible] turn back now if she desired.

England is, of course, fighting fo[illegible] her existence, but already we hea[illegible] dissatisfaction that the aims of th[illegible] British nation in this total war have not been set forth. Are we to sign a blank check? Common sense would seem to require that there be the mos[illegible] complete clarification of American aims in this conflict before we take the fatal step.

Lists Arguments

Some use the argument that should the Axis powers prevail they would inevitably impose on America a totalitarian regime. They therefore argue that we should go to war to prevent this. But have they considered that by becoming involved in a war they may lose the very thing for which they are fighting? How long could a democracy last while trying to fight a long drawn out war?

As Arthur Greenwood, the British labor leader, speaking in a debate at the Oxford Union, said: "If this war is fought to exhaustion, we will experience an impoverishment the like of which Britain has never seen.

"And we will find at the end of the road of all our bloodshed and suffering—not a democracy, but an authoritarian regime of the Right or of the Left." But we here in America do not want a dictatorship of either the Right or the Left. We want to preserve our democracy. And, ladies and gentlemen, we are not going to preserve anything by getting into this war.

"Terrible Future"

It is said that we cannot exist in a world where totalitarianism rules. I grant you it is a terrible future to contemplate. But why should anyone think that our getting into a war would preserve our ideals, a war which would then practically leave Russia alone outside the war area getting stronger, while the rest of the world approached exhaustion?

Suppose we go in and the war continues for two or three years. We will be paying the whole bill, make no mistake about that. Does anyone in his right mind think that the world won't be completely bankrupt? Mind you, even now we are supporting China financially and we have already made available $500,000,000 to South America to aid her economy.

Well, at the end of the war we win—so what? What is the status of the world? Who is going to reorganize Europe? England and the United States? But we are then in a bad way, and we must contemplate great internal problems of our own.

Taxes To Be High

Our taxes will be high; more people will be paying them; our national debt will be enormous; we will have an army to demobilize; we will have to readjust a whole nation, agricultural as well as industrial, in the transition from a war basis to a peace basis.

England will have the same conditions. Yet, to keep defeated Germany and the other countries from going completely Communistic, we will have to reorganize them as well as ourselves, probably standing guard while this reorganization is taking place. I shudder to contemplate it. Are our children's and our grandchildren's lives to be spent standing guard in Europe while heaven knows what happens in America? These are only some of the factors to be considered when it is suggested that we get in the war.

Hear It Called Duty

Another argument we hear is that it is our duty to go to war because England is fighting our battle, England is not fighting our battle. This is not our war. We were not consulted when it began. We had no veto power over its continuance. England's own leaders have told us why they are fighting. They are fighting for their very existence. It does happen that England's spirited defense is greatly to our advantage.

It is true—she is waging a war against a force which seeks to destroy the rule of conscience and reason, a force that proclaims its hostility to law, to family life, even to religion itself. Therefore we ought to arm to the teeth and give as much help as we can. But lets us do it on the basis of preserving American ideals and interests. But make no mistake, let no nation think that because the American people do not want war they will not go to war should their own vital interests be at stake.

One hears the argument that if war is declared the President will secure powers needed for our defense. The President has very wide authority under existing law. Congress, I feel certain, will give him all the power that the protection of American interests require.

Believes In Authority

The recent bill, H. R. 1776, called the "lease-lend bill," seeks to confer upon the President authority unheard of in our history. It seeks to vest in the Executive powers which the President says he does not want and would not accept but for the emergency.

The opponents of the bill claim that it amounts to an abdication by Congress of its responsibility and that it is not necessary at this time. Fortunately, out of the hearings the American people will learn what are the factors which it is claimed make the bill necessary, what is the meaning of its proposals in detail, and what powers are to be exercised. Personally, I am a great believer in centralized responsibility, and as a corollary, in conferring all powers necessary to carry out that responsibility.

Moreover, I appreciate full well that time is of the essence. Nevertheless, I am unable to agree with the proponents of this bill that it has yet been shown that we face such immediate danger as to justify this surrender of the authority and responsibility of the Congress. I believe that after the hearings have been completed there will be revealed less drastic ways of meeting the problem of adequate authority for the President.

Must Give Support

However, after there has been debate and a bill, whatever it may be, becomes part of our law, I think the duty of every American citizen is plain. All of us must rally behind the President so that he may carry on with a nation which has debated in the democratic manner, has acted in the democratic manner and is united in the cause of preserving our own democracy.

Regardless of what our foreign policy should be, it is obvious that a nation we must go "all out" for rearmament. It is only in this way that the American people can realize their national policy of security and their desire to help England. The more we rearm, the larger our arsenal, the more we shall have available for England.

No Need To Fear

There is no need to fear if we prepare. Our Bill of Rights will be intact if we hold a free and open discussion and maintain tolerance for those with whom we disagree. No one group or one class can possibly bear the burden of sacrifice which must be borne by every man, woman and child, rich and poor alike, even if our present program is the limit. But no burden is too great a price to pay for the safety of our beloved country.

Eventually we may have to fight to defend our civilization. The future in that respect is unknown and unknowable. Let us all appreciate here and now that come what may in the fortunes of war, our easy life of yesterday is at an end. Our lot in the future will be a difficult one—win, lose or draw.

"Enough Of Words"

America has had enough of words. Our friends across the water want more than phrases. Words will not give them armaments; words will not make us strong. America must unite—now. America must sacrifice—now. America must work—now.

I do not pretend that by staying at peace our path will be easy. But I do assert that by staying at peace we will be in a far better position to meet the gigantic problems we must face.

The American people want to aviod war. If the leaders keep constantly before them what war means in terms of human tragedy, if Congress is ever alert to the dangers of involvement, the national determination will be translated into effective action and his country will not go to war.

KNOX SAYS ARMING IS WAR PREVENTIVE

Nation Must Be So Strong Aggressors Would Fear Us, He Urges

But In Meantime He Would Send Aid To Countries "In First Line"

JAN 19 1941

[By the Associated Press]

New York, Jan. 18—Frank Knox, Secretary of the Navy, said tonight that this nation could avoid war only by arming the fighting democracies and thus help them hold dictators at bay while the United States made itself so strong "aggressor nations will be afraid to attack us."

"While we are thus making ourselves strong for the sake of our own security," he told the Canadian Society of New York, "shall we not lend every possible aid to those who are gallantly holding the lines while we prepare?

"Our own defense in a world where force is supreme is dependent upon our speed in production of those things essential to defense. Expanding our production to help the British directly helps us to achieve that speed in production which is our only hope of safety if Hitler wins in Europe."

Testified Friday

Colonel Knox testified before the House Foreign Affairs Committee Friday that 'if England is completely destroyed we will be attacked." Advocating Congressional approval of the Administration's aid-to-Britain bill, he emphasized the word "will."

He said the navy had been strengthened by trading fifty destroyers for eight British sites for naval bases, but that he opposed releasing any more vessels.

The Republican Cabinet member's broadcast address was generously sprinkled with what he called "grim facts" respecting this country's position in a war-torn world.

Summed up, he said, these facts

"constitute a graver threat to American security and future welfare than any we have faced since founding the republic."

Knox uttered unqualified support of President Roosevelt's aid-to-Britain policy and declared that the President's suggestion that this country eliminate "the dollar sign" from aid discussions was "one of the most courageous and statesmanlike proposals in American history."

A defeat of Britain, he admonished, would mean one thing—domination of eighty per cent. of the world's population by dictators who would impose on the peoples a totalitarian state while only twenty per cent.—"those peoples of North and South America"—would still be free.

Those who believe this country, after a fall of Britain, would still be free "from the danger of invasion when ever the German conquerors felt th time was ripe to garner the loot o the greatest treasure house in th world" were guilty, Knox declared of "the most colossal and inexcusabl self-deception."

Despite anything this county coul do, Knox went on, a victorious Ger many would penetrate South Amer ica—economically, politically and mili tarily—and thus establish a base "fron which she could operate a new terror.

Security Would Disappear

"Once that is accomplished, with European exits to the Atlantic open and no British fleet to control them," Knox warned, "the security now provided by the Atlantic would disappear and we would soon have, not what some of these appeasers call a 'foreign war,' but we would have a war on our own territory, with American women and children the victims of night-raiding bombers."

A victorious Germany, he said, would face this country with a 4-to-1 numerical superiority in naval power and only by "superhuman effort" and "frightful sacrifices" could this country hope to maintain "even a reasonable degree of freedom" on the seas.

GLASS URGES WAR ON REICH AT ONCE

Senator Gives Views in Interview Saying He Wants Hitler at 'Bottom of the Sea'

FOR EXPERTS TO DECIDE

Nye Says the Administration Leaders Have Built Up 'War Sentiment' in Congress

WASHINGTON, Jan. 18 (AP)—Senator Glass said today that it was his personal view that the United States should declare war on Germany now, but he added that the question was one which should be determined primarily by policy experts in the State, War and Navy Departments.

The 83-year-old Virginian, who has criticized many Administration measures but has supported President Roosevelt's foreign policy, was selected by the Democratic steering committee yesterday for membership on the Foreign Relations Committee, which will handle the Administration's aid-to-Britain legislation in the Senate.

In an interview, Mr. Glass declared that he would like to declare war on Germany at once "so far as I am personally concerned."

"But I don't know whether that would be strategically advisable," he continued. "It is a matter primarily for the experts of the State Department and the Army and Navy.

"Their opinion should carry great weight."

Mr. Glass added that he would like "to see Hitler at the bottom of the sea."

The Senator previously has expressed the view that this nation would be justified in sending its vessels into war zones to carry goods to the British—transportation now barred by the Neutrality Act. He also has argued that the United States could justifiably escort convoys of supply ships to Great Britain.

Meanwhile, Senator Nye of North Dakota reiterated his contention that thirty Senators would vote now for a declaration of war if the President asked it. Mr. Nye said that Administration efforts had been designed to "lead us into war," and that Administration leaders had managed to build up some "war sentiment" in Congress.

Youths Tear Down Swastika

Two Riot Calls in San Francisco After the Consulate Unfurls Huge Flag.

San Francisco, Jan. 18 (A. P.).—Two riot calls were turned in for the police today after several youths here ripped a swastika flag from a staff of the German consulate.

Several thousand persons jammed the street outside the building housing the consulate. Mounted police and patrolmen hurried to the scene. The crowd started gathering this morning after the big swastika was unfurled in celebration, the consulate said, of the founding of the Reich in 1871.

Several young men climbed the fire escape, made their way to the tenth floor, just above the office of the consulate.

From there one managed to get down to the staff on which the flag was flying. He reached out, grabbed one end, while another youth slashed at it with a knife. Some one in the consulate office discovered the trick, leaned out and caught one corner of the flag. Each pulled. The flag split in half. The boys took their half and scampered out of sight.

A police sergeant said the young men who ripped the German ensign were liable to prosecution under international law.

Just before noon a department store adjoining the German consulate broke out a huge American flag. The president of the store is Paul Verbier, a Frenchman who recently became a citizen of the United States.

Consulate today while thousands of spectators stood in the street and cheered.

The action, which Consul General Fritz Wiedemann immediately reported to the German Embassy in Washington, climaxed a morning of unrest around the building at 26 O'Farrell Street, just off Market.

The flag was being flown in observance of the seventieth anniversary of the founding of the German Reich.

The sailor was identified by Police Capt. Joseph Walsh as Harold James Sturtevant, twenty-two years old, recently a fireman on the destroyer Craven. He and a companion, E. G. Lackey, twenty-three, of Charlotte, N. C., seaman, first class, formerly on the destroyer Perkins, were charged with malicious mischief and held for the United States Navy. Four other young men who participated were released. Sturtevant and Lackey were on shore leave, awaiting mustering out of service. They were in civilian clothing.

The crowd began forming shortly after the Nazi emblem was unfurled when the consulate opened. As the morning advanced, the crowd grew larger, until an estimated 2,000 persons were gazing at the four-by-eight-foot flag. Police were kept busy explaining to protesting spectators that international law permitted the consulate to fly the German flag without also displaying an American emblem.

Wiedemann Cites Orders

Capt. Wiedemann explained that he was under orders to fly his flag on Jan. 18, anniversary of the Reich's founding in 1871, and said it would have been taken down at 1 o'clock, Saturday closing time for the consulate.

As the crowd grew, a small American flag was hung from the window of a vacant office directly above the big swastika emblem. A near-by department store hastily broke out a huge American ensign, twenty feet long and ten feet wide.

Several young men, who heatedly had protested the presence of the Nazi flag to police, finally went into action, ascending the fire escape to the ninth floor. Outside the windows of the consulate they shouted a demand that the flag be hauled in.

"Go on down, you must be drunk," Dr. Otto Denzer, Vice-Consul, yelled back. "If you don't watch out you will kill yourselves."

The group entered a tenth-story window and reached the empty office above the flagpole. While the crowd, which by then filled O'Farrell Street and overflowed into Market Street, alternately cheered and held its breath, Sturtevant slowly let himself down to the flagpole. With a penknife he began slashing at the halyard. When the rope was cut he attempted to pull in the flag, but Dr. Denzer and others in the consulate grabbed the bottom hem.

Slashed Flag With Knife

Shouting at the Germans, Sturtevant leaned down and slashed the flag in several places. Finally, Sturtevant's companions were able to grab a corner of the ensign and a brief tug-of-war between stories ensued. The consulate employees got most of the flag, which was badly torn in the middle and missing a corner.

The crowd let out roar as the emblem disappeared, then continued cheering as Sturtevant climbed back through the window. The flag was torn down fifteen minutes before the consular employees would have hauled it in.

"I couldn't let that flag stay up there," Sturtevant declared. "It was up to some one to get it down, so I just went up there."

"I'm from Charlotte, N. C., and there aren't any Bunds there," added Lackey.

Capt. Wiedemann said any further instructions would come from Washington.

The Consul General, World War commander of Adolf Hitler, declined comment beyond, "The facts speak for themselves." He said the German ensign had been displayed on previous anniversaries without incident.

Capt. Walsh, who conferred with Army authorities on international custom regarding foreign flags, termed the incident "embarrassing" to the American government. "The consulate is the same as German soil, and makes an incident like this international in character," he asserted.

As result of today's activity, the lease of the consulate was ordered canceled by the company which owns the building.

Washington Silent on Incident

WASHINGTON, Jan. 18 (AP).—There was no immediate comment by diplomatic or governmental sources here on the incident in San Francisco today in which a German ensign was torn from the German Consulate by two men identified by police as Navy seamen.

Informed persons said that the usual procedure was for a consulate to report such matters to the embassy here, which in turn would report to the Foreign Office in Berlin. If a protest was then dceided upon, the Foreign Office would instruct the embassy to make representations to the State Department.

The State and Navy Departments customarily leave such matters to the disposition of local police authorities unless a formal protest is received through diplomatic channels.

ST. LUCIA TO HAVE TWO U. S. BASES

Agreement Is Reached on Island Sites.

Washington, Jan. 18 (A. P.).—Strengthening its outposts for defense of the Panama Canal, the United States will establish two air bases on the strategically located British island of St. Lucia. An announcement by the State Department that final agreement had been reached on base sites on St. Lucia disclosed that a land plane base will be established at Vieux Fort as well as the seaplane base originally planned at Gros Islet Bay.

St. Lucia is in the Windward Islands in the Caribbean close by the French owned island of Martinique where French warships and planes are based. These islands have caused some concern to the United States because of the possibility that French colonies might be taken over by a victorious Germany.

Leases on the bases to be located on British territory in the Western Hemisphere—at St. Lucia, Newfoundland, Bermuda, the Bahamas, Jamaica, Antigua, Trinidad and British Guina—were received in exchange for fifty world war destroyers turned over to the British Navy.

Hull Says American Nations Are Co-operating.

Washington, Jan. 18 (A. P.).—Secretary Hull said today that no serious questions involving transshipment of war materials from South or Central American nations to Russia—from where they might be sent to Germany—had been called to the attention of the State Department.

The Secretary's statement was made in answer to questions by newspaper men involving reported leakage of supplies from Latin American ports, which the British say are detrimental to their cause.

The United States, as well as the other American republics, Secretary Hull said, was making every possible effort to cooperate in ideas, purposes and activities for the general benefit.

'Swansea Docks Hit'

[By the Associated Press]

London, Jan. 18—Five bombs fell in a London residential district this afternoon when German bombers made their first daylight raid on the capital in twelve days. The raiders, approaching from the southeast, were met by the fire of ground batteries. The all-clear came after about an hour and a half.

The sirens had sounded in mid-afternoon and heavy gunfire was heard at the same time.

The Air Ministry said the London bombs were dropped by a single plane, and said other raiders attacked localities near the east coast. "A small number" of persons were said to have been killed or injured.

Metal Center Raided

The port of Swansea, in South Wales, about forty-five miles west of Cardiff, bore the brunt of German aerial attacks on Britain last night.

The Government acknowledged that a number of fires had been started by the raiders, but declared the "situation was always well in hand" and the last blazes were extinguished early this morning.

Fatalities In Devon

The number of casualties in Swansea, a town of 165,000, near the mouth of Bristol Channel, was officially described as "not large," but some fatalities were reported at an unidentified place in Devon, in southwest England.

(Swansea has been described as "the metallurigcal capital of Wales" and before the war was the chief seat of the copper, tinplate and patent-fuel industries.)

Night Stab At West

In the early part of last night raiders concentrated on a town in the west of England, but were reported to have been driven off by a furious anti-aircraft barrage, which was said to have rocked houses.

Men 36 years of age were registered by Great Britain today for military duty, bringing to about 3,000,000 the total called to arms. Approximately 2,600,000 had been registered previously.

British Raid Axis Ships

[By the Associated Press]

London, Jan. 18—The Air Ministry announced today that R. A. F. bombers machine-gunned and bombed Axis shipping off the Dutch Coast yesterday, scoring direct hits on four ships, which left one sinking and another listing.

Only the stern of one vessel was visible above the water after the attack, a communique said. The tonnage of the vessels was not given.

Despite bad weather, British planes were reported to have attacked the Nazi invasion ports of Brest and Cherbourg and two airdromes in German-occupied France last night.

All of the planes returned from the raid, the communique said.

Royal Air Force activities during the night, the announcement said were much less extensive than on recent nights because of poor flying conditions over northwest Germany and most of the Continent.

One Gets Throug[h] London Anti-Aircraft Barrage; R. A. F. Hi[ts] Four Ships Off Dutch Coast

BY W. T. YARBOUGH

[By the Associated Press]

London, Jan. 18—A string of German bombers, crossing the Channel one by one, pounded the east coast this afternoon and one got through London's anti-aircraft barrage to unload five bombs on a residential area.

It was London's first daylight air alarm in twelve days and the Air Ministry acknowledged "a small number" of dead and injured.

Weather Causes Lull

Generally, however, bad weather forced a lull in the give-and-take air battle of Britain.

Up until late tonight no German raiders had been reported over any part of Britain since nightfall. Very bad weather conditions on the Continent were believed to be the reason.

Forays Restricted

Royal Air Force forays last night were restricted by the weather to raids on near-by Nazi-occupied waters and coasts. Direct hits were made on four ships off the Dutch coast, the Air Ministry said, one sinking and another listing.

British night raiders also were reported to have attacked the Nazi invasion ports of Brest and Cherbourg and two airdromes in German-occupied France.

Heavy Gunfire Heard

Although the London bombing was attributed to only one plane, heavy gunfire could be heard. The alarm indicated that others were trying to get through on the southeast approach to the capital, the air highway from the Dover Strait.

The brunt of last night's Nazi assaults had fallen on the South Wales port of Swansea, about forty-five miles west of Cardiff, but the Government said all fires were extinguished by early morning and the "situation was always well in hand."

Casualties in Swansea, a city of 165,000 population and an important center of Britain's metallurgical industries, were described officially as "not large."

RAIDS ON REICH STEPPED UP AS R. A. F. GROWS

Survey Of 1,400 Bombings Taken As Showing Rise In Air Power

Ruhr Industrial Area, Naval Bases And Oil Centers Targets

[By the Associated Press]

London, Jan. 18—Great Britain's air force, sharply stepping up its offensive operations during the past three months, made more than 1,400 organized raids on Germany between the start of the war and January 1, a Ministry of Information report said tonight.

Indicative of the increasing power of Britain's air arm in its role of staving off threatened invasion by striking at the sources of German power, the report pointed out that more than 500 of the raids were made since the end of last September, with special emphasis on objectives in the Ruhr district.

Third Of Targets In Ruhr

In "this heart of the German productive machine," as the report termed it, were more than 500 of the 1,552 objectives' listed as targets of the R. A. F. during the period covered by the survey. The onslaught on the Ruhr, source of most of Germany's steel and coal as well as many guns, airplanes and other military equipment, was stepped up by two-thirds during the past three months, the Ministry said.

"It received the most intensive hammering of any part of the Reich," the report continued.

Railways and communications topped the list in number of bombings with 459. Munition and aircraft plants, military stores and power stations formed the second ranking category with 316 attacks.

There were 254 raids on oil refineries and storage tanks; 199 on airdromes and sea bases and 25 on "other objectives."

Hamburg Most Often Hit

The north German port and railroad center of Hamburg was the city most often attacked—60 times, with Bremen, second only in importance as a port, near the top of the list. It was attacked 52 times.

Wilhelmshaven, Germany's most important naval base, was bombed 36 times up to January 1. Since then, there have been at least five additional raids on this North Sea objective.

Kiel and Eden, two other naval and ship building bases, were attacked 32 and 27 times, respectively.

Objectives in the Rhine industrial and rail center of Cologne were listed as bombed 55 times.

Attack Synthetic Oil Plant

The Ministry also cited as some of the "heaviest" attacks those on the hydrogenation plant which produces normally about 500,000 tons of synthetic oil annually at Leuna and the oil centers of Magdeburg and Gelsenkirchen, in central Germany and the Ruhr respectively.

Maps showing the points bombed were distributed with the report. An accompanying note asserted that a comparison of the maps with Germany's principal war industries "proves beyond all doubt that the R. A. F. bomber command is hitting Germany precisely where it will have the greatest immediate effect through the crippling of war activities and destruction of war factories and materials."

CHURCHILL ASKS CREDITS HERE

Needs More Arms Than Can Be Paid For.

Glasgow, Jan. 18 (A. P.).—Prime Minister Churchill has summed up Britain's 1941 war needs from the United States as guns, planes and ships—"far more than we shall be able to pay for"—rather than "large armies from overseas."

The plain-speaking Prime Minister, with President Roosevelt's special representative, Harry Hopkins, at his side, told the Glasgow city councilors in an unheralded speech last night that Great Britain has enough fighting men of her own to "hold the front line of civilization" with American aid in credits and supplies.

But he warned oluntly that "before us lie sufferings and tribulations" along the hard road to ultimate victory.

Proudly he introduced President Roosevelt's representative and declared:

"Mr. Hopkins has come in order to put himself in the closest relation with things here.

"He will soon return to report to his famous chief the impressions he has gathered in our islands. We don't require in 1941 large armies from overseas. What we do require are weapons, ships and airplanes. All that we can pay for we will pay for, but we will require far more than we shall be able to pay for."

Watches U. S. Process.

Mr. Churchill, speaking after a tour of air raid precaution and defense preparations with Mr. Hopkins, said he was watching "with deep emotion" the "stirring processes by which the democracy of the great American republic is establishing its laws and formulating its decisions in order to make sure that the British Commonwealth of Nations is able to maintain the front line of civilization and of progress."

Mr. Churchill asserted that Adolf Hitler will find Britain better prepared to beat off invasion now than was the case last summer or fall. He said flatly, however, that the war in 1941 would be no less terrible than in 1940, and added:

"Before us lie many months of having to endure bombardment of our cities and industrial areas without the power to make equal reply."

The British Prime Minister told the Councilors:

"That bad man (Hitler) has never had so great a need as he has now to strike Britain from his path. He is master of a great part of Europe. His armies can move almost wherever they will upon the Continent. He holds down eight or ten countries by force, by secret police and by still more odious local Quislings."

Sees Italy Occupied Soon.

He said this occupation of countries, to which "presently perhaps Italy" may be added, was building a "hatred for the Nazi creed and for the German name which generations and perhaps centuries hardly will efface."

Great Britain's improved position Mr. Churchill attributed in part to the success "far beyond our dreams" of the campaign in North Africa in which he said nearly 80,000 prisoners have been taken and eight or nine divisions of Italian troops, well equipped, have been dashed out of existence with inconceivably small losses.

He called the British counterblow across the Egyptian desert and into Libya a risk well run and declared it allowed "opportunity to address ourselves to the problems and the perils of 1941 with far greater advantages than were at our disposal six or eight months ago."

London Comments On Churchill Speech

Topeka, Kan., Jan. 18 (A. P.).—Alfred M. Landon, 1936 Republican presidential nominee, declared today that Prime Minister Churchill's speech at Glasgow was "a vigorous and forthright statement of England's needs" and added:

"It is perfectly obvious that Mr. Churchill wants to know if the Yanks are coming. He cleared away a lot of underbrush."

Nazis Reply To Churchill

[By the Associated Press]

Berlin, Jan. 18—Authorized Germans took the viewpoint today that Prime Minister Churchill's speech at Glasgow last night was directed at only one person—Harry Hopkins, special representative of President Roosevelt.

In that opinion the Glasgow audience was only window dressing.

(Churchill said Britain's war needs for 1941 were more guns and planes and ships than she could pay for, but that she did not need "large armies from overseas.")

"Not So Cocksure"

These sources said they thought Churchill had made some progress in now being only "moderately optimistic" and not as cocksure as formerly.

There were blatant discrepancies, it was said here, regarding British air power in the speeches of Churchill, British Air Marshal Sir Philip Joubert, and R. H. Cross, the British Minister of Shipping.

(In an address earlier this week Cross said that the British air force was forging ahead of Germany's. Sir Philip, speaking last November 19, asserted that the Luftwaffe night attacks on London were a major problem which at that time had not been solved Churchill said last night: "Before us lie many months of having to endure bombardment of our cities and industrial areas without the power to make equal reply.")

Ex-New York Reporter May Be Churchill Aid

London, Jan. 18 (A. P.).—A former American newspaper reporter may become Great Britain's Under-Secretary of State for Foreign Affairs, it was reported in political circles here today.

7,000,000 Tons A Year Declared Needed To Relieve Starvation Threat

Salter Confident Building Rate As Non-Belligerent Can Be Speeded Up

[By the Associated Press]

London, Jan. 18—Sir Arthur Salter, Parliamentary Secretary of the Ministry of Shipping, said tonight it would require a United States shipbuilding program as big as that of the World War to relieve Britain of the threat of starvation because of the losses due to German submarines.

Britain, he said, has bought all available inactive ships and is increasing her own building program, but will nevertheless need about 5,000,000 or 6,000,000 tons a year to feel safe.

Would Cover Losses

"We should like to see a building program in the United States as big as that of the last war, when the rate reached 4,000,000 gross tons a year," he said at a press conference. "That would give us enough margin to cover losses."

British losses since the Germans seized French air and submarine bases in June have been about 90,000 tons a week, or more than 4,500,000 tons a year.

Most of these losses, however, have been offset by building new ships and the purchase and transfer of Danish, French and other ships to the British flag.

Negotiating For Ships

Britain is negotiating now with Danish interests in the United States in an attempt to get control of thirty-eight Danish ships totaling 150,000 tons in United States ports.

Danish shipping already in British hands totals 344,000 tons.

Salter said Britain already had withdrawn most of her shipping from the Pacific and other non-essential routes, leaving the trade to the United States and other nations.

Confident Of Aid

He expressed doubt that the United States rate of shipbuilding as a non-belligerent could equal its wartime rate, but added he was confident it could be speeded up.

"I cannot believe munitions and airplanes America is making will stay on the other side of the Atlantic when they are needed here," Salter declared.

Nazi Raider Defied By British Skipper —At Cost Of Death

San Pedro, Cal., Jan. 18 (AP)—The story of how a doughty British sea captain defied a Nazi raider by sending SOS signals to attract British warships until his vessel was sunk and he and seven crewmen killed was told at Los Angeles harbor today.

The scene was described by Capt Leif Krogh, master of the Norwegian tanker Ole Jacobs, which the raider already had captured, between Singapore and Colombo, the night of November 10.

The raider ordered the unidentified British freighter to heave to.

"But the freighter defied the Nazi orders," he said, "and kept sending out signals in hopes that a British warship would come. So the raider fired."

FIVE BOMBERS SHOT DOWN IN RAID ON MALTA

British Report 3-Hour Attack by Germans; Heavy Damage Claimed by Nazi Sources

VALLETTA, Malta, Jan. 19—(Sunday)—(AP).—German Junkers bombers attacked this British Mediterranean Island stronghold for three hours yesterday afternoon.

Five bombers were reported shot down and a reliable source said another might have been brought down.

In three days of raids on Malta, the Nazis have nearly equaled the total civilian damage cused by Fascist aviatrs in eight months.

Two hstorc churches celebrated in the annals of the Knights of St. John have been shattered.

Natural Raid Shelter

The whole island is a natural air-raid shelter. As soon as sirens sound the alarm of attack the Maltese calmly go to their deep stone-hewn underground shelters.

Going ashore here from a British warship for the first time since last December 20, I found the islanders better prepared than ever for enemy bombers and Malta showing singularly little damage.

[In a broadcast heard in New York Friday describing a reported dive-bombing attack at Malta the night before, on the crippled British aircraft carrier Illustrious at Valletta, the German radio called it a "strategic event of great importance," and declared: "An aircraft carrier may be lost, but if it is lost in Malta it means Malta, too, can be lost."

Because of its geographic position in mid-Mediterranean, the island gives the British strategic service not only as a link between their naval forces in the eastern and western ends of the sea, but also in blockading Italy from her overseas empire.]

Maltese gunners who early established an enviable record for anti-aircraft accuracy daily are adding more planes to their score.

"Victory Roll" Seen Often

It is almost a common sight now to see a British fighter pilot's "victory roll."

During seventy-two hours ashore in Malta, I watched one fight over a British airdrome in which I saw the British quickly send two of a squadron of eight Germans hurtling in flames to earth.

Larry Allen, Associated Press foreign correspondent, who was born at Mount Savage, Md., was on the British aircraft carrier Illustrious when it was attacked for seven hours by German dive-bombers on January 10, off Sicily. Now the Illustrious has taken him to Malta, scene of subsequent German dive-bombings in which, the Germans say, the Illustrious was again hit.

Here are Allen's personal impressions of the position of this tiny and vital British naval base in mid-Mediterranean, to follow up his graphic eyewitness accounts of the January 10 bombing. Since the British Admiralty has not released anything about the alleged second attack on the Illustrious, Allen is as yet unable to deal with that specifically.

Malta Defies German Bombers To Succeed Where Italy Failed

Morale Of People Is Unshaken, Confidence In Britain High, U. S. Correspondent Reports

By LARRY ALLEN
Associated Press Correspondent

Valletta, Malta, Jan. 18—There is not the slightest sign anywhere on this British island stronghold that the heavy attacks of German dive-bombers, appearing suddenly in the Mediterranean, are going to succeed in what the Italians failed to do—make Malta give up.

The morale of the people of this ancient island appears unshaken, their confidence in British victory high.

[The British, reporting a heavy dive-bombing attack Thursday on the harbor and city of Valletta, said ten planes of a German-Italian raiding fleet were shot down and three others were damaged. Although there was some property damage, they said, there was very little of military importance and only "slight" civilian casualties.]

Both the Maltese and the British have a far greater regard for the courage of the Germans than for what they call the "safety-first" Italian bombers.

200 Raids: "Slight Damage"

The islanders say the Italians usually fly at 14,000 to 20,000 feet and that in more than 200 raids since last June 11 they have caused only slight damage, principally in wrecked homes.

What success the Germans may have remains to be seen, but, come what may, Malta seems now to be capable of defending itself and its defenders say they are resolved that nothing will break this link in the chain of Britain's Mediterranean power.

R. A. F. BOMBS SET FIRES AT TOBRUK

Ground Forces Prepare for Assault on Italians.

Cairo, Jan. 18 (A. P.). — British bombers raided the besieged Italian base of Tobruk, in Libya, Thursday night, starting two big fires in military buildings and causing ten explosions, the Royal Air Force Command said today. Smaller fires and one large explosion were also caused near the main quay, a communique said. Derna likewise was raided and a number of bombs dropped on the barracks there.

On the ground, a communique said, there was no change in the situation. The British were still preparing for an assault.

The airdrome at Martiza, Rhodes, was also attacked Thursday night and fires and explosions resulted, the communique said.

In Italian East Africa, the Caproni Works shops in the Mai Adaga area were again raided, the R. A. F. reported. One direct hit was registered.

A British communique late today was one of the shortest in weeks. It said: "No change in the situation."

KHARTOUM, ANGLO-EGYPTIAN SUDAN, JAN 18-(AP)-A BRITISH MILITARY MISSION HAS BEEN WORKING IN THE HEART OF ETHIOPIA SINCE LAST JULY TRAINING AND ARMING THOUSANDS OF TRIBESMEN FOR A FIGHT AGAINST THE ITALIANS, IT WAS DISCLOSED OFFICIALLY TONIGHT.

THIS DISCLOSURE CAME LESS THAN A WEEK AFTER IT BECAME KNOWN THAT LITTLE HAILE SELASSIE, DETHRONED BY THE ITALIAN CONQUERORS OF ETHIOPIA FIVE YEARS AGO, WAS RECEIVING A CONSTANT STREAM OF TRIBAL REVOLUTIONARY AGENTS IN KHARTOUM, ONLY 300 MILES FROM ETHIOPIA.

THERE HAVE BEEN ESTIMATES THAT 200,000 ETHIOPIANS WERE ACTIVE IN GUERRILLA FIGHTING IN THE INTERIOR.

JAN 19 1941

THE MISSION, PICKED FROM MEN WHO KNEW THE ETHIOPIAN COUNTRY AND DIALECTS, I' MADE UP OF A HANDFUL OF BRITISH STAFF OFFICERS AND INSTRUCOTRS.

WITH A CONVOY OF ARMS AND AMMUNITION, THE MEN SLIPPED BY THE ITALIAN BORDER GUARDS AND PATROLS LAST JULY.

DESPITE TROPICAL RAINS STILL FALLING IN SOME PARTS AND MAKING TRAVEL MORE DIFFICULT, THEY TREKKED 500 MILES INTO THE INTERIOR AND ESTABLISHED CAMP SOMEWHERE IN THE JUNGLE CLAD MOUNTAINS AROUND LAKE TANA.

THE CHIEFS AND TRIBESMEN FROM THAT DISTRICT WERE AMONG THOSE MOST STRONGLY OPPOSED TO THE ITALIANS, WHO, IT WAS ASCERTAINED, HAD NO AUTHORITY IN THAT PART OF ETHIOPIA.

A BLACK ARMY WHICH SOON WAS COUNTED IN THE THOUSANDS WAS RAPIDLY TRAINED IN THAT REGION.

A COURIER SYSTEM WITH THE BRITISH HEADQUARTERS IN KHARTOUM WAS ESTABLISHED AND REGULAR SHIPMENTS OF ARMS WERE SENT INTO ETHIOPIA FOR THE TRIBESMEN.

THE ITALIANS MADE REPEATED EFFORTS BY LAND AND AIR TO LOCATE THE BRITISH CAMP BUT FAILED.

NOW NATIVE WARRIORS, CRUSHED FIVE YEARS AGO BY THE ITALIANS, HAVE THE LATEST TYPES OF RIFLES AND LIGHT GUNS AND OTHER WEAPONS WITH WHICH TO MEET THE FASCISTS.

IT WAS SAID HERE THAT THE ITALIANS CONTROL ONLY THE LARGE TOWNS AND CERTAIN MAIN ROADS. ETHIOPIANS WARRIORS ARE CONSTANTLY HARASSING SUPPLY COLUMNS, AMBUSHING ITALIAN PATROLS AND TAKING ADVANTAGE OF ROYAL AIR FORCE RAIDS TO ATTACK ARMY CAMPS AND AIRDROMES SCATTERED OVER THE COUNTRYSIDE.

"Swansea Docks, Storehouses Hit"

[By the Associated Press]

Berlin, Jan. 18—Docks and storehouses at the South Wales port of Swansea were set afire by German bombers in last night's raids on England, informed sources declared today.

More English ports were reported mined.

Otherwise, it was said, German air operations over England during the night were limited to "armed reconnaissance."

No British planes were reported over Germany.

Loss Of Two Planes Admitted

The German high command said some raiders were over London yesterday and that direct hits were observed on tracks and buildings of a railroad station.

The high command identified the target of last night's principal attack only as "a western English port."

Two British planes were reported shot down in an air battle and a third by anti-aircraft fire. Loss of two German planes was acknowledged.

The general staff of the German air force declared today that only one German plane was lost in Thursday's raid on Malta in which new damage was said to have been done to the ...ish aircraft carrier Illustrious.

A German submarine was credited by the high command with sinking 29,000 tons of merchant shipping. The ships sunk were not identified.

A German speedboat attack last night on the southeast corner of England in which "several enemy destroyers" were encountered, was reported today by DNB. Because of the bad weather, DNB said, the effect of German shells could not be determined, but all the speedboats returned unscathed to their bases.

Stukas Bomb Malta, Airports in England

Berlin, Jan. 18 (AP).—Daylight dive-bombings of two airdromes on Malta, Britain's fortified Mediterranean island, and on two others in southeast England were reported by informed German sources tonight.

Nazi Stukas, accompanied by their own and Italian fighter escorts, were said to have scored heavily on the British mid-Mediterranean stronghold with bomb hits on hangars, barracks and runways.

Surprise dive attacks on the English airports, these sources said, caught the British defenders off guard and destroyed RAF planes on both fields.

They said the dive bombers were part of a Luftwaffe air fleet which attacked a convoy off the mouth of the Thames and "repeatedly" bombed London in a daylight follow-up of a heavy Friday night raid on the south Wales port of Swansea.

The German bombers were said to have inflicted "the heaviest damage" on the English airfields before the defenders could raise a strong anti-aircraft fire.

A 4,000-ton merchantman, hit squarely by one bomb and closely missed by others, was described as probably a total loss in the low-level raid on the convoy.

Besides leaving a whole area of Swansea afire, setting fire to a merchantman in the harbor and four waterfront districts, German informants said Nazi raiders Friday night hit the ports of Southampton, Bristol, Plymouth and Portland and smashed also at British anti-aircraft gun and searchlight emplacements.

De-icing equipment, it was reported, will enable the craft to carry out attacks in all kinds of weather. Details of the ship, known as the Focke-Wulf Courier, were withheld, but it was said that she was developed from the FW 200 Condor, a commercial plane which made flights to New York and Tokio before the war.

At the same time DNB, the official news agency, said that the 31,000-ton British battleship Malaya had reached Gibraltar with evident signs of damage inflicted during the raid by Axis planes on a British convoy in the Mediterranean on January 10. Efforts had been made to hide the damage with wooden structures and replating, the agency reported. It was suggested that the new bomber had taken part in this attack.

NAZI SPEEDBOATS IN RAID

Berlin Reports Attack on Southeast Coast of England

BERLIN, Jan. 18 (AP)—A German speedboat attack last night on the southeast coast of England in which "several enemy destroyers" were encountered, was reported today by D. N. B., official German news agency.

Because of the bad weather, D. N. B said, the effect of German shells could not be determined, but all the speedboats returned unscathed to their bases.

Six-man All-weather Craft Said to Range Over Ocean.

Berlin, Jan. 18 (A. P.).—Germany is using a new long-range, four-motored bomber in aerial attacks against British merchant shipping, informed spokesmen said today. Equipped with an undisclosed number of machine guns and cannon and carrying a crew of six men, the bomber has recently sunk "numerous British ships far out in the Atlantic," these informants said.

3,000 Britons Interned In Nazi-Occupied France

Men, Women and Children Are Rounded Up as Reprisal

BERLIN, Jan. 18 (AP).—Approximately 3,000 British subjects, including a large number of women, have been interned in German-occupied France, it was learned today from diplomatic sources.

The internment camps are reported to be situated, among other places, at Besancon, in the southeast, and Le Bourget, near Paris. The Besancon camp holds men, women and children, while only men are interned at Le Bourget.

As a reason for the latest roundup the Germans gave "military necessity." However, it was understood it was in part a reprisal for the internment of Germans in various parts of the British Empire. Sources here expressed.

Approximately 1,500 British subjects have been interned in various camps in Germany. One is at Liebenau, a second near Weissenburg, Bavaria, and a third is in Upper Silesia. In addition, a considerable number of Britons, mostly women, are at large in this country.

French, British, Belgian, Egyptian and Dutch nationals formerly were interned at the Weissenburg camp, but recently the French, Belgians and Dutch have been released.

Reich Won't Let Self Be 'Provoked' By U. S., Says High Nazi Editor

JAN 19 1941

Berlin, Sunday, Jan. 19 (AP)—Karl Megerle, chief editorial mouthpiece of the Foreign Office, gave notice today to the United States in an editorial in the Börsen Zeitung that Germany would not "let itself be provoked" no matter how hard America tried to pick a quarrel.

Megerle, foreign affairs expert of the Börsen Zeitung, said that America with a chip on its shoulder would not deter Germany from "carrying on the fight for freedom and justice for young nations until victory."

2,629 BELGIAN TOWNS SUFFER WAR DAMAGES

Department Of Commerce Says But 42 Escaped Invasion Bombs And Fire

JAN 19 1941

Makes Public Compilation After Surveys Of 2,506 Communes

[By the Associated Press]

Washington, Jan. 18—Only forty-two of Belgium's 2,671 cities, towns and villages escaped damage from bombs, artillery fire or flames during the German army's swift conquest of that little nation, the Commerce Department reported today.

In addition, it said, some damage still is occurring as a result of British air raids on German 'invasion bases" in Belgium.

2,506 Communes Surveyed

The department made public this compilation of damage obtained, it said, from surveys of 2,506 communes:

Private Residences—9,832 destroyed; 24,156 severely damaged; 116,170 slightly damaged.

Industrial Properties—352 destroyed; 839 severely damaged; 1,662 slightly damaged.

Bridges, Locks and Other Public Works—1,455 destroyed or damaged.

The Belgian National Railways reported eighty-five miles of track had been destroyed and the telephone and dispatching system severely damaged.

Economies Coordinated

"Belgian economy," the report said, "is rapidly being coordinated with that of Germany" with production and distribution of all goods, and the machinery of credit under German control, organized in the greatest detail.

It cited these examples of the manner in which Germany is carrying out an economy conquest of Belgium.

A military decree established "occupation marks" at a fixed rate of exchange as legal tender. "Occupation marks" cannot be used outside Belgium.

Germans Control Banks

All banking institutions have been placed under general control of a German bank supervision office, and the German-established Bank of Issue of Brussels has been authorized to issue Belgian bank notes as legal tender.

All Belgium's foreign assets, as well as gold and other valuables convertible into foreign exchange, have been placed under control of the German authorities.

All foreign exchange accounts and property in safe deposti boxes are blocked, and safe deposit boxes may be opened only in the presence of a German official.

Hardships Described

The German occupation has caused considerable hardship to the Belgian population, the report said.

All agricultural and food products, feedstuffs, raw materials and semi-finished products have been requisitioned by the German military authorities, making them subject to official distribution.

Food rationing has been instituted for all meat, grains, bread, coffee, butter, lard, grease, margarine, oatmeal, rice, dried vegetables, potatoes, sugar, soap, salt and edible oil.

"The daily bread ration of 225 grams (100 grams equals 3½ ounces), which constitutes the main food item, is entirely inadequate for the average person," the report said.

The meat ratio of fifty grams per day includes twenty per cent. bone. Milk is available only for infants and invalids. Practically all imported canned goods have disappeared. Coffee, chocolate and rice cannot be purchased. Tobacco is only sporadically available.

Belgium "must dovetail her economy into the necessities of the present situation," the agency said. No further details were given.

Says Roosevelt Looks for War

JAN 19 1941

Gayda Declares He Heads Group Which Seeks to Justify Entry Into Conflict.

Rome, Jan. 18 (A. P.).—The authoritative Fascist editor, Virginio Gayda, accused American "interventionists, headed by Mr. Roosevelt," today of seeking to provoke Germany and Italy into some action which would justify the United States in going to war against the Axis.

With a four-column editorial in his Rome newspaper, Il Giornale d'Italia, occasional mouthpiece of the Italian Government, Gayda cited the United States Senate Naval Committee's report on the naval construction bill, issued last May 15, as belying the argument that an Axis victory over Britain would endanger America.

"The Axis Powers are following firmly and tranquilly developments in the North American war movement which can worry the American people more than the war method," Gayda wrote.

Sees Move Toward War.

Interventionists, Gayda declared, are "throwing themselves into clandestine intervention with every means, in open provocation, with the most open violation of international law, hoping that the limit of the Axis Powers' toleration and war defense necessity will finally be reached and that reactions will come from them, which would then be passed off as a new aggressive move to which the United States would have to reply with force."

Answer to Roosevelt.

Giuseppe Bottai, Minister of Education, writing in his Critica Fascista, said "every one makes war as he wishes and can" and added: "The United States is carrying out a war against the Axis Powers and the tripartite pact according to its interests and the means at its disposal".

Gayda declared that his editorial answered the "malignant" speeches of Mr. Roosevelt and Secretary Hull "and their satellites" who define American aims in aiding Britain as defense of the United States against invasion and "defense of the people's liberty against the so-called tyrannical regimes."

Gayda insisted that the Senate committee's report showed that these aims "not only are inconsistent, but deliberately invented." International liberty as well as danger to the United States he termed as fables.

"What example of world liberty can the North American people themselves vaunt when they possess such a large part of the world's riches, such vast goods which are the first means of economic and national liberty of people?" he asked.

He concluded that American movements would "only prolong the war and its devastation, divide continents and disorganize Europe, profoundly alter the world basis on which North American banking and trade would like to expand and create an unequivocal responsibility before the world's history and civilization."

DICTATORS WILL CHART GERMAN HELP FOR ITALY

Berne Hears Axis Chiefs Will Confer Tomorrow at Brennero.

BALKAN MOVE A POSSIBILITY

Germans Mass Ground Crews at Airfields in Rumania, Not Far From Greece.

Berne, Jan. 18 (A. P.).—Diplomats in this Swiss city heard reports today that a full-dress conference of Adolf Hitler and Benito Mussolini, with their principal military, diplomatic and economic aids, has been set for tomorrow.

Although it generally was believed that the meeting would take place at Brennero, Italy, some sources suggested that Premier Mussolini might this time go to German territory, repaying Hitler's visit to Florence on October 28, the day Italy invaded Greece.

Several Moves Possible.

In any case, it was stated, the conference will be concerned mainly with German aid to Italy in her Greek and North African wars. Whether that aid will include a German move in the Balkans, a thrust at Gibraltar or simply German Air Force aid from Italian or possibly Albanian bases was a subject of speculation.

[The British Broadcasting Corporation today quoted the Lyons radio, operated by the Vichy Government, as stating that the Italian railways had been placed at the disposal of the general staff for the transport of troops and that "goods traffic is being almost entirely suspended until further notice." The British broadcast was recorded here by the Columbia Broadcasting System.]

No official confirmation of th meeting was obtainable in Rom or Berlin, but diplomats expecte none before the meeting is co cluded, perhaps Monday.

Nazis Set Up Air Bases in Rumania, Putting Greece in New Danger

BY CHAS. S. FOLTZ
By The Associated Press

BERNE, Jan. 18.—Amid indications of stepped-up German aid to Italy, diplomatic quarters here heard reports today that Fuehrer Adolf Hitler and Premier Benito Mussolini, with their chief military, diplomatic and economic advisers, would hold a full-dress conference tomorrow.

Whether it foreshadowed a German move in the Balkans, a thrust at Gibraltar or simply additional German air aid from Italian and perhaps Rumanian bases was a matter of speculation.

Neither Rome nor Berlin confirmed officially that such a meeting was set, but diplomatic sources said they expected no confirmation until it was over, possibly Monday.

The Brenner Pass, Alpine setting for several Axis conclaves, was regarded as the likely scene. Mussolini, however, may go to Germany this time, it was suggested, to repay Hitler's visit to him at Florence last Oct. 28—the day Italy's attack on Greece began. Some diplomatic advices said the dictators might meet at either Munich or Salzburg.

Among the conferees, it was said, would be Dr. Karl Clodius, German trade expert, who is due in Rome Monday with a delegation of thirty-five assistants for two weeks of what an official Italian announcement called "important" talks on trade questions under the year-old Axis commercial agreement and transportation problems.

Air Preparations In Rumania

In the background of the Axis conference were reports of intensive German air force work at more than a dozen large landing fields in southern Rumania, within bombing range of Greece or other Mediterranean areas.

Less than a hundred German planes are said to be stationed in Rumania now, but thousands of ground crew experts are reported quartered on or near all important fields with more arriving daily. Hangars and storehouses are being built and gasoline reserves piled up. Scattered around the fields, ready for instant action, are fast tanks which bristle with anti-aircraft guns.

Reports to the Yugoslav capital from neutral Balkan military observers indicated that one aim of the German preparations was to protect the Rumanian oil fields from possible British air attacks from Greece.

Listening Posts Reported Set Up in Bulgaria—Cabinet Shake-Up There Rumored

BELGRADE, Yugoslavia, Jan. 18 (AP)—Intensive German Air Force preparations at more than a dozen large landing fields in Southern Rumania led to predictions today that the Nazis may be arranging hopping-off places for new action in the Mediterranean area.

Although fewer than 100 Nazi planes were believed to be stationed in Rumania now, thousands of ground crew men are quartered on or near all important landing fields and more are arriving daily.

Vast gasoline stores are being concentrated at all southern Rumanian airports and crews and carpenters are working long hours on buildings, hangars and storehouses for munitions and bombs.

Civil airports such as Beneasafo, near Bucharest, have been taken over by German air units.

Within the last week the Nazis have inaugurated an elaborate twenty-four-hour defense of all Rumanian airports they have occupied. Their latest defense weapons are fast little tanks bearing powerful anti-aircraft guns.

New Air Raid Drills

Acting on a German suggestion, the Ruganian General Staff ordered new air-raid drills in Bucharest. Most Danubian towns are now blacked out nightly.

Military observers here point out that it is of no importance that no large Nazi bombing fleets are stationed in Rumania, since bomber squadrons could be flown down from Vienna in less than two hours.

The possibility that Nazi bombers might go to the aid of Italy against Greece was also noted, and it was remarked that Salonika lies only 250 miles by air from such Rumanian fields as the one at Craiova on the Danube.

Twenty-five German aircraft listening posts have been established in Bulgaria, all of them, according to reports, connected by telephone with so-called "German expeditionary force" headquarters at Bucharest, which recently set up its own telephone switchboard system. The entire German air preparations are in charge of General Speidel, who was on reconnaissance flight duty against Britain when he was ordered to Rumania.

Observers contend the fight which began last November over Russian insistence on the deciding vote is a clue to the state of relations between Berlin and Moscow.

The Soviet is said to consider control of the Danube River delta—its outlet into the Black Sea—tied up with a larger aim to eventually take over Moldavia and Northern Dobruja as well as maintain a hold on Bulgaria.

AIR ASSAULT ON GREEKS SEEN AS IMMINENT

[By the Associated Press]

On the Yugoslav-Albanian Front, Jan. 18—Greek sources reported tod that the Italians are bringing up strong reinforcements on all sectors of the Albanian front, including large numbers of Italian planes relieved from Mediterranean service by the Germans.

A concentrated Italian air attack apparently is imminent, these sources said.

Greeks Claim New Positions

Concurrent with the reported capture of 1,000 Fascist troops south of Valona, Albanian port which is the next major Greek goal, border advices said Greek units near the coast had occupied strategic new positions.

Greek charges on the northern and central fronts, however, were said to have been frustrated with heavy losses to both sides.

TWO ITALIAN TROOPSHIPS HIT, ATHENS CLAIMS

Attacked in Adriatic —1,000 Soldiers Taken By Greeks in Raid

Athens, Jan. 18 (AP)—Capture of 1,000 soldiers of Italy's famous "Wolves of Tuscany" division was reported by the Greek High Command today only a short time after a Greek spokesman announced two Italian "warships" had been torpedoed in the Adriatic.

The captives were taken, the High Command said, when Greek forces overwhelmed a Fascist fortified position northwest of Greek-held Klisura on the central Albanian war front. The spokesman said questioning of the prisoners disclosed they had arrived only recently from Brindisi, Italy.

[In Rome, the High Command said Italian forces in Albania repulsed Greek attacks in the southern sector of the war front.]

The Greek spokesman identified the torpedoed vessels as the Liguria and the Lombardia.

(The authoritative naval handbook, Janes Fighting Ships, does not list either vessel. Lloyd's Register lists a Liguria, a 174-ton merchant ship of Italian registry, but no Lombardia. The London Daily Mail quoted the Athens radio as saying the vessels were troop ships—the Liguria of 15,534 tons and the Lombardia of 20,066 tons.

(The Hamburg-American liner Resolute, a 19,703-ton vessel, was sold to an Italian firm in 1935, and later reports indicated she had been renamed Lombardia and used to transport troops in the Ethiopian campaign.

(An Italian troop ship named Liguria also was used in carrying troops to Ethiopia and was one of several vessels which brought Italian troops home from Spain in 1938.)

The spokesman quoted prisoners as saying many desertions occurred during the embarkation at Brindisi.

The port of Valona, Albania, one of the next immediate goals of the Greek advance, was bombed heavily, the Greek spokesman said.

(Reports reaching the Yugoslavian-Albanian border said bitter fighting was taking place along the central front in the ten-mile sector between Klisura and Italian-held Tepelini. Both Greeks and Italians were reported concentrating troops in that area and some military experts believe a decisive battle was developing.)

Greeks Report A Third Italian Ship Torpedoed

11,452-Ton Supply Carrier Attacked by Submarine Despite Warship Escort

ATHENS, Jan. 18 (AP).—Greece reported tonight the sinking by the Greek submarine Proteus of the Italian supply ship Sardegna, 11,452 tons. It was the third large Italian ship said in Greek reports of the last two days to have been torpedoed.

The Ministry of Marine said the Sardegna was sent to the bottom Dec. 29 despite a heavy escort of warships around a convoy. The Proteus has not returned to her base thus far.

[The Italian high command communique on Thursday said that a submarine rammed and sunk on Dec. 29 by an Italian torpedo boat, as reported Jan. 9, had been identified as the Greek ship Proteus.]

The other two Italian ships reported yesterday to have been sunk were identified as the Liguria and the Lombardia.

On land the Greek spokesman said Greek soldiers continued their action against "one of the best Italian divisions," the Wolves of Tuscany. Many Italians were killed, the spokesman reported, and 1,000 prisoners were captured from the 77th and 78th Regiments, including the commander, Col. Meneguetti. This fighting occurred in heavy snow northwest of Greek-held Klisura, on the central Albanian front.

The spokesman added that the Greeks had won a fortified region "of great strategic importance" defended by the Wolves of Tuscany. He quoted the captured colonel as saying: "The division literally was decimated during the battle from the 9th to the 17th of January."

The colonel also was quoted as saying that the division's artillery had not reached its Albanian destination "because the supply ship was torpedoed by a Greek submarine."

In day-long fighting over almost the whole front, dispatches from the front lines said, the Greeks pressed forward in the coastal sector under heavy artillery fire, forced the Italians back also in the central sector and bettered their position considerably, taking more prisoners, in the region north of Klisura.

Greek Freighter To Sail With Aid For Homeland

Nearly Half Of Crew Of Red Cross Ship Expect To Join Armed Forces

Bayonne, N. J., Jan. 18 (AP)—The Greek freighter Kassandra Louloudis will sail soon for the homeland on a mercy mission with 8,750 tons of Red Cross supplies below decks, but, says Nicholas Stratis, chief mate, "every man aboard who can enter Greek war service will do it the minute we get back home."

Fifteen members of the thirty-five-man crew plan to join the fighting forces, Stratis said.

"The others—most of them—are too old or must stay with the ship."

Loading of cargo is expected to be completed Tuesday. Included are food, blankets, medical supplies and ten motor trucks.

American Aid To Britain Stirs Italian Press To Cry Of Aggression

ROME MINISTER OF EDUCATION JOINS ATTACK

Bottai Accuses U. S. Of Carrying Out War According To Its Means

"Hidden" Senate Naval Affairs Report Quoted By Vita Italiana

BY RICHARD MASSOCK

[By the Associated Press]

Rome, Jan. 18—The charge that the United States already is "carrying out war against the Axis powers" in the tri-partite pact according to its interests and the means at its disposal was made today by one of Benito Mussolini's Ministers.

This accusation, written by Giuseppe Bottai, Education Minister, in his Critica Fascista was part of a wave of attacks on American aid to Britain in the Italian press.

Gayda Charges U. S. Aggression

Virginio Gayda, the highly placed commentator for Il Giornale D'Italia, said American "interventionists" by their intense activity were hoping to provoke the Axis into reaction, "which would then be passed off as a new aggressive move to which the United States would have to reply by force."

Said Gayda:

"Who is the aggressor? Nobody in Europe is molesting the United States. What obscure spirit of aggression is moving North American war currents against the Axis powers? What alibi to hide their premeditated aggression and pass it off as a necessary defense of life and honor can these currents—which already have gone voluntarily against the rights of the people and of neutrality—still seek?"

To Roosevelt, Hull, Stimson

Replying to recent statements by President Roosevelt and Secretaries Hull and Stimson, he cited a report of the United States Senate Naval Committee of last May as "advising isolation."

Bottai wrote in vain as Roosevelt, in one of his last speeches, seek to maintain that open American aid to Great Britain does not constitute an act of war. Everyone makes war as he wishes and can."

The authoritative Relazioni Internazionali called "the friends and associates of the English across the ocean" moral aggressors.

La Tribuna printed a cartoon showing British Prime Minister Winston Churchill firing a machine gun with a cartridge belt of American dollars issuing from the White House and, in an editorial, said the United States was "the enemy of Europe."

"Hidden From American People"

The monthly La Vita Italiana published what its editor, Giovanni Presziosi, said were excerpts from a report of the United States Senate Committee on Naval Affairs which had been "kept hidden from the American people."

He quoted the report as saying that arguments that America would be endangered by an Axis victory over Britain was "based on an erroneous evaluation of the facts and without military basis."

As a consequence, Presziosi said, the committee urged that the "United States should not interfere in European affairs, involve its finances in the present war nor engage its own industries in furnishing war material to foreign countries."

He said the report never had been published by newspapers.

La Vita's Contention Challenged By Walsh

Washington, Jan. 18 (AP) — Chairman Walsh (Dem., Mass.) characterized today as "absolutely unfounded" a statement carried in the monthly La Vita Italiana that the Senate Naval Affairs Committe had reported that arguments America would be endangered by an Axis victory over Britain were "based on an erroneous evaluation of the facts and without military basis."

Walsh said the statement apparently was an excerpt from a committee report made last May 15 approving a bill authorizing a 167,000-ton increase in the navy's quota of aircraft carriers, cruisers and destroyers.

While the editor of the Italian monthly, Giovanni Preziosi, said the report had been "kept hidden from the American people," Walsh said more than 5,000 copies of the report had been distributed. Excerpts from the report were carried widely in newspapers at the time it was made, Walsh said.

ROME REPORTS KENYA FIGHT

Says British Troops, Planes and Tanks Were Put to Rout

ROME, Jan. 18 (AP)—The Italian High Command said today that a "strong enemy attack supported by planes and tanks" had been "completely repulsed" by Italian troops on the Kenya front in East Africa. "Many losses" were inflicted on the British, the war bulletin stated.

On the Sudan front, the communiqué said, the British made an attack on a Fascist position with armed motor vehicles, which "were put to flight."

Increased artillery and patrol activity around the British-encircled Italian garrison at Tobruk, on the Libyan coast, also was reported. On the Jarabub oasis front, some 150 miles southeast of Tobruk, the communiqué said, "our planes bombed and machine-gunned enemy troops and motorized equipment." A British Hurricane fighter plane was reported to have been shot down by naval anti-aircraft fire during a British raid on Tobruk.

Italian aviation also bombed equipment and warehouses at the British base at Port Sudan, the High Command said, while British planes raided Jijiga, Diredawa and Gura, in Ethiopia; Berbera, in British Somaliland, and Toselli, in Eritrea, but "caused no damage."

British planes also raided an Italian air base in the Dodecanese Islands, but dropped their bombs in open country without causing damage after having met strong anti-aircraft fire, the Italians reported.

Under-age Volunteers Fighting for Italy

Milan, Jan. 18 (A. P.).—Volunteers under 21 years of age, who have been training since Italy's declaration of war, have left for the front lines in Africa, the Fascist university students' magazine, Book and Musket, said today.

These youths, who are under conscript age, numbered 20,000 when they marched across north Italy to training camps near Venice some months ago.

Italo-Reich Trade Talks

[By the Associated Press]

Rome, Jan. 18—Dr. Karl Clodius, German trade expert, will arrive in Rome Monday with a delegation of thirty-five assistants for conferences with Italian economic leaders, an official announcement disclosed today.

The talks probably will last about two weeks and will deal with export-import quotas between the two countries as well as between Italy and German-occupied territories, the announcement indicated.

The meeting, officially described as "important," was said to be one of a series growing out of the Axis commercial agreement signed a year ago.

Transportation problems as well as commercial questions between the Axis partners are expected to be discussed.

Germany understood last year to supply Italy's coal needs—about 1,000,000 tons a month—by rail, increasing the traffic through the frontier passes.

French Report Rout of Siamese In Indo-China

Say Invaders Are Repelled in Cambodia; Sea and Air Battle Is Waged in Gulf

SAIGON, French Indo-China, Jan. 18 (AP).—The French Indo-China government announced today that it had stemmed the Thai (Siamese) invasion of western Cambodia by throwing back a complete battalion of 750 troops which had been advancing along the road to Sisophon.

On the front to the north the Thai invaders shelled Savannenakhet and bombed Pakse from the air. Earlier, 1,000 Thai troops were reported repulsed west of Pakse.

The French announced that the two Thailand warships sunk yesterday by the French Asiatic squadron in the Gulf of Siam were destroyers.

Communiques of Belligerent Powers

British

LONDON, Jan. 18 (AP).—A communique of the Ministries of Air and Home Security:

There has been slightly more enemy activity over this country today. During the afternoon a number of enemy craft have crossed the coast singly. One of these penetrated to the outskirts of London and dropped bombs. Others attacked several points near the east coast. Little damage was caused. A small number of people were killed and a small number injured.

It is now known that an enemy bomber was destroyed in the attack on Swansea last night and another off the southeast coast on the previous night, both by anti-aircraft gunfire.

Another communique of the Ministries of Air and Home Security:

Enemy activity last night was directed mainly against South Wales. In one town a number of fires were started and damage was done to houses and commercial buildings. The situation was always well in hand, and by the early hours of this morning the last fires were extinguished. The number of casualties was not large.

At a place in Devon a small number of people was killed when several houses were damaged. Bombs dropped elsewhere did little damage and caused very few casualties.

An Air Ministry communique:

Yesterday afternoon coastal command aircraft successfully attacked enemy shipping off the Dutch coast.

Night operations were greatly restricted by bad weather, but targets at Brest and Cherbourg and two airdromes in occupied France were bombed.

CAIRO, Egypt, Jan. 18 (AP).—The British Middle East headquarters communique:

No change in the situation.

The Royal Air Force Middle East command communique:

On the night of Jan. 16-17 Tobruk was raided by bombers of the R. A. F. Bombs were dropped on military buildings, causing two large fires and ten violent explosions. Smaller fires and one large explosion were also caused near the main wharf.

Derna was also raided, a large number of bombs being dropped on the barracks.

Our fighters maintained the usual patrols, during which one enemy aircraft (an S 81 or S 82) was destroyed. Despite unfavorable weather, the airdrome at Martiza, Rhodes, was attacked on the night of Jan. 16-17 and fires and explosions were caused. The fires were still blazing when our aircraft left the target.

In Italian East Africa the Caproni workshops in the Maiadaga area were again attacked. One direct hit was registered on a large workshop and all other bombs fell very close to the target.

Assab was also raided, the target being near the motor transport park. Our aircraft also attacked motor transport near Berbera and gun emplacements at Zeila. From the above operations one of our aircraft has failed as yet to return to its base.

Enemy aircraft raided Summit on the night of Jan. 16-17 and dropped a number of bombs on the R. A. F. camp. Only slight damage was caused. The enemy raided other airdromes near Tel-Aviv, but no damage or casualties have been reported.

Greek

ATHENS, Jan. 18 (AP).—A Greek general headquarters communique:

Restricted local operations which were turned to our advantage.

The Ministry of Home Security communique:

No raids on Greece.

A Ministry of Marine communique:

On the morning of Dec. 29 the Greek submarine Proteus, under Lieut. Comdr. Michel Hadjiconstantinon sank the enemy supply ship Sardegna, 11,45 0tons, which passed in a convoy heavily escorted by warships. The submarine has thus far not returned to its base.

German

A submarine reports the sinking of 29,000 tons of enemy shipping.

The air force reconnoitered over British territory yesterday and attacked one London railroad station. The crew observed hits on the tracks and buildings.

Last night combat formations effectively raided a western English port. British ports were mined and war-essential objectives in London were bombed by smaller units. Two planes were downed in an air fight and a third by naval artillery. Two of our own planes are missing.

Italian

ROME, Jan. 18 (AP).—The Italian high command communique:

On the Greek front enemy attacks were repulsed in the 11th Army (southern) sector.

In Cirenaica there was increased artillery and patrol activity on the Tobruk front.

A Hurricane (British) plane was shot down by naval anti-aircraft fire during an enemy air raid.

On the Giarabub front our planes bombed and machine-gunned enemy troops and motorized equipment.

In East Africa enemy armored motor vehicles which approached one of our positions on the Sudanese front were put to flight. On the Kenya front we completely repulsed a strong enemy attack supported by planes and tanks, inflicting many losses. Our aviation bombed equipment and warehouses in the enemy base at Port Sudan.

Early yesterday morning, Jan. 17, the enemy carried out air raids on one of our bases in the Dodecanese. Immediately met by effective anti-aircraft fire, the enemy withdrew at once, dropping bombs at random in the open country without causing damage.

French Ship Seized In Blockade Dash

Buenos Aires, Jan. 18 (AP)—The 8,199-ton French freighter Mendoza, which has been trying to get through the British blockade to France, was reported reliably today to have been halted and probably seized by a British warship off the lower Brazilian coast.

The report said the British ship took action while the freighter was attempting to edge northward along the coastline.

The Mendoza was reported to have left Porto Bello, State of Santa Catharina, Brazil, early today, sailing slowly through dangerous shoal waters inside Brazilian territorial waters, where it was presumed that, under international law, she would be safe from search and seizure.

she remained in territorial waters she was calculated to be safe from British seizure.

(The generally accepted international definition of territorial waters is that they extend no farther than the three-mile limit. Thus the Mendoza would have been taken outside territorial waters.)

Planes Spotted Pair

The Naval Ministry's communique follows:

"At 6.30 A. M. today fleet navy planes patroling the southern coast of Brazil spotted—five miles off Ponta Itaporcocia, state of Santa Catharina—the French merchantman Mendoza with engines stopped and with the British cruiser Asturias near by. At 6.40 A. M. the two ships made away toward the high seas."

The Mendoza, carrying a cargo of food for France, left Punta Del Este January 15, after being turned back three times. The British auxiliary

Mendoza Is Taken Off Brazil Coast

[By the Associated Press]

Rio de Janeiro, Jan. 18—The French freighter Mendoza was intercepted today by the British auxiliary cruiser Asturias and compelled to follow the cruiser onto the high seas, Brazilian naval planes reported to the Navy Ministry.

The Brazilian pilots said the seizure took place five miles off the coast of the Brazilian state of Santa Catharina.

The Mendoza, laden with food for France, had been trying all week to evade British surveillance and run the blockade to France.

The 8,199-ton merchant ship left Porto Bello, Santa Catharina, early today after a night in port there.

Was Traveling Slowly

The Mendoza had been traveling slowly within Brazilian territorial waters, making regular soundings to escape dangerous shoals. So long as cruiser Asturias began moving in a parallel line outside territorial waters. The Rio Grande port captain reported yesterday the cruiser Ericksen had replaced the Asturias as the "watchdog" vessel.

Prize Crew Put Aboard Mendoza, Intercepted Off Brazilian Coast

Food-Laden Ship Thwarted In Fourth Attempt To Run Blockade

BY HENRY BAGLEY

[By the Associated Press]

Rio de Janeiro, Jan. 18—The British captured and put a prize crew on board the 8,199-ton French freighter Mendoza, which for the last week had been trying to slip through the British South Atlantic blockade with a cargo of food for France.

[Presumably she now will be escorted to a British port.]

The Brazilian Navy Ministry said Brazilian planes, patrolling the coast, reported the British cruiser Asturias, which had been following the Mendoza for days, intercepted her five miles off Ponta Itaporcocia, State of Santa Catharina, and that the two ships later stood out to sea.

Already Thrice Turned Back

The Mendoza already had been turned back three times before she sailed from Punta del Este, Uruguay, on January 15 and steamed along the coast, hugging the shore, while the Asturias followed outside territorial waters.

The freighter put in at Porto Bello, Brazil, last night and early today headed northward again through dangerous shoal waters, making regular soundings as she proceeded.

Prize Crew Put Aboard

The Asturias followed and apparently intercepted the Mendoza just outside the territorial limits.

The newspaper O Globo published a report from Santos, quoting radio messages heard in that port which said the Mendoza was detained "precisely where the ship was forced to get away from the coast line on account of the shoals."

A launch from the Asturias came alongside, the paper said, and sent a prize crew on board.

MEXICAN SEES U. S. ACCORD

Padilla Stresses Retention of Sovereignty Over Bases

MEXICO CITY, Jan. 18 (AP)—Foreign Minister Ezequiel Padilla declared tonight that Mexico and the United States are "pressing our negotiations toward an early agreement" on all issues confronting the two nations, "animated by a spirit of cordial collaboration."

He underscored Mexico's determination to retain sovereignty over any naval bases constructed in Mexico in collaboration with the United States, but declared there had been no "concrete proposals" on mutual defense needs.

"The Mexican Government does not intend to lease any property or part of the national territory to any foreign country," he told newspaper men.

Informed sources declared that President Manuel Avila Camacho's administration was as anxious as the United States for a comprehensive understanding because of the world crisis, and one spokesman said:

'The place of the United States and Mexico is shoulder to shoulder against any Nazi-Fascist threat and we ought to make it clear to the world as soon as possible."

Knudsen Is Questioned On Division of Authority

Admits There Are Two Heads in Production Office

WASHINGTON, Jan. 18 (AP).—Several members brought up the question of the division of power in the office of production management headed by William S. Knudsen and Sidney Hillman during today's House hearing on the lease-lend bill for aid to Great Britain.

"There are two heads to your organization, aren't there?" inquired Representative John M. Vorys, Republican, of Ohio.

"Yes," replied Mr. Knudsen.

"Did you ever work in any organization with two heads to it before?"

"Well," said Mr. Knudsen, "there was a chairman where I worked." (Mr. Knudsen left the presidency of General Motors to come to the government post.)

Mr. Knudsen later asserted that policies were formulated by the four members of the defense high command—himself, Mr. Hillman and Secretary of War Henry L. Stimson and Secretary of the Navy Frank Knox—and that he and Mr. Hillman carried them out.

Mr. Knudsen, who referred to President Roosevelt once as "my boss," was asked to state his relations with the Chief Executive.

"Why, I haven't had any finer treatment from anybody around here," he replied with a smile. "Naturally, I stick to my last, but whenever I have gone to the President with anything concerning my work, I've always gotten the most prompt action."

799 WARPLANES BUILT

December Production Beats Knudsen Estimate.

Washington, Jan. 18 (A. P.).—John D. Biggers of the Office of Production Management disclosed today that American aircraft plants had turned out 799 military planes of all types in December, substantially in excess of the prediction of William S. Knudsen, Director-General of the OPM.

Mr. Knudsen told the National Association of Manufacturers last month that advance estimates of production expected by January 1 had had to be scaled down 30 per cent from a 1,000-plane rate. Mr. Biggers told reporters that Mr. Knudsen's statement had "jolted everybody into extra effort," and that production was favored by "certain other factors." In January, he said, the aircraft industry expected to beat the December record "modestly."

The production of light, thirteen-ton tanks for the army is more than four months ahead of schedule, he added.

Plane, Tank Output Is Boosted

799 Aircraft Put Out in December, Biggers Says

WASHINGTON, Jan. 18 (AP).—Substantial speeding up of the output of war planes and light tanks, under pressure of American and British demands, was reported officially today.

American aircraft plants turned out 799 planes of all military types in December, it was disclosed by John D. Biggers, of the new office of production management. January production should exceed this total "modestly," he added.

The output of 13-ton, light tanks, for the Army was described as more than four months ahead of schedule.

The plane figures exceeded by some 14 per cent the advance estimate of William S. Knudsen, co-director of the Office of Defense Production Management, who told the National Association of Manufacturers last month that delays had forced a scaling down of expectations to a rate of only 700 a month by January 1.

"Mr. Knudsen's statement jolted everybody into extra effort and there were certain other favorable factors," Biggers told reporters.

Army Contracts To Avoid Issue Of Wagner Act

Compliance Requirement Will Be Left Out Unless Congress Orders It Used

WASHINGTON, Jan. 18 (AP).—The War Department, informed persons said today, has decided that the question of whether or not firms accused of violating the Wagner act should be denied defense contracts is a matter for Congress.

Consequently, it was said, the department will not write into its contracts a requirement that contractors comply with the labor relations statute unless it receives specific instructions to this effect from Congress.

Sidney Hillman, labor leader and associate director of the new Office of Production Management, tried in vain recently to have such a clause placed in two contracts with the Ford Motor Company.

War Department officials said they still had under study the question whether departmental contracts generally should include labor provisions in addition to those now incorporated, which require compliance with the Walsh-Healey public contracts and with legislation against the use of convict labor.

The Walsh-Healey and convict labor clauses are included in contracts at the direction of Congress. The legislators, however, have never directed that the labor relations law be mentioned in the agreements.

Under Secretary Robert Patterson, who handles contract matters, was described as being opposed to the writing of laws by administrative bodies.

At a hearing several months ago before a Congressional committee, Mr. Patterson said that the department took into consideration alleged Wagner act violations in deciding whether a prospective contractor's labor record was such that speed in deliveries could be expected. But he has never publicly made Wagner act compliance a positive prerequisite for obtaining defense contracts.

The National Defense Commission early in its career, issued a statement that defense contractors should comply with Federal and state labor laws. Controversy subsequently developed as to whether a violator was one convicted by the Labor Board, by a Circuit Court of Appeals, or by the Supreme Court. This question has never been settled to the satisfaction of many officials.

Blanket Export Rule Is Issued To Aid Canada

Hull Gives General License on 150 Articles Needed for Defense of America

WASHINGTON, Jan. 18 (AP).—Cordell Hull, Secretary of State, issued general licenses today for the export to Canada of 150 articles and materials considered necessary to the national defense. Individual export licenses hitherto have been required.

The State Department sent telegrams to all collectors of customs informing them that in the future individual permits would not be required for these items. This was in accordance with an executive order of Jan. 15 providing for issuance of blanket licenses for shipment of war materials to Great Britain.

Today's announcement said: "It will be observed that these general licenses cover all the articles and materials for which export licenses are required except arms, ammunition, and implements of war as listed in the President's proclamation of May 1, 1937; tin plate scrap; graphite; plans, specifications, and other documents containing descriptive or technical information within the scope of President Roosevelt's proclamation of Sept. 12, 1940, and Dec. 20, 1940, and all machine tools other than those specifically enumerated under license GDG 1."

[License GDG 1 designates a long list of machine tools including threading machines, band saws, filing machines, burnishing machines and other similar equipment].

All other articles and materials for which a license is required may be exported freely to Canada under the general license, the announcement said.

Secretary Hull said that no serious questions involving transhipment of war materials from South or Central American nations to Russia—whence they might be sent to Germany—had been called to the attention of the State Department.

The Secretary's statement was made in answer to questions by newspaper men involving reported leakage of supplies from Latin American ports, which the British say are detrimental to their cause.

The United States, as well as the other American republics, Secretary Hull said, was making every possible effort to co-operate in ideas, purposes and activities for the general benefit of the Americas. With international trade seriously dislocated, Mr. Hull pointed out, it was possible that some individual shipments might fall under the suspicion of being destined for Germany by a circuitous route.

Class 1 Ruling Temporary For Menuhin, Violinist

Family Status Under 'Intelligent Discussion' by Board

LOS GATOS, Calif., Jan. 18 (AP).—Yehudi Menuhin, twenty-four-year-old married violinist placed in Class 1 by the local draft board, was notified today the ruling was temporary. The original decision caused widespread interest to men of draft age, since many had supposed that married men with families were to get deferred ratings for the present, regardless of whether the families had independent means of support.

"Action of Local Board 113 in placing you temporarily in Class 1 was due to conflicting requests," the board wired Mr. Menuhin, "and for purpose of clarification of yours and similar cases. . . . Under no circumstances consider your case closed, but merely in process of intelligent discussion involving you and all other Americans in similar financial and family category."

The violinist wired "The San Jose Mercury-Herald" that:

"My intentions are to do my bit in the capacity most serviceable to my country without jeopardizing the security of my wife and children."

Moshe Menuhin denied that his son's wife had independent means. He had not asked deferment for the violinist but merely permission to leave the country for a concert tour. This was granted.

Conscientious Objectors Will Get Chance to Fight

Men Drafted for Noncombatant Units May Change Minds

WASHINGTON, Jan. 18 (AP).—Conscientious objectors drafted into Army non-combatant services will have an opportunity later to change their minds and be transferred to fighting branches. The War Department disclosed this today in announcing the specific non-combatant units to which conscientious objectors will be assigned. Such a man will be permitted to transfer to combatant services, through a voluntary, written request, it was said.

The field forces to which objectors can be assigned include any medical department unit; any quartermaster unit except those organically assigned to divisions or smaller units; decontamination companies only of the chemical warfare service; construction, photographic, depot, repair or pigeon units of the Signal Corps, and any engineer unit except those organized for fighting.

Draft Registrants Warned

Prompt Notification of Changed Address to Local Boards Urged

WASHINGTON, Jan. 18 (AP).—Dr. Clarence A. Dykstra, selective service director, warned draft registrants today against failure to notify their local boards promptly of changes of address.

Dr. Dykstra said in a statement that the Justice Department had found many failures to respond to summons for military service resulted from unreported changes of address. The draft law provides that mailing a summons to the last reported address constitutes formal notice, regardless if it is received.

JAN 19 1941

AS BRITAIN APPROACHES HER FURTHER TRIAL BY SWORD IN THE HANDS OF HITLER--A SUPREME EFFORT TO CRUSH THE ISLAND KINGDOM ITSELF--ONE GAINS THE VERY DEFINITE IMPRESSION THAT IT IS A NEW NATION, WITH A FRESH UNITY OF PURPOSE, WHICH IS FACING THE COMING BLITZKRIEG.

THE FIERCE STRUGGLE FOR SURVIVAL, IN WHICH ALL CLASSES OF SOCIETY HAVE BEEN THROWN TOGETHER FOR THE COMMON DEFENSE AS NEVER BEFORE, HAS MADE OF THE BRITISH ISLES A VAST MELTING-POT. FROM THIS IS LIKELY TO EMERGE A NEW SOCIAL AND ECONOMIC STRUCTURE.

I DON'T MEAN TO SUGGEST THAT WE ARE TO EXPECT A UTOPIA IN WHICH THE DUCHESS AND THE STABLE BOY, THE DUKE AND THE SCULLERY-MAID, WILL BE DANCING TOGETHER WITH THE CROWD ON THE VILLAGE GREEN. STILL, IF SIGNS READ TRUE THIS NEW SOCIAL ORDER WILL REFLECT MORE NEARLY THAT EQUALITY AND FRATERNAL UNDERSTANDING WHICH DAILY IS BEING EXEMPLIFIED IN THE SHOULDER-TO-SHOULDER BATTLE FOR EXISTENCE.

THAT MEANS A GREAT CHANGE IN ENGLAND. HONESTY AND FRANKNESS COMPEL ACKNOWLEDGEMENT THAT CLASS DISTINCTIONS, AND INEQUALITY OF PRIVILEGES, HAVE BEEN GREAT IN THE PAST. HOWEVER, THERE ARE NO CLASS DIFFERENCES OR INEQUALITY OF PRIVILEGES WHEN IT COMES TO COMMON EFFORT IN DIGGING FOR VICTIMS BURIED BY BOMBING, THE SHARING OF UNDERGROUND SHELTERS, AND THE PARTAKING OF FOOD FROM HUMBLE COMMUNITY KITCHENS.

BRITAIN HAS NOT, SINCE HER FULL NATIONHOOD, STOOD SO CLOSE TO DEATH AS SHE HAS DURING THE PAST NINE MONTHS. IN THAT TIME SHE HAS LEARNED THAT BOMBS ARE NO RESPECTERS OF PERSONS; THAT PRIVATION ISN'T THE CROSS OF ANY SPECIAL CLASS; AND THAT, IN SHORT, IF A NATION IS TO SURVIVE IT MUST ADHERE TO THE PRINCIPLE OF ONE FOR ALL AN ALL FOR ONE.

OTHER NATIONS ARE LEARNING THESE TRUTHS IN A HARD WAY, TOO. I AM CONFINING MY REMARKS TO BRITAIN BECAUSE IN RECENT DAYS THERE HAS BEEN STRIKING PUBLIC RECOGNITION IN ENGLAND OF THIS NEED OF A REMOULDING OF SOCIETY.

ONE OF THE FIRST SIGNALS OF THIS CHANGING ORDER CAME RECENTLY FRON ERNEST BEVIN. HE IS MINISTER OF LABOR, LEADER OF THE LABOR PARTY, AND SECRETARY OF THE GREAT TRANSPORT AND GENERAL WORKERS UNION. HIS ADMIRERS OFTEN SPEAK OF HIM AS A FUTURE PRIME MINISTER.

EITHER. THINGS CAN NEVER BE AS THEY WERE. THE OLD AGE HAS PASSED. A NEW AGE HAS TO BE BUILT."

THUS SPOKE THE LABORING MAN. AND SHORTLY ALONG CAME THE ARISTOCRAT--PREMIER WINSTON CHURCHILL, THROUGH WHOSE VEINS RUNS THE BLUEST BLOOD IN BRITAIN. IN A SPEECH AT THE ANCIENT AND EXCLUSIVE PUBLIC (WE CALL IT PRIVATE IN AMERICA) SCHOOL OF HARROW, CHURCHILL SAID:

"WHEN THIS WAR IS WON, AS IT SURELY WILL BE, IT MUST BE ONE OF OUR AIMS TO ESTABLISH A STATE OF SOCIETY WHERE THE ADVANTAGES AND PRIVILEGES WHICH HITHERTO HAVE BEEN ENJOYED BY ONLY THE FEW SHALL BE FAR MORE WIDELY SHARED BY THE MEN AND YOUTH OF THE NATION AS A WHOLE."

TO GET THE FULL SIGNIFICANCE OF SUCH A STATEMENT YOU MUST KNOW YOUR ENGLAND. THE GREAT PUBLIC SCHOOLS LIKE HARROW AND ETON HAVE REPRESENTED THE LAST WORD IN ARISTOCRACY. IT HAS BEEN HARDER (IF NOT IMPOSSIBLE) FOR A PLEBIAN TO GET INTO ONE OF THESE SCHOOLS THAN FOR THE CAMEL TO PASS THROUGH THE NEEDLE'S EYE.

WHEN I FIRST WENT TO ENGLAND TWENTY-FIVE YEARS AGO, PUBLIC SCHOOL BOYS ALMOST INVARIABLY WERE GIVEN PREFERENCE WHEN SEEKING EMPLOYMENT. THIS WAS NOT BECAUSE THEY WERE SMARTER THAN THE GRADUATES OF COMMON SCHOOLS, BUT BECAUSE THEY REPRESENTED THE ARISTOCRACY.

THAT SAME PATTERN RAN PRETTY MUCHTHROUGH THE WHOLE SOCIAL, POLITICAL AND ECONOMIC LIFE OF THE COUNTRY. SINCE THE WORLD WAR THERE HAS BEEN A CONSIDERABLE CHANGE, BUT IT HAS TAKEN THE PRESENT THREAT OF EXTINCTION TO PRODUCE SUCH ASTONISHING DECLARATIONS AS I HAVE QUOTED, AND SUCH AS CONTAINED IN A RECENT LETTER TO THE LONDON TIMES BY THE COUNTRY'S PROTESTANT AND ROMAN CATHOLIC LEADERS.

THESE RELIGIOUS FIGURES, IN OUTLINING WHAT THEY TERMED THE ONLY PERMANENT BASIS FOR LASTING PEACE, URGED FIVE STANDARDS, WHICH INCLUDED THESE TWO:

(WX) INTERPRETING THE WAR NEWS

BY KIRKE L.SIMPSON

JAN 19 1941

PRIME MINISTER WINSTON CHURCHILL, CASTING UP THE BALANCE OF HEAVY ODDS IMPOSED ON ENGLAND BY FRENCH COLLAPSE, SAID SEVEN MONTHS AGO THAT THE OUTCOME TURNED ON ONE "GREAT QUESTION--CAN WE BREAK HITLER'S AIR WEAPON?"

BRITAIN HAS TESTED THAT WEAPON SINCE, HAS ENDURED NAZI BOMBING FOR THAT PERIOD WITH UNFALTERING COURAGE AND IS INCREASINGLY STRIKING BACK BY AIR. SHE HAS BEEN BOLSTERED BY CRUSHING GREEK AND BRITISH DEFEATS OF ITALY IN THE EAST.

CHURCHILL REINFORCED HIS PREDICTIONS OF LAST SUMMER IN AN ADDRESS AT GLASGOW FRIDAY NIGHT. HE ASSERTED HITLER WOULD FIND BRITAIN BETTER PREPARED TO BEAT OFF INVASION NOW THAN WAS THE CASE LAST SUMMER OR FALL. HE ATTRIBUTED BRITAIN'S IMPROVED POSITION IN PAR. TO THE SUCCESS "FAR BEYOND OUR DREAMS" OF THE CAMPAIGN IN NORTH AFRICA.

BUT, SAID THE PRIME MINISTER, "BEFORE US LIE MANY MONTHS OF HAVING TO ENDURE BOMBARDMENT OF OUR CITIES AND INDUSTRIAL AREAS WITHOUT THE POWER TO MAKE EQUAL REPLY." THEREUPON HE SUMMED UP BRITAIN'S 1941 WAR NEEDS FROM THE UNITED STATES AS GUNS, PLANES AND SHIPS IN QUANTITIES "FAR MORE THAN WE SHALL BE ABLE TO PAY FOR" RATHER THAN "LARGE ARMIES FROM OVERSEAS."

HARRY L.HOPKINS, PRESIDENT ROOSEVELT'S SPECIAL REPRESENTATIVE, SAT AT CHURCHILL'S SIDE AS THE PRIME MINISTER GAVE THIS ACCOUNTING.

FOR SEVEN MONTHS BRITISH FIGHTER PILOTS, AGAINST ALL ODDS, HAVE KEPT ENGLAND SAFE FROM INVASION; DOMINATED THE DAYLIGHT AIRWAYS OVER ENGLAND. THERE HAVE BEEN MANY MIRACLES IN THIS WAR, LIKE THE ESCAPE FROM DUNKIRK WHERE THOSE BRITISH FIGHTER PILOTS ACHIEVED THE SEEMINGLY IMPOSSIBLE.

THE EIGHTH MONTH OPENS WITH BRITISH BOMBER CREWS RIVALING THE EXPLOITS OF THEIR FIGHTER COMRADES ON MANY FRONTS. DAY BY DAY AND NIGHT BY NIGHT, THEY ARE CARRYING THE WAR TO THE FOE IN AFRICA, IN ALBANIA, IN FRANCE, IN THE LOW COUNTRIES, IN NORWAY AND EVEN IN GERMANY.

GERMANY ADMITTED TWO PLANE LOSSES, AN ~~ARR~~ UNOFFICIAL CHECK SHOWED, WHILE THE BRITISH CLAIMED TO HAVE SHOT DOWN FIVE GERMAN MACHINES.

FOR THE PREVIOUS WEEK, GERMANY CLAIMED 13 BRITISH AGAINST SEVEN GERMAN PLANES AND BRITAIN CLAIMED 12 GERMAN AGAINST TWO BRITISH LOSSES.

THAT IS THE SIGNIFICANT FACT OF THE WAR TODAY. IT MEANS NOT ONLY THAT A GRIMLY TESTED AND BETTER ARMED ENGLAND AWAITS GERMANY'S NEXT MOVE AT HOME; BUT THAT BRITAIN HAS FOUND AS WELL THE MEANS THERE AND IN HER VAST EMPIRE TO WREST THE INITIATIVE FROM HER FOES ON REMOTE FRONTS. SHE IS HAMMERING IN THE EAST TO SHATTER THE AXIS FELLOWSHIP BY KNOCKING ITALY OUT OF THE WAR.

CHURCHILL MAY HOPE FOR--INSTEAD OF DREAD--AN ATTEMPTED GERMAN INVASION OF ENGLAND, UTTERLY CONFIDENT THAT IT COULD BE REPELLED AND MIGHT BE TURNED INTO A DISASTER THAT WOULD SHAKE NAZISM IN GERMANY AS HE BELIEVES ITALIAN DEFEATS HAVE ROCKED THE FASCIST REGIME.

IN THIS CONNECTION, THERE IS INTEREST TO BE FOUND IN SWISS "LISTENING POST" REPORTS THAT A CONFERENCE OF HITLER AND MUSSOLINI, ATTENDED BY THEIR MILITARY, DIPLOMATIC AND ECONOMIC AIDES, IS SET FOR TODAY (SUNDAY.)

Diary Of The War

[By the Associated Press]

Large squadrons of German dive-bombers again attacked the British Mediterranean island fortress of Malta yesterday afternoon amid reports Premier Benito Mussolini intends to see Adolf Hitler today, possibly to discuss further Nazi aid for his hard-pressed legions fighting in Albania and Libya.

An Associated Press correspondent at Malta cabled that he found singularly little damage there, and said there was not the "slightest sign anywhere" that the German attack would succeed in doing what the Italians failed to do—make Malta give up.

Italo-Greek War

The Athenian Marine Ministry reported the Greek submarine Proteus sank the 11,450-ton Italian supply ship Sardegna December 29, but that the Proteus thus far had not returned to base. The Sardegna was the third Italian ship recently reported sunk by the Greeks.

Big reinforcements are going to Albania from Italy, dispatches from the Yugoslav-Albania frontier said. Italian planes, relieved from Mediterranean service by the Germans, also are being sent to Albania, it was said.

On Libyan Front

On the Libyan front there was little change. The British continued to bring up artillery and make their preparations for the big assault on Tobruk.

The Nile valley was raided by Italian planes for the first time since early December.

Sea And Air War

Informed sources in Berlin said German planes had successfully attacked a London convoy and two British airports yesterday. The weather was bad, a blizzard raged across the Dover Straits, but German planes nevertheless crossed to Britain, one by one, and pounded the east coast. One got through to London and unloaded five bombs on a residential district—the capital's first daylight raid in twelve days.

U. S. Under Fire In Rome

In Rome one of Mussolini's ministers, Giuseppe Bottai, of the Educational Department, charged in his Critica Fascista that the United States already was "carrying out war against the Axis powers and the tripartite pact according to its interests and the means at its disposal."

Virginio Gayda, Fascist commentator for Il Giornale d'Italia, said American "interventionists" by intense activity were hoping to provoke the Axis into reaction "which would then be passed off as a new aggressive move to which the United States would have to reply by force."

Food Ship Captured

The 8,199-ton French freighter Mendoza, carrying food for France, was captured off the southern Brazilian coast by a British cruiser she had dodged for nearly a week in an attempt to run the South Atlantic blockade.

IMPORTANT TO MORALE (1100)

(EDITOR'S NOTE: ASSOCIATED PRESS CORRESPONDENT DWIGHT PITKIN, WHO COVERED THE CIVIL WAR IN SPAIN--WHICH PRODUCED THE TERM "FIFTH COLUMN"--RETURNED RECENTLY FROM A POST IN ENGLAND. IN THE LIGHT OF HIS EXPERIENCES, HE TELLS WHY BRITAIN NO LONGER FEARS A FIFTH COLUMN.)

BY DWIGHT PITKIN

(ADVANCE) NEW YORK, JAN 18-(AP)-ENGLISHMEN SAY THEY ARE CONFIDENT BRITAIN HAS NO FIFTH COLUMN MENACE.

THEY GIVE THESE REASONS:

1. THE BRITISH ARE ONE OF THE MOST PATRIOTIC PEOPLES IN THE WORLD.

2. THE BRITISH GOVERNMENT, WHEN DANGER OF INVASION BECAME REAL, SLAPPED INTO JAIL OR INTERNMENT CAMPS THE PEOPLE WHO WERE MOST LIKELY TO CAUSE FIFTH COLUMN TROUBLE.

3. MOST OF THE PEOPLE IN ENGLAND WHO HAD ANY TENDENCIES TOWARDS FIFTH COLUMNISM WERE SOBERED WHEN THEY SAW WHAT HAPPENED IN FRANCE AND OTHER EUROPEAN COUNTRIES CONQUERED BY LIGHTNING WAR.

4. BRITAIN HAS A TRADITIONALLY FREE PRESS WHICH WON'T SUBMIT TO THE TYPE OF CENSORSHIP WHICH PERMITTED FIFTH COLUMNISTS TO GAIN A FOOTHOLD IN FRANCE.

JUST WHAT, REALLY, IS A FIFTH COLUMN?

THE TERM HAD ITS ORIGIN IN THE SPANISH CIVIL WAR. IN THE AUTUMN OF 1936 THE FORCES OF THE INSURGENT CHIEF, GENERALISSIMO FRANCISCO FRANCO, WERE MARCHING ON MADRID AFTER CAPTURING TOLEDO.

QUICK VICTORY SEEMED WITHIN THEIR GRASP. BOASTING THAT THE OCCUPATION OF THE REPUBLICAN CAPITAL WAS IMMINENT, FRANCO'S ACE GENERAL, EMILIO MOLA, REMARKED:

"WE HAVE FOUR COLUMNS MARCHING ON MADRID. THE FIFTH COLUMN IS WITHIN THE CAPITAL."

JAN 19 1941

BY FIFTH COLUMN, GENERAL MOLA MEANT THAT WITHIN MADRID HIS SIDE HAD MANY SYMPATHIZERS WHO WERE READY TO RISE AT THE STRATEGIC MOMENT AND JOIN IN THE OVERTHROW OF THE REPUBLICAN REGIME.

HIS BOAST SET OFF A BLOODY PURGE IN MADRID. THE REPUBLICANS TOOK NO CHANCES; THEY EXECUTED FRANCO SYMPATHIZERS BY THE HUNDREDS. AND MADRID RESISTED SIEGE UNTIL THE END OF THE WAR IN MAGCH, 1939.

GENERAL MOLA WON MANY BATTLES FOR FRANCO BEFORE HE WAS KILLED IN AN AIRPLANE CRASH IN 1937. BUT HISTORY PROBABLY WILL REMEMBER HIM FOR THE EXPRESSION "FIFTH COLUMN" HE GAVE TO MODERN WARFARE, RATHER THAN FOR HIS ABILITY AS A MILITARY STRATEGIST.

LIKE THE MADRILENOS, THE BRITISH PEOPLE WERE FOREWARNED ABOUT FIFTH COLUMNS. FROM THEIR LITTLE ISLAND CITADEL THEY HEARD THAT FIFTH COLUMNS HELPED HITLER CONQUER NORWAY, HOLLAND, BELGIUM AND FRANCE.

SO WHEN THE NATION'S PERIL BECAME ACUTE LAST SPRING, THEY ROUNDED UP ABOUT 1,000 OF THEIR OWN CITIZENS, MOSTLY MEMBERS OF THE BRITISH FASCIST UNION.

THE GOVERNMENT ACTED WITHOUT FAVOR OF FAMILY OR WEALTH. TALL, HANDSOME, ARISTOCRATIC, POWER-HUNGRY SIR OSWALD MOSELY, LEADER OF BRITISH FASCISTS, WAS AMONG THOSE THROWN IN JAIL.

THE BRITISH WERE MORE GENTLE IN THEIR TREATMENT OF FIFTH COLUMNISTS OR POTENTIAL FIFTH COLUMNISTS THAN THE SPANISH REPUBLICANS. SO FAR THERE IS NO RECORD OF ANY ONE BEING EXECUTED AS A FIFTH COLUMNISTS IN ENGLAND.

HOME SECRETARY HERBERT MORRISON TOLD THE HOUSE OF COMMONS THAT THE MENTAL CALIBER OF SIR OSWALD'S FOLLOWEGS WAS FOUND TO BE WELL BELOW AVERAGE.

THE BRITISH, SO SURE ARE THEY THAT THEIR PATRIOTISM IS PROOF AGAINS "BORING FROM WITHIN," ARE EVEN CHARITABLE TO NAZI PROPAGANDISTS LIKE BERLIN BROADCASTER LORD HAW HAW. MANY OF THEM LISTENED TO HIM UNTIL THEY DECLARED HIM "TIRESOME." A SHOW ENTITLED "LORD HAW HAW" HAD A LONG RUN IN LONDON.

UP TO THE END OF 1940 THREE MEN HAD BEEN EXECUTED IN ENGLAND FOR SPYING, ACCORDING TO OFFICIAL ANNOUNCEMENTS. THEY WERE NOT BRITISH CITIZENS. TWO WERE GERMANS CONVICTED OF SNEAKING INTO THE COUNTRY WITH PORTABLE RADIO TRANSMITTERS, AND ONE WAS A HOLLANDER.

A BRITISH HOUSEWIFE, MRS.DOROTHY PAMELA O'GRADY, WAS SENTENCED TO DEATH IN DECEMBER FOR TREASON.

JAN 19 1941

ENGLAND'S MOST FAMOUS SPY CASE TO DATE IN THIS WAR INVOLVED AN AMERICAN. THE BRITISH SECRET SERVICE SUSPECTED A LEAKAGE OF INFORMATION TO GERMANY. THEY UNEARTHED EVIDENCE WHICH POINTED TO TYLER KENT, A CODE CLERK AT THE UNITED STATES EMBASSY. WITH THE HELP OF AMBASSADOR JOSEPH P.KENNEDY, THE SECRET SERVICE LAID A TRAP FOR KENT AND ARRESTED HIM FOR VIOLATION OF THE OFFICIAL SECRETS ACT.

IT DEVELOPED THAT KENT HAD BECOME ENAMORED OF ANNA WOLKOFF, DAUGHTER OF A FORMER RUSSIAN NAVAL ATTACHE AT LONDON. THEY WORKED TOGETHER IN RELAYING INFORMATION TO GERMANY THROUGH THE GERMAN LEGATION IN DUBLIN. DARK-EYED ANNA, A WHITE RUSSIAN, SAID SHE WAS CONVINCED IT WAS ENGLAND'S FAULT THAT CZARIST RUSSIA COLLAPSED.

IF KENT HAD BEEN ARRESTED THREE DAYS LATER, HE WOULD HAVE BEEN SUBJECT TO THE DEATH PENALTY UNDER A NEW DEFENCE ACT PASSED LAST SPRIN BY PARLIAMENT. HE GOT OFF WITH A SEVEN-YEAR PRISON SENTENCE. ANNA WAS SENTENCED TO TEN YEARS.

SPIES AND TRAITORS, HOWEVER, DO NOT COME WITHIN THE TERM FIFTH COLUMN. A SPY IS PAID BY A FOREIGN GOVERNMENT TO GET MILITARY INFORMATION. A TRAITOR USUALLY OPERATES ALONE AND IS NOT IDENTIFIED WITH ANY ORGANIZATION SET UPON OVERTHROWING THE GOVERNMENT.

BUT FIFTH COLUMNISTS ARE POLITICALLY MINDED, SOMETIMES VERY SINCERE, IF FANATICAL, PEOPLE. THEORETICALLY, THEY PREFER THE ENEMY'S FORM OF GOVERNMENT TO THEIR OWN. SOME OF THEM ARE WILLING TO GO SO FAR AS TO PERMIT THE ENEMY TO HELP SET UP A NEW REGIME IN THEIR OWN COUNTRY.

JAN 19 1941

IT AMOUNTS TO CIVIL WAR GOING ON AT THE SAME TIME AS EXTERNAL WAR. IN FACT, THE EUROPEAN WAR DEVELOPED SPOTS OF CIVIL WAR AS HITLER'S MECHANIZED DIVISIONS AND AIRPLANES SUBDUED ONE COUNTRY AFTER ANOTHER. FIFTH COLUMN ACTIVITY IN CONQUERED COUNTRIES WAS BLAMED BY THE DEFENDERS TO SOME EXTENT FOR THE SWIFTNESS OF THE DRIVES.

MILITARY INTELLIGENCE OFFICERS DESCRIBE FIFTH COLUMN ACTIVITY AS INCLUDING THE COURTING OF IMPORTANT PEOPLE, SUCH AS OFFICIALS, AND WORK AMONG DISGRUNTLED PEOPLE. FIFTH COLUMNISTS ARE SUPPOSED TO FOSTER PACIFISM AND REVOLUTIONARY FORCES SUCH AS COMMUNISM AND FASCISM.

IN FRANCE, THEY FOUND FERTILE GROUND IN WHICH TO SOW SEEDS OF DISSENSION BECAUSE OF LONG POLITICAL UNREST AND CONSTANT CONTROVERSY.

IN ENGLAND KNOWN COMMUNISTS AND FASCISTS WERE NUMERICALLY SMALL.

BRITISH LABOR IS FUNDAMENTALLY CONSERVATIVE. THE LABOR PARTY, FOR INSTANCE, EXPELLED SIR STAFFORD CRIPPS, THE BRILLIANT LEFTIST WHO BECAME BRITISH AMBASSADOR TO MOSCOW, BECAUSE HE WAS NON-CONFORMIST AND ADVOCATED A POPULAR FRONT AGAINST CONSERVATIVES.

MANY PEOPLE ASK: "WOULDN'T THE GERMANS HAVE WON THE WAR IF THEY HAD TRIED INVASION OF ENGLAND IMMEDIATELY AFTER THE FALL OF FRANCE?"

ONE ANSWER IS THIS: GERMAN AGENTS UNDOUBTEDLY REPORTED TO THEIR CHIEFS THAT THE FIFTH COLUMN IN ENGLAND WAS NOT YET SUFFICIENTLY STRONG AND THAT THEY NEEDED A LITTLE MORE TIME FOR THE SLOW-THINKING BRITISH TO GRASP WHAT HAD HAPPENED.

30.24 -7051

BEFORE THE WAR, IT WAS NOT INFREQUENT TO HEAR A YOUNG BRITISHER ASK, "IS THE EMPIRE WORTH FIGHTING FOR?" OR "WOULDN'T ENGLAND BE BETTER OFF IF IT BECAME A THIRD CLASS POWER AND LIVED HAPPILY LIKE DENMARK, SWEDEN AND NORWAY AND NOT HAVE TO PAY TAXES, TO POLICE VIRTUALLY THE WHOLE WORLD?"

JAN 19 1941

THAT SAME YOUNG BRITISHER PROBABLY IS IN AN ARMY TRAINING CAMP NOW, PREPARING TO RESIST AN INVADER OF ENGLAND AND ALSO FOR A PROMISED BRITISH INVASION OF THE CONTINENT.

PERHAPS AS IMPORTANT AS ANY OTHER FACTOR IN MAKING ENGLAND A POOR FIELD FOR FIFTH COLUMN ACTIVITY IS HER FREE PRESS. EVEN IN WARTIME THE PRESS HAS A VOLUNTARY RATHER THAN COMPULSORY CENSORSHIP.

THE NEWSPAPERS, OF COURSE, ARE SUBJECT TO PENALTIES IF THEY PUBLISH SOMETHING WHICH MIGHT GAVE INFORMATION TO THE ENEMY. FOR THAT REASON, THEY GENERALLY SUBMIT ARTICLES TO THE CENSOR JUST TO PLAY SAFE. BUT THERE IS NO CENSORSHIP ON EDITORIAL OPINION AND A NEWSPAPER IS FREE TO CRITICIZE THE GOVERNMENT IN AS SHARP TERMS AS IT CHOOSES--AND FREQUENTLY IT DOES SO.

ROOSEVELT KEEPTS TO WELL-WORN PATTERN IN THIRD TERM INAUGURAL.

CEREMONY FOLLOWS

WELL-GROOVED LINE (1100)

BY W.B.RAGSDALE

JAN 19 1941

(ADVANCE) WASHINGTON, JAN.18-(AP)-FRANKLIN DELANO ROOSEVELT WILL BECOME THE FIRST THIRD-TERM PRESIDENT OF THE UNITED STATES MONDAY AT AN INAUGURAL CEREMONY AS OLD AS THE NATION ITSELF.

ONLY THE PRECEDENT-CRACKING LENGTH OF HIS SERVICE AND THE STERN CHALLENGE THAT THE TIMES THEMSELVES PRESENT ARE NEW. THE SHOUTING, PARADING AND OATH TAKING, VIRTUALLY ALL OF THE CEREMONIALS AND TRAPPINGS OF THE INAUGURATIONS, FOLLOW TRACKS THAT ARE WELL GROOVED INTO AMERICAN HISTORY.

WHATEVER THE WEATHER OR CIRCUMSTANCE, THE ONLY FACT THAT IS LIKELY TO SET THIS INAUGURATION APART FROM ANY OF THE 34 OTHERS THAT WASHINGTON HAS SEEN, OR THE THREE THAT WERE SEEN IN NEW YORK AND PHILADELPHIA, IS THAT NONE OF THE PRESIDENTS INVOLVED IN THOSE EVER HELD UP HIS HAND THREE TIMES TO TAKE THE OATH OF OFFICE.

A FEW THINGS HAVE BEEN ADDED TO INAUGURAL CEREMONIES SINCE THAT APRIL OF 1789 WHEN GEORGE WASHINGTON, WITH "ANXIOUS AND PAINFUL SENSATIONS" AND "FEELINGS NOT UNLIKE THOSE OF A CULPRIT WHO IS GOING TO HIS PLACE OF EXECUTION", WAS INDUCTED INTO OFFICE IN NEW YORK. BUT THOSE THINGS THAT HAVE BEEN ADDED ARE MINOR AND UNESSENTIAL. THE CHIEF ELEMENTS OF MONDAY'S CEREMONY WILL BE THE SAME.

MR.ROOSEVELT WILL GO TO CHURCH. THEN HE WILL RIDE TO THE SEAT OF GOVERNMENT, PUT HIS HAND ON THE BIBLE, HAVE THE OATH ADMINISTERED TO HIM BY THE HIGHEST JUDICIAL AUTHORITY IN THE LAND AND RETURN TO THE WHITE HOUSE TO REVIEW A PARADE.

GEORGE WASHINGTON DID JUST ABOUT THE SAME THING.

THE DIFFERENCE IS THAT WASHINGTON WENT TO CHURCH AFTER HE HAD BEEN IN-

AUGURATED AND INSTEAD OF A PARADE TO WATCH, THERE WERE FIREWORKS THAT NIGHT.

FOR WASHINGTON, THE SEAT OF GOVERNMENT TO WHICH HE RODE WAS THE NEW FEDERAL HALL AT BROAD AND WALL STREETS IN NEW YORK, WHERE THE FIRST CONGRESS UNDER THE CONSTITUTION WAS SLOWLY ASSEMBLIN FRIENDS RODE WITH HIM, JUST AS THEY WILL RIDE WITH MR.ROOSEVELT MONDAY.

JAN 19 1941

BETWEEN THE TIME HE INTRODUCED HIS INCOME TAX BILL AND THE PRODUCTION OF HIS PUBLIC WORKS BILL, HE HAD GROWN TO BE THE MOST POTENT SINGLE MEMBER OF CONGRESS. AND HIS STRENGTH LAY CHIEFLY IN TIGHTLY RIVETED FRIENDSHIPS, NOT ALONE WITH DEMOCRATS BUT WITH REPUBLICANS WHO WERE POWERS IN THEIR OWN RIGHT. AS A YOUNG MEMBER, HE BELONGED TO SPEAKER JOE CANNON'S POKER CIRCLE. IN HIS MIDDLE YEARS, HIS FRIENDSHIP WITH SPEAKER NICHOLAS LONGWORTH WAS A NATIONAL LEGEND. THEY WERE REPUBLICANS, HE A DEMOCRAT. YET, WHEN HE WAS LEADER FOR HIS OWN PARTY IN THE HOUSE AND LONGWORTH CHIEF OF THE OPPOSITION, THE TWO WERE BOON COMPANIONS AND HE OFTEN REFERRED TO THE SPEAKER'S AUTOMOBILE AS "OUR CAR." IN HIS LATER YEARS AS VICE PRESIDENT, HIS WHOLE POWER RESTED UPON THAT TIGHTLY BOUND BUT WIDE CIRCLE OF FRIENDS HE HAD MADE IN HIS YEARS IN WASHINGTON.

OFTEN IN THOSE DAYS, HE WOULD TELL FRIENDS:

"I WISH I HAD STAYED IN THE HOUSE. I DIDN'T EVER ASK ANYONE TO BE VICE PRESIDENT. IF I HAD STAYED ON AS SPEAKER, I WOULD HAVE BEEN IN THAT PLACE LONGER THAN ANY SPEAKER IN HISTORY--TEN YEARS. THE LONGEST HAS BEEN SIX."

BUT THE SIMPLE WISH TO HAVE HELD THE JOB LONGER THAN ANY OTHER MAN WAS NOT THE REAL REASON WHY HE EXPRESSED THAT THOUGHT. THE REAL ANSWER LAY IN THE FACT THAT:

"THE ONLY POWER I HAVE IS SUCH AS I CAN WIELD THROUGH MY FRIENDS. A VICE PRESIDENT'S POWER IS RESTRICTED ACCORDING TO HIS PERSONALITY AN FRIENDS. ALL HE HAS IS AN AFFIRMATIVE VOTE. HE CAN VOTE 'YES' BUT HE CAN'T VOTE 'NO.' A BILL IS DEFEATED ON A TIE VOTE IN THE SENATE UNLESS THE VICE PRESIDENT VOTES 'YES.' IT IS ONLY THROUGH HIS FRIENDS THAT A VICE PRESIDENT CAN ACCOMPLISH ANYTHING."

GARNER ACCOMPLISHED PLENTY THROUGH HIS FRIENDS. HE WAS THE FIRST VICE PRESIDENT IN HISTORY TO BECOME AN ACTIVE LEGISLATIVE GENERAL FOR THE PRESIDENT. AS DEMOCRATIC LEADER IN THE HOUSE, HE HAD HAD KEY MEN IN EVERY STATE DELEGATION WHO COULD GIVE HIM A QUICK SUMMARY OF HOW THE MEN ON THEIR DELEGATION FELT. AS LEADER AND SPEAKER, HE HAD HAD A DIRECT HAND IN ELEVATING MANY OF THE HOUSE COM

AND SPEAKER, HE HAD HAD A

AND SPEAKER, HE HAD HAD A DIRECT HAND IN ELEVATING MANY OF THE HOUSE COMMITTEE CHAIRMEN TO THEIR POSTS. AND THROUGH THE YEARS, HIS FRIENDSHIPS HAD REACHED ACROSS THE CAPITOL INTO THE SENATE. HE HAD AN UNCANNY FACULTY OF LEARNING JUST WHAT THE OTHER MAN WANTED AND WORKING OUT A RECONCILIATION OF IDEAS. IN THOSE EARLY DAYS OF THE NEW DEAL, A FRIEND CLOSE ENOUGH TO HIS WORK TO KNOW HOW EFFECTIVE IT HAD BEEN IN BRINGING RECALCITRANTS INTO LINE ONCE ESTIMATED THAT JOHN GARNER WAS RESPONSIBLE FOR GETTING 80 PER CENT OF THE NEW DEAL LEGISLATION THROUGH CONGRESS.

(ADVANCE)..WASHINGTON,--FIRST ADD RAGSDALE ADVANCE XXX CALHOUN PRESIDED OVER THE SENATE AND PROMPTED DEBATERS IN THE TARIFF FIGHT WITH ANDREW JACKSON. THE PERSONAL RELATIONS BETWEEN GARNER AND THE PRESIDENT REMAINED FRIENDLY, BUT THEIR DIFFERENCES OVER POLICY WERE SHARP.

THE ROOTS LAY DEEPER THAN MANY SUSPECTED. IN 1936, PERHAPS UNKNOWN TO THE PRESIDENT, THERE HAD BEEN AN ACTIVE DESIRE BY SOME OF THOSE AROUND HIM TO OUST GARNER AS VICE PRESIDENT. BUT FRIENDS OF GARNER GOT WIND OF THE PLAN BEFORE IT CAME TO THE SURFACE AND HEADED IT OFF. THIS LAY IN THE BACKGROUND AS THEY CAME INTO THE SECOND TERM, A TERM WHICH BROUGHT THE SUPREME COURT BATTLE, SIT-DOWN STRIKES AND UNNUMBERED SMALLER DISPUTES.

HOWEVER ENTHUSIASTIC MAY HAVE BEEN THE CHEERING OF HIS FRIENDS FOR GARNER AS A PRESIDENTIAL CANDIDATE, HE WAS NOT DELUDED BY THEIR HOPES AND CERTAINLY NOT ENTRANCED BY THE IDEA OF BEING PRESIDENT. THAT HE WAS NOT DELUDED IS EVIDENCED BY THE BETS HE WON ON WHO WOULD BE NOMINATED. THAT HE WAS NOT ENTRANCED SHOWS UP IN WHAT HE SAID TO FRIENDS MANY TIMES DURING THE SPRING AND SUMMER OF LAST YEAR:

"GOING TO THE WHITE HOUSE WOULD BE JUST LIKE GOING TO JAIL FOR FOUR YEARS. WHY, I COULDN'T EVEN GO FISHING IN THE SUMMER WITHOUT TAKING ALONG AN ARMY. I'M TELLING YOU THE TRUTH, I'D RATHER GO BACK TO TEXAS AND TAKE LIFE EASY THAN ANYTHING ELSE.

"YOU GET PEACE AND QUIET AND A CHANCE TO THINK DOWN THERE. A MAN CAN TEND TO HIS CHICKENS AND GO FISHING AND WATCH THE WATER FLOW BY UNDER THE SHADE OF THE TREES. HERE, EVERYTHING IS ALWAYS IN A TURMOIL."

HE FELL SILENT AND LOOKED LONG AT THE END OF HIS CIGAR, AS IF HIS MIND MIGHT BE WADING BACK THROUGH SOME OF THAT PAST TURMOIL. TAX FIGHTS IN THE WAYS AND MEANS COMMITTEE. PARTY CAUCUSES IN THE HOUS CONFERENCE COMMITTEE DISPUTES. RELIEF BATTLES. SUPREME COURT BILLS. SIT DOWN STRIKES. PLENTY OF TURMOIL.

OR MAYBE IT WAS THE NIGHT WHEN FRIENDS WERE POURING INTO THE MINORITY LEADER'S OFFICE, UNDER THE BIG CRYSTAL CHANDELIERS, TO CONGRATULATE HIM ON HIS ELECTION AS SPEAKER; WHEN MRS.GARNER, A WIFE SPEAKING TO A HUSBAND WHO HAS HAD A BUSY AND NERVE-RACKED DAY, CAME IN TO SAY: "I'VE GOT A GLASS OF MILK HERE FOR YOU, JOHN." AND STANDING BY UNTIL AFTER HE HAD FINISHED WITH IT.

A1 41WX

JAN 19 194

OR THE TIME WHEN HE WAS TRYING TO FIGURE OUT HOW TO DODGE THE SOCIAL FUNCTIONS SURROUNDING A VISIT OF ROYALTY TO THE CAPITAL. "I'VE GOT AN IDEA HOW WE CAN GET OUT OF IT, ETTIE," HE TOLD

HER. "I'LL SEND YOU BACK TO TEXAS AND EVERYBODY KNOWS I CAN'T BUTTON A DRESS SHIRT BY MYSELF--SO I WON'T HAVE TO GO." FOR LIKE MOST OUTDOORS MEN, HE HAD A DEEP DISLIKE FOR ALL SOCIAL AFFAIRS, FOR POMP AND CEREMONY.

THUS, ON MONDAY, WHILE ALL WASHINGTON IS WATCHING THE CEREMONY OF THE INAUGURATION, HE WILL QUIT ITS TURMOIL AND HEAD FOR UVALDE, FOR HIS CHICKENS AND PECANS AND BARBECUE PIT, FOR DAYS OF QUIET FISHING IN PLACID STREAMS, FOR THE MORE VIGOROUS TRAMPING AFTER DEER AND QUAIL, FOR NIGHTS OF CAMPING IN THE WILD WHERE THE ONLY SOUND IS THE HOWL OF COYOTES. HE THINKS HE WILL LIKE IT.

A142WX (MON ADV)

(ADVANCE FOR AMS OF MONDAY, JAN. 20)

(ADVANCE)--WASHINGTON,JAN 19-(AP)-THE EVE OF FRANKLIN D. ROOSEVELT'S THIRD INAUGURATION FINDS CONGRESS TENSELY DEBATING A NEW REQUEST FOR EXTENSION OF PRESIDENTIAL POWERS, JUST AS IT WAS WHEN HIS FIRST AND SECOND TERMS BEGAN.

THIS TIME THE PROPOSAL, WHICH HAS BROUGHT CRIES OF "DICTATORSHIP" FROM OPPOSITION RANKS, CONCERNS AMERICAN AID TO GREAT BRITAIN IN ITS LIFE-AND-DEATH STRUGGLE WITH THE AXIS POWERS.

EIGHT YEARS AGO THE SITUATION INVOLVED A QUICK SHOT-IN-THE-ARM FOR THE COUNTRY'S WEAKENED BANKING SYSTEM. IN THE FAMOUS "HUNDRED DAYS" OF 1933 CONGRESS APPROVED, WITH LITTLE HESITATION, EMERGENCY BILLS GIVING THE PRESIDENT FAR-REACHING AUTHORITY OVER MONEY.

FOUR YEARS AGO THE ISSUE WAS REORGANIZATION OF THE SUPREME COURT. MR.ROOSEVELT, IN A SURPRISE MESSAGE TWO WEEKS AFTER HIS SECOND INAUGURATION, ASKED FOR THE RIGHT TO ADD A JUSTICE FOR EVERY ONE OVER 70 WHO DID NOT RETIRE. THE ARGUMENT-PROVOKING BILL DIED AFTER ANOTHER HISTORIC HUNDRED DAYS, BUT THE PRESIDENT CLAIMED VICTORY BECAUSE RETIREMENTS OPENED THE WAY FOR "NEW BLOOD" ON THE TRIBUNAL.

JAN 19 1941

THROUGHOUT THE NEW DEAL REGIME, IN FACT, THERE HAS BEEN A SPREAD OF FEDERAL ACTIVITIES, MANY OF WHICH HAVE INVESTED THE EXECUTIVE WITH NEW POWERS. SOME HAVE BEEN OF AN EMERGENCY NATURE, AS THE 1933 MONETARY AND BANKING LAWS, BUT OTHERS HAVE REPRESENTED PERMANENT EXTENSIONS OF GOVERNMENT--THE SOCIAL SECURITY SYSTEM AND THE TENNESSEE VALLEY AUTHORITY, FOR EXAMPLE.

PRESIDENTIAL AUTHORITY WAS DIRECTLY AT ISSUE IN THE ATTACKS ON THE NRA, THAT VAST BLUEPRINT FOR REGULATING INDUSTRY WHICH THE SUPREME COURT UNANIMOUSLY KILLED. THE NINE JUSTICES TOOK THE POSITION THAT CONGRESS UNCONSTITUTIONALLY HAD DELEGATED POWERS TO THE PRESIDENT TO PROCLAIM INDUSTRIAL CODES.

WHILE THE NEW DEAL HAS FARED BETTER IN THE SUPREME COURT SINCE CHANGES BEGAN TO OCCUR IN THE LATTER'S MEMBERSHIP, CONGRESSIONAL OPPOSITION TO GRANTING NEW PRESIDENTIAL POWERS HAS INCREASED SINCE THE DAYS WHEN THE 1933 CONGRESS WAS CALLED A "RUBBER STAMP."

IT REACHED ONE HIGH POINT DURING THE 1938-39 FIGHT OVER MR. ROOSEVELT'S PROGRAM FOR GOVERNMENT REORGANIZATION. CRITICS CHARGED THAT THE LEGISLATION WOULD GIVE THE PRESIDENT DICTATORIAL POWERS, AND IN 1938, THE HOUSE PIGEONHOLED THE MEASURE.

IT WAS REVIVED IN THE NEW CONGRESS THE NEXT YEAR, HOWEVER, AND FINALLY WAS PASSED WITH A PROVISION GIVING CONGRESS 60 DAYS TO DISAPPROVE ANY SPECIFIC REORGANIZATION PLAN. IT ALSO PROVIDED THAT THE PRESIDENT'S POWERS TO REVAMP GOVERNMENT AGENCIES SHOULD EXPIRE ON JAN. 20, 1941.

A143WX

JAN 19 1941

A TIME LIMITATION IS ONE OF THE CURBS WHICH SOME MEMBERS OF CONGRESS HAVE SUGGESTED SHOULD BE PLACED ON THE EXECUTIVE AUTHORITY IN THE BRITISH AID BILL. ADMINISTRATION LIEUTENANTS HAVE NOT OPPOSED THIS PROPOSAL IF THE TIME BE FIXED "FOR THE DURATION OF THE EMERGENCY."

A NUMBER OF LAWS UNDER WHICH PRESIDENT ROOSEVELT HAS ADVANCED THE DEFENSE PROGRAM ORIGINATED DURING THE WORLD WAR AND NEVER WERE REPEALED. THE OLD "TRADING WITH THE ENEMY LAW" PROVIDED THE BASIS FOR SOME OF THE 1933 EMERGENCY BANKING STEPS, UNDER WHICH THE PRESIDENT PLACED AN EMBARGO ON THE WITHDRAWAL OF GOLD OR SILVER AND PROCLAIMED THE FOUR-DAY BANK HOLIDAY.

AND PROCLAIMED THE FOUR-DAY BANK HOLIDAY.

THAT LEGISLATION ALSO PROVIDED THE AUTHORITY FOR THE LIMITED "NATIONAL EMERGENCY" WHICH MR.ROOSEVELT DECREED WHEN THE EUROPEAN WAR STARTED IN SEPTEMBER, 1939.

JAN 19 1941

BY RUTH COWAN

(ADVANCE) WASHINGTON,JAN.18-(AP)-ELEANOR ROOSEVELT, THE FIRST WOMAN IN AMERICAN HISTORY TO SEE HER HUSBAND ELECTED PRESIDENT FOR THE THIRD TIME, IS CALM ON THIS INAUGURATION EVE AND CONFIDENT OF FUTURE PERSONAL PLANS--A MARKED CONTRAST TO 1933 AND EVEN 1937.

ON INAUGURATION EVE EIGHT YEARS AGO, SCARED AND MORE SHY THAN MOST PEOPLE REALIZED, MRS.ROOSEVELT SLIPPED AWAY FROM THE FESTIVITIES THAT SHE MIGHT HAVE A FEW MINUTES' QUIET TO RENEW HER COURAGE FOR THE YEARS AHEAD.

WITH A CLOSE WOMAN FRIEND SHE WENT BY CAB TO HISTORIC ROCK CREEK CHURCH YARD WHERE IN A SECLUDED WOODED SPOT IS AUGUSTUS SAINT-GAUDENS' MAGNIFICENT STATUE OF A WOMAN THAT MARKS THE GRAVE OF HENRY ADAMS, GRANDSON OF PRESIDENT JOHN QUINCY ADAMS, AND HIS WIFE.

THE HOODED BRONZE FIGURE SEATED ON A ROCK--SOMETIMES CALLED THE "PEACE OF GOD," OFTEN "GRIEF"--IS THAT OF A LARGE-BONED WOMAN. THE HAND THAT SUPPORTS HER CHIN HAS TOILED. THE SENSI-TIVE MOUTH IS LARGE, FULL--NOT PRETTY. HER EYES ARE DOWNCAST AS THOUGH SHE HAS SHED THE LAST TEAR. BUT IN HER FACE IS PEACE--THE PEACE THAT COMES WHEN NOTHING MORE HAS THE POWER TO HURT. SHE MIGHT BE A REFUGEE IN THE WAR ABROAD, IN THE WORLD WAR, IN ANY WAR.

MRS.ROOSEVELT HAD FOUND THIS STATUE YEARS EARLIER DURING THE HARASSING WORLD WAR DAYS WHEN FRANKLIN D.ROOSEVELT WAS ASSISTANT SECRETARY OF THE NAVY. SHE CAME THEN AS ON THAT INAUGURATION EVE--AND AS SHE HAS SINCE--WHEN SHE FELT THE NEED FOR A MOMENT APART TO REGAIN STRENGTH TO FACE THE FUTURE.

SHE SAW HER HUSBAND INAUGURATED THE FIRST TIME WITH DREAD--SHE HAD WALKED THE FLOOR OF A HOTEL ROOM UNTIL AN EARLY HOUR--THAT THE ROBETONGFTRADITIONSWOUBDTBEOONE OF I

SHE SAW HER HUSBAND INAUGURATED THE FIRST TIME WITH DREAD--SHE HAD WALKED THE FLOOR OF A HOTEL ROOM UNTIL AN EARLY HOUR--THAT THE ROLE OF FIRST LADY WOULD BE ONE OF INHIBITING TRADITIONS. BUT FOUR YEARS LATER SHE HAD DEMONSTRATED TO THE COUNTRY THAT THE WIFE OF ITS PRESIDENT COULD DARE TO BE HERSELF AND DEVELOP HER OWN INTERESTS.

A FEW NIGHTS AGO ON THIS THIRD INAUGURATION EVE SHE SAT UP LATE IN HER SITTING ROOM--ITS WALLS NOW DECORATED WITH THE PHOTOGRAPHS OF ADDITIONAL GRANDCHILDREN--ON THE WHITE HOUSE SECOND FLOOR AND PLANNED WITH CONFIDENCE TO GO AHEAD WITH HER INTERESTS. SHE KNEW AS SHE TALKED THAT THERE WAS NOTHING TO STOP HER TACKLING SOMETHING NEW. SHE HAD CONQUERED HER PERSONAL FEAR OF THE ROLE.

IN FACT, MRS.ROOSEVELT HAS MADE THE PROGRAM SHE OUTLINED WHEN SHE FIRST MOVED INTO THE WHITE HOUSE ON MARCH 4, 1933--AND WHICH SEEMED DARING EVEN TO HER!--APPEAR TAME TODAY IN COMPARISON WITH WHAT SHE HAS ACTUALLY DONE.

EVEN BEFORE SHE UNPACKED HER TRUNKS THAT FIRST DAY IN HER NEW HOME, MRS.ROOSEVELT BEGAN BREAKING PRECEDENT. SHE GAVE AN ASSOCIATED PRESS REPORTER, PERCHED ON A PACKING BOX, AN INTERVIEW AND IT WAS THE FIRST TIME THAT THE WIFE OF A PRESIDENT IN OFFICE HAD TALKED FOR PUBLICATION.

JAN 19 1941

NOW WHEN SHE IS IN WASHINGTON SHE HOLDS ALMOST WEEKLY PRESS CONFERENCES IN THE MONROE ROOM ON THE SECOND FLOOR OF THE WHITE HOUSE. FROM 20 TO 50 REPORTERS, ALL WOMEN, ASK QUESTIONS VARYING FROM "WHAT CAN WOMEN DO IN NATIONAL DEFENSE?" TO "WHERE ARE YOU GOING ON THURSDAY?"

REPORTERS AND PHOTOGRAPHERS MEET HER TRAIN AND PLANE AS SHE CRISS-CROSSES THE COUNTRY ON LECTURE TOURS, INSPECTION TRIPS TO "OKIE" CAMPS, VISITS TO HER WIDELY SCATTERED CHILDREN. ONCE A REPORTER LOST HER IN A CROWD AND REACHED HER BY TELEPHONE LATER TO GET A REPORT OF WHAT HAPPENED.

IN THAT FIRST INAUGURATION DAY INTERVIEW, MRS.ROOSEVELT DISCLOSED THAT SHE FEARED THE WHITE HOUSE MIGHT BE A PRISON OF TRADITION AND FORMALITY.

"I HATE THE IDEA THAT I MIGHT EVER LOSE TOUCH WITH PEOPLE. I DON'T WANT TO BE A "SHUT-IN'", SHE SAID THEN.

AND SHE HAS NOT BEEN.

SHE HAS OUT-TRAVELED PRESIDENT ROOSEVELT SINCE HE BECAME CHIEF EXECUTIVE. HER RECORD IS CLOSE TO 280,000 MILES BY PLANE, TRAIN, BOAT, AUTO AND PACK HORSE. SHE HAS VISITED EVERY STATE AND SEVERAL OF THE POSSESSIONS.

GENERALLY HER SECRETARY, MISS MALVINA THOMPSON, WHOM SHE AFFECTIONATELY CALLS "TOMMY", IS WITH HER. BUT SHE HAS MADE MANY PLANE TRIPS ALONE. SHE FLEW ACROSS THE CONTINENT ALONE TO VISIT HER DAUGHTER, ANNA, MRS.JOHN BOETTIGER, IN SEATTLE. THE DAY AFTER THIS LAST ELECTION SHE CAME FROM NEW YORK BY PLANE ALONG THE PRESIDENT, TOMMY AND THE REST OF THE FAMILY WERE CATCHING UP WITH THEIR SLEEP AT HYDE PARK, N.Y.

SHE DRIVES HER OWN CAR AND HAS BEEN STOPPED FOR TRAFFIC VIOLATIONS--MUCH TO THE AMUSEMENT OF HER SONS. SHE EARLY DISPENSED WITH SECRET SERVICE AGENTS. IN WASHINGTON WHEN USING THE WHITE HOUSE CARS SHE HAS THE SERVICE OF A CHAUFFEUR AND FOOTMAN.

BUT CAB DRIVERS IN MANY CITIES HAVE SLOWED DOWN TO PICK UP A FARE AND DISCOVERED IT WAS MRS.ROOSEVELT. ON THE TRAIN SHE MAY BE IN A DRAWING ROOM OR A DAY COACH. AND WHEN IT COMES TO WALKING--SHE CERTAINLY CAN!

THE PUBLIC WAS AT FIRST STARTLED AT THE NOVELTY OF

THE PUBLIC WAS AT FIRST STARTLED AT THE NOVELTY OF A PRESIDENT'S WIFE DRIVING HER CAR ALONG THE HIGHWAY, TURNING UP AT A DISTANT COUNTY FAIR, LECTURING, RUSHING INTO A RADIO STUDIO, VISITING CCC CAMPS. NOW IT IS AN ACCEPTED FACT. SHE COMES AND GOES WITHOUT A FUSS, WHICH IS THE WAY SHE PREFERS.

FAR FROM BEING A "SHUT-IN" SHE HAS TALKED TO THOUSANDS AND THOUSANDS OF PEOPLE--A CCC BOY JUST THE AGE OF HER SON, JOHN; A MINE OPERATOR AND HIS EMPLOYE, A SUCCESSFUL BROADWAY PLAYWRITER, A GLAMOROUS HOLLYWOOD STAR, A MILLIONAIRE, A WOMAN ON RELIEF, A QUEEN.

SHE HAS GONE TO WHERE PEOPLE ARE--INTO FACTORIES, DOWN INTO MINES, BACK STAGE IN THEATERS, TO "OKIE" CAMPS, TO PARTIES, TO MEETINGS OF A HUNDRED AND ONE KINDS. AND SHE HAS INVITED PEOPLE TO COME SEE HER.

JAN 19 1941

NEVER SINCE THE WHITE HOUSE WAS FIRST BUILT HAVE ITS DOORS OPENED TO A GREATER VARIETY OF AMERICANS. ONE DAY IT MAY BE A DELEGATION REPRESENTING SHARECROPPERS. LATER THE LIMOUSINES OF THE RICH MAY DRAW UP AT THE FRONT DOOR STEPS.

SHE SAID IN THAT FIRST INTERVIEW: "MY FEELING ABOUT THE WHITE HOUSE IS THAT IT BELONGS TO THE PEOPLE. THEIR TAXES SUPPORT IT. IT IS REALLY THEIRS. AS FAR AS POSSIBLE THEY SHOULD BE MADE TO FEEL WELCOME HERE."

DISTINGUISHED FOREIGNERS HAVE BEEN MADE WELCOME THERE, TOO. MRS.ROOSEVELT IS THE FIRST WIFE OF A PRESIDENT TO BE HOSTESS TO RULING MONARCHS OF ENGLAND. THERE HAS BEEN A PROCESSION OF CROWN PRINCES AND CROWN PRINCESSES.

WHEN SHE MOVED INTO THE WHITE HOUSE MRS.ROOSEVELT HOPED TO DO A LOT OF READING. SHE HAS. BUT TO HER, PEOPLE ARE BOOKS.

ONCE IN THE DEPRESSION DAYS SHE VISITED A SOUTHERN ILLINOIS MINE. IT WAS 6 O'CLOCK IN THE MORNING AND THE SHIFT WAS CHANGING. SHE CLIMBED UP ON A FLAT CAR AND TO THE CROWD OF MINERS, THEIR WIVES AND CHILDREN, SHE SAID:

"I HOPE I CAN LEARN FROM YOU."

SHE THEN EXPLORED A MINE THAT WAS NOT OPERATING AND THE SUPERINTENDENT WHO ESCORTED THE PARTY SAID AFTER ANSWERING HER QUESTIONS--AND SHE CAN ASK 'EM!--"FROM SOMEWHERE SHE LEARNED ABOUT MINING".

THAT FIRST DAY IN THE WHITE HOUSE MRS.ROOSEVELT SAID: "I SHALL HAVE MY WRITING TOO--NOT SO MUCH AS PREVIOUSLY, BUT STILL SOME." SHE HAS HAD MUCH MORE.

SHE HAS WRITTEN SEVERAL BOOKS, INCLUDING HER AUTOBIOGRAPHY, "THIS IS MY STORY", AND IS AT WORK ON OTHERS. SHE IS THE FIRST PRESIDENT'S WIFE TO BE A MAGAZINE WRITER AND COLUMNIST ON A PROFESSIONAL BASIS. HER NEWSPAPER COLUMN "MY DAY" IS SYNDICATED. SHE RECOGNIZES SHE HAS A "DEAD-LINE" TO MEET JUST LIKE HER COLLEAGUES EVEN THOUGH SHE BE ENTERTAINING A KING AND QUEEN.

ONCE WHEN SHE WAS ILL--A VERY, VERY RARE EVENT--THE PRESIDENT OFFERED TO "GHOST" HER COLUMN FOR HER BUT SHE REFUSED. SHE GOT IT OUT HERSELF. SHE USUALLY DICTATES IT TO TOMMY.

BUT SHE DIDN'T ANTICIPATE HER LECTURE TOURS. IN RECENT YEARS SHE HAS CUSTOMARILY MADE TWO LECTURE TOURS, ONE IN THE SPRING AND THE OTHER IN THE FALL, AND THEY'VE TAKEN HER FROM ONE SIDE OF THE COUNTRY TO THE OTHER. TO BETTER HER TECHNIQUE SHE HAS STUDIED PUBLIC SPEAKING.

ON INAUGURATION EVE EIGHT YEARS AGO SHE MADE A RADIO BROADCAST, AND SAID SHE HOPED THAT AFTER BECOMING THE NATION'S FIRST LADY SHE WOULD MAKE RADIO SPEECHES AT TIMES "IF IT APPEARS THAT THERE IS ANY WAY IN WHICH I CAN BE HELPFUL". IN THIS, TOO, SHE HAS EXCEEDED HER EXPECTATIONS.

ANNUALLY SHE EARNS TENS OF THOUSANDS OF DOLLARS FROM HER BROADCASTS, LECTURES AND WRITINGS, AND THE MONEY AFTER THE INCOME TAX IS PAID IS TURNED OVER TO CHARITY AND PHILANTHROPIES.

MUCH OF HER EARNINGS GOES TO THE AMERICAN FRIENDS SERVICE COMMITTEE IN PHILADELPHIA. SHE HAS PLEDGED MONEY TO SUPPORT SEVERAL WAR REFUGEE CHILDREN, GIVEN TO THE RED CROSS, TO NUMEROUS CAUSES.

HER REPLY TO CRITICISMS OF HER "GOING COMMERCIAL" IS THAT SHE IS ABLE TO DO MUCH GOOD FOR OTHER PEOPLE THAT SHE WOULD NOT BE ABLE TO DO WITHOUT HER EARNINGS.

IN HER BUSY LIFE SHE HAS FOUND TIME FOR PERSONAL FRIENDS AND BY PLANE AND TRAIN SHE HAS GONE TO ANY OF HER CHILDREN WHEN ONE OF THEM HAS BEEN ILL OR NEEDED HER. SHE ALWAYS HAS TIME FOR A GAME WITH A GRAND-CHILD--THERE ARE TEN NOW--AND HER BUSY FINGERS HAVE KNITTED THEM SWEATERS.

HER HOUSEWIFE'S EYE SOON NOTED THAT THE WHITE HOUSE KITCHENS WERE ANTIQUATED, AND SHE HAD THEM DONE OVER--AND IN THE DOING SAW TO IT THAT THERE WERE CHEERFUL REST ROOMS INSTALLED FOR THE SERVANTS.

SHE HAS CHANGED CONSIDERABLY IN HER PERSONAL APPEARANCE IN EIGHT YEARS. SHE DRESSES MORE SMARTLY ALTHOUGH CLOTHES ARE NOT IMPORTANT TO HER. SHE DESCRIBED HER NEW DRESS FOR THIS INAUGURATION CEREMONY AS "OH, A DRESS IN SOME SHADE OF RED".

SHE DRESSES HER HAIR MORE SOFTLY. RIGHT NOW IT IS WAVED ON TOP IN A SORT OF MODIFIED POMPADOUR. SHE GOES TO A BEAUTY PARLOR

TO HAVE IT DONE. SHE DOESN'T SPEND MUCH MONEY ON COSMETICS. HER NAIL POLISH IS COLORLESS.

HER PLANS FOR THE NEXT FOUR YEARS INCLUDE "JUST GOING AHEAD WITH THE THINGS I'M DOING."

AND AT THAT RATE IT DOESN'T LOOK AS THOUGH THE NEXT YEARS WILL BRING AN ANSWER TO NEWSPAPER WOMEN'S PRAYERS: "PLEASE, DEAR GOD, MAKE MRS.ROOSEVELT TIRED FOR JUST ONE DAY."

(FISCAL ADVANCE FOR PMS OF SATURDAY, JAN. 18)

BY IRVING PERLMETER

(ADVANCE)...WASHINGTON,JAN. 18-(AP)-PRESIDENT ROOSEVELT ENTERS HIS THIRD TERM MONDAY WITH HUGE DEFENSE REQUIREMENTS COMPLICATING FEDERAL FINANCES AFTER EXPENDITURES TO AID THE UNEMPLOYED, THE FARMERS AND THE AGED ALREADY HAD MADE HIS FIRST TWO TERMS THE COSTLIEST IN PEACETIME HISTORY.

COUNTING THE DEFENSE PROGRAM AS ALREADY OUTLINED, AND $19,891,090,000 OF GOVERNMENT CORPORATION DISBURSEMENTS, IT APPEARS PROBABLE THAT BY THE MIDDLE OF MR.ROOSEVELT'S THIRD TERM THE GOVERNMENT WILL HAVE DISBURSED MORE THAN $118,000,000,000 SINCE 1933--AS MUCH AS WAS SPENT DURING THE ADMINISTRATIONS OF ALL THE PRECEDING PRESIDENTS.

FEDERAL OFFICIALS SAID THAT OFFSETTING THESE FIGURES WERE BILLIONS OF LOAN REPAYMENTS, IMPROVEMENT OF GOVERNMENT PROPERTIES AND RESOURCES, INVESTMENTS FOR PENSIONING AGED PERSONS, AND A RISE IN THE NATIONAL INCOME FROM A DEPRESSION LOW OF ABOUT $40,000,000,000 TO AN ESTIMATED $84,000,000,000 IN THE NEXT FISCAL YEAR. SOME OF THE BILLIONS, THEY NOTED, WERE VOTED BY CONGRESS ON ITS OWN INITIATIVE AND AGAINST THE PRESIDENT'S ADVICE.

FROM THE FIRST INAUGURATION OF GEORGE WASHINGTON TO AMERICA'S ENTRANCE INTO THE WORLD WAR, FEDERAL EXPENDITURES TOTALED $26,711,815,000. THE WORLD WAR ALONE COST MORE THAN THAT, AND GOVERNMENT BUDGETS NEVER RETURNED TO PRE-WAR LEVELS, SO THAT BY THE TIME FRANKLIN D.ROOSEVELT TOOK OFFICE THE TOTAL WAS UP TO $118,388,863,000.

UNDER MR.ROOSEVELT, OFFICIAL FIGURES SHOWED TODAY, ACTUAL DISBURSEMENTS OF THE TREASURY AND GOVERNMENT CORPORATIONS PLUS XORTHCOMING EXPENDITURES ESTIMATED IN THE PRESIDENT'S JAN. 8 BUDGET MESSAGE AGGREGATE $118,891,090,000. EXCEPT FOR $11,204,762,000 OF DEFENSE ITEMS, THIS TOTAL WILL APPLY ONLY TO JUNE 30,1942.

THE TREASURY DEBT ON MARCH 4, 1933, DATE OF MR.ROOSEVELT'S FIRST INAUGURATION, WAS $20,937,350,964. THE PRESIDENT ESTIMATED THAT IT WOULD REACH $58,367,065,056 ON JUNE 30, 1942, WITHOUT COUNTING MONEY WHICH MAY BE BORROWED TO FINANCE THE BRITISH AID PROGRAM.

A55WX

IN ADDITION, GOVERNMENT CORPORATIONS UNDER MR.ROOSEVELT HAVE CREATED A DEBT OF $6,000,000,000, DUE TO BE REPAID OUT OF THE ASSETS OF THE CORPORATIONS.

WHERE THE TREASURY'S SHARE OF THIS SPENDING WENT PRIOR TO THE CURRENT DEFENSE PROGRAM IS INDICATED IN AN OFFICIAL COMPILATION.

IN THE FISCAL YEARS 1933 (MOSTLY A HOOVER YEAR) TO 1940, INCLUSIVE, THE TREASURY SPENT $58,672,000,000.

IT WAS DIVIDED AS FOLLOWWS:

RELIEF, $15,507,000,000; GRANTS TO STATES FOR SOCIAL SECURITY, $1,143,000,000; PUBLIC WORKS, $6,500,000,000; AID TO AGRICULTURE, $7,643,000,000; DEFENSE, $7,497,000,000; VETERANS' PENSIONS AND BENEFITS, $7,212,000,000; OTHER DEPARTMENTAL EXPENSES, $3,188,000,000; INTEREST ON THE PUBLIC DEBT, $6,790,000,000; MISCELLANEOUS, $3,193,000,000.

ROOSEVELT GIVES WILLKIE NOTE FOR CHURCHILL

FOREIGN AFFAIRS STUDIED IN TALK AT WHITE HOUSE

Republican Discusses War in Europe With President and Hull on Eve of Trip.

OFFERS 3 SUGGESTIONS

Would Have Congress Retain Its Control of Finances in Plan to Aid Great Britain

Washington, Jan. 19. — (AP)—Wendell Willkie will take a personal message from President Roosevelt to Prime Minister Winston Churchill of England.

The President interrupted work on his inauguration message today to pen the message in his own hand and gave it to Willkie during a brief conference they held at the White House.

The two men who battled for the Presidency in last fall's political campaign talked in Mr. Roosevelt's oval study for about 30 minutes. Secretary of State Cordell Hull was with them.

"We talked about the European situation," Willkie told reporters as he left, "and the President gave me a very pleasant personal note to Mr. Churchill. It is more than just a formal introduction."

The note, it was learned, introduces Willkie with the comment that he has been trying to keep politics out of the American defense situation and expresses wishes for British success. Its salutation is "Dear Churchill."

"Certain Naval Person"

The envelope containing the note was addressed "To a Certain Naval Person, Kindness of W. Willkie." Churchill formerly was First Lord of the Admiralty and shares Mr. Roosevelt's interest in ships.

Willkie said he outlined to the President his plans for the forthcoming two weeks' tour of England, advising the Chief Executive that he wanted to talk with all the officials who could see him and that he particularly wished to confer with Ernest Bevin, Minister of Labor, and Anthony Eden, Foreign Minister. He will leave by clipper Wednesday.

Stephen Early, Presidential secretary, gave this description of the meeting between the President and the 1940 Republican presidential nominee:

"I won't be long—I know what it is to be interrupted while laboring on a speech," Willkie said at his entrance. Mr. Roosevelt extended his hand and said he was glad to see Mr. Willkie.

Before going to the White House, Hull and Willkie discussed both the European and the Far Eastern situations in a conference at the Secretary's hotel suite which lasted nearly two hours.

Pleased By Conference

Willkie described his talk with Hull as "a very delightful and informative conference" and said that the Secretary of State had "extended every courtesy" for his forthcoming trip.

Willkie, who flew here from New York, told reporters prior to his meeting with Hull that he favored the Administration's lend-lease bill for aid to Great Britain with three "serious modifications."

1—Return to the people after a designated date of the power which the bill would confer on the President.

2—Congressional retention "of the purse strings."

3—A congressional study of the bill, section by section, "to see whether any powers conferred on the President are unnecessary."

Willkie declared that the lease-lend measure "is a symbol of aid to Britain" and added:

"Feeling so strongly that if Britain doesn't win, liberty may be in danger here, I think we should give Britain all possible aid quickly and effectively.

"We should not make the President impotent to deal with international affairs or our own defense."

Will Leave Wednesday

Willkie, who will leave Wednesday morning on a plane trip to England, said he was anxious to study war-time conditions in Great Britain because he believed that Britain's economy and governmental organization after the war would have a profound effect on this country.

Asked whether he would accept a position in the Administration, Willkie replied that upon his return he expected to "return to private life" probably in the practice of law.

Willkie expressed the view that "the way to keep out of the war is by giving aid to Britain."

"If England survives," he continued, "I think we can keep out. If it doesn't, we may get in."

At another press conference later, Willkie said he had promised Hull to "drop in and talk with him" upon his return.

In England, Willkie said, he wanted to "talk to as many individuals as I can, because I want to find out what social and economic developments may come out of the war." He said he wished to talk to "the man in the street" and to visit British air raid shelters.

Willkie said he could not remain for Mr. Roosevelt's inauguration tomorrow because he had to take a typhoid inoculation in New York. He made a reservation to return to New York by train in the early morning.

While here he conferred with Representative Martin of Massachusetts, Republican national chairman, but reported that their discussion was "just pleasantries."

Denies Appointment Rumor

New York, Jan. 19.—(AP)—Wendell L. Willkie, leaving here by plane today, said he knew nothing of reports that he might be appointed Ambassador to Great Britain.

"I know nothing of it," smiled the former Republican presidential candidate. "I am going over (to England) entirely on my own responsibility, and I am paying my own expenses."

HITLER, IL DUCE MEET; SECRECY VEILS PARLEY

Aid To Italy Believed Topic—Rome And Berlin Tight-Lipped

Führer Found Mussolini Weakening, Swiss Sources Indicate

[By the Associated Press]

New York, Jan. 19—The Rome radio announced today that a meeting of "the directorate of all Fascist parties" has been called for Tuesday. No further details were given. NBC heard the broadcast.

[By the Associated Press]

Bern, Switzerland, Jan. 19—Adolf Hitler and Benito Mussolini conferred today, it was reported here in authoritative diplomatic circles, but where they met or what they accomplished was unknown.

Speculation, however, was that German aggressive action in a new direction, independently or to bolster Italy, is imminent.

In the past, meetings between the two Axis leaders often have portended developments of importance—Italy invaded Greece the same day as their last meeting at Florence, last October 28.

Place Not Disclosed

Neither Rome nor Berlin officially confirmed the meeting place of the Führer and il Duce, but, diplomatic sources said, it will be disclosed eventually in a communique. It had been presumed they would meet in Germany, perhaps at Salzburg or Munich because their last meeting was in Italy.

Observers agreed generally that Mussolini was anxious to feel out whether his Axis partner could promise military support for Italy in Albania and North Africa and, if so, how much.

Duce Weakening?

British sources launched the report that Hitler had found Mussolini weakening in his confidence in an ultimate Axis victory and that they had reviewed dozens of plans without being satisfied with any.

Considerable credence was given in neutral diplomatic sources to Balkan reports that the stage is set for increased German air aid to Italy against Greece and against the British in the Mediterranean, from Rumanian, Italian and Libyan bases.

The meeting, these sources said, merely may have been to put the chiefs' approval on Nazi-Fascist air collaboration.

"Nothing Is Known," Is All Berlin Will Say

Berlin, Jan. 19 (AP)—Strong rumors, not officially denied, circulated in Berlin today that Adolf Hitler and Benito Mussolini had a conference during the day.

A Government spokesman told inquirers "nothing is known," and well informed sources who asserted definitely that the meeting had been held could not say where the Axis leaders had met or what they had discussed.

Authorized sources said telephone communication between Rome and Berlin would be cut for the next two days, but refused to give a reason. Several press services were refused connections by the telephone central.

Calls Go Through

Nevertheless, calls put in late tonight went through to Rome without a hitch. Government spokesmen said it must have been a slip.

One expert source, when asked about the reported meeting, simply answered: "Can't you wait until morning?"

He gave no definite hint, however, that anything would be given out on where, whether or when the Axis leaders had met, and foreign reporters faced a warning of expulsion or other punishment for espionage even if they attempted to point out where the Führer or Duce might be. That has been the standing caution these many weeks.

WINTER SPENT IN PREPARING, SAYS APPELIUS

British Have Only "70-Odd" Days To Carry Out War Plan, He Adds

Fascist Warns Might Of Reich Will Be Greater This Spring

[By the Associated Press]

Rome, Jan. 19—One of Italy's authoritative Fascist writers indicated today in Premier Mussolini's own newspaper that a tremendous Nazi offensive might be expected in about two months.

Mario Appelius, in an article in Il Popolo D'Italia of Milan, observed that Germany had piled up vast supplies this winter and added: "The English high command has not more than seventy-odd days left to obtain that strategic success in the Mediterranean which is the basis for the whole English war plan for 1941."

Possibilities Noted

Appelius did not specify on which front the expected offensive would start, but usually reliable sources noted various possibilities, including a drive through the southeast toward the Dardanelles, an attack on Gibraltar through Spain, or an attempt to take Dakar or England itself.

The writer also cited Adolf Hitler's recent statement that he had suspended some arms manufacturing because of surplus material already piled up and the Führer's promise of victory for the German people in 1941.

"The power of the German military machine will be greatly superior in the spring of 1941 to that of the spring of 1940," he wrote.

German Staff Busy

"Germany has used six months of winter to increase her forces. During the winter layoff the German general staff has been busy, partly in increasing the quantitative and qualitative power of her military system and partly in weakening the forces of the enemy and his breathless preparations with inexorable methodicalness through continuous air bombings and submarine warfare.

"Germany's enormous war booty from Holland, Belgium and France has favored increased German power through utilization of the captured material. Dismembering the Maginot Line has given Germany, besides thousands of cannon, a mass of military material upon which France spent fantastic sums."

Albania Action Limited

The Italian high command's daily report said heavy snows in Albania limited activities while in North Africa there was considerable artillery action in the Tobruk sector.

In East Africa, it said, Fascist airmen bombed British air bases in the upper Sudan and bombed the railway station and troops at Aroma, and armed groups in the Makeire zone of the lower Sudan.

The communique declared also that German bombers, escorted by German and Italian fighter planes, attacked Malta, hitting hangars, barracks and runways.

GERMANS FLY 1,000 MILES TO RAID SUEZ

Luftwaffe Reported Bent On Cutting Britain's Mediterranean Supply Line

Other Nazi Planes Blast Illustrious Again, 15 Of Them Shot Down

[By the Associated Press]

Berlin, Monday, Jan. 20—German bombers last night "successfully attacked" objectives in southern and southeastern England, authorized sources reported today. The bombings were said to have started large fires.

[By the Associated Press]

Valletta, Malta, Jan. 19—German dive bombers attacked the harbor area in large numbers today, causing extensive damage to civilian property, the British announced tonight.

The communique said at least fifteen of the raiders were destroyed.

A British radio announcement heard in New York by NBC said Germany has lost eighty-seven dive-bombers since going to Italy's aid, thirty-six over Malta alone.

[By the Associated Press]

Berlin, Jan. 19—German bombers were reported today to have reached out another 1,000 miles from advanced bases, presumably in Italy, to drop explosives on "militarily important objectives" in the vicinity of the Suez Canal.

In addition, Nazi dive bombers were said to have delivered another smashing attack today on the crippled British aircraft carrier Illustrious at Valletta, Malta.

Details Kept Secret

What the German bombers did in the vicinity of the Suez or what they sought to do was not known here. The high command's communique gave it only bare mention and word was issued that there was no use trying usual German news sources for more information because there would be none.

With the raid in that area, however, the German air arm within a single week had reached from home bases in Germany almost a thousand miles southward to Sicily in an effort to cut Britain's line of supply through the Mediterranean, and had reached still another thousand miles to the Suez bottleneck of Britain's line of empire.

The final thousand-mile reach was dramatic. From the tone of German official reports it was evident that Germany intends to make the attack on the Sicilian straits dramatic and effective as well.

Three heavy bombs hit the 23,000-ton Illustrious as she lay in Valletta harbor, DNB said, but smoke and flames from other bomb hits on the dock to which the carrier was moored and on factories and an arsenal obscured the scene and prevented an accurate estimate of the damage.

Taken To Valletta

The German news agency, describing the attack on the Illustrious, said two bombs hit tugboats alongside the carrier and another apparently hit a nearby destroyer.

The Illustrious was taken to Valletta after the January 10 attack by dive bombers on a British convoy. The 9,100-ton cruiser Southampton was so badly damaged in the attack that her crew sank her.

The agency said the Germans lost three planes. Three bomb hits were claimed in the raid Friday.

The high command's communique said that yesterday afternoon "German battle planes and dive bombers, protected by German and Italian pursuit groups, attacked the airports of Halfar and Luca on the Island of Malta with bombs."

Barracks Hit

Barracks and runways were hit, the communique said, and two German planes were lost, while the British lost one.

In the communique the high command said a German submarine had sunk two steamers, totaling 8,600 gross tons, while on Friday night the air force started a number of fires in the southern part of Swansea, Wales, in attacks on military objectives, including transportation facilities.

Two airports in southeast England were attacked by a battle plane yesterday, the communique said, and some bomb hits were scored among "a considerable number of planes" on the ground.

DNB declared German long-range guns had shelled a convoy off Dover, adding that the attack was "effective." The high command said the Nazi batteries had bombarded a convoy and the harbor of Dover last night.

Nazi Raider Crashes Afire On British Farm

London, Monday, Jan. 20 (AP)—A German raider crashed in flames on an English farm late last night, killing the four members of its crew and bringing to three the number of Nazi planes reported destroyed in scattered aerial activity.

One German plane was brought down last night in southern England, the Press Association said, and the Air Ministry reported a German bomber was shot down into the English Channel by British fighters late yesterday.

London On Alert

London itself was alert against raiders. The alarm sounded shortly after blackout time last night, but only two gunfire bursts were reported in the capital area before midnight. The sound of what seemed to be a lone raider was heard shortly after the alarm.

The "all clear" in London came about two hours after midnight.

It was the only alarm of the day in the capital.

During the daylight hours, it was announced officially, there was "little air activity round our coasts," but a single bomber attacked an east-coast town in the morning, "causing little damage, but a few casualties."

Weather Unsettled

The weather over the Strait of Dover was unsettled with a strong sou'wester blowing up a choppy sea. The daylight visibility was good except for a mist which obscured the French coast.

There were no reports by evening on any British-based offensive action.

The main British problem in combatting the spreading German air offensive in the Mediterranean is the need for "sufficient land and shore-based fighters," the air correspondent of Reuters wrote today.

"Already the Germans had to bring into service their own fighters to protect the Junkers 87's (dive bombers) and employ other bombers," the correspondent said, in commenting on yesterday's Malta raid.

British Stress Air Base Need

Problem In Mediterranean Is to Get Shore Fields for Fighters

LONDON, Jan. 19 (AP).—The main British problem in combating the spreading German air offensive in the Mediterranean is the need for "sufficient land and shore-based fighters," the air correspondent of Reuters, a British news agency, wrote today.

"Already the Germans had to bring into service their own fighters to protect the Junkers-87's (dive bombers) and employ other bombers," the correspondent said, in commenting on yesterday's Malta raid.

The reported Suez Canal raid, part of a developing German plan to destroy British control of the Mediterranean, was described in a single sentence in the daily communique. "Individual German battle planes the same night (Jan. 17) attacked militarily important objectives in the region of the Suez Canal in Egypt."

TO SUCCEED ADMIRAL DRAX

Admiral Lyon To Command Thames Estuary District

London, Jan. 19 (AP)—King George VI approved today appointment of Vice-Admiral Sir George Lyon as commander in chief of the naval district which covers the Thames estuary, effective April 2.

He will succeed Admiral Sir Reginald Drax.

Britain and Spain Sign Pact for Canadian Wheat

Contract Is an Indication of Improved Relations

LONDON, Jan. 19 (AP).—The British Embassy at Madrid and the Spanish Ministry of Industry and Commerce have signed an agreement for shipment to Spain of quantities of Canadian wheat now stored by Great Britain in the United States, it was made known tonight. Under the agreement, said to have been reached yesterday, a first shipment, of 15,000 tons, will leave Baltimore soon, in Spanish ships.

The contract is regarded as a sign of improved British relations with Spain, often considered tied to the Rome-Berlin Axis but suffering from a wheat shortage, as well as an indication of smooth progress in British-Spanish talks on the status of Tangier, the Moroccan internationalized zone which Spanish forces have occupied.

The British are seeking to clear up the Tangier question at least for the duration of the war, with a promise to bring it up in post-war discussions. For the present Britain is insisting that Spain take no further action in Tangier and compensate Britons deprived of jobs through the Spanish occupation.

The extent of the wheat shipments depends on agreement on the Tangier question, it was said.

90 Ships Lost by Finns in Year

BERLIN, Jan. 19 (AP)—In a dispatch from Helsinki, D. N. B., German news bureau said today that about 90 ships, totaling 60,000 tons, had been lost by the Finnish merchant fleet in 1940, most of them sunk in war action.

Deadly New "Daddy" Spitfire Soon To Ride British Skies

Super-Fighter Hailed As "Remarkable"—U. S. Plane Outflies Messerschmitt In Mock Battle

[By the Associated Press]

London, Jan. 19—Britain's super-fighter of the air for battles this spring will be what one Royal Air Force officer called the "daddy of all Spitfires," the Daily Mail's air correspondent wrote tonight.

The plane is known as "Spitfire the third," and the correspondent called it a "remarkable development" of the original Spitfire.

He said Britain's "team of the most formidable fighter planes the world has known" will be reengined and rearmed Hurricanes, new Tornadoes, new Whirlwinds and improved Defiants.

The speed of Spitfire the third will be far in excess of 400 miles per hour, the correspondent said.

Deadlier Than "Infant"

Its armament, cannon and machine guns make it more deadly than the "infant" Spitfire, which played a major part in turning back the German Luftwaffe last fall, the correspondent added.

"There is still another new type of fighter still on the secret list which, when it goes into battle, is expected to give a good account of itself.

"Indications are that the crack fighter on the Nazi side will be a greatly improved Heinkel 113. . . . Also, a probable new Focke-Wulf fighter will make its debut."

A new four-engined Stirling bomber was described as the pride of Britain's bomber fleet.

U. S. Plane In Mock Flight

Meanwhile, a fast new American-built fighter plane outflew a captured German Messerschmitt in a mock-air battle staged as a closely studied test.

The Royal Air Force pilot who flew the latest models to reach Britain—termed it more maneuverable than a Spitfire, but needing more guns.

One expert who looked on expressed a wish for still more power for speed and altitude.

The American plane (its make and type not identified) was pitted against a Messerschmitt-110, twin-engine fighter, with R. A. F. colors painted on its wings.

Hurricane On Guard

They dived and twisted like specks of quicksilver in the sunny winter sky, while a lone British Hurricane circled above to make sure that no passing patrol thought it was a real dog fight and joined in.

When the R. A. F. pilot stepped from the American plane after the sham battle he shook hands with the British pilot of the Messerschmitt and said:

"Good show. But if you had stayed to fight you wouldn't have had a chance. My kite was beautifully maneuverable and would turn inside a Spitfire. But its armament is a bit light to our conservative way of thinking. I'd feel happier with at least eight guns of that caliber."

30.24 - 7063

[The number of machine guns on the American-built plane was not disclosed. Most British fighter planes are equipped with eight.]

More Power Needed

"Speed with altitude is what we need from America," one of Britain's leading engine experts commented after the test. "Good though these engines are, we need more power behind them."

The R. A. F. collects Axis warplanes shot down over Britain. They're torn apart for examination by experts. Then they're reassembled by technicians and flown for study.

Besides the Messerschmitt-110, the R. A. F. now has under scrutiny Messerschmitt 109's, single-engine fighters; Heinkel 111's, twin-motor bombers; Junkers 87's, dive bombers; Junkers 88's, high-speed two-motor bombers, all of German make, and an Italian CR-42, a single-seater Fiat biplane.

BRITISH TAKE KASSALA BACK FROM ITALIANS

Recapture Last Fascist-Held Anglo-Egyptian Sudan City

Motorized Units Pursue Duce's Fleeing Soldiers Into East Africa

[By the Associated Press]

Cairo, Jan. 19—British motorized units pursuing fleeing Italian soldiers along the 200-mile Sudanese front were believed tonight to have crossed the border into Italian East Africa after forcing the Fascists from Kassala, the last Anglo-Egyptian Sudan city held by Premier Benito Mussolini's men.

Their position precarious after weeks of constant patrol action by the British, the Italians withdrew three days ago from Kassala—only fifteen miles from Italian Eritrea.

Without Firing A Shot

It was only today, however, that the British announced reoccupation of the town the Italians had captured last July.

The Italians were said to have left Kassala, capital of a valuable cotton-growing section, almost without firing a shot.

Ethiopian irregulars operating in the Fascist rear were believed partly responsible for this withdrawal. With the British constantly reinforcing positions around the town and the enemy lurking along their communications in the rear, the Italians were said to have found it difficult to hold the post.

Striking At East Africa

Abandonment of Kassala was believed to mean the Italians had dropped any idea of attacking the Sudan from this region.

Apparently satisfied with the Libyan offensive in North Africa, the British were said to be striking heavily at Italian East Africa, with light tanks and armored cars leading the eastward movement.

The Italians cut British railway communications and began building strong defenses when they occupied Kassala. They were believed to have maintained about a brigade of troops in the area since its capture.

Drive Never Materialized

The British in July had only a small force in the Sudan and the Fascists were reported preparing for a 260-mile drive across the desert to Khartoum.

But the Fascist offensive never materialized and, as the British strength grew, their position became worse.

With the loss of Kassala, the Italians were believed trying to fall back to three main frontier posts built twenty miles east of Kassala.

Other Developments

The British general headquarters and R. A. F. communiques also reported these developments on other African and Mediterranean fronts:

1. A heavy air raid on Tobruk, Italian base in Libya which the British have surrounded, with a huge fire started near gasoline dumps in the besieged port.
2. Six German dive bombers shot down during a Nazi attack yesterday on the island stronghold of Malta. R. A. F. property damage was "not of a serious nature" but two British fighters were lost.
3. Air raids on targets in Italian East Africa and British Somaliland.

The British reports made no mention of a German claim that the Nazi Luftwaffe raided the Suez Canal zone.

Ends Threat To Blue Nile

The reoccupation of sprawling Kassala, a city of about 20,000 population, was said by British sources to have removed a threat to the Sennar Dam controlling waters of the Blue Nile.

Kassala is 260 miles east of Khartoum, where Haile Selassie has established court to raise his Ethiopian tribesmen against their Italian conquerors.

The announcement of Kassala's recapture came a day after it was disclosed that a British mission has been raising and training a native army deep in the interior of Ethiopia despite efforts of the Italians to find and destroy it.

At Low Cost To British

The British communique said the final action around Kassala was preceded by weeks of intensive patrol actions which inflicted daily casualties on the Italians at a low cost to the British.

It added after reporting Kassala's recapture:

"The Italian troops along this front are retreating, pursued and harassed by our mobile detachments. Active patrolling continues in the Metemma region east of Gallabat."

Gallabat is south of Kassala and near the Ethiopian frontier.

Air Raids Widespread

Royal Air Force operations extended hundreds of miles over Africa, the R. A. F. communique indicated.

Although a big fire was seen at Tobruk, the communique said other damage could not be observed because of weather conditions. The raid was carried out Friday night and early Saturday morning.

"All bombs, however, fell well in the target area," the communique said. "One Italian bomber, an F81, was shot down by an Australian squadron."

A large transport yard at Assab, Eritrean port on the Red Sea, was reported bombed with several direct hits registered.

The R. A. F. also said bombs were dropped on military buildings at Hargeisa, Italian-occupied British Somaliland.

Bombs were dropped in the target area in a raid on Asmara, the R. A. F. said, but the weather again prevented damage observation.

Unidentified Warplanes Raid Southern Palestine

Jerusalem, Jan 18 (Delayed) (AP)—Driving in over the southern coast, several planes of undetermined nationality made a night air raid on the British mandate of Palestine early Saturday.

Several bombs were dropped in southern Palestine, but no damage or casualties were reported.

A brilliant moon above low-hanging clouds facilitated the high-flying planes. Warnings sounded over the country at 1 A. M. and the all-clear thirty minutes later.

Raiders Visit Palestine

Palestine, Jan. 18 (Delayed) (AP).—Flying in over the southern coast several planes of undetermined nationality made the first night air raid of the war on the British mandate of Palestine Saturday. Several bombs were dropped in southern Palestine, but no damage or casualties were reported.

Italians Report Bombings

ROME, Jan. 19 (AP)—The Italian High Command reported today that there had been considerable artillery activity in the Tobruk sector of Libya.

In East Africa, a communiqué stated, Fascist airmen attacked British air bases in the Upper Sudan and bombed the railway station and troops at Aroma. An armed group in the Makeire zone of the Lower Sudan also was attacked, it was reported.

Anglican Minister Running Night Club For British Sailors

Alexandria, Egypt, Jan. 19 (AP)—A former rector of a Birmingham Anglican church is running a night club for British tars at this great African base because he doesn't want them to get "gypped."

The Rev. Alan Spender, 29, said that when he came here in 1939 he found "prices soaring one hundred per cent. and seamen had no place to go to get clean, wholesome entertainment, so I decided to do something about it."

He converted a 150-year-old Greek hospital into a naval club and built a huge addition to house a night club, bars, lounge, bedrooms and concert halls, which provide British sailors with drinks, food and entertainment "just to help them relax."

The club daily serves 4,000 meals and 12,000 bottles of beer. American singers and dancers are featured in the night club show.

GREEK SETBACK REPORTED IN COAST SECTOR

Italian Counter-Attack North Of Chimara Declared Successful

[By the Associated Press]

Struga, Yugoslavia, Jan. 19—Reports reaching this border town today said the Greeks and Italians have been fighting hard for the last twenty-four hours in the coastal sector near Dukati, north of Chimara.

The Greeks pushed forward, the reports said, but the Italians counter-attacked and drove them back to their positions with heavy losses on both sides.

In the Klisura-Tepeleni sector day and night fighting was going on with indications that a decisive battle was shaping up, the reports said.

Greek airmen were said to have bombed the port of Valona, but there were no reports of the damage. Greek sources said Italian transport planes were dropping sacks of food over Greek troops, mistaking them for Italians.

Greeks Repel Attempt To Recapture Heights

Athens, Jan. 19 (AP)—An Italian attempt to recapture important heights held by the Greeks north of the Albanian city of Klisura was beaten off with Italian losses of men and material, it was reported here today.

Greek sources said their soldiers waited in snowbound positions until the Italian counter-attackers approached very near. Then the Greeks opened up with heavy fire, driving the Fascists back.

The weather along the whole front continued severe, with a snowstorm blowing over most of the fighting ground. The Greeks said these bad conditions restricted activities to local operations and artillery duels.

New Advance Made

Summarizing the day's operations, a Government spokesman said: "Despite adverse weather conditions a new advance of local character was effected by our troops.

"An important reconnaissance patrol was completed and some prisoners were taken. According to information we have obtained, some new battalions of Black Shirts have arrived in Albania, but have stayed in the rear—not following the division of Tuscany Wolves whose Seventy-seventh Regiment was exterminated. The Italians say nothing of this in their communiques."

The spokesman denied Rome reports that Salonika had sustained heavy bomb damage and that British motorized forces had arrived in Salonika.

Casualty Count Disputed

A Rome radio reply to Greek figures on Italian losses in Albania was heard in New York by NBC. The Rome radio said Greece has claimed 70,000 Italians were killed, wounded or captured, "or one-third of the Italian forces in Albania."

It declared the Italian Government has published the exact figures and asked why the Greeks have not overrun the whole of Albania "considering they are now, as they imply, confronted by a mere handful of men?"

Italy has officially announced her casualties from the start of the war to December 31 as 12,377 men killed, wounded and missing.

BIG ITALIAN AIR LINER

Four-Motored Plane Expected To Bid For Ocean Trade After War

Rome, Jan. 19 (AP)—A new, four-motored ocean-going air liner built to make an Italian post-war bid for transatlantic passenger and mail service was listed today in the current issue of the Italian Aeronautic Register.

The plane was said to have a flying range of 2,500 miles with a maximum speed of 250 miles an hour.

Iron Guard Speakers Warn Enemies Of Axis

Bucharest, Rumania, Jan. 19 (AP)—In identical speeches, Iron Guard speakers at fifty public rallies throughout Rumania warned enemies of the Axis' "new order" in Europe that it would "be useless and dangerous for anyone to try to sabotage our action."

The speakers, mostly Cabinet members of the Nazi-minded Guardi- regime, denounced the "avaricious plutocracy of international Jewry and Free Masonry," charging them with provoking the war and "bringing Rumania to the state in which we found her when we took power."

Archbishop Of Lyon Confers With Envoy

Cardinal Gerlier Thought To Have Discussed Food And Religious Problems In France

Vatican City, Jan. 19 (AP)—Pierre Cardinal Gerlier, Archbishop of Lyon, France, held a long conference today with Leon Berard, French Ambassador to the Holy See.

Cardinal Gerlier is a close friend of Chief of State Marshal Petain and political observers said it was possible he might have come here to discuss the question of a French food shortage and religious problems in France.

British Reported Prepared To Bomb Rumania Oil Fields

Declared Reluctant, However, To Carry Out Plans For Fear Of Effect On Greek War

JAN 20

[By the Associated Press]

Belgrade, Yugoslavia, Jan. 19—A competent diplomatic authority said today the British have drawn up detailed plans for bombing Rumania's oil fields and rail lines, but are holding their execution in abeyance for fear of the effect on the Greek war.

Although some British diplomats in the Balkans are known to have urged such bombings, the argument has been that Germany would use such action as an excuse to send its air force and perhaps troops, as well, into Greece.

It is generally believed in diplomatic circles, however, that if Germany made a move against Greece to aid the Italians, the British would retaliate with an attack on what the Nazis call their "expeditionary force headquarters" in Rumania.

The Germans are preparing Rumanian airports for the reception of German bomber squadrons, and the British are reported keeping a close check on developments.

The British say the Nazis' vital supply depots and communication lines in Rumania would be ideal bomber targets. The rail lines from the north, over which nearly 200,000 troops have been moved into Rumania since Christmas, form a bottleneck at the Carpathians.

At some points only a single track runs through the mountain passes and tunnels and over bridges. It has als been remarked that Danube shippin could be dislocated for months b bombing the river's narrows near th Iron Gate, where the river is shallov and treacherous and easily blocked.

Neutral oil men at Ploesti say th industry's dislocation as a result of slight earthquake damaging power house chimneys has proved that on intensive bombing of half a dozen refinery power houses would cut off Naz supplies of refined products for man months.

The diplomatic authority who men tioned the British plans said numerou oil company executives who have bee expelled from Rumania have volun teered to serve as guides on any bomb ing trip which might be made against Ploesti.

Relations Maintained

For the present, British and Rumanian diplomatic relations still exist, with the British Minister and two secretaries and numerous assistants remaining in Bucharest.

British couriers come and go with secret documents and reports on what the latest moves in Rumania are. Several British journalists who fled when the German troops entered the country now have gone back.

When the Germans recently paraded an entire division of motorized equipment through Bucharest, the British Minister's limousine, flying a huge Union Jack, wound its way through the streets which teemed with Nazi trucks, tanks and armored cars.

Rumanian Government circles are represented as eager to keep the British legation in Bucharest on the supposition that no British bombings will occur as long as London diplomats remain.

Petain And Laval Reconciled; Clears Way For Deal With Nazis

Former Vice-Premier May Return To Government With "Misunderstandings" Dissipated

JAN 20 1941

[By the Associated Press]

Vichy, France, Jan. 19—Pierre Laval began a comeback in the Vichy Government today as Marshal Henri Philippe Petain, Chief of State, announced he had talked with his former Foreign Minister and Vice-Premier and that their "misunderstandings" have been "dissipated."

The announcement opened the way for Laval's return to the Government and indicated that French-German negotiations, which stalled as soon as he broke with Petain last December 13, would be resumed.

For that reason particularly observers here regarded their meeting yesterday as of prime importance. It is believed now that the principal German objection to continuing collaboration discussions—Laval's "black Friday" resignation—soon will be removed.

Meeting Held At La Ferte

The reconciliation took place aboard Petain's private train in the village of La Ferte, the last French settlement before the line separating occupied and unoccupied France.

Laval, who had come from Paris—wearing, as usual, his famous white necktie—was waiting when the marshal's train arrived and boarded it immediately for the interview which lasted 1 hour and 25 minutes. Petain was in civilian clothes.

After the meeting Laval returned to Paris and Petain continued by train to Sainte Germaine des Fosses, where he took an automobile back to Vichy.

Officials' Moves Are Secret

Great secrecy has cloaked the movements of French officials in the last few days, but observers noted that Admiral Jean Darlan, Minister of the Navy, left Friday for what was described as an important trip and was reported to have seen Laval.

Petain's meeting with the man, whom he once had designated his heir as chief of the French state, was his first since December 17.

On that day, four days after his abrupt resignation, Laval came to Vichy to confer with Petain and Otto Abetz, Adolf Hitler's Ambassador to Paris. That meeting apparently was arranged by Abetz in an effort to reunite the dissident French leaders. Laval left shortly afterward for Paris, where he is believed to have remained until Friday.

Vichy Says French Minister Is Taking Initiative in Move for Peace With Thailand

JAN 20 1941

BANGKOK, Thailand, Jan. 19 (AP)—The High Command said today that the Thai [Siamese] flag was raised yesterday over the French protectorate of Cambodia, in French Indo-China, for the first time in more than fifty years.

[Cambodia, with an area of about 65,000 square miles and a population of about 2,500,000, is widely known for the famous Angkor ruins of a "lost civilization." It lies southeast of Thailand. For several centuries it was under Siamese influence, but in 1867 the district came under France's protection by treaty and was enlarged by the addition of other provinces. Thailand recently has made territorial claims on French Indo-China for part of Cambodia.]

The official announcement said that Thai civilian officials had been sent into one district to take over its administration.

Exchanges of gunfire continued on the Mekong river frontier, and Thai planes destroyed post-telegraph headquarters in the Adumar district and also eighteen French troop transport boats, the communiqué said.

TOKYO GENERAL SAYS U. S. CAN DECIDE 2 WARS

Former Leader Of Army In China Would Use Diplomacy

Foresees Nanking Regime Continuing Struggle With Aid

[By the Associated Press]

Tokyo, Jan. 20—Lieut. Gen. Kazumi Suzuki today described the United States as the "decisive factor" in both the European and Asiatic conflicts.

He spoke before an assembly honoring Admiral Kichisaburo Nomura, the new Ambassador to the United States.

"It is rash to conclude that China will crumble at an early date," said General Suzuki, former commander of the Japanese forces in China and an authority on military affairs.

"Because of aid from the United States and Britain," he declared, "I believe China will keep up resistance for a long period.

JAN 20 1941

Long-Term Conflict

"I believe also that the European war is a long-term conflict. I believe it will be extremely difficult for Germany to carry out a successful landing campaign on British soil. The bulk of the British navy is unharmed and larger than the German and Italian navies combined.

"The Balkan situation remains confused," General Suzuki continued, "and the future is unpredictable.

"The decisive factor in both hostilities undoubtedly is the United States.

Must Use Diplomacy

"The Japanese must not be content with military preparations, but must endeavor to solve their international difficulties by means of diplomacy."

Admiral Nomura reiterated his desire to do his best to improve relations between Japan and the United States.

GERMAN RAIDERS SINK THREE SHIPS

South Pacific Prowlers Carry Japanese Insignia Until They Begin Attacks

Manila, Monday, Jan. 20.—(AP)—Three heavily armed German raiders, carrying Japanese insignia, sank at least six ships in the South Pacific between Dec. 6 and 8, Filipino seamen rescued from Emirau Island said upon their arrival here today.

Ninety-eight seamen, all marooned on Emirau by the raiders, were set ashore by the Japanese ship Kamo Maru.

Ships sent to the bottom included three British, one New Zealander, one Norwegian merchantmen, and an Australian passenger ship called Rangitaki, the seamen said.

The seamen, former crewmen on British phosphate commission ships, identified the Nazi raiders as the Narvik, the Manyo Maru, and the Tokyo Maru. The Narvik was described as a new black-painted ship which carried four eight-inch guns and two torpedo tubes, two dive-bombers, and two seaplanes.

All the raiders carried the Japanese insignia of the Rising Sun painted on their sides and flew the Japanese flag until an enemy ship was sighted, the seamen said. Then up went the Nazi Swastika.

The raiders were described as ships of 5000 to 10,000 tons. Each was manned by a crew of about 300 men wearing uniforms of Reich marines.

The rescued seamen said one of the raider commanders wore two Iron Crosses. They did not believe, however, that any of them was the famous Count Felix von Luckner, terror of the South Pacific in World War days, who has been reported back in his old haunts.

Brazil to Follow Pattern On Neutrality Violation

Likely to Notify Other Nations on Seizure of Ship

RIO DE JANEIRO, Jan. 19 (AP).—A high Brazilian source said today that if Brazil took any action in the halting and apparent seizure of the 8,199-ton French freighter Mendoza by a British warship yesterday, the action would follow the policy adopted toward past violations of the American neutrality zone.

The Mendoza, the Navy Ministry declared yesterday, was stopped by the British auxiliary cruiser Asturias about five miles off the southern Brazilian coast as she was moving out of dangerous shoal waters at that point and then proceeded to sea with the Asturias. The newspaper "O Globo" said the British put a prize crew on board.

In earlier violations of the neutrality zone, particularly in the case of the British-trailed German freighter Wakama, which was scuttled by its crew last February, the Brazilian government notified the other American nations and a protest was forwarded to Great Britain.

Officials here said there was no question of violation of Brazil's territorial waters, since the Mendoza was halted two miles outside the three-mile limit. However, the incident took place about 300 miles inside the American neutrality belt. The British have not recognized the latter limit.

HONGKONG, JAN 19-(AP)-FORTY CHINESE SEAMEN, SURVIVORS OF BRITISH AND NORWEGIAN SHIPS SUNK IN THE PACIFIC OCEAN BY GERMAN RAIDERS, WERE LANDED HERE TODAY BY A BRITISH STEAMER WHICH RESCUED THEM FROM EMIRAU ISLAND WHERE THEY HAD BEEN MAROONED.

SOME OF THE MEN HAD SPENT MORE THAN TWO MONTHS ABOARD THE RAIDER ON MEAGER RATIONS AND QUOTED THE COMMANDER AS SAYING HE WAS "AFTERBIG STUFF, SUCH AS THE QUEEN MARY."

FIRST DETAILS OF THE SINKING OF THE 7,023-TON NORWEGIAN FREIGHTER RINGWOOD WERE SUPPLIED BY CHENG AHYAO, 49-YEAR-OLD MESSMATE OF THE CRAFT. HE SAID A NAZI RAIDER, FLYING A JAPANESE FLAG, ORDERED HIS SHIP TO HALT ON OCTOBER 10, AFTER FIRING TWO WARNING SHOTS ACROSS THE BOW.

JAN 20 1941

(SINKING OF 10 VESSELS BY THE GERMANS IN THE SOUTH PACIFIC WAS REVEALED JAN. 1 WHEN 486 SURVIVORS OF SEVEN SHIPS WERE RESCUED. THEY TOLD OF THE THREE OTHER SINKINGS. THEY WERE LANDED ON EMIRAU ISLAND IN THE BISMARCK ARCHIPELAGO DEC. 21 AND WERE PICKED UP FOUR DAYS LATER.)

THE RINGWOOD'S CREW WERE HELD CAPTIVE FOR TWO MONTHS AND SIX DAYS WHILE THE RAIDER SOUGHT OTHER VICTIMS, CHENG SAID.

OTHER SURVIVORS SAID THE RAIDER CARRIED EIGHT-INCH GUNS AND FREQUENTLY REPAINTED THE DISTINGUISHING COLORS OF THE FUNNEL. THEY SAID THEY SAW ONE SCOUTING AIRPLANE FLYING OVER THE SHIP AND THEY WERE TOLD TWO OTHER PLANES WERE STORED ABOARD.

WASHINGTON WOULD HAVE TO BUY ALL METAL

Camacho Declared To Be Deeply Concerned Over Present Situation

But Mining Industry Must Have Alternate Source Of Revenue

[By the Associated Press]

Mexico City, Jan. 19—A high Government official said today that President Manuel Avila Camacho's administration would welcome an exclusive arrangement with the United States which would dry up the stream of essential war metals now flowing to the Axis from Mexico.

The idea is that the United States should purchase the republic's entire production to build up reserve stocks.

In diplomatic quarters it was reported that such a program is being studied by the American Government, but that no decision had been reached because statistical information is not complete.

Government Feels Concern

The official informant said the Government was deeply concerned over Mexico's part in supplying the war machines of Tokyo and—as is generally believed—Berlin, but that nothing could be done by Mexico alone to change this, because the mining industry is hard-pressed.

He indicated, however, that the administration was prepared to make certain concessions reducing prices of the metals concerned should the United States undertake an exclusive contract.

Hundreds of tons of Mexican lead, copper, zinc, manganese and antimony sail out of Mexican Pacific ports each month bound for the Orient, and the belief here is that a substantial percentage of these shipments reach Germany by way of Soviet Russia.

Revenue Is Vital

No precise statistics are available but one well informed source said mercury exports alone amount to around one and a quarter million pesos a month—that is, more than $250,000.

The revenue from Axis exports, well informed sources asserted, is absolutely essential to the stability of the Mexican mining industry unless like revenue can be had elsewhere.

An embargo on Axis shipments unless markets are assured in the United States, independent sources assert, could not be ordered without causing the mining industry to collapse, and this would threaten Mexico's whole domestic economy.

Early Efforts Seen

Confronted with the problems of how to liquidate deficits in the Government-controlled petroleum and railway industries, Mexico by herself lacks means of cushioning her most important industry, mining, without United States aid, it was said.

As yet there have been no actual negotiations with the United States, it was said, but the opinion is that joint efforts to evolve a workable formula would be initiated before long.

JAN 20 1941

[By the Associated Press]

Guayaquil, Ecuador, Jan. 19—A Western Hemisphere deal in which the United States would cooperate with Ecuador in building air and naval bases in the Galapagos Islands and help arbitrate the long-standing border dispute between Ecuador and Peru was reported under consideration tonight.

The Ecuadorean Government declined official confirmation or denial, but the story persisted in high political circles. Highly reliable information obtained at the capital at Quito indicated that:

The United States wants bases in the Galapagos, off Ecuador's Pacific coast, only if they can be obtained with the complete approval and cooperation of the people of Ecuador.

Ecuadorean political leaders believe the people are ready to accept a proposition for bases because they are losing their fear of "Yankee imperialism" and feel that arming the strategically located islands would protect Ecuador as greatly as they would the United States.

The islands command the Pacific approach to the Panama Canal.

Favors Defense Plan

President Carlos Arroyo del Rio said in an interview that Ecuador "desires with all fervor the defense of continental America," and said:

"The moment has not yet come to determine the form of cooperation which Ecuador will be able to give in this defense, but when it does, Ecuador will give it within the pattern of her laws, maintaining unharmed the fullness of her sovereignty, and with a broad, comprehensive spirit."

An Ecuadorean argument against ceding Galapagos bases always has been that such a step might violate sovereign guarantees of her constitution, but under a broad construction of the constitution such as the President implied the lease of bases might be declared a move to national defense.

It was learned reliably that the Ecuadorean Government would like to settle its border dispute with Peru—for one thing, to remove possible provocation for incidents such as the outbreak at Quito last Sunday.

Two Rioters Killed

Two rioters were shot dead, seventeen were wounded and thirteen policemen were hurt in that disorder which started with a demonstration in Quito and was climaxed with the stoning of the President's palace. Police blamed Communist agents.

As recently as January 6 outbreaks of fighting between Ecuadorean and Peruvian guards along the disputed frontier have been reported.

Authorized sources in Quito said the rioting and border incidents were related.

These same sources said Ecuador was willing to have the border issue arbitrated, if such a proposal were acceptable to Peru, but did not want to risk a rebuff and would like to have the moral support of the United States.

"State Of Negotiation"

It was said that both the border dispute and the Galapagos problem were in a "state of negotiation." These sources said, too, that Ecuador's Foreign Minister recently sent a note to Washington, the contents of which were not disclosed.

A United States official in Ecuador said the United States had not taken the initiative in any such moves.

The border dispute between Ecuador and Peru is more than one hundred years old.

Arbitration could take two forms, observers pointed out. One would be by renewal of the work of a commission which went to Washington several years ago, but later broke off negotiations. The other would be through a five-nation arbitration commission provided by the Havana Pan-American Conference.

PLIGHT OF CAROL HELD 'DESPERATE'

Ex-King Reported Threatening To Begin Hunger Strike To Death

Rumanian's Fate Said To Hinge On Denial Of Visa By U. S.

[By the Associated Press]

New York, Jan. 19—Former King Carol of Rumania is so despondent he threatens to begin a fast to death Tuesday unless he can escape from Spain by then, friends of the abdicated Rumanian monarch said today.

They described his plight as "desperate," and said a decision by the United States to deny him entry to this country might be his only salvation in the complicated legalities which hold him in a seemingly inextricable web in Spain.

Carol is probably the only refugee in Europe whose happiness depends on not getting an American visa.

Situation Explained

His friends, saying their information was from the former King's authorized representatives, stated the strange situation this way:

"His Majesty will hunger-strike to death if America does not promise Spain that the United States will under no circumstances give him a visa to go to America before the war is over."

Ramon Serrano Suner, Spanish Foreign Minister, they said, advised the British and United States Ambassadors in Madrid that Spain would let Carol go to Portugal if both their countries promised not to admit him.

British Visa Barred

The British Ambassador, Sir Samuel Hoare, immediately replied that Britain would give Carol no visa, his friends said, but Alexander W. Weddell, United States Ambassador, answered that American immigration laws were not easily altered and he believed no exception could be made for Carol if he applied for a visa and was found eligible.

If the United States' immigration law is aimed "mainly to protect human beings in distress," one friend said, "its effect is contrary to its own spirit in this case.

"The King will await a reply until Tuesday next. If he does not leave Spain by then we fear for his life—we know that he would rather die than continue in his present unbearable, shameful situation."

Mme. Lupescu Loyal

Asked about Mme. Magda Lupescu, Carol's friend who joined him in exile, this informant answered:

"She refuses to abandon Carol. She will do her utmost to encourage him up to the last—whatever he decides to do or whatever happens, she will follow him."

Carol is believed seeking sanctuary in Portugal, out of reach of the Rumanian Iron Guardists whose revolution overthrew him and whose bullets sped him out of the country. The new Rumanian regime has been trying to get some members of Carol's entourage back to Rumania from Spain.

Under Constant Watch

Carol, believed in Seville, under constant Spanish watch, has only restricted liberty.

His friends have said they are increasingly anxious for him to leave Spain because the Iron Guard, in purging its enemies, may have designs also against his life.

Why Spain would permit Carol to go to Portugal, but no farther, was not explained. The most recent word about him was a report in Lisbon a month ago that he had been invited by Germany to live in Nazi-occupied Holland or Belgium until his situation is clarified.

This, apparently, offered him no brighter prospect. There was no further word.

FOLO NEW YORK CAROL

BUCHAREST, RUMANIA, JAN. 20-(MONDAY)-(AP)-THE FORTUNES OF MORE THAN A DOZEN OF FORMER KING CAROL'S POLITICAL LEADERS, INCLUDING THREE FORMER PRIME MINISTERS, WERE TIED UP TODAY BY GOVERNMENT ORDER.

AMONG THE FORTUNES BLOCKED AFTER LONG INVESTIGATIONS OF THE SOURCE OF THE WEALTH WERE THOSE OF ARMAND CALINESCU, ASSASSINATED IN 1939 WHILE PREMIER, HIS SUCCESSOR AS PREMIER, GENERAL GEORGE ARGESANU, AND FORMER WAR MINISTER GENERAL GABRIEL MARINESCU. GENERALS ARGESANU AND MARINESCU WERE LISTED AS VICTIMS OF THE IRON GUARD PURGE IN RUMANIA LAST FALL.

REGRETS EXTENDED ON FLAG INCIDENT

U. S. Replies To German Note On Tearing Down Of Banner At Frisco

Berlin Calls For Punishment Of Two Navy Men Involved In Affair

[By the Associated Press]

Washington, Jan. 19—The United States expressed to Germany today its regret over an American sailor ripping a swastika flag from the German consulate in San Francisco.

The flag, run up in observance of the anniversary of the founding of the German Reich in 1871, was snatched from its ninth-floor staff yesterday by a man identified by police as Harold Sturtevant, 22, recently a fireman on the destroyer Craven.

This morning a note concerning the incident was received by the State Department from the German Embassy. Promptly the department replied expressing regret.

Probe Is Expected

The exchange was not made public, but a department spokesman said the embassy was advised that an investigation presumably would be made by San Francisco authorities.

In diplomatic usage, an expression of regret is just that and not an apology. Ordinarily, a government does not formally apologize for an incident if it regards it as the act of an individual.

Sturtevant and a companion, booked as E. G. Lackey, 23, formerly a seaman on the destroyer Perkins, were charged by San Francisco police with malicious mischief. They were docketed to appear before Police Judge Alfred J. Fritz tomorrow.

Navy Also In Case

The navy also was investigating, but Lieut. Marshall Smith, aide to the Twelfth Naval district commandant, said it would have nothing to say until the "facts are sifted."

At the time of the flag-snatching, both Sturtevant and Lackey were in civilian clothes, on leave from Mare Island Navy Yard Hospital and awaiting release from enlistment because of disability.

"How it happened was like this," Sturtevant said. "Me and Lackey were taking a walk, and we flipped a coin to see where we'd go."

Come Upon Crowd

Taking the route dictated by the flipped coin, they came upon a crowd massed in front of the building where the consulate has offices. They looked upward and saw what the crowd was staring at, the swastika flag.

"So, well, so we climbed up and cut it loose, that's all," Sturtevant said.

Sturtevant told interviewers tonight he believed at the time that he was acting to prevent a possible riot.

Crowd Getting "Mean"

He said the crowd on the street in front of the building was "beginning to get mean."

"The crowd was about ready to rush the building, so I thought it would be a good thing to get that swastika out of sight," he declared.

He said he wasn't sure that he would have ripped the flag off had he known it was hanging in front of the consulate.

"I thought it just belonged to somebody that liked the Nazis," he asserted. "After I climbed down to the pole, Lackey hollered that it belonged to the consulate, but it was too late then; I had already ripped it."

Applauded For Act

The crowd applauded Sturtevant as he perched himself on the staff, which jutted horizontally from the building.

"Shaky?" Heck, no," said the sailor. "The pole was good and solid. But that guy in the consulate that tried to pull the flag away from me didn't help any. Darn near dragged me off my perch.

"And did you see that cop that stuck his head out of a window and shouted, 'Get down offa there.' What did he expect me to do—jump?"

Punishment Of Sailors Called For By Berlin

Berlin, Monday Jan. 20 (AP)—Authorized German sources said today the German charge d'affaires at Washington had been instructed to ask punishment of the United States sailors involved in the tearing down of the Nazi flag from the German consulate in San Francisco and assurance of the right to hoist the flag again with American protection.

It was understood here that the protest was made informally, with no note being passed to the Government of the United States.

The authorized sources apparently were unaware that the regrets of the United States over the incident had been forwarded from Washington by the State Department.

In a Sunday night statement, an authorized spokesman declared the incident had created "a very bad impression" in Berlin and that "there should be an apology."

Police Called Negligent

"The police were very negligent in the case," the spokesman said, "and it has created a very bad impression. It was not a pretty thing.

"Although Secretary Hull says, 'We as a people are for order,' he had better not say it in connection with this affair. It was a very regrettable affair.

"In contrast, the British coat of arms has been on the door of the British Embassy on the Wilhelmstrasse during more than a year of war. It is not watched by policemen, yet people have not disturbed it. Nothing has ever happened to it. That affair in San Francisco can only be spoken of as a scandal."

The press expressed resentment.

Seamen Released on Writ

SAN FRANCISCO, Jan. 19 (AP)—Two Navy seamen who tore a Nazi flag from the German Consulate Saturday were ordered released from jail tonight on a writ of habeas corpus obtained by two American Legion officials.

Superior Court Judge I. M. Golden signed the writ on petition of Allan L. Graham, judge advocate of the 363d Infantry Post, and William E. Barden, commander of Fred Bunch Post of the Legion and presiding commissioner of the Superior Court. Both men are lawyers.

They declared that instead of being liable for punishment for malicious mischief, as charged, the sailors, Harold James Sturtevant and E. G. Lackey, really were to be commended for preventing a felony.

They asserted that under Section 616 of the Military and Veterans Code of California, the display of the flag by the German Consulate was illegal.

This section declares it a felony to display any device or emblem which is an "invitation or a stimulus to anarchistic action or as an aid to propaganda of any organization that advocates the overthrow of this government."

Mr. Graham said that Adolf Hitler advocated overthrow of the governments of all democracies.

KENNEDY TALK HAILED, SCORED BY LAWMAKERS

Fish Indorses Lease-Lend Criticism In Every Respect

Just Another Ostrich Speech, Bloom Says Of Message

[By the Associated Press]

Berlin, Jan. 19—German news services gave extended space today to the radio address of Joseph P. Kennedy, retiring Ambassador to Great Britain.

The accounts emphasized the opinion attributed to him that no extraordinary danger confronts the United States and that the war in Europe is not America's war.

[By the Associated Press]

Washington, Jan. 19—Opponents of the Administration's lease-lend bill for aid to Britain today applauded Ambassador Joseph P. Kennedy's stand on the measure and expressed hope he would expand on his criticism of it when he testifies this week before the House Foreign Affairs Committee.

In a radio address last night the retiring Ambassador to Britain, although urging aid for the British, said he did not feel the nation faced "such immediate danger as to justify this surrender of the authority and responsibility of Congress."

Indorses Sentiment

Commenting on Kennedy's address, Representative Fish (Rep., N. Y.) said he indorsed "the sentiment it contains in every respect."

Fish added that when Kennedy appeared before the committee, he wanted to question him at length concerning the bill's "delegation of war-making powers and control of the purse" to the President.

The New Yorker opposes the bill in its present form, but said he would be "glad to support" it if it were amended to "preserve constitutional powers for Congress."

Representative Bloom (Dem., N. Y.), chairman of the House Foreign Affairs Committee, declared, on the other hand, that Kennedy made "just another ostrich speech, with his head deep in the sands of unreality."

The chairman said he still preferred to "take the advice of Secretaries Hull, Morgenthau, Stimson and Knox and Mr. Knudsen and, above all, that of Franklin D. Roosevelt."

Kennedy Scheduled Tuesday

William S. Knudsen, defense production chief, and the Cabinet members were witnesses before the committee last week and all urged enactment of the bill as a measure necessary for this country's defense.

Kennedy is scheduled to testify Tuesday. Col. Charles A. Lindbergh, Gen. Hugh S. Johnson, Norman Thomas, Socialist leader, and Hanford MacNider, former American Legion national commander, are on the committee's list of witnesses for later in the week.

Foes of the legislation have centered much of their criticism on the contention that it would give the Chief Executive "too much power" in making decisions on what arms could be spared from this country's defenses.

Kennedy said the dividing line should be determined by the President together with army and navy experts.

Administration Hopes

Administration supporters, organizing their forces for what many of them predicted would be an extended and bitter Senate fight over the "lend-lease" bill, said a preliminary canvass indicated they could count on passage of the measure by a substantial majority.

Their first check of sentiment, they said, indicated not more than thirteen Democrats, sixteen Republicans and a Progressive—Senator La Follette, of Wisconsin—would vote against the measure on final passage.

On the other hand, opponents of the bill contended they had a "nucleus" of twenty-five opposition votes, and were winning new recruits every few days.

The Administration's informal polls were said to have indicated that a dozen Republican Senators would support the measure in substantially its present form.

Senate Procedure

Conceding that a dozen Democratic votes would go against the bill, the poll takers predicted that nearly fifty Senate members of that party would be found supporting it. Senator Norris (Ind., Neb.), who has not yet returned to Washington for the new Congress, is expected by friends to favor the measure.

The House is to act on the measure first, and leaders on both sides said amendments adopted there might be followed by shifts of sentiment in the Senate.

LEAVES FOR WASHINGTON

Sir Gerald Campbell To Take Over As British Minister

Ottawa, Jan. 19 (AP)—Sir Gerald Campbell, British high commissioner here since October, 1938, leaves tonight for Washington to take over as British Minister to the United States. He will become settled before the arrival in Washington of Viscount Halifax, the new Ambassador.

Lady Campbell will join her husband in Washington in two weeks.

1,000 U. S. TROOPS AT NEWFOUNDLAND

Force Now Located At Base Acquired There By This Country

Official Discloses Arms Work May Be Finished Sooner Than Expected

[By the Associated Press]

New York, Jan. 19—A thousand American soldiers already are at the recently-acquired United States base at Newfoundland, it was disclosed today by Louis E. Emerson, Commissioner of Defense for Newfoundland.

He said American architects and engineers are also there and that although plans called for completion of construction at the base in eighteen months work was being rushed and might be finished sooner.

Emerson and John H. Penson, Commissioner of Finance of Newfoundland, left unexpectedly on the Atlantic Clipper for Lisbon en route to London to take part in final negotiations on the base in that country, one of several acquired from Great Britain by the United States four months ago in exchange for fifty destroyers.

U. S. Commission Included

Also aboard the clipper was a three-man State Department commission going to London to confer on the ninety-nine-year leases. The men were Charles Fahy, Assistant Solicitor General; Col. Harry J. Malony, United States Army Field Artillery, and Commander Harold Biesemeier, United States Navy.

Emerson said all difficulties concerning the Newfoundland base have been adjusted and that "there is complete agreement between us on all preliminary details preceding our meeting in London. Our attitude has been that in order to get things started we have suspended all rules in favor of America, so preliminary work could be completed.

He declined to divulge the type of troops at the new base or the date of their arrival. Last Wednesday a number of soldiers left here on the transport Edmund P. Alexander for Bayonne, N. J., to load supplies before proceeding to Newfoundland.

Sailed From Bayonne

The Edmund P. Alexander sailed from Bayonne port terminal at 12.30 P. M. today after a stopover since Thursday for supplies of water and munitions.

A small crowd of spectators and several carloads of soldiers' relatives watched the sailing.

Among eleven other passengers bound for Lisbon on the Clipper were Harold P. Williamson, State Department courier, and three United States naval officers assigned as assistant naval attaches for air in London.

The Clipper carried 445 sacks of mail weighing 11,150 pounds, second largest mail load to be carried to Europe. Some was stored in space recently stripped of luxury furnishing to increase the Clipper's range and carrying capacity.

MARSHALL CLAIMS BRITISH HAVE CASH

Says Reported Exhaustion Of English Funds Is "Baby Talk"

"No War" Group Head Charges Economists List Many More Assets

[By the Associated Press]

Boston, Jan. 19—Verne Marshall, chairman of the No Foreign War Committee, asserted tonight that reports of Britain's exhaustion of her dollar credits in the United States were "baby talk."

Speaking in historic Faneuil Hall, the former Cedar Rapids (Iowa) editor told the American Mothers' Neutrality League that "England has in this country alone remaining credits sufficient to make many times the cash purchases made by her of us" since the beginning of the war.

"Reputable economists," he said, had set Britain's credits here in excess of $7,000,000,000 and that "on top of this huge sum, England has more than $15,000,000,000 of available credits elsewhere, and outside the British Isles."

Foresees Calamities

Calling for defeat of the lease-lend bill to aid Britain pending in Congress, Marshall said:

"This plan of the Roosevelt Administration to compel the taxpayers of the United States to finance England's war of imperialism, in which democracy receives not the faintest consideration, will result in financial and economic calamities here at home."

The listing of that bill as No. 1776 in the House, he said, was "part of the scheme to propagandize us back again into Europe's ancient and endless economic, governmental, political and ideological war."

Wants Explanation

Marshall called on critics of his committee to "explain exactly how this timeless slaughter overseas protects democracy, and thereby protects the United States."

"That," he said, "is an impossibility. For democracy is not and never was the real issue in the Old World's everlasting war, in which an occasional armistice must be agreed upon in order that governments may prepare themselves for intensified battle a few years later.

"It is the greed of Europe's governments for power and dominion which keeps this war going on and on."

War Communiques

British

LONDON, Jan. 19 (AP).—A communique of the Ministries of Air and Home Security:

There has been little air activity round our coasts during the day.

A single enemy bomber dropped bombs on an east coast town this morning, causing little damage but a few casualties.

An Air Ministry communique:

This afternoon an enemy bomber was intercepted by our fighters over the English Channel and chased toward the French coast. They shot it down into the sea without loss to themselves.

CAIRO, Egypt, Jan. 19 (AP).—A communique of the British Middle East command:

LIBYA—No change in the situation.

Sudan—Our troops have reoccupied Kassala. By intensive patrol over a period of weeks, our troops at a low cost to themselves have inflicted daily casualties upon the enemy who have now been forced to evacuate strongly-defended positions in and around Kassala.

The Italian troops all along this front are retreating, pursued and harassed by our mobile detachments. Active patrolling continues in the Metemma region east of Gallabat.

Kenya—Nothing of importance to report.

A communique of the Royal Air Force Middle East command:

On the nights of Jan. 17-18 bombers of the Royal Air Force raided Tobruk. A huge fire was caused near patrol (gasoline) dumps, but other damage could not be observed owing to weather conditions. All bombs, however, fell well in the target area. One Italian bomber, an F-81, was shot down by an Australian squardon.

In Italian East Africa a large transport yard at Assab was bombed, and several direct hits registered. Bombs were dropped on military buildings at Hargeisa (Italian-occupied British Somaliland) while the enemy camp five miles east of Umm a hangar was attacked and fires were started.

During the nights of Jan. 17-18 Asmara was raided, bombs falling in the target area. The resulting damage, however, was not observed owing to low clouds.

From the above operations all our aircraft returned safely, with the exception of one fighter which so far has not returned from patrol in Libya.

Malta was heavily raided by a large force of enemy aircraft JU-87's and JU-88's yesterday. Damage was caused, but not of a serious nature to Royal Air Force property.

Our fighters, although heavily outnumbered, intercepted the enemy, shot down six and badly damaged a number of others. Two of our fighters were lost, but the pilot of one was saved.

VALLETTA, Malta, Jan. 19 (AP).—A British communique:

Large numbers of German aircraft dive-bombed the harbor area Sunday morning, causing fresh extensive damage to civilians' property.

Enemy losses were heavy yesterday. The total now confirmed is seven Junkers 87, one and probably two damaged by fighters in addition to three Junkers 87 brought down by gunfire.

Today's bag confirmed totals at least fifteen enemy planes, with one of our fighters missing.

German

A submarine sank two steamers totaling 8,600 gross tons.

In the night preceding Jan. 18 the air force made attacks on militarily important objectives in Swansea. A number of large fires were started, especially in the harbor section in the southern part of the city and among transportation facilities.

Individual German battle planes the same night attacked militarily important objectives in the region of the Suez Canal in Egypt.

One battle plane yesterday made a surprise attack on two airports in southeast England, effectively dropping bombs from a low altitude and using machine guns. Bomb hits among a considerable number of planes which were assembled to be fueled could be observed.

At the Thames mouth, one merchant vessel was struck at the stern by a bomb.

Early in the afternoon of Jan. 18 German battle planes and dive bombers protected by German and Italian pursuit groups attacked the airports of Halfar and Luca on the island of Malta with bombs. There were hits with bombs of heavy caliber among barracks and on runways.

An enemy pursuit plane of the Hurricane type was shot down. Two of our own planes are missing.

Long-range batteries last night bombarded a British convoy which at long intervals tried to pass through the English Channel, and also bombarded the harbor at Dover.

Greek

ATHENS, Jan. 19 (AP).—The Greek high command communique:

There were restricted local operations. Many prisoners were taken and much materiel fell into our hands.

The Ministry of Home Security communique:

No raids on Greece today.

Italian

ROME, Jan. 19 (AP).—The Italian high command communique:

Heavy snows on the Greek front greatly limited our and the enemy's activity.

In North Africa there was artillery activity in the Tobruk sector and by our patrols in the southern Cirenaican desert.

In East Africa our air force effectively bombed enemy air bases in the upper Sudan, and at Aroma bombed the railway station and troops. An armed group also was bombed in the Makeire zone of the lower Sudan.

The enemy made an air raid on Massawa, causing slight damage to one building, and Assab, where there was no damage.

German bombing formations, escorted by a squadron of Italian and German fighter planes, attacked some airports on the island of Malta. Hangars, barracks and runways were hit and numerous large fires were observed.

One English plane of the Hurricane type was shot down and one German plane failed to return.

Census of Plants OK'd By Knudsen

WASHINGTON, Jan. 19 (AP)—William S. Knudsen, Director General of the Office of Production Management, appealed today for an "all-out performance of American ingenuity, backed by every machine and piece of equipment available," to supply the needs of the defense program.

In a letter to Walter D. Fuller, President of the National Association of Manufacturers, Knudsen urged industry to cooperate in supplying information for a National census of plants and equipment which the N. A. M. and affiliated organizations comprising the National Industrial Council are sponsoring.

"I am counting, as I am sure you are," Knudsen wrote, "on every manufacturer and machine shop proprietor in the nation—no matter how large or small—considering it a patriotic duty to supply the information requested and I am confident you will receive 100 per cent cooperation both from the largest and the smallest shops."

The inventory will be taken from Jan. 19 to 25, a period designated by the sponsors as "preparedness through production week."

Knudsen predicted that through this census industry would forge "a new and powerful tool in the form of vital information for the defense of the nation."

In a statement making public the Knudsen letter, the N.A.M. said the inventory would answer these questions, among others:

1. How many milling machines, gear cutting machines, lathes, etc., are being used part time or not at all?

2. What is the extent of our total facilities for receiving and shipping goods at manufacturing centers? Our total industrial railroad facilities? Total power generating resources at the

3. How many skilled, semi-skilled and unskilled workers—male and female—does the nation have? How many shifts do they work in what number of plants? How many workers are being taught new skills through company-sponsored training programs?

REMOVAL OF SIGNPOSTS BAFFLED EVEN THE SWISS (410)

BY CHARLES S.FOLTZ, JR.

(ADVANCE) BERN-(CORRESPONDENCE OF THE ASSOCIATED PRESS)-THEY DON'T HAVE WAR GAMES IN THE SWISS ARMY--THEY HAVE BATTLES.

THERE IS NO CIVILIAN RESERVE IN SWITZERLAND, BUT EVERY MAN FROM 20 TO 60 IS A FULL-FLEDGED SOLDIER AND PROUD OF IT.

THE AIR-RAID REHEARSALS LACK ONLY BOMBS FALLING FROM THE SKY TO MAKE THEM THE REAL THING.

TRAVELRS FROM LONDON, PARIS, BERLIN AND ROME SAY THEY'VE NEVER SEEN ANYTHING QUITE SO BLACK AS A SWISS BLACKOUT, NOR CITY STREETS QUITE SO EMPTY AS DURING A SWISS AIR ALARM.

THE SAME PEOPLE SAY THEY'VE NEVER SEEN ANYBODY TAKE WAR PRACTICE OF ALL SORTS AS SERIOUSLY AS THE SWISS. THEY'RE SO SERIOUS ABOUT IT ALL THEY GET THEMSELVES IN ALL SORTS OF FUNNY MESSES.

AS SOON AS WAR BEGAN, FOR INSTANCE, THE ARMY ORDERED ALL SIGNPOSTS REMOVED THROUGHOUT A LARGE PART OF SWITZERLAND.

THE IDEA WAS TO BAFFLE THE INVADER, BUT FREQUENTLY IT ALSO BAFFLED THE SWISS ARMY. SMALL UNITS OF SWISS TROOPS OR ARMY CARS FREQUENTLY HAD TO ASK THE LOCAL INHABITANTS FOR ROAD DIRECTIONS, AND SOMETIMES THE LOCAL INHABITANTS REFUSED TO GIVE THEM.

"SURE YOU HAVE ON SWISS UNIFORMS," THEY SAID TO THE IRATE SWISS OFFICERS, "BUT HOW DO WE KNOW YOU DIDN'T JUST PUT THEM ON TO FOOL US LIKE THE GERMANS DID IN HOLLAND?"

THE GERMANS FOUND THAT THE SWISS TOOK THEIR NEUTRALITY SERIOUSLY, TOO, WHEN SWISS FIGHTING PLANES SHOT DOWN OR FORCED DOWN AT LEAST SEVEN GERMAN BOMBERS WHICH CROSSED THE DOUBS RIVER INTO SWISS TERRITORY ON THEIR WAY BACK FROM BOMBING THE FRENCH.

FRANCE IS OUT OF THE PICTURE NOW, BUT BRITISH WAR PLANES SOMETIMES FLY OVER SWISS TERRITORY ON THEIR WAY TO BOMB NORTHERN ITALY. THEY TRAVEL BY NIGHT, MAKING IT HARD FOR SWISS WARPLANES TO DO BATTLE, BUT ANTIAIRCRAFT BATTERIES FIRE AT THEM WHEN THEY'RE WITHIN SIGHT OR SOUND. AND BOMBS HAVE FALLEN IN SWITZERLAND.

A159

SWISS WAR GAMES ARE SO REALISTIC THAT THEY FREQUENTLY FRIGHTEN SWITZERLAND'S OWN CITIZENS. MANY AN INHABITANT OF ZURICH RUSHED TO THE ZURICH RAILROAD STATION LOOKING FOR OUTGOING TRAINS RECENTLY UNDER THE IMPRESSION THAT THE FIRING AND THE FIGHTING THEY HEARD AND SAW IN THE CENTER OF THE CITY WAS THE REAL THING AND NOT JUST A "PLAY WAR."

GENEVA DIDN'T FEEL TOO COMFORTABLE, EITHER, WHEN ITS GAS MAINS BLAZED AND ITS WATER MAINS BROKE IN A REALISTIC PASSIVE DEFENSE TRYOUT.

SEVERAL TIMES SWISS BRIDGES, MINED BY ARMY EMGINEERS, HAVE BLOWN UP BY ACCIDENT AND KILLED OR INJURED SWISS SOLDIERS.

SUPPLIES GO BY PLANE
OVER ROUNDABOUT
ROUTE (260)

BY JOHN LEAR

(ADVANCE) CALI,COLOMBIA-(CORRESPONDENCE OF THE ASSOCIATED PRESS)-GERMANY IS GETTING POTENTIAL WAR SUPPLIES ALMOST WITHIN THE SHADOW OF THE PANAMA CANAL.

THEY ARE FLOWN HALF WAY AROUND THE SOUTH AMERICAN CONTINENT AND THEN ACROSS THE SOUTH ATLANTIC.

THEY COME FROM CALI, NEAR THE SOUTHEASTERN COAST OF COLOMBIA, A FEW HOURS FLYING TIME FROM PANAMA.

CHIEF OF THESE SUPPLIES IS PLATINUM--USED FOR FINE PARTS OF PRECISION INSTRUMENTS, SUCH AS BOMB SIGHTS AND AIRPLANE GAUGES. IT IS EXTREMELY VALUABLE IN ELECTRICAL GADGETS, WITHOUT WHICH A MODERN WAR MACHINE COULD NOT FUNCTION.

FOR ANY OF THESE USES, A LITTLE PLATINUM GOES A LONG WAY. AND SIX OR SEVEN KILOS (THERE ARE 2.2 POUNDS IN A KILO) ARE FLOWN FROM CALI TO GERMANY EVERY WEEK ON REGULAR COMMERCIAL PLANES.

THERE IS NOTHING SECRET ABOUT IT; THE SHIPMENTS ARE DECLARED OPENLY ON THE USUAL COMMERCIAL INVOICES. FROM THE STANDPOINT OF INTERNATIONAL LAW, THERE IS NOTHING IRREGULAR ABOUT IT BECAUSE THESE SOUTH AMERICAN COUNTRIES ARE NEUTRALS.

THE PLANES CARRY THE PLATINUM BY WAY OF LIMA TO BUENOS AIRES. FROM THERE IT CROSSES THE ATLANTIC, REACHING GERMANY THROUGH ITALY OR SWITZERLAND. SOMETIMES THE ATLANTIC CROSSINGS ARE MADE BY ITALIAN FLYING BOATS.

DRUGS FROM TROPICAL PLANTS ALSO ARE SAID TO REACH THE GERMANS IN THIS WAY.

A DRIBBLE OF GERMAN PRODUCTS REACHES SOUTH AMERICA ON THE SAME ROUTE, IN THE OPPOSITE DIRECTION. IT IS SAID THAT AIRPLANE PARTS HAVE REACHED MEXICO IN THIS MANNER. SOME TEXTILE MANUFACTURERS SAY THEY HAVE RECEIVED DYES FROM GERMANY ACROSS THE PACIFIC BY WAY OF RUSSIA AND JAPAN, BUT GOVERNMENT AGENTS DISPUTE THIS.

IN ANY CASE, THIS GERMAN TRADE, PLAYS ONLY A TINY ROLE IN THE EXPORT ECONOMY OF COLOMBIA.

Allen One of Few Reporters Ever Present At Big Sea Battle

NY SUN
Friday, Jan. 17, 1941

By LEMUEL F. PARTON.

Larry Allen, Associated Press correspondent aboard the aircraft carrier Illustrious when it was attacked for seven hours by forty Stuka bombers, is a young man, but an old-fashioned reporter. In his remarkable story, which, in a way, makes newspaper history, he employed only three personal pronouns, finding it necessary to record, along toward the end, that a bomb blew him down the hatchway and that a sheet of flame burned his face.

Newspaper reporters were on battleships in action in the Spanish-American war, but none in the world war, so far as this writer can learn, with the exception of Percival Gibbon, British novelist and short story writer, who was on a torpedo boat when it bombarded Zeebrugge, Belgian naval base. The censor whittled down his story, personal pronouns and all, until it could not be distinguished from an official hand-out. That was hard on Mr. Gibbon, who used to shoot adjectives and classical allusions like roman candles.

Hence, considering the hazards and excitements of this new kind of hell, on the Illustrious, and the fact that he got away with a bell-ringing story, with no censor laying a glove on it, it would appear that young Mr. Allen is in some kind of historic spot, at least so far as newspapering is concerned.

He is 32 years old, unmarried, with the Associated Press for eight years. In his home town, Mount Savage, Md., a small coal-mining village on the old Cumberland and Pennsylvania Railroad, he sold papers to get through high school. Local opportunity beckoned only in the coal mines and the enameled brick factory. So the tall, blond, string-bean, slightly stooped youth—he's over six feet now—browsed around many States, nibbling at schools and newspapers, always lit up with a most ingenuous and ingratiating smile.

In 1933 he smiled his way into the A. P. at Charleston, S. C., filing a wire and doing occasional leg-work, always on a lope. He is notorious for the ground he can cover. He moved on to Washington with the A. P. bureau and has many friends in the newspaper corps at the capital.

He was sent overseas in 1938, during the last months of the Spanish civil war, and loped along with the insurgent armies through the fall of Madrid, dealing plenty of good stories en route. Assigned to Cairo in 1940, he infiltrated into the Mediterranean shooting match as innocently as Mr. Smith going to Washington. He was with the British fleet when it bombarded the Dodecanese Islands last fall; aboard the Ajax in actions against the Italians off the coast of Sicily, and in the raid on Valona; on the monitor Terror when it bombarded Bardia with its 15-inch guns, just before Christmas.

He has been in the thick of British fleet action more than any other reporter, British or American. The British had "no riders" signs on their battle-wagons when the war started, but young Mr. Allen's smile was somehow irresistible.

As to the matter of precedent, again, Thomas Dieuaide of The New York Sun was on the battleship Texas in the battle of Santiago, in the Spanish-American war. That was the battle in which Capt. Jack Phillip of the Texas said, "Don't cheer, boys; the poor devils are dying." Charles P. Cooper, one of Tommy Dieuaide's editors and mentors of that day, told me today he had every reason to believe the reporter had slipped the captain his historic line.

Then there was Cornelius Berrien, also of The New York Sun, on the cruiser Newark, during the shelling of Cardenas, turning in a famous newspaper beat. And my old friend, little Eddie Graham of the Associated Press, standing at the side of Admiral Schley, on the bridge of the Brooklyn when Cervera made his luckless dash out of Santiago Harbor. Tommy Dieuaide and Eddie Graham have gone. Mr. Berrien has survived the depression Stuka bombing in Wall Street, where he still carries on.

Verestchagin, the great Russian painter, reporting the Russo-Japanese war on canvas, went down on the flagship Petropavlousk in 1904. There were reporters on the American gunboat Panay, sunk by the Japanese, but, all in all, young Mr. Allen is far out in front in observing what a dive-bomber may or may not do to a battleship.

MUSSOLINI MEETS HITLER IN SECRET

Axis Leaders Are Reported to Have Reached Accord on All Military and Diplomatic Phases of War.

Berlin, Jan. 20 (A. P.).—Military questions were reported by informed quarters to have occupied the first part of a meeting today between Adolf Hitler and Benito Mussolini at which, it was officially announced, the Axis chieftains reached complete accord on "all questions."

Field Marshal Gen. Wilhelm Keitel, chief of the German High Command, and a high Italian officer were available for advice on numerous technical questions, informed Nazis said.

The second part of the conference, they added, was concerned with diplomatic questions in which the German Foreign Minister, Joachim von Ribbentrop, and the Italian Foreign Minister, Count Galeazzo Ciano, aided.

A DNB, German official news agency, communique said:

"Der Fuehrer and Il Duce, on the occasion of their meeting in the presence of the Foreign Ministers of the Axis, had an extensive conversation concerning the situation. It came off in the spirit of the heartfelt friendship between the two Government chiefs and of the close fighting alliance existing between the German and Italian peoples. It resulted in complete accord as regards the views of both concerning all questions."

Fuehrer and Il Duce are commanders-in-chief of their respective forces and have assumed full military responsibility for the conduct of their armies, navies and air forces.

What puzzled foreign correspondents most was that at 1:15 P. M. the Wilhelmstrasse insisted that Hitler and Mussolini had not met and then only two hours later the official information was divulged to the effect that both leaders had discussed the situation extensively although the official communique disclosed neither the exact time nor the place of the meeting, it was certain that it was not held in Berlin.

Fifth Meeting During War.

This was the fifth official meeting of the German and Italian chieftains during the war. They met for the first time

Details Are Not Disclosed.

Further details of the meeting were not disclosed. If military advisers were present during any part of the discussion, no mention was made of that fact. From this it would seem the discussions were principally political rather than military, although it must be remembered that Der

March 18, 1940, at Brenner Pass in Il Duce's private railway car. The next time was for four hours in Munich on June 18, 1940, after the capitulation of France. Another Brenner Pass meeting ensued October 4, 1940, followed by a conference in Florence October 28.

As the two Axis leaders always discuss matters in greatest detail and from the broadest viewpoint possible, it may also be taken for granted that their survey included President Roosevelt's message to Congress and Secretary of State Hull's deposition before the House Foreign Relations Committee, bills for United States lend-lease legislation and utterances by other American statesmen such as Navy Secretary Frank Knox, War Secretary Henry L. Stimson and Joseph P. Kennedy, retiring American Ambassador to London.

It is safe to assume that the Greek campaign, combined with Italian-German activities in the Mediterranean and the battle of England came under discussion too. It also looks as though the meeting was held over for today to await a full report on the Friday meeting between French chief of State Petain and Pierre Laval, his former Vice-Premier and Foreign Minister.

Had Been Denied Earlier.

Before the announcement of the meeting was made a man qualified to speak had said: "I deny that a meeting between Hitler and Mussolini has taken place."

When pressed for further information, he added: "My knowledge is exhausted with this observation."

Foreign press correspondents were warned repeatedly that transmission of any definite information on movements of State dignitaries was considered espionage. The German press did not so much as hint that an Axis conference had been held or was in prospect.

Meanwhile, authorized spokesmen said that telephonic connection between Rome and Berlin had been shut down, probably for the next two days, but declined to state the reason. Some calls put in late last night went through without a hitch, although several press services were refused connections by the telephone central. A Government spokesman said that the calls that went through must have been a slip.

FUTURE POLICY BELIEVED SET BY AXIS CHIEFS

Hitler, Duce Reached "Complete Accord" On Views, DNB Reports

Details Of Conference Are Still Kept Secret, However

[By the Associated Press]

Berlin, Jan. 20—The Axis political and military policy for the immediate future was regarded as fixed tonight after a new conference between Adolf Hitler and Benito Mussolini.

About the details there was the profoundest silence. But DNB said the two leaders reached "complete accord as regards the views of both concerning all questions."

"The Führer and il Duce, on the occasion of their meeting in the presence of the Foreign Ministers of the Axis, had an extensive conversation," the official statement said.

"Spirit Of Friendship"

"It came off in the spirit of the heartfelt friendship between the two Government chiefs and of the close fighting alliance existing between the German and Italian people."

Informed quarters said military questions occupied the first part of the conference. They added that Field Marshal General Wilhelm Keitel, chief of the Nazi high command, and a high Italian officer were available for advice on technical questions.

The second part of the conference was said to have been concerned with diplomatic questions. Joachim von Ribbentrop, German Foreign Minister, and Count Galeazzo Ciano, Italian Foreign Minister, were reported to have aided in this discussion.

Little Information Expected

Authorized commentators said it was extremely unlikely that there would be any particularly informative announcements concerning the talks. They asserted it wasn't the habit of the Axis powers to tip off an enemy as to their intentions.

With the Mediterranean livening up as the center of military operations, the war as it now is being conducted on Italy's doorstep in Albania and in North Africa was certainly an important topic of discussion.

That much was indicated by well-informed Italian sources—particularly the press. The cooperation of the German air force with its Italian allies, already much in evidence from the western Mediterranean to Suez, was emphasized as more extensive than many observers had believed.

Balkans Discussed

Balkan problems also were certain to have been discussed. But German commentators were not admitting that the main course of military operations had switched to the south.

The German theory has been that the ultimate decision must be in England herself and that the Mediterranean, although flaring into momentary importance, is a comparatively incidental phase.

Nevertheless, the German attitude is that the Reich is equal to any demands from any quarter, and if strong British forces show up in the Mediterranean they must expect to attract German attention.

Scope Of Parley

Since past meetings between the Führer and il Duce always covered a lot of ground, it may be taken for granted that their most recent talk included discussion of President Roosevelt's message to Congress, Secretary of State Hull's testimony before the House Foreign Affairs Committee, United States lend-lease legislation and statements by other American statesmen such as Frank Knox, Secretary of the Navy; Henry L. Stimson, Secretary of War, and Joseph P. Kennedy, retiring Ambassador to London.

It looks also as though the conference was held over for today to await a full report on the reconciliation meeting last Friday between Henri Philippe Petain, French Chief of State, and his former Vice-Premier and Foreign Minister, Pierre Laval.

Rome Expects Axis To Focus Attention On Mediterranean

Believes Intensified Drive On British In South Will Result From Hitler-Duce Parley

[By the Associated Press]

Rome, Jan. 20 — Usually reliable sources indicated tonight that the outcome of Premier Mussolini's meeting with Adolf Hitler would be concentration on beating the British in the Mediterranean war arena.

Some foreign observers considered a coordinated German-Italian command possible as a result of the "extensive conversation concerning the situation" announced in a communique identical to that issued in Berlin.

Gayda Talks Of Coalition

Virginio Gayda, editorial spokesman of Fascism, mentioned a coalition of forces to stem British successes, and Malta appeared to be the No. 1 objective.

Stefani News Agency said one hundred German dive bombers wrought "immense devastation," sank a merchantman and damaged the British aircraft carrier Illustrious a third time in ten days at that Mediterranean island yesterday.

"Against a coalition of enemy forces, the Axis is opposing a coalition of its forces," Gayda wrote in Il Giornale d'Italia.

But the attempt to bomb Malta and its key port of Valetta into uselessness as a British naval base, and the reinforced Axis efforts in Libya and against Greece, do not, Gayda insisted, mean abandonment of a plan to attack Britain herself.

The British have "large illusions" if they count on war marking time in the north as a result of winter fogs and storms, Gayda said.

Il Giornale reported blizzards and bitter cold were hampering operations in Albania. Italian planes in waves, it continued, bombed the Premet-to-Valona highway yesterday, halting Greek columns and destroying or putting out of use a "good part" of their trucks.

Stefani's dispatch indicated attacks on Malta would continue.

"Within a few days, Malta will return to silence as a base of attacks as it was reduced to silence last summer and autumn by the efficient action of the Italian air force," Stefani added.

Hit Several Times

The agency said the aircraft carrier Illustrious was "hit several times and the side tied up to the breakwater was shaken apart in several places."

"Shipyards near where the Illustrious was anchored were completely destroyed. An arsenal hit in several sections was devastated with numerous immense craters of ruins produced by explosions of the largest caliber bombs.

"A steamer in the harbor was hit squarely in the bow and sank. . . .

"Numerous bombs exploded on docks and breakwaters, which are the backbone of the port, and destroyed windlasses, cranes and material in warehouses."

Press Predicts Major Push

German newspapers tonight predicted a major Axis thrust as the outgrowth of today's meeting of Adolf Hitler and Benito Mussolini.

The editorials emphasized that Foreign Ministers Joachim von Ribbentrop and Count Galeazzo Ciano sat in on the conference of the German and Italian leaders.

Hitler's newspaper Völkischer Beobachter observed: "Again we gladly leave prognostications over the Führer's meeting with il Duce to the Anglo-Saxon press."

Predicts Joint Victory

The Allgemeine Zeitung said, "The fight against England will be carried out decisively and jointly by Germany and Italy to make a new Europe."

"Regardless of where the fight takes place, regardless of what operations and powers share in it, it will be a joint victory," it added.

In another vein, the Görsen Zeitung said, "England must be patient for other conference details until Germany and Italy consider it suitable to open the door to the waiting room. From present examples, it appears doubtful if England will learn what she wished to learn."

PETAIN AWAITS HITLER'S REPLY

Will Sit Tight on His Present Cabinet.

Vichy, Jan. 20 (A. P.).—Chief of State Marshal Philippe Petain will sit tight with his present Cabinet, a high Government source said today, until Adolf Hitler replies to his Christmas Eve message outlining how German-French collaboration could continue.

This informant said that Cabinet changes might take place only when Fernand de Brinon, Petain's Ambassador in occupied France, brought Hitler's answer. He added that no date had been set for De Brinon to come to Vichy, but said that Cabinet changes might be considered in the meantime.

German - French negotiations broke down when Pierre Laval, Vice-Premier and Foreign Minister in the Petain regime, resigned on December 13. Petain and Laval now have been reconciled, and the negotiations were expected to be resumed soon as a result.

Although an official announcement yesterday said that their "misunderstanding had been dissipated" at a train-coach conference on Friday, nothing was said as to whether Laval had been or would be reinstated in the Cabinet.

Reviewing diplomatic highlights since Laval's removal, a Government source recalled that Otto Abetz, Hitler's representative in Paris, visited Petain and brought a message from the German Government.

The Chief of State replied in a message carried to Der Fuehrer by Naval Minister Jean Darlan on Christmas Day. This was in the form of a personal letter from Petain to Hitler, referring to possible Cabinet changes. Hitler told Admiral Darlan he would reply, this informant went on, but said that no answer had been received yet.

"The Marshal remains the Chief of France, all France—occupied and unoccupied and overseas," one spokesman said. "He remains the man in whom all authority rests. . . . Our duty is to follow him, whatever he does or says, whomever he chooses, whatever policy he pursues."

It was announced meanwhile that the Council of Ministers would meet late today. M. Laval's place as Foreign Minister has been taken by Pierre-Etienne Flandin, but Marshal Petain has indicated that he will not appoint a Vice-Premier.

Laval Goes Back to Paris.

Observers pointed out that the French, like Marshal Petain, realize the limitations of France's present position. Without M. Laval, it was said, France's effort to continue a program of collaboration with Germany had appeared fruitless.

They recalled that the previous meeting of Marshal Petain and M. Laval on December 17 had apparently been arranged by Adolf Hitler's Ambassador to Paris, Otto Abetz, presumably in an effort to reconcile the two men. M. Laval left for Paris after that meeting and remained there until Friday when he met Marshal Petain in the latter's private train at La Ferte, just south of the line separating occupied and unoccupied France. Their conference lasted for an hour and twenty-five minutes, after which M. Laval again returned to Paris and Marshal Petain to Vichy.

A French radio broadcast about the meeting said that Marshal Petain was motivated by a desire to strengthen the union of all Frenchmen and sought to avoid the dangers of a division of opinion. His decision to see M. Laval was said to have Berne Predicts Job for Laval.

Berne, Jan. 20 (A. P.).—Reports were heard here today that Pierre Laval would be designated to resume his work as France's representative in the interrupted negotiations over Franco-German collaboration.

It was said, too, France may reduce her Cabinet further. Marshal Petain has already cut his Cabinet from twenty to eight ministers.

Ambassador Leahy Gets Back on Job

Vichy, Jan. 20 (A. P.).—Admiral William D. Leahy, United States Ambassador to France, returned to his office today, having recovered from a cold and fever which had kept him confined to his home since January 11.

BOTH SIDES SLOW BATTLE OF BRITAIN

R. A. F. Stays At Home While Nazi Raids Are Spasmodic One-Plane Affairs

Three German Attacks Reported With No Casualties, Slight Damage

[By the Associated Press]

London, Jan. 20—The Battle of Britain slacked off today to spasmodic one-plane German forays in which the British said there were no casualties and only slight damage.

This was the only aerial activity. There were no reports of Royal Air Force offensive and thick weather over the English Channel apparently handicapped both sides.

British planes were in the air on the defense, however, and were said to have "severely damaged" an air raider near the east coast of Scotland. Five German bombers were reported officially to have been shot down last night during Nazi raids, four of them by anti-aircraft fire.

Three Daylight Attacks

Daylight attacks at one place in Norfolk, another in Kent and a third in the London vicinity were reported in a joint Air and Home Security ministries communique, but it said "These did only slight damage and no casualties are reported."

Mrs. Creswick Atkinson was appointed today as full-time organizer of women's and children's welfare in London's big air-raid shelters. Wife of the chief air-raid warden in Stoke-Newington, a London borough, she has been technical adviser to the women's voluntary services and the only woman member of Lord Horder's shelters and health committee.

SOUTHAMPTON RAIDED AGAIN

Britain Lists 3793 Killed During December.

London, Jan. 20 (A. P.).—The port of Southampton and other cities in the south of England were bombed by German raiders last night, it was disclosed here today. The casualties and damage were both reported light, however.

The raiders also attacked southeastern England, where they were handicapped by thick weather over the channel. They were over the London area for seven hours, but few bombs were dropped here.

Summing up, the Government declared that damage was caused by high explosive bombs at some places, but the raid was nowhere on a heavy scale. Five raiders were reported shot down, four by anti-aircraft fire.

There were no reports of offensive operations by the Royal Air Force during the night.

Today enemy planes were reported at various times in the vicinity of South Wales, western England and East Anglia, while thick fog and heavy rains limited visibility to less than 100 yards along the Strait of Dover, where a light southeasterly wind was blowing.

Meanwhile today the Ministry of Home Security reported that 3,793 civilians were killed and 5,044 injured and hospitalized in air raids in Britain during December. Of the dead, 1,691 were men, 1,434 women and 521 children. The rest were not classified.

The announced civilian toll since June 18 was thus brought to 23,081 dead and 32,296 injured. The November casualties were 4,588 dead and 6,202 injured.

Five Planes Admitted Lost.

Berlin, Jan. 20 (A. P.).—German dive bombers and combat planes last night aimed their attacks at important gas and electricity plants in Greenwich, along the Thames below London, informed Germans said today. Four large fires were said to have been started.

A similar concentrated raid on Southampton was also reported.

The German High Command acknowledged that five Nazi craft were lost in these operations.

Two Divisions Routed

LONDON, Jan. 20 (AP)—Two Italian divisions, including two Blackshirt battalions, have been routed in actions around Kassala, in the Anglo-Egyptian Sudan, authoritative military circles reported today. The Italians were said to have suffered 2,000 casualties.

British occupation of Kassala was described in these circles as the "successful climax of the war of manoeuvre carried out by numerically inferior forces against an enemy very well armed and equipped."

Military sources declared the Kassala campaign "ended all chances of Italy's launching an invasion against Khartum and the great cotton-growing section along the Nile" and apparently opened Eritrea and Ethiopia to British thrusts.

As the campaign was recounted here, the British by Jan. 9 had driven south of the town from hills to the north and could shell the Italian positions. The town, situated on the east bank of the River Gash, was almost entirely surrounded. Tanks and armored cars were said to have ceaselessly patrolled the area to the east. Infantry was established along a railroad to the west.

The Italians, reported to be faced with heavy losses and continuous shelling, prepared the retreat last Friday and Saturday. The Sheik of Kassala informed the British that they had left. The British then occupied the town.

Rome Reports Attack Repulsed

ROME, Jan. 20 (AP)—The High Command reported today that a mass attack by the British on an unidentified Italian post on the Sudanese front was repulsed.

Except for an Italian bombardment of British forces near the Jarabub Oasis and a British air raid on Tobruk, only artillery and patrol activity was reported from Libya.

Prime Minister Says Steps Are Being Taken To Prevent Export Of Order Of Gears

London, Jan. 20 (AP)—Prime Minister Churchill assured a Laborite questioner in the House of Commons today that Japan would not receive an order filled by British industry.

Replying to a question from Alfred Edwards on reports that British manufacturers were making arms for Japan, Churchill answered:

"The order was for gears which have now been completed and are under control of customs. Steps are being taken to insure that they will not be exported."

Edwards quoted a report that "munition workers have refused to work on an order for Japan."

Prayers Are With You, Hopkins Tells British

Roosevelt's Emissary Says Most In U. S. Are Confident Of English Victory

London, Jan. 20 (AP)—The Ministry of Information permitted it to be told today that Harry Hopkins, President Roosevelt's personal representative in Great Britain, made these remarks at Glasgow last Friday during his tour with Prime Minister Churchill:

"I do not intend to make a speech.

"Perhaps I can say just one thing and that is this: I know that the vast majority of my countrymen carry to you in their hearts prayers, confidence assurance of ultimate victory over enemy."

4000 Italian Captives Are Landed in Bombay

Bombay, Jan. 20 (A. P.).—Four thousand Italian prisoners captured by the British in the Egyptian-Libyan desert arrived here today. The first batch, including four generals, reached Bombay on New Year's Day.

Nazis Again Bomb Malta Base; Drive to Capture Isle Is Hinted

British Aircraft Carrier Illustrious Reported Bombed a Third Time— Ship Sinkings Are Claimed.

Rome, Jan. 20 (A. P.).—German dive bombers sank a merchantman in the harbor at Valletta, Malta, during an attack in which the crippled British aircraft carrier Illustrious was struck for the third time yesterday, the Italian High Command reported today. In addition to ships, the arsenal and port works were hit repeatedly, the communique said and added that German and Italian fighter craft escorting the stukas shot down six British planes, while four German bombers and one Italian fighter failed to return.

The intensity of the repeated German air attacks on Malta was regarded in some foreign circles here as indicating an intention to hammer that British island stronghold in the Mediterranean in the hope of forcing its surrender within the next few weeks.

British planes were reported to have dropped fire bombs on a city in the south of Italy and two civilians were reported slightly injured. Military works in the city, which was not identified in the communique, were said to have been undamagd.

Meanwhile today, Stefani, the official Italian news agency, said that the Italian authorities had learned that two British cruisers were sunk in the air attack in the Straits of Sicily ten days ago, and not one as had been earlier reported.

The first cruiser was hit by Italian dive-bombers southeast of Pantellaria Island on January 10 and the second by German bombers east of Malta the next day, Stefani said. The ships were of the same type, the agency added, and therefore it was impossible to ascertain which was the Southampton, whose loss was announced by the British Admiralty last week.

[The British said that the 9,100-ton Southampton was sunk by her own crew when fire made it necessary to abandon ship.]

Mario Appelius, authoritative Fascist writer, predicted in Il Popolo d'Italia of Milan that a tremendous Nazi offensive might be expected in about two months. "The English High Command," he wrote, "has not more than seventy-odd days left to obtain that strategic success in the Mediterranean which is the basis for the whole English war plan for 1941."

Report Suez Attack.

Berlin, Jan. 20 (A. P.).—It was reported officially today that German bombers penetrated to British positions in the Suez Canal region while Stuka dive-bombers hit the British aircraft carrier Illustrious for the third time. Three hits were reported scored on the 23,000-ton craft in the harbor at Valletta, Malta, where she was taken to undergo repairs after the original attack on January 10 off Sicily.

The German High Command dismissed the Suez raid briefly: "Individual German battle planes the same night (January 17) attacked militarily important objectives in the region of the Suez Canal in Egypt."

The communique added that besides the Illustrious, a destroyer and two merchantmen were hit at Malta. In this raid five British planes were reported shot down.

Say Raiders Lost Heavily

CAIRO, Jan. 20 (A. P.).—German dive-bombers struck twice at the harbor area of Valletta, Malta, over the week end, and the British declared that at least fifteen raiders were shot down in yesterday's heavy raid, while one British fighter was reported missing. They said that civilian property suffered extensive damage.

There was no mention by the British of the German claim to have raided the Suez Canal zone.

Several planes of undetermined nationality made the first night raid of the war on British-mandated Palestine over the week end also, but there were no reports of casualties or damage, although several bombs were dropped during a thirty-minute alert.

Air Raid Alarm In Basle.

BRITISH PUSH TWIN DRIVE IN ETHIOPIA

Report Italian Flight From Sudan Is General On 200-Mile Front

Appear To Be Aiming At Red Sea To Cut Fascist Colony In Two

[By the Associated Press]

Valletta, Malta, Jan. 20—Nineteen Axis warplanes were shot down during yesterday's heavy raids on this Mediterranean fortress, eleven by British fighter planes and eight by anti-aircraft guns, the British said tonight.

This was a declared total of thirty-nine German and Italian losses for three days.

In addition, three other Axis planes probably were destroyed and nine damaged, the British account said, while only three British aircraft were lost with the pilots of two reported safe.

[By the Associated Press]

Cairo, Jan. 20—British desert fighters have driven into Italian Eritrea at two points along the Anglo-Egyptian Sudan and are continuing their advance in contact with the fleeing Fascists, the British middle east command announced today.

With the Italian flight from the Sudan reported to be general all along a 200-mile front, the British command said its forces were hard on the heels of Mussolini's men east of the Eritrean towns of Tessenei and Sabderat, where fortified Fascist positions were captured without a struggle.

Situation Of Two Towns

Sabderat is on the south central Sudan-Eritrean border about twenty miles east of Kassala, Sudan outpost wrested from the Italians yesterday by the British with the aid of Ethiopian irregulars. Tessenei, a rail head and port on the Gash river, is some thirty miles southeast of Kassala and several miles inside Eritrea.

The British eastward advance may be aimed at driving straight across Eritrea to Massaua, Red Sea port some 200 miles from the Sudan frontier, and cutting the Italian colony in two at its approximate middle.

R. A. F. Blasts Foe

The ground operations were preceded by heavy R. A. F. assaults on Italian positions about Tessenei and Massaua. Attacking pilots said numerous fires were started.

In Libya, where a British assault on Tobruk is expected shortly, the communique said: "Nothing to report."

British mobile units driving on Italians in Kenya were declared to be "steadily gaining ground and inflicting casualties on the enemy."

Duce's Sway In Ethiopia Threatened By British

London, Jan. 20 (AP)—Authoritative military circles here today declared the British occupation of Kassala, in the Anglo-Egyptian Sudan north of the Ethiopian border, was a threat to continued Italian domination over the former kingdom of Haille Selassie.

General Sir Archibald P. Wavell's East African campaign, they said, is now geared for "more advanced operations."

Authorized British quarters kept silent on the size of the native rebel movement in Ethiopia against the Italians, but one neutral military source placed the number at between 30,000 and 80,000 men. They are supplied with British guns.

British military sources said the ejection of the Italians from Kassala "ended all chances" of a Fascist invasion against Khartoum, in the Anglo-Egyptian Sudan and the Nile cotton-growing region.

Two Italian divisions, including two Black Shirt battalions, were routed and suffered 2,000 casualties in the operations around Kassala, these quarters said.

British Take Prisoners In East Africa Clashes

Nairobi, Kenya, Jan. 20 (AP)—South African forces, part of the southern jaw of a British pincer campaign against the Italians in East Africa, reported today the capture of enemy soldiers in clashes on the Kenya-Italian Somaliland and Kenya-Ethiopian borders.

A number of prisoners were taken in the El Yibo area, near Lake Rudolf along the border between Yenya and western Ethiopia, said a communique, and eleven dead, including two European officers, were left behind by the dispersed Fascist unit.

R. A. F. REPELS RAID, ATHENS SEES FIGHT

Crowds Watch As One Italian Plane Is Shot Down In Attack On Piræus

Other British Airmen Bomb Berati—Greeks Report New Advance Near Klisura

[By the Associated Press]

Athens, Jan. 20—British fighter planes shot down one Italian bomber, damaged and apparently downed another and drove off the remainder of two raiding formations in a brief but fierce dog fight waged today nearly two miles above Athens.

The battle was fought in the full view of thousands of jubilant Athenians. Some civilians were killed or wounded in the bombed area.

The sky fight took place shortly after noon when Italian raiders appeared for an attack on Piræus, port of Athens some five miles from the capital proper.

They came first in a formation of four and were met by a terrific anti-aircraft barrage.

R. A. F. Fighters Arise

By the time the next formation of five Italian bombers arrived, British fighters had risen to meet them.

Soon, one Italian was falling, smoke trailing from his fuselage.

Civilians watching it danced and shouted in the streets.

A Greek communique later reported one Italian bomber came down near the Island of Fleves and another west of Cape Sunium. Four members of the crew of one bomber bailed out.

It was the longest air-raid alarm of the war for Athens—ninety minutes.

Most Fall Harmlessly

Most of the bombs fell harmlessly into the harbor, and shipping facilities escaped damage.

There were a few dead and wounded among civilians, and a small number of refugee houses were wrecked, the Greek communique said.

The R. A. F. communique said no damage of military consequence resulted.

The Greek communique also said bombs were dropped on rural districts of Elevsis, Corfu and Candia without damage or casualties.

A British bomber was lost when it caught fire after overshooting the landing field on return from the battle.

Has Escaped Bombing

Although Athens proper has escaped bombing in the war to date, its airport was attacked October 28. Piræus has been subjected to several air raids.

A Rome radio broadcast shortly after the Greek-Italian conflict started virtually promised Athens immunity from air attacks if Rome were not bombed.

Piræus is located on the Gulf of Ægina and has modern quays and piers which accommodate all but the largest ships. It served as the port of ancient Athens.

Meanwhile, British bombers carried out a "successful raid" yesterday on Berati, in the central Albanian sector, a communique asserted today, and blasted away at Italian military concentrations and transports.

Buildings Struck

Buildings east of the town were hit, the war bulletin said, "several fires being started."

The planes loosed both explosive and incendiary bombs, it added, and all returned safely.

Despite continuous bad weather, the Greek army was reported to have intensified its attacks north of Klisura on the central front, preceding its raid with a heavy artillery bombardment of the Italian-held positions.

Italian Lines Stormed

Then the infantry stormed the Italian lines, breaking through in some sectors, dispatches reported. The operations were described as of particular importance.

Other reports from the front said there was heavy air activity in the central sector, with Greek planes bombing and machine-gunning Italian troops.

Heavy snows and the continued cold were said to have held up operations on the other fronts.

Destruction of an enemy submarine by "our anti-submarine organization" was reported tonight by the Greek Ministry of Marine.

R. A. F. HEAVILY POUNDS BERATI

Albanian Oil Town Reported Severely Bombed.

Athens, Jan. 20 (A. P.).—A destructive raid with fire and high explosive bombs on Berato, Italian-held town in the oil region of central Albania, was reported today by the Middle East Command, Royal Air Force. "Bombs fell on military concentrations and motor transports, and buildings east of the town were hit, several fires being started," the communique said.

In spite of steady bad weather, the Greeks intensified attacks north of Kliusra and pounded the Italian positions heavily with artillery, dispatches from the front said. Greek planes were also reported active, bombing and machine-gunning Italian troops.

Italians Ambushed.

Greek front-line troops hiding in the snow were reported to have ambushed and shattered over the week end an Italian counter-attack north of Klisura, where the Greeks are driving through central Albania toward Berati. The Greek High Command declared today many prisoners and much war material were taken.

A Government spokesman said that the Fascists were attempting to recapture important heights north of Klisura, and that the Greeks waited in snow-shrouded positions until the Italians were almost upon them before opening fire.

Along the entire Albanian front, the spokesman said, cold and snowstorms restricted operations to local engagements and artillery shelling.

Decisive Battle Expected.

Belgrade, Jan. 20 (A. P.).—Reports reaching the border town of Struga, Yugoslavia, last night said that increased action on both sides indicated that a decisive battle was shapping up in the region of Klisura and Tepeleni, ten miles to the southwest.

According to these reports, Italian counter-attacks drove the Greeks back in the vicinity of Dukati, fifteen miles north of Chimara and almost half-way from that port to the port of Valona.

A diplomatic informant here was quoted, meanwhile, as saying that the British have drawn up detailed plans for bombing Rumania's Nazi-guarded oil fields and railway lines, but that they have withheld action for fear of bringing Germany into the war against Greece. The Germans, this informant said, might use such bombings as an excuse to send warplanes or even troops into Greece.

The Rumanian oil fields and the single track train lines through the Rumanian mountain passes were described as particularly vulnerable to bomb attack.

Italian Bombers Active.

ROME, Jan. 20 (A. P.).—The Italian High Command today reported no outstanding event on the Albanian front, where the weather conditions continued unfavorable. The communique added, however, that effective bombing actions were carried out on enemy bases and that the Italian pilots also machined-gunned and dropped shrapnel bombs on troops and supply columns.

Meanwhile today Il Popolo di Roma reported that Roberto Farinacci, Fascist extremist and one-time secretary of the party, would go to Albania, presumably to fight against the Greeks. The Italian Foreign Minister, Count Galeazzo Ciano, and other Government and party leaders are expected to go later, reports here said.

ROME, JAN 20-(AP)-STEFANI, ITALIAN NEWS AGENCY, IN A RECAPITULATION OF THE GERMAN-ITALIAN ATTACK ON A BRITISH CONVOY IN THE MEDITERRANEAN JAN. 9-11 SAID TONIGHT THE 31,000-TON BRITISH BATTLESHIP MALAYA WAS SO DAMAGED THAT IT HAD TO BE DOCKED IN GIBRALTAR FOR REPAIRS.

(LAST WEEK, ROME CLAIMED TO HAVE DAMAGED A BATTLESHIP OF THE "MALAYA CLASS." THE MALAYA, ACCORDING TO JANE'S FIGHTING SHIPS, BELONGS TO THE QUEEN ELIZABETH CLASS AND WAS BUILT IN 1916.)

STEFANI SAID IT LEARNED THE NAME OF THE DAMAGED BATTLESHIP FROM A RELIABLE SOURCE.

FIRST NOTICE OF THE 22 ENLGISH UNITS MOVING EASTWARD FROM GIBRALTAR WAS GIVEN BY THE ITALIAN SARDINIA AIR PATROL ON JAN. 9, STEFANI RELATED. ABOUT 7:30 THE FOLLOWING MORNING, THE FORCE WAS SPOTTED IN THE SICILIAN CHANNEL BY ITALIAN TORPEDO BOATS.

THEY STRUCK THE BRITISH DESTROYER GALLANT (WHICH THE BRITISH ADMIT WAS DAMAGED) WITH TWO TORPEDOES.

THE REPORT THEN DESCRIBED AN ATTACK BY ITALIAN TORPEDO PLANES AND GERMAN DIVE BOMBERS ON THE AIRCRAFT CARRIER ILLUSTRIOUS WHICH THE BRITISH ACKNOWLEDGED WAS DAMAGED LAST WEEK.

THREE ITALIAN BOMBERS ON JANUARY 10 STRUCK A CRUISER OF THE SOUTHAMPTON TYPE WITH TWO BOMBS, CAUSING IT TO LIST SO THAT IT WAS UNABLE TO USE ITS GUNS AGAINST SUBSEQUENT AIR ATTACKERS, STEFANI CONTINUED.

(THE BRITISH ACKNOWLEDGED LOSS OF THE CRUISER SOUTHAMPTON WHICH THEY SAID THEY SANK THEMSELVES WHEN A FIRE ABOARD IT COULD NOT BE QUENCHED)

IT ADDED THAT GERMAN FLIERS ATTACKED LESSER UNITS WEST OF MALTA

THE SAME DAY, HITTING DESTROYERS.

THE FOLLOWING DAY, GERMAN DIVE BOMBERS ATTACKED THREE CRUISERS, STRIKING ONE OF THE SOUTHAMPTON TYPE WITH ONE BOMB "SURELY AND POSSIBLY TWO."

HALF AN HOUR LATER AN AIRPLANE OBSERVED THE CRUISER BEING SHELLED BY ENGLISH UNITS.

NAZI'S KILLING ROUSES FRESH BALKAN FEARS

Ex-Boxer Of "Greek Origin" Reported Held In Slaying Of Officer

German Army Of 200,000 Declared Ready To Move At Moment's Notice

[By the Associated Press]

Belgrade, Yugoslavia, Jan. 20—Reports that a German general staff officer had been shot dead in Bucharest deepened Balkan anxiety tonight as military observers agreed that a so-called Nazi "expeditionary force" of about 200,000 men was ready to move south, east or west at a moment's notice.

The slain officer was identified in dispatches to Belgrade newspapers as a Major Doring. A former professional boxer of "Greek origin" was reported arrested.

Quarrel In Cafe

Bucharest police, these reports said, quoted the prisoner as saying he quarreled with the officer in a cafe, followed him to the Hotel Ambassador and fired five shots into him at the hotel entrance. The shooting took place only two blocks from the Rumanian Royal Palace, now the German general staff headquarters.

A hint of Nazi military readiness was seen in a diplomatic report from Bucharest that the Nazi command had requested the Rumanian telephone company to allot special lines immediately to Sofia and Athens.

Phone Connection Cut

All telephone connection between Yugoslavia and Rumania has been severed and Rumania is reported suddenly to have ordered that no Greeks may leave.

Headquarters for eight German divisions are reported to have been established in Transylvania, near the Yugoslav frontier; in Moldavia, near the Russian frontier; in Oltenia, across the Danube river from Bulgaria, and in Rumania's oil fields. Numerous anti-aircraft and other separate units also are now stationed in Rumania.

Nazi Army Increasing

By the end of the month, observers believe, the Nazis' Rumanian army will total about 300,000 men. Rumanian reports tell now of streets in Bucharest and other large cities filled with lead-gray motorized equipment and of thousands of trucks, armored cars and ambulances parked permanently in side streets, with their drivers billeted close by, ready for a quick departure.

In some villages all peasant houses are filled with German soldiers. All Jewish schools in Bucharest have been requisitioned for German canteens and headquarters, and Nazi officers are being quartered in the homes and apartments of thousands of Jews.

Donovan Visits Sofia as Balkan Pact Is Hinted

Greek - Turkish - Bulgarian Entente Rumored After U. S. Observer Arrives

SOFIA, Jan. 20 (AP).—Col. William J. Donovan, American war observer, had only completed his first round of unofficial calls here today when sources usually reliable stated that an effort was being made to bring Greece, Turkey and Bulgaria into a Balkan entente. There was no indication that Col. Donovan had a part in the reported negotiations.

It was not possible immediately to ascertain the nature of the agreement said to be planned, but one informant said Bulgaria had found Greek leaders receptive during preliminary diplomatic soundings at Athens.

Col. Donovan, traveling without public official indorsement, reached Sofia today to consult with King Boris III and others here on what was described as a give-and-take mission of information.

Diplomatic circles speculated on the import of Col. Donovan's visit and some said that, despite his unofficial rating, what he told the King might have a bearing on Bulgaria's decision concerning new German pressure on this country.

He visited the British Minister to Bulgaria today, talked with private informants and made appointments to see Premier Bogdan Philoff and Foreign Minister Ivan Popoff tomorrow. Col. Donovan's meeting with King Boris was set for Wednesday, a short time before he leaves Sofia.

The prime news tonight, however, was the report of Greek-Bulgarian-Turkish discussions. It was said that the question of the status of Thrace in eastern Greece, long a sore point in Greco-Turkish relations, might now be a subject of negotiation, with Turkey more favorably disposed toward an arbitrated settlement.

Some political circles saw in these reports the first groundwork of a Balkan entente which might include Yugoslavia.

Mindful of Rumania's recent assignment of railroad facilities for the use of the German Army, foreign observers here speculated tonight about an order restricting Bulgaria's railroad service, effective Jan. 22, with the official reason that the engines needed repairs after a year of heavy service.

This was the same explanation given when Hungary and Rumania curtailed their civil traffic and began hauling Nazi men and material.

Colonel Donovan's arrival was unpublicized. There were no stories in the newspapers. However, the government press department issued an order banning anti-American articles and cartoons—many of which had been appearing recently.

Another arrival today was a representative of the German Ministry of Labor who came to hire 700 construction workers for an unnamed project, and 2,000 miners and agricultural hands.

Bucharest Bombings Reported

SOFIA, Bulgaria, Tuesday, Jan. 21 (AP)—Many casualties among civilians, German soldiers and Rumanian Iron Guards as a result of bombings in the streets of Bucharest were reported early today in a diplomatic dispatch from the Rumanian capital.

There was no immediate confirmation of the reported fighting since Bucharest was unreachable by telephone.

Hasn't Heard Hitler Would Conquer World

Otto Dietrich, Führer's Press Chief, Says He Has No Knowledge Of Such Ambition

Prague, Bohemia-Moravia Protectorate, Jan. 20 (AP)—Otto Dietrich, Adolf Hitler's press chief, asserted today that, just as human beings are unequal, so nations also are unequal, and only those nations which accomplish most for mankind deserve to stand at the top.

Speaking to the German Academy here on "The Spiritual Foundation of the New Europe," Dietrich said he was in a position to reply to charges that Germany sought to conquer the world.

"I think if Hitler had any idea that he was going to conquer the world I would have heard something about it," he said. "Such assumptions (of a German program of world conquest) are possible only because there still are some people in the world who are as gullible as children."

Japan Names Envoy to France

TOKYO, Tuesday, Jan. 21 (AP)—The Foreign Office today announced the appointment of Sotomatsu Kato, former Minister at large to China, as Ambassador to France.

Matsuoka Tells U. S. to Ponder Perils of War

Fears Civilization's End if Japan and America Are Drawn Into World Fight

TOKIO, Jan. 21 (Tuesday) (AP).—Foreign Minister Yosuke Matsuoka told the Japanese Diet (Parliament) today that Japan, Germany and Italy certainly would accomplish their goal of a new world order "if only given time," and expressed hope that the United States "will bend her utmost efforts to allay the impending crisis of civilization."

Should both the United States and Japan become involved in a new world war because of the triple military alliance, he said "no one could guarantee that it could not develop into a war spelling the downfall of modern civilization."

American trade embargoes against Japan, he said, left his country no alternative but to build up a self-sufficient trade sphere in greater East Asia, and he declared that the United States "has evinced no adequate understanding" that such a sphere "is truly a matter of vital concern to Japan."

"British dominions and colonies are in various ways interfering with Japan's shipping," he said.

Seeks Accord With Russia

He represented the military alliance with Germany and Italy as a device designed to "prevent further extension of present disturbances" and said that Germany and Italy shared his country's desire to remove mutual Japanese-Russian misunderstandings.

"Some of these pending issues (with Russia) are now well on the way to settlement," he said.

"Establishment of a new world order, the goal of the powerful triple pact, if only given time, will surely be accomplished," he continued.

"There is no room for doubt that it will be crowned with brilliant success. If the Japanese people are fully and firmly prepared for this task, the future of our empire will indeed be great and glorious."

"The United States," the Japanese Foreign Minister said, in a long foreign policy review, "apparently entertains the idea that her own first line of national defense lies along the mid-Atlantic to the east, and not only westward along the eastern Pacific, but even as far as China and the South Seas.

"If the United States assumes such an attitude it would be, to say the least, a very one-sided contention on her part to cast reflections on our superiority in the western Pacific by suggesting that it betokens ambitious designs.

"I, for one, believe that such a position assumed on the part of the United States would not be calculated to contribute toward promotion of world peace. Speaking frankly, I should extremely regret such an attitude of the United States for the sake of Japanese-American friendship, for the sake of peace in the Pacific, and also for the sake of world peace in general.

Hopes U. S. Will 'Reflect Deeply'

"It is my earnest hope that that great nation, exerting the influence that the United States legitimately does, will realize her responsibility for maintenance of peace, will reflect deeply on her attitude with a truly God-fearing duty, will courageously liquidate part of the circumstances and will bend her utmost efforts to allay the impending crisis of civilization.

"The prevailing confusion of international situation shows no sign of subsiding, but on the contrary it tends to increase. Should the United States unfortunately become involved in the European war and should Japan, too, be compelled to participate in war, another great world war both in name and reality would ensue and precipitate a situation which would defy all attempt at saving it.

"Should the war take its furious course, unleashing formidable new weapons which have not hitherto been used, no one could guaranty that it could not develop into a war spelling the downfall of modern civilization."

Since the United States abrogated its trade treaty with Japan in July, 1939, Matsuoka said, the United States "has been enforcing in succession embargoes and restrictions on exports to Japan. . . . And this tendency has been so greatly aggravated recently that Japan must meet the situation adequately prepared.

"No Other Course"

"No other course is left to Japan but to go forward with perfecting herself as a state highly organized for national defense, not only in order to meet this pressure but also to secure economic life on a self-supply and self-sufficiency within the region of greater East Asia."

In this connection, he said trade negotiations were under way with French Indo-China and the Netherlands East Indies regarding the "purchases of oil and other urgent questions."

Lands Should Be Intimate

These two territories, he declared, "if only for geographical reasons, should be in intimate and inseparable relationship with our country," and added:

"Therefore, a situation which has hitherto thwarted development of this natural relationship must be thoroughly remedied and relations of good neighborliness secured for the promotion of mutual prosperity."

He also had a friendly word for Thailand in her border dispute with French Indo-China.

"Japan," he said, "as leader in East Asia, cannot afford to remain indifferent to such a dispute, which she hopes will be settled at the earliest possible opportunity."

Recalls Friendship

And he recalled Japan's friendship for Thailand in memory of Thailand's abstention from voting in the League of Nation's assembly dealing with Japan's part in the Manchurian affair in 1933.

He referred to the "miserable plight" of Chiang Kai-shek's regime which, he said, continued to resist Japan because of "its misplaced hopes in assistance from Great Britain and the United States, especially the latter."

Because of large-scale American plans to aid Britain, and the bombing of the Burma road, he said "it therefore seems highly problematical what assistance Great Britain and the United States actually can afford the Chiang Kai-shek regime."

In referring to Italy's military operations, he said "there appear to be various species of malicious propaganda circulated on this, but I have no doubt that our ally, Italy, will attain her object before long."

THAI NAVY IS SEEN SMASHED IN FIGHT

French Asiatic Squadron Said by Chief to Have Destroyed Foe's Main Force

HINT OF JAPANESE ACTION

Bangkok Claims Victory, but Ships Back at Saigon Are Found Undamaged

SAIGON, French Indo-China, Jan. 20 (AP)—Admiral Terraux, its commander, declared tonight that the French Asiatic squadron had destroyed the main force of the Thai Navy in his surprise attack in the Gulf of Siam on the night of Jan. 16.

The French vessels, he said on his return here, threaded tortuous channels to reach the Thai (Siamese) fleet's anchorage under cover of darkness. French officers had high praise for the seamanship of the Thai crews during the engagement and hinted that Japanese naval instructors training the Thai Navy might have had a part in the fighting.

Reports from Bangkok described heavy damage to French fleet units, but an inspection today of all the ships participating in the battle revealed not a scratch. This inspection included the cruiser Lamotte-Picquet, which needed only minor repairs to damage caused by constant firing through the two-hour engagement.

[A United Press correspondent at Saigon likewise reported inspecting the Lamotte-Picquet, a 7,249-ton, 6-inch-gun cruiser, and finding her unharmed.]

Tempering his report of the naval victory, Admiral Terraux stated that Thailand had war equipment superior to that of the French Far Eastern forces and that Indo-China was in urgent need of arms, especially airplanes, which could only be obtained in the United States.

Thai planes yesterday bombed Luang Prabang, capital of Laos Province, which sixty years ago was burned by the Siamese before the French colonists took over. Pakhin-Bun and Ream, a seaport in southern Cambodia, also were bombed.

SIAMESE REPORT 3 WARSHIPS SUNK

Say a Fourth French Vessel Is Believed Destroyed.

Bangkok, Jan. 20 (A. P.).—Three French warships were sunk, the 7,880-ton French cruiser Lamotte-Picquet was believed sunk and a French naval plane was shot down on Friday in a naval battle off the island of Koh Chang in the Gulf of Siam, the Thai (Siamese) High Command reported today.

Seven French warships led by the Lamotte-Picquet launched the attack early on Friday, the communique said, but Thai naval and air forces took up the challenge in a three-hour exchange of shells and air bombs. The Lamotte-Picquet, it said, disappeared in a zig-zag retreat after the Thai cruiser Dhonburi had scored several hits and fire had resulted in the engine room. Thai reconnaissance planes were said later to have found no trace of the French vessel. The Dhonburi is a fast, new Italian-built cruiser of 4,200 tons mounting six-inch guns.

A large force of Thai bombers was reported today to have dropped more than three tons of bombs in an attack on the French naval base at Ream on the Gulf of Siam.

A sharply differing version, said to have been received by the French Navy Minister, Admiral Jean Darlan, at Vichy, gave this account of the battle:

A French squadron engaged a Thai flotilla in a dawn attack on a Thai anchorage after splitting into groups during the night and entering navigation channels among dangerous reefs to wait for daylight. The Thai forces lost one of their two modern Coast Guard ships of about 2,000 tons, and two, and perhaps all three, torpedo boats. There were no French losses or material damage, the Vichy report said.

School Head Interned In Dutch East Indies

Batavia, Jan. 20 (A. P.).—The police disclosed today that Dr. Douwes Dekker, head of a private school at Bandoeng, headquarters for the East Indies Army, had been interned on charges of furnishing information to the Japanese.

He also was interned in Singapore during the world war on charges of having aided Germany, they said. He is a Dutch subject.

Biggest Store in the World Serves 45,000,000 Persons

Nod of Single Man Can Say How Much Each Customer Will Be Able to Obtain

LONDON, Jan. 20 (AP)—Tall, gray-haired Lord Woolton, Britain's minister of food, is proud of the fact that he runs the biggest store in the world.

He has roughly 45,000,000 customers and he alone buys for them $2,400,000,000 worth of food each year.

A nod from him can make a stronger or a weaker brew of tea in mansion or cottage throughout the land, or sweep another item from the shortened menus in the marble and gilt restaurants of Piccadilly and the Strand.

His interests range from caviar to the meat that goes into the British bulldog's biscuits.

The nucleus of the Food Ministry existed as humble department of the Board of Trade since December, 1936. A small band of experts under Henry French (now Sir Henry French, permanent secretary of the Food Ministry) prepared for the necessary rationing of certain foods if war came. Some 80,000,000 ration books were printed with the dates left blank—to be filled in later. There still are blank pages in the ration books ready for what may be rationed later.

Immediately upon the outbreak of war, a separate Food Ministry was formed.

Handled From Wales

Most of the ministry has been moved to Wales, where illustrated charts on such subjects as "the principal cuts of beef, mutton and lamb" hang on the walls of the big hotels in a onetime popular seaside resort.

A small shadow ministry remains with the minister in London, officials maintaining communication with Wales by telephone or teleprinter, saying "I want milk" or "Give me meat" as they call for the advice of different sections.

Here are the main jobs the Food Ministry must do:

1. Buy more than 90 per cent of the nation's imported food. What remains is imported through independent traders under government license.)

2. Eliminate the old cut-throat competition between rival wholesalers and retailers and induce them to conclude "mutual assistance pacts" among themselves.

3. Teach the English housewife (who is notoriously extravagant and wasteful) to exercise rigid economy in her kitchen.

4. Hold adequate food stocks in safety against any sudden wartime emergency which causes breakdown in the storing or transport systems.

As a former director of Lewis's, e of the big Liverpool stores, Lord Woolton tackles his problems as a business man.

Just Business Man

"I have no political past and no political future," he is fond of saying in his quiet way. "I am just a business man."

The question of storing food where it would be safe from enemy air attack was solved long before the heavy attacks of the Nazi luftwaffe began.

Normally food is stored at the docks, but now little remains in such vulnerable areas. Food is moved away to secret "buffer" depots well away from the coast. Some goods, such as sugar, can be stored almost indefinitely, but others, like bacon and butter, must be moved on quickly to consumers.

So far as possible, the transport of all these great stocks of foodstuffs is carried out by the existing trade organizations, trucks belonging to the big wholesalers trundling through the streets and out into country lanes with big official labels on their windshields.

In addition there are more than 800 smaller depots covering every corner of the country. Each draws its supplies from the bigger warehouses.

These small emerg cy depots can supply their own area with margerine, flour, sugar, fats and canned goods for a reasonable period in case any of the ports becomes cut off from their part of the country.

Priest Is Cleared Of Pro-Nazi Charge

Manila, Jan. 20 (A. P.).—The Rev. Luis Vogel, a German Catholic priest accused of pro-Nazi activities, was exonerated today by a deportation board which reported that no evidence was advanced to substantiate the charges.

The priest's parish is around Subic Bay, in Zambales province, where the United States Navy has established a base.

NEW REICH TAX ON JEWS

15% Gross Income Levy Compensates for 'Social Inferiority'

BERLIN, Jan. 20 (AP)—Jews in Germany must pay 15 per cent additional gross income tax to compensate for their "social inferiority," a decree published in evening papers disclosed today.

The tax, which went into effect Jan. 1, is called "Sozialausgleichsabgabe." Roughly, it means a tax designed to bring about a social balance or compromise.

LISBON, Jan. 20 (AP).—Herbert Clairborne Pell, U. S. Minister to Portugal who recently was transferred to Budapest, will leave for Washington on the next clipper to confer with President Roosevelt.

Roosevelt's Mother Sends Sibelius Food

Helsinki, Jan. 20 (A. P.).—Jean Sibelius, the composer, who spends much of his time now distributing American gifts to Finnish war orphans, received a shipment of food and coffee today from Mrs. Sara Delano Roosevelt, mother of the President.

Trinidad Officials Off To Confer on Plans

Port of Spain, Jan. 20 (A. P.).—Gov. Hubert Young and Sir Lennox O'Reilly, a member of the Executive Council, left Trinidad by plane for New York today, en route to England, where they will assist in working out the formal agreement for the lease to the United States of naval and air bases in the Caribbean.

LAGUARDIA IN CANADA

Joint Permanent Defense Board Meets.

Montreal, Jan. 20 (A. P.).—The United States-Canada Joint Permanent Defense Board assembled today for its first meeting here, one of a series of conferences since it was organized several months ago.

Mayor Fiorello H. LaGuardia of New York, United States co-chairman; Lieut.-Gen. Stanley D. Embick and Col. J. T. Bissell of the United States Army; Capt. Harry W. Hill and Commander F. P. Sherman of the United States Navy; and John D. Mickerson, assistant chief of the European Division, State Department, were present.

Princess Stephanie Asks German Visa

PALO ALTO, Cal., Jan. 20 (AP).—Germany is among the 42 nations to which Princess Stephanie Hohenloe of Hungary has applied for a passport visa, Joseph J. Bullock, her lawyer, said today.

"We anticipate," Bullock added, "that the answer will be no."

The princess, ill at her apartment here, said she was pro-British and anti-Nazi in her sympathies when she testified last week in a bedside hearing in which she resisted deportation from the U. S.

British In Trinidad Take 12 Off American Liner

Germans And Italians Removed From Argentina En Route To New York

New York, Jan. 20 (AP)—British immigration officials removed twelve German and Italian citizens from the American liner Argentina when she stopped at Trinidad en route to New York from South American ports.

It was reported when the ship docked here today that the twelve passengers were warned before going aboard in Rio de Janeirc that they would be unable to go beyond the British control at Trinidad.

Authorities at Trinidad gave no reason for the removal. It was presumed those seized would be interned for the duration of the war.

One Alien Group Sails; Another Reaches U. S.

Germans, Outbound, Express No Regret—Refugees, Inbound, Cheer On Arrival

San Francisco, Jan. 20 (AP)—The United States said fairwell to one group of aliens today and welcomed another with the sailing and arrival of two Japanese passenger liners.

Fourteen Germans, bound for their homeland via the Orient, were among the passengers on the outgoing Jitta Maru. None expressed regret over departing.

Refugees from various European countries were among several dozen passengers aboard the arriving Rakuyo Maru. They lined the rails and cheered. Most of them will sail tomorrow for South America, where they will make their homes.

WHERE EVER POSSIBLE, GROCERS, BUTCHERS, DAIRYMEN AND BAKERS HAVE BEEN INDUCED TO SINK THEIR PEACETIME BUSINESS DIFFERENCES AND BAND TOGETHER IN FACE OF THE COMMON ENEMY. THEY FORM COOPERATIVE GROUPS--HALF A DOZEN OR SO TOGETHER. IF ANY ONE STORE IN THE GROUP IS BOMBED AND KNOCKED OUT OF BUSINESS, ITS CUSTOMERS ARE AUTOMATICALLY TRANSFERRED TO THE OTHERS. THE BLITZED SHOPKEEPER CAN DRAW ON THE OTHERS FOR SUPPLIES, HE KEEPS THE GOODWILL OF HIS CUSTOMERS--AND THE CUSTOMERS GET THEIR FOOD.

THE PROBLEM OF GETTING MILK TO LONDON AND THE OTHER BIG CITIES HAS BEEN SOLVED IN A NOVEL WAY. LONDON ALONE TAKES ONE-FIFTH OF THE ENTIRE COUNTRY'S SUPPLY AND THIS IS BROUGHT IN DAILY FROM OVER A WIDE AREA. IF THE RAILROADS BY WHICH IT IS TRANSPORTED ARE BOMBED, THE FOOD MINISTRY RUSHES SPECIAL ROAD-TANKERS WITHA MOBILE PUMPING PLANT TO THE SCENE AND PUMPS THE MILK FROM THE RAIL-TANKS FOR TRANSPORT BY ROAD.

IF ONE OF THE LONDON BOTTLING DEPOTS IS KNOCKED OUT, THE OTHER DEPOT SHARE OUT THE MILK THAT WOULD HAVE COME TO THE BOMBED ONE.

SMITHFIELD, LONDON'S GREAT MEAT MARKET, HAS BEEN DECENTRALIZED INTO ABOUT 30 DEPOTS ALL AROUND THE METROPOLIS. IT WAS A WISE PRECAUTION, SINCE THE MARKET HAS BEEN BOMBED SEVERELY--WITHOUT EFFECT TO LONDON'S MEAT SUPPLY.

BILLINGSGATE, THE FISH MARKET, STILL DOES BUSINESS BUT ON A REDUCED SCALE. THERE IS LESS FISH AVAILBLE, SINCE THE ADMIRALTY HAS TAKEN OVER MOST OF THE FISHING TRAWLERS AND OFTEN THOSE WHICH REMAIN CANNOT PUT TO SEA WITHOUT ESCORT BECAUSE OF DANGER FROM AXIS BOMBS OR MINES.

AT THE FLOWER AND VEGETABLE MARKET OF COVENT GARDEN, WHERE KING CHARLES THE SECOND'S FAVORITE NELL GWYNNE ONCE RAN BAREFOOT SELLING ORANGES, IT IS "BUSINESS AS USUAL." BUT ORANGES, LEMONS, ONIONS AND BANANAS ALL ARE VERY SCARCE.

AT LEADENHALL, THE POULTRY MARKET, TURKEYS AND CHICKENS ARE UNRATIONED AND SELLING WELL.

THE GENERAL FOOD POSITION, OFFICIAL SOURCES SAY, IS THAT THERE IS SUFFICIENT FOR EVERYONE TO REMAIN IN GOOD HEALTH.

OFFICIALLY FOOD IS DIVIDED INTO THREE CATEGORIES -- BODY-BUILDING FOODS (MILK, EGGS, CHEESE, MEAT, FISH); ENERGY-PROVIDING FOOD (POTATOES, OATMEAL, BREAD AND FLOUR, RICE, SAGO, SUGAR, HONEY, DRIED FRUITS, CHEESE, BUTTER OR MARGERINE, DRIPPING, SUET AND LARD, BACON AND HAM), AND PROTECTIVE-FROM-DISEASE FOODS (MILK, CHEESE, BUTTER OR MARGARINE, EGGS, LIVER, HERRINGS, SALMON, GREEN VEGETABLES AND SALADS, POTATOES, TOMATOES, FRUIT FRESH OR CANNED, CARROTS AND CANNED VEGETABLES.).

IT IS ON THE MOST ESSENTIAL OF THESE THAT BRITAIN'S AVAILABLE SHIPPI SPACE WILL BE CONCENTRATED THROUGHOUT THE WINTER MONTHS.

"CANNED FRUIT IS VERY NICE," LORD WOOLTON SAYS, "AND I HARDLY KNOW HOW TO DO WITHOUT IT MYSELF. BUT I CANNOT USE SHIPPING SPACE TO IMPORT WATER. THAT IS MORE OR LESS WHAT CANNED FRUIT AMOUNTS TO."

Four Seamen Live, Twelve Die In 18 Days In Boat In Atlantic

Emaciated Survivors Reach Canada To Tell Of Sinking Of Their Freighter By Italian Submarine

[By the Associated Press]

An Eastern Canadian Port, Jan. 20—Four emaciated British seamen told tonight of the agonized death of twelve lifeboat mates by exposure—some driven mad from drinking salt water—in the eighteen days they tossed on the frigid North Atlantic after an Italian submarine torpedoed the 1,562-ton British freighter Carlton.

Eighteen other men from the Carlton, they said, had put out in another lifeboat and have not been heard from.

One by one, they said, the men in their lifeboat died as winter winds and icy spray lashed them day after day.

Drinking salt water hurried the end for some. Those who reached here today aboard a British freighter said their companions died in agony.

The four were hustled off to hospitals as soon as the rescue vessel docked. Two had badly frozen feet, and all were suffering from extreme exposure.

They said the Carlton, bound from Britain for South America, put up a gallant fight with nothing but a Hotchkiss machine-gun.

They sighted the submarine at 7.30 A. M., December 20 and started running. As the submarine came within range, the crew opened up with the machine-gun, but the firing was ineffective.

Finally, the submarine maneuvered into position and let the freighter have a torpedo.

All 34 Get To Boats

None of the crew was killed in the explosion. All thirty-four got away in the two lifeboats about 500 miles off Ireland. The two boats became separated on the heaving seas.

First to go were four East Indian firemen, least accustomed to the North Atlantic weather. They drank salt water, the survivors said, then lay in the bottom of the boat and chanted native death songs before collapsing.

The cook went mad, the survivors stated, and pulled the plugs from the bottom of the boat, allowing the sea to spout in. Then he leaped overboard. His mates pulled him back into the boat, while others rammed the plugs back in place. He died shortly afterward.

Buried With Ceremony

The victims were buried with ceremony at sea. Each night after some had died, Chief Officer George Robinson, one of the survivors brought here, read brief prayers for them and committed the bodies to the Atlantic.

Some of the derelict group saw mirages as they grew weaker.

"It's hard to think about it," said the 28-year-old chief officer laconically as he rested in hospital. His condition was the worst of the four.

The men said the single torpedo struck the Carlton amidship. She sank within six minutes.

DUTCH CONVOYING SHIPS IN PACIFIC

Cruiser Escorts Vessel For Seven Days On Voyage From Borneo

Million-Dollar Cargo Of Rubber And Copra Reaches Honolulu

[By the Associated Press]

Honolulu, Jan. 20—Dutch merchant vessels are crossing the Pacific, scene of recent sinkings by German surface raiders, under convoy of a Dutch cruiser, it was disclosed upon the arrival today of the Netherlands motor liner Blömfontein.

Passengers said the cruiser escorted their ship for seven days of the eighteen-day voyage from Borneo. The Blömfontein, carrying what was described as a million-dollar cargo of rubber and copra, left the convoy to call at Honolulu for water before resuming her voyage to the United States.

Five other Dutch merchantmen were in the convoy, including the 19,000-ton liner Marnix van St. Aldegonde, bound for Canada for transport duty.

They were met by the cruiser near Macassar, Celebes, Dutch East Indies, and proceeded slowly. Morning and evening, an airplane from the cruiser made reconnoitering flights.

Passengers on the Blömfontein included American oilmen from Behrein Island, British oil center in the Gulf of Persia, who carried fragments of bombs dropped there during the Italian air raid of last October 19. The oilmen termed the raid a "big flop," but said Bahrein had been blacked out at night ever since.

Reporting on this raid on October 21, 1940, the Italian high command said "enormous fires" had been started and direct hits had been made on pipe lines, refineries and storage tanks.

ing encounters with the raiders were carried from the Kamo Maru. Some of the survivors required medical treatment for shell shock.

The seamen, formerly on British phosphate commission ships, said that the raiders carried the Japanese insignia painted on their sides and flew the Japanese flag until an enemy ship was sighted, then hoisted the Swastika. They identified the three raiders as the Narvik, Manyo Maru and Tokio Maru. They described them as ships of from 5,000 to 10,000 tons each, manned by a crew of about 300 men wearing the uniforms of German marines.

12 Raiders Reported on Pacific

Filipino Survivors of British Vessels Identify Three Different Nazi Craft.

Manila, Jan. 20 (A. P.).—The possibility that twelve German raiders are active in the South Pacific was raised here today by Filipino seamen rescued from Emirau Island, where they were marooned by their Nazi captors.

The seamen said that while sailing on British vessels they had come in contact with three raiders that sank at least six ships in the South Pacific between December 6 and 8, including three Britishers, one New Zealander, one Norwegian and one Australian. Several of the ninety-eight seamen, landed here today by the Japanese ship Kamo Maru, said that they had learned that nine other raiders were operating against British shipping and that a dozen more were being outfitted at undisclosed Japanese ports.

They said that British officers whose ships had been attacked shared the opinion that the raiders were apparently in close cooperation with Japanese ships; that the latter evidently supplied the Germans with information concerning British ship movements. Japan has denied such co-operation with Germany.

The Filipinos said the Manyo Maru, the flagship, carried four anti-aircraft guns, two six-inch guns, two four-inchers, torpedo tubes and two seaplanes. The Narvik was described as a new black-painted ship with four eight-inch guns, two torpedo tubes and four airplanes.

Data of Bullitt And Kennedy Kept Secret

Hull Refusing to Reveal Ambassadors' Reports for Debate on Aid Bill

Foes of Measure Urge Outright Gift

Plan Substitute to Place 1-to-2 Billion Fund at Britain's Disposal

By The Associated Press

WASHINGTON, Jan. 20.—Reliable sources on Capitol Hill said today that the State Department would reject legislative demands that the department make public the diplomatic reports of Joseph P. Kennedy and William C. Bullitt.

Mr. Kennedy, who will retire soon as Ambassador to Great Britain, and Mr. Bullitt, former Ambassador to France, were said recently by Senator Burton K. Wheeler, Democrat, of Montana, to have disagreed sharply on the course the United States should pursue in the European war.

Wheeler Urged Publication

Senator Wheeler demanded that the State Department make public reports received from the two diplomats prior to the European war. He said that if it were inadvisable to publish the reports they at least should be presented to Senate and House committees on foreign affairs in connection with their study of the President's legislation to lend or lease American-made war equipment to Britain.

One well informed legislator told reporters that the State Department would decline to release the reports, even to Congressional committees, on the ground that they were confidential documents of the executive branch of the government. This informant said Administration officials believed publication of the documents would shed little light on the lend-lease legislation and might create an unnecessary side issue in the current fight over the program.

Mr. Kennedy, who questioned the necessity of some provisions of the Administration plan in an address Saturday night, is scheduled to testify before the House Foreign Affairs Committee tomorrow. Later in the week Charles A. Lindbergh and Gen. Hugh S. Johnson will take the stand.

Fish Calls Crisis Talk Absurd

Representative Hamilton Fish, Republican, of New York, ranking minority member of the Foreign Affairs group, said today that opposition witnesses "definitely will answer the absurd charges made by government officials that we are in danger of immediate invasion and that this bill has something to do with a crisis in England in sixty or ninety days."

On the Senate side there were reports today that opposition members were seeking to draft a substitute for the lend-lease legislation which would provide an outright cash gift to Britain of between $1,000,000,000 and $2,000,000,000.

Singapore Rubber Exports Are Taxed

Singapore, Jan. 20 (A. P.).—A special 2.5 per cent ad valorem war tax on Singapore rubber exports was levied today by the Legislative Council in addition to a similar tax imposed last April. A 2.5 per cent tax also was imposed on tin ore exports.

Berlin's Comment

[By the Associated Press]

Berlin, Jan. 20—Irrespective of how the San Francisco Nazi flag incident will be handled diplomatically or politically, authorized German sources said today that the moral question remains.

"The fact is that a scandalous incident has occurred, in the course whereof one of the most sacred rights of international intercourse, namely that of displaying the flag, has been violated," it was said. "Even in the jungle the rights of guests are respected. If anybody here said it was merely a prank of seamen, he had no right to make such an utterance."

Early Statement

(The comment about the "prank of seamen" was one of the first comments in Berlin after the incident had been reported.)

"The American people cannot be identified with this incident, as it cannot with many other things," it was said.

The Wilhelmstrasse said it still had no knowledge of Secretary of State Cordell Hull's expression of regret over the incident.

2 WHO RIPPED NAZI FLAG FOUND GUILTY

U. S. Sailors On Leave From Psychopathic Ward To Be Sentenced Thursday

Tearing Emblem At Consulate Is Called Reckless Act Of Youth

[By the Associated Press]

San Francisco, Jan. 20—Two young navy men on leave from a psychopathic ward were convicted today of ripping a Nazi flag from its staff at the German consulate.

The incident occured Saturday as some 2,000 persons alternately gasped and cheered at the reckless adventure nine floors above the street.

In Municipal Court Marine guards stood at the side of each sailor.

Sentencing On Thursday

The two, Harold J. Sturtevant, 19, of Haverhill, Mass., and E. G. Lackey, 20, of Charlotte, N. C., will be sentenced Thursday by Judge Peter J. Mullins, who convicted them on a malicious mischief charge. They had waived trial by jury and pleaded innocent.

In court, however, each admitted his part in the escapade, an incident over which the United States Government has given Germany a written expression of regret, and an accident Berlin has called "scandalous."

Called Act Of Youth

Judge Mullins told the two "this is an offense against another nation." He said he considered the slashing and ripping of the Nazi emblem "the act of youth, in all its recklessness prompted by bravado and the wish to be a hero in the eyes of the crowd."

The maximum sentence possible under the charge is six months in city prison. Meanwhile the youths are in custody of naval authorities.

Naval Board Hearing

They also appeared today before a naval board of inquiry, which heard undisclosed testimony from three police officers.

The board will submit findings and recommendations to Rear Admiral A. J. Hepbrun, Twelfth District commander, who was represented at the municipal court hearing by Commander Charles A. Goebel.

Both prisoners said they did not know that the office from which the flag was flying was the German consulate. Sturtevant said he now realized that the act "was not to the best interests of the United States Government."

Under Observation

The navy confirmed that both men have been under observation in the psychopathic ward of Mare Island Naval Hospital. Each has about a month to serve of his navy enlistment. On liberty from the hospital, they wore civilian clothing when they engaged in the escapade.

Judge Mullins told them sternly "certainly, we as Americans who enjoy so many liberties that other people do not have, and who have guarded these liberties so jealously, cannot hope to maintain the respect of other nations if we, ourselves, do not respect the rights of others."

Consulate Must Move

George Q. Chase, spokesman for owners of the building housing the consulate, said he had ordered the consulate's lease terminated, declaring he believed it would be "better for all concerned" if the offices were moved.

Capt. Fritz Wiedmann, the consul general, said the notice of termination, provided for in the lease, allowed him three months in which to find new headquarters.

"I have been looking around," he said, "but I have no idea where we shall go."

JAPAN-ARGENTINA TRADE INCREASES

Tokyo Obtaining War Materials Denied By U. S. And Britain

Both Countries Approve Raising Legations To Embassy Status

[By the Associated Press]

Buenos Aires, Jan. 20 — Japan has turned to Argentina for supplies of strategic war materials denied her by the export restrictions of the United States and Great Britain.

Japanese steamers sailing from the River Plate today are carrying home about forty-five per cent. of Argentina's total production of wolfram—from which is extracted tungsten for the hardening of steel—as well as substantial quantities of other minerals needed to keep the Japanese war machine functioning.

5 Per Cent. To U. S.

Argentine production of wolfram—about 1,200 tons in 1939—has virtually doubled as a result of the heavy foreign demand. Export statistics show Japan is buying slightly less than half the total produced while the remainder, about fifty-five per cent., goes to the United States.

Mining sources said Japanese agents have been buying eagerly, in some cases paying up to 6,000 pesos (about $1,500) per ton as measured in tungsten content, against 4,000 pesos (about $1,000) per ton, the present price under contracts for delivery in New York.

In addition to minerals produced in Argentina, Japanese agents have been buying up products of other American nations, shipping them from Buenos Aires.

Relations Boosted

Recently a United States ship brought in from New York several thousand bags of vanadium ore, consigned to a Buenos Aires firm. The bags were never brought ashore, but transferred in lighters to a Kobe-bound Japanese steamer. Import documents said the ore originated in Tampico, Mexico.

The growth of Japanese buying in Argentina has paralleled a drive to boost political and cultural relations with this country. Recently both the Tokyo and Buenos Aires governments approved boosting their respective legations to embassy status. At the same time the Japanese opened a large tourist bureau in Buenos Aires.

Argentina Seeks Soviet Deal

6,000,000-ton Grain Surplus Reported for Sale to Avert Financial Disorder

Buenos Aires, Jan. 20 (Correspondence of the Associated Press).—Prompted by Argentina's acute economic situation, negotiations are reported under way for the sale of part of this country's 6,000,000-ton grain surplus and other products to Soviet Russia.

"It is no longer a question of whether we like Communism," a spokesman close to the Ministry of Agriculture said: "It is a question of selling grain crops which threaten to smash Argentina's economic structure unless the markets are opened."

Figures on the coming harvest indicate a bumper corn crop of from 7,000,000 to 8,000,000 tons, and with 300,000,000 pesos ($75,000,000) already tied up in minimum price guaranties to grain producers, Argentina is said to face a most serious outlook.

Argentina has never recognized the Soviet and was, in fact, the sponsor of the resolution which expelled Russia from the League of Nations because of her war upon Finland. On the other hand, informed spokesmen here said that the marketing plan was fraught with complications. Great Britain, they pointed out, would probably refuse to allow exports to Russia go much beyond what would be considered normal, because England believes that products imported by Russia may be destined for Germany.

On January 10 the Soviet agreed to send Germany vast quantities of food, especially grain.

How far the Soviet negotiations have gone has not been disclosed, but in London last Wednesday Hugh Dalton, the British Minister of Economic Warfare, was said to be investigating a report that Russia proposed to form a 200-vessel merchant fleet to carry produce from the Americans to Russia. Although the Soviet is not officially represented here, Russians have been active in recent months increasing their purchases of hides and wool. In one week two merchantmen sailed from Buenos Aires for Russia.

Secrecy Stage-managed to Increase Interest in Hitler-Mussolini Talk

By DEWITT MACKENZIE.

As usual the reports of a meeting between the Axis chiefs are surrounded by a fog of mystery so thick you couldn't cut it with a knife—stage-play, of course, but still pretty effective advertising for the firm of Hitler and Mussolini.

The purpose of this hocus-pocus isn't to cancel anything but rather to attract attention. It adds to the impressiveness of the Axis procedure, and is calculated to increase the nerve strain imposed on the enemy. The fact that the world at large, including this columnist, is again paying a penny for a look at this peep-show indicates that the mystery stunt hasn't lost its attraction.

However, there is no mystery about the paramount problems which the dictators have before them. The main questions are these:

1. How to make a killing of Britain within the next few months, before American aid puts the Allies beyond the danger mark.

2. What policy to pursue toward America, in view of the all-out program of aid for Britain.

3. What Hitler can do to save Mussolini from being knocked clean out of the war.

4. How to repair the Axis economic and supply fences which have been badly damaged by the British blockade.

Big Nazi Drive Predicted.

The first of these is the most vital. Mario Appelius, authoritative Fascist writer, today predicts a tremendous Nazi offensive in about two months. That undoubtedly is a pure guess, but it looks like a good one. Two months will bring us up close to April and the good weather for military operations.

There are several moves which Hitler might make but, as I have remarked before, all will be subsidiary to, and leading up to, an assault on England direct. Only by smashing the mother country can the Nazi Fuehrer get a quick end to the war. Therefore we may expect that the main operations will be a continuation of the air assault on Britain, intensification of the submarine attack on shipping and, if at all feasible an attempt at invasion.

As regards the question of policy toward the United States, the disposition thus far has been to avoid antagonizing this country. The Axis doesn't want—or at least hasn't wanted America in the war.

Severe Test of Ingenuity.

The matter of saving Mussolini must strain the ingenuity of his partner. Actually Italy's economic and military position is so bad that Il Duce's salvation would appear to depend on a quick defeat of Britain. Short of that about the best Hitler can hope to achieve would seem to be to postpone the day of the Fascist collapse.

The question of supplies for the Axis Powers—and for all Europe so far as that goes—is daily becoming more pressing. A continent which is far from self-contained is being strangled by the British blockade which has cut off most of the normal sea-borne supplies. Added to this is the fact that agriculture and manufacture throughout Europe is badly disorganized. Even hunger long ago appeared in many places.

The Axis problem is to speed up agricultural and industrial production. That involves a mighty difficulty of organization among countries whose men are standing at arms.

War Communiques

British

NAIROBI, Kenya Colony, Jan. 20 (AP).—A British headquarters communique:

South African troops have captured prisoners in the El Yibo area close to the Italian frontier north of Dukana. The enemy dead include two European officers and nine Banda (native troops). Four light machine guns and some material also has been captured.

Active patrolling has been carried out on all other fronts.

A clash between one of our patrols and an enemy patrol on the El Wak Road (on the Kenya-Italian Somaliland frontier) resulted in our capturing one enemy Banda at no loss to ourselves.

Enemy aircraft bombed El Yibo yesterday morning, but there were no casualties and no damage.

CAIRO, Jan. 20 (AP).—A British Middle East command communique:

Libya: Nothing to report.

Sudan: Enemy withdrawal on Kassala front continues. Localities about Sabderat and Tessenei, which the Italians have strongly fortified, were occupied yesterday without opposition by our troops, who now are operating eastward in contact with the retreating enemy. In the Metemma area our patrols have again been active.

Kenya: By continued offensive action our mobile detachments steadily are gaining ground and inflicting casualties on the enemy.

A communique of the Royal Air Force Middle East command:

Weather conditions in eastern Libya yesterday restricted air operations considerably, but aircraft of the R. A. F. carried out a number of reconnaissance and fighter patrols in a forward area.

In Italian East Africa an attack was made on motor transport and gun positions southeast of Tessenei on the night of Jan. 18-19. All bombs fell in the target area, but the result of the attack could not be observed.

Massawa was twice raided on the same night. Fires were started and the attack went home despite intensive anti-aircraft fire. Other raids were made on Assab and Hargeisa.

From the above operations, all our aircraft returned safely.

ATHENS, Jan. 20 (AP).—A British Royal Air Force communique:

Enemy bomber formations made two attacks on objectives at Piraeus, the port of Athens, today. No damage of military importance was done.

Our fighter aircraft engaged the enemy, and one bomber was shot down in flames into the sea. Four members of the crew descended by parachute. Another enemy bomber was damaged.

One of our aircraft crashed on landing and burst into flames.

LONDON, Jan. 20 (AP).—A joint communique tonight of the Air Ministry and Home Security Ministry:

There has been some enemy activity over this country during daylight today. Bombs have been dropped by single enemy aircraft at a place in Norfolk, at another in Kent, and at a third in the Home Counties. These did only slight damage and no casualties are reported.

Early this afternoon an enemy aircraft was intercepted near the east coast of Scotland. During a short engagement in which one of our pilots was wounded, the enemy aircraft was severely damaged.

This morning's Air Ministry-Home Security Ministry communique:

Last night enemy aircraft dropped bombs at a number of places in the south and southeast of England and at some places in the London area. All raids had ended by the early hours of this morning. Damage was caused by high explosive bombs at some places, but nowhere was it on a heavy scale.

In one town in the south several fires were started but they were soon put out. Very few casualties were caused anywhere.

Two enemy bombers were destroyed during the night.

German

BERLIN, Jan. 20 (AP).—The German high command communique:

Strong squadrons of German combat planes and Stukas again yesterday attacked Valletta, Malta. Numerous bombs of heavy caliber again hit an aircraft carrier docked at the quay, as well as a destroyer in dock and two merchantmen in the harbor. Further hits and fires were observed on wharves, docks, factories and an arsenal in Valletta. A total of five British pursuit planes were shot down by accompanying German and Italian pursuit planes.

In the course of armed reconnaissance over Great Britain twenty-five kilometers (about fifteen miles) southeast of Harwich an 8,000-ton merchant ship in convoy was hit directly by a bomb. The ship began immediately to burn and list.

German combat units last night, in spite of bad weather, attacked war-vital objectives in London and Southampton. Furthermore, other harbors on the southeast coast of England were bombed.

Five of our own planes did not return yesterday.

Greek

ATHENS, Jan. 20 (AP).—The Greek high command communique:

Local successful operations. Prisoners were taken, and many mortars and automatic weapons have fallen into our hands.

The Ministry of Home Security communique:

Enemy aviation bombed Piraeus today. There were a few dead and wounded among the civilian population, and a small number of refugee houses were wrecked. According to reports from competent police authorities, one of the enemy aircraft which raided Piraeus fell in the sea near the Island of Fleves, and another was downed west of Cape Sunium. Likewise, bombs were dropped unsuccessfully in rural districts of Elevsis, Corfu and Sandia, with no casualties or damages.

Italian

ROME, Jan. 20 (AP).—The Italian high command communique:

There was no outstanding event on the Greek front, where unfavorable weather conditions still prevail. Our planes carried out effective bombing actions on enemy bases. They also machine-gunned and dropped shrapnel bombs on troops and supply columns.

In Cirenaica there were actions of artillery and patrols on the Giarabub and Tobruk fronts. Around Giarabub our plans bombed enemy mechanized forces with excellent results. The enemy carried out an air raid on Tobruk, where a plane was shot down by the anti-aircraft defense.

The enemy made some raids on Eritrea, with light damage.

Formations of bombing planes of the German air corps, escorted by Italian and German fighter planes, made dive attacks on the naval base at Valetta, Malta. They repeatedly hit ships in the bay, the arsenal and port works. A steamer was sunk. The aircraft carrier Illustrious, previously hit several times, was reached by more heavy caliber bombs. Italian and German fighter planes shot down six enemy planes. One of our fighters and four German bombers failed to return.

At dawn today enemy planes dropped explosive and shrapnel bombs on a locality in southern Italy, without damage to military works.

Italian Cruiser Set Ablaze in Harbor

Another Fascist General, Twelfth, Is Caught; No Sign of German Planes

By The Associated Press

LONDON, Jan. 22 (Wednesday).—A Reuters (British news agency) dispatch from Sydney today said Australian army headquarters were advised Tobruk had fallen.

Smash Italian Defenses

CAIRO, Jan. 21 (AP).—Australian shock troops, led by a crack British regiment, smashed through Italian defenses at Tobruk, Libya, to a depth of more than five miles today and captured many prisoners, including a general, the British high command announced.

"The advance is continuing," the British added.

Despite the presence of German dive-bombers in the Mediterranean area, the Royal Navy stood offshore and poured high explosives into Tobruk, where 30,000 Italians are besieged.

"The Italian cruiser San Giorgio in Tobruk Harbor, is in flames, together with a number of petrol (gasoline] stores and the like," the communique said. The 9,232-ton cruiser had been reported damaged previously.

Tanks and the Royal Air Force also aided the land forces who sprang to the assault at dawn today after fifteen days of the same careful preparation that reduced the Bardia garrison on Jan. 5.

Twelfth General Captured

Capture of the Italian general made a declared total of twelve thus far taken in the British campaign in Egypt and Italian Libya. Italian losses in dead, wounded and captured are estimated to total 83,500.

The R. A. F. carried out all-night raids Sunday night and yesterday before the ground charge began early today. The British airmen showered the outer defenses with explosives and the town and harbor installations with both explosive and fire bombs. Hits on marine repair shops and the silencing of an Italian ground battery of four guns were reported. Many British bombs fell on an encampment of 200 tents, it was said.

British tactics were much the same as those used at Bardia, which fell after a two-day assault. The thirty-mile line of outer defenses was surrounded by the British, cutting off retreat toward Derna to the west. British batteries were placed and Italian resistance was tested and found to be weaker than at Bardia, the British said.

A succession of heavy sandstorms had raged for the last few days, restricting visibility to a few feet and holding up the assault. The weather cleared somewhat today, and Gen. Sir Archibald P. Wavell, Middle East commander, loosed his men and machines. The navy moved into firing positions off the coast.

Inner Defenses Penetrated

Shortly after noon the land troops had penetrated both the first and second defenses protecting Tobruk, the British said. The Italians had placed both field and naval artillery inside these lines in a desperate effort to hold up the British, dispatches from the front said.

There was no indication that German planes were aiding the Italians at Tobruk. No German planes have been reported over Libya. Italian air resistance in this section of Libya has been slight, the British said.

Tobruk is about 650 miles by air from Catania, Sicily, the base whence German planes have been attacking the British island fortress at Malta. Malta is only about 150 miles from Catania.

Gen. Wavell called upon the Egyptian Premier to inform him of the new British attack.

Last night and early today British pilots fanned out in wide offensive patrols in this and other areas of the African war.

Catania was raided again Monday night, the R. A. F. reported, and seven Axis planes were set aflame on the ground. The base's administrative buildings were declared to have been left red with fires visible sixty miles away.

In East Africa, where British land forces were reported officially to be vigorously pushing their thrusts against Italian Eritrea, Italian Somaliland and Ethiopia, the bases of Assab and Neghelli were raided. Assab's supply depot was said to have been hit by several bombs. At Neghelli administrative buildings were reported set aflame and a large number of motor vehicles destroyed or damaged.

As to operations afield in East Africa the British command drew but a general picture:

From the Sudan British troops were reported pursuing the retreating Italians over the frontier into Eritrea; in the region of Metemma in northwestern Ethiopia, Italian artillery and aircraft were declared to have failed to lessen British pressure; on the frontiers of Kenya, facing Italian Somaliland, British patrol activity continued.

2,000-Mile Front Attacked.

London, Jan. 21 (A. P.).—Great Britain's African army, striking along a 2,000-mile front, was reported today driving a wedge into Eritrea, attacking Ethiopia and Somaliland, and tightening its siege lines around Tobruk, in Libya.

London observers expressed the belief that Gen. Sir Archibald Wavell had given the command for a geared-up offensive intended to shatter Rome's African empire before Nazi aid, recently extended to the Mediterranean, could become effective.

Desert fighters of the Army of the Nile, reported by the Middle East Command yesterday to have smashed through Eritrean defenses from two points along the Anglo-Egyptian Sudan frontier, were said to be advancing steadily in contact with retreating Fascist forces.

Ethiopian Front in Action.

Military informants said Italian casualties in this sector amounted to 2,000 men.

One of two British drives against the Italian conquerors of Ethiopia was reported slightly more than one hundred miles further south, in the vicinity of Metemma, in the northwestern corner of Ethiopia. There were no details on operations in this sector, but a communique yesterday said lively patrol activity had been renewed.

South African forces based in Britain's Kenya Colony were reported last night to have put Fascist troops to flight in attacks along the southern Ethiopian frontier near El Yiro and along the Italian Somaliland frontier near El Wak.

Italians Abandon Kassala.

Rome, Jan. 21 (A. P.).—Italian troops have abandoned Kassala in the Anglo-Egyptian Sudan because of "the necessities of a strategic nature," the Fascist High Command announced today.

The daily communique also reported British warplanes again had bombed Catania in Sicily. Some damage was reported, but there were no casualties, the daily war bulletin said.

The British also were reported to have bombed Tobruk, causing some damage.

Italian planes were said to have repeatedly bombed enemy preparations and bases in North Africa. Increased artillery activity in the Tobruk zone was noted, but there was no other mention of ground operations on the Libyan front.

Malta Is Attacked Again.

Berlin, Jan. 21 (A. P.).—Scattered German combat planes were reported today by the German High Command to have attacked airports on the Mediterranean island of Malta yesterday for the second successive day.

Tanks Rout Mob in Bucharest As Iron Guardists Battle Army

Military Dictatorship Set Up by Antonescu; Sima Goes to Consult Berlin

By The Associated Press

BELGRADE, Jan. 21.—Fighting between heavily armed Rumanian Iron Guardists and the Rumanian Army was reported spreading tonight to many parts of that country.

Diplomatic advices seeping out of Bucharest through a strict censorship said Gen. Ion Antonescu, the Rumanian Chief of State, was forming a military dictatorship to restore order.

Two men were reported killed in rioting before the Bucharest prefecture when a group of Iron Guardists resisted an order placing police power throughout Rumania in the hands of the military.

This outbreak was said to have started after Iron Guardist police had defied orders from the new chief of all police, Gen. Nicoluscu-Cociul, for their ouster from the prefecture. The Guardists lowered an iron gate in an attempt to prevent entry of officers sent to disband them.

The Guardists, or "Legionaries," then took their stand in the courtyard and upon the roof of the building. Soldiers surrounded the prefecture, and 500 Guardist sympathizers marched to the area, singing their organization's songs.

Then, according to reports here, two tanks arrived. The crowd advanced upon them with pickaxes and attempted to disable their caterpillar treads with blankets torn from horses. The tanks opened fire and killed two demonstrators.

The Guardists withdrew with their dead, laying out the two bodies in Bucharest's main street, the Calea Victoriei, before the Church of Clatari. There a guard of honor was formed, and the legionaries sang religious hymns before dispersing.

Rumanian troops occupied the prefecture without further casualties, so far as is known.

The Iron Guard, diplomatic sources here said, apparently had been building up hidden arsenals for the last month, and was armed with rifles, machine guns and hand grenades.

Antonescu Begs for Order

BUCHAREST, Jan. 21 (AP).—After twenty-four hours of demonstrations in Bucharest and other parts of the country Gen. Antonescu appealed tonight to the Iron Guard to "forget the hatreds" and help him re-establish order in Rumania. (This dispatch was passed by the Rumanian military censor.)

Antonescu in his proclamation blamed the disturbances in the country on "foreign agents, rebellious elements, and some misunderstandings by individuals."

The Bucharest radio asserted tonight that Iron Guardists had held demonstrations against the murderers of a German major (identified in other dispatches a Maj. Doering.

"We must," said Antonescu, "re-establish order and tranquillity in twenty-four hours, because I have not been, and I do not want to be tomorrow, the instrument of tyranny, or the bridge leading to anarchy.

"I trust the honor and security of the frontier of the country to the loyalty of the army officers, the fidelity of the soldiers and true Iron Guardists, brought up in the spirit of love for their country taught by Codreanu. . . .

"I have accepted an overwhelming burden of leadership in order to prevent the downfall of the country and save the honor of the nation in its most crucial hour of trial.

"I have fought without halt to save what could be saved. I swear before God, the nation and history, that these four months (since Antonescu took control from abdicating King Carol II) have been months of the most bitter, most terrible, most devastating turmoil that a man could live through for his country. Some misunderstanding individuals, rebellious elements and foreign agents are now trying to disturb the order without which a state cannot live."

Against Jews And Masons

A Government spokesman meanwhile said the demonstration in the streets of Bucharest Monday by thousands of students was a protest against these foreign agents and "Jews and Masons," because, he said, the latter sought to undermine the country.

He said the slaying of the German major was "a violation of the laws of hospitality," and declared the victim would be considered an Iron Guard hero in Rumania.

87 Industries Militarized

BUCHAREST, Wednesday, Jan. 22 (AP)—Widespread disorders in Rumania, including the slaying of a German officer, prompted Premier General Ion Antonescu to put the army in charge of the State police, militarize eighty-seven important industries, and make a desperate appeal last night to dissident Iron Guards to "forget hatreds" and aid him in re-establishing order.

General Antonescu dismissed Minister of the Interior George Petrovicescu, a leading Iron Guard, "for failure to set up a guard around the hotel housing the German military mission, failure to take the necessary steps after the murder of the German major, and for allowing internal order to collapse."

Dimitru Popescu, military commander of Bucharest, was named new Minister of Interior. All police prefects were replaced by military men, an army major was named head of military censorship, and an army general replaced the State police head.

"We must," said General Antonescu in appealing to the people, "re-establish order and tranquillity in twenty-four hours because I have not been, and I do not want to be tomorrow, the instrument of tyranny, or the bridge leading to anarchy."

The disturbances occurring in Bucharest and other parts of the country were ascribed by General Antonescu to foreign agents, rebellious elements and "some misunderstandings by individuals." A decree was published providing the death penalty for any premeditated crime against members of the German military mission here. A government spokesman said General Antonescu also had threatened severe punishment for any one found connected in any way with the slaying of the German officer.

At 10 P. M. curfew was imposed.

Sima Goes to Berlin

BELGRADE, Jan. 22 (Wednesday) (AP).—Horia Sima, Rumanian Iron Guard leader, left Bucharest for Berlin last night to confer with Nazi leaders there, an official Rumanian news agency dispatch said today.

Nazis Reported Interceding

SOFIA, Jan. 21 (AP).—German troop reinforcements were reported speeding to Bucharest and other cities of Nazi-dominated Rumania tonight to quell street fighting and bomb-throwing in which civilians, German soldiers and Communists were said to have been injured.

[D. N. B., German official news agency, reported in Berlin that Premier Antonescu had shaken up his Cabinet, ousting Gen. George Petrovicescu as Interior Minister and replacing him with Gen. Demeter Popesco, military commander of Bucharest, as a result of the assassination of a Nazi staff officer in the Rumanian capital. D. N. B. reported that Col. Orescheanu, director general of the Rumanian railway system, was wounded by a gunman in his Bucharest office Tuesday.]

Advices reaching Belgrade from Bucharest tonight said Antonescu had placed all police power in the hands of the military and decreed immediate execution for any one killing a member of the German armed forces.

Other measures were said to have included establishment of military control over press censorship, occupation of eighty-seven factories and institutions throughout the country by Rumanian Army units and the posting of redoubled guards about public buildings and radio stations in the Rumanian capital.

Nazi's Slayer Is a Greek

Rumanian authorities identified the slayer of the German officer, a Maj. Doering, as a thirty-one-year-old man named Sarandoz, who was born in Turkey but is a naturalized Greek. Sarandoz was said to have carried an American bank checkbook and letters from the United States and England. Authorities, searching for a suspected accomplice, detained ten prominent Greek residents of Bucharest as hostages.

Three reasons suggested in Sofia and at Belgrade and Budapest as motivating the Rumanian disorders were: the bitter rivalry between extremists and more conservative elements in Rumania's dominant Iron Guard, increasing resentment over German military concentrations in Rumania and against the Antonescu regime, and an attempted coup by Leftists, followers of dethroned King Carol II, or others trying to seize power.

Reports that German reinforcements were hurrying to the trouble centers coincided with advices which told of the withdrawal of German forces stationed in the vicinity of Giurgiu, Rumanian oil port on the Danube opposite the Bulgarian town of Ruse. These forces were said to be headed for Bucharest and other outlying cities.

Advices reaching Belgrade and Budapest said there had been heavy casualties.

A diplomatic report received in Belgrade said the regular broadcast of the Bucharest government station was interrupted by a speaker who attacked Antonescu's policies and accused him of handing the Balkan kingdom over to the Germans.

Rail Executive Wounded.

Berlin, Jan. 21 (A. P.).—A DNB dispatch from Bucharest today said that Col. Orescheanu, director-general of the Rumanian railway system, had been wounded by a man who forced his way into his office and fired several pistol shots. Authorities gave no further details.

A shake-up in Rumania's Iron Guard Cabinet, displacing Gen. George Petrovicescu as Interior Minister, was ascribed by DNB, today to the assassination of a German staff officer in Bucharest. The agency quoted a Rumanian communique as saying that the post had been taken by Gen. Demeter Popesco, military commander of Bucharest, because Petrovicescu had failed to enforce internal order, "had not taken any necessary measures" nine hours after a man was arrested for slaying the German officer and had not ordered a guard for the military mission.

Premier Gen. Ion Antonescu, according to DNB reports from the Rumanian capital, has ordered summary execution of the assassin as soon as an inquiry into the killing is completed.

The news agency said legionnaires and students held demonstrations of sympathy before Antonescu's office and the German legation. Rumanian Army units also were said to have staged a mourning march past the two buildings.

BULGARIANS WARNED

Donovan Tells Them U. S. Is Out to Aid Britain

Sofia, Jan. 21 (A. P.).—Usually reliable informants said tonight that Col. William J. Donovan, United States observer who has been traveling in Europe and Northern Africa, had emphasized in a frank talk with Bulgarian Government leaders that the United States was pushing production to the utmost to aid Great Britain.

Col. Donovan himself explained that, besause of the confidential nature of his mission, he was unable to say anything about this talk. He expressed regret that such information had been given out.

He talked with Foreign Minister Ivan Popov during the day, was to have dinner with the British Minister and plans to see King Boris tomorrow.

TURKS WARN NAZIS ATTACK WOULD FAIL

Troops Massed in Thrace to Resist Drive in the Balkans, Istanbul Announces

'STEEL FORTRESS' IS READY

Press Also Points to Peril for Axis—Hasty U. S. Aid Is Urged on Congress

ISTANBUL, Turkey, Jan. 21 (AP)—The official Turkish wireless announced tonight that the government "has gathered a great part of its army in Thrace [European Turkey], where it awaits any possible action."

Discussing the possibility of a German invasion across the Balkans, the radio said:

"Those who attack our steel fortress of Thrace are doomed to fall in the attempt. Turkey fought on eight fronts in the last war—no one should doubt her ability to fight on one front alone. Those who want to beat their heads on the rock may do so."

Nazi Force Held Inadequate

The broadcaster expressed doubt, however, that the Nazis could mass enough troops in Rumania to attempt the invasion, asserting:

30.24-7085

"They would meet a wide Balkan front. The Balkans can muster more than 100 divisions, and added to these would be British forces."

By April, the commentator continued, Germany at best could have only about sixteen divisions in Rumania and would be forced to leave some troops there.

"It is doubtful," he added, "that the Germans could pass peacefully through Bulgaria. Also, they would have to protect their left and right" flanks [presumably against Turkey and Yugoslavia]. Therefore, it appears that the German troops in Rumania will be used only for pressure against the Balkans, not for conquest."

Press Defies Germany

Turkish newspapers declared editorially that if Germany tried to strike at Britain through Turkey this country would fight. The Tasviri Efkat said:

"Turkey is not a country to be frightened by threats. The brief talk somewhere in the Alps [between Reichsfuehrer Hitler and Premier Mussolini] will not make the Turks give up resistance to an enemy. If there are people who are ready to undertake such a dangerous adventure, we are ready to meet them in a way that will open new pages of glory for Turkey."

The Vatan said: "It is Germany's business if she wishes to repeat Italy's mistakes. The Balkan zone of security will become, if Germany attacks it, a battle ground that will threaten the Axis at its hearts."

The Aksam declared: "Germany would be insane to draw Yugoslavia and Turkey into the war. A Balkan front would be more dangerous to Germany than the British front."

Turkey is increasing exports of live stock and wheat to aid the Greek army.

Pole, Chilean Official In Turkey, Talks To Rumanian—Vanishes

Istanbul, Jan. 21 (AP)—Turkish police are investigating the mysterious disappearance of Samson Mikicinski, chancellor of the Chilean legation here, who vanished January 16.

Mikicinski, an ex-Czarist officer, had aided many Polish refugees to make their way out of Rumania, and Istanbul police suggested the possibility that he had been slain for political reasons. He had made frequent visits to Rumania.

The chancellor was last seen during a chat with Chilean legation officials and a Rumanian refugee, Manielescu, described as one of former King Carol's closest advisers.

Mikicinski was a Polish citizen, onetime honorary Peruvian consul-general in Poland, and a director of the Polish Latin American Chamber of Commerce.

His mother, a Mrs. Loveton, lives in New York city, while his son was reported to be a pilot in the R. A. F.

GREEKS REPEL COUNTER-BLOW NEAR TEPELENI

Report Italians In Vain Attack Suffered Heavy Casualties

Fascists Said To Be Putting Up Stiff Fight To Stem Hellenic Push

[By the Associated Press]

Struga, Yugoslavia, Jan. 21—Greek observers in this border town report that in the last week the Italians have moved eighteen fresh divisions of troops into Albania.

These forces are massed behind the front lines which the Italians have been energetically fortifying in preparation for a stand.

[By the Associated Press]

Athens, Jan. 21—Italians counter-attacked vainly in the Tepeleni sector of Albania, Greek reports from the front said today, and were driven back with heavy casualties and the loss of their original positions.

The Fascist effort to check Grecian drives north and west was described as the largest and most carefully planned of any launched by Premier Mussolini's legions in that area.

"Considerable success" likewise was noted in a dispatch from the front in a movement of Greek troops north of Klisura "to positions from which it will be easier to reach their objectives."

Occupy Strategic Height

Greek advance units early yesterday morning took advantage of bad weather and poor visibility to occupy a strategic height in a surprise attack, it said.

"More than one hundred prisoners, including three officers, were captured," it said. "Three mounted guns, four machine guns, some mortars and many cases of cartridges fell into Greek hands."

The Italian counter-assault was intended, Greek reports said, to break up the slow Greek advance toward Berati, an oil-producing center, and the vital port of Valona.

"Reports reaching us," a Government spokesman said, "say the Italian Julian division has suffered such heavy losses during recent operations that is has been necessary to withdraw it from the front in order to reform it."

Italians Bomb Piraeus

Despite continuous bad weather, Italian bombers struck at a Greek base at Piraeus, the seaport of Athens. (The Italians claimed to have damaged and destroyed "a large amount of merchant tonnage in the well-protected bay.")

It was announced officially that two of the bombers were shot down. A communique noted "a few dead and wounded" among the civilian population and some houses wrecked.

A Greek Government communique said the British R. A. F. blasted away at Valona Sunday night and yesterday in the "heaviest bombing attack so far carried out in that region."

"Large explosions occurred in the target area and a number of fires were caused," the Government reported.

lost their original positions along with great numbers of their attacking force.

On the front north of Klisura the Greeks reported that they also scored important gains in attacks launched in blinding snowstorms.

One dispatch said the Greeks seized a height from the Fascists, captured more than 100 Italian prisoners, including three officers, three mounted guns, four machine guns, mortars and several cases of cartridges.

The R. A. F. reported that Valona, a port vital for the supply of Italian forces in southern Albania, was subjected Sunday night and yesterday to the heaviest bombing attack so far carried out in that region. A severe night raid was followed by further raids in daylight yesterday, the communique said, and "large explosions occurred in the target area and a number of fires were caused. High explosive bombs fell on buildings south of the jetty and on the foreshore, causing considerable damage."

Meanwhile two Italian bombers which attacked Piræus, the port of Athens, were reported officially to have been shot down by British fighter planes in dogfights watched by cheering crowds in the capital's streets, five miles away. Others in two bomber formations were said to have been driven away, but not until some bombs were dropped on the port in the midday raid yesterday.

The bombers caused a ninety-minute alarm, the longest of the war here, but no bombs fell in Athens itself.

Italians Bomb Greek Bases.

Rome, Jan. 21 (A. P.)—The newspaper Il Giornale d'Italia reported today that an air raid yesterday on the main Greek military base at Piræus, the seaport of Athens, "damaged and destroyed a large amount of merchant tonnage in the well-protected bay."

Two large ships and a steamer were badly damaged by bombs in the port of Leontos, while four ships off Cape Themistocles also were bombed, the newspaper said.

Italian planes, in two waves of five bombers each, raided Piræus through anti-aircraft fire and were attacked by twenty-two British and Greek planes, it asserted. Besides shipping, the arsenal, basins, docks and port works were declared heavily damaged.

Other waves of Italian planes were said to have bombed military works at Roda, on the Albanian Coast north of Corfu, and port works and barges loaded with war supplies in the harbor at Sranda.

Four enemy planes were said to have been shot down in aerial combats, while the Italians declared they lost only one plane.

The Italians also reported their planes had bombed an aviation field on the Greek island of Crete, "causing fires and visible damage."

The British were reported to have lost one plane in a raid on the Italian-held port of Valona in Albania, which was said to have caused no damage.

45,596 Italians Believed Lost.

London, Jan. 21 (A. P.).—The Italians have lost 45,596 men in the Albanian campaign through battle injuries and sickness, British military quarters reported today. Official Italian figures, which "may be understated," it was said, list 2,081 killed and 6,515 wounded.

The Greeks were said to have taken 16,000 prisoners and rounded up 1,000 Italian deserters. British and Greek intelligence sources estimate approximately 20,000 men in the Italian forces in Albania are sick.

Greeks Report Italy Balked

Say Fascist Soldiers Launching Big Drive Near Tepeleni Have Been Repulsed.

Athens, Jan. 21 (A. P.).—The Greeks reported today their forces had repulsed what they described as the largest and most carefully planned Italian counter-attack yet attempted in the Tepeleni sector of the Albanian front.

As a result of this desperate attempt to halt the Greek advance, the Italians were declared to have

BOTH SEXES ARE LIABLE TO CALL TO WAR PLANTS

Listing of Workers Leaves Bevin Open to Attack by Left Wing.

DEBATE BEGUN IN COMMONS

Conscription of Wealth Asked —Army May Widen Its Present Age Limits.

London, Jan. 21 (A. P.).—Labor Minister Ernest Bevin informed the House of Commons today that the Government has decided to register Britain's working men and women for drafting into war factories.

Mr. Bevin reported steadily increasing production, despite air raids, but added that the country has "now reached a stage when it will be necessary to take industrial registration by age groups." He said the registration was to make a list of those who should be called upon to serve the State in the national industry.

The Government risked a political storm from the Left Wing by its decision to draft labor, but observers predicted that there would be little formal opposition.

Wide-Open Debate Begun.

Mr. Bevin's announcement launched a wide-open debate on man power.

Earl Winterton, Conservative, immediately applauded the decision.

He warned that the British people had "got into a most dangerous state of mind of thinking that if we only waited long enough, the United States was going to give us everything we wanted and we only had to hang on a few weeks or months."

The real situation, he said, is that "not until the very end of this year should we get such an accretion of strength from the United States that it would make an appreciable difference to the war efforts; not until the middle of next year or later would it mean superiority."

Laborite Retorts on Wealth.

Emanuel Shinwell, Laborite, complained that drafting of labor should not be ordered until the Government had drafted wealth, property and land in the national effort.

The power to draft men and women from other occupations or from unemployment into war industries was granted by Parliament in the drastic emergency powers act of May 22. The act also gave the Government the power to draft capital, but Mr. Bevin made no mention of this in his announcement to Parliament.

[Capital already has been called on for a 42.5 per cent profits tax—the same rate as the basic income tax—and a 100 per cent excess profits tax based on increases in profits during war years over pre-war year.]

In the coming months, Mr. Bevin said there "will be heavy demands for manpower and womanpower for services, for munitions work and for civil defense.

He said that he expected arrangements soon for lowering the draft age for the army from 20 years to 19 and for raising it above the present top limit of 36. He gave no new upper figure.

Employers no longer will be allowed to discharge men except for misconduct in vital industries, Mr. Bevin announced, and employees will be forbidden to leave vital work without the Government's permission.

Mobile Labor Force Needed.

The object of such a rule and for the drafting of labor, he said, is to create a "permanent mobile labor force."

Besides men, Mr. Bevin said, the nation will have to call into munitions and aircraft factories "many women who, in normal circumstances, would not take employment."

"As more men are called up for the forces," he said, "industry will have to absorb women far more than it is doing. The State will have to take much greater responsibility for the care of children where women are rendering national service."

Mr. Bevin recited, point by point, the increased production in the last few months, despite German attempts to bomb factories, furnaces and aircraft plants out of existence.

He reported:

1. An increase by more than one-third of merchant shipping construction in the last half of 1940 over the first half;

2. An increased production of airplanes "since the beginning of September, week by week," and

3. Maintenance of the high arms production rate of last summer through the air siege months of autumn and "in many cases increases" in the rate.

No Exception of Rank.

In the labor draft, Mr. Bevin said, "There will be no exception of rank or anything else."

Mr. Bevin, a hard-handed union boss, risked disapproval of his main political backers—5,000,000 members of the Trades Union Congress—in announcing the conscription policy.

In making the announcement, he pledged that the Government soon would present a bill providing for restoration of union and individual rights at the end of the war.

The number of munitions workers is greater than in 1918, when world war production was at its peak, he said, and he assured Commons that "if I were at liberty to reveal the rate at which we now are able to equip a division with guns and machine guns, it would give the House a great measure of encouragement."

To Build Workmen's Hostels.

As one means of speeding production, he said, workmen's hostels will be built near factories.

Besides the general arms speed-up, Mr. Bevin said that export production also was increased. Last month exports totaled £24,000,000 ($96,000,000), £3,000,000 ($12,000,000) above November.

The speed-up has been especially big in the aircraft industry, he reported.

"Many of the airplanes from the other side have been successfully flown across the Atlantic in bad weather," he added. "This is a tribute to the design and workmanship of the machines and the efficiency and endurance of the pilots."

COMMONS TOLD OF HOME-FRONT DRAFT PLANS

Bevin Announces Census For Potential "Permanent Mobile Force"

Labor Minister Assures Parliament Industry Is Speeding Up

London, Jan. 21—Britain has decided to register her working men and women as a potential "permanent mobile labor force" which soon may be drafted into war factories, Ernest Bevin, Labor Minister, told the House of Commons today.

In announcing plans for a census by age groups "of those who should be called upon to serve the state" behind the lines, Bevin assured Parliament that industry was speeding up rather than bogging down.

"Most people will volunteer," he declared, but he warned "there will be no exception of rank or anything else."

Details Progress

Bevin detailed Britain's industrial progress in recent months and said House members would be greatly encouraged "if I were at liberty to reveal the rate at which we are now able to equip a division with guns and machine guns."

With the announcement, Bevin disclosed several other drastic changes in the lives of Britons at war:

Employers no longer will be allowed to discharge men, except for misconduct, in vital industries.

Workers in those industries will be forbidden to leave their jobs without the Government's permission.

Draft ages for the army shortly are to be broadened—lowered from 20 years to 19 and raised one or more years above the present top limit of 36.

Policy Called Bold

The Government's declaration of policy was bold, political observers said. They declared Bevin, a union boss called into Prime Minister Churchill's War Cabinet, risked the wrath of his main political backers, the 5,000,000 members of the Trades Union Congress.

He pledged, however, that the Government soon would present a bill providing for restoration of union and individual rights at the end of the war, and observers predicted there would be little formal opposition.

Authority to draft men and women from other occupations or from unemployment into war industries was given by Parliament in the Emergency Powers Act of last May 22.

Capital Not Mentioned

The act also gave the Government power to draft capital, but Bevin did not mention this in his announcement. (Capital already is paying a 42.5 per cent. profits tax and a 100 per cent. excess-profits tax.)

Emanuel Shinwell, a Laborite, complained that "wealth, property and land" should be drafted before labor.

Earl Winterton, a Conservative, supported the decision, saying United States aid would not "make an appreciable difference in the war effort" until the "very end of this year" and would not mean superiority "until the middle of next year."

Stresses Women's Role

Bevin stressed the forthcoming role of women in munitions work and for civil defense.

"Many women who, in normal circumstances, would not take employment," will be called into munitions and aircraft factories, he said, and "as more men are called up for the forces, industry will have to absorb women far more than it is doing."

Where women "are rendering national service," Bevin said, the state will "take much greater responsibility for the care of children."

More workers are employed in Britain's munitions factories now than in 1918, when World War production was at its peak, he said. To gear industry still higher, living quarters will be supplied workers near their factories.

Once again Prime Minister Churchill parried efforts to draw him out on Britain's war aims.

"Most right-minded people here and abroad, and especially in the United States," he told the House, "already fully understand the cause and the principles for which we are waging war on Nazi tyranny."

WOMEN QUENCH FIRE BOMBS IN LONDON RAID

Housewives Said To Have Rushed From Kitchens To Tackle Incendiaries

Luftwaffe Switches Back To Daylight Attacks On England

[By the Associated Press]

London, Jan. 21 — The Luftwaffe switched back to widespread daylight assaults on England today, concentrating on London and the eastern part of the country.

Three alarms sounded here and the Government announced bombs fell on the outskirts of the capital and in the surrounding home counties, but that no important attack developed. "A few casualties" and some damage were acknowledged.

Women Smother Bombs

Housewives were said to have hurried from their kitchens to smother fire bombs dropped in a town on London's outskirts in a morning attack. A single Nazi raider machine-gunned an East Anglian town, then followed up with high explosives.

For the second successive week the Admiralty announced a sharp decline in shipping losses, the figure for the week ended January 12 totaling nine ships of 30,226 tons. In the six months since July the average had been some 85,000 tons a week.

The Admiralty, in a communique tonight, reported the trawlers Manx Prince and Refundo have been sunk. There were fatal casualties on the Refundo, but none on the Manx Prince, the communique said.

Noon Raid On London Reported By Berlin

Berlin, Jan. 21 (AP)—A noontime raid on London today was reported DNB, which told of two successive days of daylight thrusts against England.

Scouting planes were active as far north as the Orkney Islands yesterday, a high command communique said, and some objectives were said to have been bombed "despite most unfavorable weather."

Compared to such activity, DNB said, not a single British plane had flown over Germany or German-occupied territory in the last twenty-four hours.

Freighters Bombed

Three British merchantmen, totaling 17,500 tons, have been bombed recently, informed sources said, and a fourth ship of 6,000 to 8,000 tons reported hit two days ago off Harwich, England, was declared to be sinking.

In military circles the belief was expressed that the British aircraft carrier Illustrious, repeatedly attacked since it was taken into Valletta, Malta, for repair of damages suffered in a Mediterranean sea-air fight, now rested on the bottom of the harbor.

not be used until permission of a high court is obtained. Police were posted throughout the Daily Worker building.

An informed source said Morrison acted after "long and full consideration of the issues involved and because a warning issued to the Daily Worker last summer had not achieved its purpose."

The Communist organ began publication January 1, 1930. Its distribution outside Britain was banned last May and there have been demands in the House of Commons for its suppression.

It was insisted in authoritative quarters that the action did not imply any change in the Government's policy of freedom of the press, and that the fact these two publications were tolerated so long was evidence that the Government did not want to interfere with journalistic privileges unless the provocation became grave.

London Daily Worker Publishes Despite Ban And Police Guard

Paper Mimeographed On Single Sheet After Scotland Yard Detectives Raid Office And Forbid Publication

[By the Associated Press]

London, Wednesday, Jan 22—The banned Communist Daily Worker appeared today despite the posting of Scotland Yard detectives in the paper's office here.

A single sheet of mimeographed paper headed "Daily Worker No. 3431" was handed in at the British Press Association Building.

One side carried an editorial, the other a story of the police raid on the office where the Daily Worker and The Week, a weekly news letter of Leftist tendencies, are printed.

The order to suspend publication was issued by the Home Secretary, Laborite Herbert Morrison, who, it said, was satisfied that in each paper there had been systematic publication of matter calculated to foment opposition to the successful prosecution of the war.

It directed that the presses and other apparatus of the two papers should

Churchill On War Aims

[By the Associated Press]

London, Jan. 21—Prime Minister Churchill refused once more today to give questioners in the House of Commons an outline of Britain's war aims and plans for the peace to follow the conflict.

"Most rightminded people here and abroad, and especially in the United States, already fully understand the cause and principles for which we are waging war on Nazi tyranny," the Prime Minister told the House.

African Report Denied

Churchill denied reports of a British-Italian arrangement for the removal of Italian women and children from Africa.

He added that such a suggestion "should surely come from the Italians or those commanders on the spot and it would not be possible in any case to interrupt operations now in progress."

Churchill repeatedly has parried efforts to draw him out on Britain's war aims.

"Fighting To Survive"

"We are not fighting the war merely to maintain the status quo, but among other things in order to survive," he told the House of Commons last October 15, adding:

"When our capacity to do that is more generally recognized throughout the world, we shall be in a position to take further view of what we shall do when victory has been won."

Twice since then he has reiterated that Britain won't declare her war aims until she is sure she is going to survive.

A motion by the Independent Labor party December 5 combining a request for a specific statement of British war aims and a demand that Britain move to end the war was defeated in the House of Commons by 341 votes to 4.

BRITISH OFFICERS UNDER CRITICISM

Commons Scores Colonel for 'Old Tie' Defense.

London, Jan. 21 (A. P.).—Malcolm MacMillan, a Laborite, demanded in Commons today drastic disciplinary action against Lieut.-Col. R. C. Bingham of the Officer Cadet Training Unit, who charged in a letter to the London Times that the working-class men now serving as army officers had "largely fallen down" on the job.

"Never was an old school tie and the best it stands for more justified than today," Col. Bingham wrote.

During debate on the letter, Lady Nancy Astor asserted: "Bear in mind that a great many ordinary soldiers think there is a good deal of substance in this matter and everybody knows it."

Capt. H. D. F. Margesson, Secretary of State for War, told Commons that Col. Bingham had been directed to give an explanation.

"I regret profoundly that the letter was published," he said, "but I have no powers over the press."

When he asked for action "to make sure more discretion is exercised over publication of letters of this kind," the House echoed with a chorus of assent, in which Prime Minister Churchill joined.

War Office Papers Left in Taxis

London, Jan. 21 (A. P.).—Capt. H. D. F. Margessoon, Secretary of War, told the House of Commons today that there have been twenty-one cases in which papers and documents concerned with the War Office have been left in taxis, buses and subways. Disciplinary action has been taken against the offenders, he said.

BRITISH OFFICIAL QUITS UNDER MONEY CHARGE

Commons Group Accuses Robert Boothby of Improper Conduct

LONDON, Jan. 21 (AP)—Robert Boothby sent Prime Minister Winston Churchill his resignation as Parliamentary Secretary for the Food Ministry today after a committee of the House of Commons had charged him with conduct "derogatory to the dignity of the House." The committee declared Mr. Boothby had a financial interest of more than $96,000 in realization of Czech assets in Great Britain.

In a 300-page report, the committee asserted that Mr. Boothby had agreed to make political speeches and put pressure on Ministers and Treasury officials to aid in the realization of the assets of various Czechs, but had "expressly protested" to the Chancellor of the Exchequer that he had no financial interest in the deals.

A Czech citizen, Richard Weininger, promised Mr. Boothby 10 per cent of any frozen assets Mr. Weininger owned in Czecho-Slovakia that Mr. Boothby might succeed in collecting, the committee charged. It added that Mr. Boothby had received £1,000 for expenses. Mr. Weininger, who had been sent to prison under the defense regulations, testified before the committee.

No Progress With Soviet Reported To Commons

Britain's Efforts To Improve Relations At Standstill Since Last October

London, Jan. 21 (AP)—Britain's efforts to reach more friendly relations with Russia have been at a standstill since October 22, the Government informed the House of Commons today.

R. A. Butler, Under Secretary for Foreign Affairs, said that on that date Britain had suggested to Moscow "a wider political understanding," but that this proposal had not been "taken any further by the Soviet Government and the present situation is that the next step rests with them."

BRITAIN BUILDS 100 WARSHIPS

Admiral of Fleet Denies Planes Rule Seas.

London, Jan. 21 (A. P.).—Lord Chatfield, Admiral of the Fleet, told the Royal Empire Society today that Great Britain is building more than 100 ships for naval and Air Force purposes and "the sea situation is showing continual improvement." Construction of the new vessels, which will include sixty-four patrol ships and twenty-six mine sweepers, shows Britain firmly believes that ships and not planes command the seas, Lord Chatfield said.

"If that had not been true the empire would have ceased to exist, and we would have been enslaved and his Majesty's Dominions and colonies parceled out to other envious races," he declared.

"We need not be concerned by the recent air attack in the Mediterranean," he said. "It was no more severe than the home fleet suffered in the North Sea years ago. If you fight hard you must expect losses. We take confidence that if we lost a cruiser (the Southampton), it was the first large ship sunk as a consequence of air attack in eighteen months of war. The empire is a sound affair, and we need not fear it is going to perish from air attack . . . ."

Declaring "not one battleship has so far been sunk by enemy air action," Lord Chatfield said the "battle fleet truly controls the seas and the war. It is the queen on the chessboard, the full back of the British Navy.

30,226 TONS SUNK

British Announce Shipping Loss for Week.

LONDON, Jan. 21 (A. P.).—Great Britain lost nine merchant ships totaling 30,226 tons in the week ending January 12, the Admiralty reported today. It was said in authoritative quarters that the total was still well below the high averages which marked the intensification of the submarine campaign in July.

There were no losses of allied or neutral merchant shipping during the week, the announcement said. The Admiralty said that during the period covered by the announcement "the Germans claimed to have sunk a total of 42,700 tons of shipping."

The week's loss compared with average weekly sinkings of 81,000 tons in July, 80,000 tons in August, 101,000 tons in September, 86,000 tons in October and November, and 67,000 tons in December.

Authoritative circles commented that the shipping situation appeared more favorable although "we may still expect to get knocks." They attributed lower losses in recent weeks to improved patrols, stronger convoy escorts and weather breaks.

Britain Will Intern Enemy Couples Together

London, Jan. 21 (A. P.).—A plan to bring interned enemy alien husbands and wives together in internment villages was announced today by Osbert Peake, Under-Secretary for Home Affairs.

BRITONS WIN WAR BONUS

Million Workers to Receive 75 Cents Additional Weekly

LONDON, Jan. 21 (AP)—The National Arbitration Tribunal today granted a war bonus increase of 75 cents weekly to a million British arms and shipbuilding workers whose average wage is $17. The tribunal ruled against the union, however, on a request for full restoration of pre-war working conditions.

MEAT LOW IN BRITAIN

Minister of Food Blames Weather Conditions.

London, Jan. 21 (A. P.).—Lord Woolton, Minister of Food, advised Britons today they must expect a decline in offerings of meat from the home markets as a result of weather conditions which also cause transportation difficulties.

He announced that those unable to obtain their full meat ration (about 25 cents a person weekly) would be allowed to make up the amount in corned beef. Lord Woolton said he believed the supplies of meat in cold storage would meet the ration needs, but that the use of corned beef would cover any local shortages.

4 Scotsmen Killed In Arms Plant Blast

Ministry Of Supply Announces Material Damage Was Slight In Factory Explosion

London, Jan. 21 (AP)—Four persons were killed in an explosion in a Scottish arms factory this afternoon, the Ministry of Supply announced.

The Ministry's brief statement said:

"The Ministry of Supply regrets to announce that an explosion occurred in a Scottish arms factory this afternoon resulting in the loss of four lives.

"An immediate inquiry is being held.

"Material damage was slight."

Gayda Reports Axis Discussed U.S. Trend

[By the Associated Press]

Rome, Jan. 21—Virginio Gayda indicated today that United States activity—"the sharpening of warlike trends across the ocean"—figured prominently in the meeting between Adolf Hitler and Benito Mussolini.

The authoritative editor of Il Giornale d'Italia outlined these five "well-defined phases" of the war situation which he said called for the meeting:

1. Intensification of German air attacks on Britain.

2. Intensification of the Axis counter-blockade in the Atlantic.

3. Critical developments in the Mediterranean.

4. The sharpening of warlike trends across the ocean, which do not pass without reactions from the whole political and military system of the war.

5. Vast international accords of the Axis.

"Identity Of Views"

Gayda emphasized the Axis nations' "identity of views . . . not only for political ends, but also for conduct of the war."

Foreign observers expressed belief that Hitler and Mussolini may have agreed on a plan to obtain France's cooperation in the war against Britain by direct action if necessary.

With the German military establishment in Sicily figuring largely in the Axis plans for the Mediterranean war, observers look for a Nazi attempt to gain further bases on the French island of Corsica and Tunisia.

High Attack Malta

The British island base of Malta, which thus far has been the chief Mediterranean objective of the Axis air fleets, would be another effective base, if it could be wrested from its defenders, it was said.

The objective of such extensions of the present campaign would be to make the Mediterranean too hot for the British fleet, thereby closing the sea to convoys and reducing Britain's trength in the war against the Italians in Libya and also cutting off British aid to Greece.

A supplementary move, these observers say, might be a German effort to obtain Dakar, chief port of French West Africa, as a base for operations.

"Technical Meeting"

The newspaper Il Piccolo described the war council between Mussolini and Hitler—believed to have taken place at Berchtesgaden—as a "technical meeting of the first order," an indication that military problems predominated.

This was interpreted in foreign circles as meaning, possibly, that Hitler has decided to act over the head of the Vichy Government to bring conquered France into line with the totalitarian program for Europe.

(Brief, identical communiques issued yesterday in Rome and Berlin told neither when nor where the leaders met nor what they discussed. The announcements said only they were in complete accord on all questions.)

Joint Attitude

Political circles assumed also that the two chiefs had agreed on a joint attitude toward developments in United States aid to Britain, which the Fascists say are leading toward an anti-totalitarian war.

Here again, observers say, occupation of Dakar would be a highly practical move.

"New events on the eve of imminent spring" will blossom from the meeting, Il Piccolo commented. It recalled that in their four previous meetings since the Blitzkrieg against Poland, Hitler and Mussolini reached decisions which had "immediate and profound repercussion on the progress of the war and development of joint action against the enemy."

More Active Phase

With the German air force aiding Italy, the newspaper added, "the alliance has entered into a new and more active phase."

"After a period of rest and uncertainty, which the English have used as if Italy was already at the end of her forces and resources," it said, "we now are facing an energetic revival. The initiative still is in the hands of the Führer and il Duce."

May Meet Often

Expressing confidence of Axis domination of the Mediterranean Il Piccolo underlined these words in black: "We are not ones to hope that the English do not pass through it any more—let them pass if they have chosen those waters for their suicide."

As Mussolini Italian Foreign Minister Count Galeazzo Ciano and German Ambassador Hans Georg Viktor von Mackensen returned from the Axis meeting, Fascist authorities said that such talks between Hitler and Mussolini probably would become more frequent.

The two leaders were said to have talked "a very long time," first privately and then with their aides.

High Fascists stressed the statement that the meeting was marked by a "spirit of cordial friendship," calling it important in view of British propaganda suggesting that Axis solidarity was weakening.

GAYDA ASSAILS WARLIKE TREND 'ACROSS OCEAN'

Editor Declares Such A Policy "Does Not Pass Without Reactions"

Italians Predict Nazi Effort To Gain French Mediterranean Bases

[By the Associated Press]

Rome, Jan. 21—Adolf Hitler's secret meeting with Benito Mussolini was described by a Fascist press organ today as "a solemn warning" to the United States, and there were predictions that the Nazis would seek to gain French vases in a supreme effort to drive the British navy from the Mediterranean.

There were forecasts of a spring Axis offensive intended to break Britain before the United States could make a material contribution to her defense, and the tone taken by some authoritative writers suggested there had been a virtual merger of German and Italian forces, including their high commands.

Chief Objective Cited

Fascist informants indicated that an attempt to seize control of the Mediterranean—not only to drive the British off the shipping lanes but away from the North African coast to relieve the Italians in Libya—stood at the top of the list of the war plans drawn up by Hitler and Mussolini in their week-end conference.

The Catholic newspaper L'Avvenire, for example, declared that if the British armies of North Africa "must proceed with their right flank exposed to the air and naval attacks of the Axis they will soon end up in an extremely precarious position."

Allied Line "Exposed"

"In Albania," it said, "the British and Greeks already have a line from the Yugoslav frontier to the coast even more exposed to attacks by sea and the wearing down of that line brings nearer the threat of our counter-effensive."

The belief that Hitler and Mussolini had agreed to obtain France's cooperation in the war, by direct action if necessary, was expressed first by foreign observers.

They pointed out that the Germans already were established in Sicily (mainly a base for Nazi dive bombers which have been harrying the British fleet.) They forecast a German effort to operate also from the French island of Corsica; from Tunisia, in French North Africa, and perhaps also from Dakar, the main port of French West Africa.

U. S. Activities Noted

The activities of the United States drew observations from Fascism's editorial spokesmen.

Virginio Gayda declared "The sharpening of warlike trends across the ocean" figured much in the Hitler-Mussolini meeting; these trends, he said, "do not pass without reactions. . . ."

The official Rome radio asserted that President Roosevelt was preparing to enter the war, but that the American public would "have none of it."

After saying that the Hitler-Mussolini discussion was "a solemn warning" to the United States, the newspaper La Tribuna denounced "those who for business reasons, ideological stubbornness or low calculations inspired by the destructive intention of international Masonry and Jewry still believe they can interpose obstacles to the advance of the new order and prop up the iniquitous British hegemony."

Military Reports

On the military side, Italy's high command reported these developments:

In East Africa—Italian evacuation of Kassala, in the Anglo-Egyptian Sudan, as a measure compelled by "necessities of a strategic nature." The British, however, were declared to have suffered "considerable losses" in motorized units.

In Libya—"Increased artillery action" around Tobruk; British aerial bombing was acknowledged to have caused "some material damage," but Italian planes were said to have "repeatedly bombed enemy preparations and bases."

On the Greek Albanian front—Greek naval bases heavily raided; port works and ships at anchorage hit; troop concentrations and supply ships scatter-bombed.

BELGIAN CASUALTIES LISTED

7,500 Soldiers And 5,995 Civilians Killed In German Drive

Berlin, Jan. 21 (AP)—The number of Belgian soldiers killed in the German drive through the Lowlands has been set tentatively at 7,500 and the number of civilians at 5,995, the well informed Dienst aus Deutschland news agency service said today, quoting figures said to have been released by the Belgian Office for the Identification of War Dead.

ROME SEES AMERICA BEING LED TO WAR

Milan Press Says U. S. Can't Help British More.

Rome, Jan. 21 (A. P.).—The Rome radio, in an English language broadcast, asserted today every one believes President Roosevelt plans to bring America into the war.

"Do people have faith in Roosevelt's promise" not to send American fighting forces abroad? the broadcaster asked.

"Every one believes it is his intention to use the powers he is demanding under the aid-for-Britain bill to bring America into the war," the broadcaster said.

The American public, however, will "have none of it," he declared. "Its desire to remain out of war is unmistakable."

The Milan newspaper Corriere della Sera, described the United States as playing the unique role of "waging war without waging war." America could extend little more aid to Britain than she is already doing even if she formally declared war on the Axis Powers, the paper said.

Should the United States actualy enter the war, this commentary added, she could send Britain no army, but could provide only airplane pilots and such naval aid as could be spared from her own coast defenses in addition to munitions. The paper said the United States already was furnishing all three.

'Victory This Year'

[By the Associated Press]

Berlin, Jan. 21—The central idea underlying yesterday's conference between Adolf Hitler and Premier Mussolini, informed sources said today, was to insure during the present year a victory over England, regarded as already practically achieved.

All other problems, such as the rearrangement of the world after victory, or detailed questions such as the fate of the French colonies, were secondary, these sources declared.

It was emphasized further that the presence of the German and Italian Foreign Ministers, Joachim von Ribbentrop and Count Galeazzo Ciano, at the meeting indicated the Axis leaders consider diplomatic weapons as well as military weapons important to the achievement of victory.

Hitler's Germany, they said, will avoid the mistakes of the earlier German regime, when foreign policy and military policy ran side by side without being dovetailed carefully into each other.

Ricci Transferred to Front

ROME, Jan. 21 (AP)—Renato Ricci, recently named Italy's industrial dictator, and his chief assistant, Tullio Cianetti, have left their jobs for "front-line fighting posts," the official news agency Stefani said tonight. It failed to say where they were to be sent or who was running the vast production machine entrusted to Ricci only Dec. 31, when Premier Benito Mussolini gave to him control over industry in addition to his cabinet post as Minister of Guilds. Ricci is a lieutenant colonel in the Bersaglieri and Cianetti a captain of artillery.

Britain in Pact With Belgian Congo

By the Associated Press.

LONDON, Jan. 2.—The Foreign Office announced today the conclusion of purchase and financial agreements with the Belgian Congo under which Great Britain will buy 126,000 metric tons of copper and other products within a year.

Products to be bought are "important for the maintenance of prosperity of the Belgian Congo," the announcement said.

The Belgian Congo government has agreed to introduce legislation forbidding "trading with the enemy" and to inaugurate an export licensing system, it was added.

The financial agreement stipulated that all of the Belgian Congo gold production and foreign exchange, "after providing for the Belgian Congo's own essential requirements and such advances to the Belgian government as may prove necessary," would be ceded to the Bank of England against payment in pounds sterling.

The purchase agreement is operative for a year from Jan. 9, 1941; the financial agreement for the duration of the war.

HITLER'S ANSWER TO PETAIN READY

Reply to Be Delivered by Vichy Envoy in Paris.

Vichy, Jan. 21 (A. P.).—Information from Paris indicated tonight that Adolf Hitler's reply to Chief of State Marshal Petain soon will be delivered by Fernand de Brinon, French representative in Paris. It was not possible, however, to obtain immediate confirmation here.

A high Government source said yesterday that Marshal Petain will keep his present Cabinet until Hitler answers his Christmas Eve message, outlining how German - French collaboration could continue. Negotiations have been halted since Pierre Laval, former Foreign Minister and Vice-Premier now reconciled with Petain, left the Cabinet on December 13. In official circles it was said that the Vichy Government's position that the French fleet will not be used against Britain stands unaltered.

According to the Paris information, Hitler's reply takes the stand that the official announcement that Petain and Laval have settled their differences proves that the charges against Laval, which led to his resignation, were baseless.

[It has been reported in Berne that Laval was accused of personal ambitions, even to the extent of setting up his own French Government.]

The note also was reported to insist that Laval be included in Vichy's inner councils—for example, in a talked-of sup[illegible] cabinet—and that such incidents as caused the Laval resignation must not be repeated, if the Vichy Government wants French-German collaboration to continue.

FRENCH TROOPS FREED

43,000 Soldiers Go Home From Switzerland.

Vichy, Jan. 21 (A. P.).—Cries of "Long Live France" and "Long Live Switzerland" came from both sides of the frontier as interned French troops released from Switzerland crossed into France at a border town last night.

Five hundred Spahis — native cavalrymen from Algeria and Tunisia led by French officers—crossed the frontier, among the first of 43,000 French troops to be freed under a French-German agreement. Crowds cheered as officers shook hands with a French general commanding a waiting guard of honor. The Swiss were represented by an officer who formerly served in the French Foreign Legion.

The official French journal today listed 997 wounded and sick French prisoners of war repatriated from Germany from November 27 to December 7.

300 French Sailors Back Home

Vichy, France, Jan. 21 (AP)—After a voyage of nearly three months, in which they said they were seized three times by British vessels, 300 demobilized French soldiers and officers reached home today from the West Indies.

VICHY PROTESTS SEIZURE

Also Notifies Brazil of 'Conditions' of British Action on Vessel

VICHY, France, Jan. 21 (AP)—The Vichy government has protested to Britain against the seizure of the French freighter Mendoza off the coast of Brazil, an official announcement said tonight.

It added that France also had called the attention of the Brazilian Government to "the conditions in which the incident occurred."

OFFICIAL TOKIO AGAIN ATTACKS U. S. ATTITUDE

Matsuoka Says This Nation Should Consider in the Interest of Peace.

ADDRESSES JAPANESE DIET

Some Britons Advised to Leave Orient Before the Crisis With America Comes to Head.

Tokio, Jan. 21 (A. P.).—Foreign Minister Yosuke Matsuoka expressed "earnest hope" today that the United States would reflect seriously on her attitude toward Japan's ambitions in Greater East Asia both "for the sake of peace in the Pacific and the sake of peace in the world in general."

Later today the British Consul at Yokohama was reported to have sent letters to some British citizens in this district advising them to leave Japan "before the impending crisis in American-Japanese relations comes to a head." British subjects in Tokio, Kobe and other cities were said to have received such letters.

The United States, Matsuoka told the Japanese Diet, has "evinced no adequate understanding of the fact that the establishment of common prosperity throughout Greater East Asia is a matter of vital concern to Japan."

Declaring that the United States "apparently entertains the idea that her own first line of national defense lies . . . not only along the eastern Pacific, but even as far as China and the South Seas," Matsuoka said, it would ill-become her to accuse Japan of having "ambitious designs."

Regrets U. S. Attitude.

"I, for one," Matsuoka declared, "believe that such a position assumed on the part of the United States would not be calculated to contribute toward promotion of world peace. Speaking frankly, I should extremely regret such an attitude of the United States for the sake of peace in the Pacific and also for the state of the world in general."

The Foreign Minister urged the United States to "realize her responsibility for the maintenance of peace, reflect deeply on her attitude with truly God-fearing duty . . . and bend the utmost efforts to allay an impending crisis in civilization."

Pointedly, Matsuoka referred to Japan's recent military alliance with Germany and Italy, which he said, will surely result in establishment of a new world order, "if only time be given."

"There is no room for doubt," he declared, "that it will be crowned with brilliant success."

Warns Against War.

He warned, however, that should the United States become involved in the European war and "should Japan, too, be compelled to participate," the resulting conflict might spell "the downfall of civilization."

Throughout his 3,500-word address Matsuoka avoided references to recent official utterances in Washington regarding the international situation, particularly as it affects the Far East. He dwelt at length, however, on economic pressure exerted by the United States in the form of a "succession of embargoes and restrictions on exports to Japan," as well as what he called interference with Japanese shipping by Great Britain and her colonies.

"The Japanese Government have lodged protests against such actions on each occasion, but this tendency has recently been so greatly aggravated that Japan must meet the situation adequately prepared," Matsuoka said.

"No other course is left open for Japan but to go forward with perfecting herself as a State highly organized for national defense not only in order to meet this pressure . . . but also to secure an economic life of self-supply and self-sufficiency within the region of Greater East Asia."

Seeks Russian Friendship.

Matsuoka left no doubt that Japan is "determined to go forward with the work of stabilization for the East." To aid in this work, Japan is endeavoring to "bring about a far-reaching readjustment of diplomatic relations with Soviet Russia, the Foreign Minister asserted, emphasizing that the three-Power pact was in no way directed against Moscow.

Matsuoka declared the Government was seeking a speedy settlement of "the China incident" and said armed resistance by the regime of Generalissimo Chiang Kai-shek has notably declined.

The regime "is still advocating national reconstruction through continued resistance against Japan," however, largely due to "misplaced hopes in assistance from Great Britain and the United States—especially the latter," Matsuoka said.

The Netherlands East Indies and French Indo-China, "if only for geographical reasons, should be in a state of intimate and inseparable relationship" with Japan, Matsuoka asserted.

He recalled that "a cultural agreement" was signed with Brazil last September, and that Japan and Argentina had agreed to elevate their legations to embassies.

30 Britons Warned

[By the Associated Press]

Tokyo, Jan. 21—A British consular official's advice to certain British residents to leave Japan 'before the impending crisis in American-Japanese relations comes to a head" was disclosed by reliable informants today.

Wilfred W. McVittie, acting Consul General in Yokohama, was said to have sent a letter of warning to a selected list of about thirty Britons in his district. Why these were selected was not explained. It was said that Britons in Tokyo and other cities received no such letters.

Lists "Crisis Probabilities"

The informants said McVittie's letter read as follows:

"British subjects who have no important reason to remain in Japan are advised to leave by the regular shipping routes before the impending crisis in American-Japanese relations comes to a head.

"Should war be declared, it is probable that:

"1. Sailings of ships of all nationalties will be canceled.

"2. Hurried evacuation will not be possible.

"3. British subjects will not be free to use their money or property.

"4. They will not be ableto communicate with their consuls and some may be interned.

Americans Advised In October

"5. A neutral government will then endeavor to arrange for their evacuation and the payment of living allowances if Japanese authorities permit."

An authoritative British source said today that British residents in Japan were advised last November to leave unless they had important reasons for staying and that this advice "still stands."

This informant said nothing was known in London of the notice reported to have been issued today by the active British Consul General in Yokohama.

He added that this notice was not issued on instructions from the British Foreign Office.

United States residents in Japan were advised by the Washington State Department last October to leave Japan, China and other Oriental territories. Several hundred already have left Japan. No new advice has been issued to Americans recently.

LONDON, Jan. 21 (AP)—An authoritative British source said today that British subjects in Japan were advised last November to leave unless they had important reasons for staying, and that this advice "still stands."

This informant said nothing was known here of a notice reported to have been issued today by the acting British Consul General in Yokohama. He added that this notice was not issued on instructions from the Foreign Office.

More Americans To Leave Orient

Shanghai, Jan. 21 (A. P.).—The liner President Taft will sail for the United States tomorrow with 165 passengers, most of them Americans leaving the Orient in response to their State Department's advice. The total responding to the advice as a result will be brought to about 4,000 for the whole Orient.

THAI FORCES ATTACK TOWN IN CAMBODIA

French Indo-Chinese Report Foe at Gates of Samrong

SAIGON, French Indo-China, Jan. 21 (AP)—Isolated actions continued today in the developing war between Thailand [Siam] and the French Far Eastern garrisons, with Thai forces reported to have gained footholds in two outposts within French territory.

The most important military development was reported in Northern Cambodia, where a large force of Thai troops, supported by mechanized units, reached the city gates of Samrong, a point defended by a small body of French troops backed by a bomber squadron. The French military communiqué described the attack as "violent."

A pitched battle was reported across the border-marking Mekong River opposite the town of Pakse, with sizable losses admitted by both sides.

A French announcement said that in the past week the French forces had destroyed three Thai tanks and anti-aircraft guns had shot down five Thai planes, bringing the total to forty-six.

BANGKOK, Thailand, Jan. 21 (AP)—The Thai [Siamese] High Command reported today heavy losses were inflicted on French Indo-Chinese forces that crossed the Mekong River, and thirty river craft were damaged in retaliatory raids by five Thai warplanes.

Military objectives along much of the Indo-Chinese side of the border from Luang-Prabong to the Gulf of Siam also were damaged by Thai raiders, the communiqué said.

KENNEDY FIGHTS AID BILL IN ITS PRESENT FORM

Says Even British Leaders Can't Agree Whether We Should Enter War.

HE URGES LIMITING POWERS

Tells House Committeemen That Co-ordinating Board Should Represent Congress.

Washington, Jan. 21 (A. P.).—Joseph P. Kennedy, the retiring Ambassador to London, said flatly today that he was against the lease-lend bill for aid to Britain in its present form. After more than three hours' testimony before the House Foreign Affairs Committee Mr. Kennedy was told by Representative Chiperfield, Republican, of Illinois, that Mr. Chiperfield had been unable to determine the witness's attitude toward the legislation.

"Are you for or against this bill in its present form?" he asked. "I'm against this bill in its present form," Mr. Kennedy replied. He added that he had no specific proposals for amendment.

Previously, he had agreed with various suggestions for amendments put forward by members of the committee, including those which would limit the President's powers under the legislation. On the other hand, Mr. Kennedy had expressed approval several times for all aid to Britain short of war which would not inevitably lead to war, but he also had stressed his belief that rearmament was America's main problem and that aid to Britain should be considered solely in terms of "what's best for us."

Can Not Agree.

Mr. Kennedy reported that some high British officials believed that the United States should go to war against Germany, but that others disagreed. Those who favored American entrance into the war he said, did so because they felt that this nation "would find a way to carry it through."

Officials opposed to the idea, he said, believed that it would cut down the flow of war materials to Britain. Mr. Kennedy, who served President Roosevelt in London for thirteen months after Britain went to war and went through more than 280 air raids, appeared before the House Foreign Relations Committee to testify on the administration bill for lease-lend aid to Britain and other democracies.

He agreed with various suggestions put forward by committeemen for limiting powers which would be granted to the President by the legislation, approving, among others, a proposal to keep the President from using warships for convoy duty, unless Congress consented. Questioned at length on conditions in Britain, Mr. Kennedy said that when war came and Parliament passed a bill in two hours without debate—presumably the emergency

WINANT NOT PICKED

Roosevelt's Choice of Envoy to Britain Due Soon.

Washington, Jan. 21 (A. P.).—President Roosevelt said today that he thought he would talk to some one tomorrow about the appointment of a new Ambassador to England, but he threw back his head and laughed loudly when asked if it were true that John G. Winant would get the post. Authoritative informants had reported that Mr. Winant, former Governor of New Hampshire and first Chairman of the Social Security Board, probably would be named to succeed Joseph P. Kennedy, retiring Ambassador.

Mr. Roosevelt said that he had not yet spoken to anybody about the designation of a new agency. Reporters wanted to know also about reports that Averill Harriman, industrialist, would be named United States Minister to England. Mr. Roosevelt smiled and said that there were all sorts of reports along such lines.

FDR Derides Convoy Talk

Says Idea of Giving Navy to British Is Purely a Fable, Too

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Roosevelt said today he supposed 50 executive orders of all kinds had been drawn up to meet contingencies and that perhaps one of them provided for the freezing of assets of all European countries in the United States.

The freezing of such assets, he said, is one of many things that has been studied for a long time and remains under study.

At the first press conference of his third term the President was asked whether an executive order for that purpose actually had been prepared. He said he supposed one might have been printed, but that fact did not necessarily mean much.

Precautionary Measure

The orders were drafted as a precautionary measure, he indicated so that they would be ready in case they were needed suddenly.

Mr. Roosevelt also told reporters that talk of convoying ships across the Atlantic to the British Isles, which has circulated on Capitol Hill in discussion of the aid-to-Britain legislation, was "cow-jump-over-the-moon stuff—Old Mother Hubbard."

He authorized the direct quotation at the request of newspapermen.

In the same category, he placed the talk of a possibility of giving the American Navy to Britain.

British Women Win Honors for Defense Heroism in War

Work Side by Side With Men and Share Perils of Fighting Services

ADVANCE—SENT JAN-20

By GODFREY ANDERSON

LONDON, Jan. 21 (AP).—Women, responding to the call for national service, are ranking as heroines in the front lines.

Thousands of them share the perils and privations of war with men, serving in the auxiliary units of the three fighting services as well as in civil defense.

For the first time in history, women worked side by side with men as fire-fighters in the auxiliary fire service toward the end of 1940. They also have braved the bombs and the anti-aircraft barrage as ARP wardens, ambulance drivers and first aid workers.

Drive Farm Tractors

Women served as "land girls" during the last war, but members of the women's land army now are driving tractors and attending to farm machinery.

From the woman who stays at home, minding her children, is prepared to tackle the incendiary bomb which may fall in her attic, to brew hot tea for bombed-out neighbors, billet a few soldiers, or give lifts to stranded wayfarers in her automobile if she still has one and can get gasoline to run it.

If she lives in a big city, she faces the nightly terror of air raids. If she lives in the country, she may have half her house filled with evacuees and have to share her kitchen with people she barely knows.

Named Clerk in Commons

The calling of men to the ghting forces has left vacancies for women in fields they never before have been able to enter.

Miss Kay Midwinter of Torquay (Devonshire) was appointed temporary clerk of the House of Commons. Not only is she the first woman to hold this post, but she is the first woman (other than a woman M. P.) to set foot on the floor of the chamber while the House is sitting.

There are women porters shouting "mind the doors" on the crowded subways, women punching tickets on buses, and even some women chimney-sweeps.

One group of young airwomen, members of the air transport auxiliary, are ferrying new aircraft from the factories to RAF stations. They pilot anything from fast fighter-trainers to heavy twin-engined bombers. It was on such duty that Amy Mollison was killed when her plane crashed into the Thames.

Holds Major Rank in Army

The navy has appointed its first woman physician. She is Mrs. Attracta Genevieve Rewcastle and she sports the gold rings of a surgeon-lieutenant on her naval-type uniform.

The army, not to be outdone by the navy, appointed its first woman doctor with senior rank a few days later. She is Dr. Anna Reaveley Glover and, with the relative rank of a major in the Royal Army Medical Corps, is deputy assistant director of medical services for the (women's) auxiliary territorial service, eastern command.

Assistant Section Officer Joan Pearson of St. Ives (Cornwall) was the first member of the Women's Auxiliary Air Force to be decorated. She was awarded the medal of the military division of the Order of the British Empire for gallantry in risking her life to rescue a British pilot after his machine had crashed.

Three other "WAAFS"—Srgt. Joan Mortimer, Assistant Section Officer Elspeth Henderson and Srgt. Helen Turner—are the first women to be awarded the military medal, for the calmness and courage they showed under bombing attack at a RAF fighter station in the south of England.

"Wrens" Show Heroism

Leading "Wren" Nina Marsh and "Wren" Irene May Marriott (the word Wren is derived from the initials of the Women's Royal Naval Service) were cooking dinner when a bomb crashed nearby. Nina, although wounded, said a meal must be produced somehow. And it was.

So Nina got a medal and Irene was commended for gallant conduct and devotion to duty.

Nineteen-year-old Sonia Straw, a first aid warden of Caterham (Surrey), was the first woman to be awarded the newly instituted George Medal, highest ranking award after the Victoria Cross. Sonia received the medal for her bravery in treating casualties in a badly bombed building.

Herbert Morrison, Minister of Home Security, asked whether women are to undertake fire-bomb fighting, following the Nazis' big fire raid on the ancient City of London, said: "This is dangerous work; for that matter, so is work with the ambulance service. The time has long gone by when women could be kept away from dangerous work in defense of their country and if they are ready for service I am not going to say 'No.'

"The women of this country have shown that when air raids come, they have just as high courage and just as steady nerves as men. It may be that the idea of defending their homes or the businesses where they work as front-line fighters will make a special appeal to them."

NEW HAMPSHIRE'S EX-GOVERNOR WILL SUCCEED KENNEDY

Former Social Security Board Chairman Acceptable to Churchill.

IS MEMBER OF G. O. P.

Known as Friend of Labor. Educated at St. Paul's and Princeton.

Washington, Jan. 21.—(AP)—John G. Winant, one-time Republican Governor of New Hampshire and former chairman of the Social Security Board, was reported authoritatively today to be President Roosevelt's choice to succeed Joseph P. Kennedy as Ambassador to Great Britain.

Informants close to the White House said that he was acceptable to Prime Minister Churchill and other British officials.

Mr. Roosevelt, it was said, decided that Winant had the respect of all classes of people and that he would make an ideal diplomat under the trying conditions of war and post-war rehabilitation.

Kennedy Informed

Kennedy, who tendered his resignation some time ago, was reported to have been informed of Winant's selection and to have expressed no objection.

Authoritative reports said the President probably would send the nomination to the Senate in the next few days, and well-informed leaders on Capitol Hill said there was little doubt that he would be confirmed promptly.

Tall and tousle-haired, Winant, who is now 51, was named as first chairman of the Social Security Board in 1935. He resigned during the 1936 campaign to defend the Social Security Act against the criticism of Alf M. Landon, then the Republican Presidential nominee.

International Office

Since that time Winant has been mentioned on several occasions for various Cabinet posts. He was elected director of the League of Nations International Labor Office in 1938, receiving 28 of a possible 32 votes and becoming the first American to hold that position. The Labor Office now has its headquarters at Ottawa, Canada.

Although elected to the New Hampshire Legislature in 1917, Winant hardly took his seat before leaving for Paris to enlist in the first air squadron of the AEF. He was honorably discharged as a Captain in 1919.

At 36, he was elected Governor of New Hampshire, and then was the youngest Governor in the country. He was re-elected for a second and third term, but declined a fourth on the ground that others should have an opportunity to hold office.

Long regarded as a friend by labor, Winant was mentioned prominently among the list of possible Republican Presidential nominees in 1936.

Despite disapproval by some of his party colleagues, he was prompt to indorse President Roosevelt's NRA and to urge that its labor provisions be made permanent.

Wife Not Informed

At her home in Concord, N. H., Mrs. Winant said she had received no word from her husband on his possible appointment.

The former Governor's wife said that rumors have been current for some time that he might be named to the London post but that there had been no official confirmation.

Winant, born in New York City of a wealthy family, was educated at St. Paul's School in Concord, N. H., and at Princeton University.

Early in his career, he expressed his position on labor with the words: "Jungle warfare has no place in modern industry, and the exploitation of workers has been a deep and underlying cause of our lack of social advance."

Winant's New Hampshire legislative accomplishments included creation of a State Comptroller's office, modernization of State financial records and development of a State planning program.

He was instrumental in giving the State a direct primary, and he set up a state-administered relief system which won praise from the Federal Government.

Kennedy Fights Present Aid Bill powers bill—"democracy went out the window," but, he added, it did not necessarily follow that democracy "can't come back."

Keeping Out of War.

At another point he remarked that it was "quite unlikely" that England might land troops on the European Continent to defeat Germany. He reiterated his expressed view that the United States should keep out of the war.

On the problem of aiding the British, the Ambassador expressed the belief that Congress should have a closely co-odinated relationship with the President. "If Congress could have some small committee that would function with the President, you'd still have Congress functioning, but it would not be through an unwieldy body," he explained.

But he said that the main task before this nation is to complete its own rearmament. "We should go all out to rearm now," he declared.

Representative Richards, Democrat, of South Carolina, asked if, in comparison with that objective of preparedness, the question of aid to Britain should not be considered merely as incidental and Mr. Kennedy said that he agreed.

At the same time, he made it clear that he favored full aid—short of war—to the British. He called for 100 per cent support for whatever methods of extending assistance finally were worked out.

Only Three Phone Calls.

Representative Tinkham, Republican, of Massachusetts, took up with Mr. Kennedy the question of making public reports which the envoy forwarded to Washington while in London. Mr. Kennedy said that the matter involved policy considerations and was for the State Department to decide.

It might be, he added, that the best interests of the country would not be served by making the documents public. He said that while in London he had "but three telephone conversations" with the administration here, "one with the President and two with the Secretary of State."

Subsequently, at the State Department, Secretary Hull was asked about proposals that diplomatic correspondence both of Mr. Kennedy and William C. Bullitt, former Ambassador to Paris, be submitted to congressional committees. Secretary Hull said that some State Department documents could not be made public in the interest of national defense and the nation's foreign relations, but that he did not know if any of the documents from Messrs. Kennedy and Bullitt came within this category.

Several Points Observed.

In the course of the long committee hearing, Mr. Kennedy stressed several points to the committee. These included:

With regard to British aid, "the problem for us to consider is what's best for us; it doesn't sound very charitable, but that's the question."

If the war continues for two or three years, it is a "fair assumption" that Communism will sweep western Europe. Aid to Britain, which might lead to involvement in war, would include American naval escorts for cargo convoys. When one war vessel was sunk, war, in Mr. Kennedy's opinion, would result.

Mr. Kennedy "has faith" in the President's ability and integrity in handling foreign affairs. On this point, the Ambassador told the committee "I'm a little biased. I think he's a great fellow."

Toward the end of the hearing, Mr. Kennedy said that "we admit that we're in no shape to fight, therefore I'm for all aid to England."

Tinkham Takes a Hand.

Representative Tinkham asked Mr. Kennedy if England might land troops on the European Continent and defeat Germany. Mr. Kennedy replied that this would be "quite unlikely." Could a combination of British and an "unlimited number" of American troops defeat Germany? Mr. Tinkham asked.

Mr. Kennedy said that, bearing in mind transportation and related problems, that would be a difficult question to answer. He reiterated to Mr. Tinkham that "this is not our war" and that the United States should keep out of it.

In response to a question about the economic effect upon the United States should it enter the war, Mr. Kennedy said that if the struggle continued a long time, England would not be able to make war purchases here. The result, he asserted, would be "a terrific war debt that would make such a burden on this country that anything might happen."

Mr. Kennedy declined flatly to answer a question by Mr. Tinkham whether the lease-lend bill, in its present form, "proposes a dictatorship here." At various points, however, he commented on specific criticisms, and agreed with suggestions for amendments to limit the amount of money to be appropriated under the program, to limit the life of the measure and to prohibit the use of American naval vessels for convoy duty.

30.24-7091 X 30.24-7091

'Letting George Do It.'

Mr. Kennedy declined again to comment when Mr. Tinkham asked if the British Government was conducting the war efficiently or was "muddling through" with the idea of "letting George do it," meaning, Mr. Tinkham said, the United States. "Are the British people united in prosecution of this war?" Mr. Tinkham asked.

"Completely," Mr. Kennedy replied.

At various times, as Mr. Tinkham continued his interrogation, Chairman Bloom, Democrat, of New York, and other committeemen, objected to Mr. Tinkham's questions, thus relieving the Ambassador either of having to reply or to refuse to do so. Mr. Tinkham, standing behind the long, curved committee table, calmly accepted the objections with the comment:

"I have so many questions, I will not press that one."

He continued to put them in quantity and finally Representative Eaton, Republican, of New Jersey, arose from his seat and said:

"At the rate we're proceeding, the war will be over before. . . ."

Laughter Blackout.

Laughter blanked out the rest of the sentence. Mr. Eaton suggested that Mr. Tinkham place in the committee record his views and questions.

"I hope," Mr. Eaton continued, "that other members of the committee will not have the same hunger for information that the gentleman is exhibiting." Chairman Bloom said that he hoped that the effect of this remark would be on Republican members.

"I will say that it will have no effect on me," Mr. Tinkham said. He went on to ask Mr. Kennedy to define the expression "All aid short of war to Great Britain."

"Any action that will not make war inevitable," Mr. Kennedy said, emphasizing that he would rely on the President and military and naval experts to define such actions specifically. Mr. Tinkham said some of those Mr. Kennedy had mentioned had "been very warlike in their movements."

Questioned as to whether he believed that a crisis would develop within the next sixty or ninety days, as administrative spokesmen told the committee last week, Mr. Kennedy said that he did not know exactly what was meant and that there were many things in the military situation which he did not understand.

Perfect Chance Muffed.

"I have never understood, for instance, why the German Army permitted a British army of 300,000 to escape from Dunkirk," he said. If the German air force was as strong as they claimed, he continued, he thought that they had a perfect chance to annihilate that British force.

"If they have the strength to capture the air," he said, "the crisis might come any day. So far, they haven't indicated they have that strength."

Representative Fish, Republican, of New York, asked Mr. Kennedy if he knew the British war aims.

"I certainly don't, sir," the former Ambassador replied.

Question For Hull.

When Mr. Fish asked if Mr. Kennedy thought that something ought to be done to let this country know the nature of those war aims before proceeding with aid to Britain, Mr. Kennedy said that he did not understand the question and suggested that it was one for the State Department.

Britain's situation would become "serious and vital," Mr. Kennedy said, if British shipping losses continued at anything like the rate of losses prevalent before last month.

Mr. Fish asked if it were fair to the British people "for us to intimate" that the United States would help in a possible Continental invasion. "I don't believe we've ever done that officially," Mr. Kennedy replied.

Mr. Fish asked what Mr. Kennedy thought of Winston Churchill's statement that, as Mr. Fish put it, "England needed no help from us in 1941." Mr. Kennedy said that it was "rather strange."

Labor More Important.

Mr. Fish then wanted to know if there were "any truth in reports that England is going Socialist." Mr. Kennedy said that the Labor and Socialist parties were becoming more important and added that "nobody has the right to assume that conditions will ever go back to what they were."

At another point, he said: "I feel that the declaration of war . . . put in a position . . . to do something . . ."

the audience to applaud with his statement that "anything that Congress voted and the President approved would meet my approval 100 per cent."

Representative Luther A. Johnson, Democrat, of Texas, asked if it were not necessary that the United States arm as soon as possible. Mr. Kennedy replied in the affirmative, asserting that "every day is a day too late." Of British morale, he said, "I can't imagine anything better." He added that there was "a great deal less turmoil there than among the people I've met in the United States."

"It's just a question of plain guts," he observed. "If conditions come to the worst, we can take care of ourselves. The mere mention of this man's name ought not drive us to an air-raid shelter."

He related that a shop near the embassy in London was bombed. Afterward, he said, the proprietor hung out this sign:

"Open now night and day."

When the hearing ended, he was asked by newspaper men to clarify his statements. "I'm for rearmament," he said. "That's our problem and, by rearming the stronger, we are able to aid Great Britain."

ROOSEVELT READY TO FREEZE CREDITS

Says U. S. Is Forearmed to Protect Aliens' Assets.

Washington, Jan. 21 (A. P.).—President Roosevelt said today that he supposed that fifty executive orders of all kinds had been drawn to meet contingencies and that perhaps one provided for the freezing of assets of all European countries in the United States. The freezing of such assets, he said, is one of many things studied a long time and remaining under study.

At the first press conference of his third term, the President was asked if an executive order for that purpose actually had been prepared. He said he supposed that one might have been printed, but that this fact did not necessarily mean much.

The orders were drafted as a precautionary measure, he indicated, so that they would be ready if needed suddenly. Mr. Roosevelt also told reporters that talk of convoying ships across the Atlantic to the British Isles, which has circulated on Capitol Hill in discussion of the aid-to-Britain legislation, was "cow-jump-over-the-moon stuff—Old Mother Hubbard."

He authorized the direct quotation at the request of newspaper men. In the same category he placed the talk of a possibility of giving the American navy to Britain.

Asked if the escorting of ship convoys was likely in the near future, he said that it had not been considered in any way. Meanwhile, it was learned on high authority that the administration considers it obvious that if one nation escorts ships flying its own flag or that of another country, there were chances that there might be some shooting.

Since shooting is close to war, this source said, about the last thing the Government would have in mind would be to do anything to compel shooting to start. On the question of transferring American war vessels to the British, the President repeated what he had said at a recent press conference—that he did not want to stand on his head and that he did not think it necessary to put a prohibition against that in the lease-lend bill.

The President was asked what he thought about a suggestion by Gov. Harold Stassen of Minnesota that the powers proposed for the President by the lease-lend legislation instead should be given jointly to a congressional committee and the Chief Executive. Mr. Roosevelt responded by asking whether the questioner had read the constitution.

"Is that (joint delegation of power) prohibited?" he was asked. "Surely," Mr. Roosevelt responded.

He asserted in reply to another question, however, that he supposed he did have the power, if he wanted to exercise it, to authorize the escorting of cargo convoys by American vessels.

U. S. EMB[illegible] ON PLANES FOR RUSSIA LIFTED

Step Believed Gesture Of Friendship Aimed At Improving Relations

All Aircraft, However, Are Earmarked For America And Britain

[By the Associated Press]

Washington, Jan. 21—In a friendly gesture designed to improve relations with Moscow, the United States tonight lifted a "moral embargo" on the export of airplanes and airplane equipment to Soviet Russia.

Whether the move was part of an attempt to drive a wedge between Russia and the Axis powers was not stated, but it has been known for some time that both Britain and the United States have been seeking better relations with the Soviet regime.

Inasmuch as American plane production for a long time to come is virtually earmarked for Britain and the United States' own needs, there was considerable doubt that tonight's action would lead to any important shipments of planes to Russia.

Aim Is To Remove Stigma

The main purpose, it was believed, was to remove the continuing stigma of the "moral embargo," which was applied during the Russo-Finnish war. At that time President Roosevelt called on Americans not to sell planes and equipment to nations guilty of the "bombing and machine-gunning of civilian populations from the air."

The move also may lead to a more liberal application of the export license system on machine tools and other materials which Russia has been seeking to purchase in the United States. Airplanes also are subject to this Government control system.

The "moral embargo," which Russian Ambassador Constantine Oumansky was advised no longer applies to his Government, was promulgated December 2, 1939.

Order Later Expanded

The State Department later expanded it to include plans, plants, manufacturing rights or technical information required for the production of high quality aviation gasoline.

A complete embargo on exportation of aviation gasoline to any countries outside the Western Hemisphere was imposed by President Roosevelt last November.

The lifting of the "moral embargo" followed several months of negotiations between Ambassador Oumansky and Sumner Welles, Under Secretary of State, aimed at an improvement of Russo-American relations.

In the course of these talks, the Government released considerable quantities of machine tools for export to Soviet Russia. The existence, however, of the moral embargo was understood to have been one obstacle in the way of improved relations.

Gesture Of Friendship

Its removal was regarded as a gesture of friendship designed to facilitate future negotiations with Russia.

The State Department, in announcing the move, made public the following letter from Under Secretary Welles to Oumansky:

"Following our recent conversations, I am happy to inform you that the Government of the United States of America has decided that the policies set forth in the statement issued to the press by the President on December 2, 1939, and generally referred to as the 'moral embargo,' are no longer applicable to the Union of Soviet Socialist Republics.

"This decision is being communicated to interested American manufacturers and exporters."

Willkie will fly to Lisbon, Portugal, aboard the Yankee Clipper tomorrow with two friends, John Cowles, publisher of the Minneapolis Star-Journal, and Landon K. Thorne, New York banker.

Willkie, insisting that he intended to "listen, not talk" in England, said he would make no speeches. A dispatch from London yesterday said he had accepted an invitation to address the British group of the Inter-Parliamentary Union in Commons on the bill in Congress providing aid for Britain.

The defeated Republican Presidential candidate is scheduled to arrive in London Friday on a British Overseas Airways plane from Lisbon.

TELLS HOW NORWAY SAVED GOLD SUPPLY

Oscar Torp, Finance Minister, Says He Left As Germans Entered Treasury

[By the Associated Press]

New York, Jan. 21—Oscar Torp, Norwegian Finance Minister, described in an interview today his supervision of the dramatic transportation of Norway's gold reserves from Oslo to the coast and then by small craft and warship to England while German bombs and parachute troops dropped from the sky.

On April 8, the day before the Nazis marched into Oslo, Torp said, he directed the removal of millions of dollars' worth of gold ingots from the capital.

As a representative of the German Government entered the front door of the Finance Ministry early on April 9, Torp said, he left by the back door and, by automobile, followed a number of trucks filled with gold.

Gold Value Not Revealed

Torp, who reached this country several weeks ago, did not disclose the

Churchill Sends Willkie Wire Welcoming Him To England

Cable Also Carries Invitation To Call—G. O. P. 1940 Nominee Starts Trip Today

[By the Associated Press]

New York, Jan. 21—Wendell L. Willkie, on the eve of his departure for London, received today from Prime Minister Winston Churchill a cablegram of welcome and an invitation to call.

Still slightly ill from smallpox and typhoid inoculations, Willkie wirelessed Churchill that he would communicate with him as soon as he arrived. He will take to Churchill a per-alue of the gold, which he said now was safely deposited in Canadian and American banks. Last April, however, Norway's gold reserves were estimated at $84,000,000, although a part of that total already had been shipped here.

From Oslo, Torp said, he and his gold train moved slowly to Andalsnes under almost constant bombardment. Parachute troops landed within his view, he said, but most of them either were killed or captured immediately.

At Andalsnes, where the Allies had landed, the bombing was heaviest of all, he continued, while British and Norwegian vessels helped cover the transfer of gold to ships with steady artillery fire.

Carried On Warship

Some of the gold was transferred to a British warship, he said, but most of it was left on the trucks and taken to Trondheim, where, he related, thirty bombs, many of them incendiary, dropped near the ship to which the gold was being transferred.

During the transfer, he said, one of his fellow finance officials was wounded in the leg and another died of a heart attack.

Again the gold had to be transferred, he said, this time to five small fishing craft, which ultimately arrived at Tromsoe, where the gold was picked up by a British warship and taken, along with the Norwegian Government officials, including King Haakon, to England.

Can't Confirm Rumor Of Nazis' Bomb Range

U. S. Had Heard American Soldiers' Graves In France Were To Be In Danger

Washington, Jan. 21 (AP)—The State Department said tonight that it had been unable to confirm reports that Germany planned to establish a bomb-practice range in an area of France where American war graves are located.

The department said that it had received reports that a practice range would be established and also had received inquiries as to whether the graves of American World War soldiers at Romagne, France, would be in the affected region. Department officials said they did not know the origin of the reports.

After sending inquiries to American representatives in France, they said they had been unable to establish that the American graves would be within the area.

Irish Societies Send Petition To Roosevelt

Urge Any Attempt From Any Source To Force War On Ireland Be Discouraged

Washington, Jan. 21 (AP)—The Irish societies of Washington today urged that the moral influence of the United States be used to "discourage any attempt from any source" to force war on Ireland, to invade her territory or to seize her ports. The appeal was made in a petition to the President, Congress and the Secretary of State.

The petition said reports had appeared in the press that Great Britain proposed to "possess itself" of certain seaports of Ireland, by force if necessary. Any such attempt, the petition added, would be "precisely such an act of wanton aggression as all civilized and righteous men denounce and abhor."

Ireland, the petition continued, would "resist force with force" with a result that the "horrors of war" would be extended "to a country committed to peace and enjoying its blessings."

DAMAGE CASE WON BY ITALIAN VESSEL

Judge Says Ship Could No Deliver Cargo Due To War

Freighter Stayed In Norfolk Instead Of Proceeding To England

[By the Associated Press]

Norfolk, Jan. 21—Judge Luther B. Way handed down an opinion in Federal District Court today absolving the Italian steamer San Guiseppe of responsibility for failing to deliver a cargo of war materials to England in June, 1940. Damages totaling about $500,000 had been asked.

The case originated when the San Guiseppe, bound from Gulf ports for London, put into Norfolk for bunker coal before crossing the ocean, and was ordered by the Italian Admiralty to remain here because of her country's declaration of war against France and England.

Remained In Port

The libellants contended that she failed to fulfill the provisions of her carriage contract when she remained in port and did not proceed to England.

Judge Way placed responsibility for the failure to deliver the cargo on the actual declaration of war by Italy against France and England, and allowed the San Guiseppe reasonable reimbursement for expenses incurred in transshipping the cargo to other vessels that carried it across.

The case is of considerable importance here, in as much as it bears directly on several others of the same character that are to be heard.

CANADA FREES TOKYO AIDE

Consul Apologizes for Japanese Who Took Movies of Air Station

VANCOUVER, B. C., Jan. 21 (AP)—City Prosecutor Oscar Orr said tonight that civil authorities would take no action against Y. Matsumoto, secretary of the Vancouver Japanese Consulate, for taking motion pictures in the vicinity of Jericho Air Station.

Royal Canadian Mounted and Vancouver police said the film confiscated from Mr. Matsumoto's movie camera Sunday showed two hangars and a runway of the Jericho Air Station.

The prosecutor said Japanese Consul K. Makauchi had tendered an official apology, saying Mr. Matsumoto had not meant to break the law.

Communiques

British

CAIRO, Egypt, Jan. 21 (AP)—The British General Headquarters at Cairo today issued the following communiqué:

Early this morning an attack was launched on Tobruk and the operations are proceeding satisfactorily.

Sudan: In the Kassala area our troops are vigorously pursuing Italian forces which are continuing their withdrawal eastward of the frontier.

In the Metemma area enemy artillery and aircraft have been active without causing any relaxation in our pressure.

On the frontiers of Kenya our patrol activity continues.

British General Headquarters at Cairo tonight issued this special communiqué:

Shortly after noon today imperial troops actively supported by the Royal Navy and Royal Air Force successfully penetrated both the outer and inner defenses of Tobruk to a depth of over five miles on a broad front.

The advance is continuing.

Many prisoners already have been taken, including one Italian general. The Italian cruiser San Giorgio in Tobruk harbor is in flames together with a number of dumps of stores of petrol and the like.

The British Royal Air Force's Middle East Command at Cairo issued the following:

Tobruk was heavily raided by bomber aircraft of the R. A. F. during the night of Jan. 19-20. Several attacks were made and direct hits were registered on marine repair shops and military barracks.

One artillery battery of four guns was silenced and many bombs fell on a camp of about 200 tents. Anti-aircraft fire was intense, but our aircraft pressed home the attack.

Our fighter patrols were active throughout yesterday, but no conclusive engagements with the enemy resulted.

During the night of Jan. 20-21 a further raid was carried out on an airdrome at Catania [Sicily]. As a result of the bombing, seven enemy aircraft on the ground, of which two were large twin-engined bombers, were seen to burst into flames. Fires started near administrative buildings were visible over sixty miles away.

On the previous night a railway station at Brindisi [Italy] was bombed, but the results could not be fully observed, owing to low clouds. It is believed, however, that considerable damage was done.

In Albania, Valona was subjected to the heaviest bombing attack so far carried out in that region. The heavy raid was made during the night of Jan. 19-20 and was followed by further raids during the day. Large explosions occured in the target area and a number of fires were caused. High explosive bombs fell on buildings south of the jetty and the foreshore, causing considerable damage.

On the return journey our aircraft attacked an enemy float plane (Cant-506) which was damaged.

In Italian East Africa, Assab was raided, several direct hits being registered on a supply depot.

Further south, Neghelli [Ethiopia] was successfully bombed by aircraft of the South African air force. Administrative buildings surrounding a motor transport park were set on fire and completely gutted and a large number of vehicles in the car park was destroyed or damaged.

From all the above operations, our aircraft returned safely.

Enemy bombers carried out two raids on Piraeus, port of Athens, yesterday, but no damage of military importance was done. Our fighters engaged the enemy and one bomber was shot down in flames into the sea, four members of the crew descending by parachute.

One of our aircraft force landed and was damaged.

In the communiqué of Jan. 19 it was stated that one of our fighters had so far failed to return to base. That aircraft is now reported safe.

LONDON, Jan. 21 (AP)—The Air Ministry and Ministry of Home Security issued this communiqué today:

There has been considerable enemy activity over the eastern part of England during daylight today, but no important attack has developed.

A few bombs fell in the outskirts of London and at points in the home and eastern counties. Some damage was done to houses, but very few casualties have been reported.

The British Admiralty issued the following communiqué tonight:

The Board of Admiralty regrets to announce that His Majesty's trawlers Manx Prince (temporary Skipper A. A. Grounds, R. N. R.) and Refundo (temporary Skipper A. S. Dorward, R. N. R.) have been sunk. There was no loss of life in H. M trawler Manx Prince. Next of kin of casualties in H. M. trawler Refundo have been informed.

Italian

ROME, Jan. 21 (AP)—The Italian High Command communiqué today follows:

On the Greek front there was normal patrol and artillery activity.

Our aerial formations subjected Greek naval bases to intense bombing. Port works and steamships in anchorage were hit effectively. Other places also have been bombed and concentrations of troops and supply ships scatter-bombed.

In encounters with enemy fighters our bombers shot down four enemy planes. One of our planes failed to return. The crew was seen to bail out with parachutes.

The enemy carried out an air raid on Valona without causing damage. Our fighters, which intervened promptly, pursued the enemy, shooting down one Blenheim in flames.

In Cyrenaica there was increased artillery action around Tobruk and enemy air activity over the Tobruk fortress, which caused some material damage but harmed no one. Our planes repeatedly bombed enemy preparations and bases.

In East Africa, on the Sudan front, our detachments, supported by our fighter planes, which promptly intervened, carried out actions against enemy motorized units. The enemy suffered considerable losses. Necessities of a strategic nature compelled the command to evacuate Kassala [in Anglo-Egyptian Sudan].

Our aerial detachments bombed railway trains in the vicinity of Tehilla in Sudan and enemy motor vehicles in various places in Sudan.

The enemy carried out a raid on Neghelli and Obooh in Galla and Sidamo [provinces of Ethiopia] causing slight damage in the first place only.

An aviation field was bombed on the island of Crete, causing fires and visible damage.

The night of Jan. 20 enemy planes carried out a raid on Catania [Sicily], causing some damage and injuring no one.

Greek

ATHENS, Greece, Jan. 21 (AP)—The Greek command issued the following communiqué tonight:

There was restricted local action which turned to our advantage.

A communiqué of the Greek Ministry of Home Security follows:

Enemy aviation made the following raids:

1. On Salonika. No casualties or damage.

2. On Voez. Bombs fell in the poorest quarters of the town. Damage was done to buildings and there were a few casualties among the civilian population.

3. On Preveza. There were a few casualties among the civilian population; there was damage to buildings. A hospital where the wounded of previous raids were under treatment was destroyed.

4. On an island in the Aegean. There were no casualties and no damage.

According to reports from competent police authorities the Greek, John Demas, who was abducted by the Italians during their flight, was found in a well, dead from gunshot wounds.

German

BERLIN, Jan. 21 (AP)—The German High Command issued the following communiqué today:

The German air force on Jan. 20, despite the most unfavorable weather, continued armed reconnaissance over the British region as far as the Orkneys, during the course of which war vital objectives were effectively bombed.

Furthermore, combat planes scored two heavy caliber direct hits on one steamer and damaged another merchant vessel.

An 8,000-ton merchant ship, which on Jan. 20 was reported badly damaged, was observed in a sinking condition.

Scattered German combat planes yesterday again raided airports on Malta. Three planes did not return from operations during the night of Jan. 20.

ROME—(AP)—JAN. 21—AP—THE WAR MINISTRY ANNOUNCED PLANS TODAY TO KEEP LIST 7,000 MEN FOR TWO YEARS FOR TRAINING IN SPECIAL MILITARY REQUIREMENTS RANGING FROM SKIING TO TANK DRIVING.

BUDAPEST—JAN. 21—AP—HUNGARIAN WAR MINISTER X GENERAL KAROLY BARTHA WILL LEAVE FOR GERMANY TOMORROW TO SPEND SEVERAL DAYS AS A GUEST OF THE GERMAN ARMY AND ALSO WILL VISIT THE FORMER FRENCH WAR THEATER, IT WAS ANNOUNCED TONIGHT.

Announcement of a Mediterranean Offensive by Axis Is Not Convincing

By DEWITT MACKENZIE

The war-drums of the Nazi and Fascist chieftains are beating out the message for all to hear, that the combined Axis forces are starting a great offensive to smash British domination of the Mediterranean.

Maybe that's what Hitler and Mussolini did decide upon at their mysterious conference yesterday. Still, it is given to wonder why they find it advantageous to advertise their strategy when their deeds would speak louder at the appropriate moment.

I think we find the answer in an article by the authoritative Fascist writer, Virginio Gayda which contains a word of information:

"Italy does not consider herself to be in the least in decline," he said. "Neither is she isolated."

Gayda is doing a hard job well, namely, trying to buck up the spirit of a badly shell-shocked nation and at the same time present a defiant and confident attitude to the outside world. Hitler is in process of doing by military means what Gayda is trying to achieve by words.

Offensive May Develop.

The Nazi leader is rushing aid to save his partner from disaster rather than with the expectation at this early moment of achieving a great triumph over Britain in the Mediterranean. True, this combined Axis activity, which already has started in a modest way, might develop into a major offensive if luck marches with the dictators.

It will be more than passing strange, though, if the Fuehrer is abandoning his assault on England direct, in order to shift to the Mediterranean in the critical stage of the battle of Britain. It doesn't make horse sense.

The battle of Britain is the one in which Hitler is going to win or lose the war—and if he doesn't win quickly his hands will be grimy with trouble, because he isn't set for a protracted conflict.

Hitler undoubtedly can divert considerable air power to the Mediterranean, but he must maintain a heavy force of bombers and combat planes opposite England, for both offense and defense.

Needs All His Air Force.

If he doesn't keep smashing at England she will have a chance to recover from the damage already inflicted, and prosper industrially. And if he weakens his fighting fleet, the Royal Air Force is likely to filet the German bases and industrial areas like a fish.

It strikes me that Hitler calculates to serve his cause in two ways. One is the rescue of his partner, and the other the infliction of damage on the British navy and air force which indirectly will weaken the defenses of England herself.

Circumstances might extend the Axis counter-attack in the Mediterranean considerably. There is always the possibility of an assault on Gibraltar, or the occupation of Spain and Portugal, or a move in the Balkans. The British, however, are top dogs in the Mediterranean theater as the show starts.

LONDON, JAN.21-AP-ARTHUR CARDINAL HINSLEY, ARCHBISHOP OF WESTMINSTER, IN A BROADCAST TONIGHT TERMED NAZIISM AN "ERSATZ RELIGION" AND DECLARED THAT A GERMAN PEACE MEANS "SUBJECTION OR DEATH FOR INVADED NATIONS."

"HITLER'S NEW ORDER AND IDEAL CHRISTIAN CIVILIZATION ARE POLES APART," THE CARDINAL SAID.

(ADVANCE) LONDON (CORRESPONDENCE OF THE ASSOCIATED PRESS)--WE WERE SURPRISED TO FIND THE WAR PROVING THAT WE COULD GET USED TO ANYTHING--EVEN BOMBING--AND THAT WARTIME SHOPPING INCONVENIENCES AND THE OCCASIONAL NECESSITY FOR BUYING SUBSTITUTES FOR FAVORITE FOODS REALLY MADE FOR VARIETY.

SOMETIMES YOU BECOME CONFUSED, PERHAPS A LITTLE HARASSED BY HAVING TO MAKE LAST-MINUTE UNEXPECTED SHIFTS IN PLANNED MENUS, BUT YOU ARE COMPELLED TO REALIZE THAT IT MIGHT BE MUCH WORSE. NO WAGE EARNERS ARE STARVING, AND I KNOW OF NOBODY WHO HAS GONE WITHOUT A SQUARE MEAL BECAUSE OF WAR SHORTAGE.

ALTHOUGH SHOPPING MAY BE DIFFICULT AND VARIOUS FOODS MAY GO OUT OF STOCK NOT TO BE REPLACED, YOU SEEM TO SIT DOWN TO PRETTY MUCH THE SAME FOOD AS IN PEACE TIME. YOU SIGH MOST AT THE CONSIDERABLE RISE IN PRICES.

FATS ARE NO PROBLEM. YOU MISS THE BUTTER--TWO OUNCES PER HEAD P WEEK DOESN'T GO FAR, BUT CAKES AND PUDDINGS TASTE JUST AS GOOD MADE WITH MARGERINE, THE RATIONED ALLOWANCE OF WHICH IS ADEQUATE. IT DOESN'T TASTE QUITE SO GOOD ON BREAD, BUT MANY FAMILIES USE IT DURING THE WEEK SO AS TO ENJOY MORE BUTTER AT THE WEEK-END.

SHOPPING, ESPECIALLY IF DONE BY PHONE, TAKES MORE TIME THAN IT DID THE GROCER QUITE OFTEN IS CONFUSED. BY THE TIME HE CAN ATTEND TO YOU HE HAS GOT HIMSELF ALL TANGLED OVER THE LITTLE COUPONS HE HAS TO SNIP OUT OF YOUR RATION BOOK FOR THAT AND THAT.

YOU ASKED FOR CANNED PRUNES.

"SORRY, MADAME, WE'RE SOLD OUT."

HE IS QUITE SURPRISED WHEN YOU POINT OUT, AS I DID, TWO WHOLE STACKS OF CANS IN HIS STORE WINDOW.

OR YOU ORDER SWEET BISCUITS. "YES, MADAME, WE WILL HAVE THEM IN TOMORROW."

WHEN YOU GO TO COLLECT THEM, YOU MAY FIND THAT WHEREAS THE GROCER ORDERED 12 DOZEN TINS OF SWEET BISCUITS, THE WHOLESALERS HAVE SENT HI ONLY FOUR BOXES OF PLAIN BISCUITS WHICH HAVE TO BE RATIONED AMONG ALL THE CUSTOMERS.

BREAKFAST IS DIFFICULT WITH BACON RATIONED, MARMALADE ALMOST UNOBTAINABLE AND EGGS VERY DEAR, BUT YOU CAN GET CEREALS.

DRIED FRUITS ARE SCARCE. "I'M SORRY, MADAME," SAYS THE GROCER, "BU WE'VE GOT ONLY DRIED FIGS. CURRANTS AND RAISINS MAY ARRIVE LATER IN THE YEAR." HE MERELY GIVES A DEPRECATORY SMILE IF YOU MENTION DATES, WHICH WE MAY NOT SEE AGAIN UNTIL AFTER THE WAR IS OVER.

BLOCK CHOCOLATE IS A DELICACY WHICH WAS BEING USED MORE AND MORE AS FOOD AND WHICH IS NOW VERY SCARCE, APPARENTLY BECAUSE OF DISTRIBUTING DIFFICULTIES.

SOME SHOPS HANG OUT NOTICES: "SORRY, NO BLOCK CHOCOLATE TODAY." YET YOU CAN BUY AS MUCH AS YOU WANT IN MANY PLACES OUTSIDE THE LONDON AREA.

IT'S THE GREENGROCER WHO SEEMS TO HAVE BEEN HIT HARDEST.

BANANAS? "SORRY," SAYS THE GREENGROCER. "ALL MY BANANAS SEEM TO BE AT THE BOTTOM OF THE SEA."

ONIONS AND LEMONS ROSE TO UNHEARD OF PRICES--20 CENTS FOR ONE LEMON AND ONIONS ONE SHILLING AND SIXPENCE, ABOUT 36 CENTS, A POUND--BUT SINCE THE PRICE WAS CONTROLLED AT 4 CENTS A LEMON AND 9 CENTS A POUND FOR ONIONS, THEY DHAVE DISAPPEARED FROM THE STALLS.

ONCE I ASKED FOR SWEDES (TURNIPS) AND OTHER VEGETABLES. THE VAN BRINGING THEM FROM THE WHOLESALERS HAD BEEN HIT BY A BOMB, SO I AND OTHERS HAD TO GO WITHOUT THAT DAY.

THE SCARCITY OF GREEN VEGETABLES MAKES AMATEUR GARDENERS OUT OF THOUSANDS OF OFFICE WORKERS, WHO CAST OFF THE STRIPED TROUSERS AND WHITE COLLAR, DONNED FLANNELS AND WIELDED A SPADE DURING THE SUMMER EVENINGS. WE LIVED FOR SIX MONTHS ON THE PRODUCE OF A SMALL VEGETABLE GARDEN STARTED ONLY LAST MAY.

THE THREATENED SHORTAGE OF APPLES MAY CAUSE HARDSHIP. THEY ARE A STAPLE ARTICLE OF DIET IN A NATION WHICH STILL TEACHES ITS KIDDIES "AN APPLE A DAY KEEPS THE DOCTOR AWAY."

HEARTY MEAT EATERS FIND THE RATION IRKSOME AND HAVE TO TAKE WHAT THEIR BUTCHER CAN PROVIDE. THERE HAS BEEN NO SHORTAGE OF MUTTON, HOWEVER, AND PLENTY OF FISH AND POTATOES.

TAKEN ALL ROUND, THE ROAST BEEF OF OLD ENGLAND MAY BE SCARCE, BUT THERE ARE MANY SUBSTITUTES, AND ENGLAND IS NOT HUNGRY YET.

BERLIN, JAN 21-(AP)-THE BRITISH MEDITERRANEAN ISLAND NAVAL BASE OF MALTA WAS BOMBED TODAY, INFORMED SOURCES ANNOUNCED, "WITH NUMEROUS WELL-AIMED HITS ON MILITARILY IMPORTANT FACILITIES."

(THIS WAS ONE OF A SERIES OF BOMBINGS BY AXIS WARPLANES BENT ON SINKING THE DAMAGED BRITISH AIRCRAFT CARRIER ILLUSTRIOUS AND OTHER UNITS OF THE BRITISH MEDITERRANEAN FLEET).

BERLIN, JAN.21-(AP)-GERMAN MILITARY QUARTERS EXPRESSED BELIEF TODAY THAT THE CRIPPLED BRITISH AIRCRAFT CARRIER ILLUSTRIOUS HAD NOT BEEN MOVED FROM THE ISLAND OF MALTA BECAUSE SHE IS RESTING ON THE OCEAN BOTTOM.

IN EIGHT DAYS OF STEADY BOMBING RAIDS, THEY ASSERTED, THE SHIP MUST HAVE SUFFERED SO MANY HITS, ESPECIALLY IN THE 50-FOOT GAP BETWEEN QUAY AND THE SHIP, THAT SHE HAD SETTLED SLOWLY.

BERLIN, JAN 21-(AP)-GERMAN WARPLANES HAVE BOMBED THREE BRITISH MERCHANT VESSELS TOTALING 17,500 TONS IN THE PAST 24 HOURS, INFORMED SOURCES REPORTED TODAY.

THE MERCHANTMEN, OF 6,500, 7,000 AND 4,000 TONS, THEY SAID, WERE STRUCK NORTH AND WEST OF IRELAND.

A VESSEL OF 6,000-8,000 TONS REPORTED HIT TWO DAYS AGO OFF HARWICH, ENGLAND, WAS REPORTED BY SCOUTING PLANES TO BE SINKING.

BARCELONA, SPAIN, JAN.21-(AP)-GERMAN AMBASSADOR VON ~~STROHER~~ Stohrer ISSUED A STATEMENT TONIGHT SAYING HE HAD OFFERED CASH AWARDS FOR PROOF THAT NEEDED FOODSTUFFS ARE BEING SENT FROM SPAIN TO GERMANY, BUT THAT AFTE SIX WEEKS NOBODY HAD WON SUCH A PRIZE.

THE MONEY, HE ADDED, WAS POSTED ON HIS OWN INITIATIVE TO DISPROVE REPORTS WHICH, HE SAID, WERE PART OF AN INTRIGUE AGAINST THE GERMAN AND SPANISH REGIMES.

STOCKHOLM, JAN 22-(WEDNESDAY)-(AP)-SWEDEN'S NAVY WILL GET A NEW SHIP EVERY WEEK THE FIRST SIX MONTHS OF THE CURRENT YEAR, VICE ADMIRAL FABIAN TAMM, CHIEF OF THE NAVY, ANNOUNCED TODAY.

THE RIKSDAG LAST YEAR AUTHORIZED TWO CRUISERS AND SEVERAL DESTROYERS AND SUBMARINES. BEFORE THAT, CONSTRUCTION WAS BEGUN ON SIX LARGE SUBMARINES AND THREE COASTAL SUBMARINES.

UNDER THE PROGRAM, THE NUMBER OF NAVAL VESSELS WILL BE DOUBLED. IN ADDITION, OLDER SHIPS ARE BEING MODERNIZED WITH ANTI-AIRCRAFT GUNS AND HEAVIER ARTILLERY.

THE VICE ADMIRAL'S ANNOUNCEMENT WAS PART OF A PROPAGANDA CAMPAIGN FOR A DEFENSE LOAN DRIVE.

BUENOS AIRES-(CORRESPONDENCE OF THE ASSOCIATED PRESS)-IRKED BY MAIL DELAYS CAUSED BY BRITISH CENSORSHIP AT TRINIDAD, AMERICAN BUSINESSMEN IN BUENOS AIRES ARE CAMPAIGNING FOR THE FORWARDING OF AIRMAIL LETTERS VIA THE WEST COAST.

HEADS OF NUMEROUS FIRMS WITH HEADQUARTERS IN THE UNITED STATES HAVE ISSUED ORDERS THAT ALL AIRMAIL DISPATCHED FROM BUENOS AIRES BE ROUTED VIA CHILE OR LAPAZ TO LIMA, THENCE THROUGH PANAMA TO AVOID THE CENSORS.

POSTAL OFFICIALS SAID THE BRITISH APPARENTLY ARE "SAMPLING" MAIL CARRIED TO AND FROM SOUTH AMERICA ON PAN AMERICAN AIRWAYS' EAST COAST SERVICE FROM MIAMI TO BUENOS AIRES VIA RIO DE JANEIRO.

ONE OF EVERY FOUR SACKS OF MAIL IS REMOVED AT TRINIDAD, THEY SAID. LETTERS STOPPED FOR EXAMINATION FREQUENTLY REQUIRE 10 TO 13 DAYS BETWEEN BUENOS AIRES AND NEW YORK. NORMAL TIME IS FOUR TO FIVE DAYS.

THE U.S. CHAMBER OF COMMERCE IN ARGENTINA HAS BEEN DISCUSSING THE PROBLEM WITH EMBASSY OFFICIALS IN AN EFFORT TO ELIMINATE UNNECESSARY DELAYS.

BUSINESSMEN SAY THEY DO NOT QUESTION THE RIGHT OF THE BRITISH CENSOR MAIL AT TRINIDAD; THEIR COMPLAINT IS AGAINST ALLEGED CESSARY DELAYS.

BUENOS AIRES, JAN 21-(AP)-A SIX-MAN JAPANESE TRADE DELEGATION, TRAVELING WITHOUT OFFICIAL ENDORSEMENT BUT REPORTING TO THEIR COMMERCE DEPARTMENT IN TOKYO, ARRIVED HERE TODAY IN THEIR ROUND OF VISITS TO LATIN AMERICAN CAPITALS. ALL REPRESENTATIVES OF JAPANESE INDUSTRIAL FIRMS, THE VISITORS WERE SAID TO BE EXPLORING POSSIBILITIES OF STIMULATING TRADE BETWEEN JAPAN AND ARGENTINA.

A, JAN. 21-(AP)-THE CANADIAN FILM BOARD SAID TODAY THAT BRITISH SHIPS HAVE SEIZED "VERY SUBSTANTIAL QUANTITIES" OF GERMAN-MADE MOTION PICTURES INTENDED FOR USE AS PROPAGANDA IN THE UNITED STATES AND SOUTH AMERICA.

SINCE THE START OF THE WAR, BRITISH CONTRABAND CONTROL HAS SEIZED MANY OFFICIAL GERMAN FILMS AND FORWARDED THEM TO OTTAWA WHERE JOHN GRIERSON, DOMINION FILM COMMISSIONER, IS EDITING THEM INTO WHAT OFFICIALS DESCRIBE AS "A VALUABLE PICTORIAL RECORD" OF THE WAR.

SOME OF THE MORE GRAPHIC FILMS HAVE BEEN INCORPORATED INTO CANADIAN MOTION PICTURES. OTHERS ARE RELEASED TO THE UNITED STATES --AFTER CAREFUL EDITING--FOR COUNTER-PROPAGANDA PURPOSES.

FILMS SEIZED FROM A SHIPMENT HEADED FOR SOUTH AMERICA CONTAINED THE MOST GRAPHIC PICTURES YET OBTAINED. THEY PORTRAYED LONDON CLR 823H

British and Free French Take Libyan Fortress in Fierce 24-Hour Battle

80-Mile Coast Area Now Lost to Italians

Tanks Smash a Path for Yelling Troops; Planes Blast Town Unresisted

By The Associated Press

CAIRO, Jan. 22.—The fall of the Italian Libyan base of Tobruk to the British army in North Africa was announced officially tonight. A military communique said mopping-up operations continued in the town's western defenses, but "the remainder of the defenses are in our hands."

Australian shock troops, which led the forces storming Tobruk, immediately cut off the Italians still holding out to the west of the port.

These advance units—the same Australians who had led the way in a campaign that now has all but consolidated eighty miles of Libyan coastline in British hands—entered Tobruk at noon after more than twenty-four hours of violent attack upon the town and port by British troops, warships and bombers.

Thousands of Italians were captured, but no exact count of prisoners has been made. In the Tobruk fortress was the greater part of an Italian garrison of 30,000, and the fact that units of the British Mediterranean fleet had been able to bombard the town for hours suggested that there could be no hope of retreat by sea.

Above the town smoke rose over the rubble left by the shells pumped into it.

The general attack began early yesterday, with "Free French" troops fighting beside the British and Australians.

Like Bardia, which fell seventeen days ago, Tobruk was ringed by a strong outer arc of defenses about twenty-five miles from the coast which, with the sea, encircled the town. Under cover of general preliminary assaults by British and "Free French" forces, picked regiments of British and Australians were massed outside the eastern and main sector of the defenses.

Tanks Crash Through

At zero hour, soon after dawn yesterday, sappers plunged forward to cut the barbed-wire barriers. British tanks smashed through, followed by shouting British and Australian infantry in steel helmets. They quickly subdued two of the nearest strong points, and the bulk of the attacking troops poured through fanwise.

Other defense points on the borders of the wide gap were sandwiched between the British and surrendered after a short struggle. Other tanks and infantry charged for a second and inner defense line which formed an eleven-mile semicircle. This was broken in similar fashion.

By sunset yesterday, just twelve hours after the attack began, the British were eight miles within the defenses and firmly established on cliffs overlooking the Tobruk harbor three miles away, an official announcement said. The initial gaps in the Italian defense lines had by that time been widened to five miles.

In the western sector of the town's defenses the British also had broken through the perimeter of fortified positions and the Italians there were left in difficult straits.

R. A. F. Dominates the Air

British ground forces were supported by the Royal Air Force, which pounded the western sector, silencing two anti-aircraft batteries. The Italians appeared to have offered little opposition in the air.

On two fronts in East Africa, as far as 2,000 miles from the Libyan conflict, the Italians were withdrawing today, reports reaching British military headquarters here said.

Two Italian divisions which had held Kassala, in the Anglo-Egyptian Sudan, and the near-by frontier posts were said to have withdrawn more than forty miles inside Italian Eritrea, with the British still in pursuit.

The other Italian retreat reported was along the southern frontier of Ethiopia. Fascist detachments which had penetrated into British Kenya some months ago are now declared to be moving back under harassment by British patrols.

before a brilliantly executed British and Australian attack.

[This dispatch was written before the capture of Tobruk.]

Once inside the rim, the storming units speedily turned to a cleanup of the area of some one hundred square miles enclosed by it.

Although preparations for the attack went on openly since the investiture of the area two weeks ago, the British apparently took the Italians by surprise. Many were found sleeping in dugouts and marched at bayonet point from their beds to the prisoners' lines.

Mussolini's forces appeared routed at all points of contact. As in Bardia, the Italian artillerymen stood up as long as they could hammer the British from a distance.

Throughout the day's fighting not a single Italian plane appeared overhead, nor did the Italian fleet venture out to aid the trapped and harassed Fascist soldiers.

Tonight (Tuesday), the sky was red over the region as munitions dumps and oil stores exploded and went up in flames. Italian guns still boomed along the coast and to the north but were being gradually put out of action.

Considering the extent of the fighting, casualties have not been high, although on the Italian side they appear to be greater than at Bardia.

Through Monday night I waited at a vantage point on the desert outside the southeastern part of the perimeter. The night was exceedingly cold.

During the last month the Italians had dug a wide ditch along the thirty-mile length of the defense rim, employing thousands of soldiers and using mechanical excavators.

Twelve-Foot-Deep Ditch

This ditch was twelve feet deep except at the southeastern point, where rock formations prevented digging more than two feet.

At 5.40 A. M. a mighty artillery barrage went up and simultaneously British tanks charged over the ditch to the barbed wire, which the Australians, protected by the fire of tanks and cannon, were cutting. Infantry followed the tanks.

Once inside the stronghold the attacking groups split up, some turning to the right and others to the left, folding up the rim of the defenses by lightning attacks from behind. Others went straight ahead and then spread fanwise, mopping up the strong points within.

After them came British artillery units and Australian cavalry units in motor vehicles.

Driven Into Gulches

A drive along the inside of the rim permitted still other Australians to make a second gap two miles to the right. These detachments drove the Italians into gulches along the coast, where they remained tonight, showing diminishing resistance.

At the moment of the initial thrust, Australian units near the seacoast made a feint which attracted the brunt of the Italian artillery fire.

They had the protection of gulleys. The materials moved forward to that region in the past few days as decoys had been quietely withdrawn during the night, so that the bulk of the Italian shells fell on empty desert.

By 8.50 A. M., the first phase of the attack had been completed and the second, which carried the battle on from points gained within the perimeter, began.

Surrender Starts

By this time a sight which has become familiar in this campagin whenever the Italians are in combat—long lines of gray-green clad warriors marching resignedly into captivity—had appeared.

Entering the Tobruk stronghold with a group of Australian correspondents not long after the first troops went through, I found many prisoners already disarmed. Hour by hour the lines grew longer.

They marched upon us from all directions toward hastily thrown-up stockades outside the gap through which we entered.

Shells from the Italian batteries were bursting all around us and a number of the prisoners were killed by them.

Leave Hiding Places

As the lines went by many small groups of Italians jumped from hiding places, waving white handkerchiefs to fall in with their captured comrades.

Many continued to hold their handkerchiefs aloft in the lines in apparent fear that they might be mistaken for an army still in combat.

Toward the close of the morning I saw one line of 4,000 prisoners being marched by remarkably few guards who seemed to have no trouble in handling their charges.

At noon, the attackers took two hours off, lunching heartily on seized Italian rations, the soldiers sprawling on the ground for a rest before the resumption of the fighting.

By Tuesday nightfall, almost half the Tobruk area and most of its strategic points were under British control.

Cut Off Escape

As the British forces which had besieged Tobruk from the south and west attacked, British armored units covered the region to the west to cut off all possible escape.

Naval and air bombardments preceded the land attack and continued in northern and western sectors after land operations had started.

Throughout the battle British aircraft circled over Italian positions, frequently flying through heavy anti-aircraft fire, and returned with marked maps and other data which they dropped to the advancing land forces.

Axis Allies Will Fight Together "Wherever Enemy Is," Press Asserts

Foreign Observers Wonder If Joint Action Applies To Albania

[By the Associated Press]

Rome, Jan. 22—Indications of further German assistance for the Italian army in Libya appeared tonight after the high command acknowledged that Tobruk's defenses had been punctured by Britain's Army of the Nile.

Premier Benito Mussolini's newspaper, Il Popolo d'Italia, said the Italian-German allies were fighting the British "wherever this enemy seeks to strike and offer itself to the blows of the two Axis armies."

This was echoed by Corriere della Sera, which said "wherever the enemy is, the Italians and Germans will fight together."

Speculation Over Albania

Foreign observers wondered if such joint warfare also would apply to Albania, where Italians consider the Greek army in the hands of the British. British use of Greek bases has been reported.

The daily war bulletin said Tobruk's lines were pierced after a heavy air, artillery and land bombardment yesterday. The attack was said to have been carried out by three Australian divisions, two armored divisions and a motorized corps of "dissident Frenchmen," all supported by two regiments of heavy artillery.

Port Pounded For Twenty Days

The Libyan port had been circled and pounded daily by artillery and airplanes for twenty days, the high command said, noting "continuous raids by enemy bombing planes."

"At the end of the day, after hard fighting, the enemy succeeded in penetrating the line of strongholds in the ...stern sector of the fortified city," the communique said.

On the East African front, the Italians said British motorized columns were halted with heavy losses at "predetermined points."

[The British reported they were pursuing two Italian divisions retreating on a one hundred-mile front into Eritrea.]

Air Raids On Greece

While land operations in Albania were called "local actions" only, the high command said Italian warplanes bombed the Greek naval base of Preveza, the Ægean ports of Salonika and Volos, the island of Corfu, and Greek supply lines and troops in Albania.

An oil tanker was hit and a steamer attacked in one of the Greek ports bombed, the communique said.

Two Italian Ships Seized.

With the British Mediterranean Fleet, Jan. 22 (A. P.).—A British destroyer recently captured two 400-ton Italian motor schooners off the Libyan coast without a fight, it was disclosed today. The schooners, carrying light guns, were identified as the Maria Giovanna and the Tiberia. Both were used in carrying war supplies between Bardia and Tobruk.

Thirty crewmen were taken prisoners. A British destroyer officer reported those from the Maria Giovanna "said they were fed up with the whole show."

London, Jan. 22 (A. P.).—Prime Minister Churchill told the House of Commons today that "it may well be that while I am speaking Tobruk and its garrison are in our hands." He made no further reference, however, to the fate of that Italian stronghold in Libya.

Tobruk, on the North African coast eighty miles inside Libya from Egypt, has been the objective of the British Army of the Nile since Bardia fell on January 5.

An all-out assault against the town, with its garrison of some 30,000 men, was launched only yesterday.

Rome Admits Line Is Broken.

Rome, Jan. 22 (A. P.).—The Italian High Command acknowledged today that Australian troops, supported by Free French forces, had broken through the eastern line of Tobruk's defenses after a heavy air, artillery and naval bombardment. The attack on the Libyan stronghold was carried out by three Australian divisions, re-enforced by two regiments of heavy artillery, two armored divisions and motorized formations of dissident Frenchmen, the communique declared.

The attack on Tobruk began yesterday morning after a night-long naval bombardment, the High Command asserted, and was pressed throughout the day with the support of continuous raids by enemy bombing planes. "At the end of the day, after hard fighting, the enemy succeeded in penetrating the line of strongholds in the eastern sector of the fortified city," the communique said. Tobruk has been "completely encircled and pounded daily by artillery and airplanes for twenty days," the High Command emphasized.

On the East African front, the Italians said, British motorized columns advancing from several directions were halted with heavy losses at predetermined points.

The High Command also said that German bombers attacked the British Mediterranean base at Malta again on Monday night, bombing airports and port facilities.

3 Military Advantages Cited In Fall Of Tobruk

London, Jan. 22 (AP)—The British army's entry into the Italian base of Tobruk, Libya, gives it these three additional strategic advantages in north Africa, a British military source said today:

Tobruk has the only good natural harbor on the long Libyan coast line and will give the navy a chance to supply advancing troops operating more than 200 miles west of the railhead at Matruh, Egypt.

Tobruk is astride a main coastal road and dominates the highway paralleling this fifteen miles inland.

The British army should gain three potentially useful airports at El Adem, Gazala and El Tmimi and a seaplane base at Bomba.

Tobruk lies about sixty-five miles west of Bardia, which fell to the British January 5. It had a population of 4,200, of which normally about ten per cent were Italians and the remainder Arabs and Jews. Italians had erected stucco structures and other symbols of a Colonial military center in the town.

A local water supply was lacking and, after a condensing plant had been found insufficient, water was brought by ship from Derna, to the west. The harbor extends two miles inland and is surrounded by hills.

54,000 Italian Prisoners Are Shipped From Africa

London, Jan. 22 (AP)—The British Admiralty announced tonight that ships of the British Mediterranean fleet, cooperating with the land and air forces in the Libyan campaign, had removed 54,000 Italian prisoners and huge supplies of war booty from the north African war theater.

This work, as well as the job of keeping British troops supplied with large quantities of stores and water during part of the operations, was carried out without loss, the Admiralty said.

30,000 REPORTED FIGHTING ON REBEL SIDE; HUNDREDS SAID TO HAVE BEEN KILLED

Rioters Claim Upper Hand In Most Of Transylvania—Hungary Calls Up More Troops. Turkish Cabinet Meets

[By the Associated Press]

Sofia, Bulgaria, Thursday, Jan. 23.—Civil war between Rumanian extremists and troops of Dictator General Ion Antonescu spread rapidly throughout Nazi-dominated Rumania today and news dispatches said several hundred persons probably had been killed in bitter fighting.

Bucharest reports said the rebels claimed more than 30,000 were fighting for them. The revolters also were said to be claiming the ascendancy in most cities in Rumanian Transylvania, the remnant of the vast province which the Axis left to Rumania last year in an enforced settlement between Rumania and Hungary.

Hungary Calls Up More Troops

Rumania's neighbors were nervous. Hungary was reported to have called up more troops and the Turkish Cabinet met for three hours to discuss the riots in Rumania and the presence of German troops in the country.

[NBC, in New York, quoted the British radio as saying the Rumanian stations Radio Romania and Radio Bucharest broadcast an order for all Iron Guardists, believed to form the backbone of the rebel movement, to remain at their fighting positions and wait for orders from their chief, Horia Sima. BBC also said a Rumanian army corps was marching toward Bucharest.]

Advices from Brasov, north of Bucharest, said a revolutionary leader, General Dragalina, was marching to Bucharest with troops.

Asks Troops Not To Fire On Rebels

The Bucharest radio, held by the revolters, appealed to troops there not to fire on the rebels. The radio emphasized that the extremists were "ready to die like our captain," meaning Corneliu Codreanu, Iron Guard leader killed in 1938, for whose death Iron Guardists slew scores of Rumanians in a blood purge last November.

General Dragalina was said to have appealed to Sima to assume leadership in a new regime and restore order.

He ended the appeal, it was said, with the cry:

"Long live King Michael and the legionnaire movement."

Extremists in Bucharest were reported holding the post-office, several ministries [illegible] he telephone central. Over the radio they announced [illegible]

Force units at one point had joined in the revolt.

While German troops had been expected to intervene they thus far were reported to have kept clear of the fighting.

Troops Join Revolt

Troops at Craiova, Yashi and Constanza were said to have joined the revolt and at Galatz and Braila extremists overpowered and disarmed regular troops.

The fighting was reported especially bitter after the death of an extremist leader, Victor Silaghi.

Martial law was proclaimed by Chief of State Ion Antonescu, who was reported to have only the support of troops unfriendly to the legionnaires. No estimate of the strength of Antonescu's troops was given, however.

Virtual State Of Siege Is Reported In Rumania

Belgrade, Yugoslavia, Jan. 22 (AP)—Bloody street fighting between Rumanian army units and Iron Guard extremists raged unchecked tonight, advices reaching here said, resulting in a virtual state of siege in Bucharest and other principal cities of that turbulent, German-dominated country.

Numerous casualties, including two deaths, were reported in repeated battles in the streets of the Rumanian capital. Premier General Ion Antonescu's ultimatum last night for order to be restored in twenty-four hours and renewed exhortations today appeared to have little effect.

One diplomatic report received here said that Baron Manfred von Killinger, Nazi Minister to Rumania, was expected to arrive in Bucharest tonight and might become Gauleiter—Nazi district leader—of all Rumania, assuming direction of German efforts to quell the strife.

Strict Censorship

A strict Rumanian censorship cloaked direct news of the day's developments. One diplomatic source here said that Franklin Mott Gunther, American Minister in Bucharest, was suddenly broken off in a conversation with Washington when he said: "At this moment the situation is critical."

The Rumanian army, exercising police power upon orders of General Antonescu, was reported to have cleared Guardists from the Bucharest police prefecture, postoffice and railway station where they had barricaded themselves.

Tanks Smash Barricades

Army tanks, it was said, smashed barricades thrown up by the Guardists before the police prefecture. A battle followed in which many on both sides were wounded.

Bucharest advices said the Government charged the revolting elements with using the assassination of a German army staff officer last Monday as a pretext for a mutiny. A 31-year-old Turkish-born Greek citizen named Sarandoz was reported executed yesterday for the killing of the officer, a Major Döring.

Döring Assassin Came From Italy, Greeks Say

Athens, Greece, Jan. 22 (AP)—The Greek Government issued the following statement tonight:

"Demetre Saranto, who assassinated the German Major Döring in Bucharest, is not a Greek subject and is absolutely unknown in Greece.

"The said person was the bearer of a foreign passport with a Greek consular transit visa. He entered Greece from Italy on July 13, 1940, and left July 16."

Donovan Crosses Yugoslav Border Without His Passport

American Observer Denies Rumors Of Loss Of Other Important Documents At Sofia

[By the Associated Press]

Belgrade, Jan. 22—Col. William J. Donovan, on a mission from the United States, arrived here tonight for talks with the heads of the Yugoslav Government after crossing the frontier from Bulgaria without his diplomatic passport—which disappeared mysteriously during his visit to Sofia.

The usual passport inspection at the border was waived, the United States legations at Sofia and Belgrade having hurriedly notified the respective governments.

Denies He Lost Portfolio Also

Donovan said on arrival that he had no idea how the passport was lost.

"It may have been misplaced at the Sofia legation," he remarked.

He denied rumors that he had lost a portfolio with other important documents.

The American Minister said Donovan would be given a new passport by the legation here.

Donovan said that upon leaving Belgrade he would return to Athens.

Palace Searched In Vain For Donovan's Passport

Sofia, Jan. 22 (AP)—After an hour-and-twenty-minute chat today with King Boris in the Royal Palace, Col. William J. Donovan, United States observer on a secret mission, found to his dismay—and to the King's—that he had lost his diplomatic passport.

The royal staff searched the palace high and low, in vain. The Orient Express was held up for twenty minutes, then the colonel finally gave up the hunt and boarded the train for Belgrade, Yugoslavia.

Legation To The Rescue

It looked as if Donovan might have to stay here a while longer, but the United States legation saved the day by arranging for him to cross the border without his passport.

The colonel discovered his loss as he was about to board the train. He hurriedly probed his pockets, searched his luggage and his hotel room and finally appealed to the palace staff.

U. S. Aid To Britain Stressed

In his talk with the Bulgarian monarch Donovan was said to have emphasized the United States' determination to aid Great Britain in her war against the Axis.

The colonel, still silent publicly on the mission which has carried him to North Africa and many European capitals, commented:

"I leave Bulgaria with the most pleasant impression of the small but beautiful country, her hearty and intelligent people and her courteous, democratic and sincere King."

Bulgaria And Monroe Doctrine

Berlin, Jan. 22 (AP)—Authorized German quarters made this comment today when asked for opinion on the visit of Col. William J. Donovan to Bulgaria:

"We have heard nothing from America to the effect that Bulgaria is an integral part of the Monroe Doctrine."

Berlin Radio Comments

New York, Jan. 22 (AP)—The Berlin radio, in a broadcast heard here, said "Berlin quarters" pointed out that "the matters which Bulgaria has to settle she is settling independently and in accordance with her own sovereign policy, in which she certainly will not permit Mr. Donovan to interfere."

To See Turkey's Big Three

Istanbul, Turkey, Jan. 22 (AP)—It was learned here tonight that Col. William J. Donovan would see the big three of Turkey—President Ismet Inonu, Premier Rebik Saydam and Sukru Saracoglu, Foreign Minister, when he arrives at Ankara.

Turks Study Rumania Riots

ISTANBUL, Jan. 22 (AP).—The Turkish Cabinet met for three hours today to discuss the situation arising from rioting in Rumania and the presence of German troops there.

TURKS WARN AXIS TO AVOID THRACE

Say Their Troops Are Ready to Blast Invaders.

Istanbul, Jan. 22 (A. P.).—The official Turkish radio and the press have warned the Axis Powers against any threatening move in the direction of this country's European frontier. Declaring that a great part of the Turkish Army has already been concentrated in Thrace (European Turkey) to await any possible action, the radio last night asserted: "Those who attack our steel fortress of Thrace are doomed to fall in the attempt. Turkey fought on eight fronts in the last war—no one should doubt her ability to fight on one front alone. Those who want to beat their heads on the rock may do so."

The broadcaster, discussing the possibility of a Nazi invasion, expressed doubt that the Germans could muster more than sixteen divisions in Rumania by April, and declared: "They would meet a wide Balkan front. The Balkans can muster more than 100 divisions, and added to these would be the British forces."

The newspaper Tasviri declared that Turkey is not a country to be frightened by threats and said it would meet any attempt at invasion in a way that would open new pages of glory for Turkey.

SOVIET REASSERTS HER NEUTRALITY

Observes 17th Anniversary of Lenin's Death

Moscow, Jan. 22 (A. P.).—Soviet Russia took occasion today on the seventeenth anniversary of the death of her first leader—Nicolai Lenin—to proclaim again her policy of neutrality and strong defense.

"The Soviet Union is carrying on infallibly the Lenin and Stalin policy of peace and neutrality," the Communist party organ, declared editorially, and in the same paper, Yemelian Yaroslavsky, a member of the party's Central Committee, wrote that the "Soviet Union guarantees her neutrality by indefatigable strengthening of the economic and defense capacity of the country."

The army organ, the Red Star, said that the army, "led by the direction of Comrade Stalin, is now accomplishing a radical reconstruction of the whole system of military training and education of troops." The "all-victorious, inconquerable spirit of Leninism" was reflected, the Red Star added, in the move to give Russia the best and most capable of all modern armies.

The anniversary of Lenin's death is observed as a national day of mourning, while thousands pass through the Red mausoleum under the Kremlin wall where he lies in state, his small body and bearded face preserved under a glass case. The country also observed today the anniversary of the Bloody Sunday of January 22, 1905, when workers marching toward the Czar's palace with a petition were mowed down by rifle fire.

Berlin Minimizes Disorder

BERLIN, Jan. 22 (AP).—Authorized German sources said today that the situation in Rumania was regarded as in a stage of lessening tension.

The belief was expressed that when great internal changes occur, as in Rumania, some friction is natural.

INDICATION IS GIVEN OF DRIVE ON CONTINENT

Prime Minister Sees Great Demand on Man Power for Six Months.

DEFENDS DRAFTING OF LABOR

In Commons Speech He Stresses Need to Equip Troops for Battle at Home and Abroad.

London, Jan. 22 (A. P.).—Winston Churchill disclosed today that behind Great Britain's decision to conscript labor lies an intense demand in the next six months for man and woman power to supply an army on a scale for fighting both overseas and at home.

Before the House of Commons the Prime Minister said the size of the army was settled within a few weeks after war started; that the only change had been to provide equipment for ten more divisions and that the scale of the army is the same as that in November, 1939. . . . "A very large and formidable force both for fighting overseas and defense."

Now, he explained, "this great nation has got into its war stride" and most of wartime munitions and supply plants, planned in 1939 to provide the army "with all the equipment it required in continuous action on the continent of Europe against the German enemy," are coming into production.

Therefore an "intense demand on the man and woman power" in the country" could not be avoided in the next six months, the Prime Minister told the House of Commons.

The Prime Minister spoke in defense of the Government's decision, as announced yesterday, to register industrial man power for work in war factories.

"Counting the home guard, we will have 4,000,000 armed and uniformed men who will all play a part in the defense of our hearths and homes," Mr. Churchill declared.

He observed that "an army that could be taken overseas in the form of military units" would be measured by different standards from those at home.

New Plants Producing.

"All sorts of factories were set up to provide this army with all it would require in continuous action against the Germans," he said. Most of the new plants, he continued, are "just beginning to come into production" and in sixteen months of the war thus far the nation has surpassed by 100,000 workers the number employed in war industries in forty-eight months of the world war.

Now after sixteen months of war, Mr. Churchill said, "between the greatest States armed with the most deadly weapons not more than 60,000 British folk—nearly half of whom are civilians—have lost their lives in enemy action." In the coming six months, he said, "we shall, for the first time, have an intense demand on the man and woman power of this country."

"This," he continued, "was the reason for the far-reaching declaration of which the Minister of Labor (Ernest Bevin) apprised the country and the House yesterday.

Time Now for Full Effort.

"Now is the time when the full war effort will come to be realized.

"I look forward to very considerable combing and scraping in the air force and in the army . . . to reduce their demands upon the manpower market as far as possible during the coming stringent months so that we may be able to man the new factories and shipyards and till the new fields which are coming into production."

"Our army is growing in strength, efficiency and equipment, but it is the munition factories and agriculture which, in the next six months, will make the chief demand on the manpower of our country.

"This great nation is getting into its war stride, but the future contains no evidence which would justify lassitude, despondency or despair."

Mr. Churchill promised the House a chance to vote on the labor conscription plan.

Future Is Not Rosy To Churchill

London, Jan. 22 (A. P.).—Prime Minister Churchill concluded a brief summary of Britain's African victories in addressing the House of Commons today with this sober passage:

"Far be it from me to paint a rosy picture of the present or the future. . . indeed the whole English-speaking world is passing through a dark and deadly valley."

He rebuked critics who a few weeks ago "were crying out at our inaction against Italy and wondering whose was the hidden hand sheltering Mussolini from the British forces."

"I indured these taunts in silence," he went on, "because I knew that large and daring measures had been taken" which made possible the subsequent victories in Egypt and Libya.

Text of Churchill Speech

Following is a partial text of Mr. Churchill's remarks in the House of Commons, as reported by The Associated Press:

At the root of all questions of man power lies the size of the army. The navy and air force make gigantic demands upon us, but the great customer for man power is the army.

The size of the army was settled within a few weeks of the outbreak of the war. We have not altered that decision, except to the extent of providing equipment for ten more divisions. The scale of the army is the same as that in November, 1939. I am not going to say how many divisions it amounts to, but it is a very large and formidable force both for fighting overseas and for defense.

Counting the Home Guard we have about 4,000,000 armed men. At the time when the scale of the army was settled in 1939 a vast series of factories, plants and establishments were set on foot, sufficient to provide this army of the size set with all the equipment it required in continuous action on the Continent of Europe against the German enemy.

New Plants Producing

The bulk of the new plants are just coming into production. Many are structurally incomplete. As these plants come into operation constructing services, including those who lay on water, light, power and munition workers, have to be assembled. All this takes time, and you cannot go faster than a certain speed.

Perhaps you can go a little faster, but the stages cannot be omitted. It is not possible to make a warship go to sea and fight against the enemy until fires have been lighted and the water in the boilers changed from cold to tepid to warm to hot. The steam is generated and the vast power is given. While this is going on there is no use rushing about uttering alarming cries. It is not a very good thing to do if you happen to be one of the people who did not start warming up the boilers in good time.

I was the Minister of Munitions in July, 1918, and am, therefore, able to measure more or less the intensity of the munitions production then going on. I was greatly encouraged when I learned some weeks ago that in the sixteenth month of this war we have already surpassed by several hundred thousand workers the number of persons employed in munitions and aircraft production in the forty-eighth month of the last war. I knew that productivity per pair of hands was greatly increased in the interval.

I have kept myself constantly informed of the great tide of new factories rising to productive level.

I say that in the next six months we shall have for the first time an intense demand on man power and woman power. This is the problem that lies before us. We are now about to enter for the first time in this war a period of man-power stringency because for the first time we come to have the apparatus and the lay-out which this man power and woman power will be required to handle. That is the reason for the far-reaching declaration of which the Minister of Labor thought it necessary to apprise the House and the country in his statement yesterday.

Full Effort Near

Now is the time when the full war effort will gradually be able to be realized as plants come into being.

It is quite true there are not quite so many women employed as in 1918. There are two reasons—one, that so many more were gainfully employed before the war situation began; the other, that those usually engaged in the shell-filling factories, which are in the front line of munition works, are only just coming into it.

I, of course, am aware that an army mechanized makes an enormous additional drain upon the administrative branches which lie behind the fighting vehicles, but I have thought, nevertheless, for some time that the army and the air force, the navy not so much, have a great need for what I may call combing their tails in order to magnify their teeth.

I have some times thought there was considerable scope for a saving of man power in the rearward and preparatory services.

I look for considerable combings and scrapings in the air force and the army, not to cut them down but in order to reduce their demands on the man-power market during the coming stringent months, so that we shall be able to man the new factories and shipyards and till the new fields which are coming into production.

Both the fighting services engaged in this process at the present time, and the army in particular, are making a great saving in their rearward services in order to forward and sharpen the expansion which is necessary.

In all this the army has been greatly eased because in the mercy of God we had no slaughter or wastage comparable with the last war.

It is amazing that after sixteen months' war with the greatest state, armed with the most deadly weapons, not more than 60,000 British folk, nearly half of which were civilians, have lost their life by enemy action.

That is a terrible figure, but it is far less than the lives lost in a single protracted battle on the western front in 1916, 1917 or 1918 and, therefore, while our army is growing every week in power, strength, efficiency and equipment, and a decided expansion is in progress, it is the munition factories and agriculture, rather than the fighting services, which will in the next five or six months make the chief demand for man power on the public. It is to these problems and tasks that we are now addressing ourselves.

Criticism is easy; achievement more difficult. I do not pretend that there is no room for improvement and acceleration even apart from the methodical expansion which is going on.

It is certain the peak of our war effort has not yet been reached, cannot be reached, until plants are all working. But my mind goes back to a few weeks ago when our critics were crying out about our inaction against Italy and wondering whose was the hidden hand that was shielding Mussolini from British wrath.

Hints at Other Drives

At the time, I endured these taunts in silence because I knew the large and daring measures which had already been taken by which it has been since rendered possible to gain the splendid victories in Libya, Sidi Barrani and Bardia. And it may well be that while I am speaking, Tobruk and all it contains are in our hands. Apart from the Libyan victories, extremely important developments are taking place on both frontiers of Abyssinia and Eritrea which may in themselves be productive of fruitful and extremely pregnant results.

Far be it from me to paint a rosy picture of the future. I do not think we should be justified in using any but somber tones and colors while our people and our empire and indeed the whole English-speaking world are passing through the dark and deadly valley. But I should be failing in my duty on the other side if I were not to convey to the House a true impression, namely that this great nation has got into its war stride.

It is accomplishing the transition from days of peace and comfort to those of supreme, organized, indomitable exertion.

Still more should I fail in my duty if I were to suggest that the future with all its horrors contained any element which justified lassitude, despondency and despair.

His Majesty's government welcome all the impulse which the House of Commons and the press and public opinion of this island can give us in driving forward our war effort and trying to gain an earlier inch or a more fruitful hour wherever it may be possible. But I have no doubt that the House in its overwhelming majority will wish to give its tribute of encouragement as well as its dose of correction and will lend its own heave of loyal strength to the forward surges that now have begun.

2 NAZI BOMBERS FALL IN COMBAT OVER ENGLAND

Raiders Stab At Various Areas, But No Casualties Are Reported

British Destroyer Hyperion Sunk By Sister Ships After Blast

[By the Associated Press]

London, Jan. 22—German bombers made relatively minor stabs at the southeast coast and over Yorkshire today and two were reported shot down in aerial combat.

Nowhere in Britain were raid casualties reported during the day. Six bombs fell in a town on the Kent coast — harmlessly, the Government said, and a Yorkshire area was reported bombed with similar negligible effect.

German planes also appeared over a northeast coast town and over East Anglia, but no incident of consequence was reported from those areas.

Appeal Made To Motorists

As part of the program to keep British planes well supplied, Geoffrey Lloyd, the Government's petroleum administrator, urged motorists tonight to be "more careful than ever" in their consumption of gasoline.

"Every ship, every plane, every mechanized vehicle that is added to the nation's growing strength from our own industry and from the United States must and shall have waiting for it supplies of fuel to enable it to strike at the enemy," he said in a broadcast.

London Announces Loss Of Destroyer Hyperion

London, Jan. 22 (AP)—The Admiralty announced tonight the British destroyer Hyperion has been lost.

The announcement said the Hyperion was damaged by a mine or torpedo, which rendered her incapable of steaming and that it was necessary for other British ships to sink her. The locale and date were withheld.

Southampton Similarly Sunk

The 9,100-ton cruiser Southampton, damaged in the Sicilian channel January 10 by Nazi dive bombers, also had to be sunk by sister ships.

The Hyperion was one of eight destroyers of the 1,340-ton Hero class built under the program of 1934. She carried a normal complement of 145 men, four 4.7-inch guns, six smaller ones and eight torpedo tubes. She was under the command of Commander H. St. L. Nicholson, D. S. O., R. N.

Cornered The Columbus

The Hyperion was the vessel that cornered the German liner Columbus December 19, 1939, off the Virginia coast, causing the Nazi crew to scuttle the 32,581-ton vessel.

The Columbus had left Vera Cruz, Mexico, in an attempt to reach Germany through the British blockade.

According to unofficial tabulation, the Hyperion was the thirty-seventh destroyer lost by the British since the war began.

GERMANS REPORT TWO VESSELS SUNK

Say Third Was Abandoned After Aerial Attack.

Berlin, Jan. 22 (A. P.).—Nazi bombers damaged a British merchant ship so badly that she was abandoned by her crew west of Ireland, and then sank a tug rushing to the vessel's aid, the German High Command reported today.

In reconnaissance flight's over England yesterday, the communique said, German fighting planes "successfully bombed war vital targets in London and the southeast of England, such as a flyers' camp."

Informed spokesmen said earlier that a German submarine had torpedoed and sunk a 4,000-ton freighter north of Ireland.

A combat flying group was credited by the High Command with sinking 145,200 tons of shipping in attacks during an unspecified period on British merchant vessels. The group commander, Col. Daser, alone accounted for 57,000 tons of the total, it was said. "Furthermore, this group damaged a large number of merchant ships," the communique added.

COMBAT PLANE RAIDS MARGATE

Lone Wolf Reported to Have Set Off Harbor Blasts.

Berlin, Jan. 22 (A. P.).—Bombs dropped by a German combat plane today on Margate, at the entrance of the Thames Estuary, caused spreading fires and big explosions on the quayside and harbor buildings, informed German spokesmen reported. The attacking plane was said to have dropped its explosives from the lowest altitude.

Two Nazis Shot Down.

London, Jan. 22 (A. P.).—British fighter planes downed two German bombers in air fights today as the Nazi air force stabbed at the Kent coast "hell corner" and the East Riding district of Yorkshire, the Government announced tonight. It was said there were no casualties and only a little damage in either of the Nazi attacks.

A town on the Kent coast was bombed in a pre-dawn attack and six bombs were said to have fallen harmlessly there. Later in the morning a single raider unloosed bombs on a place in East Riding, reportedly with but little effect. A lifeboat and a house were machined-gunned in the Kent attack.

Ground machine gunners answered the fire and the plane was last seen heading out to sea, losing altitude and trailing black smoke.

One bomb damaged a lorry and broke windows in a shop and house.

German planes were also reported over a northeast of England coastal town and in the vicinity of an East Anglian town. The Strait of Dover was swept by a strong southwest wind, meanwhile, and the sky was overcast.

Hopkins Sees Parliament in Action

London, Jan. 22 (A. P.).—Harry L. Hopkins, President Roosevelt's personal envoy, saw both houses of the British Parliment in session today.

Mr. Hopkins heard Prime Minister Churchill speak in the House of Commons and in the House of Lords he witnessed the colorful pageantry of the introduction of two members, Lord Cranbourne, Dominions Minister, under the title of Baron Cecil, and Lord Wolmer under the title of Baron Selborne.

Meat Rations Cut In British Army

London, Jan. 22 (A. P.).—The daily meat ration of British troops at home was reduced from ten to eight ounces on January 6, the War Minister, H. D. R. Margesson, disclosed today.

The soldiers' bread ration will be cut from twelve to ten ounces and flour from two and a half to two ounces daily, effective February 1, Mr. Margesson said.

Red Newspaper Fights British Ban

LONDON, Jan. 22 (A. P.).—The outlawed Daily Worker, communist newspaper, appealed to its readers today to demand the removal of a Government ban on its publication. The appeal was issued in the form of a single mimeographed sheet containing the story of a police raid on its offices yesterday and an editorial urging workers to "protest in your factory today!"

The news sheet, headed, "Daily Worker No. 3431," was issued while a guard of Scotland Yard detectives was posted in the paper's offices. The ban on the publication was issued yesterday by the Home Secretary, Herbert Morrison, on the ground that it has printed stories designed to foment opposition to Britain's war effort.

Says Nazis Attacked Pilots in Parachutes

London, Jan. 22 (A. P.).—Sir Archibald Sinclair, Air Minister, told the House of Commons today there was firm evidence to show that at least twelve attacks have been made by German planes on British pilots descending by parachute.

He added, however, that there was no international convention forbidding such action; hence Britain was not protesting to Germany.

Refugee Government To Open New York Office—Queen Names Commissioner

London, Jan. 22 (AP)—The Netherlands refugee government announced tonight it would open a New York office for the purchase and storage of food for the "replenishment of the Netherlands at the first moment possible."

Queen Wilhelmina appointed C. Van Stolk as commissioner and purchasing agent and directed him to buy in the open market. He is now en route to the United States.

The announcement said that "large stocks" had been accumulated in the Netherlands before the war but, due to "Nazi exploitation," the people were experiencing "serious hardship."

NAZIS CLAIM HALF OF WAR COST PAID

Economics Expert Points To Sacrifices Cutting Future Burden

Declares Aim Of Reich Is To Avoid Post-War Inflation Peril

[By the Associated Press]

Berlin, Jan. 22—The German high command's economics expert told foreign correspondents today that the German taxpayer had paid for about half the cost of German rearmament and the cost of the war to date.

In Germany, future generations won't be saddled with the terrific war cost because of the manner of German financing, he said. The expert added that inflation probably would be a post-war development "but not on our side."

The rearmament cost was estimated at 90,000,000,000 marks (about $36,000,000,000).

Debt Up 35 Billions

Cost of the war to date has not been disclosed because it is a military secret, but since the war started the German national debt has increased 35,000,000,000 marks.

About half the rearmament cost and increase in debt already has been paid by the taxpayer, the expert said, and on comparatively long-term loans covering the rest, the interest has dropped from 4.5 to 3.5 per cent. since hostilities started.

The tax revenue for next year was estimated at about 27,000,000,000 marks.

Says Sacrifices Made

A war economics commentator said any people could pay for wars by only two feasible methods—passing the bill on to future generations and through sacrifice by the wartime civilian population. The German population, it was added, are long on sacrifice.

He said that saving food under the rationing system amounted almost to 5,000,000,000 marks annually and that doing without new clothing, machines, etc., accounts for another 9,000,000,000 saving. Curtailment of capital investments and holding repairs and replacements to a minimum account for another 6,000,000,000.

Thus there is a total of about 20,000,000,000 marks which German economy frees for the war effort without passing anything on to future taxpayers, the expert asserted.

Inflation Trend Denied

He denied that the increase in German money circulation was a forerunner of inflation. It is due entirely, he said, to the fact that the mark now is used over a much greater geographical area and so is obliged to keep a much larger economic machine going.

Thus the mark is used in Danzig, Memel, the Sudeten region, the annexed portion of Poland and Alsace-Lorraine as exclusive currency and finds some circulation in all occupied territories. The mark circulation before the war was about 8,000,000,000; last November it was 10,500,000,000, and now is about 13,000,000,000.

Fire Bombs and Explosives Dropped in Albania—Greeks Advance Near Tepeleni.

Athens, Jan. 22 (A. P.).—The British air force today reported a punishing raid on Italian military buildings and railway communications in Elbasani, vital central Albanian town.

Planes of the Royal Air Force Bomber Command roared over the town yesterday and unloaded high explosive and fire bombs, the communique declared, while the Greeks reported the capture of additional positions in the Tepeleni sector, coupled with new gains on the northern front, where lively fighting was reported after a recent weather-enforced stalemate.

The British said all their planes returned safely from Elbasani despite an anti-aircraft barrage and the active opposition of Italian fighter planes.

Improved weather was reported around Tepeleni, but large-scale operations were still hampered. Here, the Greeks said, their forces continued to maintain the initiative, with their big guns pouring a steady stream of shells into the Fascist positions.

Last night a Greek Government spokesman declared that the Italian Julia Division had suffered such severe losses in recent engagements that it was compelled to withdraw from the Albanian battlefront.

Without specifying where the fighting occurred, the spokesman added that Greek advance units pursued their advance and that the objectives in this operation have been completely attained. "The whole region we occupied has been completely cleaned up," he added, "and all enemy resistance overcome."

Preveza and Salonika Bombed.

Rome, Jan. 22 (A. P.).—Italian warplanes were reported by the Italian High Command today to have carried out bombing attacks on the Greek naval base of Preveza, the Ægean ports of Salonika and Volos and the island of Corfu. Land operations on the Albanian war front were limited to local actions in the southern sector, the communique added.

Greek supply lines, troop concentrations, anti-aircraft batteries and artillery emplacements were reported dive-bombed with the greatest intensity.

The Italians were said to have attacked steamships in one of the ports, and an oil tanker was reported hit.

Greek Bombers Destroy Convoy Of 100 Trucks

Dislodged Bowlder Traps Italians on Hill Road in Central Albanian Sector

By The Associated Press

ATHENS, Jan. 22.—The Greek air force reported tonight the destruction by bombers of an entire Italian convoy of more than 100 trucks on the central Albanian front. Italian troops also were bombed and machine-gunned in repeated attacks, it was stated.

The transport column was said to have been smashed after a Greek bomb had dislodged a great bowlder, which rolled into the road, blocking a narrow mountain pass and enabling the Greek planes to pour bombs upon the trapped trucks.

In this sector Greek infantry was reported far enough advanced to permit the transfer of artillery to new forward positions. At one point 200 Italian prisoners were taken, a Greek government spokesman said.

Four Italian counter-attacks along the central front, he added, had been easily repulsed with "heavy losses" to the Fascists.

Gains in the Tepelini sector of the southern Albanian front after the capture of additional Italian positions were reported by the Greek Army. Spokesmen said Greek guns poured a steady stream of shells into other Fascist defenses, enabling their troops to keep the initiative.

British flyers blasted yesterday at Elbasani, in central Albania, it was announced today, unloading explosive and fire bombs on Italian military buildings and railway communications.

STRUGA, Yugoslavia, (on the Albanian border), Jan. 22 (AP).—Reports from the Albanian front today said the Greeks were fortifying their lines in expectation of an Italian counter-offensive as a result of the reported arrival of eighteen new Italian divisions.

The editor, regarded as a spokesman for Premier Mussolini, cited instances in which textile stocks and shares of metal, mining, electric and other industries had sold far above nominal values.

AXIS RECOGNITION OF NANKING URGED

Tokio Newspaper Asks Why It Is Not Forthcoming.

Tokio, Jan. 22 (A. P.).—The newspaper Asahi today requested a Government explanation of the failure of Japan's Axis partners, Germany and Italy, to recognize the Japanese-sponsored Nanking regime in China. Asahi contended that through the tripartite alliance, Germany and Italy recognized Japan's leadership in Eastern Asia. It then asked whether, on the basis of that recognition, the Axis partners should not formally recognize the Wang Ching-wei regime at Nanking and whether such recognition had been requested of Rome and Berlin.

The request came amid a general chorus of praise in the Japanese press of Monday's address in Parliament by the Japanese Foreign Minister, Yosuke Matsuoka, who called upon the United States to avoid an attitude that might lead to war, and who predicted that the Axis military alliance would lead to a new world order.

The four demands, as reported by Domei, were: Immediate employment of six Japanese as police chiefs; the stationing of policemen in districts where the most reactionary groups are found; the limitation of embarkation and debarkation from ships in the harbor, and restrictions on the arrival and departure of junks.

Governor-General Of Indo-China Cancels Inspection Trip—Goes To Saigon

[By the Associated Press]

Pnom-Penh, French Indo-China, Jan. 22—Thailand forces increased their attacks tonight on two important cities in the Cambodia section of French Indo-China.

Sisophon and Mongkol-Borey, key points on the border supply routes, were bombed by Thai planes, Rear Admiral Jean Decoux, Governor General of Indo-China, announced. He also said Samrong and Cheomkhsan were holding out against Thai assaults.

Decoux Leaves For Saigon

As the Thai attacks were stepped up, Admiral Decoux suddenly canceled an inspection trip through Cambodia and left for Saigon, Cochin-China. The reason was not given.

The Governor General made no announcement regarding a reported Japanese offer to mediate the undeclared war.

Many French Wounded Arrive

Domei said the offer had been made to the Governor General's representative at Hanoi by the Japanese consul general and the acting head of a Japanese mission, who stressed Japan's view that the conflict is inimical to the immediate establishment of peace and new order in East Asia and the disposal of the China incident.

Many French wounded were in this city, the third largest in Indo-China. It is crowded also with reinforcements and supplies moving west and north to Cambodia fronts in hundreds of Government and commandeered trucks.

Other wounded soldiers have been sent to Saigon by boat.

SINGAPORE, JAN 22-(AP)-REPORTS FROM BANGKOK AND HANOI TODAY WERE INTERPRETED HERE AS INDICATING READINESS BY LEADERS OF THAILAND (SIAM) AND FRENCH INDO-CHINA TO SEEK A PEACEFUL SETTLEMENT OF THE TERRITORIAL DISPUTE BEHIND THEIR UNDECLARED WAR.

INFORMED QUARTERS SAID BOTH THE THAI AND THE FRENCH STILL MAINTAIN THE JUSTICE OF THEIR RESPECTIVE ATTITUDES, BUT WERE BEING DRAWN TOGETHER BY FEAR THE FRONTIER STRIFE WAS DEVELOPING INTO A GENERAL CONFLICT.

A GENERAL OUTBREAK, THESE QUARTERS EXPLAINED, MIGHT ENABLE JAPAN TO ENTER THE CONTROVERSY AS A PACIFIER, BUT THEN TO REMAIN AS A STRATEGICALLY-STRENGTHENED MENACE TO ALL STATES AROUND THE CHINA SEA.

AN OFFICIAL REPORT FROM HANOI SAID OFFICIAL INFORMATION FROM BANGKOK "ENVISAGED RESUMPTION OF DIRECT DIPLOMATIC CONTACT WITH INDO-CHINA," WHICH WAS INTERRUPTED IN NOVEMBER.

BANGKOK REPORTS SAID THE FRENCH CHARGE D'AFFAIRES THERE, ROGER GARREAU, HAD CONFERRED THREE TIMES WITH THAI PREMIER LUANG PIBULA SONGGRAM. THEIR CONVERSATIONS, IT WAS REPORTED, BROUGHT NO CONCRETE RESULTS, BUT WERE EVIDENCE OF WILLINGNESS TO CONTINUE NEGOTIATIONS.

THE THAI GOVERNMENT HAS INSISTED UPON DIRECT DEALINGS WITH THE FRENCH GOVERNMENT, RATHER THAN THE INDO-CHINA COLONIAL ADMINISTRATION, AND UPON FRENCH ACCEPTANCE, IN PRINCIPLE AT LEAST, OF THAI DEMANDS FOR TWO AREAS IN THE INDO-CHINA STATE OF LAOS.

INFORMED CIRCLES SAID GARREAU INDICATED FRENCH WILLINGNESS TO NEGOTIATE MINOR FRONTIER MODIFICATIONS, BUT DETERMINATION TO LEAVE TERRITORIAL CLAIMS IN ABEYANCE UNTIL CONCLUSION OF THE EUROPEAN WAR.

BRITAIN AND THE UNITED STATES WERE REPORTED BY AUTHORITATIVE SOURCES TO BE ENCOURAGING AN EARLY PEACEFUL SETTLEMENT OF THE DISPUTE. BRITISH-AMERICAN INFLUENCE ALREADY WAS CREDITED, THEY SAID, WITH DISSUADING THAILAND FROM CARRYING OUT AN EXPRESSED INTENTION OF BOMBING SAIGON AND OTHER INDO-CHINA POPULATION CENTERS.

AN EARLY AND "HONORABLE" SETTLEMENT, IT WAS SAID, WOULD HELP THAILAND RESTRAIN HER PRO-JAPANESE FACTIONS, WHOSE INFLUENCE WAS STRENGTHENED BY JAPAN'S READINESS TO SUPPLY THAT COUNTRY WITH ARMAMENTS AFTER UNITED STATES SUPPLIES WERE CUT OFF.

RELIABLE REPORTS FROM BANGKOK SAID 60 WARPLANES, TOGETHER WITH ARTILLERY AND MUNITIONS, HAD ARRIVED THERE FROM JAPAN. SIXTY MORE PLANES AND ADDITIONAL SUPPLIES ARE EXPECTED THIS WEEK. FRENCH QUARTERS SAID INDO-CHINA HAD RECEIVED NOTHING FROM JAPAN.

MQ 5

BANGKOK,THAILAND,JAN 22-(AP)-HOPE OF PEACEFUL SETTLEMENT OF THE UNDECLARED BORDER WARFARE BETWEEN THAILAND (SIAM) AND FRENCH INDO-CHINA APPEARED TO HAVE FADED TODAY FOLLOWING INCONCLUSIVE NEGOTIATIONS BETWEEN FRENCH AND THAI AUTHORITIES.

FRENCH CHARGE D'AFFAIRES ROGER GARREAU CONFERRED IN THE PAST WEEK WITH DEPUTY FOREIGN MINISTER NAI DIRK JAINAM OF THAILAND, BUT HE WAS UNDERSTOOD NOT TO BE EMPOWERED TO AGREE ON A BASIS.

A THAI HIGH COMMAND COMMUNIQUE TODAY ANNOUNCED THE THAI ARMY HAD OCCUPIED MUANGKAO, THE FIRST LARGE FRENCH INDO-CHINA TOWN TO FALL INTO ITS HANDS, AFTER DEFEAT OF FRENCH FORCES NORTH OF SIEMRATH. MUANGKAO IS ON THE RIGHT BANK OF THE MEKONG RIVER OPPOSITE PAKSE, IN NORTH CAMBODIA.

Londoners Fashion Comfort And Convenience In Shelters

Now Normal Way Of Life For Million Persons Termed Improved Steadily Since September, 1939

By DREW MIDDLETON
Associated Press Correspondent

London, Jan. 22—London's air-raid shelters, now the normal way of life for more than a million persons, have improved steadily since the fear-ridden chaos of September, 1939.

An Associated Press survey of ten public shelters, ten semi-public shelters—beneath apartment houses and hotels—and in ten private shelters for individual families demonstrated how a nation of improvisers fashioned some comfort and convenience out of the drab caverns.

This does not mean the dangers of disease and mass melancholia are banished. They are diminishing, but still present. Any reporter would be impressed, however, by the manner in which the people and the Government are battling the problems of life underground.

New Form Of Community Living

From now to the end of the war, some millions in London and Britain expect to spend half their hours in a new form of community living.

Many observers feel the nation's ability to resist the dangers of this new way of life is more important than post-war reconstruction.

"If we can live through this winter unshaken and unafraid," one British politician said, "the rest will be money for jam."

The best estimates are that the public shelters accommodate up to 250,000 persons nightly in London, perhaps 50,000 more on a bad night. Apartments and hotel shelters accommodate 150,000 more. There is no estimate of the number who camp out nightly in steel Anderson shelters, but a police official said they must "run well over a million."

Public Situation Most Serious

The public shelter situation, because it affects the classes most open to epidemic, is the most serious. Here is the way they look—and one little man commented: "Don't bar no holds when you write about us."

Since the Government issued tickets for bunks, the women no longer line up outside in the early afternoon. But by 5 o'clock they are inside spreading suppers for their men folk—cold food, cooked at home in the afternoon, if they are able to turn on the gas.

By 6 the men come in after a couple of beers at the local pub. Until 9, when the early risers go to bed, community life is lively. There are dances and games.

Some workers reap a harvest of pennies and sixpences during these idle hours. In one shelter, blond helpers from hairdressing establishments give finger waves and manicures to Cockney matrons.

Two Do Cleaning Business

Two brothers set up a cleaning establishment in another shelter. While bombs fall overhead they labor over neighbors' clothes and regret they "can't get that bloomin' press down 'ere." The press is all that's left of their pre-war business.

It must be remembered that no two public shelters are alike. They range from intelligently planned refuges under City office buildings to indescribable holes under ancient edifices. The first problem in each is sanitation.

Eighty per cent. of the shelter dwellers now accept throat spraying as necessary and inspection by a physician who comes around every other night as a diversion in an otherwise dull evening.

Diseased Are Segregated

Persons suffering from pulmonary or venereal diseases are segregated.

The Ministry of Health preached a war against rats. In sections near the river rodents were a serious problem. Poison and the efforts of small boys have cut their numbers.

Bunks are better than the stone floors on which a great majority of the shelter population slept early in the Blitz. But steel bunks are better than wooden ones, which retain lice. Wooden bunks outnumber steel two to one.

Food is supplied by a canteen run by teams of women from the shelter. They offer tea throughout the night, have it ready for bread winners starting to work in the morning. The tea is hot, dark and potent.

Frown On Beer Drinking

Beer is frowned on during the night, because, as one shelter dweller put it, "Get a couple of pints in 'em and they want to sing 'There'll Always Be An England' at 2 in the morning."

The shelter police are marshals chosen from among the older men.

Standards of semi-public apartment house and hotel shelters have improved out of recognition. With money and time, the inhabitants have turned these into real living rooms. Each resident has his own bed, can be sure the linen has been aired, and leaves a call for a morning shake exactly as he would wind his alarm clock.

Diminution of the Blitz hasn't affected the population, because, as a society woman asserted, "We still hear those dreadful guns in our own apartments, and they keep us awake."

Curved Steel, Set In Ground

The average shelter adjoining the private home is a piece of steel curved and set in the ground. Industrious home owners fortify it with sandbags and loose earth. Then, says the Government, it is proof against anything except a direct hit.

The morale of these people is solid. They have enough food. They seem ready for six months, a year, or two years of this living.

None is joyous about it, none is heroic for publication, but the truth is each one seems to be grasping some sort of pleasure from the return to the life of cavemen. --

Top-Ranking Nazi Ace Arrives In Canada As Prisoner Of War

Description Indicates He May Be Major Helmuth Wick, Credited With Bagging 56 Planes

[By the Associated Press]

An East Canadian Port, Jan. 22—A Nazi air ace, ranked as one of Germany's most deadly, and hundreds of other shot-down airmen and captured seamen were brought here from England for internment today.

Two escaped within a few hours after they trudged down the gangplank from a camouflaged prison ship. The escape of the unidentified pair was announced by the Royal Canadian Mounted Police just after the exploits of the ace prisoner were detailed.

Internment officials said the German ace is a 25-year-old fighter pilot who was credited in Berlin with shooting down fifty-six planes since the start of the Spanish civil war in which he flew for the Franco forces.

His name was withheld by regulations barring the identification of prisoners.

After the Spanish civil war he fought over France, the Netherlands, Belgium and Britain and was awarded oak leaves added to the Iron Cross, the highest German decoration.

A British pilot shot him down over the English Channel.

Anonymous now, he trudged down the gangplank and headed with the rest of the prisoners for the interior of Canada, to stay for the duration of the war.

Between lines of imperial and Canadian soldiers, the prisoners moved to special trains. Some walked stolidly, others grinned. A few raised their arms in the Nazi salute.

Officials said there were no serious incidents aboard the boat which brought the prisoners.

The Canadian description of the German ace fits that of Major Helmuth Wick, commander of the famous Richtofen Squadron, who was believed in Berlin to have been killed over the English Channel. He was 25 years old and was credited in Berlin with shooting down fifty-six planes.

Missing Since Dec. 4

A German high command communique December 4 reporting Wick's failure to return, said "the German air force thus has lost one of its most audacious and successful pursuit pilots. . . . He will live on as an example among German people and German youth."

Two other pilots who wear the highest German decoration—the oak leaves—are Major Werner Moelders who, on October 25, was credited with his fifty-third plane, and General Dietz, commander in the Narvik, Norway, campaign last spring.

Fellow-pilots had reported seeing Wick bail out and descend to the water off the Isle of Wight after bagging his fifty-sixth plane.

Brazil Seeks Reaction To Mendoza Seizure

Asks Panama To Consult With Other American Republics Regarding Possible Protest

Rio de Janeiro, Jan. 22 (AP)—Brazil asked the Panama Government today to consult with the other American republics to determine whether they desire to protest jointly to Great Britain against seizure of the French ship, Mendoza, which occurred within the Pan-American neutrality zone.

Brazil described it as "an act of hostility" within the zone.

The British cruiser Asturias seized the Mendoza, laden with a cargo of food for France, January 18 off the Brazil coast. The British asserted the ship, which three times had attempted to run the British blockade, was outside territorial waters when taken.

Brazil, in asking if the other republics desired to join in the protest, followed precedure established at the Panama conference.

McNary, Thomas Oppose F.D. Bill; Lindbergh Called

WASHINGTON, Jan. 22 (AP).—Senator McNary, 1940 Republican nominee for Vice President, and Norman Thomas, perennial Socialist candidate for President, spoke out today against giving President Roosevelt broad authority under the British aid bill while Senator Barkley, the majority leader, expressed the hope the measure could be disposed of by Congress within 60 days.

Senator Barkley made his statement after a conference with the President.

The House Foreign Affairs Committee arranged to hear Col. Charles A. Lindbergh and Hugh S. Johnson tomorrow, and decided to conclude its hearings on the lend-lease bill Saturday with testimony by William C. Bullitt, and to begin consideration of amendments Monday.

On Monday also, the Senate Foreign Relations Committee will start its hearings, with Secretary of State Hull and other Cabinet members leading the parade of witnesses.

While Thomas was denouncing the legislation before the House group today, qualified support for the bill came from Senator Norris (Ind.-Neb.). Back in Washington after recovering from an illness, he said he favored the principle of the bill, but believed a time-limit should be placed on the powers it would confer on the President.

The day also brought an endorsement of the measure from Jesse M. Jones, Secretary of Commerce and Federal Loan Administrator.

McNary of Oregon, the Senate's minority leader, returned to the Capital after a long siege of Pneumonia and promptly told reporters that he opposed the measure in its present form because it grants "extraordinary and total power to one person."

In taking that stand, he differed somewhat from his Republican running mate, Wendell L. Willkie, who is supporting the bill's principles on the ground that authority must be concentrated to hasten help to England.

McNary said:

"This is not the democratic way of life and I earnestly hope the bill may be modified by appropriate committees, or after debate in Congress.

"During the Fall months, the President was advocating aid to Great Britain short of war. That policy became a national anthem. There was unity of thought. I favored that plan and shall support an all-out policy of aid to the democracies by every method short of war. My great concern is to keep our country out of the conflicts of mass murder in Europe, Asia and Africa."

The tall, snowy-haired Thomas, speaking in his customary rapid-fire manner, testified he would not give the authority contained in the bill "to any living man unless and until the people, through Congress, had decided on war."

"It is a bill to set the clock of history back and give power over war and peace to the Executive, who by that very fact, becomes a dictator in that vast field," he shouted.

Thomas was followed as a witness against the legislation by Hanford MacNider of Mason City, Ia., former Asistant Secretary of War and an unsuccessful contender last June for the Republican Presidential nomination.

Speaking in a deep, resonant voice, MacNider described the bill as "a direct scuttling of our form of government and betrayal of the American people." Its passage, he said, "would be hoisting the white flag of surrender for free men everywhere."

As the afternoon hearing began, Chairman Bloom (D.-N. Y.) made public a letter from Secretary Morgenthau saying British dollar and gold assets available to pay for American supplies had increased $36,000,000 since information on the subject was given out Jan. 15.

NORRIS URGES COMPLETE AID TO BRITAIN

Veteran Nebraskan Backs Lease-Lend Bill With Modifications

Doesn't Think U. S. Will Get Into War Because Axis Doesn't Want Us In

[By the Associated Press]

Washington, Jan. 22—Voicing confidence that "England can whip Hitler," Senator George W. Norris, the veteran Nebraska Independent, returned to the Capital today to lend his support to the British-aid program, with some modifications.

"I don't think we are going to get into this war," the 79-year-old Senator said. "The dictator nations don't want us in. I think we can go a long way toward helping Britain without getting in."

Norris is the only living Senator who voted against this country's participation in the last World War.

Favors Limitation On Powers

Although he expressed approval of the principle of the lease-lend legislation, the Nebraskan said he believed a time limitation should be placed on the powers it confers on the President. He also indicated that he might support other modifications.

"I want to see every 'i' dotted in this legislation," he said. "We don't want to follow the dictatorships.

"England will win if we can supply airplanes, ships and munitions. Not even England and Greece, our friends, are asking us to send men at this time."

More Aid, Less Danger

He added, however, that there was some risk that the United States might become involved "if Germany, Italy and Japan decide they want us in."

"The more aid we can give England, especially in bombing planes, the less chance there is of us actually getting in," he said. "I want to keep this country out of war, but the choice will not be ours.

"We are doing many things now that violate the old rules of international law, but the dictators have paid no attention to them. They want war and we must not underestimate their powers."

Says Hitler Wants Us To Stay Out

The veteran Senator said that the person "most anxious to keep the United States out of the war now is Hitler," adding, "he can't win if we get in and nobody knows that better than Hitler."

Norris, who voted against the military conscription bill, said he still believed he was right because we "do not need a large army."

"What we need now is production of ships, airplanes, munitions and the things that England needs to win," he said.

The Senate veteran sported a wide-brimmed tan felt hat which he said he got from Jack Dempsey in a trade for his own hat. The former heavyweight boxer visited Norris at his home in McCook, Neb.

Illness delayed the Senator's return to Washington.

McNary Opposes Power Grant

Senator McNary, of Oregon, the 1940 Republican Vice-Presidential nominee

returned to the capital after a long illness from pneumonia, expressed opposition to giving the Chief Executive broad authority under the British-aid bill.

McNary, the Senate's minority leader, said he opposed the measure in its present form because it grants "extraordinary and total power to one person."

In taking that stand, he differed somewhat from his Republican running mate, Wendell L. Willkie, who is supporting the bill's principles on the ground that authority must be concentrated to hasten help to England.

McNary said he would support earnestly "an all-out policy of aid to the democracies by every method short of war," but declared that the Presidential grants in the Administration measure were "not the democratic way of life."

"I earnestly hope," he said, "that the bill may be modified by appropriate committees or after debate in the Congress."

Pepper Calls Kennedy Appeasement Advocate

Washington, Jan. 22 (AP)—Senator Pepper (Dem., Fla.) said in a radio broadcast tonight that Joseph P. Kennedy, former Ambassador to England, had "sat at the door of the British Cabinet in those terrible days of Munich and aided the policy of appeasement apparently by his counsel."

Kennedy testified before the House Foreign Affairs Committee yesterday that he was opposed to the Administration's lend-lease bill in its present form, but favored aid to Britain.

Not Like His "Genius"

Speaking further of Kennedy, Pepper said:

"It is unlike his great genius and his striking career of action for him now to preach indecision to a people whom he should be warning every minute of the day and night, and whom he should be counseling to bold, daring, vigorous action.

"If war shall come to this country," he said, "I lay it squarely before the door of those who brought war to England—the appeasers and the obstructionists."

Would Place Credit

"If peace shall continue our blessing," he added, "I place the credit for it squarely where the credit belongs, to those who have had the wisdom and the courage to aviod war.

"I now declare that it is the counsel and the obstruction of those who decry the President's present proposal, known as the lease-lend bill. . . . That, if anything, is leading this country to war."

Knox Denies British Ask For American Warships

Announces Rear Admiral King Will Be Promoted

WASHINGTON, Jan. 22 (AP).—Frank Knox, Secretary of the Navy, said at a press conference today that it was untrue that the British were asking for American cruisers of the Wichita type—9,200 tons—and added that "as a matter of fact they are not asking for any of our ships," apparently referring to warships.

Command of the newly created Atlantic fleet will be vested in a full admiral, Mr. Knox said, in announcing that Rear Admiral Ernest J. King would be promoted. Admiral King was made commander in chief of the Atlantic fleet when it was created several weeks ago as one unit of the three-fleet navy. The other units are the Pacific and the Asiatic fleets. His promotion will be effective about Feb. 1, Mr. Knox said, and two other changes which he described as "routine" will be effective at the same time.

Admiral Charles P. Snyder will be relieved from duty as commander of the battle force to become a member of the general board of the Navy. Vice-Admiral William S. Pye, commander of battleships of the battle force, will succeed Admiral Snyder and continue his present rank of vice-admiral.

Admiral Snyder is a native of Charleston, W. Va., and Admiral Pye was born in Minneapolis and now makes his home in Baltimore.

List Of British Assets Undergoes Revision

Net Increase Of $36,000,000 In Reserve Available To Pay For War Supplies Reported

Washington, Jan. 22 (AP)—Secretary Morgenthau notified the House Foreign Affairs Committee today that there recently had been a net increase of $36,000,000 in British dollar and gold assets available to pay for war supplies in the United States.

"The figure the British had previously submitted to me of their total gold holdings (as of January 1, 1941) was $238,000,000; the revised figure is $292,000,000, or $54,000,000 greater," he wrote Representative Bloom (N. Y.), committee chairman.

"The earlier British table included $33,000,000 of gold scattered in various parts of the world, and not available for payments here; the new table makes this figure only $30,000,000, which means that $3,000,000 more are available for use."

This raised the total of additional available assets to $57,00,000, but Morgenthau said that, "on the other hand, the British Treasury has submitted to me an additional debit item of $21,000,000, representing commitments already made on account of forward exchange contracts."

7,000 Quit In Defense Plant Row

MILWAUKEE, Jan. 22 (AP).—Work on $26,000,000 worth of Army and Navy defense orders ceased today at the Allis-Chalmers Manufacturing Co., largest industrial plant in Wisconsin, when members of the CIO United Automobile Workers Union went on strike.

All shop departments closed, directly affecting about 7,000 production workers. Another 2,000 employes, including the office staff, draftsmen and supervisors, did not join the walkout.

The company produces turbines for warships, generators, shafts, pumps and gun mounts in addition to many specialized jobs for the Navy. It is one of the nation's largest units in the capital goods industry.

In addition to the defense work now in the shop, plans for more, running into millions, are in the drafting rooms.

Production Curtailed At 2 Gulf Shipyards

Mobile, Ala., Jan. 22 (AP)—Production was curtailed today at two Gulf Coast shipyards engaged in defense work, where workers are seeking increased wages by the expedient of stopping work without striking.

A Federal conciliator, Bryce P. Holcombe, arrived and went into conference late today at the Alabama Dry Dock and Shipbuilding Company to discuss the demands of the men.

Meanwhile, more than a score of engineers and crane operators quit work at the Ingalls Shipbuilding Corporation yard in Pascagoula, Miss., to attend a "special meeting," and seventy-seven "burners" have been off the job and holding meetings since last Wedensday.

$75,000,000 In Contracts

The Ingalls corporation has about $75,000,000 worth of naval and Maritime Commission construction work under contract.

Work at the Alabama dry docks, a navy destroyer repair base, was halted for two hours yesterday. J. W. Atkins, regional director of the Industrial Union of Marine and Shipbuilding Workers of America (CIO), announced the 3,400 workers affected would cease work for a period each day.

Work, however, was not suspended today after the arrival of the Federal conciliator.

HULL EXPLAINS PLANE BAN END

Denies Move Is to Keep Russia Neutral.

Washington, Jan. 22 (A. P.).—Secretary Hull said today that the removal of the moral embargo on airplanes and other equipment to Soviet Russia represents an effort to iron out relatively small difficulties in relation between the United States and that country.

In reply to questions at his press conference as to whether it was part of a move to keep Russia neutral in the war, Mr. Hull asserted with emphasis that this question had not been raised in the diplomatic talks which have been in progress here for several months.

He refused to discuss what concessions the United States might receive in return for the lifting of the moral embargo or to say what effect it might have on the granting of export licenses for materials sought by Soviet Russia in the United States.

The embargo's end, however, appeared to be largely a diplomatic gesture, for there were no signs that it would mean a sudden export flood of these items to Soviet ports.

American plane factories already are working night and day to fill urgent orders for this nation's own defense forces, and for export to Great Britain. No surplus planes for Russian purchase were in sight, nor did there seem any likelihood that aluminum and molybdenum, vital war metals, could be spared in any quantity.

In addition, all such materials are covered by the export control license system which was established after the moral embargo to assure the United States of supplies necessary to its own defense.

However, the administration's action yesterday in lifting the aviation export ban seemed calculated to place relations between the two nations on a more friendly basis, and remove the diplomatic stigma attached to the moral embargo.

Conversations looking to improved Russo-American relations have been in progress for several months.

Secretary of State Hull in his letter yesterday to Constantine Oumansky, the Russian Ambassador, wrote he was happy to announce that the embargo no longer applied to the U. S. S. R., and that interested American manufacturers and exporters were being notified.

There was speculation in some quarters that whether lifting of the Russian embagro might also have the oblique purpose of driving a wedge between Moscow and the Berlin-Rome-Tokio partners. The State Department was silent on this point.

NEW YORK, JAN. 22--(AP) -A GROUP OF SOCIALISTS DECLARED TONIGHT THAT NORMAN THOMAS REPRESENTED ONLY ONE SECTION OF THE SOCIALIST PARTY IN HIS OPPOSITION TO THE PROPOSED BRITISH AID BILL AND ASKED THAT A PARTY REPRESENTATIVE FAVORING THE BILL BE HEARD BY THE HOUSE FOREIGN AFFAIRS COMMITTEE.

A TELEGRAM TO THAT EFFECT, SENT TO REPRESENTATIVE SOL BLOOM, CHAIRMAN OF THE COMMITTEE, WAS SIGNED BY FRANK R. CROSSWAITH, ALFRED BAKER LEWIS, MURRAY GROSS, DR. REINHOLD NEIBUHR, GUS TYLER, LAZAR BECKER AND JACK ALTMAN.

NEW YORK, JAN 22-(AP)-THE GERMAN RADIO, IN A BROADCAST HEARD BY NBC TONIGHT, SAID THE LIFTING BY THE UNITED STATES OF THE "MORAL EMBARGO" AGAINST RUSSIA "SHOWS THERE IS NO INSURMOUNTABLE OBSTACLE TO FRIENDLY COOPERATION BETWEEN THE UNITED STATES AND OTHER STATES WHICH HAVE BEEN TERMED AUTHORITARIAN, UNDEMOCRATIC, TOTALITARIAN AND AGGRESSORS BY THE AMERICAN PRESS."

THE GERMAN RADIO POINTED OUT THAT RUSSIA AND GERMANY ARE BOUND IN TREATIES OF TRADE AND FRIENDSHIP AND THAT GERMANS THUS ARE INTERESTED IN SEEING THE UNITED STATES TAKE OFFICIAL STEPS TOWARD REESTABLISHMENT OF FRIENDSHIP WITH THE SOVIET.

"THIS GESTURE IS ALL THE MORE SIGNIFICANT SINCE IT IMPLIES THE APPROVAL OF THE SETTLEMENT OF THE POLISH PROBLEM AND THE OTHER EASTERN EUROPEAN TERRITORIAL QUESTIONS AT WHICH THE SOVIET ACTIVELY PARTICIPATED," THE RADIO ADDED.

WENDELL WILLKIE REACHES BERMUDA

Eager To Get To England, He Hopes To Return Home By February 18

Opinion Of Those On Clipper On Chances Of Nazi Invasion Of Britain Sought

[By the Associated Press]

Aboard the Transatlantic Yankee Clipper, Jan. 22—This Pan American clipper carrying Wendell L. Willkie to Europe for a first-hand study of conditions in England arrived at Bermuda today after a smooth five-hour flight from New York.

"If I felt better I would be dangerous," Willkie said as the ship landed.

He appeared as eager to reach England as a boy adventurer.

"The Presidential campaign plus England in the space of twelve months is a lot in a man's life," he said. "I feel mine is as rich as any man alive."

Book Of Verse And Prose

The man who was the Republican Presidential candidate in the November election chatted with those on board the plane, asking all their opinion on the chances of a Nazi invasion of England.

He spent part of the time reading a "knapsack" book of verse and prose such as the British soldiers carry. It includes, Willkie observed, everything from "Dover Beach" to the "Proverbs of Hell."

"I hope to return to America before my birthday, February 18," he said, "but I may have to spend it in England. I must see everything possible. Churchill will be the first man."

To Call On Churchill

He carried a letter of introduction from President Roosevelt to Churchill and has been invited by the latter to call on him as soon as he reaches England, probably Friday.

Due in Lisbon tomorrow, Willkie will board a British Overseas Airways plane for London.

He reiterated at the New York airport that he was not an envoy of any kind, but "an individual determined to find out what is going on."

He said he expected to be on the go sixteen to eighteen hours a day while in England, in an attempt to get a complete and accurate picture of wartime conditions there.

"I am going on this trip," he said, "because I believe so strongly in the survival of Britain, and I am convinced that a victory for England is the only thing that will keep us out of war.

". . . When I come back I hope to be able to make a frank, honest statement to the American people of what I saw and what I learned of conditions in England."

Willkie was accompanied by John Cowles, publisher of the Minneapolis Star-Journal, and Landon Thorne, retired New York investment banker.

Willkie toured Great Sound of Bermuda in a private motor launch with the Col ial Secretary, who showed him the base site originally leased to the United States and the newly leased Morgan's and Tucker's islands.

National City Bank To Close Its Harbin Branch In Manchoukuo

New York, Jan. 22 (AP)—The National City Bank of New York announced today its Harbin branch in Manchoukuo would close on February 15.

Bank officials said the importance of Harbin as a trade center had declined substantially since the branch was established 12 years ago. Harbin was formerly a large distribution center for goods going into the maritime provinces of Siberia and parts of Mongolia.

A Domei (Japanese news agency) wireless broadcast said that the Harbin (Manchoukuo) branch of the chartered Bank of India, Australia and China today applied to the economic Ministry of the Manchoukuo Government for permission to cease business. Preparations for withdrawal were started immediately.

Similar steps were expected to be taken by the Hongkong-Shanghai banking group.

Representatives of the chartered bank and the Hongkong-Shanghai Bank help direct the British-Chinese currency stabilization fund. The Chinese currency has declined sharply in relation to the United States dollar recently because of rumors the fund is near exhaustion.

Fall of Tobruk Means End Of Italy's Trap in Mediterranean

By DEWITT MACKENZIE.

Anglo-allied forces are striking fiercely and successfully at the Fascist armies in Africa as a counter to the Axis efforts to gain control of the Mediterranean and smash Britain before American help can make her safe.

The important Italian naval base of Tobruk on the Libyan coast has been stormed by the Army of the Nile and is reported in their hands, a victory of far-reaching consequence.

It means a further devastating blow at the already badly manhandled Fascist army under Marshall Graziani—cream of Mussolini's African fighters. This greatly adds to the threat that Italy's whole African empire may be lost to her in the operations now proceeding. But that isn't the whole story.

Tobruk has represented one-half of a nasty trap which the Italians had laid across Britain's life-line to and from the Suez Canal in the eastern Mediterranian. The other half lay on Leros, Dodecanese Islands.

These naval bases formed a great pair of pincers over a narrow part of the Mediterranean through which British shipping had to pass.

Crete Canceled Leros.

The effectiveness of Leros was nullified when the British occupied the island of Crete as a naval and air base at the outset of the Italian invasion of Greece. Now Tobruk has fallen and Tobruk Tom, the big naval gun which was wont to harrass British land forces and allied shipping at sea, is silent aboard the cruiser Giorgio, which lies a wreck on the hot sands of the harbor beach.

Should the British continue their conquests along Mussolini's military highway, which follows the Libyan coast for more than 1,100 miles clear to Tripoli, they will have erected a mighty barrier to Axis ambitions, for the Italians will have been deprived of all access to Africa by sea.

If the British decide to continue their offensive, the Italians may make a stand at Derna, some ninety miles to the west. However, the naval and air base of Bengasi, still farther west, is the next important strategic point.

One would expect Graziani to organize strong resistance there, since the fall of Bengasi would open up the road to Tripoli.

Relation to Rumania.

It would seem to be a far reach from Libya to the Rumanian upheaval, but the potentialities of this Balkan affair are such that we scarcely can dissociate it from the battle of the Mediterranean. The exact position in Rumania is obscure, but it appears that there have been disorders in which the radical Iron Guard has been involved and that the country now is under military rule, supported by German troops.

That is the simplest explanation of the position. We might guess that the trouble is part of a Nazi maneuver which contemplates the taking over of Rumania lock, stock and barrel by the Reich and that this roundabout method is employed to avoid an open break with Russia.

We shall be wise to wait for more facts, however, before dwelling on such a line of speculation.

Anyway, the point of immediate importance is that any disorder in the Balkans is bad for Hitler's program and contrary to his wishes. His game is to keep these fiery little States tranquil until such time as he may be impelled to make a military move himself.

His great need of the moment is to pave the way for spring agricultural production in this rich area, to feed a Europe which already is suffering hunger in many places.

War Communiques

British

CAIRO, Jan. 22 (AP).—A special communique tonight from British general headquarters:

Shortly after mid-day today, Australian troops entered Tobruk.

Mopping-up operations in the western section of the perimeter (of fortifications) are proceeding.

The remainder of the defenses are in our hands.

An earlier general headquarters communique:

Libya: By dusk yesterday evening our attack had penetrated the defenses of Tobruk to a depth of eight miles and our forward troops had firmly established themselves in positions directly overlooking and within three miles of the town of Tobruk itself. Today operations are again developing satisfactorily.

Sudan: In the Kassala sector our pursuit continued of Italian forces, which now have withdrawn over forty miles eastward of the frontier. East of Metemma, the enemy is also steadily giving ground in the face of our continued pressure.

Kenya: Enemy detachments which have been established on our side of the frontier since the outbreak of hostilities are everywhere being driven back by intensive patrol activities.

A Royal Air Force Middle East command communique:

In support of the army attack, bomber aircraft of the R. A. F. raided Tobruk during the night of Jan. 20-21. Bombs were dropped on anti-aircraft batteries, two of which ceased firing. Other bombs fell on the crossroads northeast of El Gubbi landing ground and violent explosions occurred among the buildings.

Our fighter patrols were very active throughout the day, but no contact was made with the enemy.

(Here a paragraph duplicated an R. A. F. communique from Athens concerning a raid on Elbasani.)

In Italian East Africa during the night of Jan. 20-21, Massaua was raided, the particular target being the power station and a large factory. The railway station at Aisha was attacked yesterday, bombs straddling the track and one direct hit being registered on a large building. Lorries containing troops near Adad were machine gunned. Several fires were started at Burye during a night raid on the camps and forts.

Aircraft of a Rhodesian squadron machine-gunned enemy motor transports on the road between Keru and Bishia, causing considerable damage, while aircraft of the South African air force carried out a successful raid on Iavello, where direct hits on enemy bombers were registered.

From all operations, including numerous reconnaissance flights, our aircraft returned safely.

Regarding the raid on Malta on Jan. 19 referred to in our communique of Jan. 20, it is now confirmed that the enemy losses were nine Junkers 87s, eight Junkers 88s, one CR42 and one Cant 506, making a total of nineteen planes.

LONDON, Jan. 22 (AP).—An Admiralty communique:

Units of the Mediterranean Fleet have continued actively to co-operate with our victorious army in the western desert. This co-operation has consisted not only of frequent bombardments of enemy positions, but also of the supply of large quanties of stores to our forward troops and of the removal by sea of prisoners and booty.

Prior to the occupation of Bardia, our forward troops were kept supplied with water landed from naval vessels. During one short period more than 3,000 tons of water were landed for use of our army in the Bardia area.

The capture of Bardia provided our army with a forward water supply, but transport problems of our troops continued to be very largely solved by naval co-operation. Large quantities of stores of all kinds and materials for our land and air forces have been landed daily on the Libyan coast.

More than 54,000 prisoners and many captured tanks in repairable condition have been taken back to our main bases by naval units.

These difficult operations, requiring careful organization and a high standard of seamanship on the part of the naval personnel, have been carried out without loss to our naval forces.

Units of the Royal Australian Navy have played a conspicuously successful part in these operations.

ATHENS, Jan. 22 (AP).—A Royal Air Force communique:

Military objectives at Elbasani (Albania) were attacked by bomber aircraft of the R. A. F. yesterday. High explosives and incendiary bombs fell in the target area, military buildings and railway lines being hit, while violent explosions were observed near the latter. Anti-aircraft opposition was encountered and enemy fighters were active. All our aircraft returned safely.

LONDON, Jan. 22 (AP).—An Admiralty communique:

The Board of the Admiralty regret to announce that H. M. Destroyer Hyperion (Com. H. St. L. Nicholson, D. S. O., R. N.) has been lost.

H. M. S. Hyperion sustained damage by a torpedo or a mine which rendered her incapable of steaming and she subsequently had to be sunk by our forces. The next of kin of the casualties have been informed.

Tonight's Air Ministry-Home Security Ministry communique:

Shortly before dawn this morning, enemy aircraft dropped bombs at a place on the coast of Kent. Very little damage was done and there were no casualties.

Later in the morning bombs were dropped by a single enemy aircraft at a place in the East Riding of Yorkshire. These also did little damage and no casualties are reported.

Two enemy bombers have been destroyed by fighters of the R. A.F. today.

This morning's Air Ministry-Home Security Ministry's communique:

There is nothing to report.

Greek

ATHENS, Jan. 22 (AP).—Tonight's Greek command communique:

There were local successful operations. One hundred and fifty prisoners and much war material have fallen into our hands. Our aviation successfully bombed targets on the battlefields. All our planes returned to their bases.

A communique of the Ministry of Home Security:

Enemy aviation bombed a rural district of Ioannina. There were no casualties and no damage.

According to a supplementary report from the police authorities, among those abducted by the Italians as hostages during their flight from Delvino are seventeen Greek notables, all inhabitants of Delvino. Their fate is unknown.

Italian

ROME, Jan. 22 (AP).—The Italian high command communique:

On the Greek front there were local actions in the 11th Army's sector. Numerous formations of bombing and dive-dombing planes pounded military preparations, roads, bridges and anti-aircraft and artillery emplacements with the greatest intensity. Military objectives at Salonika, Volos, Preveza and Corfu also were bombed effectively.

During the night of Jan. 20, bombing squadrons of the German Air Corps carried out raids on airports and port works of the base at Malta.

Enemy attack against the fortified City of Tobruk, which was completely encircled and pounded daily by artillery and airplanes for twenty days, began yesterday morning. It was preceded in the night by a naval bombardment which lasted until dawn, and was supported during the day by continuous raids by enemy bombing planes.

Three Australian divisions, reinforced by two regiments of heavy artillery, two armored divisions and one motorized formation of so-called dissident Frenchmen, were identified as taking part in the attack.

At the end of the day, after hard fighting, the enemy succeeded in penetrating the line of strongholds in the eastern sector of the fortified city.

In East Africa, the enemy sent out motorized forces in several directions which our detachments halted at predetermined points, inflicting considerable losses. Our air force participated actively in the fighting, bombing enemy motorized columns.

In the Aegean Sea, our bombing planes attacked steamers in the bay of one base. An oil tanker was hit.

German

BERLIN, Jan. 22 (AP).—The German high command communique:

Air reconnaissance over England and the Atlantic continued yesterday.

In this action, fighting planes successfully bombed war-vital targets at London and in southeastern England, such as a flyers' camp.

One enemy merchant ship was so badly bombed west of Ireland that the crew abandoned ship. A tugboat coming to her aid was sunk.

One of our planes is missing.

During the attacks on British merchant shipping, the combat group of Col. Daser sank 145,200 tons. Col. Daser himself was credited with 57,000 tons. Furthermore, this group damaged a large number of merchant vessels.

Winthrop Rockefeller Enters Army—At Head Of Procession

Photographed And Interviewed Before Disappearing Into Anonymity Of Draftee's Life

[By the Associated Press]

Fort Dix, N. J., Jan. 22—Winthrop Rockefeller, 28-year-old son of John D. Rockefeller, Jr., arrived here by train this afternoon to begin the year of United States Army duty for which he volunteered.

Aboard the train were about 500 other trainees from New York.

After a three-minute interview—granted by special permission of military authorities—Rockefeller marched to the initial receiving point where he disappeared into the life of an ordinary army recruit.

Marches At Head

On the short walk from the train to the receiving point young Rockefeller marched at the head of the column of trainees "for convenience sake," one officer said. This was to allow photographers to get pictures of him in his new life.

Tomorrow, post headquarters announced, he will be allowed to pose in uniform for photographers. After that he will be just another soldier for the next year, officials said.

"It's a little tough," said MacGuire, who was married last month, "but I'm in the army now and it will be fine training."

Strebeigh said nothing.

At 5.45 A. M. Rockefeller pulled his 6 feet and 2 inches out of bed, breakfasted, shook hands with the doorman of his apartment house and taxied to the army board headquarters. Promptly he became serial number 32,002,756, which he will retain through army life.

In Oil Business

"Occupation? I guess you might call it the oil business," he said, answering routine questions. "I am single . . . send my identification card to J. D. Rockefeller, 30 Rockefeller Plaza, New York, please."

Then he got down to the bare facts of a rigid physical examination. At 10.17 A. M., he took the oath of allegiance.

He sat in a large leather chair to talk to newspapermen before leaving. Above the chair was a framed sign on the wall.

Sign Over Chair

It read:

Worry chair.
Time limit: Four minutes.
Seating capacity: One troubled soul.
Line forms on the right.
Rockefeller was in the army.

Three Scions Of Wealth Join Army In One Day

New York, Jan. 22 (AP)—Three scions of the wealthy—a Rockefeller, a Butler and a relative of the Bonapartes—took on new jobs today at which they'll never get rich. They joined the army.

Winthrop Rockefeller, 28, heir to oil millions, passed his medical exams and headed for Fort Dix, N. J., with just enough cash to buy "cigarettes and a beer." He quit an $88-a-week job to volunteer.

"I think I'm doing the right thing," he said, adding, "I'll be very grateful for the army's long underwear."

Heir To Fortune

Undergoing the tests with him were James Butler MacGuire, 25, heir to a grocery fortune, and Lefferts Strebeigh, nephew of Mrs. Jerome Napoleon Bonaparte, a New York society leader.

Topping Takes Physical, Ready To Go If Wanted

Greenwich, Conn., Jan. 22 (AP)—Dan Topping, 29-year-old Greenwich millionaire sportsman and husband of Sonja Henie, today was among seventeen draftees who took physical examinations here ordered by army selective service officials.

Topping, owner of the Brooklyn Dodgers professional football club, said later, "If they want me, they can have me."

Henry Ford 2d Makes Out Draft Questionnaire

Detroit, Jan. 22 (AP)—Henry Ford 2d, 23-year-old grandson of Henry Ford, has filled out his draft questionnaire, Charles E. Briggs, chief clerk of board No. 57, said today, but he has not yet been classified.

The automobile manufacturer's namesake, son of Edsel Ford, holds local order No. 409. The board is to supply fifteen men in February and thirty in March. At the present rate Ford's name will not be reached for some months.

Ford is a director of the Ford Motor Company. He was married last July to Anne McDonnell, of New York city, following his graduation from Yale University.

VICHY,FRANCE,JAN. 22-(AP)-DESPITE CHIEF OF STATE MARSHAL PETAIN'S ANNOUNCEMENT THAT HIS "MISUNDERSTANDING" WITH PIERRE LAVAL HAS BEEN DISSIPATED, INFORMED SOURCES HERE QUESTIONED THE POSSIBILITY THAT THE FORMER VICE-PREMIER WOULD BE INCLUDED IN A NEW CABINET TO BE FORMED SOON.

NO OFFICIAL VERSION WAS OBTAINABLE OF WHAT TOOK PLACE BETWEEN THE TWO MEN IN THEIR MEETING JAN. 18 IN A RAILROAD CAR NEAR THE GERMAN OCCUPATION LINE, BUT SOURCES USUALLY AUTHORITATIVE INSISTED THE MARSHAL TOLD LAVAL HE WOULD NOT BE TAKEN INTO THE GOVERNMENT UNLESS GERMANY SO INSISTED.

INDICATIONS OF THIS INSISTANCE WERE CONTAINED IN REPORTS FROM PARIS YESTERDAY THAT ADOLF HITLER'S REPLY TO PETAIN'S CHRISTMAS EVE PROPOSALS FOR GERMAN-FRENCH COLLABORATION INCLUDED A DEMAND THAT LAVAL RETURN TO THE VICHY GOVERNMENT.

IN THE EVENT THAT HE IS, INFORMED PERSONS SAID, HE WOULD BE CONSIDERED A KIND OF "MINISTER FOR GERMANY" IN THE CABINET.

BEFORE HIS OUSTER ON DEC. 13, LAVAL WAS FOREIGN MINISTER AS WELL AS VICE-PREMIER AND HAD BEEN DESIGNATED BY THE ELDERLY MARSHAL AS HIS SUCCESSOR.

ONE VERSION OF THE LAVAL-PETAIN MEETING SAID THE FORMER THANKED PETAIN FOR COMING AND THE MARSHAL REPLIED THAT HE CAME ONLY AT THE REQUEST OF HIGH GERMAN OFFICIALS AND TO CHECK GROWTH OF FACTIONS FORMING AMONG FRENCHMEN.

IN ANSWER TO LAVAL'S DISCUSSION OF HIS POSSIBLE COLLABORATION WITH THE VICHY GOVERNMENT, PETAIN IS SAID TO HAVE DECLARED HE HAD LOST CONFIDENCE IN THE FORMER VICE-PREMIER AND TO HAVE TAKEN THE POSITION THAT HIS RETURN TO THE GOVERNMENT WAS IMPOSSIBLE.

THERE SEEMED ALMOST UNANIMOUS AGREEMENT IN INFORMED CIRCLES THAT THE PETAIN-LAVAL MEETING DID NOT CONCERN EITHER THE FRENCH FLEET OR FRENCH COLONIES.

PERSONS IN A POSITION TO KNOW SAID THAT, CONTRARY TO REPORTS ABROAD, EVEN THE GERMANS HAVE NEVER RAISED THE QUESTION OF TURNING OVER THE FLEET OR NAVAL BASES IN AFRICA TO THE AXIS.

UNDATE IRON GUARD-SIMA

TERRORISM LONG HAS BEEN THE ESTABLISHED POLICY OF THE RUMANIAN IRON GUARD WHICH IS THE CORE OF THE REVOLT AGAINST THE RUMANIAN GOVERNMENT NOW SWEEPING THAT BALKAN KINGDOM.

TH GUARD SURVIVED DISSOLUTION AND MASS SLAYINGS DURING KING CAROL'S REGIME IN AN ATTEMPT TO PURGE IT FROM RUMANIA. IT HAS HAD A HAND IN MANY KILLINGS OF ITS OWN IN RUMANIA AND ONLY LAST NOVEMBER EXACTED BLOODY REVENGE FOR THE DEATH OF ITS MARTYRED FOUNDER CORNELIU ZELEA CODREANU.

THE BASE OF THE PARTY, WHICH NOW IS REPORTED TO NUMBER APPROIMATELY 200,000 PERSONS, MANY SELF-APPOINTED, IS A VAST NUMBER OF TINY "CELLS" OF 10 TO 20 MEMBERS.

IT WAS RECRUITED LARGELY FROM AMONG DISPOSSESSED BOYARS (ARISTOCRATIC LAND-OWNERS), FROM BUCHARSART HIGH SOCIETY, AND FROM YOUNG PEOPLE, MANY UNEMPLOYED.

IT WAS THE ONLY PARTY THROUGH THE YEARS SINCE 1930 WHICH ADVOCATED CLOSE RELATIONS WITH GERMANY INSTEAD OF FRANCE.

ONE OF ITS MEMBERS ASSASSINATED PREMIER ION G. DUCA IN 1933 SOON AFTER DUCA ORDERED THE PARTY DISSOLVED. INTENSELY ANTI-SEMITIC, IT QUICKLY REAPPEARED AS THE "ALL FOR THE FATHERLAND" PARTY, AND LATER REGAINED ITS IRON GUARD IDENTITY.

IN NOVEMBER, 1938, FLORY S. GOANGA, RECTOR OF CLUJ UNIVERSITY WAS WOUNDED IN AN ATTACK ATTRIBUTED TO THE IRON GUARD AND SUPPRESSIVE MEASURES TOOK THE FORM OF MASS KILLING. THE GOANGA ATTACK WAS SAID TO HAVE BEEN INTENDED AS THE SPARK FOR REBELLION.

CODREANU AND 13 COLLEAGUES WERE IN PRISON THEN, SERVING SENTENCES ON TREASON CONVICTIONS GROWING OUT OF THE DUCA ASSASSINATION AND THE KILLING OF AN IRON GUARDIST ACCUSED OF BETRAYING THE MOVEMENT.

CODREANU WAS ACCUSED OF DIRECTING THE ALLEGED REBELLION FROM HIS CELL AND ON NOV. 30 1938, CODREANU AND THE OTHERS WERE KILLED THE OFFICIAL VERSION WAS THAT THEY DIED WHILE ATTEMPTING TO ESCAPE BUT THE COMON STORY WAS THAT THEY WERE STRANGLED IN PRISON.

ON SEPT. 21, 1939, THE GUARDISTS ASSASSINATED THEIR RELENTLESS FOE, PREMIER ARMAND CALINESCU.

IN RETALIATION, IRON GUARDS WERE EXECUTED." THE NUMBER WAS GIVEN OFFICIALLY AS 320 BUT OTHER FIGURES RAN TO NEARLY 2,000.

GERMAN COMPETITION DROPS SOMEWHAT (NO. 1. 920)

(EDITOR'S NOTE: AMERICAN AIRLINES ARE PLAYING AN EVER INCREASING PART IN THE EFFORTS TO BRING CLOSER COOPERATION BETWEEN NORTH AND SOUTH AMERICA. THE FOLLOWING IS THE FIRST OF THREE STORIES BY AVIATION EDITOR DEVON FRANCIS, OF THE ASSOCIATED PRESS, GIVING INTERESTING PHASES OF THE DEVELOPMENT. THE OTHER TWO STORIES WILL APPEAR IN (THE NAME OF YOUR NEWSPAPER) THURSDAY AND FRIDAY.)

BY DEVON FRANCIS
ASSOCIATED PRESS AVIATION EDITOR

(ADVANCE)-MIAMI, FLA., JAN 22--THROUGH THIS SEMI-TROPICAL PORTAL BETWEEN THE TWO VAST CONTINENTS OF THE WESTERN WORLD ARE PASSING TODAY THE MEN AND INFORMATION BEING EMPLOYED BY THE UNITED STATES IN AN EFFORT TO WIN OVER THE PEOPLES OF LATIN AMERICA TO A NEW CONCEPTION OF HEMISPHERE SOLIDARITY.

IT IS NO EASY JOB.

IDENTIFY YOURSELF AS AN "AMERICAN" TO ANY ONE OF THE 124,000,000 PERSONS LIVING IN THE AREA OF THE CARIBBEAN SOUTH TO CAPE HORN, AND YOU ARE LIKELY TO DRAW THE POLITE REPLY THAT THE HEMISPHERE IS DIVIDED.

THERE IS NORTH AMERICA AND THERE IS SOUTH AMERICA.

THE LATIN SAYS, "I, TOO, AM AN AMERICAN."

PROUD AND SENSITIVE, THE LATIN IS BOUND BY TIES OF LANGUAGE, CUSTOMS AND ECONOMY TO EUROPE.

THE EASTERNMOST POINTS IN SOUTH AMERICA, NATAL AND RECIFE, IN BRAZIL, ARE 2,600 MILES EAST OF NEW YORK CITY. THEY ARE ONLY 1,600

30.24—7113

MILES FROM BATHURST, FRENCH WEST AFRICA, AND 2,800 FROM LISBON. NEW YORK IS SEPARATED FROM LISBON BY 3,300 MILES, AND FROM BUENOS AIRES BY 4,600 MILES AS THE CROW FLIES.

A YOUNGSTER BROUGHT INTO MIAMI BY AN AIRLINE COMPANY FOR HANDYWORK AROUND THE OFFICE FROM A CARIBBEAN ISLAND ONLY A FEW HUNDRED MILES AWAY IS UNHAPPY AND OCCASIONALLY FRIGHTENED. HE FINDS IT HARD TO BRIDGE THE GULF OF LANGUAGE AND CUSTOMS BETWEEN TWO PEOPLES.

A LAD FROM SEATTLE, 2,600 MILES AWAY, WOULD BE MORE AT HOME HERE.

SOUTH AMERICA, PREDOMINANTLY AGRICULTURAL, REGULARLY WENT TO EUROPE BEFORE THE WAR STARTED TO FIND MARKETS FOR A TIDY PORTION OF ITS PRODUCTS, TAKING EUROPE'S MANUFACTURED PRODUCTS IN RETURN.

BRAZILIAN AND ARGENTINIAN MONEYED MEN SPENT THEIR VACATION MILREIS AND PESOS IN PARIS.

PLAYS PRESENTED IN THE FRENCH LANGUAGE IN RIO DE JANEIRO, SETTLED BY THE PORTUGUESE, DREW PACKED HOUSES.

BUT TODAY OFFICIAL WASHINGTON IS BENDING EVERY EFFORT TO CONSOLIDATE HEMISPHERE DEFENSE AND TO SOLVE THE KNOTTY ECONOMIC PROBLEMS OF THE CONTINENT TO THE SOUTH.

MIAMI IS A GATEWAY FOR SUCH A STREAM OF UNITED STATES GOVERNMENT AND BUSINESS MEN THAT AIRLINE RESERVATIONS MUST OFTEN BE MADE WEEKS IN ADVANCE.

THAT THE VISITS ARE BEING REPAID IN KIND BY LATIN AMERICANS IS INDICATED BY THE RECORDS OF THE CUSTOMS AND IMMIGRATION OFFICES.

IF, AS WILLIAM S. KNUDSEN, DIRECTOR OF PRODUCTION MANAGEMENT, HAS SAID, TIME IS THE ESSENCE OF THE UNITED STATES REARMAMENT JOB, IT IS ALSO THE ESSENCE OF THE JOB BEING DONE TO BRING THE NATIONS OF BOTH THE AMERICAS INTO CLOSER WORKING AGREEMENTS.

HENCE, THE TRAVEL BY AIR.

IT IS 18 DAYS BY BOAT FROM NEW YORK TO BUENOS AIRES AND 12 DAYS NEW YORK TO RIO DE JANEIRO. SAN FRANCISCO IS 20 DAYS FROM RIO DE JANEIRO.

BUT BOTH SAN FRANCISCO AND NEW YORK ARE ONLY FOUR DAYS FROM BUENOS AIRES BY AIR AND THREE DAYS FROM RIO DE JANEIRO.

IT IS ON THE SPEED OF THE AIRPLANE FOR QUICK COMMUNICATION, AND ON THE ARTIFICIAL RESTRICTIONS ON TRADE WITH EUROPE IMPOSED BY THE WAR, THAT THE CURRENT--AND PERHAPS TEMPORARY--ADVANTAGE ENJOYED BY THE UNITED STATES IN LATIN AMERICA RESTS.

OF ALL EUROPE, ONLY GREAT BRITAIN, TRADITIONALLY A BIG CUSTOMER, CONTINUES TO LAY COINS ON THE TRADING COUNTERS OF LATIN AMERICA.

OUR ADVANTAGE IN COMMUNICATION IS STRIKING.

BEFORE THE WAR BEGAN, FRENCH AND GERMAN PLANES REGULARLY PLIED BETWEEN BRAZIL AND EUROPE, VIA WEST AFRICA. THEIR PASSENGER TRAFFIC WAS INCONSEQUENTIAL, BUT THEY DID CARRY THE MAILS. AFTER FRANCE AND GREAT BRITAIN WENT TO WAR WITH GERMANY, BUT BEFORE ITALY'S ENTRANCE INTO THE CONFLICT, THE ITALIAN AIRLINE ALA LITTORIA BEGAN SERVICE ACROSS THE SOUTH ATLANTIC.

TODAY IT IS FLYING THE ROUTE ONCE A WEEK.

THE GERMANS AND FRENCH HAVE NO SCHEDULED AIR TRAFFIC TO SOUTH AMERICA. THE GOVERNMENT OF BRAZIL ONLY LATELY HAS TURNED DOWN A REQUEST BY THE GERMANS THAT THEY BE PERMITTED TO RE-ESTABLISH SERVICE.

THE UNITED STATES FLIES 6)AIRLINE TRIPS A WEEK TO LAT

THE UNITED STATES FLIES 24 AIRLINE TRIPS A WEEK TO LATIN AMERICA APART FROM THE COMMUTER SERVICE TO HAVANA AND THE AMERICAN-FLAG PLANES FLYING FROM LOS ANGELES AND BROWNSVILLE INTO MEXICO.

THE 70 PLANES DEPARTING FOR AND ARRIVING FROM HAVANA EACH WEEK MAKE THAT ROUTE THE WORLD'S BUSIEST INTERNATIONAL LINE.

THREE PLANES LEAVE LOS ANGELES, AND EIGHT LEAVE BROWNSVILLE, EACH WEEK BOUND FOR MEXICO AND CENTRAL AMERICA.

PAN AMERICAN AIRWAYS, THE ONLY UNITED STATES COMPANY WHICH, UP TO NOW, OPERATES AIRLINERS BETWEEN THE TWO CONTINENTS, HAS WITH ITS AFFILIATED COMPANIES 37,340 MILES OF ROUTES TO, AROUND AND WITHIN LATIN AMERICA. THAT INCLUDES BOTH MEXICO AND THE CARIBBEAN LINES.

THROUGH THE MIAMI GATEWAY ALONE IN 1940 THERE PASSED 77,000 AIR PASSENGERS. THAT WAS AN INCREASE OF 25 PER CENT OVER 1939.

A COMPETITIVE UNITED STATES COMPANY, AMERICAN EXPORT AIRLINES, FORMED ORIGINALLY TO FLY THE ATLANTIC, NOW IS KNOCKING AT THE DOORS OF SEVERAL LATIN AMERICAN NATIONS FOR ADMITTANCE.

UNLIKE STEAMSHIP COMPANIES, AN AIRLINE CANNOT ESTABLISH A SERVICE SIMPLY BY BUYING DOCKING FACILITIES IN THE PORT OF A FOREIGN NATION. IT MUST HAVE LANDING RIGHTS, ESTABLISHED BY HEMISPHERE AGREEMENT, IN ADDITION.

MEANTIME, PAN AMERICAN AIRWAYS, FIRMLY ENTRENCHED AS AN AIR CARRIER IN LATIN AMERICA BY FOURTEEN YEARS OF OPERATIONS WHICH BEGAN WITH A 90-MILE ROUTE BETWEEN KEY WEST AND HAVANA, IS ADDING FRESH SCHEDULES AND FASTER PLANES TO SPEED COMMUNICATION BETWEEN THE TWO CONTINENTS.

AT LEAST 16 INTER-AMERIC

CES ARE SCHEDULED N CTT EIT

AT LEAST 16 INTER-AMERICAN CONFERENCES ARE SCHEDULED FOR THE YEAR 1941. AMONG THE CITIES WHICH WILL BE HOSTS TO THEM ARE MONTEVIDEO, BOGOTA, LIMA, MEXICO CITY, SANTIAGO, QUITO, HAVANA, WASHINGTON AND NEW ORLEANS. THE TRANSPORT PLANE WILL CARRY MOST OF THE DELEGATES.

THE LATE WILL ROGERS ONCE REMARKED, "MIAMI IS THE SPRINGBOARD TO LATIN AMERICA."

A WORLD SITUATION WHICH FINDS THE UNITED STATES MARSHALLING BOTH ITS INDUSTRY AND ITS DIPLOMACY FOR A COLOSSAL JOB OF DEFENSE GIVES ADDED SIGNIFICANCE TO THE STATEMENT.

LINDBERGH SEES STALEMATE, SO URGES NEGOTIATED PEACE; DOUBTS AIR INVASION OF U. S.

HOPES NEITHER SIDE WILL BE VICTORIOUS

Terms Nazi Rule of Europe Unshakable at Present Even if We Enter Fight—Decries British Aid Policy.

Washington, Jan. 23 (A. P.).—Col. Charles A. Lindbergh asserted flatly today that even a combination of the United States and Great Britain could not win the European war on the present basis and he urged a negotiated peace. The flyer told the House Foreign Affairs Committee that he did not believe that "anything short of war or beyond war" would win the struggle unless there was a collapse behind the lines of one side or the other.

Col. Lindbergh asserted today that the European war probably would not have developed if the United States had given advance notice to Britain and France that she would not participate in any way. If both those countries had known that policy would be adhered to, he told the committee, "the chances were fairly good that an adjustment would have been made in Europe and the present war would not have taken place."

Prolonging War.

He claimed also that "our aid has prolonged the war" and added:

"I don't believe that a peace satisfactory to us can be worked out at present, but an attempt to bring it about would be a better alternative than prolonging the war."

Col. Lindbergh testified in opposition to the administration's lease-lend bill. Calling aid to Britain a mistake and urging a negotiated peace, he said that even a combination of the United States and Great Britain could not win the war on the present basis.

The combined forces of the two nations, he said, could not achieve victory by invading the European Continent—unless Germany first collapsed internally—and he declared it very doubtful that a blockade would force German submission.

Desire For Peace.

He declared his opposition to the bill because it was "a step away from democracy and one more step closer to war." Previously he had scoffed at transoceanic aerial invasion, accompanied by the landing of troops, as "utterly impossible."

Representative Eaton, Republican, of New Jersey, asked what position the United States might do toward bringing peace under present conditions. Col. Lindbergh said he was not prepared to answer, adding that the first step was to "create a desire for peace."

Mr. Eaton asked how there could be a negotiated peace since Hitler and his allies "propose to place their race in control of us" and create a new world order.

"I believe that we are strong enough to maintain our way of life regardless of what happens on the other side," the witness replied. "The only way for our system of life is defense at home and not to enter war abroad, where I doubt we could have much effect upon it."

No Economic Expert.

The Colonel said that while he was not an economic expert, he believed that "this nation and this hemisphere would be able to take care of itself economically and militarily—even in a devastated world—but less advantageously in a devasted world." He lacked up-to-date information about present German aviation resources, he said, but Germany could produce 20,000 planes of all types annually in 1938 and "this rate probably has been increased several-fold now."

Replying to a question by Representative Bolton, Republican, of Ohio, Col. Lindbergh said that he would be surprised if Germany had not by this time increased her airplane production capacity to at least 5,000 a month.

"It would take us several years to overtake German production," he added. Thus, entrance into any foreign war, Col. Lindbergh said, should be avoided, for regardless of what happened abroad this country and this hemisphere are strong enough to protect the New World.

He advocated the establishment of a string of air bases by this country and the creation of an air force of about 10,000 first-line planes and an equal number of reserves, exclusive of trainers. Such a force, he said, would "insure American security." Later it might be necessary to change the number, he said, bu that would depend on circumstances.

Mistake to Send Planes.

He told inquiring committeemen that the United States has nowhere near Germany's air force. It is a mistake to export warplanes when this country has such a lack of them, he added.

A share of fighting craft, estimated at 50 to 60 per cent or more, is going to Britain as fast as the ships are produced.

Col. Lindbergh also told Representative Vorys, Republican, of Ohio, that military planes would not become obsolete in the future as rapidly as they have in the past because they are approaching what appears to be an airplane's probably top speed—500 miles an hour. Mr. Vorys asked the witness if this country's policy of partial help had made it an object of contempt in England.

Col. Lindbergh replied that he thought this view was "partially true" and added that "we encouraged England to declare war to a partial extent."

For Negotiated Peace.

The flyer was asked by Representative Luther A. Johnson, Democrat, of Texas, if he ever had expressed sympathy "for one side or another."

"I prefer to see neither side win," the aviator replied quickly. "I prefer a negotiated peace; a victory on either side would result in prostration of Europe of a type we've never seen."

"It would be one of the worst things that could happen," he declared.

"Are you in sympathy with England against Hitler?" Mr. Johnson asked. "I'm in sympathy with the people—not their aims," Col. Lindbergh replied.

As for a transoceanic air invasion, accompanied by the landing of troops, Col. Lindbergh said that was "utterly impossible." Further, he said that while bombing raids from across the Atlantic could do "considerable damage on peacetime standards," in time of war the cost would be tremendous, "enemy losses would be large and the effect on our military position negligible."

Trans-Atlantic Raids.

Col. Lindbergh added that if an enemy planned the invasion of America, the route over Greenland was "one of the last he would consider." His survey of Greenland's coasts in 1933, the witness said, convinced him that one over Greenland would be the of "all the possible air routes between America and Europe, the most difficult to establish and operate."

In connection with transoceanic bombing, he said:

"Not only is such bombing ineffective theoretically, but from a practical standpoint it is interesting to note that not a single squadron of transoceanic bombing planes exists anywhere in the world today."

Col. Lindbergh said that he did not believe that it would be possible for either America or Europe to invade the other successfully "by air, or even by a combination of air, land and sea, unless an internal collapse precedes invasion."

Requested to elaborate this point, Col. Lindbergh reiterated that he did not believe that Germany could invade England unless there had been a previous collapse behind the lines and neither did he believe that England could invade the German-dominated European Continent—even with the United States as an ally—unless there had been a collapse in Germany. He said:

"That aviation will have a great effect on the future relationship of nations is beyond question, but we in America are possibly the most fortunate of all peoples in this respect. We have a country and climate well suited to the development of aircraft. We have natural resources, great industries, and a national psychology ideally adapted to the tempo of the air."

Size of Air Corps.

Discussing the size of his air force recommendation, Col. Lindbergh said:

"This number would, I believe, be adequate to insure American security regardless of the outcome of the present European war. Whether our air force should be increased or decreased in the more distant future will be decided by circumstances which we cannot foresee, but an industry capable of building and maintaining a 10,000-plane air force would, I believe, have adequate flexibility to meet any emergency with which we might be confronted in this hemisphere."

It is necessary, he declared, to establish clearly the difference between an air invasion where troops are landed and bombing raids where no attempts are made to establish bases on enemy territory. He called the two problems entirely different.

Defense of Alaska.

"There has never been an invasion of enemy territory by air alone," Col. Lindbergh said. "The two outstanding examples of what might be called a partial invasion were furnished by the German occupations of Norway and Holland, but in each of these instances, the landing of troops by air was carried on simultaneously with a ground army invasion on a major scale."

Col. Lindbergh asserted that if air invasion alone could be successful, "it would have been used by the Germans against England many months ago."

Though he emphatically declared air invasion of this country was impossible "at this time or any predictable future," Col. Lindbergh asserted that he believed that the United States should "wage war with all of our resources if an invasion of Alaska or any other portion of America were attempted, but a sudden air invasion of this country by way of Alaska is out of the question," he said.

"The conquest of Alaska would necessitate the movement of troops and supplies by ground and sea, the defeat of our own forces and the establishment of enemy bases. Even if that could be accomplished, there is little likelihood that the wilds of Canada could be crossed and the United States invaded by an army based upon remote Alaskan outposts of Asiatic or European Powers."

Pressed for amplification of his view on the number of planes which the United States should have, Col. Lindbergh explained that the 10,000 first-line fighting planes he mentioned would have to be bolstered by reserves of almost the same number, exclusive of trainers. When Representative Kee, Democrat, of West Virginia, asked if the United States should not match Germany's production, Col. Lindbergh replied: "Not unless we intend to invade other countries. Germany's program was preliminary to a major war."

After characterizing American aid to Britain as a mistake, Col. Lindbergh continued: "I think it is vital for us to bring about an end to the war as soon as possible. I don't think it would be possible for England to invade the continent and win the war. I think it would be impossible that England and the United States could invade the continent together unless an internal collapse came."

Insufficient Help.

"Our aid is not going to be sufficient," he said at another point, "and I believe we have encouraged a war in Europe that is not going to be successful."

Representative Shanley, Democrat, of Connecticut, asked if the lease-lend bill would not mean that the United States would "go into rewriting the map of Europe."

"It would be a step in that direction," Col. Lindbergh replied.

"Encouragement of the European war leaves us morally responsible for the loss of life in Europe."

Squirms at Question.

The tall, blond Lindbergh was settled comfortably in the witness chair as he responded to most questions. Sometimes he bent forward and put his lightly clasped hands on the table before him, talking earnestly.

Occasionally he would consider a reply extremely carefully, squirming a bit in his chair. That was the case when Representative Pfeifer, Democrat, of New York, asked if this country had not neglected Col. Lindbergh's reports several years ago that Germany was preparing a great air force.

Col. Lindbergh answered finally, haltingly, that "this country did not construct an air force as rapidly as advisable." The aviator said that he had thought from the start that the war would not "be successful on the basis on which it started."

When he asserted again that the United States and England together could not successfully invade the Continent unless a collapse preceded it, Mr. Pfeifer asked:

"Then Germany is sure to win?"

"She already controls the Continent," he replied.

30.24 — 7115

Why Not 'Our War.'

Col. Lindbergh gave four reason for his expressed view that "this is not our war":

1. The United States was given no opportunity to "take part in declaring this war."

2. European wars have continued for many years.

3. When the United States left Europe after the last war, "we logically took the stand that we would never participate in another."

4. Participation now would mean being a party to any peace discussions and "we would be taking part in European policies permanently."

Defense of Hemisphere.

Col. Lindbergh said that he believed it so essential for South American nations to be defended that it would be asy for the United States to get bases in the northern nations of South America. "It would be pretty poor for our diplomacy if we couldn't," he added.

"We can make any invasion practically impossible over a period of years," he said, "and there is no danger now." As to the danger of a European Power gaining a foothold in Brazil, endangering this country, Col. Lindbergh said that this raised the question of the degree of co-operation between this country and South America.

The United States, he continued, should make North America and the Panama Canal area impregnable and outlying air bases should extend as far south as the Amazon valley. He added that it would be desirable to have bases in Venezuela and Colombia and urged an air strength sufficient to raid the supply lines which any power might establish to South America.

Two-Ocean Navy.

In answer to another question by Representative Shanley, Col. Lindbergh said that even if Australia, New Zealand, the Philippines and other lands were in the hands of Germany, Italy, and Japan, "this hemisphere could defend itself.' He expressed favor for a two-ocean fleet and a continued national defense effort over a period of several years.

Representative Rogers, Republican, of Massachussets, inquired if Col. Lindbergh thought the nation was "well organized on national defense."

"I don't believe we are," he replied.

"For many years," he elaborated, "the nation had lived at peace with the world, when other nations began preparing for war, we were not preparing ourselves." Then, he said, "we woke up very suddenly," but the necessary changes for defense could not be made suddenly.

"The people have been divided or the question of a foreign war," he continued. "We are trying to keep out of the European war when that question should not have been brought before us.

"If there was no question of wars abroad, our defenses would have gone forward very much faster."

Against Sending Warships.

Col. Lindbergh said that he was opposed to this country sending any more of its navy to Britain, but he reiterated that he did not believe that the United States could arbitrarily cut off all further aid. Asked by Representative Pfeifer, Democrat, of New York, what this country should do in the present situation, Col. Lindbergh said:

"We should try to create an attitude of reception to a negotiated peace; stop shouting down any talk of peace, as we have been doing, and be open-minded on it." He said he thought that more objective information on actual conditions in Europe would eradicate a great deal of the fear of war current in this country.

In response to questions by Representative Eaton, Republican, of New Jersey, Col. Lindbergh told the committee that he was opposed to the lend-lease bill for two reasons:

"First, because I believe it a step away from democracy; second, because it's one more step closer to war and I don't know how many more we can take, short of war."

Asked point blank if he favored continued aid to Britain, he said that was "a very difficult" question, but he expressed the belief that inasmuch as the country had taken the stand on the issue, "we cannot very well justify" merely dropping that policy. The flyer then predicted that aid to Britain would "add to bloodshed" in Europe and expressed a doubt that it would greatly affect the outcome.

His 10,000-warplane figure compared with the approximately 25,000 planes of all types the army has on hand or on order and the 10,000-plane goal toward which the navy alone is working. President Roosevelt has announced a goal of 50,000 modern fighting planes, together with a production capacity of 50,000 a year.

Half an hour before the tall, blond aviator entered, the big hearing room was packed with people eager to see the man who made aviation history by flying alone from New York to Paris in 1927. When Col. Lindbergh concluded his statement, Representative Fish, Republican, of New York, said that it was one of the clearest he ever had heard.

Lindbergh's Views Win Big Headlines in London

No Editorial Comment Yet on His Opposition to Aid

LONDON, Jan. 24 (Friday) (AP).—News of Col. Charles A. Lindbergh's denunciation of the British-aid bill and his desire for strict United States neutrality was printed under big headlines in the British press today, but there was no immediate editorial comment.

"The Daily Herald" headline read: "'Should Regret British Win'—Lindbergh."

Over a double-column story, "The Daily Mirror" said: "Lindbergh Again."

"The News Chronicle" featured the testimony of the newspaper columnist, Hugh S. Johnson, with a headline: "U. S. May Be in War in 90 Days," giving secondary place to Col. Lindbergh's testimony.

"The Times" headline said: "Colonel Lindbergh Wants Draw."

"The Daily Mail," first British newspaper to carry a report of Col Lindbergh's statement, put the story on the back page today under the three-column headline: "Lindbergh's 'No' to British Aid."

Nazis Have No Story

BERLIN, Jan. 24 (Friday) (AP).—Up to last midnight, no German newspaper carried anything about Col. Charles A. Lindbergh's statement. D. N. B., German news agency, had distributed nothing.

Question Put to Attlee On Kennedy's Views

Envoy 'Had No Earthly Idea' of Britain's Aims

LONDON, Jan. 23 (AP).—Maj Clement Richard Attlee, Lord Privy Seal, was asked in the House of Commons today by Sir Francis Fremantle, Conservative, if he had seen reports in the papers of Mr. Joseph Kennedy's speech which showed he had no earthly idea what our war aims were"

[Fremantle apparently referred to the recent testimony by Mr. Kennedy, retiring American Ambassador to the Court of St. James's, before the Foreign Affairs Committee of the House of Representatives.]

Ben Smith, Laborite, interjected, "That's why he talks so much."

Attlee said he was answering questions "dealing with the war effort, not the war aims."

Lindbergh's Statement on Bill

By The Associated Press

WASHINGTON, Jan. 23.—The text of Col. Charles A. Lindbergh's statement before the House Foreign Affairs Committee today follows:

I understand that I have been asked to appear before this committee to discuss the effect of aviation upon America's position in time of war. I believe that this effect can be summed up briefly by saying that our position is greatly strengthened for defense and greatly weakened for attack.

I base this statement upon two facts: first, that an invading army and its supplies must still be transported by sea; second, that aviation makes it more difficult than ever before for a navy to approach a hostile shore.

In support of these facts, I cite, for the first, the minute carrying capacity of aircraft in relation to the weight of equipment and supplies required for a major expeditionary force; and for the second, the experience of the British Navy off the Norwegian coast and in the North Sea.

I do not believe there is any danger of an invasion of this continent, either by sea or by air, as long as we maintain an army, navy and air force of reasonable size and in modern condition, and provided we establish the bases essential for defense.

For 10,000 Modern Planes

How large our air force should be in actual numbers depends, of course, upon conditions in other parts of the world. Because of the existing European crisis, I should say that we would be wise to construct as rapidly as possible a total air force of about 10,000 thoroughly modern fighting planes plus reserves.

This number would, I believe, be adequate to insure American security regardless of the outcome of the present European war. Whether our air force should be increased or decreased in the more distant future will be decided by circumstances which we cannot now foresee. But an industry capable of building and maintaining a 10,000-plane air force would, I believe, have adequate flexibility to meet any emergency with which we might be confronted in this hemisphere.

Accompanying this expansion of our air force should be the construction of aviation bases in Newfoundland, Canada, the West Indies, parts of South America, Central America, the Galapagos Islands, the Hawaiian Islands and Alaska. Secondary bases might be placed in parts of Greenland but, in my opinion, Greenland is not of primary importance from the standpoint of aviation bases.

Since many people are discussing the possibility of an air invasion of America, I would like permission to bring a few points to your attention in this connection. It is first necessary to establish clearly the difference between an air invasion where troops are landed and a bombing raid where there is no attempt to establish a base on enemy territory. I will treat these two problems separately, for they are entirely different.

There has never been an invasion of enemy territory by air alone. The two outstanding examples of what might be called a partial air invasion were furnished by the German occupations of Norway and Holland. But in each of these instances, the landing of troops by air was carried on simultaneously with a ground army invasion on a major scale. The maximum number of troops that could have been transported and supplied by air would have been ineffective without the immediate support of a ground army. If air invasion alone could be successful it would have been used by the Germans against England many months ago.

Air Invasion Dismissed

It is important to note that the transport of troops by air in Europe has been over a distance of a few hundred miles at most. An air invasion across the ocean is, I believe, absolutely impossible at this time, or in any predictable future. To be effective in America, enemy aircraft would have to operate from bases in America, and those bases would have to be established and supplied by sea. Aircraft alone are not capable of carrying a sufficient quantity of material.

Claims have been made that America might be subject to air invasion by way of Alaska or Greenland, where the distance between land is short. But such claims overlook the difficulties of climate and terrain in these semi-Arctic areas. If air routes to Asia and Europe through the north were preferable to the greater over-water distances farther south, they would have been used years ago by commercial air lines.

It is, of course, essential for us to maintain defense basis in Alaska. I believe that we should wage war with all of our resources if an invasion of Alaska or any other portion of America were attempted. But a sudden air invasion of this country by way of Alaska is out of the question. The conquest of Alaska would necessitate the movement of troops and supplies by ground and sea, the defeat of our own forces and the establishment of enemy bases. Even if that could be accomplished, there is little likelihood that the wilds of Canada could be crossed and the United States invaded by an army based upon remote Alaskan outposts of Asiatic or European powers.

If an enemy were planning on an invasion of America, I believe that the route over Greenland is one of the last he would consider. I spent several weeks in Greenland in the summer of 1933, surveying the coasts for air bases and studying the conditions that would be encountered in operating a northern air route. I came to the conclusion that of all the possible air routes between America and Europe, the one over Greenland would be the most difficult to establish and operate. Except for a rugged and mountainous strip around the coast, Greenland is covered with ice. The climate is uncertain and severe, the summer season is short and the seas are filled with ice during the entire year.

The question of transoceanic bombing is, as I have said, entirely different from that of air invasion. It is, of course, perfectly possible, today, to build bombing planes that could cross the ocean, drop several tons of bombs and return to their starting point. Transoceanic bombing raids could do considerable damage on peacetime standards, but they would have very little effectiveness on war-time standards. The cost of transoceanic bombing would be extremely high, enemy losses would be large, and the effect on our military position negligible. Such bombing could not begin to prepare the way for an invasion of this continent. If England is able to live at all with bases of the German air force less than an hour's flight away, the United States is not in great danger across the Atlantic Ocean. Not only is such bombing ineffective theoretically, but from a practical standpoint it is interesting to note that not a single squadron of transoceanic bombing planes exists anywhere in the world today.

I have, up to this point, attempted to show that aviation strengthens the defensive position of America, first, because it is impossible for an enemy to invade this continent by means of aircraft alone; second, because transoceanic bombing is indecisive; third, because our own air force makes it more difficult than ever before for an enemy to approach our shores. However, I believe we are faced with the reverse situation when we contemplate sending our military forces abroad. Almost every advantage we have in defense would be a disadvantage to us in attack. It would then be our problem to cross the sea in ships and force a landing against the established air bases of our enemy.

If one studies the situation objectively it becomes obvious that there are three great centers of air strength in the world today: the United States, Germany and Japan. Up to the present time we have led in the development of commercial aviation; Germany has led in the development of military aviation, and Japan has led in the development of aviation in the Orient.

Orient Far Behind

Since Oriental aviation is far behind that of Western nations, one might say that there are two great aviation powers, one in America and one in Europe. Personally I do not believe it is possible for either America or Europe to invade the other successfully by air or even by a combination of air, land and sea unless an internal collapse precedes invasion. In this sense aviation has added to America's security against Europe and to Europe's security against America. One might sum the matter up by saying that aviation decreases the security of nations within a continent against each other, but increases the security of the continent as a whole against foreign invasion.

That aviation will have a great effect on the future relationship of nations is beyond question. But we in America are possibly the most fortunate of all peoples in this respect. We have a country and climate well suited to the development of aircraft. We have natural resources, great industries and a national psychology ideally adapted to the tempo of the air.

In conclusion I would like to say that aviation is to us unquestionably an asset. It greatly strengthens our position and increases the security of this entire hemisphere from foreign attack.

Lindbergh's Views Win Big Headlines in London

No Editorial Comment Yet on His Opposition to Aid

LONDON, Jan. 24 (Friday) (AP).—News of Col. Charles A. Lindbergh's denunciation of the British-aid bill and his desire for strict United States neutrality was printed under big headlines in the British press today, but there was no immediate editorial comment.

"The Daily Herald" headline read: "'Should Regret British Win'—Lindbergh."

Over a double-column story, "The Daily Mirror" said: "Lindbergh Again."

"The News Chronicle" featured the testimony of the newspaper columnist, Hugh S. Johnson, with a headline: "U. S. May Be in War in 90 Days," giving secondary place to Col. Lindbergh's testimony.

"The Times" headline said: "Colonel Lindbergh Wants Draw."

"The Daily Mail," first British newspaper to carry a report of Col. Lindbergh's statement, put the story on the back page today under the three-column headline: "Lindbergh's 'No' to British Aid."

Gen. Arnold Says U. S. Will Have 10,000 Planes

Comments on Lindbergh's Defense Statement

BOSTON, Jan. 23 (AP).—American "national air defense contemplates a force of about 10,000 planes to be reached at some future date," Maj. Gen. Henry H. Arnold said today after he was informed of Col. Charles A. Lindbergh's statement that 10,000 first-line planes and equal reserves were needed for American "security."

Gen. Arnold, Deputy Chief of Staff of the United States Army, would not specify the date.

Asked during an interview whether he agreed with Col. Lindbergh's testimony before the House Foreign Affairs Committee on the lend-lease bill that such a number of planes would insure "security," Gen. Arnold replied that he was not prepared to say what constituted national security with respect to air defense.

Commencing on Col. Lindbergh's advocacy of an American "string of air bases," Gen. Arnold said: "The present national policy for Western Hemisphere defense contemplates an air defense extending from Newfoundland to North and South America, to the Hawaiian Islands and Alaska."

GEN. JOHNSON CALLS US SAFE

Terms Two Oceans Wider Than 22 Miles.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 23 (A. P.).—Hugh S. Johnson, columnist, told the House Foreign Affairs Committee late today that he was opposed to the administration's lend-lease bill because it constituted a "defensive and offensive alliance" with Great Britain. The former chief of NRA testified after Col. Charles A. Lindbergh had completed more than four hours' testimony.

Gen. Johnson told Representative Fish, Republican, of New York, he believed that no nation could attack the United States.

"I don't see why the people should begin to turn up their noses at 3,000 miles in the Atlantic and 5,000 in the Pacific," he said, "when we see the trouble Mr. Hitler has been having with twenty-two miles. Our position should be one of strengthening ourselves and not plunging into a situation that we couldn't control in the future."

At one point, Gen. Johnson told the committee that "if we're not careful, we're going to be in this war in thirty to ninety days—possibly on the north coast of Africa or the West Coast."

Taft Has Substitute.

While the hearing went forward, Senator Taft, Republican, of Ohio, at the other side of the Capitol, proposed substitute legislation for the aid-to-Britain bill under which this country would lend Britain $1,000,000,000, Canada $500,000,000 and Greece $50,000,000. Another substitute measure was proposed by Senator Johnson, Democrat, of Colorado.

It would permit the Government to lend $2,000,000,000 worth of war materials to Britain and receive in return only periodic reports as to how the equipment functioned under battle conditions. Senator Johnson said that such an arrangement would give the army and navy valuable information.

Senator Taft's bill would eliminate all extraordinary powers which would be granted to the President under the lease-lend measure and would give the Reconstruction Finance Corporation authority, on the request of the President and the Federal Loan Administration, to make the designated loans to Britain, Canada and Greece. Senator Taft said that the security should be required unless the loan administration "finds it is not practical for the borrower to give it."

The bill would authorize repayments in ships or other property instead of dollars.

The House committee will begin private consideration of amendments Monday, the same day the similar Senate group starts its hearings. In preparation for the Senate hearings, Senator George, Democrat, of Georgia, and a sub-committee asked Secretaries Hull, Morgenthau, Stimson and Knox to a strategy conference this afternoon.

Those four officials told the House committee last week that the measure was essential not only to rush help to the British Isles but as a defense precaution for the United States.

As the time drew nearer for congressional debate on the legislation, it appeared that critics would make one of their greatest efforts in trying to limit the proposed presidential authority to a certain period, perhaps two years.

Senator Norris, Independent, of Nebraska, was among those advocating such a restriction.

OUR POLICY SUICIDE, HUTCHINS DECLARES

Country Drifting Into War With President 'Reconciled' to It, He Asserts in Radio Talk

WARNS US TO REMAIN OUT

Meanwhile, 125 of the Chicago Faculty Back Lease-Lend Bill and Roosevelt Power

CHICAGO, Jan. 23 (AP)—Dr. Robert M. Hutchins, president of the University of Chicago, said tonight that he believed "the American people are about to commit suicide" by drifting into a war for which they were "morally and intellectually unprepared."

"The conclusion is inescapable," he said, "that the President is reconciled to active military intervention if such intervention is needed to defeat the Axis in this war.

"I have supported Mr. Roosevelt since he first went to the White House. I have never questioned his integrity or his good-will. But under the pressure of great responsibilities, in the heat of controversy, in the international game of bluff, the President's speeches and recommendations are committing us to obligations abroad which we cannot perform.

"The effort to perform them will prevent the achievement of the aims for which the President stands at home."

The educator, speaking over the National Broadcasting Company's Red network, cited recent utterances of President Roosevelt defining the American goal as "a world founded on freedom of speech, freedom of worship, freedom from want and freedom from fear." He added:

"I hold that the United States can better serve suffering humanity everywhere by staying out" of the wars in Europe and Asia.

Criticizes Lease-Lend Bill

"We used to hear of 'all aid short of war.' The words 'short of war' are ominously missing from the President's recent speeches. The lease-lend bill contains provisions that we should have regarded as acts of war up to last week."

Dr. Hutchins emphasized that in this, his "first public questioning" of President Roosevelt, he was speaking "simply as an American citizen, and said that he wished to dissociate himself from "all Nazis, Fascists and appeasers." He added:

"I regard the doctrine of all totalitarian regimes as wrong in theory, evil in execution and incompatible with the right of man. I wish to dissociate myself from those who want us to stay out of war to save our own skins or our own property," he went on. "National selfishness should not determine national policy."

"We are told that we are going to have to fight the Axis some time. Why not fight it now, when we have Britain to help us?

"We cannot assume that any combination of powers can successfully invade this hemisphere if we are prepared to defend ourselves and determined to be free. There is no such inevitability about war with the Axis as to prevent us from asking ourselves whether we shall serve suffering humanity better everywhere by going into this war or by staying out.

Sees Help to Humanity at Stake

"The chances of accomplishing the high moral purpose which the President has stated for America, even if we stay out of war, are not bright, but we have a chance to help humanity if we do not go into this war. If we do go into it, we have no chance at all.

"The reason why we have no chance to help humanity if we go into this war is that we are not prepared. I do not mean, primarily, that we are unprepared in a military sense. I means that we are morally and intellectually unprepared to execute the moral mission to which the President calls us.

"If we stay out of war, we may perhaps some day understand and practice freedom of speech, freedom of worship, freedom from want and freedom from fear. We may even be able to comprehend and support justice, democracy, the moral order and the supremacy of human rights. Today we have barely begun to grasp the meaning of the words."

125 of Faculty Back Roosevelt

Special to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

CHICAGO, Jan. 23—A statement issued tonight by 125 members of the faculty of the University of Chicago urged the immediate enactment of President Roosevelt's lease-lend bill. The statement came a short time before Dr. Hutchins, the university president, made a radio address opposing our entry into the war.

Made public by the Chicago Committee to Defend America by Aiding the Allies, the statement asserted that the bill "will empower our democratically elected Chief Executive to take all necessary measures to prevent the national disaster which threatens us as long as Hitler remains undefeated."

Many Americans, the statement said, "refuse to realize that should we permit Britain to perish, the Nazi tyranny would threaten our world, too."

"The Nazis know that the triumph of fascism remains incomplete as long as the existence of a free America can give the lie to Hitler's boast that democracy is dead," the statement said.

14,000 Taken By British in Tobruk's Fall

Nazis Get Warning On African Landing

De Gaulle Says Empire Will Revolt if Germans Try to Seize Bizerte

By The Associated Press

CAIRO, Jan. 23.—Great Britain's armies sent patrols farther into Italian Libya today, testing the prospects for a continuation of the spectacular desert offensive, and reported more than 14,000 prisoners taken in the capture of the Italian base of Tobruk.

The fall of Tobruk was described by the British as a major Fascist disaster. The town, with the only good natural harbor in Libya, now becomes a base to supply their advancing troops. The Italian casualties there were said to be at least thirty-two times those of the British.

Aside from the Italian prisoners taken—and in listing these as above 14,000 the British command used the qualifying term "so far"—2,000 Italian wounded were being removed today, a general headquarters communique said. These Italian losses did not include an undetermined number of killed in action. The British put their own casualties as "under 500."

Among the Italian prisoners were listed four generals, including a corps commander and a division commander; an admiral and "a number" of senior army and navy staff officers. About 200 Italian guns were reported captured, along with a vast quantity of other war material.

Sixteen Generals Captured

British sources said sixteen Italian generals in all and at least 99,000 other Italian prisoners had been taken since the present offensive began and that the Italian dead, wounded and missing would total about 10,000.

While the main British forces were completing consolidation work at Tobruk motorized units darted beyond, making the same sort of reconnaissance as preceded the general attack Tuesday on Tobruk itself. They were reported to have reached positions in the region of Derna, next important Fascist base to the west and ninety-five miles from Tobruk.

Heavy raids on Derna were reported by the Royal Air Force. Barracks and "other military targets" were declared to have been struck by tons of bombs. In other R. A. F. operations, last night and early today, the British were said to have bombed airdromes at four points in Sicily, including the supposed main German dive-bomber base at Catania.

In Italian Eritrea, British headquarters here said, British troops were "in contact" with the Italian forces already driven back from the frontier of the Anglo-Egyptian Sudan. The Italians were declared to be attempting to hold two major positions, at Viscia and Varentu, but, the British command asserted, "operations continue to develop successfully."

On the Ethiopian front British imperial troops maintained their "pressure" on the Italians, it was said, and from Kenya Colony British patrols continued their offensive.

Patrols In Derna Area.

London, Jan. 23 (A. P.).—With Tobruk wrested from the Italians, military sources here declined today to speculate on the future course of the Libyan offensive, but said that advanced British patrols already had advanced to positions in the Derna-Mekili area, west of Tobruk. Derna is located on the coast about ninety-five miles west of Tobruk.

The British also were reported to have command of airports at El Adem, El Gazala and El Tmimi.

and the seaplane base at Bomba. All these can be used as British bases after some clearing up has been done, it was said.

With the advance of the mechanized units operating in the vicinity of Mekili, the British could take a short cut across an inland road along the coast, it was said, and attempt to isolate Derna, Apollonia and other towns on the coastal hump.

There was no indication here of how strong the Italian forces holding Mekili are, but military observers said that the force was believed nothing like as large as were those at Tobruk. Mekili is at the junction of highways, one of which cuts across the hump inland to Bengasi and others lead to Derna and Apollonia.

The British military reported that more than two divisions of Italian troops had been captured at Tobruk, together with a large amount of booty, bringing to about 100,000 the total number of prisoners taken so far in the North African campaign.

May Even Exceed 100,000.

It was said that, with the fall of Tobruk, the British had "captured, destroyed or disintegrated" eleven Italian divisions in the desert campaign. It was made plain that the estimate of 100,000 prisoners "is merely an estimate and the number may run higher or lower." Italian divisions ordinarily average about 12,000 men.

In occupying Tobruk, the British said, their forces captured the headquarters of the Twenty-second Italian Army Corps and the commanding general, as well as the general commanding the fixed defenses of the town. This brought to fourteen the total number of Italian generals so far reported captured in the North African offensive.

When the British got into Tobruk, it was said, they found three ships burning in the harbor, one of them a large liner. Booty seized was said to have included tanks, motor vehicles and large quantities of ammunition.

25,000 Reported Captured

London, Friday, Jan 24 (AP)—Percy C. Spender, Australian army minister, said he had received a cable from Lieutenant General Sir Thomas Blamey saying 25,000 Italian prisoners had been taken at Tobruk, Libya, an exchange telegraph dispatch from Sydney said today. It was said Australian casualties "would not exceed 300."

Heavy Blasts Reported After Bombings In Sicily

Cairo, Egypt, Jan. 23 (AP)—R. A. F. bombers last night attacked the airdrome at Catania, Sicily, where German dive bombers are based, and heavy explosions and fires occurred near the runway and hangars, a communique said.

At Comiso, the communique said, "a quantity of incendiary and explosive bombs was dropped, causing explosions which continued for twenty minutes. Bombs were also dropped on Augusta airdrome, but the results were not fully observed, owing to low clouds. Several large explosions occurred in Syracuse and fires were started south of the bay.

"Other aircraft attacked the airdrome at Catania and several fires and explosions took place near the runway and hangars.

"One stick of bombs landed in the middle of the railway junction north of the airdrome. A particularly heavy explosion occurred, followed by fires with heavy black smoke.

"All our aircraft returned safely."

Foe Five Times As Strong, Is Alibi Given By Rome

Rome, Jan. 23 (AP)—Italians were told today that their broken garrison at Tobruk had to face "the maximum active weight of the English and French imperialist forces" and that the defenders of the fortified Libyan seaport were outnumbered almost 5 to 1.

The high command acknowledged that the British had entered Tobruk from the east, but said some Italians still were fighting at the western edge of the town. The attackers were declared to have suffered "especially severe losses."

Italians said they had scuttled the 35-year-old cruiser San Giorgio, which had been serving in the harbor as a floating anti-aircraft battery. The ship was blown up with dynamite by its crew.

Gayda Stresses French Role

The Fascist editor, Virginio Gayda, stressed the part he said was played by "Free French" detachments in the assault. He also asserted: "The events of Tobruk were foreseen" by the Italian high command and "they cannot substantially change the course of the war."

He identified the French participants as a unit first sent to Cyprus, later to Syria and finally to the Tobruk front under Gen. Georges Catroux, whom the Vichy Government has ordered stripped of French citizenship because of his allegiance to the "Free French" cause.

The high command asserted that the attackers used five full divisions against a garrison containing but one division plus sailors and frontier guards; that there was "very bitter fighting," and that, when Australian shock troops broke through to inhabited parts of Tobruk, "everything was aflame."

Anzacs Knock Down Bars, March In And Take Tobruk

Attackers, Prepared For Bitter Battle, Are Surprised At Ease With Which Italian Base Finally Falls

By EDWARD KENNEDY
Associated Press Correspondent

Tobruk, Libya, Jan. 22 (Delayed)—The unexpectedly early capitulation of Tobruk today made it unnecessary for the British to carry out their elaborate plan of attacking the base from three directions.

Tobruk fell without real resistance after yesterday's fierce and well organized fighting by the British and Australians had broken outer defenses.

When the attackers approached, prepared for bitter fighting, all they found before them—outside of two rattles of machine-gun fire which died away as though from lack of interest—was a barricaded road.

Simply Knock Down Bars

The British and Australians got down from their vehicles, knocked down the bars and entered the strangely quiet city where many men were waiting to be captured, bringing the haul of prisoners in the Tobruk region to about 20,000.

The real fight took place yesterday when the Australians opened a gap in the strongly fortified perimeter and British tanks and Australian infantry charged in, braving heavy artillery fire.

Tobruk, a pleasant town sandwiched between the desert and the Mediterranean, was choked by a dense pall of smoke as the Australians entered.

By Tuesday night a large part of the hundred-square-mile area within the perimeter had been occupied, more than 10,000 prisoners taken and Tobruk had surrendered.

Guns Remain In Action

Italian guns of the town and port and the outlying sections remained in action through the night, however.

Whether the Italian command gave the order for surrender or the Italian soldiers did so on their own account was uncertain.

At any rate, the Italians began to prepare for the fall earlier by destroying property of military value. This was the chief cause of a great fire and most of the damage to the city.

Cruiser Set Afire

The old cruiser San Giorgio, which had been run ashore and used as a harbor fort since it was damaged in a British air raid early in the war, was set afire, its boilers blown up, and tonight it was still blazing.

The big liner Marco Polo, formerly in the China service, likewise was blazing in the harbor. A submarine was sunk, the victim of British bombs, and a score of smaller ships were either submerged or in flames.

Oil belching from pipes running down to the harbor also was flaming.

The radio station was wrecked.

Among the prisoners were the admiral commanding the port and four generals, three of whom were found with several hundred officers and men in a big air-raid shelter under Tobruk's main square.

Among the prisoners were 1,500 naval men from the San Giorgio or from Tobruk's big guns and coast defenses.

Like 80,000 Italians previously captured in this campaign, most of the men appeared resigned, but the naval men seemed more affected. Some wept as they were marched away.

Many started off with heavy luggage, but soon dropped it at the roadside.

British Care For Wounded

There were many Italian wounded on the ground being cared for by the British as quickly as facilities would permit, but the task was staggering considering that the British railhead is almost 200 miles away and that the desert roads are bad.

This correspondent tried to help one badly wounded man. He feebly waved me away, intent on dying in peace. I saw him shortly afterward dead, his blue fingers clutching a crucifix.

Every British soldier has a steel helmet but in all this campaign it was not until Tobruk that Italian helmets were seen.

Ride Scooters In Parade

This afternoon the Australians paraded the streets of Tobruk, relaxed after their battle. Some rode captured bicycles and scooters.

British tanks rolled through the main streets, flying captured Italian flags. Italian officers, marching by in prisoners' lines, saluted the flags.

But there was no flag on the main staff of the town. Hanging from it, instead, was the brim-bent hat of an Australian soldier.

Surrender To U. S. Reporter

By EDWARD KENNEDY
Associated Press Correspondent

Tobruk, Libya, Jan. 22 (Delayed)—So many Italian prisoners have been taken in the capture of Tobruk that handling them is a serious problem.

I am the only American covering the campaign, but in a war correspondent's uniform I am mistaken for a British officer. Consequently dozens of Italians have surrendered to me.

This poses a question as to whether under the Neutrality Act an American is allowed to capture prisoners.

Usually I have solved the problem by turning them over to a British colleague or directing them to the spot where they may be officially captured.

HAILE SELASSIE REPORTED BACK INSIDE ETHIOPIA

Coordinates Activity Of His Men With British Military Mission

Emperor Without Empire Had Directed Resistance To Italians

[By the Associated Press]

Cairo, Egypt, Jan. 23—Haile Selassie has been inside his old Ethiopian kingdom since January 15, it was officially disclosed tonight.

The Ethiopian Emperor, without an empire for five years since the Italians invaded his country, previously was reported at Khartoum, Anglo-Egyptian Sudan.

There at an improvised court he received Ethiopian chieftains who slipped across the border to meet him. There, it was said, he took a hand in directing native resistance to the Italians in his former kingdom.

British Raising Army

A small British mission has been deep in the interior of Ethiopia for months raising a black army and drilling it despite efforts by the Italians to locate and destroy the group.

Wearing the uniform of a field marshal of the Ethiopian army, the Negus drove across the Sudan border into Ethiopia and is somewhere in the heart of his country coordinating the activities of its patriots with the work of the British military mission.

By The Associated Press

SOMEWHERE IN ETHIOPIA, Jan. 15 (via Khartum, delayed).—Former Emperor Haile Selassie, accompanied by Ras Kassa, an Ethiopian chieftain, by the highest dignitary of the Ethiopian Church and by a British liaison officer, arrived here today from his Sudan headquarters for his great adventure—an effort to regain the throne that he lost to Italy five years ago.

Haile Selassie's enthusiasm was apparent as he caught the first view of his native land. He showed a keen interest in official papers and discussion of last-minute plans with the liaison officer as his airplane reached the frontier, where a representative unit of his growing Ethiopian army awaited his arrival, ready to accompany him to an advance headquarters in the interior.

A British staff major greeted the Emperor and his party when they landed at a secret landing ground prepared by Ethiopian troops. British military missions already are established in various Ethiopian sectors.

In response to a message read by the liaison officer in the presence of Ethiopian leaders Haile Selassie asserted: "I am entering Ethiopia with the full confidence of assistance from the British government and allied forces in order to crush a common enemy. I am undertaking a very great task, which I hope to carry out successfully with the aid of my allies and forces."

THEN, WITH THE CROWN PRINCE AT HIS SIDE, HE RAISED THE RED, YELLOW AND GREEN FLAG OF HIS KINGDOM AND A BUGLER BLEW THE ROYAL SALUTE.

AFTER A HURRIED MEAL BENEATH THE TREES HE SET OUT INTO THE INTERIOR TO ASSUME ACTIVE LEADERSHIP OF FORCES WHICH WILL FIGHT AGAINST THE ITALIANS IN CONJUNCTION WITH THE BRITISH MILITARY MISSIONS ALREADY ESTABLISHED IN VARIOUS CENTERS DEEP IN THE MOUNTAIN COUNTRY.

Greeks Resume Drive on Valona As Snow Ceases

Italian Attacks Beaten Off and New Ground Won in Hot Battle Near Klisura

ATHENS, Jan. 23 (AP).—Intense fighting was reported tonight north of Klisura, in the central Albanian sector, where improved weather permitted the Greeks to resume their offensive against Valona, last big southern Albanian port held by the Italians.

The Greeks said they repulsed heavy Italian counter-attacks in the Klisura area and attacked in turn, taking new positions by heavy fighting.

The official Greek spokesman said the Greeks had occupied a series of positions, seized a number of villages and captured 250 prisoners, including officers. He added that they took large quantities of mortars, machine guns, rifles and other war materiel.

Both sides resumed activity as the weather improved. For days operations in Albania had been hampered by snowstorms and intense cold. Bombs and machine-gun bullets figured in the fray as each side attacked opposing positions.

Of the fighting in one sector the spokesman said: "The enemy attempted to check the Greek offensive action, but eventually retreated in a hurry after suffering heavy losses."

Naval Mission a Mystery

ROME, Jan. 23 (AP).—"La Tribuna" reported today that Italian warships had carried out a mysterious mission in "enemy waters" last night under cover of air bombardment of an "enemy base." They remained in the "enemy waters" for more than an hour, and then returned to their own base, it was stated.

Nothing more was divulged, but observers speculated on the possibility that the ships were laying mines in Greek waters.

Rome Says Purchase Of Goods Not "Indispensable Must Absolutely Be Avoided"

Rome, Jan. 23 (AP)—Clearance sales—dear to the hearts of most women shoppers—were prohibited by the Italian Government today with the explanation that "in the present conditions the purchase by the public of merchandise which is not indispensable must absolutely be avoided."

The Ministry of Guilds also warned merchants against high-pressure advertising campaigns.

Virginio Gayda, editor of Il Giornale d'Italia, called for Government action against a small group of stock market speculators. He accused the speculators of being unpatriotic.

RUMANIA SAYS IT HAS QUELLED ARMED REVOLT

Bucharest Declares Rebels Have Been Put Out of Public Buildings.

PREMIER'S OFFICE ATTACKED

Both Belgrade and Sofia Hear Fight Continues Despite the Official Announcement.

Budapest, Jan. 23 (A. P.).—The Rumanian Government announced today through its Budapest legation that it had quelled a rebellion by "notorious communists" and young Iron Guard extremists after many had been killed throughout the country.

Public buildings in various parts of Rumania were reported cleared of the rebels under orders from Premier Gen. Ion Antonescu after his tolerance had been taxed by a machine-gun attack yesterday on the Bucharest building housing his office.

It was then, according to a statement issued through the Budapest legation, that Gen. Antonescu "instructed the army and police to re-establish order."

Attack Led by Petrovicescu.

The machine-gun attack on the Premier's office was said in the official statement to have been organized with 600 Iron Guard Legionnaires by Gen. George Petrovicescu, who is reported to have been ousted Tuesday as Minister of the Interior.

The statement did not disclose what had become of Gen. Petrovicescu, but those under his alleged leadership were said to have "surrendered in a body, weeping and openly expressing disgust with themselves."

The legation statement said that Gen. Antonescu thus had become "complete master" of the situation.

Advices from the Rumanian General Staff, the legation said, declared that "not a single soldier or officer" had joined rebellious Iron Guardsmen who were blamed for the disorders.

Army Fires Into Crowd.

"These rebels occupied the Bucharest and Brasov radio stations, the Bucharest post office and several public institutions in Bucharest, Ploesti and Braila," the legation said.

"Yesterday 600 Legionnaires, organized by Gen. George Petrovicescu, massed in front of the Premier's office and started firing at the building with machine guns.

"Antonescu decided that was sufficient. He instructed the army and police to re-establish order. They quickly cleaned out public buildings throughout the country.

"The Bucharest government informed us at noon that Antonescu's authority had been supremely restored throughout Rumania.

"It admitted that there are many dead throughout the country. At Braila, the army, in self-defense, was forced to fire into crowds which threatened the soldiers."

General Joins Iron Guard.

Sofia, Bulgaria, Jan. 23 (A. P.).—Although Rumanian legations in southeastern Europe declared today that Premier Gen. Ion Antonescu had mastered Rumania's rebellion, diplomatic sources here expressed belief that some disorders were still in progress. They pointed out that at least one high general had joined dissident Iron Guardists.

Similar statements on behalf of the Bucharest Government, issued at Budapest and Sofia, said in part that Gen. George Petrovicescu, former Minister of Interior under Gen. Antonescu, had organized a machine-gun attack on the Premier's office. The attack was said to have been broken, but the statements did not say what had become of Gen. Petrovicescu.

According to a legation statement, Gen. Antonescu claimed continued collaboration with "the majority and responsible element" of the nationalistic Iron Guard.

Hundreds Reported Killed.

Before the statements were issued hundreds were reported to have been killed in the civil strife within the German-dominated nation. The rebels were said earlier to be holding several ministries, the telephone headquarters and the post office at Bucharest. At one time rebels claimed to hold the upper hand in most cities in Rumanian Transylvania.

Hungary, which won a big slice of the province of Transylvania in an Axis-dictated settlement last fall, was reported today in Belgrade to be hurriedly calling up additional troops in connection with the disorders in Rumania, and observers in the Yugoslav capital pointed out that Hungary wants still more of Transylvania.

The Turkish Cabinet held a three-hour meeting to discuss the turbulence in Rumania and the presence of hundreds of thousands of German troops there. These troops had been expected to intervene in the strife, but apparently they were steering clear of it. In any case, censored dispatches made no mention of them.

The rebels were said to claim that more than 30,000 men were fighting on their side. The strength of the forces on Gen. Antonescu's side was not known here, but some reports said he had only the support of troops unfriendly to the Legionnaires.

While martial law prevailed throughout the nation, by proclamation of Gen. Antonescu, a revolutionary leader, Gen. Dragalina, was reported marching on Bucharest with troops, and was said to have appealed to Vice-Premier Horia Sima, the Iron Guard leader, to assume the leadership of the nation and restore order. He was said to have ended the appeal with the words:

"Long live King Michael and the legionnaire movement."

The Bucharest radio, held by the rebels, appealed to the troops already in the capital not to fire on the revolters. The broadcast was said to have emphasized that they were "ready to die like our captain"—a reference to Corneliu Zelea Codreanu, the Iron Guard leader who was slain in prison in 1938 and whose death the Iron Guardists avenged in a blood purge last November.

The revolutionaries also announced that an air force unit had joined them, as well as troops at Craiova, Yashi and Constanta. Extremists were reported to have overpowered and disarmed regular troops at Galati and Braila.

Belgrade Hears Fight Goes On.

Belgrade, Jan. 23 (A. P.).—A bloody struggle for power in Rumania was reported to be continuing today in Bucharest and the provinces after Premier Gen. Ion Antonescu sought fruitlessly overnight to compromise with rampaging Iron Guard extremists.

The German position in the dispute was not clarified here, although Nazi troops were reported without confirmation to have assisted Government forces in supporting the Antonescu regime.

[Authorized sources in Berlin said the German military was taking no hand in the situation.]

The Iron Guard was understood to have concentrated 30,000 men in Bucharest and fifteen Guardists leaders were reported to have been jailed by the army. Guardist radio announcers said that many of their organization had been slain in fighting.

Sailors Reported Joining Revolt.

Iron Guard legionnaires were said to have recaptured the Bucharest post office and radio station after having been ejected once by the army. Rumania's most modern military airport at Tecuci was reported to be in the hands of the Guard.

Some army commanders were understood to have joined the revolt, as well as some sailors at Constanta. Troops at the army corps of Brasov were understood to have revolted and headed for Bucharest in trucks to join the 30,000 Guard adherents.

Both sides professed loyalty to the throne.

The Brasov and Bucharest radios, both reported in Iron Guard hands, announced that "people must know the death of every legionnaire means a great loss for Rumania, for if the Iron Guard is beaten power will fall into the hands of the Jews."

Nazis Keep Hands Off.

Berlin, Jan. 23 (A. P.).—The German military is taking no hand whatever in the Rumanian strife, authorized spokesmen asserted today. When asked if the situation might become such that German intervention might be necessary, they declined to comment, stating that the question was hypothetical.

They said that the Rumanian Vice-Premier, Horia Sima, who also is the leader of the pro-Fascist Iron Guard, was not en route to Berlin.

RUMANIAN REBELS SHELLED IN CAPITAL

2,000 Dead Reported in Pitched Civil Warfare—Government Claims Upper Hand

By The Associated Press.

SOFIA, Bulgaria, Friday, Jan. 24—The official Bucharest radio said in a broadcast early today that the last of the rebels holding the police barracks and City Hall in the Rumanian capital had agreed to end hostilities. Some border reports estimated the dead at 2,000 throughout the country. Total casualties were estimated at 6,000.

It was not clear whether all fighting had ceased in Bucharest between dissident Iron Guards and the government backed by the Rumanian Army, but border dispatches said the revolt still was proceeding outside the capital, especially in Transylvania.

An air traveler reaching here said that Rumanian troops turned their artillery on rebels holding the Bucharest police barracks, firing at a distance of 300 yards. He put the minimum dead in the capital in the hundreds. Some reports said there were more than 2,000 dead in Bucharest morgues, including many Jews taken from their homes and killed along with Iron Guards.

It was reported the City Hall and police barracks were being vacated. Between 700 and 800 rebels were said to have barricaded themselves in the barracks during the disturbances.

The air traveler said Bucharest was "like a military camp, with fighting in the streets following all rules of modern warfare, with tanks, machine guns and artillery."

"The Legionaries, mostly young people," he said, "usually marched onto the streets in the first few days in big crowds, with almost mystic disdain of fear in going against these forces."

The traveler said that while fighting continued yesterday morning it was not of such intensity as in the first days of the disturbances. He said several hundred persons probably were killed, many around the police barracks.

"What the Legionaries want is full power, with the government led by [Vice Premier and Iron Guard leader] Horia Sima," he said. "Crowds of Legionaries moved in the streets singing and continually shouting 'Horia Sima!'

"The Legionaries charged Antonescu sold out to persons of the old regime who were influencing him. The army holds the railways but traffic has practically stopped.

"If Horia Sima asks for peace, that means the movement has failed and his only chance is gone. It is generally believed that German troops finally will have to establish order."

There was one report that General Antonescu already had issued an order to "liquidate" all captured rebels. It was also reported that he was planning an extensive purge of all extremist elements to prevent any possibility of a return of the revolt.

Orders Weapons Surrendered

The new Rumanian Minister of the Interior, General Dimitru Popescu, ordered all civilians to yield all weapons to their local authorities within twenty-four hours, threatening death to those refusing. This announcement on the official radio in Bucharest was heard here. He also announced that the Mayor of every town and village must be replaced within thirty-eight hours by men who had not participated in the widespread disorders.

"The misled elements of the Legionaries [Iron Guards]," he said, "have been defeated. If there are still such elements in some sectors they will be arrested and tried by the military."

In another radio appeal to the army, Premier General Ion Antonescu declared the Rumanian State was "in a critical condition, which threatens its existence."

"People who were misled by Communists have attempted to take over the government by force," the Premier declared.

The general made his appeal to the people and the army at three-minute intervals after the government apparently regained control of the Bucharest radio station last night. At that time what sounded like revolver shots broke off a rebel Iron Guard broadcast.

Hints No Quarter Will Be Given

"I will continue," said Premier Antonescu, "to fight for the existence and security of the State—at no matter what sacrifice. I appeal to you [the army] for your devotion to the nation. In the last twenty-four hours you have risked your blood for restoration of order in the country. Long live Rumania! Long live the King!"

Although the Rumanian Legation at Sofia issued a statement that Premier Antonescu was "master," the reiterative broadcasts were taken as an indication that the revolt was not yet quelled.

An Iron Guard announcement was being read over the air at 11 P. M. Wednesday when loud reports were heard. The broadcaster halted immediately and then without any explanation of the noises or the sudden change of sponsors, a statement by General Antonescu was broadcast.

There were reports that Communist and other Leftist elements were involved in some of the Transylvanian fighting, but whether in collaboration with Iron Guards or as a separate group was not clear. Arad, Timisoara and four other small towns of Transylvania were said still to be held by Iron Guards.

The Bucharest radio announced last night "that negotiations" were under way between Vice Premier Sima, who represents the more conservative faction of the Iron Guard, and groups supporting Premier Antonescu. Whether the announcement had been authorized by M. Sima was not known here, since it was broadcast over the government radio and the whereabouts of M. Sima were uncertain.

Some foreign observers, noting that the fighting began generally after a German officer had been killed, expressed the belief that the plan for a general revolt had been made with great care. Even anti-Iron Guard elements were said to be willing to cooperate with Iron Guards because of dissatisfaction with the government.

Some travelers crossing the Danube brought unconfirmed rumors that an effort was made to establish a Communist regime in the Moldavia region.

The rebels seemingly belonged to almost all factions, including Communists, pro-Germans and anti-Germans, some sections of the army and a large number of peasants, it was said.

Rebellion Called "Crushed"

BUDAPEST, Jan. 23 (AP).—The Antonescu government of Rumania, describing itself as "complete master" of the situation, announced today that a rebellion officially attributed to "notorious Communists" and young hot-heads of the Iron Guard had been crushed.

The Rumanian legations at Budapest and Sofia issued a statement on behalf of Premier Antonescu saying that "not a single soldier or officer" of the Rumanian Army had joined in the uprising, which, it was acknowledged, left "many" dead.

The statement, however, mentioned the leading role in the civil strife played by Gen. George Petrovicescu, who was reported only two days ago to have been ousted as Antonescu's Minister of Interior. Presumably he is not considered an active officer.

"Yesterday 600 Legionaires, organized by Gen. Petrovicescu, massed in front of the Premier's office (in Bucharest) and started firing at the building with machine guns," the legation statement said.

"Antonescu decided that was sufficient. He instructed the army and police to re-establish order. They quickly cleaned out public buildings throughout the country.

"These Communists and very young Legionaries (Iron Guardists) surrendered in a body, weeping and openly expressing their disgust with themselves.

"The Bucharest government informed us at noon that Antonescu's authority had been supremely restored throughout Rumania.

"They admitted that there are many dead throughout the country. At Braila, the army, in self-defense, was forced to fire into crowds which threatened the soldiers."

The statement acknowledged that the rebels occupied the Bucharest and Brasov radio stations, the Bucharest Post Office and several other public institutions at the capital, Ploesti and Braila.

It did not say what had happened to Gen. Petrovicescu.

Donovan in Yugoslavia, Calls First on Premier

Plans to Skip Axis Capitals, Go Next to Athens

BELGRADE, Jan. 23 (AP).—Col. William J. Donovan, unofficial American observer on a secret mission, talked today with Premier Dragisha Cvetkovich in starting a round of conferences with Yugoslav government leaders. He came here after similar talks at Sofia, the capital of Bulgaria.

At Sofia, King Boris III ordered an intensive search for a missing wallet belonging to Col. Donovan. Its loss was discovered yesterday. It was at first assumed that the wallet might have been mislaid, but today's continuing search led increasingly to the conclusion that it had been stolen.

Asked at the American Legation at Belgrade whether he had lost important documents, Col. Donovan replied: "I have no documents, I have it here," and he pointed to his head.

ISTANBUL, Turkey, Jan. 23 (AP)—Some Turkish newspapers expressed the opinion today that the United States might be urging Bulgaria to resist any Axis demands that might spread the war, and suggested that it was for this reason that Colonel William J. Donovan had gone to Sofia.

Said Iksdam:

"The Axis would never have the courage to open a new front in the Balkans if they were sure that the Balkan countries all intended to defend their homelands. * * * There is no doubt that Mr. Donovan's visit to Bulgaria is made for more than just to gather information. He must also have carried a message to King Boris not to yield to Axis provocation. * * *

"The one road to safety for Bulgaria is resistance. All the Balkans and Britain and even the United States are behind Bulgaria if she resists."

600 Americans Leave Nazi-occupied France

Vichy, Jan. 23 (A. P.).—Embassy circles estimated today that at least 600 Americans had returned home from the German-occupied zone of France in the last month. Those remaining are almost exclusively persons with imperative official business or family connections.

FRANCE TURNS INDO-CHINA WAR OVER TO JAPAN

Accepts Tokyo's Offer To Mediate In Conflict With Siam

Move Believed Instigated By Nazis To Avert U. S. Intervention

[By the Associated Press]

Vichy, Jan. 23—The French Government announced tonight it had accepted the offer of Japan to mediate in the four-months' Asiatic border conflict which has led to large-scale invasion of French Indo-China by Thailand's army, air bombing of cities on both sides and a pitched naval battle.

An authoritative source said that back of Vichy's readiness to accept Japan's good offices was a German "suggestion" which sprang from a desire to exclude any possibility of United States intervention.

French colonial leaders here were said to have pressed for an invitation to Washington to mediate; the turn to Tokyo was described as intended to forestall this.

Favored U. S. Mediation

Furthermore, French officials in Indo-China, it was learned, favored asking United States mediation and considered the fairest arbiter the American Minister to Thailand, Hugh Gladney Grant.

It was emphasized, however, that this was only a suggestion and that no official communication ever indicated the French Government considered such a step.

American circles in Vichy said there had been no diplomatic approach on the matter.

French circles in Indo-China had pointed out that recent naval successes of the Indo-Chinese forces had placed the colony in a favorable position to negotiate.

Communique From Flandin

The communique announcing the mediation came from Foreign Minister Pierre Etienne Flandin's office, which previously had taken the position that the British were behind the Thailand attacks on Indo-China.

Tokyo's formal offer of mediation was made Tuesday, the Vichy announcement said, and was accepted "in view of the existing friendly relations between France and Japan." Charles Arsene Henry, Ambassador to Tokyo, was intrusted with arranging details.

The reference to "existing friendly relations" was at variance with charges made by informed French sources on several occasions that Japan was supporting Thailand in the border situation.

Japan's Influence Grows

Vichy's action marks another step in the extension of Japan's influence over southeastern Asia.

Japan began pressure on French Indo-China, rice granary of southeastern Asia, shortly after the Nazi triumph in Europe made France helpless to protect her colony. The Indo-China Government had to permit Japan to place garrisons in Hanoi, the capital, and Haiphong, chief northern port, and establish air bases along the northern border whence planes could raid South China industries and communications—especially the Burma road.

(A big French Indo-China mission is in Tokyo now negotiating an accord which may fix Japanese economic domination on the French colony.)

Tokyo Keeps Silent

Tokyo, Friday, Jan. 24 (AP)—Koh Ishii, director of the Japanese Board of Information, declined today to confirm or deny reports that Japan had offered to mediate the Thailand-French Indo-China difficulties but said Japan was "seriously concerned at hostilities within the east Asiatic sphere."

More Officials Dismissed By Vichy

[By the Associated Press]

Vichy, France, Jan. 23 — Sixty-one municipal councils were dissolved by Government decree today and thirty-eight Mayors and other municipal officials were ousted in a program designed to "clean up" France's city governments.

The municipal councils were replaced by special delegations. Department prefects will replace municipal officials dismissed.

Reasons Cited

Thirty-two changes in the councils were made because "the composition of the council cannot give efficacious aid to national recovery," the Government said.

Other dismissals were attributed to a hostile majority to national recovery negligence, lack of authority, partiality, disinterestedness, inertia and incompetence in housing refugees.

Hostility Charged

Other charges included hostility to the Government of Chief of State Philippe Petain. The departmental prefect suspended the mayor of a village near Digne for insulting remarks about Petain.

A municipal reform program was announced by the Vichy Government December 11, 1940. The dismissals announced today were the most numerous made since adoption of that program.

France-Belgium In Clearing Pact

By the Associated Press.

VICHY, France, Jan. 23.—The Petain government announced today a French-Belgian clearing arrangement, fixing the rate of exchange at 12.50 Belgian francs to the mark and permitting exchanges through Berlin.

The French franc already has been established at 20 to the mark.

The accord was signed Jan. 11 at Wiesbaden, headquarters of the German-French Armistice Commission, by French firms. It will be transmitted to the Deutsche Verrechnungskasse (reckoning office) at Berlin, which will carry separate reichsmark accounts for French firms in occupied and unoccupied French territory.

The clearing was limited to eight types of transactions, including merchandise export and import, payment for services, payment for intellectual activity such as writing, movie production, insurance and soldiers' pay.

BRITAIN PUTS FOOT ON ARMY SNOBBERY

Suspends Colonel Who Gave Vent To Crack About "The Old School Tie"

Etonian Had Belittled Military Officers From Working Classes

[By the Associated Press]

London, Jan. 23—The British War Office cracked down hard today on the "Colonel Blimp" school of thought in its modern army and relieved of his command Lieut. Col. R. G. Bingham, who wrote a letter to the Times saying British officers unblessed by "the old school tie" had fallen down on the job.

Colonel Bingham, who wears the tie of Eton himself, commanded an officers' cadet training unit. His letter complained that new officers drawn from the working classes, as contrasted with the "old aristocratic and feudal (almost) classes who led the old army," thought only of themselves.

Tie "More Justified"

He added: "Never was an old school tie and the best it stands for more justified than today."

This aroused bitter comment in Parliament and elsewhere.

Today the new Secretary for War, Capt. H. D. R. Margesson, demonstrated that he intends to rule the War Office with the same iron hand he used so effectively in nine years as chief Government whip in the House of Commons.

He told the House he had asked Bingham for a report and had determined that the colonel committed a breach of the King's regulations. These forbid officers and men to communicate to the press their views on military subjects.

Displeasure Expressed

"An expression of the Army Council's severe displeasure has been conveyed to Colonel Bingham," said Margesson. "In addition, I have decided that this officer is no longer suitable for command of an officers' cadet training unit. . . ."

The House cheered and the Secretary added ". . . and I have given instructions for him to be relieved of his command."

Given First Break

Officers from other than the aristocratic schools were given their first major break several years ago when Leslie Hore-Belisha, then Secretary for War, shook up the army command from top to bottom to eliminate "deadwood" and inject new and vigorous blood.

Colonel Bingham won the D. S. C. and the Italian Silver Medal in the last war as a regimental commander of Royal Fusiliers. He is 55.

THRILL FOR THRILL WRITER

E. Phillips Oppenheim Has "Rough Time" On Trip From France

London, Friday, Jan. 24 (AP)—E. Phillips Oppenheim, author of many thrillers, arrived in England yesterday after an adventurous journey from South France with his wife and maid.

The 74-year-old author said he had a "rough time" and added the French were showing a "definite change of feeling"—against the Germans.

DUESSELDORF HIT BY NEW R. A. F. RAID

British Flyers Machine-gun Nazi Troops in France.

London, Jan. 23 (A. P.).—British warplanes pounded at the Duesseldorf area in Germany's industrial Ruhr Valley last night, the Government announced today, thus ending several nights of inactivity caused by bad weather. The attack, said to have been the twenty-first aimed at Duesseldorf's steel, oil and munitions works, was described as concentrated but of only medium scope because of the still unfavorable weather over the Continent.

The Air Ministry stated earlier today that Royal Air Force fighter planes, with six Polish flyers among their crews, launched two machine-gun attacks by daylight yesterday on German aircraft at landing fields and on troops and ground defenses in occupied France from the channel coast to the River Somme.

On the first trip, the Air Ministry News Service said one of the pilots began by diving and firing at a number of small motor boats off the French coast, later machine-gunned five Messerschmitt planes grounded at Le Touquet airdrome and then, on the way home, ran into anti-aircraft fire and "stopped long enough to send all his remaining ammunition spattering among the guns' crews." The British fighters were not engaged by the enemy and all returned safely, the communique added.

Berlin, Jan. 23 (A. P.).—The German High Command reported today that British raiders last night "dropped a few incendiaries and explosives on western Germany," but that no war essential targets were hit, although one civilian was killed and three were injured. Slight property damage was admitted, and it was stated that three British planes were brought down yesterday, while one German plane was listed as missing.

Ships Attacked Off Ireland

BERLIN, Jan. 23 (AP).—Long-range German bombers attacked two steamers west of Ireland so effectively today that "their loss must be assumed," it was reported tonight. The crews of the Nazi sea scouting planes said sailors on the two ships were taking to lifeboats as they flew away.

The official German news agency, D. N. B., reported tonight that a German light bomber had attacked a 12,000-ton merchantman today east of Felixstowe, on the English east coast, and that flames were seen to rise about the vessel.

Earlier the agency reported a long-range bomber sank a 3,500-ton merchant ship in the Atlantic 125 miles west of Ireland yesterday, a single bomb sending the ship down in twenty minutes.

In another phase of the counter-blockade against England, the high command said a "warship" operating in overseas waters had added 31,000 tons of "enemy merchant ships" to its previous total of more than 100,000 tons. Informed sources identified the "warship" as a submarine.

A single German combat plane dropped explosives and fire bombs today on targets in Great Yarmouth on the English east coast, and big fires and explosions were observed, D. N. B. reported.

The high command said "war vital objectives on the British east coast" were attacked by individual planes last night, while British raiders "dropped a few incendiaries and explosives on western Germany." A communique said no "war essential targets were hit," although one civilian was killed and three injured. "Slight property damage" was reported. Three British planes were said to have been brought down during the day, while one German plane was listed as missing.

London, Jan. 23 (A. P.).—Destroyer losses of the British fleet mounted to an unofficial total of thirty-seven with yesterday's announcement by the Admiralty that the 1,340-ton Hyperion had been sunk by other British warcraft after being left helpless by a mine or torpedo. There was no mention of date or place.

It was the Hyperion that ran down the 32,581-ton German liner Columbus in the western Atlantic on December 19, 1939. The Nazi crew scuttled their ship.

CHAMBERLAIN'S PIANO

Brings $220 at Sale at Late Prime Minister's Home.

Birmingham, England, Jan. 22 (A. P.).—Some of the possessions of the late Neville Chamberlain were sold today at his suburban home, Westbourne. A grand piano went for the equivalent of $220 and a gold buttonhole flower holder, once owned by Mr. Chamberlain's father, the great Joseph Chamberlain, brought $100. A number of possessions that Neville Chamberlain cherished—his fishing gear, for instance—were distributed among friends.

The collection of butterflies which he amassed, wielding his net with angular agility in the lush fields of England, went to the Birmingham Art Gallery. What has happened to the ever-rolled umbrellas which were carried on his journeys of appeasement to Munich has not been told.

LONDON, JAN 24--(FRIDAY)--(AP)--LONDON EARLY TODAY SEEMED DUE FOR THE FOURTH NIGHT IN SUCCESSION WITHOUT AN AIR RAID, WITH THICK WEATHER OVER THE DOVER STRAIT APPARENTLY HOLDING GERMAN BOMBERS TO THE GROUND.

THE DARK SKIES WERE FREE OF ARIS RAIDERS UP TO JUST BEFORE MIDNIGHT.

MIST AND DRIZZLING RAIN IN THE ENGLISH CHANNEL RESTRICTED VISIBILITY.

ITALY TO REPLY ON INFLATION

Fascist Papers Advance Plan to Meet War Cost.

ROME, Jan. 23 (A. P.).—Recourse to a controlled inflation as a means of meeting Italy's growing war cost appeared likely today as sections of the press and financial opinion advocated an increased supply of money and credit, with its effects tempered by government curbs on prices and production.

Proponents of a paper money solution to war debts argued that the Fascist State could offset the traditional repercussions of inflation. The issuance of additional money would make liquid capital plentiful, but the Government power to block prices and make goods scarce by curbs on production would avert the usual possibility of spending this surplus for consumer goods, it was argued. The excess money would tend to go into bank deposits and low-interest Government securities, and these could then be taxed more or less painlessly, since the public would have the impression that it was paying the taxes out of surplus cash.

Not that inflation—which some Fascist minds consider in itself a form of non-interest bearing loan—would be the only solution possible. The leading article in the newspaper La Stampa of Turin said today:

"Evidently it cannot be pretended that tax income—inadequate to cover even normal expenditures—can meet the war's financial needs, which therefore must be founded upon credit or the creation of bank notes; whence arises the alternatives of recourse to increased credit or increased bank note circulation. Discussion of preferences for one or the other of these financial means is rather theoretical since the amount of (war) expenses is such that the State cannot do without either more credit or increased monetary circulation."

The article summarized six effects of a Fascist inflation: 1. Abundance of capital; 2. Swelling bank deposits; 3. Great scarcity of goods for the public; 4. Lack of impetus for additional (non-essential) production; 5. Reserve and prudence in the reaction of the stock market; and 6. A lowering of interest rates.

Helmuth Wick, German Ace, Now Is a Prisoner in Canada

Description of Captive Checks With That of Richtofen Squadron Leader Shot Down Over the Channel.

An East Canadian Port, Jan. 23 (A. P.).—One of Germany's leading aces—apparently twenty-five-year-old Major Helmuth Wick, whose loss the Nazis announced on December 4—was among hundreds of war prisoners rolling westward today toward an internment camp in the Canadian interior.

Censorship prevented the disclosure of the prize prisoner's identity, but it was learned that he was one of the three Nazi flyers credited with having shot down the greatest number of planes in the current war and the preceding Spanish civil war, that he is 25 years old, and that he is the holder of a high decoration.

One Sank Empress of Britain.

This description fits Major Wick, whom the Germans have credited with bagging fifty-six planes in the two wars. The Nazis have listed him along with Lieut. Adolf Gallant, 28 years old, credited with fifty-five planes, and Lieut.-Col. Verner Molders, 27 years old, credited with fifty-four, as their leading pilots.

As the prisoners were landed here last night two of their number escaped. One was recaptured and today the docks were still being searched for the other.

A few prisoners raised their arms in the Nazi salute, some grinned and others were stolid as they tramped from the prison ship.

Interment officers said the prisoners included a majority of the Nazi flyers shot down in Britain up to the time the ship sailed, as well as sailors taken from German submarines. One was said to be the commander of the U-boat that sank the Empress of Britain last autumn.

Commanded Famous Squadron.

Major Helmuth Wick, commander of the famous Richtofen Squadron, was shot down by a British fighter over the English Channel, and a German communique on December 4, reporting his failure to return, said that the Nazi Air Force had lost "one of its most audacious and successful pursuit pilots." Fellow pilots reported at the time that Vick descended by parachute to the sea off the Isle of Wight just after bagging his fifty-sixth plane.

It was believed then that he had been killed and the pilot of another ship in the German squadron said he followed Wick's assailant to his death.

Several months earlier Wick told a group of German newspaper correspondents that fighting the British airmen was quite simple. He said their flying skill was laughable and that he believed that most of them were beginners.

He was decorated for his exploits with the Iron Cross with oak leaves.

Two German Prisoners Recaptured In Canada

Airman And His Companion Escaped While Being Transferred From Ship To Train

An East Canadian Port, Jan. 23 (AP)—Peter Schierning, a 30-year-old German airman, the second of two German prisoners who escaped yesterday while hundreds of captives were being transferred from a ship to a train, was recaptured by city police here today.

The other, Helmuth Brueckmann, was taken early today when he sought lodging at a rooming house.

A woman telephoned police headquarters that she had seen a man changing clothes behind a reservoir, and officers in a radio-equipped car found Schierning dressed in an old pair of overalls, an ordinary civilian cap, but his feet still encased in his airman's boots. The two will be sent on to join their comrades in internment camps in Canada's interior.

Damaged Italian Ship Reaches Venezuela

Stem Of 6,700-Ton Tanker Is Reported Wrecked By Shell Fire

Caracas, Venezuela, Jan. 23 (AP)—The Siv news agency reported today that the 6,725-ton Italian tanker Alabama, her stern damaged by shellfire, arrived yesterday at Puerto Cabello escorted by the Venezuelan warship General Salon.

Her arrival, the dispatch said, brought to six the number of Italian merchant ships now in refuge at Puerto Cabello.

The dispatch gave no information as to when, under what circumstances and by what vessel the Alabama was fired on.

Norse Village Destroyed By Snowy Avalanche

Hammervest, Norway (via Berlin), Jan. 23 (A. P.).—One woman and three children were killed and every house in the fishing village of Rishamn, on the North Cape, was either damaged or destroyed today by an avalanche and blizzard.

One house was borne by the avalanche almost intact across a 600-yard fjord, but its seven occupants escaped with slight injuries. Another house was blown down a mountainside.

New Zealand to Send Envoy

Last British Dominion to Start Direct Diplomatic Link With U. S.

AUCKLAND, N. Z., Jan 23 (AP).—Prime Minister Peter Fraser said today that New Zealand would appoint soon a diplomatic representative to Washington whose status would be similar to that of Australia's minister, Richard G. Casey. (New Zealand is the only British Dominion which has no direct diplomatic relations with the United States. Australia established such relations a year ago, and Mr. Casey presented his credentials to President Roosevelt in March. Canada and the Union of South Africa have exchanged ministers with the United States for many years.)

WILLKIE GROUNDED IN AZORES BY GALE

Thirty-five-Mile Wind Holds Clipper There Over Night En Route to Lisbon

AMERICAN VISITS FARMS

Is Delighted to Find Indian Corn and Berkshire Hogs, as in His Own State of Indiana

HORTA, Fayal, The Azores, Jan. 23 (AP)—Wendell L. Willkie "carried" this island of 20,000 today.

The 1940 Republican candidate had to stop over on his trip to London until tomorrow because of a 35-miles-an-hour gale that grounded the Pan American Clipper, en route to Lisbon, Portugal.

Because of translation difficulties and despite his explanations, most of the natives believed they were entertaining the President of the United States. Not since the last big earthquake in the Twenties had excitement run so high on this pinpoint in the Atlantic west of Portugal.

Mr. Willkie lost no time in touring the open country to interview farmers.

"What kind of hog is this?" he asked one.

"Eating hog," quoth the farmer.

"Looks like a Berkshire," said Mr. Willkie, getting into the muddy pen to examine the stock.

Mr. Willkie grew lyrical over the corn he saw.

"What kind of corn is this?" he asked a group of farmers who had gathered around him.

"Eating corn," answered one.

"It's Indian corn," announced Mr. Willkie.

Delving into the political and social problems of the island, Mr. Willkie asked the natives if they had the vote. They told him no.

"Well, suppose you don't like something?" Mr. Willkie asked.

"Get hushed up," a native replied.

Told by a delegation in the afternoon that the last American to study local conditions was Mark Twain, who termed Horta a good place to wear out old clothes, Mr. Willkie remarked:

"Not to me. I'm delighted to find Indian corn and Berkshire hogs like in Indiana."

The delegation was a bit hazy as to Indiana, but smiled its approval.

The Clipper captain, terming the gale the worst in years, said Mr. Willkie might be grounded a day or more. A take-off was tentatively scheduled for daybreak tomorrow.

When he was not visiting the islanders or receiving a delegation, Mr. Willkie whiled away the time playing table tennis or rummy.

En route to study war conditions in Great Britain, Mr. Willkie already had seen evidence of United States aid to the British. At Darnell Island, off Hamilton, Bermuda, his eyes widened yesterday when he saw two 13-ton flying boats—bombers to be flown to Britain. Beside them he saw three famous veteran fliers—Bernt Balchen, Clyde Pangborn and Homer Berry—lazily tossing pennies.

"Ferrying bombers is getting dull," Mr. Berry, who fought with Canada in the World War and again wore a Canadian uniform, told Mr. Willkie. "I am joining a fighting unit soon."

The American-made bombers will be flown to England from Bermuda instead of from Newfoundland, the pilots explained, because of weather difficulties encountered over the North Atlantic.

'Who says the world has no more adventures?" Mr. Willkie demanded after his talk with the three fliers.

U. S. Mail Taken From Ship

Shanghai, Friday, Jan. 24 (AP)—British authorities at Hongkong removed all first-class mail en route from the United States to Shanghai on the President Taft when that American steamer docked at the Crown Colony Saturday, it was learned here today.

Before the ship continued her voyage, the British returned a small portion of the mail and retained the remainder for censorship.

Roosevelt's Aid Going to China On War Survey

Currie, Economic Adviser, Taking Message to Chiang on Trip Like Hopkins's

WASHINGTON, Jan. 23 (AP).—In a move parallel to Harry Hopkins's special mission to England, it was announced today that Laughlin Currie, administrative assistant to President Roosevelt, would visit China soon to make an economic survey. Apparently he is to help determine what aid that country should receive if the lease-lend bill is passed.

Emphasizing the Administration's interest alike in Chinese and British resistance to Germany, Italy and Japan, Mr. Currie will go to Chungking at the invitation of the Chinese government and will bear a special message of greeting to Generalissimo Chiang Kai-shek.

Known as President Roosevelt's personal economic adviser, Mr. Currie, thirty-eight years old, with an extensive background in economics, will be accompanied by Emile Despres, senior economist of the Federal Reserve Board. Mr. Currie, educated at Harvard and the London School of Economics, also held a position with the reserve board before he became administrative assistant to the President in July, 1939.

He is expected to make an intensive study of China's whole economic structure to determine the most effective means of helping that country.

As a close adviser to the President, however, he is expected also to study China's war needs generally and the strength of resistance to Japan, much the same thing that Mr. Hopkins is believed to be doing in Great Britain.

The United States has been supplying material assistance to China. A few weeks ago it granted a $50,000,000 Export-Import Bank credit and a $50,000,000 currency stabilization loan.

Chinese authorities, contending that China's need for war materials is as urgent as Britain's, have encountered difficulties in purchasing planes and other equipment because of the priorities of British and American orders.

There have been indications, however, that the government expects to be able to increase the flow of arms to China in the spring.

Antigua Base Advanced

Leeward Islands' Governor Tells Roosevelt of Progress.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 23 (AP).—Sir Gordon Lethem, Governor of the British Leeward Islands, visited President Roosevelt today for a further discussion of progress in establishing American naval and air bases at Antigua, one of the Caribbean group in his jurisdiction.

He told reporters he was returning the call that the President made on him in December. Work has begun on the naval base at Antigua and United States marines will be ready to move in within ten days, the Governor said.

Madrid Paper Urges French To Give Up Ships

Cites U. S.-British Destroyer Deal As Precedent For Suggested Action

Madrid, Jan. 23 (AP)—The newspaper Madrid said editorially today that if the Vichy Government wants Italian-German collaboration it must give up all or part of the remainder of the French fleet.

It said that if the American action in trading fifty destroyers to Britain for bases in British Western Hemisphere possession was not a violation of neutrality, then France would not be guilty of an unneutral act.

Madrid's editorial carried the ominous statement that if France is looking for an opportunity to renew the war against the Axis she would no likely be given much time to play such a risky game.

Envoy To U. S. Bringing Three Temple Stones

Tokyo, Friday, Jan. 24 (AP)—Admiral Kichisaburo Nomura carried books for President Roosevelt and Henry L. Stimson, Secretary of War, and three temple stones for Rollins College when he sailed yesterday for Washington as Ambassador to the United States, Japanese newspapers reported today.

Niichiro Matsunami, an authority on maritime law and member of the Imperial Academy, sent a copy of his newly published book "Japanese Empire" to President Roosevelt and additional copies to Secretary Stimson and William R. Castle, former United States Ambassador to Japan.

THE NEWSPAPER YOMIURI QUOTED THE AUTHORS AS SAYING THE READING OF THE BOOK, WRITTEN IN ENGLISH, IS ESSENTIAL TO THE UNDERSTANDING OF JAPAN.

THE TEMPLE STONES WERE DESIGNATED FOR THE WINTER PARK, FLA., COLLEGE'S "HONOR LANE." ONE WAS FROM THE TEMPLE OF ADMIRAL TOGO, ANOTHER FROM THE TEMPLE OF GENERAL NOGI, BOTH HEROES OF THE RUSSO-JAPANESE WAR, AND THE THIRD WAS FROM THE "47 RONIN," CELEBRATED FIGURES OF THE 18TH CENTURY.

Diary of the Final 15 Days In the Life of an R. A. F. Ace

British Fighter Pilot Who Died in the War of Britain Lives Again in the Vivid Pages of His Little Book.

By Associated Press.

Following are excerpts from the diary of a Royal Air Force fighter pilot. The diary ends abruptly after fifteen entries—for the pilot was shot down and killed in combat. Before he met his death, this anonymous youth had destroyed six German aircraft, damaged a number of others, and had been awarded the Distinguished Flying Cross for gallantry. The diary was made public by the British Air Ministry.

FIRST DAY—(SEPT. 2, 1940).

First day at our new station. Leapt from our virgin couches at 0650. This shook me a bit. Was still slightly dopey when at 15,000 feet we sighted a large lump of blitz. Solid block of twenty Dornier 215s with a large fighter escort. Attacked en masse, then dived away as fighters came down. Joined Butch again after a frantic tail-watching breakaway, and started after the bombers again.

Suddenly we see a Dornier coming toward us—running for home. We jump on it—Butch sits on its tail, pumping lead at it. I do quarter attacks. He doesn't like this, lumps fall off and smoke pours out. I am awake now and feeling hungry.

Butch says, "Don't waste any more ammunition on him; this guy's finished." I say, "O. K., bud," and formate on the Dornier as he heads for Rochford (small town in Essex). He is a wreck—rudders in ribbons and pieces falling off all the time. One guy comes out at 100 feet. Parachute streams as he hits the ground—bounces. Butch and I are very cocky, go home and shoot a horrid line.

Two more quick sorties seeing nothing, and then more blitzkrieg on the fourth do. We run into a whole pile of Messerschmitt 110s and Dorniers. Too far to attack the bombers, so we start mixing it with the 110s. They circle and a lot come down vertically behind us.

I lose Butch and every one else as I turn round and round, watching my tail. Then a 110 rears up in front of me, plain view, and does a steep turn.

Range is almost pointblank as I turn inside and plug him. He disappears under my nose and, when I see him again, he is diving vertically, starboard engine and wing blazing.

I feel very cocky again, look for the fight and find it is out of sight. I go home and find that I've only fired 300 rounds.

SECOND DAY.

Unsuccessful day—made no contact.

THIRD DAY.

Two patrols—0920 and 1230—but no contact made and no fun at all. Just roaming round looking for the "Hun in the Sun." Watched night bombers in the dark, parachute flares and A.A. bursts all over the sky. Slept well.

FOURTH DAY.

Another big day. Over Thameshaven we meet 25 bombers and scores of Messerschmitt 109s. Fired at a Dornier 215, but had to break away when fighters came down en masse. Chased bombers for 10 minutes but couldn't catch up. Came home and found Butch had bailed out and landed in a garden, where a terrified woman looked at him and then ran into the house. No more action today.

FIFTH DAY.

Up in the morning over the Thames Estuary to meet another raid. We nip in before the Hun fighters can get at us and do a quick flank attack. Fighters follow at once. I follow behind the bombers, watching two Messerschmitt 109s coming up behind me.

30.24— 7123

Before they get into range I turn a sharp left and whip under them. Unfortunately C——, who is following me, gets plugged by one of these guys and has to crash-land. I get into a circle with two 109s and shoot at the second. He starts to dive, so I chase him. Third burst sets him on fire, whole of starboard wing and fuselage. We are down to fifty feet, so I leave him to burn and climb 10,000 feet at full bore.

Fighting is still going on and two more 109s come for me. They work in pairs and it seems fairly easy to get number two. Again I pick him out and we tear down to 0 feet. We race along the Pilgrim's Way (Chaucer's old road to Canterbury) and I fire the rest of my ammunition into him.

Both radiators stream glycol and I can smell him burning. I formate on him when I finish my rounds and he has his oxygen mask off, looking out at me. I leave him to go home and see him crash-land a few miles on.

Going home I see a parachute and circle it—a British one. Later it turns out that it was the C. O. who got shot down by 109s.

In the evening a party, then on to a dance with the boys of another squadron. Slept at —— and stayed in bed till 9!

SIXTH DAY.

I have the rest of the day off—and a very good thing, too. Squadron gets into big London raids and loses quite a few. F—— died in hospital, W—— missing, several more shot down and bailed out. S——and I drove down to Maidstone Hospital to pick up the C. O. Coming back we get to the Blackwall Tunnel (connecting North and South London under the Thames) when the trouble starts raining down all round us—no time to get to a shelter. We stand under an arch and watch the bombers approaching in waves, hear the bombs whistle down, and then the explosions.

Molotov breadbasket showers incendiaries around us, several in gasworks, which fortunately does not go up. Watch cockneys put out one incendiary, discover a gloomy type leaning against a lamp post who discloses he is waiting for pub to open!

The C. O. feels a bit hard-done by as he's been shot down and wounded yesterday, then gets bombed today. S - - - - drives like a demon along a street and skids to a stop. Bus-driver pulls up beside us and says "Come on nah, turn it up mate, you're on the blinkin' floor this time!" Laughter mingles with bomb crashes.

Go back in the dark via Hampstead Heath. Fires light up London and fire engines are coming from all the suburbs into docks. Stop at pub just outside Edmonton and get a riotous reception and lots of beer from excited public bar. I shake hands with everybody and get quite merry.

SEVENTH DAY.

One short sortie in the evening but saw nothing at all.

EIGHTH DAY.

Again no engagement. On patrol with another squadron, we see 109s high above us, but they won't come and play. Wrote some letters.

NINTH DAY.

Cloudy day. Blessed relief and lots of sleeping during the day. Went up and did cloud flying.

TENTH DAY.

First sortie in the morning brought us head-on into a bunch of Heinkel 111s. I do such a violent breakaway that I do an inverted spin. I lose 5,000 to 6,000 feet before I can get out of it. Can't find the fight at all after that, so I go home fed up. All set to get my own back at the second do, but all we see are one or two 109s miles away. No fun.

ELEVENTH DAY.

Another cloudy day and patrolling in ones and twos to try cloud interceptions.

TWELFTH DAY.

Thirteenth and a Friday. More cloud flying expeditions and everybody very testy about it. Went to B——'s house about 2.00. Bombing and A. A. fire all the time, as it was a beautiful night.

THIRTEENTH DAY.

A trip down into Sussex with another squadron and saw more of our fighters than I've ever seen before. I got attacked twice, and everybody split up and came home singly or in pairs. Those attacking me must have been 113s, but every time I went to attack what I thought were these guys, they were Spitfires! Most foxing!

FOURTEENTH DAY.

The best day we've had. We go off at lunch time with another squadron to meet sixteen Dorniers and lots of 109s. We go into the bombers, but Butch breaks early as he gets hit. I break with him, lose him, then go for the bombers again. Meet them coming home and no Messerschmitts in sight. So I attack one on the edge of the formation. Get him straight away and he leaves the rest of his boys. Follow him, plugging all the time. A quarter attack comes off beautifully, see bullets going in in a line from the nose back to the tail, at intervals of a foot all the way down. See that rear gunner is lying back in his seat, probably dead. Dornier is smoking like a chimney, can smell it from behind, oil comes back on to my aircraft and pieces fly past me.

Then three blasted Spitfires horn in and drive me away from my own private and personal Dornier. One guy bails out from the Jerry. He has his arms folded and seems quite resigned. His ship crashes in flames and Spitfires shoot a line all round it, probably dropping visiting cards.

I did this myself. "See you in brasserie 8:30 Saturday" kind of thing. They're getting quite a reputation for pinching a bomber when a Hurricane has got it on the run. So I go home first and claim it before they can.

Afternoon brings even better pickings. Again we attack Dornier formation and break it wide open. They scatter all over the sky and go for the clouds. I get one straight away with a long burst. He catches fire and goes straight in.

Chase another in and out of clouds. Port engine catches fire and Butch and I claim him as a probable; damn sure he was finished. Then I see two Messerschmitt 109s behind me and whip round in a left-hand climbing turn. Horrid moment as I see his cannon winking at me, but he misses. Turn and start circling with the two of them. Gradually tighten the turn till I get a shot at No. 2 from above. See my bullets hit his left wing and he is so shaken he dives into a cloud.

Chase these two again and lose them. Then see two fighters coming straight for me. I think they're Spitfires so I don't fire. Dodge under them and find they are the same two yellow-nosed Messerschmitts! Annoying because they make off and I can't catch them.

Most successful day for the squadron, a bag of ten destroyed, thirteen probable, and others damaged. Our losses—nil. My bag—two destroyed, one probable and one damaged. Beginning to shoot a bit of a line. Celebration in the evening.

FIFTEENTH DAY.

Scramble out of bed in absolute confusion. Cloudy up to 20,000 and mighty cold. We see dozens of Vortices but no enemy aircraft.

Here the diary entries end. A few hours later its author had been killed when his Hurricane crashed in battle.

Two Sailors Escape Jail In German Flag Incident

Navy Gets Custody of Pair Who Tore Down Swastika

SAN FRANCISCO, Jan. 23 (AP).—Two young Navy men who ripped a Nazi swastika flag from its staff at the German Consulate here, were given suspended sentences of ninety days in jail today and were turned over to the Navy, which promised they would be "adequately dealt with."

The flag incident, staged before a throng of some 2,000 persons here last Saturday, resulted in a German protest and a statement of regret by this government.

The two sailors were on leave from a Navy hospital, where they had been under observation in the psychopathic ward.

They were Harold J. Sturtevant, nineteen years old, of Haverhill, Mass., formerly on the Destroyer Craven, and Ervin Glenn Lackey, twenty, of Charlotte, N. C., until recently on the Destroyer Perkins. Each has about a month to serve of his enlistment.

They were convicted of malicious mischief, for which the maximum sentence is six months in jail.

John P. Beale, naval reserve officer and attorney, represented the young men. He said efforts would be made to have them sent to the Mare Island Naval Hospital for further observation in the psychopathic ward.

Beale told the court that a physician at Mare Island Hospital had described Lackey as "medically and mentally irresponsible."

Electric Eye on Plane Cameras Permits Aerial Pictures at Night

WASHINGTON, Jan. 23 (AP).—A new method of taking aerial photographs at night by using an electric eye to time the camera shutter was shown today before the American Society of Photogrammetry.

In an exhibit at the society's annual meeting the Fairchild Aviation Corporation demonstrated the first automatic camera for night photography of wide areas from heights up to 5,000 feet.

In operation, the pilot of a reconnaisance airplane flying over enemy territory merely releases a flash bulb, containing magnesium powder, which explodes near the ground. The bright light, identical with that of a news photographer's flash bulb, is picked up by the sensitive photo-electric cell underneath the plane. The light is then changed into an electrical impulse which trips the shutter of the camera.

The film is automatically wound in the camera after each exposure so that the pilot may make a dozen or more pictures with his high-altitude flash bulbs and return with a complete record of enemy troop movements or concentration which heretofore could be carried out with safety under cover of darkness.

In another report to the society Dr. Walter Clark, of the Eastman Kodak Company, Rochester, said that color photographs "will be a distinct aid" in the spotting of trops, gun emplacements, munition dumps and other military objectives which are practically invisible in ordinary black-and-white pictures.

"I do not believe," he said in an interview, "that color photographs would be immediately effective in spotting camouflaged positions, but an experienced officer viewing them through the stereoscope could by careful study pick out artificial markings which would reveal efforts to disguise a position."

The color cameras used take three simultaneous pictures through blue, red and green light filters, and the resulting combination is a true representation of the ground below in natural color.

"The pictures do not reveal many details which cannot be seen with the naked eye, but in a fast-moving airplane the pilot or observer has little chance to study details of the terrain," Dr. Clark added. "The color photographs provide an opportunity to study it closely."

War Communiques

British

CAIRO, Jan. 23 (AP).—A British Middle East command communique:

Libya: The capture of Tobruk was completed last night. So far more than fourteen thousand prisoners have been taken, including a corps commander, a divisional commander, two other generals and an admiral, and a number of senior army and naval staff officers. About two hundred guns of all calibers have been captured, with quantities of other military material. Our casualties are under three hundred. Enemy battle casualties have not yet been fully ascertained, but two thousand wounded already are being evacuated.

Eritrea: Our troops are in contact with the Italian forces, which withdrew from the Kassala area and which are now holding defensive positions covering Viscia and Varentu. Operations continue to develop successfully.

Kenya Colony: Offensive activities by our patrols continue.

A Royal Air Force communique:

During the night of Jan. 20-21 bomber aircraft of the R. A. F. carried out several heavy raids on Derna. Several tons of bombs were dropped on barracks and other military targets, causing large fires with explosions which increased as other aircraft carried on the attack. The fires were visible eighty miles away, and the explosions continued after the aircraft left the target.

Raids were made yesterday on barracks at Apollonia.

From repeated sorties on Tobruk on Jan. 21 one of our bombers failed to return.

Covering the army advance, R. A. F. fighters maintained continuous patrols throughout yesterday. In an engagement with a number of enemy aircraft one enemy monoplane fighter was shot down at Sidi Mgherreb (twenty-six miles west of Tobruk) and one of our aircraft was lost.

In Albania, Berati was raided and military buildings were damaged. Motor-transport concentrations on the Kelcyre-Berati road were also attacked. Enemy fighter aircraft intercepted our bombers, and a short engagement resulted. All our aircraft returned safely.

A night attack was made on Maritza (Rhodes) and many bombs were dropped on the airdrome, causing fires among military buildings.

In Italian East Africa, further raids were made on Adad and Assab. From these operations all our aircraft returned safely.

Another Royal Air Force communique:

Airdromes in Sicily were heavily attacked by bombers of the R. A. F. during the night of Jan. 22-23.

At Comiso, a quantity of incendiary and explosive bombs were dropped, causing explosions which continued for twenty minutes. Bombs were also dropped on Augusta Airdrome, but the results were not fully observed, owing to low clouds. Several large exposions occurred in Syracuse, and fires were started south of the bay.

Other aircraft attacked the airdrome at Catania, and several fires and explosions took place near the runway and hangars. One stick of bombs landed in the middle of the railway junction north of the airdrome. A particularly heavy explosion occurred, followed by fires, with heavy black smoke.

All our aircraft returned safely from these operations.

LONDON, Jan. 23 (AP).—An Air Ministry communique:

In spite of bad weather last night, small forces of bombers of the R. A. F. attacked targets in the Duesseldorf area and in other parts of the Ruhr. Two airdromes in enemy-occupied territory were also bombed.

Yesterday, during daylight reconnaissance flights, several attacks were made on enemy shipping.

One of our aircraft has been reported missing during the last twenty-four hours.

Another Air Ministry communique:

Two small fighter sweeps were carried out yesterday afternoon over enemy-occupied territory between the Strait of Dover and the River Somme. In the course of these operations, low-level attacks were made on enemy aircraft at several airdromes and on troops and ground defenses. Our fighters were not engaged by the enemy and all of them returned safely.

Tonight's Air Ministry-Home Security Ministry communique:

There has been very little enemy air activity over this country today. Bombs have been dropped at three places on the coast of East Anglia. A few houses were damaged at two places. No one was killed and only a very few persons were injured.

German

BERLIN, Jan. 23 (AP).—The German high command communique:

A warship operating in overseas waters has sunk additional enemy merchant ships totaling 31,000 tons. Earlier successes of more than 10,000 tons have been previously announced.

In the course of armed reconnaissance a combat plane sank a 3,500-ton merchant ship west of Ireland.

At a harbor on the English southeast coast rail facilities were effectively bombed.

Last night individual planes attacked various war-vital objectives on the British east coast.

Italian

ROME, Jan. 23 (AP).—The Italian high command communique:

On the Green front there were local actions during which we inflicted considerable losses on the enemy. Enemy troops have been scatter-bombed. During an enemy raid on an Albanian town one of our chasers overtook enemy planes, shooting down one and putting the rest to flight.

A very bitter battle among the strongholds of the Tobruk fortress continued throughout yesterday. Only in the afternoon did Australians break through to inhabited portions of Tobruk, where everything was aflame and the old warship San Giorgio had been blown up with dynamite. In the western sector of the fortress some strongholds still are offering strenuous resistance to the enemy attack. Italian forces concentrated at Tobruk consisted of only one division plus several detachments of sailors and frontier guards. The enemy will be compelled to admit that losses suffered by its five attacking divisions were especially severe.

Our air force bombed enemy troop concentrations. The enemy air force carried out raids on several places in Libya, causing some damage.

In the Aegean, enemy planes attempted to strike one of our air bases. Fired upon by anti-aircraft defenses, they made off without succeeding in causing any damage. One plane was hit by our batteries and came down in flames. Another plane of the type launched by a catapult was shot down by our chaser planes near an enemy base.

British planes raided Catania and another base in Sicily the night of Jan. 22, without causing damage.

Greek

ATHENS, Jan. 23 (AP).—The Greek command communique:

During today's successful operations we occupied an enemy position and took more than 200 prisoners, including eight officers. Materiel fell into our hands.

A communique of the Ministry of Home Security:

There were no raids on Greece today.

Lifting of Russian Embargo Seen As Move to Woo Soviet From Axis

By DEWITT MACKENZIE.

The lifting of our moral embargo against Russia, with the idea of improving relations between Washington and Moscow, has set tongues wagging as to whether it also is calculated to erect a barrier between the Soviet and the triple alliance—Germany, Italy and Japan.

This speculation is natural for two reasons. One is that there are few ways in which the United States could render Britain greater aid in the war against the three musketeers than to swing the Soviet into the Anglo-Allied camp. The other is the rift within the Japanese-American lute and the efforts of Tokio to bolster its position by making friends with Russia.

It is an interesting circumstance that the day before Washington made its friendly gesture toward Moscow, the British Government informed Parliament that efforts to improve relations with the Soviet had been at a standstill since October 22. It was added that the next move was up to the Muscovites.

One reason for the hitch, in my view, is that there is a very considerable hostility to Russia among conservative Britons because of fear of Communism.

The same day that the Anglo-Russian hitch was announced, the British Government banned the communist newspaper, the Daily Worker, which was accused of publication calculated to foment opposition to successful prosecution of the war.

The Soviet yesterday reaffirmed its policy of neutrality, to be insured by strengthening its economic and defense capacity.

Apart from their political differences, Russia and Britain are natural allies. Their strategic posts of empire run side by side from Europe right through to the Far East.

As allies they would be a powerful combination. As enemies they would find more hostile points of contact than two quarrelsome porcupines.

From London's viewpoint Russia could threaten Britain's domination of the eastern Mediterranean through virtual control of the Dardanelles. The Soviet sits over Iran (Persia), Irak with its vast oil supplies and the Persian Gulf. Russia has in the past threatened India and has a big thumb in the Chinese pie.

But Russia as an ally would tend to remove the Japanese pressure and menace in the Far East, and the question may arise whether Britain can hope to win a decisive victory over the Nazis unless Germany is blockaded on her eastern border. Russian aid might be vital in this operation.

MOSCOW, JAN. 23-(AP)-THE LIFTING BY THE UNITED STATES OF ITS "MORAL EMBARGO" ON SHIPMENTS OF PLANES AND METALS TO RUSSIA WAS SEEN TONIGHT BY DIPLOMATIC SOURCES AS A SIGN OF IMPROVEMENT OF RUSSIAN-AMERICAN RELATIONS.

THIS WAS CONSIDERED ONE OF SEVERAL SUCH INDICATIONS SINCE PREMIER-FOREIGN COMMISSAR VYACHESLAFF MOLOTOFF TOLD THE SUPREME SOVIET LAST AUGUST THAT "THERE IS NOTHING GOOD THAT CAN BE SAID" ABOUT RELATIONS WITH THE UNITED STATES.

OTHERS INCLUDED THE RECENT SOVIET AUTHORIZATION FOR THE UNITED STATES TO ESTABLISH A CONSULATE GENERAL AT VLADIVOSTOK, RUSSIA'S FAR EASTERN PORT.

THE EMBARGO LIFTING NEWS WAS PUBLISHED PROMINENTLY IN A MOSCOW EVENING NEWSPAPER BUT THERE WAS NO OFFICIAL COMMENT.

WASHINGTON, JAN. 23-(AP)-DEMOCRATIC LEADERS IN CONGRESS AGREED TODAY TO SEEK AN INCREASE OF ABOUT $16,000,000,000 IN THE DEBT LIMIT, AND THUS OPEN THE WAY FOR ONE OF HISTORY'S GREATEST BOND-SELLING CAMPAIGNS TO FINANCE THE DEFENSE PROGRAM.

THE DECISION WAS ANNOUNCED BY REPRESENTATIVE ROBERT L.DOUGHTON (D-NC), CHAIRMAN OF THE HOUSE WAYS AND MEANS COMMITTEE, AFTER HE AND OTHER CONGRESSIONAL LEADERS CONFERRED WITH SECRETARY OF THE TREASURY MORGENTHAU. MORGENTHAU SAID THE STEP WAS FAVORED BY PRESIDENT ROOSEVELT.

THE DEBT LIMIT NOW IS $49,000,000,000 AND THE INCREASE WOULD RAISE IT TO $65,000,000,000. DOUGHTON EXPLAINED, HOWEVER, THAT $65,000,000,000 WAS A TENTATIVE FIGURE, AND MIGHT BE CHANGED AFTER HE CONSULTED MEMBERS OF HIS COMMITTEE.

IN EFFECT, CONGRESS WILL BE ASKED TO AUTHORIZE SOME $20,000,000,000 OF BORROWING, SINCE THE DEBT NOW IS $45,157,324,-

1,

JAN 24 1941

THE TREASURY PLANS TO SELL $5 BONDS TO PERSONS OF ORDINARY MEANS, AS WELL AS THE REGULAR $1,000 KIND TO WEALTHIER INDIVIDUALS AND CORPORATIONS. MORGENTHAU ALSO HAS HINTED AT A POSSIBLE 25-CENT SAVINGS STAMP FOR SCHOOL CHILDREN, SIMILAR TO THOSE SOLD DURING THE WORLD WAR.

SOME TREASURY EXPERTS WERE REPORTED TO BE STUDYING THE QUESTION OF SUPPLYING FOUR-MINUTE SPEAKERS TO BOOST BOND SALES, AS WAS DONE IN THE CASE OF THE OLD LIBERTY AND VICTORY LOAN ISSUES.

DOUGHTON ALSO ANNOUNCED THAT THE DEBT LIMIT BILL WOULD MAKE ALL FUTURE FEDERAL SECURITIES SUBJECT TO ALL FEDERAL TAXES. UNDER PRESENT LAWS, THE TREASURY IS ISSUING TAXABLE SECURITIES, BUT ONLY IN THE FORM OF NOTES MATURING IN LESS THAN FIVE YEARS.

THE GERMAN AUTHORITIES WERE SAID TO HAVE HINTED AT TWO "POSSIBLE WAYS" TO END THE DISORDERS WHICH THREATEN PRODUCTION OF OIL AND AGRICULTURAL PRODUCTS VITAL TO THE GERMAN WAR MACHINE:

1.-ESTABLISHMENT OF A "PROTECTORATE" OVER THE ENTIRE COUNTRY WHICH WOULD, IN EFFECT, BE EQUIVALENT TO A GERMAN ARMY OCCUPATION OF THE COUNTRY.

2.-ESTABLISHMENT OF A RUMANIAN MILITARY DICTATORSHIP UNDER THE WATCHFUL EYE OF THE GERMAN MILITARY AUTHORITIES.

IN EITHER CASE, THE GERMAN MILITARY AUTHORITIES WOULD BE IN COMPLETE CONTROL OF RUMANIA.

REPORTING ON THE SITUATION AS OF WEDNESDAY NIGHT, THE DISPATCHES SAID GERMAN TROOPS HAD NOT TAKEN PART IN ANY OF THE STREET FIGHTING IN BUCHAREST, THE CAPITAL, OR OTHER CITIES AND TOWNS IN WHICH THE IRON GUARDS ARE ACTIVE.

(ADVANCE) GROTON, CONN., JAN 23-(AP)-THE WELDER'S TORCH BURNS DAY AND NIGHT AS THE ELECTRIC BOAT COMPANY STRIVES TO TURN OUT 41 SUBMARINES IN RECORD TIME FOR THE UNITED STATES NAVY.

A VAST INDUSTRIAL PLANT OF STEEL AND BRICK IS RAPIDLY TAKING FORM ON 50 ACRES OF GROUND.

THE FEDERAL GOVERNMENT IS SPENDING MILLIONS ON A PROGRAM HERE THAT ULTIMATELY ENVISAGES A SUBMARINE A MONTH.

NEARLY 4,000 MEN OF VARIED SKILLS ARE WORKING TODAY; WITHIN A YEAR 2,200 MORE WILL BE ADDED. ALMOST OVERNIGHT GROTON AND NEARBY NEW LONDON HAVE BEEN TRANSFORMED INTO A HIVE OF ACTIVITY.

TO MAKE IT POSSIBLE FOR THE ELECTRIC BOAT COMPANY TO BUILD 41 OF THE 71 SUBS THE NAVY HOPES TO ADD TOCTHE FLEET BY 1944, UNCLE SAM ALREADY HAS CONTRACTED TO SPEND $4,600,000 ON THE CONCERN'S FACILITIES.

ONE OF THE FIRST TASKS WAS TO GIVE A FACE LIFTING TO THE THAMES RIVER, RENOWNED SCENE OF HARVARD-YALE CREW RIVALRY. TWO ACRES JUTTING INTO THE WATER FROM THE COMPANY'S OLD PLANT WERE RECLAIMED WITH STONE AND GRAVEL TO FORM A STURDY FOUNDATION FOR NEW SHIP WAYS.

SEVEN NEW WAYS HAVE BEEN ORDERED TO AUGMENT FOUR ALREADY IN OPERATION.

A LARGE, ROOFED FABRICATION SHOP GOES WITH EACH WAY. THREE BRICK STOREHOUSES, SEVERAL SMALLER BUILDINGS AND TWO PIERS ALREADY HAVE BEEN ERECTED, WHILE NEW PURCHASES INCLUDE 30 MAJOR MACHINE TOOLS (20 MORE SOON TO BE ACQUIRED), ADDITIONAL ROLLING STOCK AND TRAVELING CRANES.

BUT, AS ONE HIGH-RANKING NAVAL OFFICER SUPERVISING CONSTRUCTION PUT IT, "THE SUCCESS OF THE SUBMARINE PROGRAM RESTS IN THE ABILITY OF THE YOUNGER WORKERS."

TO ASSURE THAT SUCCESS, THE COMPANY HAS STARTED A SCHOOL WHERE 160 APPRENTICES, ALL HIGH SCHOOL GRADUATES BETWEEN THE AGES OF 18 AND 21, STUDY 16 TRADES. FINISHED WELLERS, FOR EXAMPLE, WILL BE OUT OF THEIR INDENTURES AT THE END OF A TWO-YEAR COURSE.

IN ADDITION, THE PLANT HAS ADOPTED THE BRITISH SYSTEM OF SCHOOLING "LEARNERS," AND OFFERS LESS COMPREHENSIVE COURSES TO OTHER EMPLOYES BETWEEN THE AGES OF 21 AND 35.

ONE PROBLEM THE COMPANY DOES FACE IS THAT OF HOUSING. A WIDE RADIUS AROUND GROTON AND NEW LONDON IS UNDER SURVEY FOR HOME SITES. MANY OF THOSE NOW EMPLOYED, OF COURSE, ALWAYS HAVE LIVED IN THE VICINITY.

THE ELECTRIC BOAT COMPANY AND THE NAVY ARE OLD FRIENDS, FOR UP UNTIL MARCH,

NAVY CONTRACTS WERE MORE PLENTIFUL AFTER 1932, HOWEVER. IN RECENT YEARS, THE PLANT HAS BEEN DELIVERING AN AVERAGE OF FOUR UNDERSEAS CRAFT A YEAR.

WHEN PRESIDENT ROOSEVELT INSPECTED THE YARDS AND SHOPS LAST SUMMER, HE ANNOUNCED THE COMPANY WOULD BE GEARED TO A PRODUCTION CAPACITY OF ONE SUBMARINE A MONTH. THE NAVY HOPES THE ONE-A-MONTH PROGRAM WILL BE REACHED BY MARCH, 1942, IF NOT BEFORE.

THE THIRD STORY APPEARS IN (THE NAME OF YOUR NEWSPAPER) TOMORROW.)

BY DEVON FRANCIS
ASSOCIATED PRESS AVIATION EDITOR

(ADVANCE) MIAMI, FLA., JAN. 23--WITH THE FRANK APPROVAL AND ENCOURAGEMENT OF THE POSTOFFICE AND STATE DEPARTMENTS AND OF THE ARMY AND NAVY, UNITED STATES AVIATION INTERESTS--AIRLINE AND AIRCRAFT MANUFACTURERS--ARE HARD AT THEIR SPADE WORK IN LATIN AMERICA IN AN EFFORT TO REGAIN GROUND LOST TO EUROPEAN COMPETITORS.

THE WAR IS HELPING.

COUPLED WITH THE BLOCKADE OF THE EUROPEAN CONTINENT AND WARTIME DEMANDS ON THE WARRING POWERS' FACTORIES IS A DRIVE BY OFFICIAL WASHINGTON TO GIVE ADDED RECOGNITION TO UNITED STATES PLANES AND UNITED STATES AIRLINE SERVICES.

THE EXTRAORDINARY IMPORTANCE ATTACHED TO THE AIRPLANE IN LATIN AMERICA IS DUE TO TWO THINGS:

THE TOPOGRAPHY AND VAST DISTANCES WHICH WINGS ERASE, AND THE PROPAGANDA VALUE OF AVIATION.

THIS COUNTRY HAS BEEN SLOW ON THE DRAW IN USING AIRPLANES FOR PROPAGANDA.

GERMANS AND ITALIANS HAVE BEEN DOING IT FOR YEARS.

WHERE PLANES OF THE CONDOR SYNDICATE, A SUBSIDIARY OF THE GERMAN LUFTHANSA LINES, FLY FROM RIO DE JANEIRO TO BELEM AND SAO LUIZ ON THE NORTHEAST COAST OF BRAZIL AND WEST TO SAO PAULO AND CORUMBA ON THE BOLIVIAN BORDER, GERMAN PRESS RELEASES EMPHASIZE WHAT THEY TERM

30.24- 7131 30.24-7131

THE SUPERIORITY OF GERMAN FLYING TECHNIQUE AND OF GERMAN EQUIPMENT.

IN 1937, AT THE SECOND INTER-AMERICAN CONFERENCE FOR PEACE IN LIMA, PERU, ITALIAN AIRPLANES UNEXPECTEDLY STAGED SUCH A SPECTACULAR SHO THAT ONLY A QUICK DECISION TO HAVE THE PLANES ABOARD A UNITED STATES AIRCRAFT CARRIER PUT ON A COUNTER-DEMONSTRATION SAVED THE AERONAUTICAL FACE OF THIS COUNTRY.

THERE IS NO WRITING OFF GERMAN AVIATION COMPETITION IN LATIN AMERICA, DESPITE THE WARTIME EMERGENCIES IMPOSED ON THE REICH, AS MINOR.

EVER SINCE 1927, THE GERMANS HAVE HAD AIRLINES IN THE INTERIOR. TODAY WITH LINES WHOLLY OWNED, OR IN WHICH THEY ARE SUBSTANTIALLY REPRESENTED, THEY HAVE A ROUTE MILEAGE OF 16,500. THE ITALIANS HAVE 1,543 MILES OF LINES.

THAT COMPARES WITH 25,000 MILES OPERATED BY PAN AMERICAN AIRWAYS, A UNITED STATES COMPANY, AND ITS SUBSIDIARIES WITHIN SOUTH AMERICA.

THE GERMANS NO LONGER FLY THE SOUTH ATLANTIC TO WEST AFRICA AND EUROPE. THE ITALIANS DO, ONCE A MONTH.

THE GERMANS NO LONGER OPERATE IN COLOMBIA, WITHIN EASY FLYING DISTANCE OF THE PANAMA CANAL. THEY STILL MAINTAIN SERVICES IN ARGENTINA, BOLIVIA, CHILE, PERU AND ECUADOR IN ADDITION TO BRAZIL.

THE OUSTING OF WELL-ENTRENCHED GERMAN AIRLINE INTERESTS IN COLOMBIA LAST SUMMER RESULTED FROM A COMBINED DIPLOMATIC AND BUSINESS SQUEEZE-PLAY. NOBODY WAS TAKEN BY SURPRISE EXCEPT THE GERMANS, WHO WERE IN NO POSITION TO PROTEST.

PAN AMERICAN AIRWAYS ALREADY OWNED THE CONTROLLING STOCK IN THE AIRLINE COMPANY, SOCIEDAD COLOMBO ALEMANA DE TRANSPORTE AEREO, KNOWN AS "SCADTA."

IN 1929, WHEN PAN AMERICAN AIRWAYS AND SCADTA WERE FIGHTING TOOTH AND NAIL FOR OPERATING PRIVILEGES IN COLOMBIA, A COMPROMISE HAD BEEN REACHED, AND SHORTLY THEREAFTER THROUGH A SUPPLEMENTAL AGREEMENT ABOUT 200 GERMANS, WHO HAD DONE THE HARD PIONEERING WORK, WERE ASSURED CONTINUANCE OF EMPLOYMENT.

IN 1938, THE COLOMBIAN LEGISLATURE ADOPTED A LAW UNDER WHICH ALL DOMESTIC AIRLINES WERE TO BE NATIONALIZED BY 1941. THE GERMANS THEMSELVES WERE SAID TO HAVE HAD A HAND IN THE ADOPTION OF THE STATUTE. MANY HAD BECOME COLOMBIAN CITIZENS IN THE MEANTIME.

THE STAGE WAS BEING SET, AGAINST A DIPLOMATIC-LEGAL BACKDROP, FOR OUSTING THE GERMAN PERSONNEL WHICH, ORIGINALLY, HAD BEEN RESPONSIBLE FOR THE DEVELOPMENT OF SCADTA. DISQUIETING REPORTS HAD REACHED OFFICIAL WASHINGTON THAT SCADTA'S GERMAN PILOTS HAD MADE BETTER PHOTOGRAPHIC STUDIES OF THE DEFENSZS OF THE PANAMA CANAL THAN WERE AVAILABLE TO THE U.S. ARMY AIR CORPS ITSELF.

IN THE SPRING OF 1940, PAN AMERICAN AIRWAYS ANNOUNCED IT WOULD OPEN A DIRECT RUN BETWEEN MIAMI AND BARANQUILLA, COLOMBIA, FAMOUS FOR THE USIACURI THERMAL SPRINGS, AS SOON AS AN ORDER OF FOUR-ENGINE LANDPLANE TRANSPORTS CAME FROM THE FACTORY.

ON JUNE 8, SCADTA SUDDENLY WAS CONSOLIDATED WITH SACO, ANOTHER COLOMBIAN LINE, TO BECOME AEROVIAS NACIONALES DE COLOMBIA--A NAME PROMPTLY SHORTENED TO AVIANCA. THE GOVERNMENT ASSUMED A CONTROLLING INTEREST, BUT PAN AMERICAN AIRWAYS RETAINED A SUBSTANTIAL BLOCK OF STOCK PLUS MANAGEMENT INTEREST.

JUST TWO DAYS LATER, THE UNITED STATES COMPANY, HAVING FLOWN ONE

OF ITS NEW TRANSPORTS, LOADED WITH ITS OWN PERSONNEL, TO BARANQUILLA AND ON TO THE CAPITAL AT BOGOTA, GAVE DISMISSAL NOTICES TO ALL THE GERMAN EMPLOYES OF SCADTA, OFFICE WORKERS EXCEPTED.

TODAY MOST OF THE GERMAN OFFICE PERSONNEL HAS BEEN REPLACED. COLOMBIAN PILOTS GRADUALLY ARE BEING TRAINED TO TAKE OVER THE CONTROLS FROM PAN AMERICAN AIRWAYS INSTRUCTORS, AND THE GERMAN AIRPLANES PREVIOUSLY USED HAVE BEEN RETIRED IN FAVOR OF TRANSPORTS MANUFACTURED IN THE UNITED STATES.

THE ADVERTISING (OR PROPAGANDA) OF UNITED STATES FIRMS IS INEXTRICABLY BOUND UP WITH PROPAGANDA OF THE UNITED STATES GOVERNMENT AND CAN WELL BEAR THE LABEL OF COUNTER-PROPAGANDA ON A CONTINENT WHOSE PRODUCTS COMPETE AS SHARPLY AS THEY DO WITH THOSE OF THE UNITED STATES IN WORLD MARKETS.

THE TIME WAS WHEN UNITED STATES AIRCRAFT MANUFACTURERS "UNLOADED" OBSOLESCENT AIRPLANES ON THE SOUTH AMERICAN REPUBLICS. THOSE SAME COMPANIES TODAY ARE TRYING TO WIN THE CONFIDENCE OF DISILLUSIONED CUSTOMERS AT A MOMENT WHEN THEIR FACTORIES--ENGAGED IN SUPPLYING EMBATTLED ENGLAND AND THE UNITED STATES ARMY AND NAVY WITH WAR MATERIALS--ARE UNABLE TO SUPPLY SOUTH AMERICAN NEEDS.

YET UNITED STATES AIRCRAFT MAKERS ARE TRYING TO COOPERATE WITH MILITARY MISSIONS WHICH ARE DRIFTING SOUTHWARD TO COMBAT THE IMPRESSION MADE BY ITALIANS AND GERMANS OVER A LONG PERIOD OF YEARS.

PRIOR TO THE START OF THE WAR, BRAZILIANS, CHILEANS AND ARGENTINEAS WERE INVITED IN NUMBERS TO ROME AND BERLIN TO STUDY ITALIAN AND GERMAN MILITARY TACTICS AND AIR POWER. ITALIAN AND GERMAN AIR ATTACHES WITH DIPLOMATIC STANDING IN SOUTH AMERICA ACTED AS INSTRUCTORS FOR PERUVIAN, BOLIVIAN, CHILEAN, ARGENTINE AND BRAZILIAN FLIERS.

TODAY, THE MORAL, DIPLOMATIC AND FINANCIAL BACKING OF THE UNITED STATES GOVERNMENT IS BEING THROWN BEHIND THE AVIATION INTERESTS FIGHTING FOR A BETTER FOOTHOLD IN SOUTH AMERICA. LATIN AMERICAN ARMY AND NAVY OFFICERS HAVE BEEN COMING, IN SMALL GROUPS, TO THE UNITED STATES TO STUDY OUR MILITARY ESTABLISHMENTS.

"WORKING AS A UNIT AND AS ONE COMPANY," SAID WARREN LEE PIERSON, PRESIDENT OF THE EXPORT-IMPORT BANK, AFTER A 15,000-MILE TOUR OF SOUTH AMERICA, "GERMAN FIRMS ARE THE GREATEST THREAT TO AMERICAN BUSINESS IN LATIN AMERICA."

HE UNDER-STATED THE CASE.

FRANCE'S CORDON SANITAIRE ON GERMANY'S EASTERN FLANK EXISTED ONLY SO LONG AS THE COUNTRIES COMPOSING IT WERE CONVINCED THAT FRANCE COULD BACK UP ITS PLEDGES WITH BAYONETS.

THE ROOSEVELTIAN POLICY OF HEMISPHERE DEFENSE WILL BE THE POLICY OF THE LATIN AMERICAN REPUBLICS ONLY SO LONG AS THEY ARE CONVINCED THAT THE UNITED STATES CAN BACK IT UP WITH TRADE FOR THE HEMISPHERE'S ECONOMIC GOOD AND WITH ARMS FOR THE HEMISPHERE'S MILITARY SECURITY.

LATVIA, LITHUANIA, ESTONIA
STILL ARE NATIONS IN U.S.EYES

BUT COMMISSARS NOW
SOVIETIZING THEM (1260)

BY LLOYD LEHRBAS

(ADVANCE)...WASHINGTON, JAN.23-(AP)-THE BALTIC REPUBLICS OF LATVIA, LITHUANIA AND ESTONIA--BORN AT THE END OF THE WORLD WAR AND ABSORBED BY THE SOVIET UNION LAST YEAR--STILL ARE RECOGNIZED BY THE UNITED STATES GOVERNMENT AS INDEPENDENT NATIONS.

ALTHOUGH WIPED OFF THE MAP OF EUROPE BY SOVIET DIPLOMACY AND THE RED ARMY, THE THREE STATES MAINTAIN DIPLOMATIC REPRESENTATIVES HERE AND RETAIN THEIR GOVERNMENTAL AND PRIVATE ASSETS IN THIS COUNTRY.

THE TRADITIONAL ATTITUDE OF THE UNITED STATES WAS AFFIRMED BY SUMNER WELLES WHEN HE ANNOUNCED, AS ACTING SECRETARY OF STATE, THAT THE AMERICAN GOVERNMENT WOULD NOT RECOGNIZE THE SOVIET INCORPORATION OF THE BALTIC "TRIPLETS." THE STATE DEPARTMENT DOES NOT CONSIDER VALID THE ELECTIONS THERE WHICH RESULTED IN THE PARLIAMENTS OF THE THREE TINY NATIONS ASKING TO JOIN THE SOVIET UNION.

AND SO, THE UNITED STATES CONTINUES TO MAINTAIN RELATIONS WITH THE DIPLOMATIC ENVOYS OF THE THREE BALTIC STATES IN THIS COUNTRY JUST AS THOUGH NOTHING HAD HAPPENED ON THE SHORES OF THE BALTIC, WHERE RUSSIAN COMMISSARS NOW ARE ENGAGED IN A THOROUGH SOVIETIZING OF

"REPUBLICS NUMBER 14, 15 AND 16."

DR.ALFRED BILMANIS, LATVIAN MINISTER IN WASHINGTON, REMAINS IN CHARGE OF THE LEGATION HERE AND CONTINUES TO CONDUCT WHATEVER DIPLOMATIC AFFAIRS MAY BE REQUIRED.

JOHANNES KAIV REPRESENTS ESTONIA IN THE UNITED STATES AS ACTING CONSUL GENERAL IN NEW YORK "INCHARGE OF LEGATION."

SINCE THERE ARE NO LATVIAN, LITHUANIAN OR ESTONIAN "GOVERNMENTS-IN-EXILE" SIMILAR TO THOSE MAINTAINED BY NORWAY, THE NETHERLANDS OR POLAND, THE BALTIC ENVOYS HERE ACT INDEPENDENTLY.

THE UNITED STATES HAS "FROZEN" THE GOLD AND OTHER ASSETS OF ALL THREE NATIONS IN THIS COUNTRY, BUT RECOGNIZES THEIR OWNERSHIP BY THOSE NATIONS.

THE ELEVEN SHIPS FLYING FLAGS OF THE BALTIC NATIONS, WHICH ARE NOW REFUGEES IN AMERICAN PORTS, ARE RECOGNIZED AS OWNED BY THOSE NATIONS, AND NOT BY SOVIET RUSSIA.

THE UNITED STATES GOVERNMENT ALSO MAINTAINS THE VALIDITY OF WAR DEBTS OWED BY EACH COUNTRY ALTHOUGH AT THE TIME THE LAST INSTALLMENT FELL DUE (DECEMBER 15) THE USUAL DUNS WERE NOT SENT TO THEM BECAUSE OF "CURRENT GOVERNMENTAL CONDITIONS."

DEBTS OWED THE UNITED STATES NOW TOTAL: ESTONIA, $21,612,594; LATVIA, $8,912,019; AND LITHUANIA, $7,980,148.

WHEN SOVIET RUSSIA ABSORBED THE THREE COUNTRIES, SHE DID NOT OFFER TO ASSUME RESPONSIBILITY FOR THE DEBTS.

STATE DEPARTMENT RECORDS SHOW THATAMERICANS HAD FEW INTERESTS IN ANY OF THREE COUNTRIES AND THE MAJOR OUTSTANDING FINANCIAL QUESTION INVOLVES SOME DEBTS OWED AMERICAN FIRMS BY FIRMS IN THOSE COUNTRIES.

IT IS ESTIMATED THAT BEFORE THE RUSSIAN PENETRATION BEGAN THERE WERE ONLY 150 AMERICANS IN LATVIA, 250 IN LITHUANIA, AND 50 IN ESTONIA, AND ALL LEFT THOSE COUNTRIES WITHOUT INCIDENT.

ESTONIA HAD AN AREA OF 18,353 SQUARE MILES, HALF THE SIZE OF INDIANA, AND A POPULATION OF FINNISH ORIGIN, MOSTLY LUTHERANS, OF 1,135,000.

LATVIA HAD AN AREA OF 25,402 SQUARE MILES, ROUGHLY THE SIZE OF WEST VIRGINIA, AND A POPULATION, MORE THAN HALF PROTESTANTS, OF 1,950,000.

LITHUANIA'S 20,390 SQUARE MILES (HALF THE SIZE OF OHIO) MAINTAINED A POPULATION OF 2,500,000, WHICH WAS 80 PER CENT CATHOLIC.

ALL THREE ARE CHIEFLY AGRICULTURAL COUNTRIES AND THEIR EXPORTS WENT MOSTLY TO ENGLAND AND GERMANY, WHO ALSO SOLD THEM A LARGER PART OF ALL THEIR IMPORTS, ALTHOUGH LATVIA WAS THE NATURAL ROUTE FOR TRADE BETWEEN RUSSIA AND THE REST OF THE WORLD.

THE UNITED STATES HAD ONLY A SMALL PERCENTAGE OF THE TRADE WITH ALL THREE NATIONS.

JOHN C.WILEY RETAINS HIS TITLE AS AMERICAN MINISTER TO THE BALTIC STATES,BUT HE--AS WELL AS OTHER AMERICAN DIPLOMATS AND CONSULAR OFFICIALS STATIONED THERE--WERE WITHDRAWN AT THE REQUEST OF THE SOVIET GOVERNMENT, AND THE UNITED STATES HAS NO OFFICIAL OBSERVERS THERE.

THE SOVIET UNION ALSO DOES NOT PERMIT AMERICAN OR OTHER FOREIGN NEWSPAPERMEN IN REPUBLICS NUMBER 14, NUMBER 15 OR NUMBER 16. WHAT IS HAPPENING IN THOSE THREE LANDS IS HIDDEN BEHIND A CURTAIN OF SILENCE.

HERE IS WHAT HAPPENED BEFORE THE THREE TINY REPUBLICS JOINED THE UNION OF SOCIALIST SOVIET REPUBLICS:

1. SOVIET RUSSIA, ABOUT TO BEGIN A WAR AGAINST TOUGH LITTLE FINLAND, BROUGHT PRESSURE ON LATVIA, LITHUANIA AND ESTONIA TO SIGN MUTUAL DEFENSE PACTS. THE PACTS GAVE RUSSIA NAVAL AND MILITARY BASES IN EACH COUNTRY, AND THE RIGHT OF PASSAGE THROUGH THE COUNTRIES FOR THE RED ARMY.

2. WHILE REPUBLICAN AND ANTI-SOVIET LEADERS FLED, THE RED ARMY LAST JUNE 17 MADE A BLOODLESS INVASION OF ALL THREE NATIONS, BRINGING THEM COMPLETELY UNDER THE SOVIET'S DIPLOMATIC AND POLITICAL THUMBS.

3. NEW ELECTIONS WERE HELD, AT WHICH THERE WERE ONLY COMMUNIST CANDIDATES, AND THE RESULTING RUSSIAN-DOMINATED PARLIAMENTS VOTED TO SUBMIT PETITIONS TO MOSCOW REQUESTING THE INCORPORATION OF EACH OF THE REPUBLICS IN THE SOVIET UNION.

4. IN THE FIRST WEEK OF AUGUST, THE SUPREME SOVIET IN MOSCOW VOTED THEM INTO THE SOVIET UNION AS THE LITHUANIAN, LATVIAN AND ESTONIA SOCIALIST SOVIET REPUBLICS.

WHAT HAS HAPPENED SINCE THEN HAS BEENWITHIN THE FRAMEWORK OF NEW CONSTITUTIONS, ALONG SOVIET LINES, WHICH HAVE BEEN ADOPTED BY SOVIETS.

THE LATVIAN CONSTITUTION (COPIES OF WHICH HAVE BEEN RECEIVED BY THE STATE DEPARTMENT) IS BELIEVED HERE TO BE TYPICAL.

THIS CONSTITUTION DECLARES LATVIA TO BE A SOCIALIST STATE OF WORKERS AND PEASANTS. ALL POWER IS DECLARED TO BELONG TO THE WORKERS OF THE COUNTRY IN THE PERSON OF THE SOVIET WORKERS' DEPUTIES.

ROOSEVELT MEETS HALIFAX IN BAY AS HE ARRIVES ON NEW BATTLESHIP; THOUSANDS DIE IN RUMANIAN RIOTS

BREAKS PRECEDENT

Trip Made to Annapolis as H.M.S. George V Sails Up Chesapeake

THEN BACK TO WASHINGTON

Envoy Calls on Us for Quick and Generous Help if Nazi Power Is to Be Broken

By [illegible]
Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 24—President Roosevelt broke all diplomatic precedents today when he drove to Annapolis, rode out on the yacht Potomac to the great new British battleship, King George V, and personally welcomed to America the new British Ambassador, Viscount Halifax.

Early tonight the President brought Lord Halifax ashore on the Potomac, stood by while the new Ambassador read a statement appealing for quick and "generous help" to Britain so that the British could "break this Nazi power that is trying to enslave the world," and then drove the envoy in his own car to the British Embassy here.

It was the first time in American history that a President had left the White House and the capital to meet an Ambassador of a foreign power.

After his unannounced drive over rainswept and slippery roads from Washington to Annapolis, the President went on board the Potomac just before 3 P. M. for the run out to the King George V, which has brought Lord and Lady Halifax across dangerous seas. At 7 P. M. the Presidential yacht slipped back to a Naval Academy dock to disembark the Chief Executive and his visitors.

Reads Statement to Press

The new Ambassador called newspaper men, drenched by icy rain, aboard [illegible] narrow deck of the yacht, [illegible] after saying that he was "sorry, [illegible] we had to stand in the rain,' [illegible] them his prepared state[illegible] which he predicted victo[illegible] itain with America's help

The complete text of Lord Halifax's formal statement, which Mr. Peake handed out later, follows:

"Lady Halifax and I are very glad to be here, and we have had a voyage which we shall always remember. It has been something of a rest for me, for this is almost the first time I have been out of daily and nightly check with the war Cabinet in London since the war began, a year and a half ago.

"The Prime Minister and Mrs. Churchill came to the port from which we sailed to say good by to us, and now the President has done my country the great honor of coming to greet us on arriving. His action in meeting H. M. S. George V has been tremendously appreciated by he whole ship's company, from the captain to the last-joined member of the crew, as it most certainly will be in Great Britain and in every part of the British Empire.

"I expect you know more of the latest news of what is going on in the world than I do, for I have been rather cut off from news for the last week or so, and I have therefore nothing much to say to you on that score.

"I have come here as a member of the war Cabinet serving as His Majesty's Ambassador, to make known to the government and people of the United States from time to time in what ways, if they are willing, they can best give us the help we need. The more quickly your generous help can be made effective the sooner shall we be able to break this Nazi power that is trying to enslave Europe and the world.

"I shall be continuing the work begun by my predecessor, Lord Lothian, whose death has been such a loss to his country and who I know is mourned by the many friends he made in the United States.

"We have assuredly a rough, difficult and perhaps a very long road before us; but the British people are united as never before in history and I have no doubt that with your help we can win through and so save those causes on which your civilization and ours depend."

After giving his statement and being photographed by camera and newsreel men, Lord Halifax unassumingly followed the newspaper men off the Potomac and stood, his umbrella furled, beside the Presidential car until President Roosevelt was formally piped ashore. The President entered his car followed by Lord and Lady Halifax and Major Gen. E. M. Watson, Presidential secretary.

With a motorcycle escort with sirens screaming ahead, the party then proceeded through a heavy rain to Washington and up Massachusetts Avenue to the red-brick British Embassy, leaving the new envoy and Lady Halifax on the steps of the ambassadorial dwelling. Then the President returned to the White House.

Envoy Transferred to Yacht

Aides to the Ambassador said that after an uneventful seven-day trip across the Atlantic, the British battleship anchored off Annapolis at 3 P. M. and that, as soon as the Presidential yacht reached its side, Lord and Lady Halifax were transferred to the Potomac, the President not going aboard the British man-of-war.

During the afternoon on board the yacht the President and Lord Halifax are believed to have conferred, with the President presumably receiving the latest messages from King George VI and Prime Minister Winston Churchill. It is regarded as certain, also, that world affairs were discussed, even though most informally, on the hour and a quarter drive by auto to the British Embassy.

News correspondents obtained a view of one scene aboard the Potomac, for, when the craft docked, the Presidential party was still at dinner.

Opposite the President was his naval aide, Captain Daniel Callaghan, with the Chargé d'Affaires of the British Embassy, Neville M. Butler, on his left, and, on his right, Mrs. Butler. At the center of the table at one side sat Secretary Knox, and opposite him, Admiral Harold R. Stark, Chief of Naval Operations.

The President told a joke and the whole party, including Lord Halifax, laughed heartily. Secretary Knox was seen to be talking, pounding upon the table for emphasis.

With the stewards and the soft lamplight it was a cozy sight to the correspondents shivering in the downpour outside, and Lord Halifax won their hearts with his remark twenty minutes later that he was sorry they had been kept waiting. This, and the fact that the Ambassador, by this time wearing his familiar bowler, and Lady Halifax, who had slipped into a black fur coat by this time, took the process of photographing with utmost good humor completed the friendliness of the arrival.

The simple recounting of the day's developments, however, does not tell the dramatic story of the breaking of all diplomatic precedents by which a Chief of State went to meet an Ambassador. In many ways the President's action was regarded by diplomats here as one of the strongest evidences of American sympathy with Britain that has yet been afforded.

Only his press adviser, Sir Charles Peake, accompanied the Ambassador. Sir Charles came ashore carrying the steel helmet and gas mask of Lord Halifax swung over his shoulder.

"There is no telling when the Ambassador may return and need them," he asserted.

Coming to the United States on the British battleship with Lord Halifax were Gen. John C. H. Lee, of the United States Army; Admiral Robert L. Ghormley, of the United States Navy, and Capt. Edward L. Cochrane, of the United States Bureau of Ships, who went to London last fall as official military observers of the European war for the American government. They were whisked away in waiting automobiles without talking to reporters.

The President Sets Out

The details of the historic greeting aboard the Potomac, just after nightfall, probably will not be revealed for years, if ever. Although it was known that the King George V was headed for Annapolis early during the morning, Mr. Roosevelt refused all requests for comment at his regular Friday morning press conference here. He would not say what the man o' war's destination was, or whether he would meet it.

When, finally, he left the White House at 1:40 p. m. for Annapolis, newspaper men, photographers and radio representatives were waiting for him in cars at the east gate to the White House. There had been no formal announcement, but enough unofficial information was available to have them on hand.

Once again, upon reaching Annapolis and following the President into the Naval Academy grounds at 2:50 p. m., there was lack of official information for the press. The President and members of his party boarded the Potomac and headed for the battleship, said, at the time, to be a half hour out in Chesapeake Bay at Annapolis Roads. It finally was revealed that Lord Halifax would be taken aboard the Potomac, and that the yacht would be back at the Naval Academy some four hours or more later. What was to take place during the interim was not announced, although it was assumed that Mr. Roosevelt and the new diplomat would confer on conditions abroad.

Return by Automobile

When they returned to the yard the official party, including a delegation from the British Embassy and the Canadian, Australian and South African Legations, returned through the rain to Washington by automobile.

The whereabouts of Lord Halifax had been kept secret ever since he departed for the United States. The Viscount takes the place of Lord Lothian, who died in Washington last month, while President Roosevelt was on a Caribbean cruise. Not until the King George V was sighted on its way here was it even hinted that the new ambassador was heading here through belligerent waters aboard a battleship.

HALIFAX'S ARRIVAL BURSTS ON LONDON

Beaming Foreign Office Gets Its News Tangled—Admiralty Keeps Its Cautious Role

CHURCHILLS SAW SAILING

Communique Clears 'Mystery' of Departure, Reveals Commissioning of Battleship

By DREW MIDDLETON

By The Associated Press.

LONDON, Jan. 24—Smiles blossomed as freely as qualifying phrases in London's austere Foreign Office today as spokesmen gleefully (if somewhat prematurely) announced the arrival of Lord Halifax, the new British Ambassador to the United States, in America.

One went so far as to announce with gestures:

"He sailed up the Potomac to Washington in a battleship," the brand new King George V.

It became known that Prime Minister and Mrs. Churchill had traveled with Lord and Lady Halifax to a northern port where they bade them godspeed.

The original disclosure that Lord Halifax had arrived off America came from the Foreign Office, which said erroneously that he already had landed at Washington. Later the Admiralty announced that he would land at some unspecified port.

The Admiralty communiqué follows:

"Lord Halifax, His Majesty's Ambassador-designate to the United States, and Lady Halifax will land in America today en route for Washington.

"Lord and Lady Halifax have crossed the Atlantic in the Battleship H. M. S. King George V, Captain W. R. Patterson, C. V. O., R. N. (Commander of the Victorian Order, officer of the Royal Navy.)

"The Prime Minister and Mrs. Winston Churchill traveled north with Lord and Lady Halifax and bade farewell to them at a northern base prior to their departure."

This was the first official intimation that the King George V, 35,000 tons, was in commission. It is one of a class of the five largest and most powerfully armed battleships in the world.

The Admiralty, which will not reveal the details of oarlocks, even tonight "wouldn't think of saying anything about the voyage."

"Was the sea rough?" a press attaché was asked.

"It might have been," he answered, with caution.

"Was it calm?"

"That also might have been the case," he replied.

C. D. Howe, Canadian Supply Minister, and members of his party were reported to have returned to North America aboard the King George also. Mr. Howe went to London early in December.

Meantime, the announcement of Lord Halifax's arrival had cleared up "a mystery" here.

Correspondents who for days had been asking: "When can we say he's on his way?" had been told, smilingly: "When he arrives."

Some London newspapers were suggesting that Lord Halifax would confer with Sir Samuel Hoare, Ambassador to Spain, in Lisbon, before leaving by plane for Washington; others that he would travel by special plane direct from England to Washington.

All the time, however, the name of Sir Charles Peake, Lord Halifax's press adviser, remained on his office door and inquiries as to his absence was answered: "Sir Charles is in the country."

HOPKINS SAW HALIFAX OFF

Churchill And Wife Were Also At Northern England Port

London, Saturday, Jan. 25 (AP)—Harry Hopkins, President Roosevelt's personal representative in England, saw Lord Halifax off when the new Ambassador sailed for the United States aboard the King George V, it was disclosed today.

With Hopkins at a northern port were Prime Minister Winston Churchill and Mrs. Churchill.

Announced in London.

London, Jan. 24 (A. P.)—Lord Halifax, the new British Ambassador to Washington, and Lady Halifax will land in America today from the new battleship King George V, en route to Washington, it was announced officially today.

Prime Minister and Mrs. Churchill traveled with Lord and Lady Halifax to a northern port, where they bade them godspeed.

An Admiralty communique said:

"Lord Halifax, his Majesty's Ambassador-designate to the United States, and Lady Halifax will land in America today, en route for Washington.

"Lord and Lady Halifax have crossed the Atlantic in the battleship H. M. S. King George V, Capt. W. R. Patterson, C. V. O., R. N.

Churchill Bids Farewell.

"The Prime Minister and Mrs. Winston Churchill traveled north with Lord and Lady Halifax and bade farewell to them at a northern base prior to their departure."

This was the first official intimation that the King George V, 35,000 tons, is in commission. It is one of a class of the five largest and most powerfully armed battleships in the world.

C. D. Howe, Canadian Supply Minister, and members of his party were reported to have returned to North America aboard the King George also. Howe went to London early in December.

Ship Launched in 1939.

The King George V was launched on February 21, 1939.

Word was received from London last April that the King George V and four new sisterships were undergoing trial runs, but the ship had not been mentioned in official dispatches since that time.

The floating fortress, described by the London press at the time of her launching as one of the largest battleships ever built in this country, mounts ten 14-inch guns in two quadruple turrets and one twin turret, sixteen 5.25-inch guns and many lighter ones. The ship was designed to carry three airplanes and 1,500 officers and men. It has a speed of about 30 knots.

King George V Typifies Speed In Shipbuilding

Halifax's Vessel, Launched Early in 1939, Is One of 5 in New British Class

By The Associated Press

ANNAPOLIS, Md., Jan. 24.—Great Britain's new battleship, the 35,000-ton King George V, details about which have been closely guarded since its launching, was the first naval vessel of a belligerent nation to arrive in the United States since the European war started. The vessel brought Lord Halifax, New British Ambassador to the United States, here today to meet President Roosevelt.

Under international law the mighty craft must leave within twenty-four hours unless its officers can prove that it lacks fuel or provisions to reach the nearest British port—in this case Bermuda—or that it needs repairs to make it seaworthy.

[The United Press reported it was revealed that the King George V would remain at its anchorage in Annapolis Roads for two days, adding that the warship took on two barges of fuel oil last night and would take aboard general supplies beginning this morning.]

International law provides other loopholes which would permit a longer stay, such as hurricane weather and the presence of a belligerent ship outside the harbor. The German pocket battleship Graf Spee was allowed to extend its stay at Montevideo in December, 1939, because British warships had damaged it severely in a sea battle. The Graf Spee later was scuttled by its own crew outside the harbor.

Launched on Feb. 21, 1939, the thirty-knot King George V is one of five ships of its class constructed to raise Britain's capital-ship strength to nineteen. The vessel—like its sister ships, the Prince of Wales, the Duke of York, the Jellicoe and the Beatty—was built in secrecy because of the war.

Nothing was heard of the craft until last April 23, when it was announced that the five ships were undergoing trials. Rumors said all were in service, but the British kept silent. (DESCRIPTIVE)

The King George cost $28,000,000, carries ten fourteen-inch guns, six forward and four aft, and the gunners are protected from shrapnel by steel-inclosed turrets.

Sixteen 5.25-inch guns are mounted on the sides and the vessel carries special armor for protection against air bombs. The normal crew calls for 1,500 officers and men.

Unofficial sources estimated that it cost $21,360 for fuel to bring the King George to Annapolis.

Cheers of British tars aboard the King George V rolled over Annapolis Roads today—not for President Roosevelt but for four "stalled" newspaper men and photographers.

In an open launch on the rain-driven, choppy waters, the newspapermen drifted within fifty feet of the warship, which dropped anchor five miles off Annapolis at 2:59 p. m. today after the voyage from England. The launch engine had sputtered to a stop after the reporters had circled the great gray battleship one time and a half, and as a second launch of news photographers came to the rescue the British gobs lining the decks of the King George V let go with a rolling cheer.

The battleship, streaked with dark grays and blacks of camouflage, put overside two launches, and two launches from a United States destroyer also patrolled the area.

A freighter plodded by through the heaving sea, and a pleasure launch bounced past—the only other witnesses to the surprise arrival of the visiting warship.

The name "King George V" stood out in blocked letters on the stern but had been painted over to conceal the vessel's identity.

The Union Jack flapped from the bow, and just before the launch was towed away a huge British flag was unfurled from the stern.

Building Larger Ships

While the 35,000-ton King George V is "the mightiest of Britain's warships," being, with its four sister ships, "the largest, the most powerfully armed and the most strongly protected battleships now built in the world," according to the British Press service, 30 Rockefeller Plaza, the British are now building two battleships not yet named which will displace at least 40,000 tons.

The Lion and the Temeraire are said to exceed the King George V in size, while the three battle cruisers, Hood, Renown and Repulse, are larger but of an older type.

All five of the sister ships were launched, according to the British Press, in an unusually advanced stage of completion, as follows:

	Keel laid	Launched
	1937	1939
King George V..	Jan. 1	Feb. 21
Prince of Wales..	Jan. 1	May 3
Duke of York...	May 5	Sept. 16
Jellicoe	July 20	Nov. 11
Beatty	June 1	Nov. 11

In the opinion of many naval experts, this type of warship approches more closely than any other to that dream of all naval architects, the "unsinkable" battleship.

Compares with such of its predecessors as the Nelson, the King George V carries a vastly increased percentage of weight entailed by under-water protection against torpedo, mine or bomb attacks. If belt and deck armor be included, the total weight of defensive elements is 40 per cent of the full displacement of 35,000 tons.

The speed of this class is considerably in advance of the Nelson type, namely thirty knots (thirty-four and a quarter miles an hour) as compared with twenty-three knots, and there is also an appreciable increase in steaming endurance. The ship's fourteen-inch guns fire shells weighing at least 1,400 pounds and have a high rate of fire.

The King George V and its sister ships are sufficiently powerful and swift to annihilate the remaining German pocket battleships—the Admiral Scheer and the Lutzow—which carry only eleven-inch guns and have a speed of twenty-six knots, the British Press said, and are capable of dealing with those recent additions to the German Navy, the Bismarck and the Tirpitz, which are expected to be commissioned soon.

SERVICE CHIEFS TO TESTIFY IN SECRET ON AIDING BRITISH Army, Navy and Air Corps Leaders Will Talk in Private on Monday.

REPUBLICANS ASSAIL 'GAG'

Roosevelt Tells Reporters He'll Not Comment Now on Limits to His Power.

Washington, Jan. 24 (A. P.).—Amid Republican cries of "gag rule," the Democratic majority of the House Foreign Affairs Committee ordered the top-ranking officers of the army, navy and air corps to testify in secret on Monday, instead of holding public sessions for them today on the administration's aid-to-Britain bill. First there was an argument over the parliamentary situation; then the Democratic and Republican committeemen met separately to discuss secrecy vs. publicity, and finally Chairman Bloom clashed with opponents angrily over the procedure, ordered as the committee ended the hectic session for lunch.

Mr. Bloom said that the committee would hear the military men on Monday. Public hearings are to end tomorrow.

Mr. Fish started the row by telling newspaper men in Chairman Bloom's presence that a "practically unprecedented gag rule" had prevented him from making a motion for the appearance of the military and naval leaders. "I deny it," shouted Chairman Bloom.

"There was no gag rule," he said, adding that the decision to hear the military chiefs in private was reached by the Democratic majority at a closed meeting in which the Republicans refused to participate.

Meanwhile, at his press conference, President Roosevelt said that he would not express an opinion on proposed changes in the bill until he saw the measure when it came out of committee and could study the specific language of any amendment. This was his reply when asked about reports that he would have no objection to limitations on the bill's grant of power and the life of its operations.

When the full committee reconvened, it agreed to recess until 1:30 P. M., after voting down, 13 to 10, along strictly party lines, an effort by Representative Fish to have Gen. George C. Marshall, the army's Chief of Staff; Admiral Harold R. Stark, Chief of Naval Operations, and Major-Gen. George H. Brett, acting chief of the Army Air Corps, testify publicly. Before this decision, Chairman Bloom issued the following statement:

"The full committee, in a prior executive session, had authorized Representative Fish, the ranking minority member, to invite whatever witnesses he wished "as minority witnesses." Representative Fish invited Admiral Stark, Gen. Marshall and Gen. Brett.

"Subsequent to the invitations issued by Mr. Fish and after their names had been announced at Mr. Fish's request the witnesses, in conversation with the chairman of the committee, asked whether or not the committee had invited them to appear as witnesses, to which the chairman replied that the committee had authorized Mr. Fish to invite such witnesses as he desired 'as minority witnesses.'

Letter to Fish.

"The witnesses suggested a committee invitation and stated that they preferred to be heard in executive session."

Chairman Bloom also made public this text of a letter which he said Gen. Marshall had written to Mr. Fish:

"With reference to your invitation for me to appear before the Foreign Relations Committee in connection with H. R. 1776, I was informed by the chairman of the committee last night that my presence had not been requested by the committee. In view of the fact that my testimony would be that of the Chief of Staff of the Army, rather than that of an individual, I would prefer to appear on the request of the committee.

"I take the liberty of suggesting that if my presence is desired by the committee the hearing be in executive ssssion in order that I might make complete and frank replies to the questions that probably would be asked."

Mr. Bloom said that in view of these facts the Democratic majority unanimously had agreed to extend to Gen. Marshall, Admiral Stark and Gen. Brett invitations to testify and had assured the officials that their testimony would be heard behind closed doors.

Some Republican members were heard exhorting Representative Fish to demand that Mr. Bloom disclose "who ordered the generals not to come."

No Embarrassment.

Mr. Fish told reporters that in inviting the officers, he had told them that they would be expected to testify publicly, but that they need not answer any embarrassing questions.

Asserting that the lease-lend bill vitally concerned national defense, Mr. Fish declared that the committee would be "derelict in its duty if we do not have expert testimony."

When the Democratic committee members retired to a private room for the executive session, all the Republicans except Mr. Fish remained behind, chatting and talking with newspaper men.

"It looks like a sit-down strike on our side, but why not?" remarked Representative Eaton, Republican, of New Jersey. "They're in the majority and can run things the way they want to.

"Mr. Fish said that he was informed that some one had called the witnesses up and told them not to come. There was talk among us up here that it was the Chairman (Mr. Bloom), but we don't know for sure."

Fish Makes Report.

When Mr. Fish came from the closed session, he told the reporters that the Democratic majority was trying to arrange to hear the military witnesses in secret, but added "I'm not interested."

"The majority are afraid of what the generals might say," Mr. Fish contended, "after what Lindbergh said yesterday about the impossibility of invasion of this country."

"We want to see if they were consulted in writing this bill," Mr. Fish explained.

"We want to see whether they favor giving away our navy and all these airplanes, instead of building up the 10,000-plane force that Col. Lindbergh talked about; and whether they favor our acquisition of (more) air bases nearby."

Roosevelt's Views.

At his press conference, President Roosevelt said that he had not read and, therefore, would not comment on the statement made before the House Foreign Affairs Committee yesterday by Col. Charles A. Lindbergh to the effect that the war might have been avoided had the United States not given moral support to Great Britain and France. After saying that he had not read the Lindbergh testimony, he asked the reporters why he should.

The President would not comment on a reporter's statement that Gov. Leverett Saltonstall of Massachusetts, a Republican, had indorsed the British aid bill.

Afternoon Session.

The afternoon session began without incident and Mr. Bloom called William R. Castle, Under-Secretary of State in the Hoover administration. Reading a prepared statement, Mr. Castle said that the passage of the British-aid bill would give the world two dictators, "one for the totalitarians and one for the democracies."

The measure would grant the President such power, Mr. Castle testified that "in practice he could dominate Britain while the war continues, as well as the United States."

"He alone could say what supplies were to be sent and when and where," the witness said. "Through his control of the supplies flowing out from what he pleases to call this 'arsenal of democracy,' he would become supreme in all military matters, British as well as American.

"At home, Congres would be impotent and in Britain, fear, rather than gratitude, would bring the British Government to the feet of the American President."

Mr. Castle termed the administration bill one "which signs away our freedom, creates a dictatorship, does not enable us to help Britain more than we are doing now, except in so far as it permits the President to ignore such laws as he pleases and thus to make war."

"The only way to get aid to Britain is to send planes and guns and ships," Mr. Castle said. "The amount of this depends wholly on the capacity of our factories and the rapidity of increase depends on our ability to expand production, not on the orders of the President.

"We are then reduced to the supposition that what the authors of the bill mean is that aid will go more quickly if the Congress is eliminated. We are not now at war. Britain is at war, but, even so, the British Parliament functions as effectively as ever."

Mr. Castle said that he was presenting no alternative measure, but added: "Yet, in the case of a bill, the real purpose of which seems to be to create a dictatorship, nothing is necessary except opposition."

Senate Hearing Due.

The Senate Foreign Relations Committee decided, coincidently, to call four Cabinet officers, headed by Secretary of State Hull, as witnesses when it begins public hearings on the bill on Monday. Secretary Hull was expected to be followed to the stand by Secretaries Knox, Stimson and Morgenthau. All testified before the House committee.

Senator Capper, Republican, of Kansas, said that he had suggested that Col. Lindbergh also be called by the Senate committee, while Senator Gillette, Democrat, of Iowa, was reported to have urged that the committee ask Major George Fielding Eliot, military analyst and newspaper columnist, to testify.

British Expect Nazis to Hurl All Into Invasion to Win War by May

Foresee Gas Attacks in History's Greatest Assault—Set to Repel It by Suffering Huge Losses in Men, Planes and Ships

By DREW MIDDLETON

By The Associated Press.

LONDON, Jan. 24—Informed military and diplomatic circles in London seriously expect the mightiest onslaught in history—with bombing on an unimagined scale and the use of every modern weapon, including flame-throwers and gas—to be launched upon the British Isles within three months.

This is the sober although unofficial opinion of scores of military men—from army privates and ordinary seamen to officers—and British, Allied and neutral diplomatic and political observers, who agree that Germany will try to break Britain and win the war before May.

Britain, these persons believe, will beat off the German invasion attempt, but only after sacrificing half of her air force, three-quarters of her battle fleet and at least 250,000 troops.

Along the beaches and behind them tonight Britain tightened the lines of preparation for the expected assault, particularly the threat of gas.

Gas Drills Weighed

Authorities considered the requiring of a gas mask as an admittance "ticket" to bomb shelters, and the Ministry of Home Security weighed plans for civilian gas-alarm practices to shake Britons back into consciousness of this menace. In fact, not since the Munich crisis and the actual outbreak of the war has Britain evinced such concern over gas attacks.

In the tense days of Munich 45,000,000 gas masks were issued to Britons, and when that crisis passed they were put back into their cardboard boxes. After the outbreak of the war, with the late Prime Minister Neville Chamberlain himself setting the fashion, Britons wore the gas masks camera fashion on straps over their shoulders. As the first air raids passed without the appearance of gas they dropped the custom and now only one-fifth the population carries masks.

The three fighting services have intensified preparations, not for one landing of German troops but for several.

No purely British Army in history ever reached the number, 4,000,000, of today's combined regular and Home Guard forces. And no previous British Army has ever undergone the comprehensive training that has been given the present one since Dunkerque.

30.24-7139

Old Tactics Scrapped

The buck privates have been re-equipped with a multiplicity of modern weapons, and many tactics dear to the old guard have been dropped by the younger and less "1914-minded" officers of the High Command.

An idea of the number and intensive nature of the manoeuvres that have been going on may be found in the fact that one command alone has studied 120 distinct "problems" of invasion in "defending" an area against every tactic and type of force, from parachute troops to amphibious tanks.

The Royal Air Force, whose task is to preserve the sky frontiers, has been equipped with hundreds of new planes and expects a heavy influx of more bombers and interceptor fighters from the United States in the Spring. British pilots are as good as can be found, and their ground crews and facilities are held adequate for the present emergencies. Leaders of the R. A. F. have exhibited courage, ambition and boldness of imagination.

The army's plan is to "shoot 'em on the beaches" when the Germans attempt their landings. But some military authorities concede that out of several attempts the Nazis are likely to establish one good bridgehead, into which they would pour every resource in men and materials.

It then would be up to the navy to cut off such sea-borne supplies even if this meant the sacrifice of several battleships. Fortified by several new and powerful units, the home fleet has redoubled its watch on the North Sea and the English Channel, and from cabin boy to admiral the boast is: "They may land, but they won't get supplies."

To cut off any possible bases established, the navy will risk not only small and large destroyers and cruisers against torpedoes of submarines and "E" boats and bombs of the German Air Force, but the battle fleet that represents Britain's rule of the seas.

Most neutral military sources agree that Germany, even with the necessity of retaining strong garrisons in the occupied territories, can launch an assault with a manpower advantage of about 3 to 2. This army, which it is believed will not be deterred by losses, however severe, will be supported aloft by an air force estimated at not fewer than 17,500 aircraft.

To the advantage in men and planes, nearly all military observers add another important factor—initiative and planning. It is deemed certain that invasion plans will have been worked out to the smallest details, as in Poland, Norway, Denmark, the Low Countries and France.

Civilian Units Trained

For such tactics as parachute troops, landing of fifth columnists in civilian clothes to destroy communications and spread false information and all the other devices made familiar on the Continent last Spring Britain's civilian services are being prepared. Police wardens are being reinstructed in safeguards against parachutists, spies and gas warfare, and the ordinary citizen seems ready to fight with bare hands if necessary.

Apparently the government believes that vast additional quantities of gas-fighting equipment may be needed because it is reported that manufacturers of such equipment have been asked to speed up their operations, working twenty-four hours a day, seven days a week.

Despite the intensive training that the troops guarding the islands have been put through, they now are carrying out "dress rehearsals" for repelling an invasion. The armed forces will be ready, military sources emphasize.

Conjectures continue, meanwhile, about the Axis plans and how Adolf Hitler will try to land his forces on this island. Some believe that in addition to a possible attempt to send hundreds of thousands of his troops across the North Sea and the Channel in boats and barges, he might try to drop shock troops from glider trains towed by planes.

Stress on Role of R. A. F.

When—and if—the invaders strike, military quarters said it probably would be the greatest assault ever hurled by a military machine. And, they added, Adolf Hitler would find this island seat of empire ready.

Considerable stress has been placed on the part the Royal Air Force is expected to play. The ranks of the R. A. F. have been greatly increased by recruits drawn from the home front and by trained pilots turned out under the broad commonwealth air-training scheme.

As one of the invasion precautions a campaign has been launched to make Britons—both fighting men and civilians—gas conscious. This action was taken when it was found that only a fifth of the civilian population was carrying gas masks.

One suggested remedy of this situation was that gas masks be shown to obtain a ticket into an air raid shelter.

Gas Alarms Considered.

The Ministry of Home Security is considering the inauguration of regular gas alarm practices for civilians. Gas chambers are being established so that the people may become accustomed to wearing masks "under fire."

Manufacturers of equipment used to combat gas were reported to have been asked to operate their plants 24 hours a day, seven days a week, so that the country could be fully prepared.

In addition to a possible attempt to send hundreds of thousands of troops across the North Sea and English Channel in boats and barges, some quarters believe the Nazi high command might try to drop shock troops from the air, possibly from trains of gliders towed by giant transport planes.

British 'Close Ranks' To Meet Nazi Attempt At Spring Invasion

Army Already Carrying Out Dress Rehearsals to Counter Expected Blow

By the Associated Press.

LONDON, Jan. 24.—Britain's armed services have been ordered to "close ranks" in preparation to meet an anticipated all-out invasion attempt against these islands in the spring, it was learned today.

The army guarding these shores—the most powerful force ever assembled by Britain—already is carrying out "dress rehearsals" to meet the expected blow.

Informed sources here said the British defense forces, in intensive training for more than a year against the day the Nazi legions might try to set foot on the British Isles, have been ordered to speed up every phase of their preparations.

SCOTLAND IS RAIDED

German Planes Are Sighted During Daytime.

London, Jan. 24 (A. P.).—German daylight raiders were reported over eastern and southeastern Scotland this afternoon.

Bad weather prevented any major Royal Air Force operations over Germany last night.

Berlin Jan. 24 (A. P.).—The German High Command reported today that Nazi aircraft had bombed war essential objectives at a British east coast harbor yesterday. One British plane was reported shot down in an air fight.

[By the Associated Press]

London, Saturday, Jan. 25—London's millions gained rest for their fifth straight raidless day. There were no reports of German planes over any part of the isles last night or early today.

Bad flying weather apparently was responsible. The English Channel was shrouded with dense fog and there were occasional showers. The sea was calm.

Nazis Claim More Shipping

BERLIN, Jan. 24 (AP)—The long arm of the German Air Force reached out into the Atlantic yesterday to damage or sink approximately 25,000 tons of shipping bound for Britain, the official German news agency, D. N. B., reported today.

Augmenting previous reports, the agency declared that a 4,500-ton merchant vessel had been struck amidships by two bombs that tore her apart and sent her to the bottom within eight minutes. A 3,500-ton ship was reported to have been hit twice and left in a sinking condition.

Bombs were reported to have started a large fire on a 5,000-ton ship, which was said to have stopped with a heavy list. Heavy explosions and shooting flames followed bomb hits on a 12,000-ton freighter, which probably could be considered lost, D. N. B. said.

The raids were said to have been carried out on shipping lanes west of Ireland from low altitudes.

The German High Command's version of the attacks described the two smaller British vessels as "armed merchantmen" and said definitely that they had been sunk.

The High Command also reported that Nazi aircraft had bombed "war-essential objectives" at a British east coast harbor yesterday. One British plane was reported shot down in an air fight.

HORIA SIMA HUNTED

Troops Search for Iron Guard Chief and Other Leaders of Revolt

ANTONESCU IS IN CONTROL

Scores of Jews Are Reported Slain—Death Toll in 4-Day Rising Is Put at 4,000

By RUBE SETTON

By The Associated Press.

BUCHAREST, Rumania, Jan. 24—Rumanian troops were sent out tonight to hunt for Horia Sima, the powerful leader of the Iron Guard, and "every last cutthroat" involved with him in the Guard's four-day rebellion.

A communiqué placing the blame on M. Sima for the outbreak likewise announced that any Rumanian withholding knowledge of his hiding place and those of other "originators and executors" of the revolt would be treated as an accomplice and made to "suffer the full penalties of the law."

Joining in the condemnation of M. Sima and other rebellious leaders, General George Beglescu, chieftain of Rumania's war veterans, declared that if the trouble had continued for another two or three days, Rumania "would have been reduced to the fate of Poland."

General Ion Antonescu, the Chief of State, whose authoritarian regime now apparently has weathered the greatest crisis it yet has faced, described the rebels still holding out as "under Communist influence."

[A dispatch to THE NEW YORK TIMES from Budapest last night indicated that the death toll in the Rumanian revolt would be particularly heavy, with some estimates going as high as 4,000. The United Press stated that reports from the Rumanian-Bulgarian border put the toll at 6,000.]

Tanks Patrol Streets

Tanks of the German and Rumanian armies patrolled in Bucharest streets filled with glass and broken masonry and the rubble left by heavy fighting. German fighter planes occasionally swooped low over the city.

[Foreign military sources in Belgrade, Yugoslavia, reported that 80,000 German troops in Rumania—one-third of the estimated garrison there—had been sent back to the Reich under an agreement with Moscow that fixed the German "zone of influence" about 250 miles north of the Dardanelles and 250 miles west of the Black Sea.

Scores of Jews were reported slain in basement executions in their homes. Iron Guards took over the home of Magda Lupescu, who is now in exile with former King Carol in Spain.

The government's order for the apprehension of M. Sima was of double significance, since he is not only head of the Iron Guard but Vice Premier of Rumania as well.

All those arrested go on trial before military courts. They must be tried within twenty-four hours of apprehension, and punishments must be carried out within the succeeding ten hours. Looters or snipers firing from houses on military men, citizens or public buildings were put under what amounted to an instant sentence of death. It was announced that they could be executed on the spot.

State employes not immediately reporting for work were made subject to discharge; army generals were put in charge of the secret police; the Bucharest police took over the gas and electric companies; all public gatherings were outlawed.

Order Being Restored

The public was warned to buy no jewelry or furniture or anything else from second-hand stores—all of it, the government said, might be loot from homes.

The situation in the provinces remained in doubt—particularly in such cities as Brasov, Giurgiu, Constanta, Ploesti and Craiova, all of which the Iron Guard had claimed to have occupied completely. Army headquarters asserted, however, that order was being restored rapidly in those centers.

The number of dead and wounded was unknown, but in Bucharest alone the hospitals were filled with wounded and partial lists of the dead were posted outside.

This was the first day since Sunday that had not been filled with the din of revolver, rifle, machine-gun and artillery fire, although

Stern Fate Awaits Rumanian Rebels

By ROBERT ST. JOHN, Associated Press Foreign Correspondent

ON TUESDAY EVENING, A BOY STANDING ON THE STREET BESIDE ME WAS SHOT FIVE TIMES THROUGH THE LEGS BY RICOCHETING BULLETS. THERE WERE NO TAXIS, AND THE IRON GUARDISTS HAD SEIZED ALL FILLING STATIONS SO WE STARTED TO CARRY THE VICTIM TO A HOSPITAL SEVERAL MILES AWAY AND AN IRON GUARD AMBULANCE CAME BY THEN.

AT THE HOSPITAL WE WERE JOINED BY A GUARDIST AMBULANCE CREW WHICH HAD COMMANDEERED A 40-PASSENGER BUS. WE TOURED THE BATTLE AREA, PICKING UP THE DEAD AND WOUNDED. ON ONE TRIP A ROUND OF BULLETS HIT THE BUS, KILLING A WOUNDED MAN WHO HAD BEEN PROPPED UP IN THE SEAT BESIDE THE DRIVER.

yesterday's action was largely a case of mopping up and driving the Iron Guards out of snipers' nests and public buildings.

M. Sima called on his followers to surrender at 5 o'clock yesterday afternoon—after three radio appeals by General Antonescu in which he had stressed that he was "a friend of the Axis" and "no tool of the Jews and Masons."

M. Sima's capitulation order said he had given in "in order to stop the bloodshed, which does not serve the interest of the Axis, and because we know the policy of Germany and Italy requires special conditions."

There was no explanation of that enigmatic statement. M. Sima ordered an immediate halt to the fighting, instructing the Iron Guards to evacuate all public buildings and "return to normal life at once."

The orders reached most of the Guards while they were fighting violently. It was taken to them in the form of a one-sheet edition of the Iron Guard paper by couriers who ran through the firing lines.

In some areas the runners could not reach the groups of rebellious snipers—whom the government on occasion had called "secret agents, Communists, Jews, professional trouble-makers" — and so they fought on long into the day.

Buildings Bear Bullet Marks

Just before the major fighting ended, Iron Guards told correspondents that they were preparing to equip six hidden airplanes to attack army concentrations in the streets.

Many buildings damaged in the recent earthquake now bear the marks of bullets. A single window in the telephone building shows seventy-eight machine-gun bullet holes. Near by, a whole line of smart shops stand in wreckage; almost every window in an eight-story apartment house used by snipers has been shattered by bombardment. Platforms at a central bus terminal are stained red with blood.

Tuesday evening brought the most violent of all the fighting. The Iron Guard then held the police station and, bareheaded and in solid rows, attacked the surrounding streets. During the height of the struggle they burned hundreds of yellow candles on the spot where three Iron Guards had been killed the day before. In a near-by church there were uninterrupted services for the slain.

In front of the Orthodox cathedral the great bell, which is rung only in national emergencies, clamored endlessly, its ropes pulled by twenty-nine men. In another part of the city the church chimes rang every time another Guard died in action.

Steel-helmeted troops fired constantly with machine guns, automatic rifles and field artillery guns from tanks.

The guards used buses, private automobiles and taxis to form street barricades. At one time they held a munitions storehouse seized from the gendarmes and were able to answer, shot for shot, the fire of army machine guns and artillery. For a time they also held the Bucharest radio station, the Ministry of Interior, the secret police headquarters and the Ministry of Justice.

The army held the thirteen-story telephone building through many violent attacks.

General Antonescu has promised a reorganization of the Iron Guard and a government regime which would include "sincere Guardsmen."

Franklin Mott Gunther, the American Minister, was en route to Bucharest from his mountain villa when the revolt broke out and was in the Army barracks at Ploesti, making a telephone call, when fighting began there. He escaped unhurt.

The Antonescu Government, once again in control of the Rumanian capital in collaboration with German armed forces, ordered swift trials for the rebels and called on citizens to report nests of snipers.

Military courts were under orders to try those rounded up within twenty-four hours of arrest, with punishment to be executed within ten hours of sentencing.

All permits for firearms were cancelled, even those for hunting weapons. All civilian-held guns must be turned in by nightfall today.

Accomplices Listed

The Council of Ministers' communique said:

"The following are considered as accomplices and therefore will suffer full penalties of the law:

"All who know of and do not announce to the authorities the places where the originators and executors of the rebellion are hidden, beginning with Sima, and ending with the last cutthroat who took advantage of the situation."

Information that German forces were helping restore order was lacking but German motorized troops, along with Rumanian, patrolled Bucharest streets while General Antonescu sought to restore order throughout the country after three bloody days.

Baron Manfred von Killinger, newly appointed Nazi Minister to Bucharest, arrived today. He was met at the station by Minister of Justice Michael Antonescu, former Minister Fabricius; the chief of the German war mission, General Hansen, and the chief of the German air mission, Lieutenant General Spiedel.

A DNB (German official news agency) report here said the Rumanian high command had called the recruit class due for this year to report February 15.

Division General Leonanu was made new director of the state police and Brigadier General Mitrea police prefect for Bucharest.

The Government's communique asked the public to refrain from buying any jewelry, furniture or anything else from second-hand stores as, it asserted, much of these goods had been looted from homes.

The homes of Jews were broken into and scores of them were reported killed in basement executions during the reign of terror.

U. S. Envoy's Home Used

At the height of the fighting the home of J. Webb Benton, of Fort Myer, Va., first secretary of the United States Legation, twice was commandeered by troops and civilians who used it as a fort from which they shot at Antonescu's soldiers.

The army later stationed a tank in Benton's yard to protect the premises from further forays.

All Americans, including Benton and his mother, were reported to have reached safety in the American Legation, which was untouched.

Early this morning Antonescu announced that the Iron Guard would be reorganized under his own leadership.

Death Penalty Set

A Government communique warned that persons who engaged in looting or who fired on military men, public buildings or citizens would be executed on the spot. State employes who fail to report for work immediately will be discharged, the communique added.

Army generals commanded secret police and the Bucharest police took over the gas and electric companies. Exchange of foreign money was forbidden and all public meetings were outlawed. Hundreds of army subofficers were promoted.

First Quiet Day

This is the first day since Sunday that the din of revolver, rifle, machine gun and artillery fire has not filled the air.

The exact number of dead in three days of serious fighting in all parts of the country has not been determined.

Many Bucharest hospitals were full of wounded, however, and partial lists of dead were posted outside.

The situation in the provinces was said to remain much in doubt, especially at such cities as Brasov, Giurgiu, Constanta, Ploesti, Cantina and Craiova, which the Iron Guard announced it had taken over completely.

Army headquarters said, however, that calm rapidly was being restored in those centers and that soldiers now were in complete control.

Some Weren't Reached

A dramatic call for surrender from Vice-Premier and Sima, signed at 5 A. M. yesterday, came to most battling Guardists in the form of a special one-sheet edition of the official Iron Guard paper, which runners carried through the firing lines to barricaded party members.

In some localities, however, it was impossible to reach rebellious groups, who kept up the battle long into the day.

Snipers and scattered nests of Iron Guardsmen made it most difficult to bring to an end the revolt which had seethed through the country. Some announcements called the snipers "secret agents, Communists, Jews and professional trouble makers."

Just before the trouble ended Iron Guardsmen said they were trying to equip six airplanes hidden in a private airport with machine-guns to swoop low over the city streets and attack army concentrations.

BUCHAREST, Rumania, Jan. 24—During the height of the Iron Guard fighting here the home of the first secretary of the United States Legation, J. Webb Benton of Fort Myer, Va., was twice invaded—by troops and then by civilians, who used it as a fortress from which they shot at the soldiers.

The Rumanian Army later provided protection, stationing a tank in the yard. All Americans—including Mr. Benton and his mother—were reported safe. The American Legation was untouched, but its former quarters were mounted with machine-guns which for a time peppered the home of United States Consul Fred Hunt.

Bucharest, Jan. 24 (Passed by Military Censor)—Rumania's Council of Ministers in a special communique announced today severe punishment would be meted out to Horia Sima, Vice-Premier and Iron Guardist chieftain, and other alleged leaders of the bloody rebellion against the Antonescu Government.

This was the first official allegation that Sima was involved in the disorders. The Bucharest radio reported the army now is searching for him and others among the rebellious leaders.

orders gradually were being put back in working order.

International lines, which had been opened for only one short period this week, finally were made available to foreign correspondents at noon today. Even diplomatic calls had been cut off.

Many important buildings which had been cracked or visibly damaged by the recent earthquake now are badly battle scarred, and one window of the telephone building had seventy-eight bullet holes in it.

Smart Shops Wrecked

Across the street a whole line of smart shops was wrecked by army fire. An eight-story apartment house a hundred feet away in which snipers operated was fired at so often that almost every window was shattered.

Bus platforms in front of the adjacent National Theater were red with the blood of men who fell in the battle over possession of the nerve center of Rumania's communications system.

Across the street after hostilities ceased lay a pile of blood-soaked hats and shoes of victims.

Peak Reached Tuesday

The peak of the fighting was reached Tuesday afternoon and evening. The guard then held the prefecture of police. Solid masses of bareheaded guardsmen attacked in surrounding streets. In front of the seven-story building hundreds of yellow candles were burned on a spot where three Iron Guardsmen were killed the day before. In a nearby church services went on constantly for the dead.

On a hill at the edge of the city a giant bell in front of the Orthodox Cathedral, which is tolled only on occasions of national emergency, was pealing constantly. This bell was rung by twenty men.

Chimes For Dead

In another part of the city chimes in the tower of the Iron Guard Church were rung for five minutes every time the death of another guardist was reported. There were few intervals of silence during the entire night. Air-raid sirens kept up a constant whine.

General Antonescu was in the center of one of the battle zones as he sat in his office at the presidency of the council building receiving reports. Throughout the week Sima was absent. One report said he was hiding in an Iron Guard "nest;" another said he had fled to Transylvania.

Steel-helmeted soldiers were in complete possession of strategically important positions in front of the presidency, constantly firing machine guns, tommy guns, automatic rifles and field artillery guns from tanks. Fingers of anti-aircraft searchlights played on the scene of death.

, Jan. 24—Horia Sima, Iron ist leader of the rebellion in ania against the Antonescu Gov-ment, and a strong band of followers are believed hiding in Brasov, in the Transylvanian Alps seventy-five miles north of Bucharest, it was reported here tonight.

The report was brought into Bulgaria from Rumania by a reliable informant while the Bucharest radio broadcast a declaration by the Antonescu regime that Sima followers who continued to resist would be killed on sight.

Others knowing where the rebels who terrorized Rumania for four days are hiding but refused to tell are to be treated just as summarily, the broadcast added.

Fresh Fighting Reported

The informant reaching Bulgaria from Rumania said that while the Government established the upper hand in Rumania, exchanges of shots continued in the capital tonight.

Rebel units still are holding out at Brasov, Ploesti, Arad and Constanta, it was said.

Travelers leaving Bucharest said they counted 200 dead, most of them believed to be Jews, lying on the highway.

A number of university students in Bucharest joined the rebels, who occupied university buildings, and 400 students were reported to have been killed during fighting when Government forces took the buildings last night.

Refugees Try To Flee

Hundreds of refugees are reported trying to flee the country.

Some travelers reaching Bulgaria, however, said the revolt was one of terror with a purge of terror continuing.

They agreed the Jews suffered heavily, many being killed by both sides.

Jewish prisoners in Jilava prison were reported killed by the rebels.

The Jewish suburbs of Bucharest were held by the legionnaires for four days and were heavily damaged by artillery and fires. Many were killed there, it was said.

RUMANIAN INFORMANTS HERE SAID

Hears Fighting Is Continuing.

Sofia, Jan. 24 (A. P.).—A revolt by dissident Iron Guardists and other elements against the Rumanian Government was reported today to be continuing outside Bucharest, although the official Bucharest radio said that the rebels holding the police barracks and city hall in the capital had agreed to end hostilities.

Some border reports estimated the dead throughout the strife-torn and Nazi-dominated kingdom at 2,000 since the outbreak of disorders Tuesday, with total casualties of 6,000 while other dispatches said there were more than 2,000 dead in Bucharest morgues alone, including many Jews taken from their homes and slain along with Iron Guards.

The Bucharest radio, in Government hands again after reports which sounded like pistol shots and cut off a rebel Iron Guardist broadcast, did not make clear whether all fighting actually had ceased in the capital but border dispatches said the revolt was proceeding elsewhere in the country, especially in the province of Transylvania where some towns were said to be still in the hands of the revolters.

Like Military Camp.

An air traveler reaching here said Rumanian troops supporting the Government had turned artillery on rebels in the police barracks and other reports said that between 700 and 800 revolters barricaded there during the disturbances had vacated the premises, as had others who held the City Hall. The traveler said many were killed around the police barracks.

He described Bucharest as "a military camp with fighting in the streets following all rules of modern warfare, with tanks, machine guns and artillery."

"The Legionnaires (Iron Guardists), mostly young people, marched onto the streets in the first few days in big crowds with almost mystic disdain of fear in going against these forces."

He expressed the opinion that what the Legionnaires want is full power with the Government led by Horia Sima, the Iron Guard leader and now Vice-Premier.

"If Horia Sima asks for peace that means the movement has failed and his only chance is gone," the traveler said. "It is generally believed that German troops finally will have to establish order."

Flight Of Marshal Graziani From Post In Libya Reported

Duce's Commander In Africa Said To Have Fled Headquarters At Cirene Under R. A. F. Bombing

[By the Associated Press]

Cairo, Jan. 24—Marshal Rodolfo Graziani, commander of Italy's army in Libya, was reported tonight to have abandoned his headquarters at Cirene, fifty miles west of Derna, apparently under heavy bombardment by British airmen.

With two-thirds of his effectives and the considerably greater proportion of his equipment lost in the Egyptian-Libyan campaign to date, Marshal Graziani quit Cirene for a spot more difficult for R. A. F. bombers to find the British said.

[This was the first indication of the exact whereabouts of Graziani since the British began their African offensive.]

Ranging Beyond Derna

British motorized units and airmen have been ranging about and beyond Derna, ninety-five miles west of captured Tobruk, since the fall of the latter port two days ago. With their strong aviation support the British land forces pushed steadily westward toward Derna, now said to be an almost undefended town. It was heavily bombed yesterday, as were the Italian air bases of Apollonia and Marau, west of Derna.

[British airmen also were active in the Mediterranean, where they heavily attacked Sicilian bases of German and Italian planes. The glare of fires there was said to have been visible from the British naval base of Malta, sixty miles from Sicily.]

Push Into Eritrea

Meanwhile, in East Africa, reports reaching Cairo said the British have pushed more than eighty miles into the Italian colony of Eritrea, where they were said to have resumed pursuit of two almost full Italian divisions routed from Kassala a week ago.

Aided by Haile Selassie, the dethroned Lion of Judah, now back on his native Ethiopian soil, the British reported new blows against the Italians both inside and around Ethiopia.

Italians Retreating

To the north of the Fascist-conquered kingdom, the high command said the Italians retreating eastward in Eritrea abandoned the outposts of Keru and Aicota before advancing British forces.

In Kenya colony, which borders bo... southern Ethiopia and Italian Somaliland, today's war bulletin said vigorous patrol activity had reached across a large portion of the frontier, but that "few of the enemy were encountered."

Casualties were reported inflicted on the Italians in Ethiopia itself by Ethiopian patriots on the warpath, south and east of Lake Tana, in the northwestern corner of the country.

Selassie Defies Foe

Haile Selassie, who nine days ago proudly raised the red, yellow and green flag of his former kingdom somewhere in Ethiopia, followed his dramatic return with a proclamation to his warriors:

"Raise arms against the enemy who have come to destroy your race, rob you of your property, belittle your glory, pollute your blood. Wipe him from the face of Ethiopia!"

Troops Sweeping West of Tobruk, British Report

Italians Are Declared To Have Abandoned 2 Eritrean Outposts

BACKGROUND—

British offensive against Italians in North Africa began December 9 with attack upon Fascist outpost of Sidi Barrani, in Egypt. After its capture the British, with Australian troops at their spearhead, captured Bardia, just inside Libyan border, and then pushed on to capture Tobruk, which fell Tuesday.

By the Associated Press.

CAIRO, Egypt, Jan. 24.—The British Imperial Army, having mopped up captured Tobruk and seized upward of 20,000 troops, is continuing its sweep westward across Northern Libya, the Middle East command announced today.

Farther down in Africa, the high command said that on the Sudan-Eritrean front the Italians had abandoned two more outposts and "are continuing their retreat."

In Ethiopia native patriots were declared to have inflicted casualties on Italians in hit-and-run thrusts south and east of Lake Tana.

The Fascist-abandoned outposts were said to be Keru and Aicota. Previous British forces had reported that the Italians had withdrawn 40 miles inside Eritrea.

"Our troops are continuing their advance westward," today's war bulletin said briefly on the Libyan campaign.

Patrol Activity Vigorous.

In Kenya colony, which faces both Ethiopia and Italian Somaliland, the high command said vigorous patrolling activity was under way "up to and over the frontier on a large portion of the frontier" and that "few of the enemy were encountered."

Carrying the air offensive deep into Ethiopia, British bombers blasted Sciasciamanna airdrome, 120 miles south of Addis Ababa, yesterday and destroyed four Fascist planes on the ground, the R. A. F. announced.

Neghelli, 250 miles south of the Ethiopian capital, a frequent R. A. F. target, again was attacked.

In Libya Appolonia, Derna and Marau were subjected to heavy blasting which returning pilots said set tremendous fires. Bombs straddling a barracks on the southern edge of Appolonia airdrome were said to have set off explosions and fires visible 35 miles away.

Intensified Drive Expected.

Military circles here believed the British high command would make every effort to follow up the Tobruk victory with an intensified offensive on the entire African front, extending from Libya to Ethiopia.

News that former Emperor Haile Selassie had re-entered Ethiopia to rally his old subjects was accepted here as evidence that the British drive in that area was swinging into high gear.

Reports from Eritrea declared the Italians already had been forced to abandon 5,000 square miles of that colony to British troops advancing eastward from the Anglo-Egyptian Sudan.

Nowhere are the Italians being given any rest, British sources said, hinting at a concerted drive to make good Prime Minister Churchill's promise to "tear the Italian empire in Africa to pieces."

Speculation on Next Blow.

There was considerable speculation here as to where the next blow in Libya would fall.

British advance forces already were reported operating west and south of Derna, situated on the Libyan coast 95 miles from Tobruk. Observers believed Gen. Archibald P. Wavell might be attempting to drive straight across the Cirenaican "hump," by-passing Derna for a direct thrust at Bengasi, another 150 miles westward.

The main body of the army of the Nile meanwhile was busy consolidating its newly won position at Tobruk

Edward Kennedy, Associated Press staff correspondent who entered Tobruk with the British troops, said it appeared likely that the total number of prisoners taken in the Tobruk region would reach 20,000.

99,000 Prisoners Taken.

A British communique announcing completion of operations there yesterday listed prisoners "so far" taken at 14,000—indicating this figure might be revised upward.

(Exchange Telegraph, British news agency, in a dispatch from Sydney, quoted Australian War Minister Percy C. Spender as saying he had received a cable from the Australian commander in Libya putting the number of Italian prisoners at 25,000.

The British estimated that the total number of prisoners taken in the North African campaign is close to 99,000 and calculated Italian dead and wounded at around 10,000. Official sources put the British casualties at Tobruk at not more than 500 dead and wounded.

British troops entering Tobruk found that the Italians had set portions of the city afire and had endeavored to destroy equipment and supplies.

Oil stores had been fired, the radio station was partially wrecked and the liner Marco Polo, once used on the China run, was ablaze in the harbor.

A submarine was found sunk and a score of other smaller vessels were either submerged or in flames.

Crippled Warship Holds Up S O S To Save Fleet

Alexandria, Egypt, Jan. 24 (AP)—Naval sources today disclosed that the destroyer Hyperion lay crippled in the Adriatic almost under the shore guns of the Italians for two hours before sending out an S. O. S. call in order that the warships following her would not be detected.

The destroyer, which had struck a mine, later was sunk by the gunfire of a British warship because she was so badly damaged.

When the distress call finally was sent, three destroyers steamed up to rescue the Hyperion's crew and, working against time, made their getaway under the lee of powerfully fortified territory.

Was Sweeping Adriatic

The Hyperion was part of the British light forces which were sweeping the Adriatic as far as Durazzo. She was many miles ahead of the main British naval force, searching for signs of Italian torpedo boats and submarines.

When the mine holed her, the Hyperion maintained silence so the main force, within easy range of enemy torpedo boats, could proceed unmolested, it was explained.

"Not until these main forces were well clear of any harm was the signal sent for aid," an informant said.

The Hyperion on December 19, 1939, intercepted the German liner Columbus off Virginia. The Columbus' crew scuttled her.

ITALIAN SHIP SUNK ON DASH FOR LIBYA

Supply Vessel Is Destroyed by British Submarine.

London, Jan. 24 (A. P.).—The Admiralty announced today that the British submarine Parthian had sunk a 7,000-ton Italian supply ship south of Italy, as part of the work of "interrupting Italy's sea-borne communications with her armies in Africa."

The Parthian, commanded by Commander M. G. Rimington, was laid down in 1928, armed with one four-inch gun and two smaller pieces. She has eight twenty-one-inch torpedo tubes, and with a surface speed greater than ordinary might be capable of catching and sinking a supply ship by gunfire.

The Parthian has a surface displacement of 1,475 tons and a normal complement of fifty men.

WITH THE BRITISH MEDITERRANEAN FLEET, Jan. 23 (Delayed).—British light naval forces, firing an estimated 500 tons of high explosive shells, turned the harbor of Tobruk into a mass of flames before the Italian stronghold fell to onrushing British troops.

Huge petroleum stores were fired by the bombardment and several direct hits were scored on the Italian cruiser San Giorgio.

Gunboats and other warcraft, sweeping close inshore, handed the Italians a severe pounding for more than four days before the British land forces launched their attack on Tobruk. The shells blasted enemy defenses and supply bases and scattered troop concentrations.

The naval forces pursued the same strategy they used at Bardia, helping to clear the path for a powerful British land drive against the Italian garrison, variously estimated at 30,000 to 40,000 men.

Australians, as at Bardia, were the first troops to reach the heart of Tobruk, where they reported taking "thousands of prisoners." Some sources estimated the number of captives may reach 30,000.

Even after the Australians penetrated the defenses naval units continued to sweep along the Libyan coast, pouring huge shells into motor transports and the ranks of retreating Italian infantry.

Much of the naval bombardment was carried out under extremely unfavorable weather conditions, with heavy seas running and blinding sandstorms sweeping the Tobruk area, but the shellings were described as highly successful.

For a time the naval units were engaged by guns of the San Giorgio and shore batteries, but none of the British ships was hit. The San Giorgio, which was believed to have brought supplies to the Italians several weeks ago and then was prevented by the British blockade from returning to Italy, was given repeated barrages of 6 to 15 inch shells.

One naval officer said the cruiser apparently was a total loss.

(The Italian command announced in Rome that the San Giorgio was dynamited and set afire by her own crew before Tobruk fell.)

HAILE SELASSIE RAISES BANNER OVER ETHIOPIA

Exiled Emperor Returns and Plants Flag on Soil of Ancient Domain.

HEADS ANTI-ITALIAN REVOLT

Lion of Judah Is Met by Former Crown Prince as He Lands in British Warplane.

Somewhere in Ethiopia (via Khartoum, Jan. 15 (Delayed) (A. P.).—Ex-Emperor Haile Selassie of Ethiopia proudly raised the red, yellow and green flag of his former kingdom in a hidden mountain clearing here today, then set off to the interior to head British-aided Ethiopian tribesmen fighting their Italian conquerors.

JAN 25 1941

In an imperial proclamation, he exhorted his tribesmen to "raise arms against the enemy who have come to destroy your race, rob your property, belittle your glory, pollute your blood. Wipe him from the face of Ethiopia."

The bearded former conquering lion of Judah, driven from his throne in 1936 by Premier Mussolini's troops, came back to Ethiopia in a British Army plane. He flew from Khartoum, the British headquarters in the Anglo-Egyptian Sudan, where he had conferred in recent weeks with tribal chieftains who slipped across the frontier to plan with him the rearming of Ethiopian natives with British guns. Accompanying him were a British liaison officer; Ras Kassa, his former War Minister, and a high dignitary of the Ethiopian Church.

The Negus, exultant and determined, gazed down searchingly as the plane circled over the wooded hills of his former kingdom, seeking the cunningly concealed landing field prepared by his soldiers. Then the pilot swung his craft down through a narrow clearing, its wings clearing trees on either side by a bare ten feet as it came to rest.

Met by Former Crown Prince.

A British staff major greeted the ex-Emperor and party and accompanied them on a short automobile journey to an Ethiopian encampment where dignitaries taking part in the welcoming ceremony included the former Crown Prince of Ethiopia. A unit of tribal fighters, with British officers at their head, paraded and presented arms smartly as their old leader appeared.

That was the start of a brief ceremony. The British liaison officer read a message from Major-Gen. William Platt, commander of the Sudanese forces, addressing Haile Selassie as "Your Majesty" and expressing "our best wishes for success in the enterprise upon which you are now embarking and for the future welfare and contentment of your country and people."

"It is our earnest hope that our combined and co-ordinated efforts will soon rid your country of our common enemy," the message continued. "It is a great disappointment that operations against the enemy elsewhere prevent my expressing these sentiments personally to your Majesty at this moment."

Haile Selassie responded: "I am entering Ethiopia with full confidence of assistance from the British Government and allied forces in order to crush the common enemy."

Then, with the Crown Prince at his side, he walked to the flagpole and raised the Ethiopian flag. A bugler blew the royal salute and the former Emperor reviewed troops who marched past him. After a quick meal in a camouflaged tent under the trees, the party set forth for the interior to join a British military mission and British regular forces already established in the heart of the country.

An officer of the British mission, who had spent months in the interior, said the Italians in Ethiopia confined their activities to main roads, not daring to venture deep into areas dominated by unfriendly tribesmen. Mule convoys had replaced motor transport to a great degree, the officer said, and many roads exposed to native guerrilla raids were left unused by the Italians, while elsewhere the Fascist conquerors moved only in closely protected convoys.

Issues Proclamation.

With his crossing the frontier into his own country, the former Emperor issued a decree bearing his imperial seal and proclaiming:

"My people of Ethiopia, listen! Glory is for him whose judgment is impartial, who breaks the arm of the strong and comforts the weak.

"Italy is our blood enemy since former times, having crossed our frontier and started an unjust war of aggression. We resisted so far as we were able, then went to Europe to seek aid. Meantime, you warriors of Ethiopia, without sheathing your swords, without furling your flag, armed only with natural bravery, fought a country with superior arms rather than submit to invaders. You fought in the wilderness and mountains, waiting for us. This struggle for five years enabled you to see the fruit of labors and sacrifices.

"I have informed you my arrival is with the aid of the British Government, who have entered into a covenant to drive out the enemy from our country. My joy is boundless when I tell you that, after being away four years and eight months, I have now, by the grace of God, returned to my country. . . .

"People of Ethiopia! You know the bitter life of those who have lost their Government, their independence and country. . . .

". . . I now forgive those of you who have worked against the interest of your King and country. . . .

"From one end of Ethiopia to the other, raise arms against the enemy who have come to destroy your race, rob your property, belittle your glory, pollute your blood. Wipe him from the face of Ethiopia.

"Italy is cornered in the grip of the great British sea, air and land power. Italians in Ethiopia have not escaped my trusted warriors. In my name, in your name, before the world, I thank the Government and people of Great Britain for their touching unforgettable reception and hospitality during my bitter trials.

"Long live Ethiopia and her independence. Long live Great Britain."

Copies of the proclamation were reported scattered throughout the country. It was also published in the Amharic newspaper Bandarche (Your Flag) which is appearing in various parts of Ethiopia.

RENEWED FIGHTING BETWEEN ITALIANS AND NATIVE TRIBESMEN IN ETHIOPIA BROKE OUT LAST SUMMER BEFORE HAILE SELASSIE ARRIVED IN THE ANGLO-EGYPTIAN SUDAN FROM ENGLAND IN JULY TO LEAD A BRITISH-SUPPORTED CAMPAIGN TO RECOVER HIS KINGDOM.

EVEN PRIOR TO THAT TIME, THERE WERE INDICATIONS THAT PREMIER MUSSOLINI'S LEGIONS NEVER HAD SUBJUGATED CONSIDERABLE PORTIONS OF THE WILD ETHIOPIAN COUNTRY. SIX MONTHS AFTER THE ITALIAN ARMIES IN 1936 CAPTURED ADDIS ABABA, THE CAPITAL, AND IL DUCE PROCLAIMED THE ADDITION OF ETHIOPIA TO THE ITALIAN EMPIRE, WIDESPREAD FIGHTING CONTINUED.

REPORTS OF CONTINUED HOSTILITIES WERE HEARD OCCASIONALLY THEREAFTER UNTIL ITALY'S ENTRY INTO THE EUROPEAN WAR BROUGHT THE DEPOSED ETHIOPIAN EMPEROR AND HIS TRIBAL CHIEFS THE ACTIVE MILITARY AID OF BRITAIN.

UNCONFIRMED ESTIMATES HAVE PLACED AS HIGH AS 200,000 THE NUMBER OF NATIVES ACTIVELY ENGAGED IN GUERRILLA WARFARE AND OTHER FORMS OF OPPOSITION TO THE ITALIANS.

ITALIAN EFFORTS TO SUBDUE THE REBELLIOUS TRIBES AFTER SELASSIE FLED HIS THRONE IN 1936 MET WITH SCANT SUCCESS IN THE AMHARA AND GOJJAM REGIONS OF NORWESTERN ETHIOPIA, LYING NEAR TO THE SUDAN. BRITISH SOLDIERS PRESUMABLY WOULD HAVE NO GREAT DIFFICULTY IN CROSSING INTO THOSE AREAS TO REARM AND ORGANIZE THE ETHIOPIANS, JUST AS THE CHIEFTAINS HAVE SLIPPED ACROSS THE FRONTIER TO KHARTOUM IN RECENT MONTHS TO CONFER WITH THEIR KING OF KINGS AND OBTAIN BRITISH WEAPONS.

British Planes Bomb Mighty Italian Base On Island of Rhodes

Other Craft Are Reported To Have Attacked Derna, 95 Miles West of Tobruk

By the Associated Press.

ROME, Jan. 24.—The Italian high command announced today that British warplanes had bombed the picturesque Island of Rhodes, site of one of Italy's mightiest naval and air bases in the Eastern Mediterranean.

Other British warplanes were reported to have carried out bombing attacks on the Libyan base of Derna, 95 miles west of Tobruk, where the Italians said Fascist troops clinging to the western fringes of the town continued to offer "stubborn resistance" to besieging British land forces all day yesterday.

Italian planes, the daily war bulletin said, bombed and machine-gunned British mechanized forces in the Tobruk zone.

The German air corps meanwhile carried out another bombing attack on the British naval base at Malta in the central Mediterranean, the high command declared.

The British attack on Rhodes, which still bears many evidences of occupation by crusading knights in the medieval ages, was said to have been carried out Wednesday night and was said to have caused "slight damage to private dwellings," but no casualties.

"Several" high explosive bombs were dropped, the communique said.

In East Africa fighting was said to be continuing on the Sudanese front and along the Kenya colony border, where the Italians said their ground forces were "effectively supported" by the air force in engagements with British mechanized units.

The communique did not indicate the trend of fighting.

DUCE'S 'WOLF' DIVISION PUT OUT OF ACTION

Tuscan Unit Withdrawn Because Of Heavy Losses, Athens Says

530 Prisoners Taken In 2 Days Above Klisura, Greeks Report

[By the Associated Press]

Athens, Jan. 24—The famous Italian "Wolves of Tuscany" division has suffered such heavy losses on the central Albanian battlefield north of Klisura it has been withdrawn and a new commander appointed to reorganize it, Greek reports from the front said tonight.

Other Italian troops also were reported withdrawing in that sector to freshly prepared fortifications. A Government spokesman said this withdrawal resulted from Greek occupation of new heights overlooking the Fascist lines.

530 Prisoners Taken

"We have taken 530 prisoners in two days," a spokesman said.

The Tuscany division was thrown into battle recently after a hurried trip from Italy in an attempt to stem the Greek advance, it was said.

Information gained from Italian prisoners said that at least seven Italian divisions have had to be withdrawn for reorganization because of "extremely heavy losses," the Greek said.

The Greeks also recounter prisoners' stories that they had gone for days in some cases without food because of shattered supply lines.

Officers Among Captives

A growing number of officers were noted among those captured by the Greeks. In one group of twenty-five prisoners there were eight officers, it was said.

"New heights taken by our troops resulted in the capture of more prisoners and Italian war material," the spokesman said. "At one point the enemy attempted a well-prepared counter-attack. It failed and we inflicted heavy losses on the Italians."

Fascist Moves Blocked

Heavy artillery bombardments, it was reported, prevented the Fascist forces from organizing their new bases and blocked efforts to concentrate their troops for a counter-attack.

Greek bombers again raided Berati and Elbasani, communication centers for the Italian forces in the central and northern sectors, dispatches from the front said. A supply column was reported machine-gunned.

GREEKS LAUNCHING FIERCE OFFENSIVE

Report New Heights Taken North of Klisura.

Athens, Jan. 24 (A. P.).—Improved weather has brought a sharp stepup in the fighting on the central Albanian front, the Greek authorities reporting a renewed offensive against the Italian positions north of Klisura, which resulted in some of the most intense fighting of the war.

A Greek spokesman said last night that heavy Italian counter-attacks were repulsed in the Klisura sector, and that the Greeks attacked in turn, and captured new positions. Both sides were said to have resumed air operations, bombing and machine-gunning both advanced and rear positions.

The Greeks reported the capture of 250 Italian prisoners, including some officers, the seizure of quantities of mortars, machine guns, rifles and other materials, and the occupation of several new heights and a number of villages in an undesignated area. In one sector, the spokesman asserted, the Italians retreated in a hurry after suffering heavy losses.

Rome, Jan. 24 (A. P.).—The Italian High Command reported today that prisoners and automatic arms were captured in patrol actions against the Greeks in Albania, and that Italian planes scatter-bombed Greek troops.

COUNCIL OF 200 SET UP TO HELP GOVERN FRANCE

Provisional Body Limited to Giving Advice Pending New Constitution.

MEMBERS CHOSEN BY PETAIN

Mostly Fathers of Five Children or More, They Represent Trade, Labor and Professions.

Vichy, Jan. 24 (A. P.).—A new National Council of nearly 200 members was today created by the Chief of State, Marshal Philippe Petain, to share with him the responsibility of directing the Government of France. An announcement more than a month ago forecast the formation of such a body and said it would "give advice and assure useful contact between the Chief of State and the people."

The new council will be merely provisional, however, until a new constitution is framed, it was explained, and while including many members of the old Senate and Chamber of Deputies, it will not replace these two bodies. Havas, the French news agency, reported that the Official Journal would publish the new law creating the Council and would name its members. They will not be appointed for fixed terms, and the Council will have neither constitutional nor legislative powers. It will be consulted only on questions submitted by Marshal Petain and its decisions will have only the character of advice to the Chief of State, who need not follow it.

Not only parliamentarians, but more than forty representatives from agriculture, an "appreciable contingent" from industry, prominent intellectuals and members of the liberal professions are to be members. Members of trade unions, skilled workers and city and farm workers will also have a proportionately larger place than in the last elected parliaments. A war veterans' organization also will be represented.

A communique said that the choice, "down to the last detail is the personal work of the Marshal," and that the Council is so selected that it will represent the essential elements of the nation's life. Most of the members have more than four children, and some have seven, nine and even eleven. This was taken as a sure guaranty that the principle of family would be protected.

PETAIN FORMS SUPER-COUNCIL BUT KEEPS REIN

Marshal Selects Group Of 188 To "Give Advice" On Ruling France

Chief Of State, However, Leaves Body Without Legislative Powers . .

[By the Associated Press]

Vichy, Jan. 24—Henri Philippe Petain, chief of state, personally selected a super-council of 188 members today be help him govern France, but left the body without legislative powers.

The council, which includes sixty-nine Senators and Deputies, will meet solely at his call to discuss only those matters he determines, but he is not obligated to follow its decisions.

Ministers To Be Secret

Whether even the minutes of the group's meetings, which will be secret, are to be published rests solely with the marshal, who created the group to "give advice and assure useful contact with the people."

The decree promulgating the council tonight said each member would be paid 100,000 francs (about $2,300) per year.

The council was said to contain "no measured mixture, no concern about balance or compromise."

"Doubtless it will be possible to find names from each of our departments," said an official commentary published with the decree, "but none of these departments will be represented as such."

All Elements Represented

Rather, the members of the council were said to have been chosen to represent the "essential elements of national life."

Thus, more than forty representatives of agriculture and an "appreciable contingent" from industry are included.

There also will be proportionally larger labor representation than in the last elected parliaments, and delegates from intellectual and professional groups and war veterans.

The new council, which will be provisional until a new constitution is adopted, will not replace Parliament, even though some former members of that body will be included.

Members Named

Among the members of the council named by Petain are:

Georges Bonnet, former Foreign Minister.
Paul Faure, Socialist.
Alfred Cortot, former pianist.
Louis Oscar Frossard, former Minister of Information.
Jacques Doriot, extreme Rightist.
Abel Bonnard, Rightist writer and member of the French Academy.
Andre Francois-Poncet, former Ambassador to Germany.
Col. Charles de la Rocque, head of the Fascist-like former Croix De Feu organization.
Rene Fonck, World War ace.
Cardinal Suhard, Bishop of Paris.
Andre Siegfried, member of the French Institute.
Deputies Jean Mistler, Jean Montigny and Gaston Bergery.

Conspicuous by their absence are such Parliamentary figures of the Third Republic as Edouard Herriot, Louis Marin and Albert Sarraut.

Naturally, there was no inclusion of former Premiers Leon Blum, Edouard Daladier and Paul Reynaud, who are awaiting trial on charges of misgovernment.

U. S. Attache at Vichy.

Nazis Laud Lindbergh

[By the Associated Press]

Berlin, Jan. 24—"Hats off to Charles Lindbergh for the courage shown," was the reaction of authorized German sources today to the American airman's deposition before a United States House committee yesterday.

"In view of the moral terrorism exerted by interventionists this courage shown is exemplary," they said.

(Lindbergh testified at hearings on the lease-lend bill, which he described as a "major step" toward hostilities. He said he wanted a victory for neither side in the war because "it would be a disaster for Europe if either side won.")

"It is doubtful whether many individuals in the United States can be found in prominent positions who are willing to act as courageously, although many feel as Lindbergh does," they added.

British Are Silent On Lindbergh

London, Jan. 24 (A. P.).—British officials and editorial writers gave the silent treatment today to Col. Charles A. Lindbergh's testimony yesterday before the House Foreign Affairs Committee in Washington. Unofficially, it was said that Col. Lindbergh still is a name to conjure with in America and his testimony undoubtedly was the most effective of the lease-lend bill opponents.

Col. Lindbergh's testimony was played up in the morning newspapers, but there was no accompanying comment.

13 Poles Face Death For Murder Of Germans

Group Reported Sentenced As Result Of Slaying During Month Of Invasion

Berlin, Jan. 24 (AP)—A DNB dispatch from Posen today said a special court had imposed death sentences on thirteen of twenty-two Poles accused of murdering German nationals in September, 1939, the month of the German invasion.

A number of them were said to have confessed, while against the others, the news agency said, testimony was presented by more than fifty witnesses.

DNB said the Poles were members of "Obrona Narodowa," an organization of military character. They were accused of killing thirty-six German men and women at the beginning of the war.

The trial court has an additional twenty-four cases of a similar nature to settle.

Nazi Magazine Says Axis Will Oppose Aggression

Declares "Real Effort" If Domination Of World Comes From Democracies

Berlin, Jan. 24 (AP)—The magazine Berlin-Rome-Tokyo, which usually and accurately reflects German Foreign Office views, declared today that the signatories of the three-power pact would carry out their agreement "to the fullest extent against any aggression."

An article, written by Karl Megerle, a journalist who enjoys the confidence of Foreign Minister Joachim von Ribbentrop, charged that President Roosevelt had misinterpreted the pact by ascribing to it aggressive intentions by Germany, Italy and Japan.

The article asserted that the "real effort" at domination of the world comes from the democracies and added: "But the world is not and will not be Anglo-Saxon."

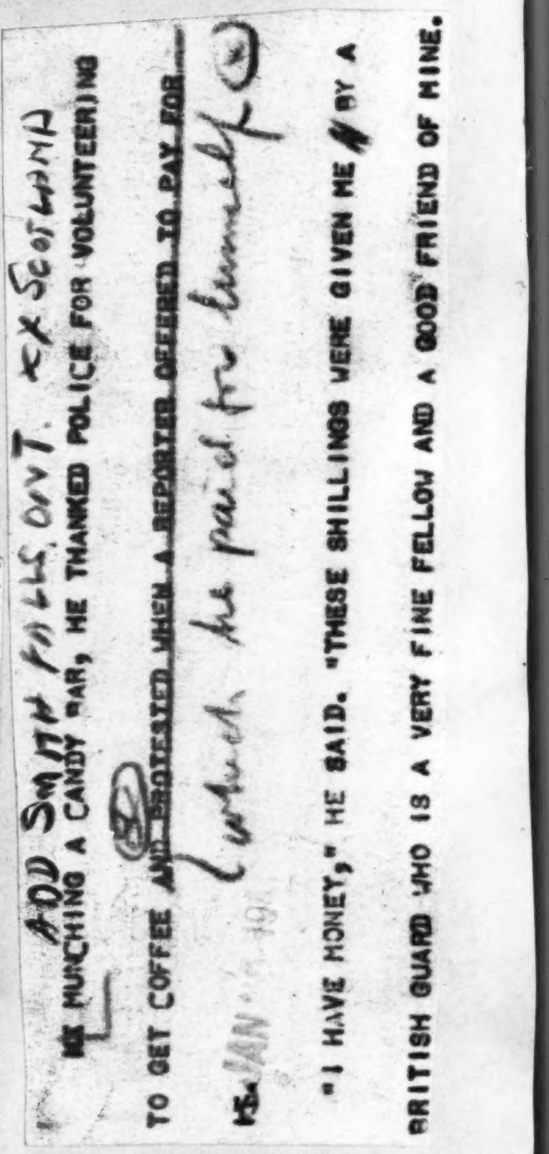
Two Germans Escape From Train In Canada



Flee Soon After Nazi Pilot Is Recaptured Following Earlier Dash For Freedom

Smith Falls, Ont., Jan. 24 (AP)—Two German prisoners of war escaped from a train carrying them to an internment camp today shortly after police recaptured a Nazi pilot, who had gotten away in another dash for freedom.

Lieut. Ottman Hollman, 25, German pilot, jumped through a train window only to be recaptured a few minutes later by three policemen.

"I am an officer and it is the duty of a German officer to escape if he can," said Lieut. Hollman, who is a veteran of both the Spanish war and the siege of Britain.

He was brought to Canada for internment after he survived fifty-two hours in a collapsible boat. He was shot down off the coast of Scotland.

IN ALMOST PERFECT ENGLISH, HOLLMAN SAID HE WOULD HAVE XXXXXXX LIKED TO HAVE BECOME AN ACTOR, ADDING:

"I WAS ON THE STAGE FOR A LITTLE WHILE. BUT MY FAMILY, S[illegible] MUST BE AN OFFICER, A GERMAN OFFICER, AND SO I BECAME A PILOT."

Nazi Who Fled Canada Caught At Ogdensburg

Alertness of Ex-Canadian Traps Pilot Who Also Had Escaped Thrice in Britain

OGDENSBURG, N. Y., Jan. 24 (AP).—The alertness of a former Canadian led tonight to the arrest of a German pilot who came down unhurt over England last Sept. 7 and escaped from British prison camps.

The airman, who gave his name as Baron Franz von Werra, Messerschmitt squadron leader, was held on a vagrancy charge after Alfred Crites, now an Ogdensburg business man, saw him walking along a downtown street. He wore a blue topcoat over his regulation German flying coat and civilian trousers.

David Benjamin, chief of immigration of the United States Border Patrol stationed here, said the flyer told him he had escaped from a prison train carrying him from Halifax to an undisclosed destination in Canada.

Mr. Benjamin said Von Werra, who claimed to have shot down three British fighter planes over London before colliding with another Messerschmitt and being forced down, began his career of eluding British prison guards soon afterward.

He first escaped from a prison camp near Liverpool by tunneling beneath the wire fence. He was recaptured and sent to a camp in Scotland, where he again made a brief getaway.

Brought to Canada early this week with the second contingent of captured German pilots for internment, Von Werra leaped from the prison train some 200 miles north of Ottawa. He made his way to Prescott, Ont., directly across the river from Ogdensburg, by hitch-hiking, then crossed the river in a boat.

The pilot had been in the United States less than an hour before being arrested. Mr. Benjamin said he would be turned over to Federal authorities tomorrow for arraignment on a charge of illegal entry.

War Communiques

In Italian East Africa, a successful bombing attack was made by aircraft of the South African Air Force on Sciasciamanna, 120 miles south of Addis Ababa. As a result of this action four S-81's were completely destroyed and other enemy aircraft were severely damaged. In addition, the administration buildings on the airdrome were bombed.

Neghelli, 250 miles south of Addis Ababa, was also attacked, and the administrative buildings in the town were damaged and lorries (trucks) were successfully bombed.

At Keru some enemy bombers escorted by fighters were intercepted by South African fighter aircraft, and in the ensuing engagement one CA-133 was shot down and others were damaged. An additional CA-133 was destroyed on the ground.

From all these operations our aircraft returned safely to their bases.

LONDON, Jan. 24 (AP).—An Admiralty communique:

Our submarines in the Mediterranean continue to carry out with success their part of interrupting Italy's sea-borne communications with her armies in Africa.

CAIRO, Jan. 24 (AP).—A British Middle East command communique:

Libya: Our troops are continuing their advance westward.

Eritrea: The Italian forces have evacuated Keru and Aigot and are continuing their retreat.

Abyssinia (Ethiopia): Reports have been received of recent native patriot activities south and east of Lake Tana during which casualties were inflicted on the enemy troops.

Kenya Colony: Vigorous patrolling up to and over the frontier was carried out on a large portion of the frontier. Few of the enemy were encountered.

A Royal Air Force communique:

Bomber aircraft of the R. A. F. again attacked Appolonia (in Libya) yesterday. Bombs straddled barracks and the southern edge of an airdrome, starting a number of explosions and fires which were seen thirty-five miles away.

Derna and Marau, fifty miles southwest of Appolonia, were also raided, bombs falling among buildings at the former and among aircraft at the latter. Details of these two attacks are not yet available.

Fighter aircraft maintained patrols throughout the day, and deep reconnaissances were made.

His Majesty's submarine Parthian (Comdr. M. G. Rimington, D. S. O., R. N.) has sunk a heavily laden Italian supply ship of about 7,000 tons south of Italy.

Tonight's Air Ministry-Home Security Ministry communique:

There has been very little enemy activity over this country today. A single enemy aircraft crossed the east coast of Scotland early this afternoon. Anti-aircraft guns and a fighter patrol drove it off. No bombs were dropped.

German

BERLIN, Jan. 24 (AP).—The German high command communique:

German planes, in the course of armed reconnaissance, bombed war-essential objectives at a British east coast harbor yesterday.

Long-distance planes attacked and sank two armed merchantmen, totaling 8,100 tons, in the region west of Ireland. Another 5,500-ton ship stopped, burning and with a list.

Several heavy explosions were observed after bombs hit a 12,000-ton freighter on the English east coast.

One enemy plane was downed in an air fight.

Italian

ROME, Jan. 24 (AP).—The Italian high command communique:

On the Greek front we captured prisoners and automatic arms in patrol actions. Our planes scatter-bombed enemy troops.

In Cyrenaica (Libya) our air force intensively scatter-bombed and machine-gunned enemy mechanized forces. The enemy air force bombed Derna.

In the Tobruk fortress our troops in the western section offered stubborn resistance throughout yesterday.

In East Africa fighting is in progress between our units, effectively supported by our air force, and the enemy motorized forces on the Sudan front and in Somaliland on the Kenya front.

In the Aegean, enemy planes flew over the City of Rhodes on the night of Jan. 22, dropping several explosive bombs. Slight damage was caused to private dwellings, but no one was hurt.

The German Air Corps again attacked objectives in the base at Malta.

Roosevelt Calls Defense Labor Situation Good

Says There Have Been Few Strikes; Unions' Rivalry Starts at Allis-Chalmers

WASHINGTON, Jan. 24 (AP).—President Roosevelt said today that strikes in defense industries had been very few and that the labor situation on the whole was very good.

That was his reply when asked at his press conference for comment on the Congress of Industrial Organizations-United Automobile Workers strike at the Milwaukee plant of the Allis-Chalmers Manufacturing Company, which has about $26,000,000 in defense orders, chiefly for naval equipment.

Asked what was the general policy of the government regarding strikes in defense industries, the President said each case stood by itself.

Roosevelt Asks $175,000,000

Appropriation for Clothing and Equipping Army of 1,400,000 Is Sought.

Washington, Jan. 24 (A. P.).—President Roosevelt asked Congress today for an immediate appropriation of $175,000,000 for the purchase of clothing and equippage which will be required for an army of approximately 1,400,000 men.

The War Department disclosed today that the Government had entered into a $39,740,836 contract with the Studebaker company for the construction of plants to build Wright aeronautical engines. The contract was with the Defense Plant Corporation, an RFC subsidiary.

An additional contract for $10,045,313 covered the cost of machinery and equipment, officials said. Neither of these contracts covered production orders.

The plants to be expanded or built will be at South Bend and Fort Wayne, Ind., and Chicago.

A contract estimated to total $47,997,000 for construction and equipment of a smokeless powder plant at Childersburg Ala., was awarded by the War Department to E. I. du Pont de Nemours & Co. of Wilmington, Del. The department said that $13,000,000 represented the cost of equipment, leaving $34,997,000 for construction and preparation of the plant for operation. The contract was awarded on a cost plus fixed fee basis, and the Navy Department, which will use approximately a third of the powder produced, agreed to pay approximately one-third of the cost.

The War Department announced that these contracts had been cleared by the Defense Commission:

Stewart Warner Company, Chicago, machinery and equipment for the manufacture of ordnance items, $4,000,000; Omaha Steel Company, Omaha, machinery and equipment for the manufacture of ordnance items, $483,875; Wright Aeronautical Corporation, East Paterson, N. J., additional plant facilities for the manufacture of aircraft engines, $1,500,000.

ROOSEVELT SENDS ADVISER TO CHINA

Currie Makes a Trip Like Hopkins's to London.

Washington, Jan. 24 (A. P.).—In a move parallel to Harry Hopkins's special mission to England, it was announced today that Laughlin Currie, administrative assistant to President Roosevelt, would visit China soon to make an economic survey. Apparently he is to help determine what aid that country should receive if the lease-lend bill is passed.

Emphasizing the administration's interest alike in Chinese and British resistance to Germany, Italy and Japan, Mr. Currie will go to Chungking at the invitation of the Chinese Government and will bear a special message of greeting to Generalissimo Chiang Kai-shek.

Known as President Roosevelt's personal economic adviser, Mr. Currie, 38 years old, with an extensive background in economics, will be accompanied by Emile Destres, senior economist of the Federal Reserve Board. Mr. Currie, educated at Harvard and the London School of Economics, also held a position with the reserve board before he became administrative assistant to the President in July, 1939.

He is expected to make an intensive study of China's whole economic structure.

As a close adviser to the President, however, he is expected also to study China's war needs generally and the strength of resistance to Japan, much the same thing that Mr. Hopkins is believed to be doing in Great Britain.

HOUSE VOTES FUNDS FOR 200 FREIGHTERS

Refuses to Bar Closed Shop Rule in Shipyards.

Washington, Jan. 24 (A. P.).—The House passed and sent to the Senate today an emergency appropriation of $313,500,000 for building 200 new cargo vessels after refusing to prohibit closed shop agreements by contractors participating in the program. The legislation would make the funds available to the Maritime Commission for the immediate construction of the ships, described by President Roosevelt as needed urgently to meet the threat of a world shortage of such vessels resulting from the European war.

Shortly before passage, the House adopted an amendment to prohbit the payment of any funds to persons advocating the overthrow of the Government by force. That provision was a substitute for the proposal of Representative Smith, Democrat, of Virginia, which would have prohibited the payment of any funds to firms requiring their employees to join labor unions.

President and Winant Talk at White House

Washington, Jan. 24 (A. P.).—The President disclosed today that he had conferred this morning with John G. Winant, former Republican Governor of New Hampshire, who has been mentioned for appointment as the new United States Ambassador to Great Britain, but he added that nothing could be said on that as yet. The President explained that no announcement would be made on the new ambassador until word from Britain had been received that the selection was agreeable to that country.

SETS DEBT LIMIT AT 65 BILLION

Necessary Legislation Is Started by Doughton.

Washington, Jan. 24 (A. P.).—Representative Doughton, chairman of the House Ways and Means Committee, introduced legislation today to raise the Federal debt limit to $65,000,000,000 from its present level of $49,000,000,000. The current debt is $45,163,856,577.

Mr. Doughton announced that public hearings on the measure would start Wednesday with Secretary Morgenthau as the first witness.

The measure also would remove the present limitation of $4,000,000,000 on the amount of new indebtedness which could be incurred for national defense. That sum was "earmarked" last year when Congress boosted the limit upward from $45,000,000,000.

Secretary Morgenthau meanwhile called in two of his favorite financial advisers to discuss methods of raising the billions necessary for financing the defense program.

They were Roswell Magill of Columbia University, former Under-Secretary of the Treasury, and Jacob Viner of the University of Chicago.

Mr. Morgenthau is seeking advice from numerous sources on what types of securities should be sold, and what sales methods should be employed. He already has indicated he has plans for selling small denomination securities, including $5 bonds and possibly 25 cent saving stamps as was done during the world war.

However, officials said that, naturally, the bulk of the borrowing probably would be done through long term bonds of the usual $1,000 denomination.

Extent of the borrowing contemplated by Mr. Morgenthau was shown in President Roosevelt's $17,485,528,049 budget for the next fiscal year, which provided for a deficit of $9,210,093,049. This deficit will have to be met from borrowing except to the extent that new taxes, also advocated by the administration, are enacted.

BRITISH SALES 'SATISFACTORY'

Under-Secretary Phillips Reports to Treasury Officials.

Washington, Jan. 24 (A. P.).—Sir Frederick Phillips, Under-Secretary of the British Treasury, said today that liquidation of British securities in the United States was "progressing very satisfactorily."

He said that was the gist of a report he made this morning to Treasury and Securities and Exchange Commission officials at a conference in the office of Secretary Morgenthau.

Mr. Morgenthau recently disclosed a British estimate that at the beginning of the year the British owned $616,000,000 of "market" securities and $900,000,000 of direct investments in the United States.

His liquidation report, Sir Frederick explained, referred to the "market" securities.

The British officials told reporters he also was negotiating with "a very large number" of American investment trusts for the sale of the direct investments.

This phase of liquidation, it was explained, was awaiting the arrival in the United States of a high British official carrying a list of these investments. The name of the official was not learned, but he was said to have arrived in Lisbon to take a clipper plane for the United States.

Sir Frederick was accompanied by T. J. Carlyle Gifford, British liquidating agent in New York, who has been handling the piecemeal sale of the "market" securities. These are well-known stocks and bonds which are listed on leading securities exchanges.

G. H. S. Pinsent, financial attache of the British Embassy, also attended. The Securities and Exchange Commission was represented by Ganson Purcell, director of the trading and exchange division, and David Schencker, head of the investment trust division.

Treasury conferees beside Mr. Morgenthau were Under-Secretary Daniel W. Bell, Merle Cochran, director of the stabilization fund, and Harry D. White, director of monetary research.

U. S. Chamber Opposes "Power" In Aid Bill

Chicago, Jan. 22 (AP)—Directors of the Chamber of Commerce of the United States tonight indorsed aid to Great Britain, but expressed opposition to the lease-lend bill before Congress because the President was "specifically excluded from the restraining influence of any law."

The directors, saying they represented 700,000 businessmen, contended in a statement that the present bill gave "unnecessary and unwise" powers to the Chief Executive and created the possibility of America entering into war without further action by Congress.

Approve Lease Of Arms

They said they favored Congress enacting promptly such laws as would permit the sale, lease or gift of military properties or the extension of cash or credit to the British Empire, or other democracies fighting aggressors, provided they did not create an act of war.

Also, they said, the laws should prohibit United States ships from being sent into the war zones, except with the prior expressed approval of Congress, and should specify that no soldiers, sailors or other representatives of the armed forces of this nation, other than high-ranking officers, be permitted in the war zone, except with the approval of Congress.

NYE SEES WAR NEAR

Says Entry May Be Only Few Weeks Off.

Philadelphia, Jan. 24 (A. P.).—Senator Gerald P. Nye, Republican, of North Dakota, says this nation is closer to war today than it was a month before it entered the world war.

Mr. Nye, a leading isolationist, told a men's club here last night: "In a matter of a very few weeks, if certain things are allowed to happen, American sons will again be sent to European battlefields. We want to know first what is England's purpose in this war. What does she intend to do if she wins it? We don't even know that, and yet we're nearer to entering the war today than we were thirty days before entering the last one."

He did not elaborate.

RELIEF FOR FINLAND

Red Cross Studies Plan to Send Over Supplies.

Washington, Jan. 24 (A.P.).—The United States is seeking to meet Finland's more urgent needs for food and other relief supplies through the American Red Cross rather than through further governmental loans, it was learned today.

An additional allotment of $500,000 for foodstuffs and other materials has been made by the Red Cross, bringing to $2,379,000 the amount of relief shipments already made or being prepared for Finland during this winter.

This is far short of the needs estimated by Hjalmar Procope, Finnish Minister. Finland obtained a $30,000,000 Export-Import Bank loan during the Russo-Finnish war which has been virtually exhausted by purchases in the United States.

U. S. DEFENSE LAID TO THREAT FROM ABROAD

Stephen Early Cites Acts "Which Contemplate World Domination"

St. Paul, Minn., Jan. 24 (AP)—Stephen Early, secretary to President Roosevelt, said tonight this nation is committed to a policy of all-out defense because it is convinced that there is a "movement on the other side of the water which seriously contemplates the domination of the entire world."

in Germany and Italy." Then he added:

"If you want to destroy society, you must destroy the press and the radio. And that is what has happened to the newspapers and radio in the totalitarian countries. To say that they are subject to censorship is to tell less than half the truth. What they contain is ordered from above, all of it."

Early, in an address to the Minnesota Editorial Association and broadcast, said the defense policy meant:

"Defense for the present, for the near-by future, and for the long-range future. It means defense by building now, the most modern fighting equipment.

For Continued Production

"It means defense by building the plant so that it can keep on producing the most modern equipment as long as may be necessary.

"It means defense by putting that equpiment where it can best serve the interests of the United States."

The latter statement apparently referred to the Administration's lease-lend proposal for aiding Britain. Until the "dream of universal domination" is ended, Early said, "no one in the world can feel safe; such safety as there is abides in the strength of our arms."

"Must Destroy Society"

Early said that to establish dictatorship and totalitarianism, society must be destroyed as it has been "destroyed

Ile de France Likely To Become Troopship

Boston, Jan. 24 (A. P.).—The 40,000-ton French liner Ile de France is being converted into a troop or supply ship in Singapore under the direction of British authorities, members of the crew of the American freighter Steel Traveler reported today. They said that when the Steel Traveler, which arrived here today, tied up beside the French ship at Singapore several weeks ago, workmen hurriedly were outfitting the ship for transport purposes. The American vessel brought tin and rubber.

12 Cargo Vessels Are Sold to British

Washington, Jan. 24 (A. P.).—The sale of twelve cargo vessels from its laid-up fleet to British shipping interests was announced today by the Maritime Commission. The British will pay $2,779,-800 for the twelve vessels, whose deadweight tonnage totals 107,-061. The British had bid $4,-611,650 for twenty ships, but this was rejected.

Today's sale increased to forty-nine the number of ships the commission has sold to the British from its laid-up fleet.

Transylvania Again an Issue.

The recent loss of Rumanian Transylvania to Hungary has been raised at one battle cry in the present revolter, but seems to be incidental rathr than one of the chief causes of the disturbance. Antonescu has announced that he doesn't recognize the cession of this rich territory to Hungary—although it was done on order of Hitler—and expects to get it back.

The Rumanian Government accepts the view that Hitler was forced by Italy to make this concession. Thus, as Italy's prestige has sunk, the Rumanian demands for return of Transylvania have gone up. The Iron Guard in general appears to have had no quarrel with this attitude of their dictator. But when the General assumed power with the Iron Guard support he didn't establish a Guardist government.

The Government is made up of various classes. Financial and economic matters, however, are in the hands of conservatives—experienced members of the old regime of the King.

Here is said to lie the bone of contention with the radicals. They say he is favoring the vested interests at the expense of the masses. The Government charges that this charge is being exploited by Communists.

The Germans would appear to have kept aloof as far as possible. The idea that they inspired the trouble to facilitate the taking over of Rumania doesn't hold water. The Nazis could not assume control of Rumania without building a bonfire on their own doorstep. Their business is to maintain tranquillity and get food production started again in this rich grain area.

It is my view that the Nazi occupation is for the purpose of establishing a strategic base for offensive or defensive military operations, or both, and to make sure that Rumania remains within the Nazi fold.

In the War Zone

Antonescu's Economic Policy Seen as One Cause of Disturbances

By DEWITT MACKENZIE.

JAN 25 1941

The Rumanian revolt, which is officially attributed to youthful extremists in the pro-Nazi Iron Guard and to communists, would appear to have received much of its impetus from dissatisfaction with conservative leanings of the military dictator, Gen. Antonescu.

Mixed with this is a certain amount of violent opposition to the Nazi occupation. And we cannot ignore the Rumanian charge that Russian communists are expediting the situation in order to make it difficult for the Germans to retain their hold on the country.

When Antonescu last September forced King Carol's abdication and established a military dictatorship, the coup was achieved with the support of the Iron Guard. The dictatorship was definitely pro-Nazi and subscribed to the Axis.

Antonescu has indicated that his sole business is to preserve the independence of Rumania. He also has made it clear that he believed his country's fortune is bound up with that of Germany, that he has faith in Nazidom, and so has hitched his chariot to Hitler's star. That is said also to represent the position of the Iron Guard as a whole.

Sima Reported Held, Guard Purge Ordered

Personality Sketch of Iron Guard Leader Page 2

By Robert St. John

Associated Press Foreign Correspondent

Bucharest, Rumania, Jan. 25 (AP) (Passed by Military Censor) — Vice-Premier Horia Sima, officially accused of leading the Rumanian rebellion, was variously reported tonight as captured or in flight across Soviet Russia while Premier General Ion Antonescu called on rebels to punish themselves—a bidding to mass suicide.

(Flight of Sima, leader of the Iron Guard, into Russia might imply that Russia, in giving even fleeting sanctuary, chose not to see the Vice-Premier caught by the spreading Antonescu purge. The full motivation of the Rumanian rebellion has not yet been disclosed.)

Calls For Punishment

Antonescu called on the rebel Guardists to punish themselves in the "true" fashion of their Spartan organization—which means suicide.

". . . You rebels, if you are true Iron Guardists, punish yourselves with true legionary punishment or otherwise you may be sure I shall apply mass punishment myself," Antonescu proclaimed.

General Antonescu, who claims mastery of the nation after a week of blood and terror, announced he was forming a new political organization to promulgate "common spirit with Germany and Italy" and voiced gratitude for German backing.

(Authorized sources in Berlin said also that the German Government has faith in Premier Gen. Ion Antonescu, of Rumania.

"Greatest Sadness"

(The impression was gained from these sources that Horia Sima has been dropped so far as Germany is concerned, although it was said that Rumanians themselves must decide who should carry on the work of reconstruction.)

"I make it a duty and an honor to declare to the nation in these days of greatest sadness that I have behind me the loyal shadow of the great Führer and the honor of German might which guaranteed our borders," Antonescu wrote at the end of a dramatic account of the rebellion.

There was no elaboration of the report that Sima, Iron Guard chieftain had been taken.

(A newspaper dispatch to Budapest, Hungary, from Bucharest said it was reported that Rumanian soldiers had stormed the Iron Guard's "green house" quarters in the hunt for Sima who had barricaded himself there.

(Charges of looting as well as rebellion were reported lodged against Guardist leaders. They were accused of sacking synagogues and wrecking the newspaper plants of Universul and Curentud.)

Rebels Smoked Out

Premier General Ion Antonescu declared in a signed statement in the newspapers today that a midnight attempt to assassinate him had touched off the bloody rebellion.

An important nest of 250 rebels was smoked out at noon today. They were said to have had a large cache of hand grenades, guns, food, liquor and cigarettes.

Antonescu's summary said "Men whom I trusted and all those dear children in whom I put such faith and advised to respect the death of Codreanu (Corneliu Codreanu, Iron Guard martyr) could find no other way to show their faith in me than to send bullets against me and the state.

"In the pages of history there does not exist a page of greater ingratitude.

"In the Premier's office I worked like a slave early and late. I abandoned my home so as not to lose a minute.

"They organized against me with the help of Former Minister of Interior (General George) Petrovicescu and Director of Gendarmes Ghica and officers of the municipal police.

"They concentrated vagabonds and malcontents and assembled pieces of artillery, machine guns and rifles with which they tried to assassinate me by night. The attempt did not succeed, so they attacked by day.

"At the same time, in institutions with money paid into the State by your citizens, they installed rebel groups and with them were joined enemies of the State, young idealists and innocents who were betrayed from the start.

"Strikes were called. Factories were burned while suburbs of the neighborhood were ransacked and pillaged.

"I tried without success to stop the rebellion. I, who made the coup d'etat of September 6 without shedding a drop of blood and who suffers as none other for those killed at Jilava, and because I did not want to cover my hands with blood, I was obliged to allow troops to shoot our brothers.

"In the attack on the Premier's office, in which two soldiers were killed and one officer was wounded, not a single rebel was wounded.

"Six hundred vagabonds, men and women of the lowest order and a child of 12 years old who shot a machine gun at the soldiers, did not have a single wound. On the streets soldiers tried to call the rebels to order by threat.

"Yet on one street a soldier was captured and they poured gasoline and oil on him and ignited him before the agonized eyes of his comrades.

"Soldiers Humiliated"

"The same thing happened on other streets. Soldiers who did not shoot were insulted and humiliated and officers were greeted with the names of 'dog' and 'wretch,' as in an anarchial revolution.

"Everywhere there was rifle and pistol fire from roofs against soldiers who sacrificed their lives to maintain order.

"I gave the order that rebels at the police prefecture be released without the presence of the army, having confidence in the promise that as soon as the army had retired the rebels would give up their arms and leave.

"In revenge for my confidence, they shot with machine guns and rifles and captured tanks to attack the telephone building, army headquarters and the radio station from which they gave out the order to seize soldiers. They even put themselves in military uniform. In many cities of the nation similar things occurred."

"By my order, the army never attacked during the first two days of the rebellion, but only defended itself.

"The wretches who got the Iron Guard to serve foreign interests and the vagabonds who fell do not deserve a better fate. But young, correct people have fallen for a false belief.

"The severest punishments are deserved by those who sent to death the innocents, by those who betrayed their followers and who led them into this mad enterprise in loosing anarchy and hate, only to abandon them when the fight had begun."

The Council of Ministers, in its own resume of the fighting, said it was impossible to estimate the number of casualties in this week of civil strife.

Soldier Burned

The Council of Ministers declared today in an official resume of this week's bloody events in Rumania that rebels had poured gasoline over a Rumanian soldier and set him afire, quoting this as one example of barbarism against which the army had to fight.

The announcement said it was impossible to estimate the number of casualties.

The army, with tanks, is scouring Bucharest section by section in their search for rebel leaders.

Thousands of Guardsmen who had been given state jobs after the abdication of King Carol II chose to remain in hiding and lose their posts rather than appear to face arrest and punishment.

600 Surrender

Antonescu had given them until tonight to appear or be crossed off the pay roll.

A person attached to the Government said 600 Guardists finally were forced to surrender a munition depot they had held for days when the army opened water mains to flood the basement in which they were hiding.

A Government announcement said: "True Iron Guardists" who took part in the rebellion would know how "to punish themselves," but added that the Government would see to it that "bad guardists would be made to pay for their trouble-making."

The formation of a new national political party was announced.

IRON GUARDS FACE SUICIDE OR 'MASS' FATE

Antonescu, Crying Ingratitude, Gives Rebels Two Alternatives

Sima Variously Reported Under Arrest And In Flight In Russia

By ROBERT ST. JOHN

Associated Press Correspondent

Bucharest, Jan. 25—Gen. Ion Antonescu, Rumania's victorious dictator, offered the leaders of the Iron Guard rebellion today the bleak alternative of suicide or "mass punishment" at the hands of the state.

Their chief, Vice-Premier Horia Sima, was reported variously as under arrest or in flight across Soviet Russia, but he and his associates were summoned by the Premier to this strange self-judgment:

". . . You rebels! If you are true Iron Guardists, punish yourself with true legionary punishment (and that by tradition is suicide) or otherwise you may be sure that I shall apply mass punishment myself."

[First it was understood in Bucharest that Sima had been taken into custody. The subsequent suggestion that he might have found refuge in Russia was interesting in the light of Antonescu's earlier assertion that holdout rebels had been under "Communist influence."]

Reported Seized With Loot

Tonight, rumors still new as to Sima's whereabouts. A photograph sent to newspapers here for publication represented that he had been arrested with several other Iron Guardists in a sleeping car in the provinces in possession of 3,500,000 lei (the leu, now unquoted in foreign exchange, was worth a fraction of a cent).

The picture showed him with the other Guardists. Newspaper editors received statements from several Guardists accusing Sima of having appropriated for his own use 800,000,000 lei of the Iron Guard poor relief fund.

Antonescu Takes Steps

General Antonescu conferred during the day with the German Minister, Baron Manfred von Killinger, and put every dock, airport and railroad depot under military control. All save international railroad traffic was halted; a 10 A. M. curfew was imposed, soldiers were ordered to shoot instantly any person failing to halt in response to challenge.

Long lines of Jews filed all day into the morgues to identify relatives killed in the rebellion. Jewish quarters were sacked, Jewish homes soaked in oil and set afire, synagogues pillaged, wrecked and burned.

Rich Loot From Jewish Homes

In one Jewish home, it developed today, four and a half million lei were stolen. Soldiers mopping up discovered vast quantities of money, furs, clothing, furniture looted from homes and shops by the rebels.

General Antonescu, still at the head of the state after four days of terror, announced that he was forming a new political party which would include Iron Guardsmen who had remained loyal to him and would promote "the common spirit with Germany and Italy." The new government is expected to be largely military.

"Loyal Shadow Of Führer"

"I make it a duty and an honor to declare to the nation in these days of greatest sadness that I have behind me the loyal shadow of the great Führer (Adolf Hitler) and the honor of German might which guaranteed our borders."

This the Premier wrote at the end of a long manifesto giving his account of the rebellion. Over and over he presented himself as the victim of ingratitude and inferentially recalled his own association with the Iron Guard—whose green shirt he wore symbolically after the coup by which he deposed King Carol last September 6, with the support of this same Iron Guard.

Charges Ingratitude

"Men whom I trusted and all those dear children in whom I put such faith and advised to respect the death of Codreanu (Corneliu Codreanu, a slain Iron Guard leader), could find no other way to show their faith in me than to send bullets against me and the state" thus went Antonescu's account.

"In the pages of history there does not exist a page of greater ingratitude.

"In the Premier's office I worked like a slave early and late. I abandoned my home so as not to lose a minute.

"They organized against me with the help of former Minister of Interior (General George) Petrovicescu and Director of Gendarmes Ghica and officers of the municipal police.

Vagabonds And Malcontents

"They concentrated vagabonds and malcontents and assembled pieces of artillery, machine guns and rifles with which they tried to assassinate me by night. The attempt did not succeed, so they attacked by day.

[Press dispatches to Belgrade reported today that a separate attempt upon Antonescu's life was made January 21 by a man who appeared at the Premier's home in the uniform of a Foreign Office porter representing that he had an urgent letter. Antonescu, confronted as he left his bath, was declared to have jumped back into the bathroom, slamming the door before the assassin could fire. The visitor then was arrested by bodyguards.]

"At the same time, in institutions with money paid into the state by you citizens, they installed rebel groups and with them were joined enemies of the state, young idealists and innocents who were betrayed from the start.

"Strikes were called. Factories were burned. . .

Not A Single Rebel Wounded

"I tried without success to stop the rebellion (without loss of blood). I—who made the coup d'etat of September 6 without shedding a drop of blood. . . . And because I did not want to cover my hands with blood I was obliged to allow troops to shoot our brothers.

"In the attack on the Premier's office, in which two soldiers were killed and one officer was wounded, not a single rebel was wounded.

"Six hundred vagabond, men and women of the lowest order and a child of 12 years old who shot a machine gun at the soldiers, did not have a single wound. . . .

Soldier Set Afire On Street

"Yet, on one street a soldier was captured and they poured gasoline and oil on him and ignited him before the agonized eyes of his comrades. The same thing happened on other streets. . . .

"By my order the army never attacked during the first two days of the rebellion, but only defended itself.

"The severest punishments are deserved by those who sent to death the innocents, by those who betrayed their followers and led them into this mad enterprise in loosing anarchy and hate, only to abandon them when the fight had begun."

Groza Reported Killed

It was announced that Vasile Groza, head of the radical workers group of the Iron Guard whose manifesto against the Antonescu Government had been plastered in windows and on fences all over Bucharest earlier in the week, had been killed in the fighting.

Ghica, the chief of gendarmes, and the secret police chief, Maimuca, are under court martial.

Vasile Iasisivki, former Minister of Health, was reported wounded.

Horia Kosmovitch, former Under Secretary of State and chief of Iron Guard propaganda, and Victor Medrea, chief of the Propaganda Ministry's press section, have been arrested.

An eyewitness said tonight that the first thing done by the Iron Guardists when they pillaged the homes of wealthy Jews was to dress up in the best suits, shirts, ties and shoes of their victims, leaving their own old clothing behind.

A witness to the pillaging of a synagogue said the looters poured gasoline over parchment scrolls of the Old Testament and fled in superstitious terror when they did not burn.

Antonescu Death Try

[By the Associated Press]

Belgrade, Yugoslavia, Jan. 25—Belgrade newspapers reported today that an attempt had been made on the life of Gen. Ion Antonescu, the Rumanian Premier, on January 21 by a man wearing the uniform of a porter of the Rumanian Foreign Office.

This was the story:

The assassin appeared at Antonescu's home and announced that he had an urgent letter for the Premier. Thus he was allowed to enter; met Antonescu coming from his bath. Noticing his visitor fumbling for a revolver, Antonescu jumped back into the bathroom, locking the door. Bodyguards arrested the visitor.

News reports reaching Belgrade said that "at least 2,000" were dead in Bucharest alone as a result of the rebellion of the Rumanian Iron Guard.

Iron Guard Disturbs Nazis in Jew's House

BUCHAREST, Jan. 25 (AP).—Two German officers, billeted in the former home here of Aristide Blank, once a wealthy Jewish banker, got no sleep at all for several days of the Iron Guard rebellion.

They were awakened repeatedly by Iron Guardists searching for the banker, who had fled. Finally, the Germans put this sign on the door: "This house is inhabited only by German officers."

They were not bothered any more.

Sima's 'Cease-Fire' Order Delivered by a German

Bucharest Hears of Nazi's Role in Ending Rebellion

BUCHAREST, Jan. 25 (AP).—The "cease firing" order given on Thursday by Horia Sima, rebellious Iron Guard leader, was brought into Bucharest from his mountain hideout by a German officer, it was reported tonight.

The officer, it was said, offered to act as courier between the hideaway where Sima was directing a nation-wide rebellion and the government here, to help restore peace.

Surrender of the prefecture of police, held for a while by Sima's legionnaires, also was reported accomplished through a German officer who volunteered to go through the fighting lines with his own pledge that nothing would happen to the insurgents if they retired.

Sima Has Switched Allegiance Often

By Arthur F. Wolf

New York, Jan. 25 (AP)—The career of Horia Sima, 40-year-old führer of Rumania's pro-Nazi Iron Guard, has made the full turn of the wheel.

He was forced into exile by former King Carol during the bloody feud in 1938 and 1939 in which 2,500 Iron Guardsmen were executed, but returned to become Vice Premier after helping Chief of State General Ion Antonescu force Carol's abdication.

Now Hunted Again

Now he has been hunted again, and is reported to have been arrested by General Antonescu's Government which calls him the leader of the violent revolt which has held Rumania a grip of terror all week.

Just what took place to bring about this turn of the wheel is not yet known. Up to the beginning of this week he had been regarded in neutral quarters as the heir-apparent to General Antonescu's post.

But Sima, who looks more like a poet than the leader of a totalitarian party, has changed fronts before.

Exiled In Germany

After spending some time in exile in Germany following Carol's purge of the guard, Sima attempted to sneak back into Rumania on May 19, 1940, but was captured. He was released from prison not long after and on June 19 was received in informal audience by King Carol.

Four days later he issued a command to "my comrades," presumably all legionnaires of the Guard, to join King Carol's new political party. The first name on the list of those applying for membership was that of Ion Codreanu, father of Corneliu Codreanu, a previous leader of the Guard who was slain in prison.

"The King's new party will enable us to face the future," Sima declared then.

Given Cabinet Post

On June 28, only nine days after his visit to Carol, Sima was appointed Under Secretary of Education in the Cabinet and on July 4 he became Minister of Culture in the pro-Nazi Cabinet of Ion Gigurtu.

Four days later he quit the Cabinet, along with three other Iron Guardists, in an effort to enforce a Guard demand for a Cabinet made up solely of members of their party. The Gigurtu Cabinet collapsed as a result.

Then, swiftly Sima seemed to have undergone a complete change, turning against Carol so furiously that Balkan reports said it was at his insistence alone that Antonescu held out for Carol's abdication last September. Thousands of Iron Guards standing outside the palace and screaming abuse at Carol apparently helped the monarch make up his mind. Sima became Vice-Premier September 15.

Carol Supporters Slain

Later in November the green-shirted Guardists began a reign of terror to avenge the deaths of Corneliu Codreanu and other Guardists two years before, and scores of men prominent in Carol's regimes were slain.

The party split into three factions and Sima was reported to be the leader of the faction calling for discipline. Ion Codreanu led the second faction. The third, said to have been far the largest, was described as completely out of control, looting and paying off personal scores under the protection of the Green Shirts.

Abolished Police Group

On December 3 Sima abolished the Iron Guard police organization, which played a leading role in the blood purge and took a stern stand against disreputable members.

Now he seems to be in charge of a violent faction himself; at least, the Antonescu Government blames him for this week's bloody revolt, but the explanation for this seeming switch is veiled in the mists of censorship.

One of Sima's first acts after becoming Minister of Culture last July was to prohibit Jewish actors and musicians to perform in public.

UNDATED IRON GUARD
BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

THE RUMANIAN IRON GUARD, ORIGINALLY RECRUITED FROM AMONG DISPOSSESSED ARISTOCRATIC LAND OWNERS, BUCHAREST HIGH SOCIETY AND YOUNG PEOPLE, HAS FOLLOWED FOR YEARS AN ESTABLISHED POLICY OF TERRORISM.

THE PARTY NOW IS SAID TO NUMBER APPROXIMATELY 200,000 PERSONS, MANY SELF-APPOINTED. ITS BASE IS A VAST NUMBER OF TINY "CELLS" OF FROM 10 TO 20 MEMBERS.

THE GUARDS SURVIVED OFFICIAL DISSOLUTION AND MASS SLAYINGS DURING KING CAROL'S REGIME IN HIS ATTEMPT TO PURGE IT FROM RUMANIA, AND ITS MEMBERS REPEATEDLY PLOTTED AGAINST CAROL'S LIFE.

IT HAD A HAND IN MANY KILLINGS IN RUMANIA BEFORE THE REBELLION. ONLY LAST NOVEMBER THE GUARDISTS EXACTED BLOODY REVENGE FOR THE DEATH OF ITS MARTYRED FOUNDER, CORNELIUS ZELEA CODREANU.

SINCE 1930, THE IRON GUARD HAS BEEN THE ONLY PARTY IN RUMANIA TO ADVOCATE CLOSE RELATIONS WITH GERMANY INSTEAD OF FRANCE.

Donovan's Loss Causes Sofia Hotel To Install Sleuth On Each Floor

Sofia, Jan. 25 (AP)—The hotel where Col. William J. Donovan stayed in Sofia, having searched fruitlessly for the American observer's missing wallet containing a diplomatic passport, has posted plain-clothes men on each floor to guard against similar losses in the future.

Donovan, who arrived by air today at Salonika, Greece, was about to board a train for Belgrade on Wednesday when he discovered the loss. After searching his luggage and the hotel room, Donovan finally appealed to the staff of the royal palace.

The American, who is on a secret mission, had had an eighty-minute visit with King Boris and he felt he might have lost the wallet at the palace. But it could not be found there.

British Rout Italian Force

[By the Associated Press]

Cairo, Egypt, Jan. 25—British general headquarters reported today that a column of Italian medium tanks was "dispersed" yesterday three miles east of Derna, or about 175 miles inside Libya from the Egyptian frontier.

A communique also reported "further patriot (native) successes" in Ethiopia and added that the Italians had abandoned more posts. About 600 prisoners were taken in Eritrea, it declared, while those captured at Tobruk would probably number "not less than 20,000."

Large quantities of guns and material are being sorted and checked at Tobruk, the communique said.

On the Kenya Colony front, the British said, patrols were operating in Italian areas and continuing to eject Italian detachments from the British side of the frontier.

Headquarters Moved

Marshal Rodolfo Graziani has removed his Libyan army headquarters from the Akdar Mountain town of Cirene and withdrawn most of the garrison of the port of Derna from the path of the British drive west of smoldering Tobruk, according to military circles here.

The British said heavy attacks by R. A. F. planes ranging ahead of advancing columns apparently had forced the Italian command to leave Cirene fifty miles west of Derna and 145 miles west of Tobruk. Derna was reported left virtually undefended.

Reports from the British-occupied base at Tobruk indicated, however, that the main British drive was cutting south of these coastal positions, directly across the Cirenaican Hump toward the next big Italian base at Bengasi. British tanks and Australian infantry have been reported in the vicinity of El Mechili, southwest of Derna and almost halfway along the 150-mile inland route from Tobruk to Bengasi. These columns are composed of troops held in reserve during the assault on Tobruk.

Wavell in Tobruk

It was disclosed last night that Gen. Sir Archibald Wavell, commander of the Army of the Nile visited his troops in Tobruk on Thursday, the day after the city fell before the British assault. He praised the soldiers there—Australians lolling in the sun, riding Italian bicycles through streets lined with shell-torn buildings and eating victory meals of captured Italian food supplies and wine.

The British reported gains, too, on the war front in East Africa. Desert fighters were said to have penetrated eighty miles into Eritrea from the Anglo-Egyptian Sudan—more than halfway to the colonial capital at Asmara, driving past abandoned Fascist outposts at Keru and Aicota.

Somewhere in the mountainous headwaters of the Blue Nile, in northwestern Ethiopia, the Emperor Haile Selassie, returned from exile, was reported rallying his tribesmen to the Ethiopian standard of red, yellow and green, which he unfurled in alliance with Britain.

Eritrean Drive Menaces Red Sea Port; Kenya's Invaders Are Ejected

CAIRO, Jan. 25.—British armored cars were reported tonight to have reached Derna, Libya, 175 miles beyond the Egyptian frontier, in circumstances suggesting that Derna had been abandoned by the Fascists. During the day the British met no resistance, so far as could be learned. An Italian tank column was attacked and dispersed yesterday.

While troops and guns were being advanced along the coast road west of Tobruk as fast as trucks could carry them, armored cars and light mechanized units swept past the Martuba airdrome, which the Italians had been occupying until only three nights ago.

Beyond stating that operations were "proceeding satisfactorily," the British command gave little information of what had happened at Derna, but the fact that R. A. F. reconnaissance planes reported spotting eight Italian planes burning on the landing ground there was considered significant. It appeared that the Italians had fired the planes before retreating.

[The United Press quoted reconnaissance pilots as reporting an Italian evacuation of Derna, which the British were said probably to have entered but from which all the Italians had not yet been cleared out.]

100 Miles Into Eritrea

New British and Allied successes to the southeast in Africa also were reported. Pursuing Italians into the Eritrean foothills, the British were reported to be more than 100 miles inside that East African colony yesterday, nearly half way to the Red Sea port of Massawa, and in the southwest sector of the East African offensive the British were pushing into Ethiopia proper opposite Gallabat.

[From Khartum, in the Anglo-Egyptian Sudan, The United Press reported that British forces had captured Keru, about forty-five miles inside Eritrea, and had established contact with the enemy beyond the town of Aicota, on the Tessenei road south of Keru.]

In aerial support of both spurs of the British offensive, the R. A. F. reported damaging aircraft on a field at Magrun, forty-five miles south of Bengasi. In East Africa, it was said, hits were scored on rail lines at Bishia, Agordat and Keren. Italian posts, airplanes and motor transport also were reported bombed.

"Many bombs" were said to have been dropped also in a raid Thursday night on the airdrome at Maritza, Rhodes, a fortified Italian base in the Dodecanese.

In Italian Eritrea, which faces the Anglo-Egyptian Sudan, advancing British troops were declared to have taken 600 Fascist prisoners, including a brigade commander, two guns and many transport vehicles.

Abandon Ethiopian Posts

In Ethiopia, where the deposed Emperor Haile Selassie was reported rallying the natives in an effort to regain his conquered land from the Italians, the Fascists were said to have abandoned several additional posts because of further British pressure and the pressure of rebelling "patriots" (natives).

Across the frontiers of Kenya, Italian detachments were reported being driven back by British patrols "now operating well across into enemy territory."

The action in Libya, which occurred yesterday, was put by the British at three miles east of Derna. Four Italian tanks were declared destroyed, two others captured and the rest routed.

[In Rome the Italian high command belatedly acknowledged the fall of Tobruk and described both British and Italian losses as "heavy." The Italian communique said that about 20,000 troops were in the Tobruk garrison. The British claim that many prisoners there.]

Derna has a normal population of about 11,000. It has no elaborate defenses such as those of Bardia and Tobruk, now captured by the British, and the size of its garrison is not known here. The Derna harbor is small and would be of little value to the British, but by reaching Derna the British would be about half the way to Bengasi.

Military sources indicated there might be small pockets of Italians between Tobruk and Derna which the advanced mechanized elements had passed, leaving the infantry to mop them up.

It was thought the Italian might attempt to make a stand in the hills of Eritrea, in the East African fighting, but the British already were reported east of Barentu and proceeding satisfactorily, and the first batch of prisoners reached Kassala, in the Anglo-Egyption Sudan, yesterday.

Details of the progress in Ethiopia were lacking. However, it was known that Ethiopian natives were helping the advance by attacking Italians in the interior, east of Lake Tana, and forcing them to abandon a number of defense positions.

South African forces were said to have cleared the Italians out of nearly all the northern frontier of the Province of Kenya. The Italians went into Kenya last fall.

Says Only 17 Anzacs Died Taking Bardia

Washington, Jan. 25 (A. P.).—Neville Butler, newly appointed Minister from Britain, said today that the Libyan campaign, including the capture of Bardia and 80,000 Italian prisoners, "cost the Australians, who bore the brunt of the attack, thirty-one officers and 265 enlisted men, of whom no more than seventeen were actually killed or died of wounds."

He made the statement in a message to the National Conference for Palestine opening here tonight, and added that Britain's record of Libyan losses is perhaps too good to last. The British campaign, he said, had "thrust well into the background" any Italian threat to Palestine.

Wavell's Drive Increases Fame As 'Desert Fox'

General Says It Was Luck, Lauds Men, Navy, Flyers; Egypt Calls Him Genius

CAIRO (Correspondence of The Associated Press).—British successes against the Italians in north Africa are adding more luster to the fame of "the desert fox"—Gen. Sir Archibald P. Wavell, commander in chief of the British Army in the Middle East.

To Wavell, the victories in the desert are due to the manner in which the men under him performed in collaboration with Britain's navy and air force—and "we had luck." But every one in Egypt acclaims him as a genius.

The fifty-seven-year-old general has been putting into practice some of the "catch-the-cat-napping" technique of desert warfare he learned during his service with the late Viscount Allenby in the Palestine campaign during the World War.

There are striking similarities in Allenby's and Wavell's campaigns. Allenby's plan hinged around taking Beersheba with the greatest possible speed. Wavell's plan depended on the taking of Nibeiwa, an Italian stronghold fifteen miles south of Sidi Barrani, in the same way.

Allenby moved troops by night and had them hide in dried-up river beds by day. Then he flung a brigade of Australian light horse at Beersheba with such speed that the Turks were prevented from destroying wells or escaping.

Similarly, Wavell moved troops across the desert by night and had them hide as best they could in the daytime. Then he hurled tanks, followed by infantry, at Nibeiwa, seizing all supplies and immediately turning them against the Italians. As in the Palestine campaign, Wavell followed up the first thrust with swift crescendo blows, continuing to surprise the enemy after the assault began.

Wavell planned everything meticulously for the drive and then let his men go ahead, changing plans and improvising new ones, when necessary, on the battlefield.

In the Middle East there is no supreme commander of all three branches of the British fighting forces. The army head cannot command the navy or the air force to do anything. He can only request.

Wavell, however, is always alive to the necessity of the most advanced equipment, always has been fully appreciative of the importance of the sea and air arms and gets along well with Admiral Sir Andrew B. Cunningham, commander-in-chief of the British Mediterranean Fleet, and with Air Marshal Sir Arthur Longmore, chieftain of the British air forces in that area.

When Wavell asumed command of the Middle East, we expected the French Army in Syria to form the main land force in this region, Britain's principal contribution being naval. The collapse of France and Italy's entry into the war left Egypt woefully unprotected on land. But Wavell got men and supplies from England by the long route around the Cape.

When the Italians entered Egypt three months later, the British fell back to defensive lines established about half way from the Libyan frontier and the Nile Valley, harassing the enemy enough to make the advance costly and leaving nothing behind.

Strengthening of defenses and training of troops to repel an expected Italian attack on the lines went ahead steadily and thoroughly. The Italians apparently never believed the British would attack, and Wavell did nothing to dispel this belief.

Finally he let them have it, uniting surprise with force and spicing both with bluff.

Both sides made use of dummy guns in the desert, but the British claim to have used one real gun amid seven dummies, firing shells from the real one and making noise for the others with large firecrackers with such success that a large number of Italians surrendered.

Willkie And Briton

BY EDDY GILMORE

[By the Associated Press]

Lisbon, Portugal, Jan. 25—Wendell L. Willkie hopes to leave Portugal for London by plane today or tomorrow and with him will go a 49-year-old Briton who wants to become a radio operator in his son's Royal Air Force bomber.

The former Republican Presidential nominee arrived at Lisbon yesterday on the Yankee Clipper, from Horta, the Azores, completing the third leg of his air journey to England to study war conditions.

Willkie spent part of the trip talking with Sidney Corlson, who boarded the plane at Horta and disclosed he was en route to London to join his son in the R. A. F.

Shut Up Shop

Corlson—blue-eyed, blond, and a typical Englishman—who was in business fifteen years in the Azores, shut up shop in February, 1940, and devoted his time to studying radio.

"Business was no good, so I said, 'Old boy, you'd better get in things,'" he explained.

His son, Ronald, 19 years old and a flyer in the R. A. F. for nearly a year, "thinks I am spoofing," he added.

His wife and two daughters are in England and "they are not unhappy about it all."

"No Heroics"

Corlson said he had been assured he had a good chance to enter the service and added, "I want particularly much to get in Ronald's ship."

"Why?" Willkie asked him.

"Well, I am very fond of Ronald," was Corlson's response.

"He magnificent," Willkie remarked. "No heroics."

Corlson told of living at San Miguel—a lonely island of the Azores 100 miles by sailboat from the nearest clipper stop—because it was ideal for his radio studies.

"I'm feeling very fit," he asserted. "I weigh 165. My height is five seven. I'll get in."

Greeted By Minister

Clouds which had overhung the Lisbon air base broke suddenly as the clipper flew in, and bright sunshine poured on Willkie when he debarked. He was greeted by the United States Minister to Portugal, Herbert Claiborne Pell, and his wife.

Scores of American, British and Portuguese newspapermen met the plane. Willkie gave them cordial handshakes but had little to say.

When a newspaperman remarked that he had lost a bet on the United States Presidential election last November, Willkie retorted: "Well, I lost a job."

Willkie was a dinner guest at the American legation and spent the night at a hotel.

Former Presidential Candidate Tells Portuguese Premier 90% In U. S. Favor Aid To Britain

[By the Associated Press]

Lisbon, Portugal, Jan. 25 — Wendell L. Willkie rested tonight after a busy round of conferences here, preparatory to flying tomorrow to England on the last leg of his journey to London. He arrived here yesterday on the Yankee Clipper.

The former Republican Presidential candidate conferred for forty-five minutes today with Prime Minister Antonio de Oliveira Salazar.

Willkie later said he had informed Premier Salazar that ninety per cent. of the American people favored aid to Britain. The Portuguese leader's greeting to his visitor was described as markedly cordial.

Willkie also disclosed that he had called on the British Ambassador to Portugal, Sir Ronald Hugh Campbell, and that in the course of a long talk they had exchanged views on Britain's position and conditions in America.

"I particularly want to look into British production methods," Willkie said, "to study their effectiveness, and how they can be better coordinated with those of the United States."

BRITON ASKS U. S. SPEED UP SHIPPING AID

Shipping Minister Appeals For Support To Beat U-Boat Threat

"We Face Serious Danger," Cross Asserts In Broadcast Address

[By the Associated Press]

London, Jan. 25—Ronald Cross, Shipping Minister, in a transatlantic broadcast to the United States, declared tonight that Britain can beat "the U-boat threat," but "we must have your industrial support."

Cross, whose job it is to assure Britain ships for her urgently needed supplies, dwelt at length on Britain's reliance on sea-borne commerce for survival and her fight to keep the sea lanes open and filled with her ships.

Face "Serious Danger"

"We face serious danger," Cross said.

"Ever since the fall of France our shipping losses have been heavy, and at the present rate of sinkings, the day might come when our power to import would not equal our military needs.

"We are putting out all our energy, using every resource to meet this threat, for if the output of your factories could not reach these shores, our plans to defeat Hitlerism must yield to a mere passive defense.

Yards At Full Speed

"The war might drag on for long years, before we could wear down the enemy's spirit. . . .

"So it is vital to maintain our shipping. British shipyards are working at full stretch to replace losses of cargo ships and reduce them by augmenting warships to protect convoys. . . .

"But the need for ships exceeds the unaided capacity of our yards."

Sees "Battle Of Seas"

Cross termed the call on United States yards today "the same call as in many previous wars—the call of Nelson and Paul Jones, the frigate of the past, the destroyer of today."

"The battle of 1941," he said "will be the battle of the seas. It is for you alone to determine what our speedy victory is worth to you and in what ways and to what extent you wish to give us help."

Cross recalled that "in the last war you increased your shipbuilding at a terrific rate." By 1919, he said, had the war continued, the United States output would have jumped "twenty times from 200,000 gross tons annually to 4,000,000—an all-time world record."

Over Half The Battle

Many of the materials and munitions which keep Britain "alive and in fighting trim," Cross said, "come from your American factories each week." He added:

"Your factories are steadily bringing the day nearer when we can hope to rid the world of the threat of Nazi domination. Democracy's whole future depends upon your industrial help to our energy in expediting increasing production.

"Speed is more than half the battle."

Reforming of the German units might have been required, these sources said, by these factors:

1. The necessity of giving rest periods to pilots.
2. Necessary servicing of planes.
3. Losses from crash landings in bad weather.
4. The transfer of some Nazi air units to help the Italians in the Mediterranean area, or
5. Preparations for a big invasion offensive.

British Planes Blast Nazi Submarine Base

[By the Associated Press]

London, Jan. 25—British warplanes bombed the German submarine base at Lorient, on the French coast, last night, the Air Ministry announced today.

The raid was carried out by aircraft of the coastal command, a communique said, in the face of bad weather which kept German planes away from Britain throughout the night.

All the British planes were said to have returned safely to base.

Coastal command planes also carried out "usual patrol and reconnaissance flights" yesterday, the Air Ministry said.

Meanwhile, all England enjoyed a rsepite from German air raiders during the night, the Government announced, and London passed its fifth consecutive night without an alarm—its longest period of freedom from raids since September 9.

"There was no enemy activity over this country last night," the Air and Home Security Ministries' communique said.

Some quarters in London have expressed belief that reforming of German air units, as well as bad weather, had been responsible for the recent lull in Nazi bombing attacks.

Lone Raider Bombs English Town After Lull Of Four Nights

London, Sunday, Jan. 26 (AP)—A lone air raider dropped two high explosive bombs on a town on England's west coast during the night—the first evening air attack anywhere in Britain after a lull of four nights. There were no serious casualties, it was reported, but some property was damaged and a gas main was punctured.

Up to midnight, London still was without an alarm, making the capital's sixth raidless night in succession.

Eire Warned on Invasion Within Next Few Weeks

By The Associated Press.

DUBLIN, Jan. 25—A crisis "within a few weeks or a few months" and with it "the greatest danger" to the Irish nation was forecast tonight by Sean Flemass, Minister of Supplies.

Speaking at the annual dinner of the Institute of Journalists, he said Eire had the right to be neutral and "we have the right to expect the belligerents to take care to assure that of the thousands of bombs falling from the skies, none fall on our territory."

But rights alone, he added, are "poor protection for small States when great empires go to war."

Eire was facing the danger of an invasion only a few months ago, the Minister said, and he asked:

Is that danger passed? I think that the very contrary is the truth. Within a few weeks or a few months a crisis will come and with it the greatest danger to our nation."

Three British Warships Reported Hit By Bombs

Battleships, Cruiser In Convoy Attacked

[By the Associated Press]

Berlin, Jan. 25—German bombers attacking in the Mediterranean were reported by informed sources today to have damaged two British battleships and a heavy cruiser.

The attacks were said to have occurred yesterday.

The sources said a bomb of the heaviest caliber struck the stern of one battleship and two bombs damaged the bow and deck of the second.

Escorting Convoy

The report did not specify where the cruiser was hit.

There was no report of air activity on either side of the English Channel.

German coast guards were said to have seen a lone British plane crash into the Channel last night. It was not learned immediately what caused the crash.

DNB, German news agency, said the British warships attacked in the Mediterranean were escorting a convoy.

Site Of Attack

A high command communique fixed the site of the attack as "west of Crete." It said "several bomb hits of heavy and medium caliber on three heavy English naval units were clearly observed."

German speedboats "made a successful reconnaissance in the English Channel" despite unfavorable weather, the communique said, adding that "there were repeated contacts with the enemy." The German boats were said to have returned "unscarred" to their bases.

The Nazi air force "limited its activity to armed reconnaissance" because of the bad weather, the communique said.

THREE BRITISH WARSHIPS HIT, GERMANS SAY

"Successful" Air Attack On Convoy West Of Crete Is Reported

[By the Associated Press]

Berlin, Jan. 25—DNB reported tonight that a long-range German bomber had sunk a 4,000-ton British merchant ship 220 miles west of Ireland.

BY ALVIN STEINKOPF

[By the Associated Press]

Berlin, Jan. 25—The German warplanes which have gone to the aid of Italy in the Mediterranean basin were credited by informed German sources today with damage to two British battleships and a cruiser in a "successful attack" on a convoy west of Crete.

The high command said merely that "several bomb hits of heavy and medium caliber on three heavy English naval units were clearly observed," but other sources were more specific.

They said a heavy bom truck the stern of one battleship; that two bombs damaged the bow and starboard of another battleship and that a heavy cruiser also was struck.

Raids And Counter Raids

German dive bombers, based on Sicilian airdromes, already have damaged the British aircraft carrier Illustrious and crippled the British cruiser Southampton so badly it had to be sunk by British forces.

Malta, British island air-naval base only about sixty miles from Sicily, has been attacked repeatedly and British bombers have retaliated by attacking the Sicilian bases.

Troop-Laden British Cruiser Sunk, Rome Says

Rome, Jan. 25 (AP)—A Stefani dispatch from the Mediterranean war zone said tonight that three waves of heavy bombers attacked over a three-hour period yesterday in a reported raid on a British naval formation.

During the attack, Stefani said, a heavy cruiser was struck squarely by a large bomb. Anti-aircraft fire was described as "very violent" and the agency said "many German bombers were struck by shell fragments," but that they "inflicted heavy losses and very heavy damages on the units struck."

Nothing Of Italian Planes

The Italian high command reported the German-British engagement thus:

"German air corps bomber formations late yesterday afternoon attacked an enemy naval squadron in the central Mediterranean. According to first reports, an enemy heavy cruiser appears to have been hit astern with a heavy-caliber bomb."

Nothing was said about participation by Italian planes; hence, apparently none was there.

The Italians did claim that one of their submarines had sunk the 7,472-ton British auxiliary cruiser Eumaeus, "loaded with troops," in the Atlantic after a sharp fight, and that a second Italian submarine had dispatched the 5,655-ton Greek steamer Eleni, also in the Atlantic.

Nazi Press Prints Lindbergh Testimony

BUFFALO, Jan. 25 (AP)—The German Stuka dive-bombers are "rather antiquated" compared to the latest models used by the United States Navy, H. He told a Buffalo audience last night that the Germans copied the technique of dive-bombing, which was originated by the United States Navy, and that if the Stukas represented the Germans' latest development, "they haven't kept up with our advanced models."

SAY NAZIS' SUPPLY OF OIL HAS GAINED

Experts Estimate Reich Has 49,000,000 Barrels Of Motor Fuel Now

Reserve Compares With 40,000,000 When Polish Campaign Started In 1939

[By the Associated Press]

Rome, Jan. 25—The Italian gasoline ration was reduced today from about 17 to 13¼ gallons a month for the average small car. It was the second reduction since Italy entered the war.

[By the Associated Press]

New York, Jan. 25—Germany has more oil and gasoline on hand today, after sixteen months of war, than when the struggle began but Italy is short of both these essential combatant materials, oil experts here believe.

Both nations, before the war, depended on other countries for supplies of these basic needs of mechanized conflict.

What is the situation now?

49,000,000 Barrels

This question was asked of oil authorities known to have close connections abroad.

Germany, these sources estimate, has 49,000,000 barrels of motor fuel in reserve now, compared with 40,000,000 when the Polish campaign started in September, 1939.

The present stores are sufficient, if estimates are correct, to permit Germany to carry on six months of the intense activity displayed in the one-month blitzkrieg against France, Belgium and The Netherlands.

Great Britain, controlling the seas, with the United States the world's chief producer, has an abundance of oil.

Many experts, from time to time, have suggested that a lack of petroleum might strangle the war efforts of Germany and Italy.

Albania Was Source

This view may be correct in the case of Italy.

Italy's main controlled source of oil has been Albania—but the Greeks and the British Royal Air Force have just about eliminated that supply. Italy is not believed to have built up much of a reserve before the war.

Now Italy's sole dependable route of oil supplies is by railroad across the Alps.

One source asserted Germany today actually is exporting lubricating oil, indicating that the German war machine is not handicapped by lack of lubricants. The lubricating oil, a synthetic product, is being sent to Hungary in exchange for casinghead gasoline, a highly volatile product of natural petroleum.

It is by the expensive synthetic processes that Germany has created its supposed huge gasoline reserve.

Artificial Gasoline

Using her vast coal resources as well as the coal mines of conquered Poland and France, Germany is producing artificial gasoline at a rate estimated to be 100,000 barrels a day.

This production takes place at five plants located in Politz, Bohlen, Magdeburg, Schwarzheide and Zeitz. If these plants have been enlarged since the last authentic information came through from abroad or if additional plants have been constructed in secret, the production capacity is greater than this estimate.

An entirely new development in the German oil industry is a high-pressure production within Germany itself of natural petroleum.

The Reich has old fields at Nienhagen, Wietze and Oberg. These fields produced 3,115,000 barrels in 1936 and production there is believed to have been stepped up recently by additional drilling.

In addition, new fields have gone into full production since the war began at Reitbrook and at Sisterdorf. The five fields combined may have an output of around 9,000,000 barrels a year.

Germany failed to capture Poland's oil fields because the Russians got there first, but Germany is reported acquiring virtually the whole output of the Polish wells, 3,000,000 barrels a year.

Oil From Poland

The oil from Poland appears to be all the petroleum that Russia is letting Germany have despite a trade agreement under which, last year, the Russians agreed to sell the Nazis 6,000,000 barrels.

Bq occupying Rumania, Hitler was assured the total production of that petroleum-rich nation. The Rumanians, it was reported, are bringing up only 100,000 barrels a day, compared with their former production of 120,000 to 130,000 daily. However, Germany formerly only bought thirty per cent. of the Rumanian output, while now she gets it all.

It was suggested the German supply, in the seven months which have elapsed since the fall of France, may have run 3,000,000 barrels a month in excess of needs. Shortly after France fell, it was estimated that the German reesrve of motor fuel plus captured stocks totaled 28,000,000 barrels.

Refineries Hard To Hit

The New York experts admitted they were unable to give any opinion as to how much the R. A. F. may have damaged Germany's refineries.

"But we know this," said one. "There's a big refinery exposed at Southampton the Germans have been trying to bomb. They've hit most everything else, but the refinery's still running full blast.

"The German refineries are mainly camouflaged and they are supposed to have a lot of underground storage.

"The British may be better than the Germans, but it's still mighty hard to hit what you're aiming at from the air."

Rocque, French Fascist, Is Detained by Nazis.

Vichy, Jan. 25 (A. P.).—Col. François de la Rocque, former commander of the Fascist Croix de Feu organization and only yesterday named a member of Chief of State Marshal Petain's advisory council, has been placed under house arrest in Paris by the Germans, it was reported tonight.

It was said he had been arrested at the demarcation line between occupied and unoccupied territory yesterday, en route from the latter zone. The Germans, it was reported, informed him that his permit to pass no longer was good and conducted him to his home in Paris, where he was held for disposition of the occupying authorities.

Marshal Petain To Be On New French Coins

His Face To Replace That Of Marianne, Who Will Be Missing First Time Since 1871

Paris, Jan. 25 (AP)—The face of Marshal Philippe Petain will replace that of Marianne on new 5, 10 and 20-franc pieces to be issued by the Bank of France.

It will be the first time since the establishment of the French Republic in 1871 that the face of Marianne has been missing from a French coin.

It is not known of what metal the new coins will be made, but one Paris paper has already come out for tin as "the symbol of our poverty and our will." The bank will also issue a 20-franc note for the first time since the first World War.

FIRST LEAD RIOT REPORTS

NEW YORK, JAN 25-(AP)-WINSTON BURDETT, CBS CORRESPONDENT IN BELGRADE YUGOSLAVIA, REPORTED TONIGHT THAT REPORTS FROM ITALY SAID THREE ITALIAN GENERALS WERE KILLED AND SEVERAL HUNDRED PERSONS WERE WOUNDED TODAY IN RIOTING IN MILAN AND TURIN AND SMALLER CITIES IN THE ITALIAN PO VALLEY.

BURDETT'S INFORMATION WAS CABLED TO NEW YORK AND BROADCAST HERE BY CBS. HE SAID FOREIGN DIPLOMATIC SOURCES IN BELGRADE WERE INFORMED THE THREE ITALIAN OFFICERS WERE SLAIN BY INTERVENING GERMAN TROOPS DURING STREET RIOTS IN MILAN.

(ABOUT THREE HOURS AFTER THE BROADCAST, THE ASSOCIATED PRESS HAD NOT RECEIVED ANY INFORMATION ON THE REPORTS FROM ITS CORRESPONDENTS IN HEAVILY-CENSORED ITALY OR IN NEIGHBORING COUNTRIES.)

BURDETT SAID THE REPORTS STATED THE DISORDERS, GRAVE AND FAR-REACHING, BEGAN 24 HOURS AGO AND WERE CONTINUING TONIGHT.

THE INFORMATION REACHING BELGRADE, BURDETT REPORTED, SAID GERMAN FORCES TOOK THE MAIN HAND IN FIGHTING THE DISORDERS. ITALIAN SOLDIERS WERE SAID TO HAVE TAKEN PART IN THE STREET FIGHTING THOUGH IT WAS NOT CLEAR, BURDETT ADDED, WHETHER THEY WERE ON THE SIDE OF THE REGIME OR THE INSURGENTS OR BOTH

GERMAN TROOPS, BURDETT SAID HE HAD BEEN INFORMED, HAVE OCCUPIED MILAN'S RAILROAD STATION, TELEPHONE CENTRAL OFFICE AND POST OFFICE. HE SAID THEY ARE REPORTED ALSO ON SENTRY DUTY AT MAJOR MILAN FACTORIES.

ACCORDING TO DIPLOMATIC DISPATCHES REACHING BELGRADE, BURDETT ADDED, THREE HIGH RANKING ITALIAN OFFICERS WERE KILLED IN THE MILAN STREET FIGHTING. HE ALSO RELAYED THE REPORT IN YUGOSLAVIA THAT GERMAN TROOPS IN NORTHERN ITALY WERE AIDED IN MILAN BY ITALIAN FASCIST BLACK-SHIRTS. HE SAID IT WAS NOT CLEAR WHETHER ITALIAN MILITARY CASUALTIES IN THE REPORTED RIOTING ALSO WERE AIDING OR WERE WITH THE ALLEGED INSURGENTS.

NAZI TROOPS, ACCORDING TO THESE ADVICES, ALSO HAVE BEEN GIVEN CONTROL OF ALL COMMUNICATIONS ON THE ITALIAN ISLAND OF SICILY AND IN THE SOUTHERN ITALIAN REGION OF BRINDISI, BURDETT SAID.

ANOTHER CBS CORRESPONDENT, HARRY W.FLANNERY IN BERLIN, REPORTED IN A BROADCAST THAT "ENDLESS TRAINS WITH UNITS OF THE GERMAN AIR FORCE HAVE BEEN GOING OVER THE BRENNER PASS (INTO ITALY) CARRYING MATERIALS FOR AIR FIELDS, SIGNAL FACILITIES AND AMMUNITION SUPPLIES." FLANNERY SAID HE QUOTED FROM THE NEWSPAPER BERLINER BOERSEN ZEITUNG.

Sub 'Sinks Troop Ship'

[By the Associated Press]

Rome, Jan. 25—The 7,000-ton British auxiliary cruiser Eumaeus, "loaded with troops," has been sunk in the Atlantic by an Italian submarine after a "sharp fight," the Italian high command reported today.

Greek Steamer Sunk

Another submarine, the daily communique said, sank the 6,000-ton Greek steamer Eleni. (Lloyd's Register of Shipping lists her at 5,655 tons.)

German bombers operating from an Italian base were reported to have attacked a British naval squadron in the Mediterranean, hitting a heavy cruiser on the stern with a high-caliber bomb.

It was the third German attack on the British fleet in the Mediterranean within a fortnight. The Axis is apparently attempting to close the sea at its middle to convoys of troops and supplies, using dive bombers.

Tobruk Fall Admitted

The Italian high command acknowledged the fall of Tobruk today and announced that Fascist losses in the final assault were "heavy."

The daily war bulletin said that the last detachments, which had been offering "desperate resistance to enemy attacks in the western sector of Tobruk, were overcome during yesterday."

The battle now has moved westward, the communique said, "where spearheads of enemy armored units were repulsed."

Italian infantry in the Libyan coastal garrison "fired to the last shell and caused wide gaps in Australian units," the high command said. "Our losses in men and material also have been heavy. Italy's forces fought heroically."

The communique said about 20,000 troops were in the Tobruk garrison.

"Unceasing Bombardment"

"These forces for nineteen days resisted an unceasing triple bombardment from land, sea and air and stood off the final assault for days," the communique said.

(British reports from Cairo said upward of 20,000 troops were captured at Tobruk January 22.)

On the East African front, the high command said, fighting continued in the Keru and Aicota regions with the support of Italian planes.

Fascist Editor Joins the Army

ROME, Jan. 25 (AP).—Roberto Farinacci, member of the Fascist Grand Council, editor of the Regime Fascista and former Secretary of the Fascist Party, has joined Italy's fighting forces "in the line of operations," a communique said tonight. It did not say where Farinacci was fighting.

SAYS HOPKINS WIRE CALLED AID LATE

Rome Paper Indicates It Was a New York Report.

Rome, Jan. 25 (A. P.).—The newspaper Il Giornale d'Italia published today a report from New York which said that Harry Hopkins, President Roosevelt's personal representative in Britain, had telgraphed the President that Britain could not wait any longer for American aid.

This report said American aid to besieged Britain could not arrive "in time."

Il Giornale d'Italia is edited by Virginio Gayda, foremost editorial spokesman for the Fascist regime.

The paper's dispatch, from correspondent Pietro Saporiti, said in part:

"A personage approached by us admitted that Roosevelt had received a report from Hopkins concluding with the impossibility for England to wait any longer for American aid since it would not arrive in time anyway, even if speeded up as much as possible."

Greeks Claim 100 Italian Captives

Athens, Jan. 25 (AP).—Greek soldiers captured more than one hundred prisoners in "successful local actions" in Albania and six Italian planes were shot down over the front and during a raid on Salonika, the Greek high command reported tonight. All Greek planes returned safely, it was said.

The communique gave no details on the day's fighting.

The Ministry of Home Security said Italian planes "unsuccessfully" machine-gunned a village on an island in the Aegean Sea.

GERMANS QUIT GREECE

Exodus of Nationals Is Held Significant

Budapest, Jan. 25 (A. P.).—The newspaper Pesti Ujsac said today that a "special train carrying thirty-five members of the German colony at Athens and seventeen Germans from Salonika was expected to arrive at Belgrade today."

The movement of German nationals was considered significant, although others had left Greece previously. The newspaper said the evacuees were understood to be women and children.

Germany has maintained normal diplomatic relations with Greece, although Italy is at war with that nation. One of the biggest questions in Europe is whether Germany will go to the aid of her partner against the Greeks.

Soviet Russia Fulfills Greeks' Wheat Orders

(CORRES.)

Amount Contracted For Before War With Italy Estimated At 90,000 To 150,000 Tons

Moscow, Jan. 25 (AP) — Soviet Russia has fulfilled Greek orders for wheat placed before the start of the Greek-Italian war, it was learned in diplomatic quarters.

The wheat was carried from Russian ports in Greek ships, the amount undisclosed but estimated unofficially at from 90,000 to 150,000 tons, all delivered by about the first of the year.

Since then no further Greek orders have been placed. It was said a Greek merchant visited Moscow seeking to negotiate an exchange of bauxite for Russian coal, but departed without making a deal.

ITALIANS HARD HIT IN ALBANIA

Seven Divisions Reported Knocked Out of Action.

Athens, Jan. 25 (A. P.).—Extremely heavy losses on the Albanian battlefront have compelled the Italians to withdraw and reorganize at least seven divisions, the Greeks are reported to have learned from Fascist prisoners. The famous Wolves of Tuscany Division is listed among the units withdrawn. A new commander was appointed to reorganize its shattered ranks after encounters north of Klisura, the Greeks asserted. This division had been rushed from Italy and thrown into action in a recent attempt to halt the Italian retreat, it was claimed.

A Greek spokesmantold of Italian withdrawals to newly prepared fortifications in the Klisura sector, following Greek occupation of strategic heights in the area. He said that artillery bombardments disrupted the Fascist efforts to organize on new fronts and concentrate troops for counter-attacks. One Italian counter-attack was said to have been beaten back and heavy losses inflicted. In two days, he added, the Greeks had taken 530 prisoners. Increasing numbers of officers were reported among recent captives, one group of twenty-five prisoners including eight.

Dispatches from the front told of Greek bombing raids on Elbasani and Berati, Italian communications centers. The Ministry of Home Security said there were no raids in Greece yesterday.

Italians Claim Gains.

Rome, Jan. 25 (A. P.).—Important positions along the Albanian battlefront were reported by the Italian High Command today to have been wrested from the Greeks. Their location was not specified, however.

The communique said that the advances were made despite unfavorable weather conditions which restricted the fighting to local operations. Greek prisoners and supplies of automatic weapons were reported taken.

The Texts of the Day's Communiques on the War

British

CAIRO, Egypt, Jan. 25 (AP)—The British Middle East Command issued this communiqué today:

Libya—By yesterday evening advanced elements of our forces were in contact with the enemy about three miles east of Derna. A column of enemy medium tanks was engaged and dispersed, two being captured and four destroyed. The operations are developing successfully at Tobruk and the count of prisoners is proceeding. It is anticipated that these will number not less than 20,000. In addition, large quantities of guns and materials of all categories are being sorted out and checked.

Eritrea—Operations east of Cheru and Aicota are progressing satisfactorily. So far over 600 prisoners, including one brigade commander, have been taken, and also two guns and many motor transport vehicles.

Ethiopia—East of Metemma pressure on the enemy is increasing. Deeper in the country itself further patriot successes are reported and more Italian posts have been abandoned.

Kenya—Progress continues to be made in ejecting enemy detachments from our side of the frontier. In several areas our patrols are now operating well across into enemy territory.

The Royal Air Force issued this communiqué:

In Libya a raid was carried out on the Maraua airdrome by bomber aircraft of the R. A. F. on Jan. 23. Bombs fell among enemy aircraft dispersed on the ground and it is believed that considerable damage was done to them.

Eight enemy aircraft were also observed burning on the landing ground at Derna.

Yesterday dispersed aircraft at Magrun, forty-five miles south of Bengazi, were attacked and a number damaged.

Our fighters continued their patrols in the Martuba-Mekili area.

In the communiqué of Jan. 15 the loss of one fighter aircraft was announced. This aircraft has now been recovered.

During the night of Jan. 23-24 a raid was carried out on the airdrome at Marizza [on the island of Rhodes]. Many bombs were dropped and numerous fires caused.

In Italian East Africa numerous raids were carried out. The railway line and station at Bisha [in Eritrea] were heavily bombed and motor transport concentrated west of the town was attacked. Heavy dust clouds at the time made it impossible to assess the damage caused, but it is believed to have been heavy.

At Agordat dive attacks were made on dispersed enemy fighter aircraft, motor transport vehicles and the railway between Bisha and Agordat. Bombs fell among the motor transport and on the railway. One CA-133 [Italian plane] was destroyed on the ground some miles from the town.

At Um Hagar a number of fires were started and direct hits were registered on huts and enemy posts. The railway station at Cheren was also bombed.

From all operations all our aircraft returned safely with the exception of one fighter, which has so far failed to return to its base in Libya.

LONDON, Jan. 25 (AP)—The Air Ministry issued this communiqué today:

In spite of very bad weather conditions yesterday, aircraft of the Coastal Command carried out the usual patrol and reconnaissance flights. Last night a small force of Coastal Command aircraft bombed a submarine base at Lorient. None of our aircraft is missing.

A communiqué issued by the Air and Home Security Ministries:

Activity by enemy aircraft today was again on a small scale. Though single enemy aircraft have crossed the east coast, none has penetrated far inland. Bombs were dropped during the afternoon at two points in East Anglia. Some buildings were damaged. A few people were killed and a small number injured.

Greek

ATHENS, Sunday, Jan. 26 (AP)—The Greek Ministry of Home Security issued this communiqué today:

Enemy aviation bombed Salonika. There was some damage and a few casualties among the civilian population. So far three enemy aircraft are known to have been destroyed. Bombs also were dropped in the rural district of Trikkala. No damage or casualties resulted.

Enemy aircraft machine-gunned unsuccessfully from a low altitude an island in the Aegean Sea.

Italian

ROME, Jan. 25 (AP)—The Italian High Command communiqué today said:

The last detachments that offered desperate resistance to enemy attacks in the western sector of Tobruk were overcome during yesterday.

Forces that were stationed in Tobruk fortress consisted of one infantry division, one of Italian frontier guards, one battalion of Blackshirts and detachments of sailors and artillerymen, tota about 20,000 men.

These forces for nineteen days resisted an unceasing triple bombardment from land, sea and air, and stood off the final assault four days. Our artillery fired to the last shell and caused wide gaps in Australian units. Our losses in men and material also have been heavy. According to an enemy radio broadcast, more than 2,000 Italian wounded have been evacuated from Tobruk.

In the battle of Tobruk, which according to the admission of the enemy himself was extremely bitter, Italy's armed forces fought heroically.

After Tobruk the battle moved westward, where spearheads of enemy armored units were repulsed by bombardments and machine-gunning of our air force. An enemy Blenheim-type plane was shot down by our fighters.

On the Greek front, despite unfavorable weather conditions, in local actions we conquered important positions, and considerable losses in prisoners and automatic arms were inflicted on the enemy.

In East Africa fighting along the Sudan frontier in the Cheru and Aicota regions continued with effective support of our air squadrons.

German Air Corps bomber formations late yesterday afternoon attacked an enemy naval squadron in the Central Mediterranean. According to first reports, an enemy heavy cruiser appears to have been hit astern with a heavy-caliber bomb.

In the Atlantic one of our submarines, commanded by Captain Carlo Alberto Tedpati, sank the 6,000-ton Greek steamer Eleni, and another submarine, commanded by Captain Salvatore Todaro, sank the 7,000-ton English auxiliary cruiser Eumoeus, loaded with troops, after a sharp fight.

German

BERLIN, Jan. 25 (AP)—Today's German High Command communiqué:

Speed boats made successful reconnaissance in the English Channel during unfavorable weather. There were repeated contacts with the enemy. The German boats returned unscarred to their bases.

The German Air Force on Jan. 24 limited its activity to armed reconnaissance, owing to unfavorable weather.

German combat planes attacked an enemy convoy protected by naval forces in the Mediterranean west of Crete. Several bomb hits of heavy and medium caliber on three heavy English naval units were clearly observed.

Siamese Guns Pound Fortress In Indo-China

Advance Continues Despite Acceptance of Japan as Mediator by Both Sides

BANGKOK, Jan. 25 (AP).—The (Siamese) heavy artillery began today a fierce bombardment of the French Indo-China fortress and highway junction at Sisophon, the Thai high command announced.

Both the northeastern and eastern Thai armies were reporting continued advances into Indo-China, with French positions said to have suffered heavy damage in exchanges of gunfire across the Mekong River border.

A Thai communique told of French raids in the northeastern regiont of Thailand, but said all the bombs fell in jungles and fields and caused no damage.

In reprisal raids, the communique said, the Thai air force bombed the French military center at Bansamrong, causing a severe fire which raged for an hour, and raided the island of Koh Kong in the Gulf of Thailand.

Acceptance of Japan's offer to mediate the border dispute which caused the warfare with Indo-China has not yet been announced by the Thai government, but the Japanese legation issued a communique reporting both the Thailand and French governments had agreed to it.

Japan Extending Influence

SAIGON, French Indo-China, Jan. 25 (AP).—Japan's new role of peacemaker in the Far East—as mediator in the Thailand-French Indo-China border warfare—has created a feeling here that the southward expansion of Japanese influence in Indo-China is likely to be more in evidence soon.

Thus far, Japanese activity in this French colony has been principally confined to the northern portion, centering at Hanoi, the capital. There are reports now—they have not been confirmed—that a Japanese mission is due to come to this southern port aboard a warship to confer with government representatives concerning "Japanese and Indo-China problems."

Hanoi reports said Japanese transports which took additional Japanese troops to Haiphong unloaded men and equipment and departed without taking away any of the Japanese forces which had been in north Indo-China since September, despite previous assumptions that the newcomers were merely to relieve the earlier arrivals.

Axis Maneuver Seen in Siam

Japanese Mediation Between Indo-China and Thailand Has Strategic Implications.

Washington, Jan. 24 (A. P.).—A Tokio-Berlin maneuver to strengthen Japan's striking power in Southeast Asia was believed in dipomatic circles today to be behind the plan for Japanese mdiation in the undeclared war between Thailand (Siam) nd French Indo-China.

Secretary of State Hull intimated yesterday that informal overtures had been received, perhaps from French quarters, for United States mediation. But he said there had been no conversations sufficiently tangible to call for consideration of the question by the American Government.

Already in possession of air and naval bases in the Far Eastern French colony, Japan long has been suspected here of strongly influencing Thailand policies and actions.

This was evidenced in the early stage of hostilities there by the American Government's action in preventing delivery of twenty military planes which Thailand had purchased and for which an export license already had been granted.

Situation Too Uncertain.

The Thailand-Indo-China dispute has been the subject of several conversations between Gaston Henry-Haye, French Ambassador, and State Department officials. Some of these talks were understood to have concerned the possibility of American military supplies for Indo-China. The Thailand Minister also conferred recently with Secretary Hull.

It was indicated, however, that the United States Government regarded the situation as filled with too many uncertainties for any action.

As with the military concessions granted earlier to Japan in Indo-China to provide closer striking bases against China, France's agreement to accept Japan's offer as a mediator was attributed largely to German pressure.

The hostilities grew out of Thailand's territorial demands on Indo-China.

Diplomats here saw the possibility that Japan, as mediator, might bring strong pressure on Indo-China to satisfy these demands, in part at least, and as a reward obtain air bases in Thailand for the Japanese forces.

Such bases would give Japan a striking position about 600 miles southward in the direction of the British Straits Settlement, Singapore and the Netherlands East Indies.

Australian Air Officer Arrives At Singapore

Sir Charles Burnett, Chief Of Staff Of A. A. F., To Confer With Head Of British Forces

Singapore, Jan. 25 (AP)—Sir Charles Burnett, chief of staff for the Australian Air Force, arrived here today to confer with Sir Robert Brooke-Popham, commander of British forces in the Far East.

Sir Charles also was expected to visit units of the Australian Air Force stationed in Malaya.

A Ministry of Information statement said Sir Charles' visit was added evidence of Australian cooperation in Singapore defense plans and commented on "the recent rapid expansion of the Australian Air Force."

Japs Ask Indies For Wide Grants

MANILA, P. I., Jan. 25 (AP).—Rumors have reached reliable Japanese headquarters here that Japan has listed economic concessions of a broad nature as the proposed agenda for its negotiations with the Dutch East Indies.

It was recalled that the Batavia Government frequently has stated that the Netherlands East Indies grants no special treatment to any nation and it is thus believed that the Japanese proposals were unlikely to meet a favorable reception.

French Abandon Blockade Running

BUENOS AIRES, Jan. 25 (AP).—Shipping sources expressed belief today that the French Government was abandoning an attempt to run the British blockade with food from South America after seizure of the fregihter Mendoza off the Brizilian coast Jan. 18

The French cargo boat Campagna has been scheduled to sail for more than a week. A French Embassy spokesman said the sailing was indefinite.

NIGHT LEAD MEDIATION

TOKYO, JAN 25-(SATURDAY)-(AP)-THE JAPANESE PRESS HAILED JAPANESE MEDIATION IN THE THAILAND-FRENCH INDO-CHINA BORDER WAR AS EVIDENCE THAT THOSE TWO ASIATIC COUNTRIES TODAY RECOGNIZE JAPAN'S LEADERSHIP IN THE PROJECTED "COMMON PROSPERITY" SPHERE IN EAST ASIA.

THE CABINET INFORMATION BUREAU SAID THAT BOTH SIDES HAD ACCEPTED JAPAN'S OFFER TO MEDIATE AND THAT NEGOTIATIONS WOULD BEGIN SOON HERE.

THE JAPANESE MEDIATORS HAVE NOT YET BEEN DESIGNATED.

BERLIN, JAN. 25--(AP)--JAPANESE MEDIATION IN THE THAILAND-FRENCH INDO-CHINA TERRITORIAL DISPUTE CONFLICT WAS REGARDED AT THE WILHELMSTRASSE TODAY AS EVIDENCE THAT JAPAN IS LOOKED UPON AS THE POWER QUALIFIED FOR SUCH ACTION IN THE FAR-EASTERN SPHERE.

(FRENCH INDO-CHINA AND THAILAND HAVE BEEN REPORTED AS EXPRESSING WILLINGNESS TO ACCEPT JAPANESE MEDIATION OF THEIR FRONTIER FIGHT.)

WHEN CORRESPONDENTS ASKED WHETHER THIS INDICATED RECOGNITION BY THE FRENCH GOVERNMENT AT VICHY OF JAPAN'S LEADERSHIP IN THE FAR EAST AS POSTULATED IN THE THREE-POWER AXIS PACT, AUTHORIZED SOURCES SUGGESTED THAT ANYONE COULD DRAW HIS OWN CONCLUSIONS.

THE GERNMAN GOVERNMENT, THESE SOURCES SAID, TOO, HAS FAITH IN PREMIER ANTONESCU OF RUMANIA. (ANTONESCU WAS REPORTED TODAY TO HAVE CHECKED DISTURBANCES ATTRIBUTED TO DISSIDENT IRON GUARDISTS UNDER HIS VICE-PREMIER, HORIA SIMA.)

THEY ADDED THAT GERMANY'S AIM IN THE BALKANS IS TO SUPPORT THOSE FORCES WHICH CAN BRING BALKAN RECONSTRUCTION TO A SUCCESSFUL CONCLUSION.

THE IMPRESSION WAS GAINED FROM THESE SOURCES THAT HORIA SIMA HAS BEEN DROPPED SO FAR AS GERMANY IS CONCERNED, ALTHOUGH IT WAS SAID THAT RUMANIANS THEMSELVES MUST DECIDE WHO SHOULD CARRY ON THE WORK OF RECONSTRUCTION.

Seeks Ban on Volume on Hitler

TEGUCIGALPA, Honduran Republic, Jan. 25 (AP)—Christian Zinsser, German chargé d'affaires, has asked the Honduran Foreign Office to halt the sale of the book "I Was Hitler's Waitress," a best seller in the city's bookshops. So far there has been no decision on the request.

Nazi Flyer Jailed In U. S.

[By the Associated Press]

Ogdensburg, N. Y., Jan. 25—A German pursuit pilot, who escaped from two British prison camps and a Canadian prison train after being forced down in England September 7, waived examination today on a charge of "entering this country without reporting to a United States immigration officer.

He was remanded to jail in lieu of $5,000 bail pending action of a Federal District Court grand jury convening in Albany January 30. Chief Inspector Herman Kull, United States Border Patrol, preferred the charge.

An immigration official said the flyer, Baron Franz von Werra, Messerschmidt squadron leader, claimed he crashed into another German plane while coming out of a power dive, after shooting down three British planes over London, and was forced down, unhurt.

The pilot told authorities he first escaped from a prison camp near Liverpool, later from a camp in Scotland and two days ago from a prison train carrying him to an unknown destination in Canada. He asserted he entered the United States by crossing the St. Lawrence river in a rowboat.

Nazi Pilot Who Fled Canada Is Released On $5,000 Bond

Flyer Must Face U. S. Immigration Charges; Predicts "Knockout Blow" Against England In March

[By the Associated Press]

Ogdensburg, N. Y., Jan. 25—A 26-year-old German pursuit pilot who predicted a "knockout blow" against England in March and British capitulation by September left for New York city tonight after escaping two days ago from a Canadian prison train.

The slim, smiling flyer, Baron Franz von Werra, boarded a train after his release on $5,000 bond posted by the German consulate in New York city. He was accompanied by an Ogdensburg attorney.

Arrested On Street

He was arrested last night on a downtown Ogdensburg street, and waived examination this afternoon on a charge of "entering this country without reporting to a United States immigration officer." He is scheduled to appear before a Federal grand jury convening in Albany January 30.

Von Werra, his ears frozen, told authorities he previously fled from two British prison camps after being forced down in England September 7. He claimed he entered the United States by crossing the St. Lawrence river in a rowboat.

Speaking perfect English, the Messerschmitt squadron leader said he escaped so that he could return to Germany in time to join in a "knockout blow" against England in March. He added he had flown over England "so many times" he was unable to count the flights.

Tells Of Experiments

He said the Nazis are experimenting with transporting of troops by gliders, bombers towing the craft in tandem. Each glider, he asserted, carries forty-five to fifty men. The gliders are released over a specified locality and land.

Von Werra said United States help was "too late" to save England. He lauded British morale and declared damage to London inflicted by Nazi bombers was "terrific."

Officials Think Roundup Of Prisoners Complete

Ottawa, Jan. 25 (AP)—With the capture of a German aviator at Ogdensburg, N. Y., and of a man described as a 20-year-old German submarine mechanic at St. Leonard Junction, Quebec, official belief was expressed tonight that the roundup now is complete of German prisoners who have escaped from trains taking them from an east coast Canadian port to an internment camp in the interior.

Canada Captures Escaped Nazi

QUEBEC, Jan. 25 (AP)—Royal Canadian Mounted Police announced the capture today of an escaped German prisoner at St. Leonard Junction, near here, on a tip from a farmer who had seen the man walking along a road. Police announced that the captive was Rudolf Muller, a 20-year-old German submarine mechanic who escaped with several others on Thursday from a prison train moving him to an internment camp in the interior.

Storm Keeps U. S. Troops Off St. John's Harbor

Wind And Sea Make It Too Hazardous To Guide Ship Through Narrow Channel

St. John's, Newfoundland, Jan. 25 (AP)—United States soldiers, ferried here from New York to man the still-unfinished Newfoundland defense base, waited outside this harbor tonight while a storm kept their transport, the Edmund B. Alexander, from berthing.

Wind and sea made it too hazardous to guide the 21,329-ton troopship—once the transatlantic liner Amerika—through the narrow, rockbound channel into St. John's harbor.

The United States base here, a gift from Britain, will have an air field, an army defense force site of 160 acres and a naval area of 22 acres, including 1,250 feet of wharfage, when construction is completed. The only ceremony planned when the troopship makes port is the usual visit between officials, Gov. Sir H. T. Walwyn and Col. Maurice Welty, commander of the United States garrison.

WINANT SAYS BRITISH FIGHT FOR DEMOCRACY

Tells Canadians Totalitarian System Bars Social Justice

MONTREAL, Jan. 25 (AP)—John G. Winant, prominently mentioned as President Roosevelt's choice as United States Ambassador to Great Britain, declared tonight that Britain and the world's democratic combatants are fighting a "system which represents the negation of social justice."

"Now, as never before, eyes are turned toward the British Commonwealth of Nations to insure that sacrifices shall not be in vain," Mr. Winant said at a dinner given by the League of Nations Society in Canada.

Mr. Winant, former Governor of New Hampshire and present director of the International Labor Office, which was transferred to Montreal from Geneva because of the war, gave most of his address to a review of the work of the office.

Looking to the future, he said that when "war is done and arms laid down, the peoples of the world will rebuild democracy more in their own likeness than it has ever been."

U. S. Soldiers Arrive At St. Johns

[By the Associated Press]

St. Johns, Newfoundland, Jan. 25—The United States troop transport Alexander hove to off this port today, loaded with the first United States troops to man the Newfoundland defense base now under construction. Stormy weather made it likely the Alexander would delay her entrance into the harbor.

No ceremony is planned beyond the usual exchange visits of the United States commanding officer, Col. Maurice Welty, and Governor Sir H. T. Walwyn.

Special Berth For Ship

A berth has been constructed for the Alexander on the south side of the harbor.

The base which the United States troops will man here was a gift from Britain to the United States. When construction is finished the area will have an air base, an army defense force site of 160 acres and a naval base of 22 acres, including 1,250 feet of wharfage.

Base Work To Start Soon

[By the Associated Press]

Washington, Jan. 25—The army and navy are expected to award contracts within the next few days for construction of a chain of eight naval, military and air bases—involving twenty different establishments—on British islands and territories in the Western Hemisphere.

Contracts are being negotiated, it was learned today, and dirt will fly as soon as they are signed and equipment can be shipped to the sites.

Surveying Almost Through

Surveying and preliminary engineering work, including construction lines for runways, barracks, storehouses, fuel oil storage, anchorage and docks, has been completed or is well under way.

The bases are designed to provide a protective shield for the Panama Canal, Central America, northern South America, Canada, Mexico and the Eastern and Gulf seaboards. President Roosevelt recently characterized their construction as "the most important action in the reinforcement of our national defense that has been taken since the Louisiana purchase."

Agreement Reached

Final agreement on the sites for the twenty establishments has been reached with London, and with the local governments concerned (except the Bahamas). An American technical mission is now in London drafting the formal leases.

Canada to Expand Ship Construction

WASHINGTON, Jan. 25 (AP).—An increase will be sought in Canadian ship construction through expansion of existing facilities, C. D. Howe, Canadian Minister of Munitions and Supply, said today.

"We intend to explore the capacities of existing yards carefully to see if we can squeeze out a few more ships," he said.

Bullitt Testifies That Most Certain Defense Of U. S. Would Be War Now, but Is Against It

Holds British Defeat Means Axis Onset Here—Accuses Nazis of Starting Tale He Promised French Aid

Washington, Jan. 25 (A. P.).—William C. Bullitt, former Ambassador to France, told Congress today that invasion of the Western Hemisphere would be almost certain if the British Navy were destroyed and a totalitarian Power gained control of either the Atlantic or Pacific before the United States two-ocean fleet is ready in 1946.

Describing what he said would be the drastic consequences to the United States if Britain were defeated, Mr. Bullitt asserted before the House Foreign Affairs Committee at a crowded hearing on the administration's aid-to-Britain bill that the most certain way to insure against such a defeat would be for this country to go to war. He prefaced this, however, with a declaration that we are determined not to be drawn into this war.

U. S. Must Buy Time.

Declaring flatly that the United States is not prepared today to meet an attack, Mr. Bullitt said we must buy time in which to prepare.

"We can buy that time only by making certain," he added, "that the British fleet will continue to hold the totalitarian forces in Europe while our fleet watches in the Pacific."

In a twenty-eight-point statement to the committee, the former Ambassador asserted:

"Our country is in such danger today that decisions on the effective use of our instruments of defense are as vital as if we had already been attacked.

"Bill 1776 (the legislation) is designed to empower the President to make those decisions."

When Mr. Bullitt finished his prepared statement, the big crowd applauded, and Chairman Bloom, Democrat, of New York, quickly warned against any demonstrations.

Never Promised War Aid.

Under questioning by committee members Mr. Bullitt said the story that he had led France to count on United States' entry into the war was "invented," as we all know, by the German propaganda machine and spread by it and by dupes."

He said that he would be glad if every dispatch, communication or telegram that he had sent to the State Department while he was in Paris could be published tomorrow morning.

Representative Richards, Democrat, of South Carolina, asked Bullitt whether he believed the President would abuse the broad powers the bill would confer upon him.

Straightening in his chair, the witness said such a possibility was so inconceivable, that it was difficult to discuss seriously, but added, slowly and with emphasis:

"I personally know the President would rather give away his two eyes than give away the navy."

He explained he used that example because the same question had been raised earlier in the hearings.

Informed by Mr. Richards that he intended to offer an amendment to prohibit the lending or leasing of any arms without certification by the secretaries of war or navy and their respective chiefs of staff that the equipment was not needed for American defenses, Mr. Bullitt said he would prefer to see no such limitation in the bill because only the President could see the problem as a whole.

Questioned by Representative Shanley, Democrat, of Connecticut, Mr. Bullitt said there was general misunderstanding in this country of the French Government's arrangements to retain control of its fleet after the surrender to Germany.

Would Not Have Given Ships.

"The French were absolutely and firmly convinced," Mr. Bullitt said, "that they had placed their fleet in such ports and had given such orders to its officers and men that those ships would never fall in the hands of the Germans or the Italians."

He said he had absolute knowledge that the fleet was ordered to defend itself from any attempt at seizure by the Germans or the Italians. Rather than turn over French ships, the officers were ordered to sink them, the former Ambassador said, adding.

"I am absolutely convinced of the good faith of the French in this matter."

Mr. Bullitt was questioned by committee men about what lessons could be learned by the United States from the fall of France.

"I think there is a likeness between France and us that is extraordinary," replied the witness.

"The state of mind of this country is almost exactly that which prevailed in France a year before the state of war with Germany.

"They had the same confidence in the Maginot Line that many in the United States have in the Atlantic Ocean. They just did not think it could be attacked successfully and there was no sense of urgency in their preparations that there should have been.

"They did a good job in preparing, just as we are doing today, but there was no sense of urgency. They never got it."

Sees Germany Divided.

Responding to other questions Mr. Bullitt told the committee that he was convinced that if the British attain dominance over Germany in the air with the help of American plane production, British bombing would bring about a collapse behind the German lines.

Picturing the German people as suffering greatly under war-time privation and 30,000,000 German Catholics "who, while they have to keep their mouths shut now, hate the whole German regime," Mr. Bullitt declared that he did not believe the German people would stand up under bombing as the British people have.

"After all," he added, "the British are basing their resistance on all the things that are good in life."

Mr. Bullitt said that "Italy entered the war as an accomplice of Germany and now has become Germany's slave."

Italy could not now quit the war, he said, because Germany immediately would occupy that country.

"The Japanese," he added, "obviously are in a more independent position."

Not in Favor of War.

Representative Fish asked:

"Are you in favor of our participating in this war?"

"I am not," Mr. Bullitt replied.

Mr. Fish asked if Mr. Bullitt had made a recent address in North Carolina saying that he believed the American people were afraid to go to war.

The former ambassador said he had made a speech but had not made any such statement in it. He then read excerpts from that address, commenting that those paragraphs were quite similar to the remarks he had just made to the committee.

At Mr. Fish's request, Mr. Bullitt then recounted his State Department activities beginning in January of 1918. In answer to another question, Mr. Bullitt said that he resigned in May, 1919, from the American commission to negotiate peace.

"In protest against the provisions of the Versailles Treaty?" Mr. Fish asked.

"I did."

Bloom Interrupts Fish.

Mr. Bullitt started to read the letter of resignation he sent to President Wilson when Mr. Fish interrupted to say something about having a copy. Then Mr. Bloom broke in to insist that the witness be permitted to continue.

"You don't need to help Mr. Bullitt; Mr. Bullitt may need to help you," he shouted.

The former Ambassador told Mr. Fish that the Versailles Treaty was a very considerable cause of European unrest in recent years. A moment later, however, he said:

"There were so many other causes for the development of the Hitler movement that I'd hesitate to say that the Versailles Treaty was more than a contributing cause."

Telling the committee that Germany had drawn both Italy and Japan into a league directed against the United States and other free nations, Mr. Bullitt asserted that we cannot appease Germany.

Text of Statement.

The text of the prepared statement made to the committee by Mr. Bullitt follows:

1. We are determined to maintain the independence of the United States and our Government of the people, by the people, and for the people.

2. We hate war. Therefore, we desire to protect our country and our liberties without going to war.

3. Germany has drawn Italy and Japan into a league directed against us and other free nations by a treaty signed in Berlin on September 27, 1940.

4. We cannot appease Germany. It is impossible to appease the unappeaseable. And the Western Hemisphere is the juiciest morsel before the dictators.

5. The earth has been so contracted by the airplane that for the first time in our history the war machines of Europe can reach the Western Hemisphere in a few hours.

6. The Atlantic and Pacific oceans remain formidable obstacles to invasion of the Americas so long as both are controlled either by the American Navy or by the navy of a Power friendly to us.

7. We have a one-ocean navy and shall not have a two-ocean navy before 1946.

British Fleet a Protection.

8. So long as the British Navy continues to hold the Germans and Italians on the other side of the Atlantic, while our fleet watches in the Pacific, we have and shall have the practical equivalent of a two-ocean navy.

9. If the British Navy should be eliminated, we would still have a one-ocean navy but we should have two oceans to defend.

10. A one-ocean navy cannot cover two oceans.

11. Without the British Navy, we could not protect both the Pacific coast and the Atlantic coast of the Western Hemisphere. We could not block both the front door and the back door of our national home.

12. An ocean without a fleet is not a defense but a broad highway for invasion.

13. There are strong totalitarian elements in many States of South America.

14. The elimination of the British navy and control of either the Atlantic or the Pacific by a totalitarian navy would be the signal for totalitarian government to be installed in one or more States of Latin America. The movement of totalitarian control toward the Panama Canal would be rapid.

15. The experience of cities in England has shown that it is impossible to prevent bombardment of the Panama Canal by planes based on the northern portion of South America, or on Central America, or on aircraft carriers.

We Must Buy Time.

16. If the Panama Canal should be closed by bombardment from the air or sabotage, our one-ocean navy would be fixed in one ocean and the other ocean would become a pathway for invasion.

17. We are not prepared today to meet an attack by the totalitarian States that are leagued against us. We must buy time in which to prepare.

18. We can buy that time only by making certain that the British fleet will continue to hold the totalitarian forces in Europe while our fleet watches in the Pacific.

19. If we should permit a conquest of the British isles, the officers and men of the British Navy would be threatened with the starvation of the entire population of Great Britain if they should continue to hold the Atlantic for us. It is improbable that they could or would do so for long.

20. Should the British Navy be eliminated and should the Panama Canal be blocked before we are prepared, invasion of the Western Hemisphere would be almost certain. It is entirely certain that the shipbuilding facilities in the hands of the totalitarian dictators would be at least four times as great as our shipbuilding facilities, and what we had planned to be a two-ocean navy would turn out to be only a one-ocean navy after all. More than 90 per cent of the human race would be controlled by the dictators and be organized both militarily and economically against us. A Japanese iron ring around Asia and Australasia and a German iron ring around Africa and Europe, including Great Britain and Ireland, would cut us off from trade with so great a portion of the earth, that we—in a mutilated stump of the Western Hemisphere—would be thrown into economic disorder. The standard of living of even the poorest American would be gravely reduced. And we should have to try to support with our crippled economic system armaments colossal enough to resist the whole world. We should have to organize our American life on a military basis from top to bottom and maintain it on a military basis throughout years of misery and years of totalitarian propaganda directed against our democratic form of Government. How long, under those conditions, we could maintain the liberties that have been the birthright of every American since the birth of our nation, no man knows.

Our Certain Insurance War.

21. These would be to us the consequences of British defeat. We must, therefore, for our own self-preservation, try to see to it that Great Britain is not defeated.

22. We are determined not to be drawn into this war. We leave out of the discussion, therefore, the policy of going to war, although we know that the most certain way to insure against risk of British defeat would be for us to go to war. We set two limits on our support of Great Britain: First, we will not declare war; second, we will not ourselves initiate military or naval hostilities.

23. We can diminish the danger to ourselves only by supplying promptly to the British and the other States that are now holding the totalitarian war machines away from our shores every material, munition and arm that they need.

24. It is so greatly to the advantage of the totalitarian States to have us stay out of war while they are attempting to conquer Great Britain, Greece and China that no matter how much aid we furnish and no matter what form that aid may take, the dictators will hesitate to declare war on us unless they have first conqured Great Britain. If they were to declare war, they could not now get at us.

Must Produce Rapidly.

24. We must produce elements of defense as fast as if we were in war, and we must employ the elements of defense that we now possess and shall produce in the wisest manner for our defense.

26. The question of whether it is wiser to defend our country by turning over a particular element of defense at a particular moment to the British, or other forces, to use immediately, or wiser to keep that instrument within our country, is an intricate technical question that can be decided with the highest wisdom—and in time—only by the commander-in-chief of our Army and Navy who acts on the advice of his chief military, naval, air and diplomatic advisors. We should not even be an independent nation if a committee had sat at Valley Forge where Washington stood. The framers of our Constitution were wise when they made the Chief Executive commander-in-chief of our Army and Navy.

27. Our country is in such danger today that decisions on the effective use of our instruments of defense are as vital as if we had already been attacked.

28. Bill 1776 is designed to empower the President to make those decisions. By passing it, the Congress would show, I believe, that the wisdom of the framers of our Constitution is still alive in our land, and that we, like our forefathers, will submit to no master but God.

Text of Bullitt's Statement

By The Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 25—The prepared text of the statement made to the House Foreign Affairs Committee by William C. Bullitt, former Ambassador to France, was as follows:

JAN 26 1941

1. We are determined to maintain the independence of the United States and our government of the people, by the people, and for the people.

13. There are strong totalitarian elements in many States of South America.

14. The elimination of the British Navy and control of either the Atlantic or the Pacific by a totalitarian navy would be the signal for totalitarian government to be installed in one or more States of Latin America. The movement of totalitarian control toward the Panama Canal would be rapid.

15. The experience of cities in England has shown that it is impossible to prevent bombardment of the Panama Canal by planes based on the northern portion of South America, or on Central America, or on aircraft carriers.

16. If the Panama Canal should be closed by bombardment from the air or sabotage, our one-ocean navy would be fixed in one ocean and the other ocean would become a pathway for invasion.

17. We are not prepared today to meet an attack by the totalitarian States that are leagued against us. We must buy time in which to prepare.

18. We can buy that time only by making certain that the British Fleet will continue to hold the totalitarian forces in Europe while our fleet watches in the Pacific.

19. If we should permit a conquest of the British Isles, the officers and men of the British Navy would be threatened with the starvation of the entire population of Great Britain if they should continue to hold the Atlantic for us. It is improbable that they could or would do so for long.

Invasion "Almost Certain"

20. Should the British Navy be eliminated and should the Panama Canal be blocked before we are prepared, invasion of the Western Hemisphere would be almost certain. It is entirely certain that the shipbuilding facilities in the hands of the totalitarian dictators would be at least four times as great as our shipbuilding facilities, and what we had planned to be a two-ocean navy would turn out to be only a one-ocean navy after all. More than 90 per cent of the human race would be controlled by the dictators and be organized both militarily and economically against us. A Japanese iron ring around Asia and Australasia and a German iron ring around Africa and Europe, including Great Britain and Ireland, would cut us off from trade with so great a portion of the earth, that we—in a mutilated stump of the Western Hemisphere—would be thrown into economic disorder. The standard of living of even the poorest American would be gravely reduced. And we should have to try to support with our crippled economic system armaments colossal enough to resist the whole world. We should have to organize our American life on a military basis from top to bottom and maintain it on a military basis throughout years of misery and years of totalitarian propaganda directed against our democratic form of government. How long, under those conditions, we could maintain the liberties that have been the birthright of every American since the birth of our nation, no man knows.

21. These would be to us the consequences of British defeat. We must, therefore, for our own self-preservation, try to see to it that Great Britain is not defeated.

22. We are determined no to be drawn into this war. We leave out of the discussion, therefore, the policy of going to war, although we know that the most certain way to insure against risk of British defeat would be for us to go to war. We set two limits on our support of Great Britain: First, we will not declare war; second, we will not ourselves initiate military or naval hostilities.

23. We can diminish the danger to ourselves only by supplying promptly to the British and the other States that are now holding the totalitarian war machines away from our shores every material, munition, and arms that they need.

24. It is so greatly to the advantage of the totalitarian States to have us stay out of war while they are attempting to conquer Great Britain, Greece and China that no matter how much aid we furnish and no matter what form that aid may take, the dictators will hesitate to declare war on us unless they have first conquered Great Britain. If they were to declare war, they could not now get at us.

For Arming As if at War

25. We must produce elements of defense as fast as if we were in war, and we must employ the elements of defense that we now possess and shall produce in the wisest manner for our defense.

26. The question of whether it is wiser to defend our country by turning over a particular element of defense at a particular moment to the British, or other forces, to use immediately, or wiser to keep that instrument within our country, is an intricate technical question that can be decided with the highest wisdom—and in time—only by the Commander in Chief of our Army and Navy, who acts on the advice of his chief military, naval, air and diplomatic advisers. We should not even be an independent nation if a committee had sat at Valley Forge where Washington stood. The framers of our Constitution were wise when they made the Chief Executive Commander in Chief of our Army and Navy.

27. Our country is in such danger today that decisions on the effective use of our instruments of defense are as vital as if we had already been attacked.

28. Bill 1776 is designed to empower the President to make those decisions. By passing it, the Congress would show, I believe, that the wisdom of the framers of our Constitution is still alive in our land, and that we, like our forefathers, will submit to no master but God.

THE FOLLOWING IS FOR USE ONLY IN MORNING PAPERS. IT IS NOT AVAILABLE FOR USE IN EVENING PAPERS OF TODAY.

NIGHT LEAD BRITISH (BJT)

WASHINGTON, JAN 25-(AP)-DECLARING THAT THE UNITED STATES IS FACED WITH A "TERRIBLE, TERRIBLE URGENCY," WILLIAM C.BULLITT TOLD THE HOUSE FOREIGN AFFAIRS COMMITTEE TODAY THAT IF THIS COUNTRY STEPPED UP ITS PRODUCTION OF MILITARY EQUIPMENT TO WAR-TIME LEVELS GREAT BRITAIN COULD DEFEAT GERMANY.

BUT IF BRITAIN FALLS, THE TANNED, BALDISH FORMER AMBASSADOR TO FRANCE SAID, INVASION OF THE WESTERN HEMISPHERE IS "ALMOST CERTAIN" AND ENCIRCLEMENT OF THE UNITED STATES BY TOTALITARIAN POWERS IS ASSURED.

THE FOREMOST OF A HALF DOZEN WITNESSES TO TESTIFY TODAY IN BEHALF OF THE ADMINISTRATION'S BRITISH AID BILL, BULLITT READ A PREPARED STATEMENT AND THEN SETTLED HIMSELF IN A CHAIR FOR NEARLY FOUR HOURS TO ANSWER SEARCHING QUESTIONS COVERING ALMOST EVERY ASPECT OF THE DIPLOMATIC WORLD.

AS HIS TESTIMONY ENDED, BULLITT PICKED UP THE LEATHER BRIEF CASE FROM WHICH HE HAD DRAWN INNUMERABLE PAPERS--INCLUDING A LETTER FROM FORMER PREMIER OF FRANCE DALADIER TO PRESIDENT ROOSEVELT--AROSE, FACED THE COMMITTEE AND DECLARED SOLEMNLY:

"I FEEL THIS IS A TERRIBLE, TERRIBLE URGENCY. I FEEL THAT THE SKIPPER HAS SET THE COURSE OF OUR SHIP. ALL OF YOU GENTLEMEN ARE OFFICERS AND THOSE OF US WHO ARE OUT OF OFFICE ARE THE CREW--AND THE CARGO IS AMERICA."

CHAIRMAN BLOOM (D-NY), STANDING WITH GAVEL RAISED, BEAMED AS A PROLONGED BURST OF APPLAUSE ROLLED FROM THE SPECTATORS PACKED IN THE LARGE HEARING ROOM. COMMITTEE MEMBERS JOINED IN THE

JAN 26 1941

APPLAUSE, AND BLOOM, OBSERVING THAT IT WAS BULLITT'S FIFTIETH BIRTHDAY, REMARKED HE BET THE FORMER DIPLOMAT NEVER HAD HAD SUCH AN EXPRESSION OF APPROVAL ON HIS BIRTHDAY BEFORE.

THE DAY'S WITNESSES DEVELOPED IN GENERAL THE THEME THAT THE UNITED STATES WAS ACTING IN SELF DEFENSE IN AIDING BRITAIN, AND FOR ITS OWN PROTECTION SHOULD INCREASE THAT AID.

ONE, MAJOR GENERAL JOHN F.O'RYAN, NEW YORK LAWYER AND WORLD WAR OFFICER, ADVOCATED THAT THE UNITED STATES ENTER THE WAR AT ONCE ON THE SIDE OF BRITAIN, THOUGH HE ADDED THAT THE FINAL DECISION SHOULD BE LEFT TO THE WAR DEPARTMENT.

"THE MOST EFFECTIVE WAY TO FIGHT AGGRESSION IS BY OFFENSIVE ACTION AT THE SOURCE," O'RYAN SAID AT ONE POINT.

"LOOKING AHEAD, IT IS CONCEIVABLE THAT IN OUR OWN INTEREST WE SHOULD ENTER THE WAR NOW IN ORDER TO PREVENT A STALEMATE," HE SAID.

DOROTHY THOMPSON, THE COLUMNIST, TOLD THE COMMITTEE THAT GERMANY INTENDED TO ELIMINATE THE UNITED STATES "AS A WORLD POWER," PARTLY BY FORMENTING CIVIL WAR IN THIS COUNTRY AS SOON AS IT COULD BE ISOLATED FROM BRITAIN.

MRS.DAISY HARRIMAN, MINISTER TO NORWAY, TOLD THE COMMITTEE THAT MODERN INVENTION WAS ELIMINATING SPACE "AND AN OCEAN IS NO LONGER A BARRIER, ESPECIALLY IF CONTROLLED BY A HOSTILE POWER. URGING SPEEDY ENACTMENT OF THE BILL, SHE SAID "FREEDOM OF ACTION AND MOBILITY ARE CRUCIAL" IN THE DETERMINATION OF WHERE THE NATION'S DEFENSE MATERIALS CAN BEST BE USED.

PRESIDENT WILLIAM GREEN SAID THE AMERICAN FEDERATION OF LABOR FAVORED THE "BASIC PRINCIPLES" OF THE LEGISLATION, BUT WOULD LIKE TO SEE A TWO-YEAR LIMIT ON THE GRANT OF POWERS TO THE PRESIDENT, AND ALSO ASSURANCES OF PROTECTION OF LABOR'S RIGHTS IN ANY GRANT OF POWER TO COMMANDEER PRODUCTION.

EX-SENATOR ERNEST W.GIBSON OF VERMONT ASSERTED IN A STATEMENT PUT INTO THE RECORD THAT "QUALIFIED OBSERVERS" BELIEVED HITLER "COULD TAKE BRAZIL BY TELEPHONE" IF THE BRITISH FLEET WERE DESTROYED. SPEAKING AS CHAIRMAN OF THE COMMITTEE TO DEFEND AMERICA BY AIDING THE ALLIES, GIBSON SAID GERMANY "COULD AND WOULD" INVADE THE WESTERN HEMISPHERE IF BRITAIN WERE DEFEATED.

BULLITT, COVERING ALMOST EVERY ASPECT OF THE EUROPEAN CONFLICT IN HIS LENGTHY TESTIMONY, TOLD THE COMMITTEE IN RESPONSE TO QUESTIONS THAT:

THE BRITISH, WHO HAD AN "UNBELIEVABLY SMALL NUMBER OF GUNS" LEFT AFTER THE EVACUATION OF FRANCE, COULD BREAK THE MORALE OF THE GERMAN PEOPLE BY BOMBINGS IF THE UNITED STATES GAVE THEM ENOUGH PLANES.

THE STATE OF THE PUBLIC MIND IN THE UNITED STATES NOW OFFERED AN "EXTRAORDINARY LIKENESS" TO THAT OF FRANCE BEFORE THE GERMAN INVASION--AND FRANCE STARTED PREPARING TOO LATE.

HE HAD "ABSOLUTE KNOWLEDGE" THAT THE FRENCH BELIEVED THEY HAD SO PLACED THEIR FLEET IN PORTS AND HAD SO INSTRUCTED THEIR MEN TO SINK THEM IF IT BECAME NECESSARY, THAT NONE OF THE SHIPS WOULD FALL INTO GERMAN OR ITALIAN HANDS.

PRESIDENT ROOSEVELT WOULD "RATHER GIVE AWAY HIS TWO EYES THAN GIVE AWAY THE NAVY."

INVASION OF THE WESTERN HEMISPHERE IS "ALMOST CERTAIN" TO COME THROUGH AN ATTACK IN SOUTH AMERICA, WITH JAPAN SEIZING CONTROL OF THE PACIFIC, IF BRITAIN IS BEATEN AND HER FLEET IS LOST.

A REPORT THAT HE ENCOURAGED FRANCE TO ENTER THE WAR BY INDICATING THAT IT COULD COUNT ON AMERICAN ARMED SUPPORT WAS, "INVENTED, AS WE ALL KNOW, BY THE GERMAN PROPAGANDA MACHINE."

AT THIS POINT IN HIS TESTIMONY, BULLITT PRODUCED A LETTER WHICH HE SAID WAS WRITTEN TO PRESIDENT ROOSEVELT LAST APRIL 4 BY FORMER PREMIER DALADIER. IT SAID, IN PART:

"I HAVE JUST READ THE ALLEGATIONS OF THE NAZI GOVERNMENT ON THE SUBJECT OF THE PRETENDED DECLARATION OF AMBASSADOR BULLITT.

"NO ONE CAN FORESEE TO WHAT LIMITS GERMAN PROPAGANDA WILL CARRY ITS LIES. ALSO, I FEEL I SHOULD TELL YOU THAT DURING THE LAST TWO YEARS I WAS PRIME MINISTER, AMBASSADOR BULLITT ALWAYS SAID TO ME THAT IN CASE OF A EUROPEAN CONFLICT, FRANCE SHOULD MAKE HER DECISIONS KNOWING THAT, ACCORDING TO THE OPINION OF AMBASSADOR BULLITT, THE UNITED STATES OF AMERICA WOULD NOT ENTER THE WAR."

BULLITT STRESSED THE URGENCY THAT HE SAID SHOULD PUSH AMERICAN PRODUCTION TO WAR-TIME LEVELS AT ONCE.

"I BELIEVE GREAT BRITAIN CAN WIN IF THE UNITED STATES DELIVERS TO BRITAIN THE INSTRUMENTS OF WAR IN SUFFICIENT QUANTITIES--BUT WE ARE NOT PRODUCING THESE IMPLEMENTS OF WAR IN SUFFICIENT QUANTITIES NOW," HE DECLARED.

ON THE QUESTION OF THE POWER THAT WOULD BE GRANTED TO PRESIDENT ROOSEVELT UNDER TERMS OF THE PENDING BILL, BULLITT SAID HE THOUGHT ANY LIMITATION ON THE PRESIDENT'S AUTHORITY TO TRANSFER MILITARY EQUIPMENT WOULD HAMPER THE PROGRAM.

"IF YOU FEEL THAT YOU CAN'T GIVE POWER TO THAT MAN," HE DEMANDED, "TO WHOM ON EARTH WOULD YOU GIVE IT?"

Halifax, Hull Confer

[By the Associated Press]

Washington, Jan. 25—Viscount Halifax, the British Ambassador, reported after talking for more than an hour with Secretary of State Cordell Hull today that "we see things very much alike."

The new Ambassador, who was paying his first formal call at the State Department after his precedent-breaking reception yesterday on Chesapeake Bay by President Roosevelt, talked briefly with newspapermen after exchanging views with Hull on international affairs.

Discusses War

"President Roosevelt's action in coming to meet me upon my arrival on the battleship King George V," Halifax said, "will be deeply appreciated in England and throughout the empire, where its significance will be understood."

Discussing the war, the new Ambassador declared that in his opinion "when history comes to be written Hitler will have been found to have lost the war in June, 1940, when he failed to take advantage of the situation existing after the collapse of France."

Calls For Supplies

The Viscount said England was then at its weakest and Germany "might have been able to cash in if it had acted quickly."

The Ambassador said he was looking forward to the opportunity to see different parts of the United States and "to see what you are doing, and will be doing, I hope, to aid us."

Asked what he considered the most immediate needs, Halifax said:

"Mobilization of your great industrial strength, and translating that into action in supplying us with the ships and supplies we need."

Cites Strain On Navy

"It is quite clear," Halifax said, "that Hitler is making a desperate effort to intensify the sea blockade of England. That means a severe strain on our ships, our navy, and our aircraft. Help in meeting that strain is vital, and the quicker you can give it to us, the better."

The envoy said that since he had been a member of Britain's War Cabinet from the beginning of the war—and remains a member of the Cabinet—he feels taht he can "translate Britain's feeling and needs" so that they will be well understood in this country.

"In Good Heart"

"Make no mistake about it," Halifax said, "England is in good heart. When I walked through the streets of London just before I left I was impressed with the fact that if the Germans thought they could upset the British people by bombing they had erred greatly."

Halifax added that there was no doubt in England that spring would bring a great German attack.

"No Illusions"

"We have no illusions about Germany's strength, or plans," Halifax said, "but we know they will not succeed."

Officials said that the Ambassador had no other plans for his first day in Washington and he might go to the White House on Monday to present his credentials formally to President Roosevelt.

Fresh From Cabinet

Halifax is fresh from the innermost councils of London's war cabinet. He will undertake for the British Empire the task of keeping American munitions moving in ever-increasing quantities to Britain's fighting forces.

That he was assured of full cooperation on the part of Washington officialdom was accepted here as beyond question after President Roosevelt had extended an extraordinary gesture of friendship by receiving him even before he had set foot on American shores.

The manner of meeting between the Chief Executive and Britain's former Foreign Secretary, in fact, left veterans in the art of diplomacy searching in vain for a precedent and capped in drama the envoy's secret crossing of the submarine-infested North Atlantic on the 35,000-ton King George V.

A conference aboard the yacht Potomac between the Chief Executive and Halifax followed. Then they and members of their parties dined as the yacht steamed back to port. As soon as it was tied up Halifax received reporters aboard and outlined the work he expects to do in this country.

Halifax Meets Hull, Asks Speed in Aid

(Picture on Page 2)

WASHINGTON, Jan. 25 (AP).—Viscount Halifax, Britain's new Ambassador and member of the British War Cabinet, said today that the greatest aid the United States could provide his embattled homeland was speedy "mobilization of your great industrial strength and its translation into action in supplying us with the ships and supplies we need."

The tall envoy's statement was made to reporters after he had talked for more than an hour with Secretary of State Hull—a talk which Halifax said covered the whole range of international affairs of vital interest to the two nations.

TALK WITH ROOSEVELT.

Viscount Halifax had an opportunity for an even longer discussion of the same subject with President Roosevelt when the Chief Executive shattered all precedent by meeting the incoming envoy last night on the Presidential yacht Potomac in Chesapeake Bay.

The King George V, England's latest battleship, brought Lord Halifax to the United States. It was disclosed today that high American naval officials were given opportunity to inspect the newest British development in dreadnaughts.

VESSEL SAILS OFF.

The George V upped anchor today and headed for the open sea, having spent only a little more than 21 hours of the 24 it might have remained in American waters under the neutrality law.

Lord Halifax said Britain needed help quickly to fight off a threatened German invasion—forecast for Spring—in which Chancellor Hitler was expected to make his supreme bid for victory.

"It is quite clear," he said, "that Hitler is making a desperate effort to intensify the sea blockade of England. That means a severe strain on our ships, our navy and our aircraft. Help in meeting that strain is vital and the quicker you can give it to us, the better."

Nazi Paper Ridicules Lord Halifax's Mission

Cites His 'Unbroken Arrogance' Toward Americans

BERLIN, Jan. 25 (AP).—The arrival in the United States of Lord Halifax, Britain's new Ambassador at Washington, got scant notice in most of the German press today, but the "Boersen Zeitung" gave it a column headed "Journey Accompanied by Heart Palpitation."

It snickered at a nation which claims control of the seas having to use a powerful battleship which is sealed with the greatest secrecy to get one man across the Atlantic.

"Halifax lost no time to impress on the American public the urgent need for American help for England," the "Boersen Zeitung" said.

"Shortly after Roosevelt met him at the Annapolis dock he declared with the still unbroken arrogance of an English aristocrat toward the American people who once were colonists of the British that he would inform the Americans from time to time in what manner they can help. . . .

"England resembles a mortally wounded man who, with his last strength, flees into the arms of a Samaritan who is able to speak comforting words and give a couple of injections producing dreams, but who lacks the right medicines."

FDR-HALIFAX

WASHINGTON, JAN 25-(AP)-AS A SEA-FARING MAN TO THE REPRESENTATIVE OF A SEA-FARING PEOPLE, IT WAS A SAILOR'S GREETING THAT PRESIDENT ROOSEVELT GAVE TO THE BRITISH AMBASSADOR, LORD HALIFAX, LAST NIGHT.

TO MANY A LANDSMAN THE PROSPECT OF STEAMING OUT UPON THE RAIN-WHIPPED, FOG-COVERED WATERS OF CHESAPEAKE BAY, EVEN ON SUCH A TRIM VESSEL AS THE YACHT POTOMAC, MIGHT NOT HAVE BEEN TOO INVITING BUT TO MR. ROOSEVELT THE GRAY SALT WATERS OF THE BAY ARE AS FAMILIAR AS THE GREEN GRASS ON THE WHITE HOUSE LAWN.

DURING HIS EIGHT YEARS IN OFFICE HE HAS SPENT MANY WEEKENDS CRUISING THERE--WHEN HE WAS NOT OFF ABOARD A WARSHIP TO SOUTH AMERICA OR HAWAII OR VACATIONING AT THE FAMILY ESTATE ON CAMPOBELLO ISLAND OFF THE COAST OF MAINE.

THUS THE SETTING FOR HIS PRECEDENT-BREAKING RECEPTION OF THE BRITISH ENVOY WAS ONE COMMON TO MANY EXPERIENCES IN THE PRESIDENT'S LIFE AND ONE WHICH HE MAY WELL HAVE PREFERRED, BEING A MAN WHO LOVES THE SEA, TO THE LESS DRAMATIC BACKGROUND OF HIS OVAL OFFICE, WHERE DIPLOMATS ORDINARILY ARE RECEIVED.

MOREOVER, THE SIX-MILE TRIP OUT FROM ANNAPOLIS, MD., TO WHERE LORD AND LADY HALIFAX WAITED ABOARD A BRITISH WAR VESSEL GAVE THE PRESIDENT A CHANCE TO GET WHAT VIEW HE COULD THROUGH FOG AND DARKNESS OF BRITAIN'S NEW 35,000-TON BATTLESHIP, THE KING GEORGE V.

NAVAL DEVELOPMENTS HAVE LONG BEEN AMONG THE PRINCIPAL INTERESTS OF THE PRESIDENT, WHO WAS ASSISTANT SECRETARY OF THE NAVY DURING THE WORLD WAR. HIS WHITE HOUSE OFFICE AND STUDY ARE FILLED WITH SHIP MODELS AND PRINTS OF OLD SAILING VESSELS AND HIS BOOKS AND PAPERS ON THE SUBJECT ARE SAID TO CONSTITUTE ONE OF THE FINEST MARINE LIBRARIES IN THE WORLD.

JAN 26 1941

BY EDWARD E.BOMAR

WASHINGTON,JAN. 25-(AP)-THE SECRET TRANS-ATLANTIC VOYAGE OF THE BRITISH BATTLESHIP KING GEORGE V WAS VIEWED IN DIPLOMATIC AND NAVAL CIRCLES TODAY AS A DRAMATIC INTERNATIONAL GESTURE ATTENDED BY RELATIVELY FEW ACTUAL WAR RISKS.

THE TRIP SERVED PARTLY AS A SHAKEDOWN CRUISE FOR THE NEW 35,000-TON VESSEL, POSSIBLY THE WORLD'S MOST POWERFUL FOR THE TIME BEING.

JAN 26 1941

THE FIRST TRIALS WERE STAGED ONLY LAST APRIL, AND MONTHS NORMALLY ARE REQUIRED TO IRON OUT ALL THE KINKS OF A COMPLEX WARCRAFT WHICH IS THE FIRST OF AN UNTRIED NEW TYPE.

ON THE OTHER SIDE OF THE ATLANTIC, THE KING GEORGE V LIKELY WAS ESCORTED THROUGH THE DANGER ZONE BY DESTROYERS AND POSSIBLY AIRCRAFT PATROLS.

ON THIS SIDE DISTANCE, THE BIG SHIP'S SPEED OF SOME 30 KNOTS AND THE AMERICAN NAVY'S NEUTRALITY PATROL WERE SAFEGUARDS AGAINST PERIL OF THE FATE SUFFERED BY THE TORPEDOED BATTLESHIP ROYAL OAK.

UNLESS AN AXIS SUBMARINE ALREADY WAS LURKING IN AMERICAN WATERS, THERE WAS LITTLE DANGER ON THIS SIDE. THERE WAS INSUFFICIENT TIME FOR ONE TO CROSS THE ATLANTIC AND LIE IN WAIT OFF THE CHESAPEAKE, ONCE THE BATTLESHIP'S POSITION HAD BEEN MADE KNOWN TO THE WORLD.

AND THUS FAR THE AMERICAN NAVY HAS FAILED TO SUBSTANTIATE A SINGLE REPORT THAT U-BOATS HAVE OPERATED ACROSS THE OCEAN IN THIS WAR.

FROM ANNAPOLIS, THE KING GEORGE V WAS EXPECTED TO HEAD BACK TO BRITAIN--POSSIBLY VIA HALIFAX, NOVA SCOTIA--TO BECOME A PART OF THE NAVAL FORCES HELD IN RESERVE TO COPE WITH ANY ATTEMPT AT INVASION.

JAN 26 1941

THE BRITISH HAVE FOUND BATTLESHIPS VITAL IN THE MEDITERRANEAN, TO PROTECT CONVOYS AGAINST POWERFUL ITALIAN CRAFT, AND TO POUND FASCIST PORTS IN LIBYA. OLDER VESSELS HAVE BEEN USED FOR THESE PURPOSES, HOWEVER, NEWER SHIPS BEING RETAINED IN THE HOME FLEET.

THE NAZI NAVY IS REPORTED TO HAVE PUT TWO NEW BATTLESHIPS INTO COMMISSION RECENTLY AND NAVAL STRATEGY DICTATES THAT THEY MUST BE CHECKMATED BY VESSELS OF AT LEAST EQUAL POWER.

THE BRITISH ADMIRALTY HAS CLOAKED THE KING GEORGE V AND HER FOUR SISTER SHIPS IN WARTIME SECRECY. THEY WERE OFFICIALLY LISTED IN THE UNITED STATES AS WELL AS ABROAD AS MERELY "UNDER CONSTRUCTION" AT A TIME WHEN IT WAS KNOWN THAT AT LEAST TWO ALREADY HAD BEEN RUSHED TO COMPLETION.

THE CLAIM THAT THE NEW KING GEORGE CLASS BATTLESHIPS ARE THE MOST POWERFUL AFLOAT WILL BE DISPUTED THIS SUMMER WHEN THE NEW AMERICAN BATTLESHIPS WASHINGTON AND NORTH CAROLINA JOIN THE FLEET. POSSIBLY NOT QUITE AS FAST, THE AMERICAN SHIPS CARRY HEAVIER GUNS, AND ARE PROTECTED BY MUCH THE SAME SHIELDS AND OTHER SAFEGUARDS AGAINST AIR ATTACK THAT ATTRACTED ATTENTION ON THE VISITING BRITISH SHIP.

British Battleship Heads Out Into Bay

[By the Associated Press]

Annapolis, Jan. 25—The 35,000-ton battleship King George V headed out into hazy Chesapeake Bay shortly before noon today. The great gray warship lifted anchor within twenty-one hours after it arrived in Annapolis Roads at 2.59 P. M. yesterday bearing Lord Halifax, British Ambassador to the United States, to an unexpected offshore meeting with President Roosevelt.

Half Hidden In Haze

Its destination was not disclosed by Naval Academy officials, who refused all comment on the departure.

Observers from the shore were unable to tell whether the ship, semi-concealed in a haze, had taken on supplies.

Sailing of the ship came as unexpectedly as its arrival off the Academy yesterday and the President's unprecedented trip to greet Halifax.

Beats Dead Line

She slipped out three hours before the dead line provided under international law. Under that law, a foreign warship must leave a neutral port within twenty-four hours unless her officers can prove she needs repairs, fuel or provisions to reach the nearest home country port.

The King George V was the first naval vessel of a belligerent nation to come to the United States since the outbreak of war.

The visits were disclosed by Navy officials after the battleship which brought Lord Halifax as Ambassador to the United States lifted anchor just before noon and sailed down Chesapeake Bay, her destination a secret.

Twenty-five officers from the vessel were entertained at the Academy Officers Club last night, ten British midshipmen were guests of the academy regiment in Bancroft Hall for dinner and motion pictures, and 120 enlisted men were entertained by academy enlisted men on the station ship, Reina Mercedes.

Officials described the visits as "routine" hospitality, adding that they were "nothing out of the ordinary."

Officials would not say whether the King George V refueled or was provisioned before it left to keep within the twenty-four-hour limit for a naval vessel of a belligerent nation in a neutral port.

HALIFAX'S WARSHIP SAILS AFTER 21 HOURS

Officers, Visitors at Annapolis, Invite Group to Tour Ship

ANNAPOLIS, Md., Jan. 25 (AP)—The Naval Academy played host to some officers, midshipmen and enlisted men of the British battleship King George V before it sailed today, ending a twenty-one-hour visit to Annapolis.

In return, Lieut. Comdr. Chester Wood, aide to the academy superintendent, and several other academy officers were taken aboard the new 35,000-ton warship, one of the most powerful in the British Navy, for an inspection visit.

TAFT OPPOSES GIVING POWER TO ROOSEVELT

Ohio Senator Regards Time Restriction As Unimportant

Suggests Making Money Loans To England And Canada

[By the Associated Press]

New York, Jan. 25—Senator Robert A. Taft (Rep., Ohio) said today that he regarded any amendment to limit to two years the authority of the Administration aid-to-Britain bill as "wholly unimportant—whatever harm can come of the bill will have come before two years."

"The truth is that nothing we can do at this moment, no legislation Congress can adopt, will give effective aid to England before 1942," he added in an address prepared for a meeting of the New York State Bar Association.

"I am indeed hopeful that the present setup of the National Defense Commission is making effective progress, although from an organization standpoint the double-headed control is not sound in theory."

Cites Lag At Start

"Nothing will ever make up for the nine months' lag in the beginning of the war," Taft said, adding:

"The British themselves were at least partly responsible for this, because they did not give the orders which would have justified the enlargement of plants."

"The direct way" to meet English requirements, the Senator continued, was to authorize such direct loans to England "as may be really necessary."

"I have offered a substitute for the present legislation, authorizing the Reconstruction Finance Corporation to make loans to England in the sum of $1,000,000,000 and to Canada in the sum of $500,000,000, which is the maximum likely for the next twelve months," he said.

"If the amount appears likely to be exhausted, Congress can increase the authorization before it adjourns."

Notes Significance

Taft declared that the proposed "lease-lend" bill authorized the President "to sell, lend, lease, or give away our entire army and navy except the men.

"The only answer has been that of course the President would be crazy to think of giving away our battleships and cruisers and airplanes and guns. But if he would not think of using the power, why give him the power? No one can tell what an individual subjected to pressure and perhaps unsound advice may do.

"He did transfer fifty destroyers while admitting that even with our destroyers our navy was inadequate. . . . This bill might well be called a bill to make Uncle Sam the best and biggest Santa Claus the world has ever seen."

Mrs. Harriman Has Quit As Minister to Norway

Tells House Hearing She Resigned 6 Weeks Ago

WASHINGTON, Jan. 25 (AP).—Mrs. J. Borden Harriman said today that she had tendered her resignation as Minister to Norway about six weeks ago and that while she had received no official word she felt sure it was accepted on Jan. 21.

Mrs. Harriman, the first woman to represent the United States officially in a war zone, told of her resignation while testifying before the House Foreign Affairs Committee in support of the British aid bill.

Mrs. Harriman, who is known as "Daisy" to her intimates, returned to the United States late last summer.

She was appointed Minister to Norway in 1937 and her eventful tenure of office included at least one narrow escape from death. She fled down roads under bombardment by German planes on that occasion and got over the border to Sweden to telephone the Minister in Stockholm.

ROYAL COUPLE IN NEW YORK

Twenty Detectives Guard Norwegian Crown Prince And Princess

New York, Jan. 25 (AP)—Guarded by a squad of twenty detectives, Crown Prince Olav and his consort, Martha, of Norway, arrived from Washington by train today for an indefinite stay.

The royal couple plan to attend services tomorrow at the Norwegian seamen's church in Brooklyn, and a Norwegian reception at the Waldorf-Astoria Hotel.

Red Cross Cargo Loading at Baltimore

Baltimore, Jan. 25 (A. P.).—The steamship Cold Harbor arrived here late yesterday to take on a cargo of foodstuffs, medicine and clothing gathered by the American Red Cross to send to Spain and unoccupied France.

Algic Reports Sighting 4 Subs During Voyage

"Large, White Vessel," Believed Supply Base, Seen 900 Miles Off South African Coast

New York, Jan. 25 (AP)—The Robin Line's South African freighter Algic docked today after a three-month voyage during which she sighted four submarines and "a large, white surface vessel" 900 miles off the coast of South Africa.

Crewmen said the ships in the flotilla, sighted December 30 as "specks on the horizon, proceeding toward Cape Town" had been made out by the officers, but that it had been impossible to determine their nationality. It was assumed the surface ship was a supply base for the undersea craft.

Three Federal agents boarded the Algic after her arrival to talk to Capt. Johannes Bryde, but the nature of their conversation was not disclosed.

Speedy Action On Ships Seen

Washington, Jan. 25 (AP)—Speedy Senate action was expected today on the House-approved $350,000,000 emergency shipbuilding program designed to provide 200 steel cargo vessels for the American mercantile fleet.

The measure passed the House yesterday after sharp debate over a proposal of Representative Howard W. Smith (Dem., Va.) to bar closed shop agreements with workers employed on the construction. The proposal was defeated.

As the bill reached the Senate it would appropriate $313,500,000 for construction of the ships and building facilities.

U.S. CRUISER BRINGS GOLD FROM AFRICA

Treasury And Navy Reveal Landing Of Undisclosed Sum At New York

U. S. S. Louisville Transports Purchase Made By U. S. "Some Time Ago"

[By the Associated Press]

Washington, Jan. 25—A terse Treasury-Navy Department announcement tonight disclosed that the cruiser Louisville brought "a sum of gold" which the United States had purchased from South Africa when it docked at New York last Thursday.

"Some time ago the United States purchased a sum of gold in the Union of South Africa," the announcement said. "It was transported to the United States by the U. S. S. Louisville which had been operating in South Atlantic waters."

Declines To Amplify

Officials declined to amplify the announcement and the latest Treasury statement available, which was issued today as of January 23, did not reflect the amount of the gold. It showed the Treasury's gold assets at $22,090,824,598.55.

Warships have been used several times to carry gold here from abroad. The last big shipment of this nature was brought from France June 25 by the cruiser Vincennes.

Gold Shipment Totaled $250,000,000, Is Report

New York, Jan. 25 (AP)—The Daily News said tonight that the United States cruiser Louisville brought $250,000,000 in foreign gold into port when she docked at the navy yard in Brooklyn last Thursday.

At the same time, the News said the Louisville "accidentally met" the King George V, British battleship which brough England's new Ambassador, Lord Halifax, to the United States, outside the 300-mile neutrality zone and proceeded with her to the Virginia Capes.

The News said it was not known where the gold was loaded or to whose account it would be deposited, but the newspaper asserted the gold was removed from the vessel by sailors the night the Louisville docked. Although navy officials declined to discuss the activities of the Louisville, the cruiser was known to have been on a tour of South American ports since last fall.

"Submarine Sighted" Message Sent By U. S. Ship In Pacific

"Shelled Unknown Man," Says SSS Flash From The Arcadia—"Something Funny," Mackay Comments

[By the Associated Press]

Los Angeles, Jan. 25—Mackay radio reported tonight it had picked up an "SSS" message (submarine sighted) from a United States ship, the Arcadia, which read:

"SSS 34.19 north, 133.12 west. Shelled unknown man."

This would place the submarine less than 1,000 miles off the California coast between Santa Barbara and San Francisco.

Nothing further was heard from the Arcadia to explain what was meant by shelling "unknown man," which the operator said was correct.

Mackay officials expressed belief there was "something funny" about the message although it came over the regular 600 meters distress signal wave length and it could not have been the work of an amateur.

Coast Guard officials said they also picked up the message but "don't know what to make of it."

asked some influential Republicans in Congress to define the compromise terms under which they would be willing to go along on the lease-lend bill.

Apparently moving to minimize the threat of lengthy controversy, administration confidantes were said to have urged opponents to draft amendments embodying the restrictions which they have said should be written into the measure.

The chief changes suggested thus far would limit operation of the President's proposed lease-lend powers to two years, restrict to Great Britain and immediate allies the extension of credit for supplies, fix a ceiling on expenditures, prohibit the use of naval escorts for convoys and curb the President's power to transfer equipment that might be considered by the army and navy to be necessary for national defense.

While first compromise feelers were reported to have been put forward in Senate quarters, evidence of a spirit of compromise was seen in the House Foreign Affairs Committee, before which administration sponsors of the bill today called a half dozen witnesses to conclude two weeks of public hearings.

Republican members said that if three or four amendments such as the time and expenditures limitations were accepted, the bill would be quickly approved by the committee.

Democratic leaders on the committee privately said they were willing to accept revisions and it was believed possible the measure might be sent to the House floor next week end.

Although open hearings were scheduled to close today with the appearance of Mr. Bullitt, William Green, president of the American Federation of Labor; Dorothy Thompson, columnist, and others, the committee, by order of its fifteen majority members, will meet again Monday to hear in private three high-ranking military and naval officers—Admiral Harold R. Stark, chief of naval operations; Gen. George C. Marshall, army chief of staff, and Major-Gen. George H. Brett, acting army Air Corps chief.

Split on Secret Hearing.

The committee split yesterday over the question of whether these men should be heard in public, but the Democratic majority thwarted Republican demands that they be heard publicly.

Some opponents, the administration acknowledged, would not be satisfied with anything short of outright defeat of the bill. They were represented as being confident the bill would pass, but as desiring a larger majority for it than would be obtained if legislators on the border line of opposition voted against it.

ITALIAN ARMS, POURED INTO NORTH AFRICA TO FURTHER FASCIST DREAMS OF A VAST TRANS-MEDITERRANEAN EMPIRE, ARE BEING TURNED AGAINST THEIR ERSTWHILE OWNERS.

CAPTURED IN UNDISCLOSED QUANTITY IN EGYPT AND LIBYA IN DEFEATS WHICH COST ITALY 100,000 OR MORE PRISONERS TAKEN BY THE BRITISH, THOSE MADE-IN-ITALY RIFLES, MACHINE GUNS, GRENADES AND FIELD GUNS ARE ALREADY APPEARING IN EAST AFRICA, WHERE ETHIOPIAN TRIBESMEN ARE IN REVOLT AGAINST THEIR ITALIAN CONQUERORS.

NATIONAL UNITY IS OBJECT

House Hearings Expected to End Today, but Military Chiefs Will Be Heard Monday.

Washington, Jan. 25 (A. P.).—The administration, bidding for congressional unity on its aid-to-Britain program, was reported today to have

EMPEROR HAILE SELASSIE, THE LION OF JUDA, HAS AGAIN RAISED HIS GREEN AND YELLOW BANNER OVER ETHIOPIAN SOIL. ARMS WRESTED BY THE BRITISH FROM FASCIST FOES IN NORTH AFRICA ARE QUICKLY EQUIPPING ETHIOPIAN NATIVES FOR AN EFFORT, WITH BRITISH HELP, TO SWEEP ITALIAN FORCES OUT OF ALL EAST AFRICA.

THERE ARE NO OFFICIAL FIGURES FOR THE EXTENT OF BRITISH ARMAMENT CAPTURES AT SIDI BARRANI, AT BARDIA OR AT TOBRUK. IT IS UNQUESTIONABLY VERY LARGE. CAIRO HAS REPORTED GREAT AMMUNITION AND SUPPLY DUMPS TAKEN INTACT.

IN THOSE VICTORIES IN NORTH AFRICA THE BRITISH HAVE ACQUIRED ITALIAN ARMS AND AMMUNITION SUITED TO THE USE OF HAILE SELASSIE'S

30.24-7171

WARRIORS WITHOUT TAPPING BRITISH RESERVES IN AFRICA OR IN ENGLAND. LIKE GREEK ARMAMENT CAPTURES IN THE ALBANIAN CAMPAIGN, THOSE LOST WEAPONS DEAL ITALY A DOUBLE BLOW. THEY NOT ONLY DECREASE HER OWN POWERS OF DEFENSE; BUT AUGMENT THE OFFENSIVE OPERATIONS OF HER FOES.

IT IS REASONABLE TO SUPPOSE THAT THE BRITISH IN AFRICA NOW HAVE AVAILABLE FROM ITALIAN SOURCES FIGHTING EQUIPMENT FOR 50,000 TO 100,000 OR EVEN MORE ETHIOPIAN TRIBESMEN. HAD THE LION OF JUDA'S FORCES POSSESSED SUCH ARMAMENT IN 1936, THE ITALIAN CONQUEST OF ETHIOPIA MIGHT HAVE BEEN AVERTED.

BRITISH CAPTURES OF USABLE ITALIAN TANKS AND OTHER MOTORIZED EQUIPMENT IN NORTH AFRICA HAVE BEEN STRESSED. MECHANIZED EQUIPMENT WILL PLAY A LESS IMPORTANT PART IN EAST AFRICAN GUERRILLA CAMPAIGNING THAN IN NORTH AFRICA EXCEPT AS TO TRANSPORTATION OF WEAPONS AND AMMUNITION FROM WEST TO EAST.

JAN 26 1941

THERE ARE NO CERTAIN ESTIMATES OF THE TOTAL ITALIAN FORCE THINL SPREAD THROUGH ERITREA, ETHIOPIA, BRITISH AND ITALIAN SOMALILAND. IT CANNOT BE LARGE AND IT HAS BEEN CUT OFF FROM ITALY FOR SEVEN MONTHS, EVEN MORE THAN THE LIBYAN ARMY.

ITALIAN RETIREMENT FROM THE ANGLO-EGYPTIAN SUDAN SOME 60 MILES INTO ERITREA UNDER BRITISH PRESSURE IS AN ATTEMPT NOT ONLY TO PROTECT RAIL HEADS BUT TO SHORTEN OVER-EXTENDED LINES. THERE WAS GRAVE MENACE OF AN ETHIOPIAN FLANKING ATTACK IF THAT FORCE HAD NOT BEEN QUICKLY WITHDRAWN.

ITALIAN EVACUATION OF BRITISH SOMALILAND AND MUCH OF ERITREA TO CONCENTRATE FORCES IN A FEW DEFENSIBLE CENTERS IN EAST AFRICA WOULD CAUSE LITTLE SURPRISE. ITALIAN ERITREA, FLANKING THE RED SEA APPROACH TO THE SUEZ CANAL, SEEMS A CERTAIN NEXT BRITISH MAJOR OBJECTIVE IN AFRICA.

THE WAR TODAY

BY DEWITT MACKENZIE

JAN 26 1941

BRITAIN'S SUDDEN RUSH OF PREPARATIONS TO GET THE COUNTRY SET FOR A POSSIBLE NAZI ATTEMPT AT INVASION THIS SPRING IS AN INTERESTING IF INDIRECT COMMENTARY ON COLONEL LINDBERGH'S TESTIMONY IN WASHINGTON THAT HE DIDN'T BELIEVE GERMANY COULD INVADE ENGLAND UNLESS THE LATTER HAD SUFFERED INTERNAL COLLAPSE.

CERTAINLY MANY NEUTRAL EXPERTS HOLD THE CHANCES OF A SUCCESSFUL INVASION NOT TO BE BRIGHT, UNLESS BRITAIN PREVIOUSLY HAS BEEN BOMBED INTO INSENSIBILITY. HOWEVER, COLLAPSE OR NO COLLAPSE, HERR HITLER HAS GIVEN PLENTY OF INDICATIONS THAT HE INTENDS TO MAKE THIS RISKY GAMBLE IF HE CAN FIND AN OPENING, AND THE BRITONS APPARENTLY BELIEVE HIM.

ONLY BY KNOCKING OUT ENGLAND HERSELF IS THE FUEHRER LIKELY TO WIN THE WAR. INVASION-MINDED LONDON, RECOGNIZING THAT IF AND WHEN THIS ASSAULT COMES IT WILL REPRESENT THE CRUCIAL HOUR OF THE CONFLICT, IS LOOKING FOR THE GREATEST MILITARY ATTACK EVER MADE BY ANYNATION.

A DISQUIETING ASPECT OF THIS PREPAREDNESS CAMPAIGN IS THE STRESS WHICH THE GOVERNMENT IS LAYING ON THE PROVISION OF GAS-MASKS FOR CIVILIANS. MANUFACTURERS OF MASKS ARE SAID TO HAVE BEEN ASKED TO SPEED UP THEIR OUTPUT.

I SHOULD SAY THIS REPRESENTS WISE PRECAUTION RATHER THAN DEFINITE INFORMATION THAT THE GERMANS INTEND TO EMPLOY GAS. THUS FAR BOTH SIDES HAVE STUDIOUSLY AVOIDED THIS TERRIBLE CHEMICAL WEAPON, EITHER FOR HUMANITARIAN REASONS OR BECAUSE OF FEAR OF REPRISALS. HOWEVER, EACH IS FULLY PREPARED TO USE IT IF THE OTHER STARTS THE GAME.

THE HORRORS OF DRENCHING A GREAT CITY WITH POISON GAS NEED NO DEVELOPMENT IN THIS COLUMN.

PROBABLY NEITHER SIDE REALLY EXPECTS THAT GAS WILL BE BROUGHT INTO PLAY. STILL, THE FEAR UNDOUBTEDLY EXISTS THAT IT MIGHT BE RESORTED TO AS AN ACT OF DESPERATION.

COLONEL LINDBERGH ALSO SAID HE DIDN'T "THINK IT WOULD BE POSSIBLE FOR ENGLAND TO INVADE THE CONTINENT AND WIN THE WAR." HE ADDED:

"I THINK IT WOULD BE IMPOSSIBLE THAT ENGLAND AND THE UNITED STATES COULD INVADE THE CONTINENT TOGETHER UNLESS AN INTERNAL COLLAPSE CAME."

A130

JAN 26 1941

IT IS PRECISELY SUCH A COLLAPSE WITHIN GERMANY THAT THE BRITISH AND THEIR ALLIES ARE BANKING ON. AS A MATTER OF FACT THERE IS NOTHING VERY STRANGE ABOUT THAT, SINCE ONE RATHER EXPECTS WARS TO BE WON BY INTERNAL COLLAPSE, PROBABLY COUPLED WITH MILITARY ACTION. THAT'S THE WAY THE WORLD WAR WAS WON--AND MANY OTHER WARS, FROM THE BEGINNIN OF HISTORY.

I HEARD A FAMOUS BRITISH SOLDIER SAY THE OTHER DAY THAT THIS WAR WOULD BE WON AS THE RESULT OF THE COLLAPSE OF GERMAN CIVILIAN MORALE DUE TO PRIVATION. HE WAS FIGURING ON THE EFFICIENCY OF THE BRITISH NAVAL BLOCKADE, WHICH LONG HAS HAD A STRANGLE-HOLD ON THE CONTINENT.

COLONEL LINDBERGH SAID HE DOUBTED THAT GERMANY COULD BE STARVED INTO SUBMISSION BY THE BLOCKADE. THAT REMAINS TO BE SEEN, OF COURSE, BUT IN THIS CONNECTION IT IS INTERESTING TO RECALL THE RECENT STATEMENT BY THE WASHINGTON DEPARTMENT OF AGRICULTURE REGARDING THE EFFECTS OF THE BLOCKADE ON ITALY. SAID THE REPORT:

"THIS BLOCKADE IS SO EFFECTIVE IN STOPPING THE FLOW OF SUPPLIES NEEDED BY ITALY THAT IT HAS MORE SEVERELY DISORGANIZED THE ITALIAN ECONOMIC STRUCTURE THAN ANYTHING ELSE THE WAR HAS ACCOMPLISHED."

ITALY ISN'T GERMANY, THOUGH, AND IF COLONEL LINDBERGH'S ESTIMATE IS RIGHT, THEN THE ALLIED CHANCES ARE INDEED SLIM. EVER SINCE THE START OF THE WAR BRITAIN HAS PLACED HER MAIN RELIANCE ON STRANGULATION OF THE NAZIS. THE COLONEL'S STATEMENT THEREFORE MUS HAVE BEEN RECEIVED WITH MIXED EMOTIONS BY THE MILITARY EXPERTS OF BRITAIN.

CIVILIAN MORALE IS ONE OF THOSE THINGS WHICH CANNOT BE FIGURED IN ADVANCE. THERE'S A LIMIT TO WHAT EVEN THE STURDIEST MORALE CAN STAND. WE SAW THAT IN THE WORLD WAR. ONE DAY THE GERMANS WERE WHIPPING THE WORLD, AND A FEW WEEKS LATER MORALE BEHIND THE LINES SNAPPED LIKE A CLAY PIPE-STEM.

THAT CAN HAPPEN TO THE BRAVEST OF PEOPLE. THE NAZIS RECOGNIZE EQUALLY WITH THE BRITISH, AS WITNESS THE TERRIFIC GERMAN AIR ATT WHICH HAVE HAD AS AN IMPORTANT PART OF THEIR PURPOSE THE SMASHING OF CIVILIAN MORALE.

SYMPATHY SPLURGE CREATES NEW WAR RELIEF AGENCY EVERY SECOND DAY.

294 AGENCIES GET WAR RELIEF GIFTS

--

BY W.B.RAGSDALE

JAN 26 1941

(ADVANCE)--WASHINGTON,JAN 25-(AP)-IN A SPLURGE OF SYMPATHY FOR THE VICTIMS OF WARS ABROAD, AMERICANS HAVE GIVEN $51,700,000 TO 294 SEPARATE AGENCIES SINCE THE FORCES OF ADOLF HITLER BEGAN MARCHING LESS THAN A YEAR AND A HALF AGO.

OF THIS, $25,000,000 HAS GONE TO 293 AGENCIES, ALL BUT TEN OF WHICH HAVE MUSHROOMED IN THE FETID ATMOSPHERE OF WAR DISTRESS. THE OTHER $26,700,000 WENT TO THE AMERICAN RED CROSS WHICH WAS AN OLD AND REVERED RELIEF INSTITUTION WHEN MR.HITLER WAS A NONENTITY.

ABOUT $36,000,000 OF MONEY AND GOODS HAVE BEEN SENT TO THE SICK AND HUNGRY AND HOMELESS OF THE WAR, $20,000,000 BY THE RED CROSS AND THE REMAINDER BY THE WIDE SCATTERING OF OTHER AGENCIES WHICH RANGES ALL THE WAY FROM "THE SEVENTH COLUMN,INC.," OF WEST FAIRLEE,VT., (FUNDS RECEIVED, NONE; FUNDS SPENT, NONE; UNEXPENDED BALANCE, NONE; ESTIMATED VALUE OF CONTRIBUTIONS IN KIND,N NONE) TO THE BRITISH WAR RELIEF FUND WHICH HAS HANDLED SEVERAL MILLION DOLLARS OF CONTRIBUTIONS.

SINCE THE WAR STARTED, AMERICANS HAVE CREATED 283 AGENCIES TO HELP WAR SUFFERERS AND HAVE CONTRIBUTED, OR ARRANGED TO CONTRIBUTE THROUGH 17 OTHER RELIGIOUS OR BENEFICENT ORGANIZATIONS THAT WERE ALREADY IN EXISTENCE. SEVERAL OF THE AGENCIES CREATED WERE PROMPTLY FORGOTTEN. LIKE THE SEVENTH COLUMN OF WEST FAIRLEE OR THE FRENCH WAR RELIEF FUND OF NEVADA OR THE POLISH RELIEF COMMITTEE OF COLUMBIA COUNTY, NEW YORK, THE STATE DEPARTMENT LISTS THE AMOUNT OF THEIR CONTRIBUTIONS AND RELIEF WORK DONE AT ZERO.

IN NUMBER OF AGENCIES, POLAND HAS HAD MORE VOLUNTEER HELPERS IN THE UNITED STATES THAN ANY OTHER NATION. IT HAS 106 AGENCIES ROUNDING UP GOODS FOR THE SORELY STRICKEN VICTIMS OF THAT FIRST AREA OF BLOODY CONQUEST. NEXT COMES ENGLAND WIHH 90 SEPARATE AGENCIES FUNCTIONING IN ITS BEHALF, SOME OF THEM ORGANIZATIONS THAT WERE CREATED BEFORE THE FALL OF FRANCE TO AID THE ALLIES. FIFTY-FOUR AGENCIES STILL ARE TRYING TO BE HELPFUL TO FRANCE.

FIFTEEN DIFFERENT AGENCIES ARE WORKING FOR THE AID OF THE JEWS WHO HAVE BEEN THE ESPECIAL VICTIMS OF THE WAR. FOUR ARE TRYING TO HELP BELGIUM. TWO, EACH, ARE PLUGGING AWAY FOR NORWAY AND DENMARK, CZECHO-SLOVAKIA, THE NETHERLANDS, GREECE.

CONTRIBUTIONS HAVE RANGED ALL THE WAY FROM COMIC STRIPS TO AMBULANCES AND BOMBERS. AND THE DRIVES TO GET THEM HAVE PROMOTED A RASH OF SOCIETIES, MANY OF WHICH, OFFICIALS SAY, DUPLICATE IN A LESS EFFICIENT MANNER THE SERVICES OF THE RED CROSS. THE RED CROSS, ITSELF, IS CAREFUL NOT TO SAY ANYTHING LIKE THIS. LONG AGO, HOWEVER, A CONGRESSIONAL COMMITTEE WAS TOLD OF THE CONFUSION THAT RESULTED FROM THE EFFORTS OF A DOZEN OR MORE AGENCIES, EACH EAGER TO BE HELPFUL, TO NEGOTIATE SEPARATELY FOR ADMISSION TO A FOREIGN LAND TO DO RELIEF WORK.

THE NEEDS OF EUROPE THIS WINTER ARE READILY APPARENT. IN NORMAL TIMES EUROPE IMPORTS 15 PERCENT OF ITS FOOD. LAST YEAR'S CROPS WERE CUT FAR BELOW NORMAL BY A LATE SPRING, HEAVY RAINS, A POOR HARVEST, MARCHING SOLDIERS, FIGHTING, MOVING CIVILIANS AND THE LOOTING OF CAPTURED TERRITORIES. HERBERT HOOVER HAS ESTIMATED THAT 18,000,000 WILL BE WITHOUT FOOD IN FINLAND, POLAND, NORWAY, BELGIUM AND THE NETHERLANDS BEFORE THE WINTER IS OVER.

IN SPAIN, A NON-FIGHTING NATION AT THE MOMENT, BUT ONE RAVAGED BY YEARS OF CIVIL WAR, RETURNING TRAVELERS SAY THE POOR FIGHT AT RESTAURANT DOORS FOR THE PRIVILEGE OF RETRIEVING SCRAPS LEFT BY DINERS. IN BELGIUM, THE BREAD RATION IS EIGHT OUNCES A DAY AND THE MEAT TWO OUNCES, INCLUDING BONE. IN FRANCE THE AVERAGE MEAL IS FOUR OUNCES OF BREAD, THREE OF MEAT, HALF AN OUNCE OF FAT. ENGLAND, THOUGH MUCH LESS AFFECTED THAN THE CONTINENT AT WHICH ITS BLOCKADE IS AIMED, IS TRIMMING NON-ESSENTIALS OUT OF THE DIET TO CONSERVE SHIPPING SPACE. EVEN PORTUGAL AND GREECE HAVE NONE TOO MUCH FOOD. SOUTHEASTERN EUROPE IS EATING STALE BLACK BREAD AND PAYING EXORBITANT PRICES FOR ALL FOODS. THE FOOD ALLOWANCE IN HUNGARY HAS BEEN HALVED. SKYROCKETING PRICES HAVE ALREADY CAUSED MINOR FOOD RIOTS IN ROUMANIA. HOLLAND, NORWAY AND DENMARK ARE BEING DRAINED OF THEIR LIVESTOCK AND POULTRY. FINLAND FACES A SHORTAGE OF FATS.

AND THESE ARE ONLY RANDOM GLIMPSES OF THE MOST PRESSING EUROPEAN RELIEF PROBLEM, A PROBLEM THAT IS VASTLY COMPLICATED BY THE HESTIANCY OF ENGLAND TO LIFT THE FOOD BLOCKADE IT HAS LAID DOWN AGAINST EUROPE. EMBARGO ADVOCATES SAY THAT IF IT BE LIFTED, THE FOOD MIGHT BE DIVERTED TO GERMANY, THUS PROLONGING THE WAR AND GIVING AID INDIRECTLY TO BRITAIN'S ENEMY. RELIEF ADVOCATES ARGUE THAT A WINTER OF STARVATION WILL BREED IN EUROPE UNDYING HATREDS FOR THE DEMOCRACIES.

YET, THE BARRIERS ARE BEING LIFTED TO ALLOW CERTAIN FORMS OF AID TO GO THROUGH. TWO RED CROSS SHIPS ARE NOW ON THE HIGH SEAS OR UNLOADING SUPPLIES IN EUROPE FOR GREECE AND FRANCE.

THAT FOR GREECE SAILED TEN DAYS AGO BEARING FOODSTUFFS, MEDICAL SUPPLIES, CLOTHING, AMBULANCES AND HOSPITAL TRUCKS. IT WAS THE SS KASSANDRA LOULOUDIS.

THE SS COLD HARBOR OF THE UNITED STATES LINES HAS JUST DEPARTED FROM BALTIMORE WITH FOODS AND MEDICINES FOR SPAIN AND UNOCCUPIED FRANCE.

JAN 26 1941

IT CARRIES FOR SPAIN WHOLE WHEAT FLOUR, POWDERED WHOLE MILK AND EVAPORATED AND CONDENSED MILK. FOR FRANCE, IT CARRIES POWDERED, EVAPORATED AND CONDENSED MILK, CHILDREN'S CLOTHING, DRUGS AND VITAMIN CONCENTRATES. ALSO TUCKED AWAY IN ITS HOLDS WERE GIFT BOXES FOR 10,000 ENGLISH, POLISH, FRENCH AND BELGIAN SOLDIERS IN GERMAN PRISON CAMPS.

THESE ARE ONLY FAIR SIZED SAMPLES OF THE WORK THAT IS BEING DONE. FIVE COMPLETE FIELD HOSPITALS ARE BEING ASSEMBLED BY THE GREEK WAR RELIEF ASSOCIATION FOR SHIPMENT TO GREECE. THE RED CROSS HAD ALREADY SENT ONE MILLION-DOLLAR SHIP LOAD OF SUPPLIES TO FRANCE IN ADDITION TO THE LESS SPECTACULAR STEADY STREAM OF MATERIALS IT HAS SENT ON OTHER SHIPS.

IT HAS BEEN GIVEN FREE CARGO SPACE ON 150 SHIPS, HAS MADE 350

30.24— 7175

DIFFERENT SHIPMENTS, ONLY SIX OF WHICH HAVE BEEN LOST. SPACE HAS FREQUENTLY BEEN GIVEN ON CLIPPER PLANES BOTH TO EUROPE AND CHINA FOR EMERGENCY SHIPMENTS OF MEDICINES, VACCINES, TOXOIDS AND VITAMIN TABLETS.

THE CHIEF ITEMS THAT ARE BEING SENT, BOTH BY THE RED CROSS AND BY THE VARIOUS OTHER AGENCIES ARE CLOTHING, BLANKETS AND BEDDING FOR HOSPITALS AND CIVILIANS; MEDICAL, SURGICAL AND HOSPITAL SUPPLIES; FOODSTUFFS; AND AMBULANCES AND AUTOMOTIVE EQUIPMENT.

MANY OF THE SPECIAL AGENCIES THAT HAVE BEEN CREATED ENDEAVOR TO DEAL WITH ESPECIAL NEEDS. THEY HELP GERMAN WAR PRISONERS IN CANADA, FRENCH ARTISTS, FORMER RUSSIAN NAVAL OFFICERS, PROVIDE BOOKS FOR BRITISH SAILORS, GIVE ESPECIAL AID TO SCOTS IN DISTRESS, HELP THE NEEDY OF EVANGELICAL CHURCHES, CHILDREN OF MOBILIZED MEN, PROVIDE FOSTER PARENTS FOR WAR CHILDREN, SUPPLY TOBACCO AND CIGARETTES.

THERE ARE CLUBS WHERE WOMEN--BY THE THOUSANDS--KNIT SOCKS AND SWEATERS. THERE ARE COMMITTEES AND FEDERATIONS AND ASSOCIATIONS, TO SAVE CHILDREN, TO FEED POLES, TO SHARE SMOKES. THERE IS AN ANZAC WAR RELIEF FUND FOR AUSTRALIANS AND NEW ZEALANDERS, AN ORGANIZATION OF AMERICAN WAR GODMOTHERS, AN ASSOCIATION OF FORMER JUNIORS IN FRANCE OF SMITH COLLEGE, A COMMITTEE OF FRENCH AMERICAN WIVES AND A FUND FOR RELIEF OF MEN OF LETTERS AND SCIENTISTS OF RUSSIA.

SIX DIFFERENT AGENCIES IN FAIRLY WELL SCATTERED SECTIONS OF THE COUNTRY ARE COLLECTING FUNDS FOR THE AID OF GERMANS IN WAR PRISON CAMPS OR ELSEWHERE. ONE IS RAISING FUNDS FOR ITALY. EARLY IN THE WAR THE RED CROSS, EVER MINDFUL OF ITS OWN NEUTRALITY AS AN AGENCY OF MERCY, ASKED THE GERMAN GOVERNMENT IF ITS SERVICES WERE NEEDED AND WAS TOLD "NO." SINCE THEN, ITS SERVICES HAVE BEEN GOING TO THE STRICKEN OF OTHER LANDS.

THE RED CROSS, BACKED BY LONG EXPERIENCE, AND WITH A HIGHLY TRAINED STAFF, AIDED BY HELPERS IN EVERY COMMUNITY OF THE LAND, HAS BEEN ABLE TO WHITTLE DOWN ITS DISTRIBUTION COSTS TO SOMETHING LIKE ONE DOLLAR OF EXPENSE FOR EVERY FORTY DOLLARS COLLECTED AND USED FOR RELIEF.

JAN 26 1941

LACKING A PERMANENT STAFF AND THE SUPPORT OF A NETWORK OF COMMUNITY ORGANIZATIONS, THE OTHER AGENCIES HAVE NOT MADE OUT THIS WELL. THEY HAVE HAD TO HIRE PROMOTION MEN, OFFICE MANAGERS, CLERICAL HELP, PAY FOR PUBLICITY, PARADES, BENEFITS, PARTIES AND BALLS.

FOR EACH $14.90 OF GOODS AND MONEY SENT ABROAD, $1.69 HAS STAYED AT HOME FOR ADMINISTRATION, PUBLICITY AND COLLECTION EXPENSES OF ONE KIND OR ANOTHER. A FEW HAVE HAD NO EXPENSES OF THIS KIND. SOME HAVE HAD LESS THAN THE $1.69 AVERAGE, SOME MORE.

ONE AGENCY, FOR INSTANCE, COLLECTED $3,115 FOR RELIEF, HAD $2,580.11 OF EXPENSES AND HAS SENT NO FUNDS TO THE STRICKEN IN ENGLAND, FRANCE, NORWAY, POLAND, BELGIUM, LUXEMBURG AND THE NETHERLANDS WHICH IT WAS SUPPOSED TO ASSIST. IT STILL HAS $534.89 KICKING AROUND IN ITS TREASURY. ANOTHER AGENCY SPENT $2.85 AT HOME FOR EACH $1.92 IT MANAGED TO SAVE FOR THE STRICKEN.

COLLECTION EXPENSES FOR MANY OF THE OTHERS HAVE BEEN HIGH. IT APPARENTLY COSTS MONEY TO ROUND UP THE FASHIONABLE FOR BINGO OR GAMBLING PARTIES, FOR AUTOGRAPH SALES, STRIP TEASE PARTIES, OR EVEN OLD FASHIONED BALLS AT WHICH PEOPLE DANCE.

A FEW OF THE COLLECTION AGENCIES HAVE MANAGED TO GET ALONG WITHOUT ANY PROMOTION OR MANAGEMENT EXPENSES. NOTABLE AMONG THESE HAS BEEN THE GREEK WAR RELIEF ASSOCIATION WHICH HAS COLLECTED MORE THAN $116,000 AT NO COST. IT IS COOPERATING WITH THE RED CROSS TO PREVENT A DUPLICATION OF EFFORT.

BRITISH WAR RELIEF ASSOCIATION COSTS, TOO, HAVE RUN WELL UNDER THE AVERAGE. THAT FOR THE NEW YORK BRANCH WAS $1.68 FOR EACH $21.68 COLLECTED. THE FIGURES VARY FROM CITY TO CITY. BUNDLES FOR BRITAIN HAS RUN AT THE RATE OF $1.28 OF COST FOR EACH $9.55 COLLECTED.

(SPECIAL NEWS SERVICE ADVANCE FOR AMS OF SUNDAY, JAN.26)

BY JACK CULMER

(ADVANCE) SOMEWHERE-IN-ENGLAND, JAN.25 (AP)--ON THIS MUCH ATTACKED ISLAND THE ONLY CHILDREN OF KING GEORGE AND QUEEN ELIZABETH ARE LIVING WARTIME LIVES TODAY WHICH ARE DESIGNED AS PATTERNS FOR THE GREAT MASS OF CHILDREN CAUGHT IN THIS WAR.

THAT EXPLANATION IS GIVEN FOR THE FACT THAT THE PRINCESSES--14-YEAR-OLD ELIZABETH AND 10-YEAR-OLD MARGARET--SPENT THE FIRST FOUR MONTHS OF THE WAR HIDDEN LIKE BABES IN THE WOOD IN A SMALL GRANITE HOUSE IN A LONELY SCOTTISH GLEN.

SINCE JANUARY, 1940 THEY HAVE BEEN LIVING SOMEWHERE IN THE SOUTH OF ENGLAND AND THEY ARE STILL "EVACUEES" IN THIS REPUTEDLY "SAFE" AREA.

ALSO SINCE THE TIME THEY MOVED BACK TO ENGLAND THE MOVEMENTS OF THE PRINCESSES HAVE BEEN CHRONICLED AT LEAST A DAY LATE OR MORE DESPITE THE FACT THAT NEWSPAPERS HAVE FREQUENTLY REPORTED THAT THEY HAD BEEN WORKING OR PLAYING IN THE WINDSOR CASTLE AREA ABOUT 20 MILES WEST OF LONDON.

THE TWO LITTLE GIRLS WERE FIRST TOLD ABOUT THE WAR IN NOVEMBER, 1939 WHEN THE QUEEN ELIZABETH JOURNEYED TO SCOTLAND TO SEE THEM. AND NOW THEY ARE DEEP IN MANY WARTIME ACTIVITIES AND THE BRITISH PRESS JUDICIOUSLY ANNOUANCES AT FREQUENT INTERVALS THE PART THEY ARE PLAYING TO AID VARIOUS WELFARE ORGANIZATIONS.

BUT, THE BRITISH PICTURE HAS CHANGED CONSIDERABLY EVEN FOR ELIZABETH AND MARGARET IN TWELVE MONTHS. ON CHRISTMAS, 1939 THEY SENT GIFTS--IT WAS ELIZABETH'S IDEA--TO MADAME ALBERT LEBRUN FOR FRENCH CHILDREN EVACUATED FROM PARIS AND OTHER CITIES TO THE FRENCH COUNTRY-SIDE. THEY DIDN'T REPEAT THE GIFTS LAST YEAR NOR DID THEY FOLLOW THE 1939 PRACTICE OF COMING TO LONDON FOR THEIR CHRISTMAS SHOPPING.

THE ROYAL CHRISTMAS IN 1940 WAS THE QUIETEST YULETIDE PARTY THE PRINCESSES HAD EVER HAD AND WAS SPENT AT WINDSOR INSTEAD OF AT THE USUAL CELEBRATION SETTING, AT SANDRINGHAM HOUSE, KING GEORGE'S HOME IN NORFOLK. THE ONLY GUESTS WERE THE DUKE AND DUCHESS OF KENT AND THEIR TWO CHILDREN. THEY HAD A SMALLER CHRISTMAS TREE THAN USUAL AND

ALTHOUGH THE CHILDREN EXCHANGED PRESENTS THE ADULTS CONFINED THEIR PRESENT GIVING TO "TOKEN GIFTS."

ONE DAY DURING CHRISTMAS WEEK PRINCESS ELIZABETH PLAYED THE MADONNA AND PRINCESS MARGARET PLAYED AN ANGEL IN AN ANCIENT NATIVITY PLAY WHICH WAS GIVEN IN THE VILLAGE HALL WITH WORKING CLASS LONDON EVACUEES COMPLETING THE CAST.

"THE QUEEN LOOKED AS PROUD AS ANY OF US WHEN HER DAUGHTER GOT THROUGH HER PART WITHOUT ONE MISTAKE," ONE LONDON EAST (TENEMENT NEIGHBORHOOD) PARENT COMMENTED.

HOWEVER,THIS WASN'T THE PRINCESSES' FIRST EXPERIMENT IN AMATEUR THEATRICALS. IN JULY,1940 THEY TAP DANCED,SANG,RECITED AND PLAYED THE PIANO IN A VILLAGE CONCERT WHICH QUEEN ELIZABETH HERSELF ORGANIZED TO AID WAR CHARITIES.

JAN.26 1941

BOTH PRINCESSES PLAYED IN A BALLET NUMBER BASED ON "AN APPLE FOR THE TEACHER" AND THE QUEEN WAS SO PLEASED THAT SHE ORDERED A REPEAT "COMMAND PERFORMANCE".

EARLIER IN THE SAME MONTH THERE WAS A RUMOR THAT THE PRINCESSES HAD GONE OR WERE GOING TO CANADA OR THE UNITED STATES. BUT,THIS WAS OFFICIALLY DENIED AND THE KING'S VIEW WAS REPORTED AS "WE PREFER TO SHARE WHATEVER FAMILY PERILS THERE MAY BE WITH PARENTS IN THIS COUNTRY." THE GROWING THREAT OF INVASION FAILED TO SHIFT THE KING'S ATTITUDE DESPITE "PRESSURE FROM INFLUENTIAL QUARTERS."

ONE NEWSPAPER GLEEFULLY COUPLED THE DENIAL WITH CRITICISMS OF "THE GENERAL EXODUS OF CHILDREN OF CABINET MINISTERS AND WEALTHY ARISTOCRATS!"

THE PRINCESSES PARTICIPATE IN THE ACTIVITIES OF A GIRL SCOUT TROOP AND ELIZABETH,WHO IS A SECTION LEADER,ONCE INVITED TWELVE GIRLS--ALL FROM A LONDON SLUM AREA OF STEPNEY--ALONG TO TEA. THEIR GUESTS ROMPED WITH DOOKIE AND JANE,THEIR TWO PET WELSH CORGIS AND LOOKED OVER THE MINATURE HOUSE THE PEOPLE OF WALES GAVE ELIZABETH AS A PRESENT ON HER EIGHTH BIRTHDAY.

JAN 26 194

ROSIE TURNER,A 12-YEAR-OLD BOILER MAKER'S DAUGHTER WAS APPARENTLY MOST IMPRESSED BY THE LIVRIED FOOTMEN WHO SERVED THEM TEA FOR SHE HESITATED TO TAKE A CUP,SAYING,"I'M MORE USED TO RUNNING ERRANDS FOR OTHER PEOPLE."

ELIZABETH'S MOST DRAMATIC ~~MOM~~ EXPERIENCE IN 1940 WAS THE BROADCAST SHE MADE IN NOVEMBER FROM AN UNDERGROUND STUDIO IN THE COUNTRY TO BRITISH CHILDREN.

"I CAN TRUTHFULLY SAY TO YOU,"SHE SAID,"THAT ALL ~~HER~~ WE CHILDREN AT HOME ARE FULL OF CHEERFULNESS AND COURAGE ."

THE PRESS UNANIMOUSLY LAUDED THE BROADCAST AND CALLED HER RADIO VOICE A "LIGHTER,HIGHER EDITION OF THE QUEEN'S."

ELIZABETH IS NOW BUSY ON A 1941 DIARY,THE FIFTH SHE HAS KEPT SINCE ~~XXXX~~ THE KING STARTED THE HABIT BY GIVING HER A FIRST DIARY BOUND IN BLUE LEATHER. MANY OF ~~HER~~ THE ENTRIES ARE ILLUSTRATED WITH HER OWN PEN AND PENCIL DRAWINGS.

THE DIARY KEEPING IS PART OF THE STRICT,PERSONAL TRAINING ~~OF~~ AND DOMESTIC DISCIPLINE FOR THE HEIR PRESUMTIVE WHICH THE WAR HAS NOT BEEN ALLOWED TO INTERRUPT.

THE GIRLS ARE STUDYING HISTORY,FOREIGN RELATIONS,COOKING, SEWING,SINGING,PIANO AND LANGUAGES. BEFORE THE WAR THEY STUDIED GERMAN,BUT THAT HAS NOW BEEN REPLACED BY SPANISH. MARGARET,THE YOUNGER, IS ALSO STUDYING COOKING AND SEVERAL OF HER MINCE PIES HAVE BEEN "SET BEFORE THE KING."

MOST OF THE GIRLS' SPARE TIME THESE DAYS IS SPENT IN KNITTING SCARVES AND SWEATERS FOR SAILORS,SOLDIERS AND AIRMEN.

BOTH ARE NOW HIGHLY WAR CONSCIOUS SINCE THEY HAVE SEEN BOMB CRATERS AND THE REMAINS OF GERMAN MESSERSCHMITT PLANES WHICH WERE SHOT DOWN.

THE WAR HASN'T STOPPED ELIZABETH'S FAVORITE HOBBY OF HOME MOVIES AND SHE MADE MANY PICTURES OF HER FATHER,MOTHER AND SISTER RIDING AND WALKING WHEN MARGARET'S TENTH BIRTHDAY WAS CELEBRATED LAST AUGUST. ON THAT OCCASION THE KING AND QUEEN TOOK THEIR DAUGHTERS AND SIX GIRL GUESTS FOR A FAMILY PICNIC. BECAUSE OF FOOD RESTRICTIONS A SPONGE CAKE WAS SUBSTITUTED FOR THE PEACETIME ICED BIRTHDAY CAKE.

THE REPORTS OF LAST YEAR THAT ELIZABETH WOULD BE APPOINTED HONORARY COLONEL OF A BRITISH REGIMENT AND ALSO WOULD BE GIVEN SOME HONORARY NAVAL RANK WEREN'T CONFIRMED,ALTHOUGH A CUSTOMARY WARTIME MEASURE IS TO LINK THE HEIR TO THE THRONE WITH THE FIGHTING SERVICES.

SOME OF THE PRINCESSES' WAR WORK XXX IS BEING DONE AS GIRL SCOUTS AND MARGARET WAS THE FIRST CONTRIBUTOR TO A Y.M.C.A. FUND TO BUY MOBILE CANTEENS AND RECREATION HUTS. AND BOTH GIRLS HEADED A WAR SAVINGS DRIVE. ELIZABETH BOUGHT THE FIRST FIVE POUND STERLING DEFENSE BOND XXXX AND MARGARET BOUGHT THE FIRST OF A NEW ISSUE OF XXX WAR SAVINGS CERTIFICATES.

THE PRINCESSES HAVE NEVER REVEALED WHAT REPLY THEY SENT TO AN UNIDENTIFIED 11-YEAR-OLD READING,PA.,GIRL NAMED ELIZABETH WHO SENT ONE DOLLAR TO ELIZABETH IN DECEMBER,1939 WITH A LETTER SAYING "GET YOUR MOTHER AND FATHER TO LET YOU COME OVER HERE TO THIS COUNTRY WHERE IT IS SAFE. WE HAVE A BIG HOUSE AND YOU COULD STAY WITH US."

Only One Bomb Dropped By Single Nazi Plane Over All England

Trawler Crew Shoots Junkers 88 Down In North Sea Fight

[By the Associated Press]

London, Jan. 26—Free from German raiders for six nights, London went into the seventh tonight with the feeling commonly expressed that "Hitler is up to no good," possibly a grand-slam attack.

There was virtually no aerial activity over Britain during daylight. A single Nazi plane dropped a bomb on the northeast coast without causing damage or casualties. The crew of the trawler Galvani shot down a Junkers 88 when the dive bomber attacked it in the North Sea off the Norfolk coast.

"Like Coming Home"

The bomber's pilot, one of four Nazis captured after the plane made a crash landing on the Norfolk coast, was quoted tonight by the Press Association as saying:

"We are in good, old England at last. It is like coming home."

The bomber had caught fire when hit by an anti-aircraft shell from the trawler. One crewman was wounded in the leg, another was burned about the forehead.

H. E. Thain, a shopkeeper, and a friend ran up to the wreck and stopped the flyers as they were making toward sea with a rubber boat. A fifth flyer escaped.

"Fine, Big Fellows"

"They were fine big fellows," Thain said. "The pilot, about 40, could speak English. They gave us their revolvers. While we were waiting for a military escort the officer chatted with us. He seemed to know the district better than we do ourselves.

"They had plenty of good cigarettes, some of which they gave us."

Thain said there was no indication from the German pilot as to his familiarity with the country.

Many Londoners appeared worrying over the meaning of the absence of raids in the last week, and most have their own private "explanations" for the lull—"the phony peace" as some newspapers call it.

Weather Credited

Many observers attributed the German silence to the bad continental weather, but it has been noted that the R. A. F. has been able to fly and bomb the Nazi submarine base at Lorient, France, Friday night.

Moreover, it is hard to believe that even the worst weather could ground the mass of the German air fleet, especially when the permanent Rhineland airdromes are equipped for blind flying and are only 400 miles from England.

Other Reasons Given

Other reasons advanced are that the plight of Italy and Rumania has drawn many German aces and ground crews from western Europe and those left behind cannot keep up the raid tempo of the past months. If the Germans were willing to gamble on stopping the victorious march of the British and imperial army of the Nile in Libya by sending large numbers of aircraft to help Italy, this might be the real reason for the inactivity.

Success of the anti-aircraft barrages and the British fighting planes may have made the Germans "night shy," but this generally is regarded as "wishful thinking."

R. A. F. Activity Cited

Still another explanation is that British long-range fighters and bombers may be keeping the Germans on the ground, but this would hardly explain the extent of the inactivity.

Then there is the talk that Germany is facing an oil shortage. This is an old story. Nevertheless the admitted "transfers of aircraft to oil-starved Italy" might hamper the raids on England.

Finally there is the belief in some quarters that Adolf Hitler is saving the air force for a grand assault, possibly accompanied by attempts at land invasion.

The British are agreed that Hitler is up to something.

2 British Freighters Claimed By Luftwaffe

Berlin, Jan. 26 (AP)—Two British merchantmen, each of about 4,000 tons, were claimed today as victims of Nazi air attack in widely separated raids on British shipping. In one attack a German reconnaissance plane was said to have passed over Harwich, on the English east coast, just as a convoy was leaving the harbor.

Four medium bombs were claimed to have scored direct hits on one steamer, the last causing a larger fire and the vessel was listed as apparently destroyed.

Bomber Sinks Ship

In another foray, about 300 miles west of Ireland, the high command said a long-distance bomber on reconnoitering patrol sank another merchant ship.

"On the British east coast," the communique added, "two merchant ships as well as war-vital facilities of a harbor were bombed. Last night combat planes successfully attacked airdromes in southwestern England."

Although it reported a torpedo plane attack on a German outpost boat, it said there were no British air attacks over German soil either by day or night Saturday.

Nazis Must Act Quickly, Dr. Butler Is Informed

New York, Jan. 26 (AP)—Dr. Nicholas Murray Butler said today a confidential report to him from abroad indicated that Germany would have to make an "early attempt to invade Great Britain in the hope of bringing the war to an end by an outstanding victory" if the present deadlock continued and efforts to develop Axis power in eastern Europe failed.

The statement by Butler, head of Columbia University, was issued through Carnegie Endowment for International Peace, of which he is president.

Quoting from the report, Dr. Butler said "there are many opponents of the Axis who do not believe that the entry of the United States in the war would be helpful, since it might easily cause a distribution of the American navy between the Atlantic and Pacific oceans and thereby decrease its effectiveness in protecting Great Britain from that blockade which might quickly reduce it to a state of want in respect both to foodstuffs and munitions of war."

BRITISH DRIVE FAR INTO EAST AFRICA

Troops Smash 60 Miles Into Eritrea To Imperil Agordat Rail Center

Wavell's Forces In Libya Battling Italians For Possession Of Derna

[By the Associated Press]

Cairo, Jan. 26—British soldiers pushing deeper into Italian Eritrea are within ten miles of the rail center of Agordat while, far to the north, British forces are fighting the Italians at Derna, Libya, it was reported tonight.

Military sources here said the British captured one hundred prisoners in the latest thrust toward Agordat, making 700 prisoners reported taken in the ten-day campaign which has seen the Italians fall back more than one hundred miles.

Agordat itself has little strategic importance, but, as one of the chief cities of Italy's oldest colony, its fall would have considerable effect on the natives of Eritrea and Ethiopia who are growing bolder every mile the British advance.

British Moving Rapidly

The British were said to be moving rapidly. Military sources declared that with the Italians still retreating there were no obstacles to taking Agordat.

The British high command officially reported its forces have captured and pushed beyond Biscia, twenty miles west of Agordat and sixty miles within Eritrea. Its communique briefly said a "further hundred prisoners" were taken in the East African offensive waged under "intensive support" from the R. A. F.

Reports from Kenya Colony said South African forces were taking the offensive against Italian Somaliland in addition to driving the Italians out of the northern part of the province and thrusting into Ethiopia.

Frontier Crossed

Details were scarce, but it was said the frontier had been crossed at a number of points, chiefly around El Wak, a border town which the Italians fled after a smashing British land and air raid a few weeks ago.

Besides the Eritrean action, the Middle East command's communique dismissed, with one sentence reporting progress, the other spurs of Britain's African campaign, including the advance in Libya.

In Libya, the communique said, British vanguards have made contact with Italian forces at the port of Derna, 175 miles inside the frontier from Egypt and 95 miles west of Tobruk, and "are being reinforced."

Clashes Around Derna

British sources said there had been clashes around Derna, which British armored cars first reached two days ago. Infantry and guns were said since to have arrived from Tobruk and to be supporting the action, but details were lacking here and authorities would say only that operations were progressing satisfactorily.

Derna and the surrounding area extending westward toward Bengasi and southward for about thirty miles is an area of fertility in the barren wastes of the Libyan Desert.

This was the area Premier Mussolini populated by mass immigration of Italian farmers—all of whom are reported removed from Derna town and district.

Valleys Cultivated

In the Derna area the desert gives way to a lofty, undulating plateau known as Gebel Akhdar (Green Mountains), whose valleys are developed in parts into farming land.

The presence of plentiful water and possible crops should help the British considerably in their advance, it was believed.

Military observers said they thought the Italians might attempt to make a stand somewhere on the plateau where the nature of the broken terrain favors defensive positions.

However, there are no indications reported thus far that Marshal Rodolfo Graziani is sending up troops to meet the British advance.

In addition to the coastal highway, there is a good road suitable for heavy motor traffic right through the plateau.

Rome Admits British Push West Of Tobruk

Rome, Jan. 26 (AP)—On the African war front, the high command acknowledged in a special war bulletin today that British soldiers were steadily hammering the Italians west of Tobruk, latest Libyan city to fall to the British.

Italian planes successfully attacked the British and Greeks in Africa, Albania and Greece itself, the high command reported in its regular communique. It said ten "enemy" planes were shot down to one Italian bomber.

The Italians said one bombing formation raided "military objectives at Salonika, Greece, hitting port works, gasoline depots, supply warehouses and the railway station. Vast fires have been started."

Two Planes Destroyed

Two "enemy" planes were destroyed and one bomber failed to return, the report said.

Italian planes are cooperating "effectively" with soldiers in the Libyan fighting, the communique added, "scatter-bombing and machine-gunning enemy troops and mechanized units."

It said four British planes were shot down in flames during an aerial engagement yesterday over Libya and four others were shot down in East Africa.

Sea Action Reported

One brief mention was made of a new sea action, the communique asserting that Italian naval units "bombarded enemy positions on the Greek-Albanian coast." Where the bombardment took place was not reported.

The Italians today backed up Nazi reports yesterday that three British warships were hit by heavy bombs in a German raid on the British Mediterranean fleet west of Crete.

Flyer Lost 2 Days And Nights In Desert After Sea Crash

Comrade, Lashed To Rubber Dinghy, Dies While Injured British Gunner Seeks In Vain For Aid

[Copyright by New York Times]

Cairo, Egypt, Jan. 26—After being tossed through the fuselage wall of a crashing bomber, swimming half a mile despite a head gash and a useless arm, and wandering for nearly two days and nights in the desert, a young Royal Air Force rear gunner was able today to tell the story on his hospital cot.

The bomber was hit by anti-aircraft fire during a raid on Tobruk, but completed the bombing and was headed home oversea before a starboard motor burst into flames and compelled a forced landing.

Swims Ashore And Faints

The warplane stalled and crashed, throwing the airman through the top and knocking him unconscious. Luckily, he fell on top of the fuselage and revived, perhaps, because his feet were in the water.

His fellow-airman was trying to launch their rubber dinghy when the aircraft sank. The gunner decided to swim ashore despite the heavy swell while his companion stayed with the overturned dinghy.

The gunner reached shore in an exhausted condition and fainted.

Comrade's Body Washed Ashore

On returning to consciousness he set out to get help, but after wandering for the remainder of the night he found himself back at the same spot. There he discovered the body of his companion lashed to the dinghy which, with fragments of the wrecked plane, had been washed ashore.

The gunner walked all next day, but found no assistance, although the territory was British-held. He spent the night in an abandoned hut and continued on next morning, although near collapse because he had had no food or water.

Finally he found a track which led to a road. Reaching the road, he was picked up and hospitalized.

WILLKIE LANDS IN LONDON IN HIGH SPIRITS

Promises To Do All He Can To Unite U. S. In Britain's Cause

Emphasizes He Is "Plain Mister" And His Survey Is Unofficial

[By the Associated Press]

London, Jan. 26—Wendell L. Willkie, showing the same exuberance as when he campaigned for the Presidency last fall, arrived in England today "to do all I can to unite the United States and to give England all the aid that is possible in its struggle for free men all over the world."

His spirits were so buoyant on the flight from Lisbon, Portugal, that he couldn't keep his seat. He paced up and down in the plane and even helped the navigators chart their course.

Falls Down In Eagerness

Finally, he was so eager to see England that he incautiously stood up in the plane and fell in the aisle when it alighted at a western port. Unhurt and just as full of energy as before, he picked himself up and vigorously brushed his suit—the one he was wearing when he left New York by clipper last Wednesday.

He carried a helmet which a friend had given him in New York. There was a reception committee on hand which included Commander C. R. Thompson and Thomas Brand, representing the British Government; Herschel Johnson, United States charge d'affaires in London, and Brig. Gen. Martin F. Scanlon and Commander N. R. Hitchcock, of the American Embassy.

Utmost Sympathy For England

"I am very glad to be in England for whose cause I have the utmost sympathy," Willkie said, "and for whom I am attempting to do all I can to unite the United States and to give England all the aid that is possible in its struggle for free men all over the world."

He spent twenty minutes at the airport before leaving on another plane for London. In that time he talked, answering many questions, but declining to make any further statement regarding the imminence of the arrival of further aid for Britain from the United States.

He said he expected to stay here about two weeks, and added he was "anxious" to see as much as possible in that time.

Smiles Over Roosevelt Letter

Reporters asked him about the letter President Roosevelt gave him to Prime Minister Winston Churchill. Willkie only smiled.

He said he had enjoyed the entire trip and "never felt better in my life."

He obligingly repeated his newsreel interview when is was drowned by the roar of planes.

"But I want to have a look around before saying anything more," he said, adding that he hoped his whirlwind tour of the country would include all the towns which have been attacked.

"I'm not worried about anything," he chuckled when asked if he was afraid of being caught in an invasion attempt.

Just "Plain Mister Willkie"

Before boarding the plane for London, Willkie observed:

"I am just Wendell Willkie—plain Mister Willkie, please. I have no official position here at all."

Someone asked him about press conferences, and he said:

"I came here to listen not to make speeches."

In a London interview, Willkie said: "I want to see as much as I can of English production and the social and economic life of the country."

He shrugged his shoulders and laughed, "I really don't know," when asked whether he would discuss with President Roosevelt at length his impressions of Britain.

Plans For Tour Incomplete

He said his arrangements for the tour of Britain were not yet fixed and that he would take time tonight in trying to reach some old friends in Britain. He said he had had little chance so far of comparing air-besieged London with the London he knew on his last visit, six or seven years ago.

Accompanying Willkie were two friends, John Cowles, editor of the Minneapolis Star Journal, and Langdon Thorne, retired New York investment broker, and three newspapermen. The trip from Lisbon was smooth, Willkie said.

Shakes Hands With Pilots

He shook hands with some American pilots at the airport in western England and declared he was "glad to meet you boys."

He grinned cheerfully when one of the pilots said: "I should have liked to be home for the election, but couldn't make it. We had a job to do here."

Willkie landed in London at 4.50 P. M. and was driven to a hotel, where he lingered a brief time in the lounge before going to the suite reserved for him.

Britons, craning their necks eagerly to see him, seemed not to be disappointed by Willkie's appearance and actions. He was wearing the same shirt he wore when he left New York, his necktie was awry and that lock of hair kept falling over his forehead.

He shook hands with members of the hotel staff and fairly radiated friendliness.

Willkie Is New York's Lincoln Dinner Speaker

Washington, Jan. 26 (AP)—Wendell L. Willkie's first public address after his personal survey of conditions in besieged England may be to a Lincoln Day dinner on February 12.

The Republican National Committee, listing a group of speakers at a nation-wide series of party dinners, announced that the 1940 Presidential candidate would speak at the New York rally. Willkie, who landed in London today, expects to stay there about two weeks, a schedule which will not bring him back to this country until a day or two before the rally.

26 Already Organized

The National Committee said that twenty-six Lincoln Day dinners already had been organized and that it expected rallies would be held in virtually every State.

The principal speaker at a dinner here will be Thomas E. Dewey, New York District Attorney and a candidate for the nomination last year.

Former Representative Bruce Barton, of New York, and Clare Luce, active in the Willkie campaign, will address the New York gathering.

Congressional Speakers Named

The committee announced Republican members of the Senate to give Lincoln Day dinner talks would include: Robert A. Taft (Ohio), at Harrisonburg, Va.; Charles W. Tobey (N. H.), at Akron, Ohio; Harold R. Burton (Ohio), at Pontiac, Mich., and C. Wayland Brooks (Ill.), at Washington.

House members scheduled include Representatives Dirksen (Ill.), at Flint, Mich.; Vreeland (N. J.), at Cumberland, Md.; Mundt (S. D.), at Hagerstown, Md., Short (Mo.), at Independence, Kan., and Dewey (Ill.), at Portland, Maine.

INDIA'S TREATMENT SCORED IN LONDON

Churchill Regime Criticized At Celebration Of "Independence Day"

Speakers Denounce British Rule And Hold U. S. Equally Guilty

[By the Associated Press]

London, Jan. 26—The eleventh annual Indian "independence day" was celebrated in London today at an India League meeting marked by speeches heaping abuse on British administration in India and demands for the release of political prisoners.

The audience stood and listened to the reading of the Indian "declaration of independence," which declared that British rule in India had ruined the country economically, politically, culturally and spiritually and that continuance of submission was "a crime against man and God."

Leaders "All In Jail"

The celebration lacked the usual messages from Indian political leaders because, the promoters explained, "they are all in jail."

From a platform draped with the Indian Nationalist colors—saffron, white and emerald emblazoned on a spinning wheel—speakers prefaced their jibes at the British Government with the salutation "Comrades!"

J. F. Horrabin, journalist and artist, speaking for "the so-called dominant race," blamed British working-class movement for its failure to realize that imperialism and democracy are incompatible.

Criticizes Britain

He scornfully declared Britain, ostensibly fighting for the independence of other nationalities, failed to give India her freedom. Horrabin was a Laborite member of Parliament about ten years ago.

The United States, declared Ted Bramley, a Communist, was equally guilty with Britain in furthering "an imperialist war" and was only aiding her "in the sacred name of preserving democracy in Europe" so that it could be "well in at the head of the table for the shareout" when the war ended.

New Pressure For Cabinet Revision Put On Churchill

Political Critics Favor All-Powerful Five-Man War Body To Include Lloyd George

[By the Associated Press]

London, Jan. 26—An important faction in British politics has put fresh pressure on Prime Minister Churchill for drastic revision of the Government, setting up an all-powerful five-man War Cabinet, including David Lloyd George, Britain's World War Premier.

One member of this faction within the Conservative party said it was trying to get Churchill to form such a Cabinet of Lloyd George, Anthony Eden, Foreign Secretary; Lord Beaverbrook, Minister for Aircraft Production, and Ernest Bevin, Minister of Labor and National Service.

The present War Cabinet is composed of eight members, five of them heads of departments.

Would Drop Portfolios

An informant speaking for proponents of the scaled-down Cabinet said all five Ministers should be without portfolio, freed of departmental responsibility and political worry, and concerned only with winning the war.

This faction contends that Churchill is handicapped by having no one in his Cabinet who can talk with him and advise him as an equal, and says the Ministers now are all department heads under him.

Churchill has refused steadfastly to make such a change. He declared to the House of Commons Wednesday that he considered the present plan better than the five-man proposal.

Not Good "In Practice"

He said he had experience "at close quarters" with the small Cabinet in the last war and although "some might say it was the system that carried us to victory, it is not as good in practice as in theory."

Another member of the faction proposing the change said Churchill overemphasized the importance of party politics in keeping his present Government with a nice balance among Conservatives, Laborites and factions within parties.

This source—a member of Parliament—said Lloyd George had been offered a place in the Government, but refused unless the World War Cabinet system were adopted.

"L.G. KNOWS HE WOULD DO LITTLE GOOD AS A MERE 15TH WHEEL IN LONDON-JAN-26
THE MACHINE," THE SOURCE DECLARED. "HE WOULD BE LITTLE HELP IF BURDENED WITH A JOB RUNNING SOME DEPARTMENT SUCH AS THE MINISTRY OF MUNITIONS. BUT L.G. STILL IS ONE OF THE BIGGEST MEN IN ENGLAND. AMERICA KNOWS HIM AND UNDERSTANDS HIM. IN MANY WAYS HE'S YOUNGER THAN (CHURCHILL).

"POLITICS AND PERSONALITIES NEVER MEANT ANYTHING TO HIM. LOTHIAN (THE LATE LORD LOTHIAN WHO WAS AMBASSADOR TO THE UNITED STATES AND WHO DURING THE WORLD WAR WAS LLOYD GEORGE'S PRIVATE SECRETARY) USED TO SAY ONLY ONE THING COUNTED WITH L.G. -- WINNING THE WAR. IF A MINISTER

ONLY ONE THING COUNTED WITH L.G. -- WINNING THE WAR. IF A MINISTER WAS INCOMPETENT, HE'D SACK HIM NO MATTER WHAT BACKING HE HAD.

"WE NEED L.G. AS A MEMBER OF A SMALL GROUP THAT COULD MEET AT 10 O'CLOCK EVERY MORNING WITH A FRESH VIEWPOINT AND GET THINGS DONE IN A HURRY. NOW THE MINISTERS MEET AFTER THEY'VE HAD A LOT OF DEPARTMENTAL ROUTINE TO ATTEND TO AND THEIR HEADS ARE CLUTTERED UP WITH DETAIL.

"WE NEED ANTHONY (EDEN) BECAUSE HE REPRESENTS THE WORLD WAR GENERATION AND THE INTERNATIONAL VIEWPOINT IMPORTANT IN BRITISH LIFE. HE'S NOT THE MOST BRILLIANT MAN IN ENGLAND POLITICALLY, BUT HE HAS FINE QUALITIES. HE'S CLEAN. HIS INSTINCT IS SOUND. AMERICA LIKES HIM.

"BEAVERBROOK GETS THINGS DONE. WE NEED BEVIN, BUT AS MINISTER WITHOUT PORTFOLIO, NOT MINISTER OF LABOR. HE SPEAKS FOR MILLIONS OF WORKING MEN IN THIS COUNTRY AND KNOWS WHAT THEY WANT, WHAT THEY BELIEVE AND HOW THEY FEEL. AND THEY KNOW HIM.

"NOW WE'RE GOING TO TRY OUR BEST TO MAKE WINSTON SEE IT AS WE SEE IT. HE PUT UP A GOOD ARGUMENT THE OTHER DAY--BUT I DON'T THINK HIS HEART WAS IN IT."

SIMA'S REBELS BEGIN TO PAY LOSERS' PRICE

Some Iron Guard Leaders Reported Suicides, Others Executed

Rumania Rejoices Over Peace; Families Of Slain Jews Mourn

[By the Associated Press]

Bucharest, Rumania, Jan. 26—Peace once again settled over Rumania today and leaders of the insurrection began to pay—some with their lives—the price of rebellion that failed.

Some high-ranking Iron Guard leaders were said to have committed suicide.

They were followers of vanquished Horia Sima, Vice-Premier, to whom the dictate had come from victorious Premier General Ion Antonescu:

"You rebels! If you are true Iron Guardists punish yourself with true legionary punishment or otherwise you may be sure that I shall apply mass punishment myself."

Sima Faces Trial

Sima was reported facing court-martial after being arrested in a sleeping car in flight.

There was no definite estimate of what a week of rebellion had cost in dead and wounded in this capital or Rumania's provinces.

Political circles expressed belief that Antonescu would succeed now in keeping order and in preventing terrorist groups of the Iron Guard from ever reorganizing again.

Churches were thronged with Rumanians praying that peace will be permanent in their country which in the last year has suffered from earthquake, dismemberment, terror and revolution.

Jews Massacred

Hundreds of Jews massacred in the fierce outburst of hatred were given mass funerals.

Over Iron Guard youths who died in the bloody attempt at a coup d'etat, however, no ceremonies were permitted. The only concession allowed their relatives was temporary opening of the Iron Guard church where women in black went to say silent prayers for the victims.

Thirty Rumanian army officers who were mowed down by the guns of what Antonescu's Government called "rebels, cutthroats and assassins" will be given a solemn military funeral and burial as national heroes tomorrow.

An undetermined number of soldiers also will be buried tomorrow.

Executions Reported

According to unconfirmed reports some Iron Guard extremists already have been arrested, tried by court-martial and put to death.

Former Health Commissioner Iasinski was among those reported executed under a new emergency law exacting death of anyone found with firearms. One version was that he appeared at Antonescu's office Friday declaring he wished to see the dictator to pledge his loyalty; that he was searched in accordance with military procedure before being admitted, and that a revolver was found strapped to his leg.

Bucharest On Guard

Others charged with having made "inciting" comment during the height of the rebellion or of having been among its ringleaders were reported arrested or dead.

While calm reigned throughout Rumania, Bucharest presented a scene of striking contrast.

On the Calea Victoriei, bathed in a warm sun, crowds promenaded past hotels and smart shops. Many had been hiding for months in fear of Iron Guard terrorism. Some even knew they had been on the guard's death list.

Streets which only a few days ago were ringing incessantly with the din of rifle, machine-gun and artillery fire now echoed the dull sound of marching feet, for Antonescu was taking no chance of a new outbreak.

In the Jewish section, tanks and trucks loaded with watchful soldiers rolled past smashed store fronts, looted shops and wrecked homes.

Iron Guard district headquarters and all public buildings were under heavy guard.

Casualty Lists Read

Weary men clustered in front of hospitals and morgues reading lists tacked to fences bearing the names or descriptions of the dead whose bodies have not yet been claimed.

Through the streets, teams of horses draped in mourning robes pulled hearses, some of which contained a half a dozen caskets. At one Jewish cemetery so many friends and relatives appeared for services that the chanting of the rabbi was drowned out by the women's wailing.

Antonescu, accompanied by the German Minister, Baron Manfred von Killinger, German General Hänsel and two Rumanian generals now heading the Bucharest and state police, made a tour of hospitals and morgues to observe how seriously victims had been maltreated. They found that even gold teeth had been removed from many bodies.

MOCK STATE OF WAR SLATED FOR ISTANBUL

Extensive Air-Raid Drill Among Maneuvers Set For This Week

Turkey To Defend Self Against Any Balkan Threat, Press Says

[By the Associated Press]

Istanbul, Jan. 26—Istanbul, ages-old metropolis in the strategic Bosporus-Dardanelles zone of European Turkey, has declared a mock state of war from Tuesday to Friday for the most extensive air-raid drill this city ever has experienced.

These preparations coincided today with newspaper declarations that Turkey not only would defend herself against Axis attack but also would act at once against any threat elsewhere in the Balkans.

Germany Accused

In one case Germany was freely accused of planning a Balkan offensive through Yugoslavia and Bulgaria for an attack on Salonika, Greece, to help relieve Italian forces fighting the Greeks in Albania.

[This statement, if reflecting Government policy, would represent a emphasized broadening of past declarations of Turkey's policy of strict self-defense as a non-belligerent ally of the British.]

In the mock air war, planes for the first time will simulate attacks on Istanbul, key point of the link between Europe and Asia Minor. Citizens will be forced to take cover when sirens sound and all traffic, including trains, will be halted.

Palace For Shelter

Subterranean chambers of the famous Sultan's palace, relic of the days when the Ottoman Empire held sway, will be used as shelters.

It was learned today that two or three Italian planes recently had crashed and burned on Turkish soil, but how they came there or what caused them to crash was not known. The Italian Dodecanese Islands in the eastern Mediterranean lie off the Turkish coast.

Several Italian flyers have been disarmed and interned in Turkey.

Voices Warning

The newspaper Yeni Saba asserted that any new invasion of the Balkans "we would consider an action directed at Turkey herself."

"This Turkish policy is a threat to no one. The threat would come from those who try to occupy the Balkans. Because we consider such an act a direct threat to Turkey, we would go to defend ourselves immediately."

"It is a natural conclusion for us to draw from German concentrations in Rumania that Germany intends, with or without the consent of Yugoslavia and Bulgaria, to pass through these nations toward Salonika.

Invasion Held Possible

"This would not be a blow at Turkey directly, it is true, but it also is natural for us to assume that the second stop in such a campaign would be a drive into Turkey."

The newspaper said Hungary and Germany were annoyed because of the presence in Turkey of officers of the British Middle East command, "which has been conferring with the Turkish high command on matters of Turkish national defense."

British Leave Istanbul

The British officers, having concluded talks at Ankara, left today for Karabuk, near the Black Sea, to inspect Turkey's budding new fuel and iron industry.

Semi-official quarters said the atmosphere was friendly and that further consultations would be held when necessary.

The newspaper Iyzam said, "We know well and may state that Turkey would not remain disinterested in any threat to her zone of security. . . . Those who would like to make every nation into another Rumania should be aware of this Turkish proverb: 'The meat of every bird is not edible.'

"They should be warned again before it is too late that they should not touch us unless they want war."

Hungarian Foreign Minister Dies, Food-Poisoning Victim

Count Istvan Csaky Had Been Ill For Six Weeks, Was Observer At Munich

JAN 27 1941

[By the Associated Press]

Budapest, Hungary, Monday, Jan. 27—Count Istvan Csaky, Foreign Minister of Hungary during the past two critical years, died early today after an illness of six weeks. He was 46 years old.

Count Csaky, youngest Foreign Minister in Hungary's history, had been in a coma since late Saturday.

He had been ill since mid-December, but hope for his recovery was held out until Saturday night when he suffered a relapse.

Count Csaky was stricken while aboard a train bringing him home from Belgrade, where he had just signed a Hungarian friendship agreement between the Hungarian and Yugoslav governments.

First diagnosed as influenza, his illness later was identified as food poisoning.

At his bedside when he died was his young wife of eight months.

Was Career Diplomat

Count Csaky was a career diplomat, a professional who could trade punches with the best of them. But he was first of all a Hungarian patriot and ardent Nationalist.

Nearly half his life had been spent in the Foreign Office. Brought up in pre-war Austria-Hungary, he trained for his profession in the Royal Academy at Vienna. He entered the service of his country as an obscure legation attache in 1919, during the confusion following the war's end.

His rise in the service was steady but unspectacular. Before he was called home to serve under Foreign Minister Koloman von Kanya in Budapest, he had been Minister to Spain and charge d'affaires for Spain in Portugal.

Munich Observer

He was chief of the Cabinet of von Kanya's Ministry in 1938, and in this capacity was an observer at the Munich Conference in which the Nazi remolding of Europe began to take form.

And, it was the Munich Conference that opened the way for Count Csaky to attain the post of Foreign Minister. Hungarian dissatisfaction over the size of the slice of Czecho-Slovakian territory allotted to Hungary at the conference brought von Kanya's resignation.

When Premier Bela Imredi presented his revamped Cabinet in December, 1938, Count Csaky held the portfolio of Foreign Minister.

Stayed "On Road"

In the two years that preceded his fatal illness in December, 1940, Count Csaky spent more time "on the road" than a traveling salesman.

Rome and Berlin were his chief points of call, and he was said to have enjoyed the confidence of both Benito Mussolini and Adolf Hitler. Mussolini was perhaps his best foreign friend, and il Duce once took him on a junket to Libya.

Count Csaky was respected in the chancelleries. Small-statured, he made up for size with energy, and his characteristic black mustache fairly bristled when he spoke.

Married Countess

A bachelor until he was 45, he married 28-year-old Countess Maria Chorinsky, descendant of a distinguished Moravian family.

The key to his policy during his service as Foreign Minister was the oft-repeated assertion that Hungary's greatest good lay in a tightening of her bond with Germany.

His mission of assuring Axis support for Hungary's claims to war-lost territory—without making commitments for any other sort of venture—was given a severe setback when Germany overran Poland from the west and Russia pressed in from the east.

BUT, EVEN WHEN GERMAN TROOPS LATER POURED INTO HUNGARY, COUNT CSAKY ADD-DASH JAN-27
WAS STILL BUSY MENDING HUNGARY'S FENCES. HE WAS RETURNING FROM A SUCCESSFUL MISSION TO YUGOSLAVIA, AFTER SIGNING A FRIENDSHIP AGREEMENT, WHEN HE WAS STRICKEN ILL ON DEC. 15.

SERIOUSLY ILL, HE STILL RAN HIS OFFICE FROM THE HOSPITAL BED. ON JAN. 1, WHEN HIS CONDITION WAS CALLED "CRITICAL" HE ISSUED THE STATEMENT: "HUNGARY WILL TAKE AN ACTIVE SHARE IN BUILDING THE NEW EUROPEAN ORDER--PARTICULARLY IN RE-MOULDING SOUTHEASTERN EUROPE." IT WAS HIS VALEDICTORY.

Foreign Secretary Avers U. S. Must First Revise Its Policy

Charges Hull Distorted Facts Of Manchurian Occupation

[By the Associated Press]

Tokyo, Jan. 26—Yosuke Matsuoka, Foreign Minister, was quoted by Domei today as saying "the development of friendly relations between Japan and the United States will remain an idle dream" so long as "America maintains her policy of regarding China, instead of the Eastern Pacific, as her first line of defense."

Matsuoka testified before a House of Representatives budget committee, the agency reported, and in answering questions concerning recent statements by United States Secretary of State Hull described the Secretary's description of the Manchurian incident as "such an obvious distortion of the facts that it will not bear the barest scrutiny."

Reiterates Desire

The Foreign Minister reiterated a desire for friendship with the United States which he said must be based on "sympathetic understanding of each other's policy," Domei said.

Admiral Koshiro Oikawa, Minister of the Navy, testified that the navy was prepared for any eventuality and that current budget estimates had been formulated with consideration for American naval expansion.

Hull's Testimony

Testifying before the House Foreign Affairs Committee January 15, Hull said the first step in the direction of "tyrannical rule" was taken "in the Far East in 1931 with forceful occupation of Manchuria in contravention of the provisions of the nine-power treaty and of the Kellogg-Briand pact. ("The equilibrium in the Far East which had been established by the Washington Conference treaties of 1921-22 became seriously disturbed by the setting up by forceful means in a part of China of a regime under Japanese control under the name of 'Manchoukuo'," Hull asserted.)

Expecting No Reward For Peace Negotiations

Bangkok, Thailand, Jan. 26 (AP)—Japan's Minister to Thailand declared tonight his country does not expect a reward for attempting to settle difficulties between Thailand and French Indo-China, whose undeclared war continued although both belligerents have accepted Japanese mediation.

The Minister, Yasusato Futami, said in a statement that Japan was prompted to offer her services by a desire for peace and stabilization in East Asia. He said Japan would try to effect a readjustment of the Thailand-Indo-China border according to the principles of justice but that details of proposals were not yet available.

Hostilities Continue

A Thai communique declared hostilities were continuing on all fronts.

It said "further territory was seized in the Champasakdi region; the Sisophon bombardment continues, and an advance was started in the Chandaburi sector."

Domei reported in a dispatch from Hanoi, French Indo-China, that Thai artillery shelled Lakkhon, Thakkek and Savannakhet, border cities.

No Aggressive Designs

Nai Vilas Osathanonda, Minister of State, in the first authoritative statement on the Japanese mediation offer said Thailand had no aggressive designs but always had desired a just and peaceful settlement of the old claim. He said the initiative for the mediation came from France.

No date has been fixed for the start of negotiations.

5 Unidentified Warships Sighted Off Indo-China

Cape St. Jacques, French Indo-China, Jan. 26 (AP)—Five unidentified warships, an aircraft carrier, two cruisers and two torpedo ships, have been sighted off the southeastern French Indo-China coast in the last two days, it was reported tonight.

A naval authority said the ships possibly were Japanese, but they were too far offshore to determine the nationality.

An Indo-China communique reported scattered patrol clashes in Cambodia, with French planes bombing Sraked and Wadhana.

SHANGHAI, JAN 27-(MONDAY)-(AP)-DOMEI (JAPANESE NEWS AGENCY) REPORTED TODAY IN A DISPATCH FROM HANOI, FRENCH INDO-CHINA, THAT FRENCH-THAI ARMISTICE NEGOTIATIONS WOULD OPEN WEDNESDAY IN SAIGON, FRENCH INDO-CHINA.

NEW ITALIAN PUSH SMASHED, GREEKS REPORT

Air-Ferried Reinforcements Failed To Avert Defeat, Athens Says

Fascist Try For "Morale" Victory Declared Beaten With Bayonets

[By the Associated Press]

Athens, Jan. 26—Greek troops smashed in hand-to-hand combat a violent Italian counter-attack launched at dawn today by plane-ferried troops of Gen. Ugo Cavallero, Premier Mussolini's new commander in Albania, to "strengthen the morale of his troops," it was reported tonight.

Dispatches from the front said the Greeks were pushing methodically onward into Albania north of Klisura.

Some of the troops used in the assault—one of the strongest yet launched by the Italians since the war began almost three months ago—have just arrived from Italy, ferried across the Adriatic Sea by plane.

Prisoners Supply News

This was learned, dispatches said, from prisoners who told Greeks they belonged to a battalion which had just reached Albania but already had been destroyed.

Greek sources said the desperate effort of General Cavallero to halt the Greeks was indicated when some captured Italian officers said they had been sent back to the front from a hospital without obtaining convalescence leave.

One report said the Greeks met the Italians at first with intense artillery fire and then with a bayonet attack.

Attack Crushed

Other reports said the counter-attack was crushed within less than an hour and the Greek infantry, taking the initiative, captured many prisoners by a quick flanking movement.

The Greek spokesman said the Fascists suffered losses in men and material.

Among prisoners taken in the day's fighting were troops belonging to an Italian Alpine division, which was appearing in the Albanian theater of war for the first time, he said.

The high command's communique merely reported "restricted successful operations" and "we took some prisoners."

"Morale" Counter-Attacks

The Government spokesman said the "morale" counter-attacks at various points of the front were supported by artillery.

They were aimed, he said, at recapturing positions of strategic importance which the Italians lost last week, but "failed completely."

"In the course of one of the attacks, the enemy quickly gave up his intention and abandoned a large number of machine guns, automatic rifles and a number of prisoners," the spokesman said.

Initiative Maintained

"Despite these desperate efforts of the Italians, our troops maintained the initiative and occupied new positions on the mountains and other fortified positions, plus some villages from which the Italians were forced to withdraw.

"One hundred prisoners, including officers, and a large quantity of materials were captured."

Italian planes flew against the Greek forces, but reports from the front said many of their bombs fell behind their own lines when the Greek fighters attacked. It was in this sector that the Greeks reported three Italian planes shot down Saturday.

R. A. F. Cooperates

British bombers cooperating with the Greek air force reported successful, low-level attacks on Bulsa, in the vicinity of Elbasani.

The R. A. F. reported all bombs fell in the target area and direct hits were scored on a military camp and an advance supply depot.

"A large fire was seen to break out and a big explosion also was caused," the R. A. F. reported. "Anti-aircraft fire was met and enemy fighters attacked, but all our aircraft returned safely."

Decisive Battle Shaping Up, Border Town Says

Ochrid, Yugoslavia, Jan. 26 (AP)—Italian troops launched a heavy attack against Greek forces in northern and central Albanian fronts today, border advices said tonight, and observers predicted a decisive battle was shaping up.

Both sides were said to have brought up heavy reinforcements.

The Italians opened violent artillery fire on Greek positions from Progradetz to the Skumbi river, these reports said.

Other artillery fire was begun in the Ostrovica Mountains.

Italians Use Bayonets

Near Tepeleni the Italians made bayonet charges, the reports said, but the Greeks reported they were repulsed with heavy losses.

The Greeks were said to have taken 300 prisoners in the Viossa river valley.

Greek, British and Italian planes fought a number of battles along the front as the Greeks and their British allies bombed Italian supply roads and the Italians bombed Greek positions along the whole front and the communication lines between Koritza, Albania and Phlorina, Greece.

Italian Bomber Lands in Zagreb

BELGRADE, Yugoslavia, Jan. 26 (AP)—An Italian bomber with a full load of bombs landed today at the Zagreb airport. Its five crew members, who were interned, said they had lost their way in fog and had exhausted their fuel.

Italians Deny Reports Of Disorders in Cities

British Say More Nazis Enter to Support Fascists

ROME, Jan. 26 (AP).—Authoritative Italians said today that foreign reports of disorders at Milan, Turin and smaller northern Italy cities were "a ridiculous invention without the slightest basis."

[The Columbia Broadcasting System's correspondent at Belgrade, Yugoslavia, Winston Burdett, cabled from there Saturday reports, attributed to diplomatic sources, that three Italian generals had been killed in street fighting in Milan, that hundreds of persons had been wounded in disorders in northern Italy, and that German troops had intervened to restore quiet.]

Nazi "Ground Staffs" in Italy

LONDON, Jan. 26 (AP)—"Considerable numbers" of Germans are entering Italy, ostensibly as ground staffs for Nazi air units, but their main purpose apparently is to support the Fascist regime, an informed source asserted today.

"The German Air Force in Italy seems to require an unusual number of ground-crew members to keep it in condition," this source said. "It is possible this is designed to keep the Italians in order."

The greatest German concentrations are reported in Sicily, where dive bombers are based, and at Trieste. The source was reluctant to speculate as to their presence in Trieste, which is in Northeastern Italy near the Yugoslav border.

Authorities have warned, however, that reports of extensive unrest in Italy should be treated with reserve.

Italian Rioting Reports Persist

[By the Associated Press]

New York, Jan. 26—The Columbia Broadcasting System, in a coast-to-coast broadcast, tonight asserted that, despite official Italian denials, new cable advices from a Balkan capital again described serious rioting in Milan and other northern cities, with Italian soldiers fighting by the side of the rebels.

The broadcaster said: "While Italian officials deny the reports of serious rioting . . . as a ridiculous invention, diplomatic advices from the Balkans, received in Bern, Switzerland, insist that the riots did take place, with heavy casualties; and that Italian soldiers fought on the rebel side.

Nazis Attached To Italian Units

"A number of Italian army officers and several other men, reported to be dignitaries of the Fascist party, are said to have been arrested by the Italian secret police and the German Gestapo."

CBS also quoted a Turkish radio report, picked up here by Columbia's short wave listening station, as saying that German staff officers are now being attached to Italian commands.

lent to perishing while movement along the coast inevitably would be threatened by the British navy.

"The appearance of the German air force in the Mediterranean, of course, limits somewhat, the liberty to maneuver the British navy, but this cannot prevent fully its military action.

"The failure of the Italian troops in Albania prepared for England favorable ground for developing the action in Africa."

Of the English Channel, Red Star said:

"The mighty German military technique did not prove strong enough to overcome a water obstacle thirty to forty kilometers (about twenty to twenty-five miles) controlled by the powerful British fleet."

Reporting that the German threat to invade England still existed, the paper said that, nevertheless, the "English power of resistance has grown immeasurably since May and June, 1940, and therefore any attempt at invasion now would demand colossal efforts by Germany."

British Princesses Play In an American Bomber

Elizabeth and Margaret Rose Visit Airfield With Parents

LONDON, Jan. 26 (AP).—Princess Elizabeth, the heiress-presumptive to the British throne, played at the controls of an American-made bomber at a Royal Air Force coastal command station today, while her sister, Princess Margaret Rose, lay down and focused the bomb sight.

The girls, thirteen and nine years old, making their first visit to an R. A. F. war station, with their parents, climbed aboard the Hudson bomber with the pilot, a young New Zealand officer. The plane, of course, did not leave the ground.

Queen Elisabeth joined the princesses in the machine. The elder princess seemed especially thrilled when told that the plane recently had been flown across the Atlantic.

King George VI decorated eighteen R. A. F. officers and men for deeds of "gallantry in the face of the enemy" and talked for several minutes with Squadron Leader R. S. Tuck, who is credited with shooting down at least ten enemy planes and who received today the Distinguished Service Order.

Capture, to Nazi Airman, 'Is Like Coming Home'

Bomber Afire, He and Crew Land 'in Good Old England'

YARMOUTH, England, Jan. 26 (AP).—The pilot of a German dive-bomber, one of four Nazis captured after the plane made a crash landing on the Norfolk coast, was quoted tonight by the Press Association as having said: "We are in good old England at last—it is like coming home."

The bomber caught fire when hit by an anti-aircraft shell from the trawler Galvani, which it had attacked. One crew member was wounded in the leg, another was burned about the forehead.

H. E. Thain, a shopkeeper, and a friend ran up to the wreck and stopped the flyers as they were making toward the sea with a rubber boat. A fifth flyer escaped.

"They were fine, big fellows," Thain said. "The pilot, about forty, could speak English. They gave us their revolvers. While we were waiting or a military escort the officer chatted with us. He seemed to know the district better than we do ourselves. They had plenty of good cigarettes, some of which they gave us."

Thain said there was no indication from the German pilot as to familiarity with the country.

Italian Position In Libya "Critical," Says Red Paper

Possibility Of Further Fascist Resistance To British Questioned By Russian Army Organ

[By the Associated Press]

Moscow, Jan. 26—Red Star, Russian army newspaper, said tonight it is no longer a question of the losses suffered by Italian troops in Libya "but of the possibility of their further resistance at all."

Red Star reported nearly half of the Italian troops in Libya have been put out of action by the British. It added that the position of Marshal Rodolfo Graziani, Italian commander in Liyba, "is critical."

"It is true," Red Star said, "that Graziani has a powerful ally in the vast roadless spaces of Libya, but retreat into the depths of the desert is equivalent to perishing while movement along the coast inevitably would be threatened by the British navy.

Ireland Rations Coal, Urges Wheat Substitutes

Campaign Ordered to Cope With Transport Difficulty

DUBLIN, Jan. 26 (AP).—Ireland ordered today rationing of coal to a half-ton a month for each household and an increase in the extraction of flour from wheat from 80 to 90 per cent of the grain.

The orders were part of a campaign to cope with shortage due to transport difficulties. The problem on wheat is to stretch a six-month supply to seven and one-half months.

The Ministry of Supplies has asked the public to use oatmeal and potatoes as much as possible as wheat flour substitutes.

The gasoline ration recently was cut from a quarter to a sixth of what it was when the European war started.

DANISH OFFICER SENTENCED

Given Life Term On Spying Charge, Berlin Is Informed

Berlin, Jan. 26 (AP)—Lieut. Col. P. A. Oerum, of the Danish army, was reported from Copenhagen today to have been sentenced to life imprisonment on a charge of spying.

Three subordinates were said to have been sentenced to prison terms of 14, 8 and 3 years.

NAZI FLYER EAGER TO GET BACK HOME

Baron Franz Von Werra Wants To 'Shoot Down Some More' British Planes

JAN 27 1941

Pilot, Who Escaped In Canada, Reaches New York At Liberty On Bail

[By the Associated Press]

New York, Jan. 26—A wiry little Nazi flying officer claiming to have downed fourteen "enemy" ships before his capture by the British reached the haven of the German consulate in New York today anxious to return to his fatherland, so "I can shoot down some more."

Exuberant despite twinges from his bandaged ears—frozen in crossing the St. Lawrence river in subzero weather during an escape from a Canadian prison train—26-year-old Baron Franz von Werra expressed delight at the good fortune which brought him to a nation where his deportation to Germany is probable.

International law rules out his return to Canada by American authorities.

"Sure" Nazi Will Win

He was supremely confident of his eventual return to his homeland.

"I'll find my way back to Germany as well as I found my way out of prison camps three times," he said, grinning.

Talking easily in English as he rode by train toward his first glimpse of New York city, the young Nazi airman expressed belief the war would be won by Germany—sometime this summer—"I'm so sure of that as I'm alive."

"And it's not right for me to stay in this country while my comrades are fighting and dying," he added. "That's why I must get back."

Avoids Military Questions

He avoided all questions concerning military matters and details of his escapes, saying he was under strict orders from "our representatives in New York." At Grand Central Station he was hastened away in a cab by an unidentified person, apparently from the German consulate.

Later he was taken to the Astor Hotel in Times Square.

The airman was at liberty under $5,000 bond posted by the German consulate within two hours after his arrest and detention at Ogdensburg, N. Y., near the Canadian border, on a charge of illegal entry into the United States. A Federal grand jury in Albany will hear his testimony Thursday.

Sold All Valuables

Forced down in England September 7, Von Werra was made a prisoner of war but escaped twice. It did him no good, he said, "because I couldn't get out of the country."

Subsequently he was shipped to Halifax with other prisoners. While en route he sold all his valuables to British sailors on the prison ship in line with a new plan he had for escape to the United States.

"You know," he said smilingly, "without money, nothing can be done in America. So the first thing I did was get as much as I could by selling things."

That was as much as he would say about his escape. From others, it was learned that he crossed the St. Lawrence in an open rowboat near Galoup Rapids—a feat which natives thought impossible without help.

Von Werra asserted there was no comparison between this war and the World War.

"This war is the mistake of the British and French staffs," the airman said. "They have used the same tactics of 1918. But we have prepared for modern war."

All Nazis Who Escaped Last Week Are Caught

Ottawa, Jan. 26 (AP)—All German prisoners of war who escaped from trains after debarkation at an east coast Canadian port last week have been recaptured, an internment official said tonight.

Six of the seven men now are en route to Canadian internment camps, the spokesman said. The seventh is in the United States, free on $5,000 bail posted by the German consulate in New York city.

It was not known here whether he would be returned to Canada for internment or deported to Germany by United States authorities. It was recalled, however, that Emanuel Fischer, a German who escaped last summer from a northwestern Ontario camp, was turned over to Canadian authorities after making a successful getaway to the United States.

Twenty-Seven Escaped

At St. Leonard Junction, Royal Canadian Mounted Police arrested a man who gave his name as Rudolf Muller. Police said he wore a submarine crewman's clothing and a blue overcoat.

Another prisoner, Lieut. Otto Hollman, was recaptured shortly after he leaped through the window of a prison train at Smiths Falls early Friday. Four other prisoners who escaped after their arrival in Canada were recaptured earlier.

400 Interned Germans To Go To Old CCC Camp

San Francisco, Jan. 26 (AP)—Secrecy approaching that of wartime today enshrouded the Government's plans to transport 400 German merchant seamen from Angel Island immigration station to an abandoned CCC camp near Fort Stanton, N. M.

The Chronicle said it learned thirty-five of the sailors would leave tomorrow in a prison car attached to a Southern Pacific train, with the remainder to depart later as a unit, but immigration officials refused comment.

Pilot, Down at Ogdensburg, N. Y., Says He Lost Direction

OGDENSBURG, N. Y., Jan. 26 (AP).—A Canadian pilot, who said he mistook the St. Lawrence River for the Ottawa, landed his plane on an Ogdensburg farm today. He identified himself as Cadet Martin and was flying Canadian training plane No. 4644. He reported to St. Eugene Field, Montreal, then communicated with United States immigration officers. He will leave for Canada tomorrow.

Martin said he was practicing loops when he lost his direction. Sighting Ogdensburg, with little gasoline left, he decided to land.

Irish Intern 3 R. A. F. Flyers

DUBLIN, Jan. 26 (AP).—A British plane crashed in County Donegal late Friday night, it was announced officially here tonight. One member of the crew fell into the sea and drowned but the other three landed by parachute. They were interned.

San Jose, Costa Rica, Jan. 26 (AP)—Plans to have six United States Army Infantry officers come here to instruct Costa Rica's small army were announced here today.

U. S. SHIP STILL STORMBOUN

Transport Bearing Troops Remains Outside Of St. John's

St. John's, Newfoundland, Jan. 26 (AP)—The United States transport Edmond B. Alexander, bearing troops to man the United States defense base here, was held in Conception Bay over the week end by a snowstorm that made it impossible for her to enter this narrow-necked harbor.

The liner approached St. John's yesterday, but it was considered inadvisable to take her in until the weather cleared.

Letters On Democracy To Go To Axis States

Group To Test International Postal Agreement With Tracts On U. S. Policies

New York, Jan. 26 (AP)—A letter describing the workings of democracy in the United States will be sent by the Council for Democracy to mayors, editors, public officials and businessmen of Germany, Italy and Russia, it was announced today by C. D. Jackson, council president.

Translated in German, Italian and Russian, the letters, Jackson said, will test international postal agreements under which totalitarian states have been mailing propaganda material to the United States.

The messages will be routed via Siberia so that there will be no question of British censorship or propaganda.

DUTCH SHIP SINKING OFF BRITISH COAST

Beemsterdijk Sends Out Distress Signals After Explosion

JAN 27 1941

6,869-Ton Vessel, 12 Miles Out, Is Abandoned By Its Crew

[By the Associated Press]

New York, Jan. 26—The Netherlands steamer Beemsterdijk radioed for help today after she was left in a sinking condition by an explosion twelve miles off the British coast.

The distress signal was sent out at 4.20 A. M., and fifteen minutes later a second message reported the 6,869-ton freighter was sinking.

"Still sinking slowly," said a third message sent at 5.48. At 6.39 A. M. the crew abandoned ship.

The exact position of the Beemsterdijk and the cause of the explosion were not given.

The vessel, built in 1922, was owned by the Holland-America Line and operated out of Rotterdam before the war. In recent months she was believed to have plied between Canada and England.

Await More Information

Los Angeles, Jan. 26 (AP)—The Coast Guard said today that it was taking "no further action" until receipt of more information regarding a radio message saying a submarine had "shelled unknown man," off the California coast.

The message, picked up by Mackay Radio and the navy station at San Diego, said:

"SSS 34.19 north, 133.12 west. Shelled unknown man."

The "SSS" means "submarine sighted" and the figures indicated that the position of the unidentified sending vessel was nearly 1,000 miles northwest of here in the Pacific. Coast Guard officials suggested the message might have been intended to read "shelled unknown man-of-war."

F. B. I. Investigates Removal Of Civil Service Records

Inquiring Into Report Personnel Files, Described As Having Military Value, Were Copied

JAN 27 1941

[By the Associated Press]

Washington, Jan. 26—The Federal Bureau of Investigation began an inquiry today into the reported removal of a large number of personnel records of Government employes from the Civil Service Commission files.

Officials said the records carried in minute detail the history, qualifications, experience, avocations, physical description, age, salary and other details of every Government employe, except the Postoffice field force. It was reported, they said, that hundreds had been removed, copied by a "business organization" and returned to the commission offices.

The F. B. I. acknowledged that it had questioned two persons, but declined to discuss the case beyond that point.

It was learned that one of the personnel records removed was that of Clyde Tolson, assistant to J. Edgar Hoover, director of the F. B. I.

The records were described by Civil Service Commission officials as having military value inasmuch as they were used for facilitating the location of Government workers with special qualifications who could be used in the defense program. It was understood, however that the "borrowing" was concerned with some business activity of an advertising or credit nature.

The records were filled out by around 700,000 Federal workers last summer as part of a program for building up a vast punch card file by which the commission could locate almost instantly a person with virtually any combination of qualifications which might be needed.

U. S.-Made Flying Boat En Route To Australia

Long-Range, Two-Motored Plane Arrives At Honolulu From California

Honolulu, Jan. 26 (AP)—A two-motored Consolidated flying boat arrived today from California en route for delivery to Australia.

The long-range patrol bomber, which unconfirmed reports said probably would be used against German raiders in the South Pacific, was under command of Capt. P. G. Taylor, of Australia.

Informed sources said today's flight was but one of a series which have been made during the past month over the California-Singapore aerial route. The plane was camouflaged with olive drab and slate-colored paint. It was delayed tonight by unfavorable flying weather.

Ten Cars of Scrap Iron Contributed to Britain

Welsh Representative Accepts Metal in Oklahoma

SEMINOLE, Okla., Jan. 26 (AP).—Title to ten cars of scrap iron contributed in an "iron for Britain" movement was accepted yesterday by a British representative. Henry Drummond-Wolff, of Providence, representing a Wales tin-plate workers association, said in receiving the metal at a formal ceremony:

"We need it badly. Many of the sources of our iron have been closed to us. We are grateful for this. We feel it will be a big help to the English who are fighting their battles—and, they believe, your battles, too."

The campaign was conceived by Fred McDuff, Seminole oil equipment manufacturer. He has termed it a non-profit project in which the metal will be cast into bars by American labor and shipped to England for use in armament manufacture.

Scientist Says Flu Epidemic May Be War's Deciding Factor

Dr. David T. Smith, Of Duke, Believes Outlook For Europe Is Most Grave

JAN 26 194

[By the Associated Press]

Durham, N. C., Jan. 26—A Duke University bacteriologist predicted today that there would soon be a world-wide epidemic of influenza, possibly becoming the arbiter of the war.

Dr. David T. Smith, professor of bacteriology at the Duke School of Medicine, said the epidemic would be worse in Europe for two reasons:

First, the war which makes millions live in unhygenic conditions and also keeps them undernourished.

Second, the wave began in this country and is moving eastward, and influenza waves, he said, generally increase in virulency as they move.

What Europe Faces

Hence Europe can expect to be stricken with a more virulent form of the disease at a time when most of the population is in poorest condition to fight it.

What will happen in the closely packed ari-raid shelters of England? "The answer is obvious," Dr. Smith said.

Dr. Smith went into the medical school library records and came up with this data to support his contention:

The disease is not a killer itself, but millions have died in its wake during epidemics.

Last Epidemic Recalled

The last world-wide spread of influenza was in 1918-19, when in less than twelve months there were more than 200,000,000 cases and more than 10,000,000 deaths. In the United States, in less than six months there were 20,000,000 cases and 450,000 deaths.

Influenza lowers bodily resistance, and those who get up too early fall prey to more serious diseases.

Dr. Smith said the epidemic in this country was getting beyond the stage where the term "epidemic" fitted and that it was widespread enough to be called "pandemic."

Current Wave Mild

He said the current wave was mild, that it would continue to spread eastward to Europe, with about fifty per cent. of the population contracting it, and that then it would die down for a time.

But in the fall there will be a virulent outbreak of cases throughout the world, Dr. Smith said, and the number of deaths will be high.

Thereafter the pandemic will "taper off over a period of several years in small, recurrent waves."

Such may be expected, the doctor commented, if influenza follows its familiar pattern.

War Communiques

JAN 26 194

British

LONDON, Jan. 26 (AP).—A communique of the Ministries of Air and Home Security:

The only attack reported on this country today was by an enemy aircraft which dropped a bomb on the northeast coast without causing damage or casualties.

Another communique of the Ministries of Air and Home Security:

Last night bombs were dropped in Cornwall. Little damage was done and there were very few casualties. Apart from this, there was no other enemy activity.

An Admiralty communique:

H. M. S. Trawler Galvani (temporary skipper, M. P. Peck) was attacked by a Junkers 88 bomber this morning. She drove off the bombers and so damaged it that it crashed soon afterward on the Norfolk coast.

H. M. S. Trawler Galvani suffered no damage or casualties.

CAIRO, Egypt, Jan. 26 (AP).—A communique of the British Middle Eastern command:

Libya—Forward troops in contact with enemy about Derna being reinforced.

Eritrea—Biscia now in our hands together with a further 100 prisoners. Operation east of Biscia Agordat are continuing.

Abyssinia (Ethiopia)—In the Metemma area our pressure continues.

Italian Somaliland—In all sectors our forward patrols continue vigorously to extend the area of penetration into hostile territory.

A communique of the Royal Air Force:

The landing ground at Maraua (Libya) was raided by bomber aircraft of the R. A. F. yesterday. All bombs fell within the target area, but details of the damage could not be fully observed. The airdrome at Barce was also attacked.

At Giarabub, during a raid, one enemy bomber (S-75) was destroyed on the ground.

Our fighters made active offensive patrols throughout the day in the Martuba and Mocheli area but no conclusive engagement with the enemy resulted. The fighter aircraft reported in yesterday's communique as having failed to return to its base has now been located safely at Tobruk.

A successful attack was made on Bulsa in the vicinity of Elbasani (Albania) yesterday. All bombs fell within the target area and direct hits were registered on a military camp and an advanced supply depot.

A large fire was seen to break out and heavy explosions were caused. Considerable anti-aircraft fire was encountered and enemy fighters intercepted our aircraft, all of which, however, returned safely to their base.

In Italian East Africa our aircraft gave intensive support to the army in its successful advance east of Keru.

Dive attacks were made on motor transport concentrated on the road near Tellena with considerable effect. Numerous reconnaissance flights were also carried out.

From all these operations our aircraft returned without loss.

NAIROBI, Kenya Colony, Jan. 26 (AP).—A British East African headquarters communique:

Active patrolling continues over the frontier into Italian territory and there have been several small encounters with banda (native) patrols. A few prisoners have been taken.

Greek

ATHENS, Jan. 26 (AP).—The Greek high command communique:

Restricted successful operations. We took some prisoners.

The Ministry of Home Security communique:

No raids on Greece today.

German

BERLIN, Jan. 26 (AP).—The German high command communique:

The Luftwaffe continued armed reconnaissance according to schedule, in the course of which a long-distance bomber sank a 4,000-ton merchantman 500 kilometers (310 miles) west of Ireland.

On the British east coast two merchant ships as well as war-vital facilities of one harbor were bombed. Last night combat planes successfully attacked airdromes in southwestern England.

An outpost boat successfully defended itself against an enemy torpedo plane attack.

The enemy did not fly over the Reich area either by day or night.

Italian

ROME, Jan. 26 (AP).—The Italian high command communique:

On the Greek front there was fighting of local character. Our airmen bombed and strafed supply centers, troops and concentrations. One bombing formation attacked military objectives at Salonica, hitting port works, gasoline depots, supply warehouses and the railway station. Vast fires were seen started.

In aerial combats with enemy fighters two enemy planes were shot down and one of our bombers failed to return to base.

Our naval units bombarded enemy positions on the Greek-Albanian coast.

Fighting is going on in Cirenaica (Libya) with effective cooperation from our aviation, which is exerting itself in scatter bombing and machine-gunning enemy troops and mechanized units. Yesterday our fighting planes, met by an enemy formation, shot down four Gloster type planes in flames.

In East Africa there was nothing new on the land front. Our air squadrons bombed enemy forces. Four British planes were shot down in flames.

During the attack by units of German aircraft Jan. 24, reported in yesterday's communique, it is now known that besides the cruiser er already mentioned, two other units—one battleship and a second cruiser—were hit, each with two heavy bombs.

During air attack carried out Jan. 9 against English naval units, mentioned in the communique of Jan. 10, in addition to units already reported hit, it is now known that two cruisers, presently being repaired at Alexandria, were seriously damaged.

Churchill "Very Gracious," Says Willkie After Parley

U. S. Visitor Sees Other Top Men In War Cabinet And Inspects Fire-Bomb Ruins

[By the Associated Press]

JAN 27 19

Belfast, Northern Ireland, Jan. 27—Wendell Willkie will be invited to northern Ireland by chiefs of the linen industry, which exports largely to the United States, it was announced tonight.

[By the Associated Press]

London, Jan. 27—Wendell L. Willkie, the private citizen, displaying the same vigor and enthusiasm of Willkie the campaigner, conferred at length today with the top men of Britain's War Cabinet—Prime Minister Churchill, Anthony Eden, Foreign Secretary, and Ernest Bevin, Labor Minister.

He will be received by King George, too, it was disclosed tonight, but the date of their meeting was not announced.

In his first full day in London Willkie also sandwiched in a quick tour of the City, the financial district around St. Paul's Cathedral which was devastated by the German fire-bomb raid of December 29. He announced his intention to go to neutral Eire (Ireland) to see Prime Minister Eamon de Valera.

Welcome To Ireland

It was understood that Willkie might make the trip next week. From Dublin came the word that de Valera would be "very glad indeed" to see him.

Willkie called first on Eden, then went to No. 10 Downing Street to see Churchill and present a message from President Roosevelt. His original luncheon engagement called for only an hour's stay, but he and Churchill became so engrossed in their conversation that it lasted twice that long.

Churchill Very Gracious

"He was very gracious," Willkie said upon leaving the Prime Minister. "I knew he was a great man. I know it now even more."

From Churchill's official residence he went to call on Bevin and they, too, hit it off from the start. Bevin was due for a Cabinet meeting at 6 P. M., but when the hour approached they still were talking and it took the urging of a secretary finally to get the Labor Minister off to his meeting.

Grinning through most of the day, Willkie spoke bitterly but once. That was when he viewed the fire-blackened ruins of the city where, he was told, 3,000,000 books had been burned.

Burning "Symbolic"

"I thought the burning of Paternoster Row, the street where books are published, rather symbolic," he observed. "They destroyed the place where the truth is told."

Willkie said he found the destruction just about as he expected it, but exclaimed "the way it is being dealt with astonishes me; they are grand people."

"Take me to your toughest shelters," he said. "I want to see the very worst ones you've got. I will talk to everyone who will talk to me—the people in the street, in shelters, in hotels, in trains—everywhere.

Going To Commons

"I also am going to the House of Commons to hear one of your debates."

Tonight Herbert S. Morrison, Home Secretary and Minister of Home Security, asked him to join a shelter inspection tour Wednesday night.

The American visitor dined privately with Lord and Lady Stamp and members of their family, with whom he stayed until a late hour. Lord Stamp has been a Government adviser on economic war plans and a member of the Export Committee.

Willkie, insisting that he is "plain Mister Willkie" on a private visit, found that he was taken for his word when he called on Bevin at the Labor Ministry, where he was required to fill out an official form stating his business.

He left unanswered the question asking "the nature of your business," though an enterprising girl clerk suggested filling in "aid for Britain."

Mrs. Churchill "Charming"

Mrs. Churchill attended the luncheon at No. 10 Downing street and Willkie said "she was most charming."

"I think we had eggs and fish," he added, "and I hope it didn't break any rationing rules.

"It was my first meeting with Mr. Chruchill and we talked for an hour and three-quarters on the international situation, the war, the relations of America and Britain—but I mustn't say more than that."

Of his talk with Bevin, he said: "He is a grand fellow. We liked each other so much I made him late for the Cabinet meeting. Our talk was about labor conditions in England, production in England and what is being done and will be done."

None Downhearted

Regarding his day as a whole, he said, "I have not met anyone so far who is downhearted. You people over here must survive."

Willkie said he had received so many letters, telegrams and telephone calls from the English people that he had hired three secretaries to handle them.

There were more than 1,000 telegrams alone, he said, "mostly from the man in the street, urging him to "come to dinner with me," and "come spend a night in my home."

"Do you think the United States will come into the war?" he was asked at a morning conference with 200 British newspapermen. Willkie replied: "I cannot speak on that. I have no connection with the Government in any way."

Legion Chief Starts ~~Journey To~~ England

study civilian defense methods.

Warner said he and Frank D'Olier, Newark, N. J., former national commander, and Maj. Gen. Frank Parker, U. S. A. (retired), member of the Legion's executive board, will leave New York by clipper plane February 4.

"We wish to observe work of civilian air-raid defense corps, bomb shelter details in municipal locations, actions of non-combatants in air-raid alarms, methods of supply, parachute troop defenses and the British way of handling large blocks of population under wartime stress," he said.

Talk for Two Hours.

London, Jan. 27 (A. P.).—Although Wendell L. Willkie had planned to spend but an hour with Prime Minister Churchill, today, he and the Prime Minister became so engrossed in their conversation at luncheon that the meal lasted two hours.

As Mr. Willkie left Mr. Churchill followed him to his automobile despite rain to say bood-by and the two posed on the sidewalk shaking hands.

"He was very gracious," said Mr. Willkie. "I knew he was a great man. I know it now even more."

Before his luncheon with the Prime Minister, Mr. Willkie made a quick tour of the City of London, the financial district around St. Paul's Cathedral which was devastated by the heavy German fire bomb raid of December 29. Police allowed him inside the barriers inclosing ruins and he picked his way over debris past fire-blackened walls.

To the question "Do you think the United States will come into the war?" Mr. Willkie replied: "I cannot speak on that. I have no connection with the Government in any way."

He said he would remain in London for the next three or four days, then begin a tour of the provinces. He also said he hoped to visit naval, military and air units.

On his way to the Ministry of Information today for the press conference, at which the British newspaper men received him with four rounds of cheers and two "hear-hears," he stopped for a chat with a London bobbie on a corner near his hotel, and with a stray soldier who happened along. Of Englishmen he has met thus far, he said: "I like their nerve. I haven't met anybody so far who is downhearted." He compared walking into a blackout to "walking in a cemetery." Commenting on President Roosevelt's letter to Mr. Churchill, he chuckled: "I think everybody in the United States gave me a letter to somebody."

Of his own purpose he commented on his arrival in England yesterday that he was geared to see with his own eyes and "to listen to everybody from the Prime Minister to the coal heaver," but not to talk.

So buoyant were Mr. Willkie's spirits on the flight from Lisbon that he paced up and down in the plane and even helped the navigators chart their course. He was so eager to see England that he incautiously stood up while the plane was landing at a western port and promptly took a nose dive in the aisle. Unhurt, he picked himself up, vigorously brushed off his suit—the same one he was wearing when he left New York by clipper plane last Wednesday—and bounced out to be received.

"I am very glad to be in England, for whose cause I have the utmost sympathy," he declared, "and for whom I am attempting to do all I can to unite the United States and to give England all the aid that is possible in her struggle for freemen all over the world."

Before boarding the plane for London, however, he cautioned: "I am just Wendell Willkie—plain Mr. Willkie, please. I have no official position here at all."

Making his first visit to London in more than six years, Mr. Willkie was acompanied by two friends, John Cowles, editor of the Minneapolis Star Journal, and Langdon Thorne, a retired New York investment broker. Britons craned their necks to get a good look at Mr. Willkie and seemed not disappointed at his appearance. He was also wearing the same shirt he wore when he left New York. His necktie was awry and a lock of hair dangled characteristically over one eye.

At his morning press conference Mr. Willkie said he wanted to find out "all I can about English methods of production so that I can make up my mind as to how far they can be co-ordinated with American production."

Irish Welcome Promised.

Dublin, Jan. 27 (A. P.).—The office of Prime Minister Eamon de Valera announced today that "Mr. de Valera would be very glad, indeed, to see Mr. Wendell Willkie if he should come to Eire."

London Guard Wears 1940 Willkie Button

LONDON, Jan. 27 (AP).—A super-enthusiastic member of a Home Guard unit which formed a guard of honor at Wendell L. Willkie's first press conference in London today pinned on himself a 1940 Willkie campaign button sent to him by a friend in the United States.

He took it off when an American suggested it "might not be tactful."

Willkie's Aim2 Clerk Suggests: 'Aid Britain'

LONDON, Jan. 27 (AP).—Wendell L. Willkie, insisting that he was "plain Mr. Willkie" on a private trip to London, found himself in a quandary today when he visited Ernest Bevin, Minister of Labor.

Required to fill out an official form stating the nature of his business, Mr. Willkie left it blank. An enterprising girl clerk suggested he fill in: "Aid for Britain."

Willkie Starts Inquiry With Chambermaid

London, Jan. 27 (A. P.).—The chambermaid who brought Wendell L. Willkie "early morning tea" at 8 A. M. was the first "witness" of his plan to get all the information he can about Great Britain.

"How's the war going?" he asked.

"Of course, we're going to win," the girl answered. "But I think we'd like a little more help from America. Will you tell them to send it quickly, please?"

Over a breakfast of grapefruit, bacon, eggs and coffee a half hour later, Mr. Willkie shot the same question at the waiter. He got virtually the same reply.

Soldiers Are Blast Victims—Several Homes Razed

DUBLIN, Jan. 27 (AP)—Three Irish soldiers were killed and a number of civilians injured today in explosions of two sea mines on the south coast.

A sergeant and two privates were killed and two civilians injured by one explosion on the South Wexford coast. Before that a mine exploded at the village of Ballycottin, County Cork, injuring several persons and wrecking several homes.

Other mines were reported washed ashore from the heavily mined English Channel.

BRITISH RENEW RAIDS ON NAZI SUPPLY BASES

4 Germans Killed, 6 Injured In Attack, Berlin Admits

Lone Warplane Is Shot Down In England—London Again Passed Up

[By the Associated Press]

London, Jan. 27—Hannover, vital railway and industrial center of northwestern Germany, was reported today to have been the target of an overnight British raid that started "two large and several small fires" as the R. A. F. resumed its assault on the supply centers of the Nazi war machine.

Hannover, with half a million population, is at the crossing of the east-west Berlin-Cologne and north-south Hamburg-Frankfurt railway trunk lines and one of the chief manufacturing cities of the Reich.

Lone Raider Shot Down

Operations of the Nazi air force over England continued at a minimum, with one "lone-wolf" raider reported shot down and its crew of four interned at an east England town.

London saw the eighth successive midnight arrive without an air-raid alarm, and from the rest of the country the reports told the same story—no air activity, no alerts after dark.

Continued bad weather over the Channel and Nazi continental air bases were believed to have kept the German raiders grounded. Rain fell in the Dover Strait, which was calm under a hovering fog.

Only minor raids in eastern Midlands and eastern Scotland were reported during the day.

An Air Ministry communique said a small number of R. A. F. bombers participated in last night's explosive and incendiary attack on industrial targets in Hannover.

All Planes Return

"All our aircraft returned safely," the communique added.

The bomber shot down today was a Junkers 88 heading home after it had just bombed the east English town, the Ministry's news service reported. It was struck by an anti-aircraft shell.

With smoke pouring from its starboard engine, it skimmed roof tops and made a perfect landing in a plowed field.

The four crewmen climbed out, tossed hand grenades in the plane, which exploded and burned out, then surrendered to military police.

Four Killed By British Raiders, Berlin Says

Berlin, Jan. 27 (AP)—The Nazi high command today announced British raiders killed four persons and injured six in western and central Germany last night. Damage was said to have been slight.

Two direct hits on one British merchantman were reported in "successful" German attacks last night on shipping off the southeast British coast. The loss of three German planes was acknowledged.

DNB said a British air attack today on German mine sweepers was repulsed and that two of the attacking planes were so badly damaged they must be considered lost.

BRITONS' COAL RUNS LOW

Local Shortages Predicted From War Transport Burden

LONDON, Jan. 27 (AP)—David Grenfell, Secretary for Mines, warned Britons in a broadcast today of the possibility of acute local shortages of coal and urged them to share their fuel in a "help your neighbor" plan.

"There may be districts so badly placed for supplies or so hampered by transport difficulties," he said, "that we cannot avoid temporary shortages."

He attributed the problem to transportation priorities given to war necessities.

Greeks Say Foe Lost Severely

Report Italians Suffering Enormous Losses in Vain Counter-attacks.

Athens, Jan. 27 (A. P.).—The Italians were reported by the Greeks today to have suffered enormous losses in a series of counter-attacks attempted since Premier Mussolini placed Gen. Ugo Cavallero in charge of his forces in Albania. Greek dispatches from the battle front said that the Italians left large numbers of wounded behind after each attack, and the number of Fascist prisoners taken was said to be mounting between 100 and 200 a day.

The Greek advance, these advices said, is continuing at the same pace it was going before the Fascist switched to offensive tactics. New positions were said to have been captured by the Greeks north of Klisura in central Albania and in the sector along the Adriatic coast. The operations north of Klisura, Greek reports said, have lost the character of a movement of purely local importance, and the battle, waged there for the last five days, is now in full swing. The Italian forces there were reported to have been freshly ferried across the Adriatic by plane.

Dispatches quoted Italian prisoners as saying that they were hurled into battle at once after getting out of the planes. Some of the prisoners were from an Alpine division appearing on the Albanian front for the first time.

A Greek spokesman said that the counter-attack was intended by Gen. Cavallero to strengthen the morale of his troops. The spokesman added that the attempt to recover the ground lost last week had failed completely. "Our troops," he said, "maintained the initiative and occupied new positions on the mountains and other fortified positions, plus some villages from which the Italians were forced to withdraw."

Drop Shrapnel Bombs.

ROME, Jan. 27 (A. P.).—Growing patrol activity and local actions were reported on the Greek front in Albania by the Italian High Command today. "Our planes dropped shrapnel bombs on enemy troops," the communique said.

LUFTWAFFE ON JOB NOW, GREEKS THINK

Raiders In Albania More Daring In Last Few Days, Hellenes Note

Tank-Supported Fascist Counter-Attack Beaten Off, Athens Says

JAN 27 194

By J. WES GALLAGHER
Associated Press Correspondent

With the Greek Army in Albania, Jan. 27—The appearance of German-type warplanes and a marked change in air tactics since the first of the year caused Greek officers today to speculate on whether Italian pilots are doing all the bombing against the Greeks on this front.

"I don't think those planes are being flown by Italians," said one commander who has been on the front since the start of the war. "I never have seen Italian planes operated as these planes are being flown in the last few days. Those pilots take great risks."

Bombers Swoop Low

Ships resembling new German Junker types have been sweeping to within 200 feet of the ground to bomb and machine-gun roads over which the Greek army has been advancing.

This practice is not general, but is confined to single flights. In a steady six-hour strafing and bombing during recent battles, one flight of planes did the low-flying topped by many others flying several thoussand feet above the jagged mountains.

As the Germans flew in Norway, so did this lower flight. The planes wound through the gorges, dipping to less than 200 feet from the ground to attack Greek positions in Klisura valley.

Attack More Destructive

During the first two months of the war the Italians dropped only a few sticks of bombs in raiding Albanian villages. However, in the last few days whole flights of Italian bombers attacked small villages and attempted to wipe them out completely.

In some cases scarcely a stone is left standing in some of these mountain hamlets, and the entire population has fled to the mountains.

For the first time during the war dive-bombers which were used so effectively in France by the Germans, made their appearance over a Greek city recently, scoring two direct hits on a causeway with two 1,000-pound bombs which are larger than anything the Italians had been using.

Greeks Become Anxious

This growing air opposition is causing Greek anxiety for their spring attack plans, since it is a foretaste of what may be expected when winter weather lifts. Thus far the snow and cold have both hampered and aided the Greeks, slowing their ground advance, but also restricting Italian aerial activity.

In many cases the obvious Italian advantage in the air has caused Greek infantry to halt at noon, did in and wait for darkness before resuming.

Greek officers are hoping to obtain large numbers of planes from the United States and Britain by spring.

"You see how it is," the chief o staff in charge said. "It's terrible. W must have help in airplanes. Many airplanes."

Greeks Report Repulse Of Tank-Aided Attack

Athens, Jan. 27 (AP)—Reinforced Italian infantrymen fighting north of Klisura, Albania, counter-attacked with the aid of tanks, but again were thrown back with severe losses, a Greek Government spokesman said tonight.

Specific locations were not given by the spokesman, who said repeated Fascist attacks were aimed at holding strategic heights.

Greeks Gain Ground

"Our army again gained ground, mopping up the terrain where the Italians left many dead and wounded, and taking 147 prisoners."

Constant hammering by the Greeks in below-zero temperatures and heavy snows was said to have taken an "enormous" toll of Italian strength.

Counter-attacks, sources here said, have failed to stop the slow Greek advances.

Italian Casualties Heavy

Large numbers of casualties have been left by the Italians on the battlefields after each foray, dispatches from the front lines stated. Greek troops were reported to be capturing between 100 and 200 men a day.

The Italian forces were said to have been augmented recently by new troops who were ferried across the Adriatic by planes.

Fighting On Whole Line Reported More Intense

Bitolj, Yugoslavia, Jan. 27 (AP)—Fighting along the entire one hundred-mile Greek-Italian front in Albania was mounting in intensity, reports received at the Yugoslav border said tonight.

Heaviest fighting was centered in the Tepelini and Klisura sectors, where the Italians pounded the Greek lines in mass attacks yesterday with fresh units of mountain-wise Alpini taking part. Observers said the Italian infantry was supported by a continuous artillery and air bombardment.

Greek Resistance Stiff

The Greek forces stubbornly resisted the Italian thrusts, the reports said, and this afternoon began their own round of counter-attacks. The Greeks apparently were challenging their foe in the air, for a number of air fights were reported over the front.

On the southern front, where the Greek left wing has an anchor on the coast, the Greek forces were reported to be near Dukati, twenty-two miles from the port of Valona. However, they were only twelve miles from the southern shore of Valona Bay.

On the northern front the Greeks were reported to have made a strong attack today between Malina and Hondiste, claiming occupation of mountain peaks of strategic importance.

Wavell Trip To Athens Disclosed By London

London, Jan. 27 (AP)—Gen. Sir Archibald P. Wavell, British Middle East commander, recently visited Athens, it was announced officially here tonight.

Wavell, it was said, conferred "on certain aspects of the aid which Great Britain had been giving and is continuing to give Greece in her resistance to Italian aggression.

GERMANS DENY HAVING HALTED RIOTS IN ITALY

Berlin Says Its Troops Were Only on Way to Foot of Boot.

SCOFFS AT ANY UPRISINGS

Rome Adds Its Denials and Asserts Only Airmen Have Arrived.

Berlin, Jan. 27 (A. P.).—Rumors of an uprising in the Italian cities of Turin and Milan were denied in the Wilhelmstrasse to-day.

German troops were said to have been cheered by the populace while passing through Milan yesterday en route to the south of Italy, and it was stated that no German troops whatever are in Turin.

[Rome also denied reports of rioting in northern Italian cities as "a ridiculous invention"; declared that German soldiers had not been sent to Italy to police it and asserted that only German airmen had entered the country.]

Germans Release Pictures.

German picture agencies released today for the first time photos showing German flyers in Sicily. No figures whatever are available, however, of the size of the forces sent to Italy's aid.

"This will become evident once the archives of war are opened after the war is over," German officials said.

These sources also professed to know nothing about troops other than air force detachments having gone to Italy.

To a further question as to what the passage of German troops through Milan meant, they said:

"It is natural that when once the air force has been assigned to a certain task in a certain place. all sorts of re-enforcements and replacements must be sent from time to time."

What the Pictures Show.

The pictures released today, with the approval of the High Command, show among other things how heavy anti-aircraft guns are hauled over rocky ground by tread-track trucks.

Another picture shows a pretty Italian girl handing presents to a German air force soldier through a train compartment window.

Still another snapshot is that of German flyers unloading the heaviest bombs at an undisclosed airport in southern Italy, with mountains in the background. One bomber is represented in another view as "on its way to Malta." Steep cliffs are faintly visible in the background.

There also is a view of a company commander standing apparently on the steps of some southern Italian city hall and thanking the populace for a friendly reception.

Not Previously Admitted.

This reference to Nazi troops moving to the south of Italy appeared to be the first specific statement from either of the Axis capitals that German troops have been sent to Italy. Their purpose there was not disclosed.

There have been reports previously from observers in Balkan capitals that German soldiers had been sent into Italy, and that German officers had been given positions on Italian staffs, but none of these has been confirmed.

Germany is operating units of her air force from Italian bases, taking part in recent weeks in the air war over the Mediterranean. Some of the reports of German forces in Italy indicated they were members of ground forces attached to the air corps.

New Dispatches Quoted.

The Columbia Broadcasting System declared in a broadcast at New York last night that, in spite of the Italian denials, new dispatches from a Balkan capital said that Italian soldiers fought on the side of the rioters in Turin, Milan and other cities. A report from the CBS correspondent at Belgrade, Winston Burdett, said that there were heavy casualties and that "a number of Italian army officers and several other men, reported to be dignitaries of the Fascist party, are said to have been arrested by the Italian secret police and the German Gestapo."

Berlin Reports Milan Cheered German Troops

Fails to Reveal How Many Soldiers Are in Italy, Denies Uprising Rumors

JAN 27 194

BERLIN, Jan. 27 (AP).—German troops passing through Milan en route to southern Italy were reported here today to have been cheered yesterday by the Italian population.

Rumors of uprisings at Milan and Turin were denied in German government quarters. It was stated that no German troops whatever were in Turin.

German authorities professed to know nothing about any German troops other than air force detachments having gone to Italy. Asked what the reference to passage of troops through Milan meant, they said: "It is natural that, once the air force has been assigned to a certain task in a certain place all sorts of reinforcements and replacements must be sent from time to time."

No figures are available here as to the size of the German forces sent to Italy's aid. A Nazi authority commented: "This will become evident once the archives of war are opened after the war is over."

German picture agencies issued today photographs showing German flyers on Italy's Mediterranean island of Sicily. One picture showed heavy anti-aircraft guns being hauled over rocky ground by trucks. Another showed a girl handing presents to a German air force soldier through a railroad car window.

There were other views, of German flyers unloading bombs at an airport with mountains in the background, a bomber represented as "on the way to Malta" (British Mediterranean base), and a company commander standing on the steps of a city hall in a southern Italian city and apparently thanking the populace for a friendly reception.

Hitler Divides Reich's Richest Province Into Upper, Lower Silesia

Berlin, Tuesday, Jan. 28 (AP)—Adolf Hitler today ordered Germany's biggest and most populous province divided into the separate provinces of Upper and Lower Silesia, effective immediately.

The order was designed "to assure political leadership and administration" for the 7,500,000 inhabitants, the announcement said.

Kattowitz was made capital for Upper, Breslau for Lower Silesia.

Two Nazi stalwarts were named governors, Fritz Bracht, 41, for Upper; Karl Hanke, 37, for Lower Silesia.

Joseph Wagner, who also had charge of the price structure under the four-year plan, asked to be relieved as governor of Silesia, Rudolph Hess, Reich-minister, announced.

By The Associated Press.

BERLIN, Jan. 27—"Soldat" M. Schmeling still has a pretty high regard for the boxing ability of Max Schmeling, former world heavyweight champion.

Though he was stopped by Champion Joe Louis in one round the last time they met, he would concede the Brown Bomber nothing more today than that "he's still the best man you've got over there." Schmeling wasn't, obviously, cutting himself out of the world picture.

Schmeling, though now a "Fallschirmjaeger" (parachute trooper), hasn't quit the ring. He pointed out there was no chance of his making another trip to the United States at present, even though he would like to, but there still is a possibility he will defend his European heavyweight title.

It was with this in mind that Schmeling, a guest of the Berlin Stadium, together with about twenty other parachute troopers, sat in on yesterday's battle between Walter Neusel and Adolf Heuser. Max, who beat Neusel in nine rounds in 1934 and stopped Heuser in 1 minute and 12 seconds in 1939, studied the two closely as Neusel slugged his way to victory. The former world champion explained he might meet one or the other in the future.

Furlough to Be Decided

"It's not decided definitely yet," said Der Max, "whether the army will give me furlough to train." Under German boxing rules, Schmeling must defend the title within a specified time or give it up.

He would say little about his activities as a parachute trooper beyond the statement that "it takes just as much training as it does to be a boxer." To all further questions he simply smiled and said, "You'd better not ask me about that," then chuckled at the interviewer's disappointment.

The Black Uhlan belittled the leg injury he suffered while training for parachute jumping. He said the leg had healed completely, in spite of talk in Berlin that the break had been serious, and showed no signs of a limp. He moved as spryly as he ever did in the ring.

Autograph Seekers Busy

Before the Neusel-Heuser bout began, the crowd spotted Schmeling and besieged him for autographs. Then a spotlight picked out the former champion and the loudspeaker blared for silence as he came up to the ring to be introduced.

"We have the pleasure to introduce the former world champion, Max Schmeling, parachute troop volunteer," said the announcer.

Max, trim and broad-shouldered and looking more fit than ever as a result of his military training, skipped through the ropes and trotted to the center of the ring. He clicked his heels in Prussian fashion, and snapped a Nazi salute to the four sides of the hall. He was dressed in civilian clothes, and one fan shouted:

"Where's that uniform?"

The crowd laughed good-naturedly. Then it was "Unser Max" (Our Max) as he shook hands with Neusel, patted Heuser on the head and went back to his comrades in arms to watch the fight.

IRON GUARDISTS LOSE POSITIONS IN THE CABINET

Antonescu Picks Members Who Will Back Purge of Rumanian Rebels.

ARMY CAPTURES TERRORISTS

JAN 27 1941

Fugitives Driven From Hiding Places by Blizzard and Lack of Provisions.

Bucharest, Jan. 27 (A. P.).—Premier Gen. Ion Antonescu eliminated today all Iron Guardists from his Cabinet and organized a strong new military government.

In forming the new government he surrounded himself with generals who helped quell the abortive Iron Guard revolution last week and who he knew would uphold him without question in his attempt to purge the country of rebellious elements.

Antonescu will continue in the dual capacity of Premier and Foreign Minister. Gen. Dimitri Popescu, appointed last week as Minister of Interior—replacing Gen. George Petrovicescu, an Iron Guardist who is now reported either dead or arrested—remains in that post.

The Iron Guardist Propaganda Minister, whose department was held responsible for Guardist papers' refusal to publish Antonescu's pleas for support last week, was removed from office. He now is reported under arrest.

Terrorists Rounded Up.

Alleged Iron Guard terrorists, sneaking through the streets of Bucharest in a blinding blizzard, the worst snowstorm of the winter here, were being picked up one by one today by bayonet-armed soldiers. After days of hiding, some of them in dark alleys, basements and unfinished buildings, the fugitives were being forced into the open by hunger and cold.

Except for an occasional shot fired in the air to halt pedestrians out after the 10 P. M. curfew, the capital was calm last night and today, and official spokesmen said that Vice-Premier Horia Sima, leader of the Iron Guard and officially described as the leader of last week's revolt, was under arrest. He was said to have been seized in a sleeping car while attempting to flee Rumania.

An Associated Press survey of the damage done in Bucharest during last week's bloody revolt showed that one of the most badly wrecked houses was the huge stone mansion of the munitions manufacturer Malaxa, which had been taken over by the Iron Guard. He and his family had previously left the house. Heavy artillery shells made holes one to two feet across through the stout walls before the army finally succeeded in forcing the barricaded rebels to hoist the white flag.

Travelers from the provinces said that, while the Iron Guard took over complete control of many towns for several days, the army soon moved in to force their surrender, in some cases without firing a shot.

An impressive State funeral was held today for fallen officers and soldiers in Victoria Plaza before the presidency of the council offices, where some of the most furious fighting had taken place.

Soldiers Halt Every Auto In Bucharest In Hunt For Extremists

[By the Associated Press]

Bucharest, Jan. 27—Premier Gen. Ion Antonescu formed a provisional military government for Rumania today eliminating from his Cabinet all members of the Iron Guard, which was held responsible for the nation's short-lived but bloody revolt.

All but seven members of the new Government are high-ranking army officers and close personal friends of Antonescu, who continues in the dual capacity of Premier and Foreign Minister.

In all, there are eleven generals, a lieutenant colonel, an air commander, four college professors, a Supreme Court judge and two technical experts.

Soldiers Search Autos

As Antonescu reshaped his Government, soldiers with fixed bayonets began halting every automobile passing through Bucharest in a redoubled search for any Iron Guard extremists who thus far have escaped the Government's dragnet.

Also, just outside Antonescu's office a funeral was held in the scarred public square for seventeen army men who fell in quelling last week's abortive revolt.

Thousands stood with bared heads at the mass funeral as a blizzard swirled through the square, surrounded by public buildings bearing scars of artillery shells and machine-gun bullets.

The service was chanted before the caskets of a major, a colonel and fifteen subalterns and privates.

New Cabinet Members

Among the new Cabinet members are:

Interior, Gen. Dimitru Popescu.
Propaganda, Prof. Nichifor Crainic.
Justice, Judge George Docan.
National Defense, Gen. Joseph Iacobici.
Finance, Gen. N. Sotenescu.
Agriculture, Gen. Ion Sichitiu.
Education, Gen. Radu Rossetti.
National Economy, Gen. George Potopeanu.
Minister of Coordination, Col. N. Dragomir.
Minister Without Portfolio, Prof. Mihil Antonescu, who formerly was Justice Minister.

Observers here believed the military regime would be retained only as long as Antonescu considers a national emergency exists. After the rebel leaders are coralled and court-martialed and a new political organization is formed it was considered likely he would organize some form of coalition government in an effort toward complete national unity.

ISTANBUL TO GET AIR RAID PRACTICE

Mock State of War to Open There Tomorrow.

JAN 27 194

Istanbul, Jan. 27 (A. P.).—A mock state of war to last four days has been declared in Istanbul, beginning tomorrow, to give residents a taste of what may be in store for them if Turkey should be drawn into the European conflict. It will include the most extensive air raid drill thus far for the city, key points of the link between Europe and the Near East in the strategic Dardanelles region.

Planes are to simulate air attacks on Istanbul and citizens will be forced to take cover when sirens sound, while all traffic, including trains, will be halted. Underground chambers of the famous palace of the Sultans, relic of the Ottoman empire, will be used as air-raid shelters.

The preparations coincided with declarations in Turkish newspapers that the nation would defend itself against any Axis attack and also would act swiftly in the event of a threat elsewhere in the Balkans.

British officers yesterday concluded military talks with Turkish leaders at Ankara and left for Karabuk, near the Black Sea, to inspect Turkey's new fuel and iron industry. Semi-official sources said the conferences were held in an amiable atmosphere and that further consultations would be held whenever necessary. Turkey and Britain have a pact containing a pledge of British aid in event Turkey should be attacked.

Count Csaky Dies in Budapest

Forty-six-year-old Foreign Minister Linked Hungary to Axis Alliance.

Budapest, Jan. 27 (A. P.).—The Hungarian Foreign Minister, Count Istvan Csaky, whose signature linked Hungary to the Rome-Berlin-Tokio Axis last November, died early today after an illness of seven weeks. He was 46 years old, the youngest Foreign Minister in Hungarian history. He had been in a coma since Saturday night. He had been stricken ill on December 9 aboard a train in Yugoslavia, just after signing a Yugoslav-Hungarian pact of friendship.

His illness was first diagnosed as influenza, but later as food poisoning. His twenty-eight-year-old bride of eight months, the former Countess Maria Chorinsky of Moravia, was at the bedside when death came.

Count Csaky, who had spent half his life at the Foreign Office, became Foreign Minister in 1938, after the Munich Conference, when a Cabinet change growing out of dissatisfaction over Hungary's share of Czecho-Slovakia brought him into the Government. He held the portfolio ever since. An ardent nationalist, he was said to have enjoyed the confidence of both Benito Mussolini and Adolf Hitler. The key to his policy was implicit in the assertion he often made that Hungary's greatest good was to be found in tightening her bonds with Germany.

Mourned by Germans.

Berlin, Jan. 27 (A. P.).—The death of the Hungarian Foreign Minister, Count Istvan Csaky is mourned by the German people just as though he were one of their number, authorized German spokesmen said today.

An Ardent Patriot.

Count Csaky, a career diplomat, was first of all a Hungarian patriot and an ardent Nationalist. He trained for diplomacy as a profession at the Royal Academy at Vienna, then entered the service of his country as a Legation Attache in 1919, during the confusion following the world war end and the break-up of the Austro-Hungarian Empire. Through the years he climbed gradually in the service, was Minister to Spain and Charge d'Affaires in Spain and Portugal, and then was called home to serve under the Foreign Minister, Kolman von Kanya, in Budapest.

It was the Munich Conference, at which he was an observer, that opened the way for Count Csaky to become Foreign Minister. At that time, in September, he was Chief of Cabinet in the Von Kanya Ministry. Von Kanya resigned because of Hungary's dissatisfaction over the slice of dismembered Czecho-Slovakia given her at the conference. In the next two years, up to the beginning of his fatal illness last December, Count Csaky spent much time "on the road" as Hungarian Foreign Minister, chiefly in Rome and Berlin.

Italy Boosts Crops By Electric Shock

Washington, Jan. 27 (A. P.).—Italy claims to have evolved a method of boosting wheat yields by giving seed a pre-planting electric shock, the Department of Agriculture reported today.

The department learned that treatment by a high-tension electric current was used to stimulate the main reproductive cells of the seed, and Italian agriculture experts said this developed more grains to each head of wheat.

Italians Fleeing Eritrea Border, British on Heels

Fascists Retreat Headlong; Invading Army Within a Few Miles of Agordat

By The Associated Press

CAIRO, Jan. 27.—A precipitate retreat by the Italians into Eritrea from Umm Hagar, their last position near the border of the Anglo-Egyptian Sudan, was reported in military circles here tonight. The British were said to be in hot pursuit.

While the British East African campaign thus apparently was gaining momentum, another army of Gen. Sir Archibald P. Wavell's forces was said to be strengthening its position at Derna, the next Libyan port in the path of the drive in North Africa.

British vanguards in Italy's colony of Eritrea were reported to be only a few miles from Agordat, an important station on a railroad running east toward Asmara, the Eritrean capital, seventy miles away, and Massaua, Eritrea's only good port.

The Italians have thrown up defense works hastily at Agordat, British military sources said. There was no indication, however, that troops would be sent by the railroad from Asmara to reinforce the Italian divisions which the British now have pressed back about eighty miles since the recapture of Kassala, in the Anglo-Egyptian Sudan, on Jan. 19.

Three or four battalions of Italian troops are retreating from Umm Hagar, advices received here said. They were reported cut off from the main Italian positions in Eritrea by the British advance, and their line of withdrawal appeared to be leading them southward into Ethiopia. Italian positions around Barentu, thirty-eight miles southwest of Agordat, were reported threatened by another British column.

From a separate fighting front still farther southeast in Africa, the British reported progress in both the Gallabat (Metemma) sector and the interior of Ethiopia and said British patrols in Italian Somaliland, opposite the Kenya border, had engaged in successful encounters "along the whole front."

The British reported Kenya Colony practically cleared of the Italians who invaded the northern part of that territory last fall. Some were reported to have been pursued into Ethiopia by South African forces, while others were said to have been pushed across the border into Italian Somaliland, where the British have occupied waterholes vital in that desert territory.

The chief pressure on the Italians in Northern Africa came from the Royal Air Force. The Middle East Commands communique said operations in the region of Derna were developing "satisfactorily."

In the capture of Tobruk last week, British headquarters said, 25,000 Italian prisoners were taken and they, together with 1,100 captured to date in the Eritrean invasion, raise Great Britain's total of Italian prisoners to about 111,000.

The British communique reported twenty-two medium and twenty-eight light tanks seized also at Tobruk and said the counting and sorting of guns captured there was "proceeding."

The Royal Air Force reported six Italian planes destroyed in yesterday's fighting, five in air battles and one on a landing field.

British Push Deep Into Eritrea

Invaders Now Eighty Miles Beyond Frontier —25,000 Italians Captured at Tobruk.

Cairo, Jan. 27 (A. P.).—British imperial forces, smashing by land and air at Italy's African empire on fronts 2,000 miles apart, have driven nearly eighty miles into Eritrea, the Middle East Command announced late today. The communique reported also that the British were closing in on the important railroad center of Agordat, and on Barentu, both in Eritrea, and that operations in the Derna area of Libya were developing satisfactorily.

British headquarters also announced that 25,000 Italian prisoners were seized in last week's capture of the Libyan port base of Tobruk and that 1,100 prisoners have been taken thus far in the invasion of Eritrea. These figures brought to 111,000 the number of Italian prisoners taken by the British since they launched their African offensive.

Pacing the land operations in the Derna area, the Royal Air Force announced raids on the landing ground there and at Barce, another Libyan base, where a number of Fascist craft on the ground and buildings were reported hit. Five Italian planes were reported shot down, three of them near Mechile, south of Derna, and two others which were attacking British troops advancing on Derna itself. A sixth Italian craft was said to have been destroyed on a landing field near Mechile. One British plane was reported missing.

The Italians were reported to have fled hastily from Umm Hagar, their last post in the border region between the Anglo-Egyptian Sudan and Eritrea, with the British closely pursuing them. Umm Hagar is in southernmost Eritrea, near the junction with the Ethiouian frontier.

Agordat is eighty miles inside Eritrea from the Sudan border and is the railhead of a line to Asmara, the Eritrean capital, seventy miles farther east. Barentu is sixty miles inside Eritrea and thirty-eight miles southwest of Agordat.

Further down in Africa, today's war bulletin said, operations were progressing in the Metemma area and further successes were reported by Ethiopian natives against the Italians in their Fascist-conquered country. British patrols operating in Italian Somaliland, opposite the Kenya border, have engaged in successful encounters "along the whole front," the British Command asserted.

Fighting Around Derna.

Earlier today British troops were reported in battle contact with the garrison of the little Libyan port of Derna, gateway to the mountain plateau where Marshal Rodolfo Graziani may make a last stand, some observers believe, to defend his base at Bengasi, 150 miles further along the Cirenaican coast.

The British said there have already been some clashes around Derna, reached three days ago by advance British mechanized units which have since been re-enforced by infantry and artillery brought ninety-five miles from captured Tobruk.

Around Derna is the African Eden to which Premier Mussolini sent hundreds of Italian colonists to farm the fertile valleys of the Gebel Akdar (Green Mountains) which may now afford Graziani a good rugged terrain for a fight. There were no reports, however, that Graziani so far has sent up troops to meet the British advance.

Lively Fighting Reported.

Rome, Jan. 27 (A. P.).—The Italian High Command reported today its troops in Libya had inflicted considerable losses on British armored vehicles in lively fighting east and south of the port of Derna. It added that the Italian Air Force "bombed, strafed and machine-gunned strong artillery and mechanized concentrations."

Two British planes were shot down by Italian fighters, it said.

Moscow's View Revealed.

Moscow, Jan. 27 (A. P.).—The Red Star, newspaper of the Soviet Russian Army, said last night that Marshal Graziani's position in Africa is critical, and that it is no longer a question of the losses suffered by the Italian troops in Libya "but of the possibility of their further resistance at all."

"The appearance of the German air force in the Mediterranean," it declared, "of course limits somewhat the liberty to maneuver the British Navy, but this cannot prevent fully its military action."

The newspaper added that "the mighty German military technic" was not enough to permit invasion of England in 1940, and that invasion now would demand colossal efforts by Germany because the English power of resistance has grown immeasurably.

20,000 Messages Reach Egypt Through Red Cross

CAIRO, Jan. 27 (AP).—Twenty thousand messages relayed by the International Red Cross for Italian prisoners in Egypt and Palestine were received here today by special mail from Geneva.

Fascist prisoners taken at Bardia have been removed to transit camps at Alexandria and other parts of Egypt to make room for those captured at Tobruk. These are now reaching the Valley of the Nile by rail, road and sea. In the transit camps they are given new clothes.

Havas Becomes Official News Agency

Vichy, Jan. 27 (A. Vichy, Jan. 27 (A. P.).—Col. Francois de la Rocque, former commander of the Fascist Croix de Feu organization, was released by German officials in Paris today and returned to unoccupied France, it was reported here. He left at once for his home at Clermont-Ferrand.

It was said that the Rightist leader, who had been named a member of Chief of State Marshal Petain's advisory council, had been arrested on January 24 and his home, automobile and papers searched.

He was questioned, it was said, about unauthorized meetings of his followers which he was reported to have been holding in the occupied zone.

Vichy, Jan. 27 (AP) — A sword which George Washington gave to the Marquis de Lafayette will be turned over to Admiral William D. Leahy, United States Ambassador to France, for presentation to President Roosevelt, it was reported today.

Marshal Philippe Petain, Chief of State, will hand the sword to Leahy. It was donated by Charles Baron, descendant of a comrade-in-arms of Lafayette, who has given two other Lafayette relics previously presented to Roosevelt.

DUTCH CATHOLICS DEFY NAZI ORDER

Clergy Refuses to Bury Them With Rites.

Amsterdam (Via Berlin) Jan. 27 (A. P.).—The Catholic episcopacy of the Netherlands defied national socialism in a pastoral letter read in all churches yesterday and reiterated a former refusal to administer extreme unction and bury with Catholic rites "liberals, Socialists, communists and National Socialists." The letter was signed by the archbishop and four bishops.

As regards the Nazis, the letter said that refusal to anoint and bury applies to "those Catholics of whom it is known that they are supporting the National Socialist movement in large measure."

The letter further emphasizes tha since the Catholic leaders' first statement (of several weeks ago) it has become even more clearly evident that the Nazi movement not only threatens to hamper the church in the execution of its tasks, but that it endangers the Christian conception of life of those who participate in it.

"Therefore even membership will, generally speaking, not be permitted." the letter stated.

Spaghetti Rationed

Rome, Jan. 27.—(AP)—Ration cards further restricting the consumption of spaghetti emphasized an ever-tightening food control on the home front tonight while Italian armies fought with their backs to the wall in defense of Fascism's empire.

The high command reported stiff resistance to the British advance on the Libyan port of Derna, 95 miles west of captured Tobruk and a desert prize because of its gushing springs.

In Albania, the war bulletin said, trainloads of dive bombers and fighter pilots sent from Germany assisted Italian patrols in resisting Greek pressure.

The presence of these German airmen in Italy was said to have led to foreign reports that they were used to suppress rioting in the northern industrial cities of Milan and Turin, long noted for their anti-German sentiment.

Continue to Deny Rioting

Both the riots and the use of Germans in police duty were denied by authoritative spokesmen, and officials for the first time permitted publication of Belgrade dispatches as broadcast abroad that disorders in Milan and Turin were quelled with the help of German troops.

"Just in case the people of Milan and Turin are not aware of what's happening in their respective cities," was the sarcastic commentary printed with the reports.

An order to serve spaghetti, rice and noodle dishes in restaurants only upon presentation of food cards was a new departure and closed a loophole in previous restrictions which had dealt only with the quantities and variety of food served.

The ration tickets go into effect Feb. 1, and limit each restaurant patron to one dish a day, either at noon or in the evening, of spaghetti, noodles, rice, and other wheat paste foods which are soup courses in Italy.

ITALY RATIONS MORE

Spaghetti in Restaurants Is Hit by New Curb.

Rome, Jan. 27 (A. P.).—Food Dictator Giuseppe Tassinari tightened the restrictions today on the eating of spaghetti, rice and noodles by introducing ration cards for diners in restaurants.

Beginning on February 1 ration tickets must be presented in restaurants for every dish of rice or such wheat paste foods as spaghetti and noodles, with the ration limited to one dish a day, either at noon or in the evening. The ration was fixed at 70 to 110 grams (0.4 to 3.85 ounces) depending on the category of the restaurant.

Hitherto rice, spaghetti and flour for noodle-making had been rationed in homes, while restaurants had been restricted to serving such foods at the noon meal only.

Assails Hull Statement.

Tokio, Jan. 27 (A. P.).—The Japanese Foreign Minister, Yosuke Matsuoka, was yesterday reported by Domei, the Japanese news agency, to have declared before a House of Representatives budget committee: "So long as America maintains her policy of regarding China, instead of the Eastern Pacific, as her first line of defense, the development of friendly relations between Japan and the United States will remain an idle dream."

Domei said that Mr. Matsuoka described the recent statement of the American Secretary of State, Cordell Hull, on the Manchurian accident as "such an obvious distortion of the fact that it will not bear the barest scrutiny."

[Mr. Hull told the House Foreign Affairs Committee on January 15 that the first step toward tyrannical rule was taken "in the Far East in 1931 with the forceful occupation of Manchuria in contravention of the provisions of the Nine-Power treaty and of the Kellogg-Briand pact."]

Mr. Matsuoka was said to have repeated a wish for friendship with the United States, but declared that it must be based on sympathetic understanding of each other's policy. Domei added that Admiral Koshiro Oikawa, Minister of the Navy, told the Budget Committee that the current budget estimates had been prepared in view of American naval expansion.

TRUCE SIGNED BY INDO-CHINA

U. S. and British Envoys Active in Bangkok.

Hanoi, Jan. 27 (A. P.).—The Indo-Chinese authorities announced today that since both French Indo-China and Thailand (Siam) had accepted Japanese mediation proposals, an armistice to halt hostilities between the two had been arranged, effective at 10 A. M. tomorrow (11 P. M. tonight, New York time).

"A commission for the termination of hostilities, comprised of French, Thai and Japanese officials, is to convene at Saigon, French Indo-China, on Wednesday," another announcement said, and French spokesmen added that the commission would consider methods of withdrawal of Thai forces from western Indo-China.

Reports received in official circles from western Indo-China stated that a Japanese warship had anchored off Cape St. Jacques at the mouth of the Saigon River, sixty miles south of Saigon, but that no one came ashore immediately.

Terms Not Submitted

BANGKOK, Thailand, Jan. 27 (AP)—A decision has been reached to conclude a truce in the undeclared border warfare between Thailand and French Indo-China, but Japan, acting as mediator, has not yet submitted the basis for such an agreement, Deputy Foreign Minister Nai Direk Jayanam said today.

He declined to indicate the terms of a possible settlement. Intense diplomatic activity prevailed at the Foreign Office, where callers included the British and United States Ministers to Bangkok.

The Thai High Command had announced that its troops pursued vigorous activity on all fronts yesterday.

A High Command communiqué said Thai troops, aided by the air force, had surrounded the fortress of Sisophon, in French Indo-China, occupied a town in Champasak Province and districts in Luang-Prabang, on the right bank of the Upper Mekong River.

Two French planes attempting to raid Northeast Thailand were reported routed by Thai craft.

Sharp Fighting Reported.

Undeclared warfare between Siam and French Indo-China last November after a long series of border incidents that followed the breakdown of negotiations on Siam's demand for the return of former Siamese territory from the French colony. After the fall of France, Siam demanded the return of parts of Laos and Cambodia, in the neighborhood of the Mekong River.

Spirited fighting was reported on November 26 in Cambodia, and has spread from that time on. Later air fights were said to have taken place and extensive air raiding has been reported. A treaty in which each side agreed to respect each other's territory was reported to have been signed on December 6, but the fighting continued, with reports of towns being fired on with artillery, renewed air raiding and even sharp naval engagements.

Early this month, Siamese forces were reported to have driven into Cambodia and other parts of Indo-China and on January 17 the French acknowledged sixty-six casualties in fighting near Sisophon, Cambodia. Bangkok was placed under a blackout, as both sides threatened to bomb each other's cities. On January 19 the Siamese High Command declared that the Siamese flag had been raised on Cambodian soil for the first time in more than fifty years. The Vichy Government announced last Thursday night that it had accepted Japan's offer of two days earlier to mediate the dispute and Siam accepted a short time later.

SENATORS HEAR SECRETARY AT CLOSED SESSION

He Is Quoted as Believing Japan Aims to Seize Indo-China.

HAS CONFIDENCE IN TURKEY

Said to Credit U. S. Aid for Much of British Resistance Over Last Seven Months.

Washington, Jan. 27 (A. P.).—Secretary Hull told the Senate Foreign Relations Committee today, it was said in an informed quarter, that long efforts to obtain mutual understanding and co-operation between the United States and Japan had been virtually fruitless.

Testifying behind closed doors, the Secretary of State was reported also to have stated his belief that Japan undoubtedly aims to seize control of Indo-China.

He told the committee, it was said, that American aid had been largely responsible for Great Britain's ability to resist a German invasion in the last seven months. He is reported to have declared emphatically his belief that the increased assistance envisioned under the administration's British aid bill would not involve the United States in war.

At one point he is quoted as saying he believed Turkey would stand fast in its opposition to threatened Axis aggression.

Committee members said the State Department apparently had had information that an attempt to invade England was scheduled for last September but had no definite clew as to why it had not come off.

Marshall and Stark Testify.

The House Foreign Affairs Committee, winding up two weeks of hearings on the bill, received testimony in closed session today from Admiral Harold R. Stark, chief of naval operations, Gen. George C. Marshall, army chief of staff, and Major-Gen. George H. Brett, acting chief of the Air Corps. After he had concluded, Admiral Stark gave no intimation of the nature of his testimony other than to tell reporters that he "stuck to naval matters."

Gens. Marshall and Brett told newspaper men before entering the committee room that they favored enactment of the legislation, but declined to discuss details.

Secretary Hull, the first witness of the Senate committee's study of the bill, had asked permission to present some testimony behind closed doors. He explained that he wanted to present information which might bear on the bill "but which should not be made known to every nation."

Under President Roosevelt's definition of warring democracies, China might become one of the beneficiaries of the lend-lease legislation.

In asking that he first be permitted to testify privately, Secretary Hull said that publicity "would not be compatible with the public interest and might be injurious to our national security."

Nothing New, Says Clark.

After the session, the committee chairman, Senator George, of Georgia, told reporters that Mr. Hull had discussed at length the effect of world events within the last eight years on American foreign policy.

Senator Harrison of Mississippi said he thought Mr. Hull had given the committee much valuable information, but Senator Clark, Democrat, of Missouri, an opponent of the pending bill, said he had not heard anything he hadn't already read in the newspapers.

Senator Johnson, Republican, of California, one of the leaders in the fight against the bill, was reported to have questioned Mr. Hull closely on the question of whether the aid to Britain provided in the bill would involve the United States in the war. Mr. Johnson began, it was said, by recounting that the British had failed to support the firm stand taken by the United States against the Japanese invasion of Manchuria. He was said also to have observed that the British failed to take an effective stand against Mussolini's invasion of Ethiopia.

War Aims Bill Introduced.

In the Senate, Senator Nye, Republican, of North Dakota, introduced on behalf of himself and Senator Wheeler, Democrat, of Montana, a resolution calling on the belligerent nations for a statement of their war aims, the conditions on which they would agree to peace and disclosure of any "secret treaties for division of territorial spoils."

"Before we go further with this gamble of aid to Britain," Mr. Nye asserted, "we ought to have more information about the cause we are serving."

He said the resolution was "part of an effort to make certain our country is not going to play a sucker part."

Majority Leader Barkley observed that such a demand was "just as logical" as if a citizen observed a neighbor with a knife held at his throat by an aggressor to ask the combatants to "stop and enumerate what they are fighting over and what it started about before deciding to help either one."

"Under common law," he added, "a citizen has the right to take the life of an aggressor if he has reason to believe a murder is about to be committed. I feel that nations have somewhat the same right although not necessarily under a common law."

Speaker Rayburn and Majority Leader McCormack told reporters today that the general sentiment in the House is overwhelmingly in favor of enactment of the bill.

Mr. McCormack said he would be disappointed if the measure was not taken up next Monday and action completed at the end of next week after reasonable debate.

Navy Air Defense Bill Passed

Senate Unanimously Votes $300,000,000—Roosevelt Asks More for Cargo Ships.

Washington, Jan. 27 (A. P.).—The Senate passed unanimously and sent to the White House today legislation authorizing a $300,000,000 expenditure for modernizing the fleet's air defense. The chamber acted within an hour after the Senate Naval Committee had approved the legislation.

Witnesses at the hearing testified that increased protection against air attack had been shown to be necessary because of lessons learned from the European war.

Senator Walsh, of Massachusetts, chairman of the Naval Committee, said he would call up later authorizations totaling $909,000,000 for expanding navy shipbuilding and ordnance works and building 400 small naval craft, which also had been approved by the committee earlier in the day.

The Senate also passed and sent to the White House today legislation authorizing an increase of 495 midshipmen in the United States Naval Academy's enrolment. Under the proposal each member of Congress will be given the right to have five instead of four appointees in the academy.

The number of appointees which the President is authorized to make annually would be increased from fifteen to twenty-five and appointments each year by the Secretary of Navy would be increased from fifty to 100.

Committee Unanimous for Fund.

Early in the day the Senate naval committee approved unanimously the $1,209,000,000 program for expanding naval shipbuilding and ordnance facilities, modernizing the fleet's anti-aircraft defense and constructing small vessels. The committee acted on the House-approved legislation.

BRITISH LINER TORPEDOED OFF WEST AFRICA

Empress Of Australia Reports She's 'Down By Bow' And Being Shelled

Vessel Brought King And Queen To America—Recently Used As Troop Ship

[By the Associated Press]

Miami, Fla., Jan. 27—The Empress of Australia, reported in service recently as a troop transport, radioed tonight she had been torpedoed and shelled off the West African coast, then suddenly became silent.

Tropical Radio said the 21,833-ton vessel, which brought the King and Queen of England to this continent two years ago, called for assistance at 10.38 P. M., saying she had been attacked 200 miles off Dakar, French West Africa.

Lifeboats Put Out

The ship's operator, Tropical reported said the vessel was "down by the bow" and had put lifeboats over the port side. Tropical intercepted a 10.53 P. M. message relating the ship was "being shelled again."

30.24—4194

Tropical said the 590-foot ship tried to send out another message at 10.55 P. M., but the signals were unintelligible and cut off abruptly.

Position of the ship was given as latitude 15 degrees 30 minutes north longitude 18 degrees 20 minutes west

The Empress of Australia, the station said, had called Tropical radio direct with the messages.

Owned By Canadian Pacific

The vessel was built in 1914 and was owned by the Canadian Pacific Railway Company.

Last June the liner was reported, with six others, awaiting a convoy at Freetown, Africa.

Last October 3, she stopped to rescue the entire crew of torpedoed Dutch liner Volendam in mid-Atlantic. The Empress of Australia had left Liverpool on that voyage with the refugee ship City of Benares, but had turned back for repairs to her mine belt.

Sister Ship Lost In October

Another Canadian-Pacific liner, the 42,348-ton Empress of Britain, which took the royal couple back to England, was torpedoed and sunk in October with a loss of forty-five men while the British were attempting to tow her back to port after she had been badly damaged by Nazi bombers.

The Empress of Australia, built at Stettin, Germany, for the Hamburg-American line, was turned over to England under the terms of the Versailles treaty in 1921.

She was first placed in the Vancouver-Far East service. The ship was damaged in the Japanese earthquake of 1923, but was held in Yokohama harbor as a relief station. She was further damaged when fire swept the ravaged city a week later.

In 1926 she was transferred to the transatlantic service and from time to time was used as a cruise ship.

Flu Vaccine Ship Sunk By German Submarine

New York, Jan. 27 (AP)—A German submarine has sunk a ship carrying 500,000 doses of the new American flu vaccine en route to England, says the American Medical Association News.

The date and name of the ship were not given. The shipments of this new hope for stopping influenza have been kept secret.

Although there was reason to believe that the 500,000 doses were not the major part of the shipments, the News regarded the loss as a major medical disaster. It quoted the official journal Hygeia, of the American Medical Association, as saying:

"Thus war struck in an indirect manner at one of the great investigations of modern science that might have brought increased freedom from disease to millions and millions of people."

Vaccine Is New Stuff

The vaccine is the new stuff discovered in one of the most dramatic medical "accidents" on record at the Rockefeller Institute for Medical Research here.

A few ferrets got distemper. Ferrets, which have both flu and distemper, were in use as guinea pigs for searching for a flu vaccine. A large number of ferrets were vaccinated with the distemper virus from these few, the idea being to protect the other animals from distemper.

To the amazement of the workers, the vaccine protected all the ferrets against not only distemper but also influenza.

Worked On Humans

This was the more surprising because previous vaccinations of exactly the same sort had not developed any protection against influenza.

The new vaccine proved "stable" and worked when tried on human volunteers.

The final step necessary was vaccination of millions of humans against a nationally threatened flu epidemic. England, now threatened with the American flu epidemic, offered an ideal testing ground.

Sinking Of Rangitana Told By Three Survivors

Los Angeles, Jan. 27 (AP)—The story of the sinking of the New Zealand liner Rangitana by three German raiders in the South Pacific last November 27, killing of several persons aboard and abandonment of scores of others on a remote island, was told today by three survivors.

The three, who arrived on the liner Mariposa from New Zealand, are Chief Justice William H. Stuart, of the Friendly Islands, Mrs. Stuart and Miss Mary Black, of New Zealand.

Justice Stuart said the raiders, painted coal black, overtook the Rangitana three days out of Auckland at 3 A. M.

Plenty On Board Killed

"Our ship," he said, "sent out S O S calls, zigzagged and tried to escape while firing her lone four-inch gun. But the raiders disabled our wireless and wrecked the ship with heavy gunfire.

"There were plenty of the officers, crew and passengers killed before the Rangitana finally was sunk.

"The Germans took us off—about 400 passengers and crew—and put us aboard one of the raiders. We were not given enough to eat and had to watch them throw big hunks of cooked meat to two shepherd dogs which they also saved from our ship."

Rescued By Australian Cruiser

Justice Stuart said the Nazis later sorted out men of fighting age and kept them aboard, putting the other Rangitana crewmen and passengers ashore on Emirau Island in the Bismarck Archipelago. There, an Australian cruiser picked them up and returned them to New Zealand.

"The Nazis have sunk eight or ten other British ships in the South Seas," Justice Stuart asserted. "I saw the survivors aboard the raiders.

The justice and his wife are en route to British Guiana, where he had been transferred. Miss Black also is on her way there.

War Losses 3,619,624 Tons

WASHINGTON, Jan. 27 (AP).—The Maritime Commission reported today 964 merchant vessels sunk or missing as a result of the war from Sept. 3, 1939, to Dec. 7, 1940. The gross tonnage aggregates 3,619,624.

British flag losses were given as 436 ships of 1,765,851 gross tons, but it was noted that the tonnage of two lost vessels was not known. Next heaviest losses were among ships of Norwegian registry, with 129 of 344,903 gross tons reported sunk or missing.

German losses were given as seventy ships of 386,630 gross tons, and Italian as sixteen ships of 82,618 gross tons.

Losses of other nations in number of ships and gross tonnage were listed as follows:

Argentina, one and 3,425; Belgium, twenty-one and 97,683; Denmark, forty and 83,353; Egypt, one and 3,400; Estonia, eleven and 12,319; Finland, twenty-six and 58,051; France, thirty-thre and 170,103; Greece, forty-one and 182,028; Hungary, one and 4,295; Japan, one and 11,930; Latvia, one and 4,434; Lithuania, three and 4,073; Holland, forty-one and 155,733; Panama, eight and 38,342; Spain, four and 10,063; Sweden, seventy-four and 171,969; Russia, one and 968; Yugoslava, five and 25,553.

Many of the ships of neutral registry can be counted as lost from the British supply service. It has been estimated, for instance, that 30 per cent of Norway's merchant fleet was brought into British service after the German invasion.

Canada Issues Warrant in Bid For Nazi Pilot

Papers Sent to Ogdensburg Say Werra Stole Boat He Used in Escape to U. S.

OGDENSBURG, N. Y., Jan. 27 (AP).—Baron Franz von Werra, youthful Nazi aviator, has been charged with theft by Canadian provincial police in a move interpreted by authorities here as an effort to return the escaped pilot to Canada.

Police Chief Herbert S. Meyers, of Ogdensburg, said today a warrant filed with him by Constable Alex MacLeod, of Prescott, Ont., charged the baron with theft of a $35 boat, with which he crossed the St. Lawrence River Friday night into the United States.

Myers asserted he obtained the warrant Saturday night, several hours after Werra, released in $5,000 bond on an illegal entry charge, left Ogdensburg for New York City. The warrant, he added, has not been served so far as he knows. Constable MacLeod has not asked for extradition.

Myers said the charge, brought by operators of a ferry between Ogdensburg and Prescott, might be used as a basis to send the twenty-six-year-old aviator back to Canada, where he fled from a prison train. International law forbids the pilot's return by American authorities as an escaped prisoner of war.

Werra claims to have downed fourteen enemy planes before being forced down in England on Sept. 7.

He Cannot Be Found

Baron Franz von Werra, the young German aviator who escaped to the United States while on his way to a Canadian prison camp, and arrived in New York on Sunday, could not be found anywhere in town yesterday. He was taken over by German consular officials on his arrival and promptly vanished.

"I can assure you that the baron will not be found," Siegmar Lurtz, one of the German consuls, said. "Werra is a soldier and as such cannot talk to the press." It was later stated at the consulate, 17 Battery Place, that Werra was "resting comfortably." The young aviator suffered frostbite of both ears while crossing the St. Lawrence River. The consulate officials added that no statement regarding Werra would be issued until after his appearance on Thursday before a Federal Grand Jury in Albany.

It was at first believed that Werra had been taken to the Hotel Astor from Grand Central Terminal, but R. K. Christenberry, vice-president and general manager of the hotel, denied that Werra had ever been there. Mr. Christenberry said that every inch of the Astor had been searched and no trace found of Werra.

Canada Denies Wick Is Ace Held Prisoner

Ottawa, Jan. 27 (AP)—A well-informed Canadian source said "definitely" tonight, that Maj. Helmuth Wick, Nazi air ace whom the Germans reported as lost in dogfighting with the British over the English channel December 4, is not among the German prisoners interned in Canada.

A Canadian announcement last week told of the arrival of a 25-year-old Nazi airman credited by the Germans with downing 56 planes and holder of the Iron Cross with the rare addition of oak leaves.

38 Nazi Seamen Leave ToPrepareCamp for 400

Vanguard of the Columbus Crew Off to New Mexico

SAN FRANCISCO, Jan. 27 (AP).—Bound for a new home in the hills of New Mexico, thirty-eight Nazi seamen from the scuttled liner Columbus left tonight in the midst of an elaborate governmental effort at secrecy which caused a traffic jam many blocks long. The men are ship's carpenters and mechanics who have volunteered to prepare an abandoned Civilian Conservation Corps camp near Fort Stanton, N. M., as living quarters for 400 shipmates.

They were taken from Angel Island in the government steamship Angel Island which, instead of going to its usual berth, landed the seamen blocks away at a railroad pier reached only after a draw bridge had been raised on crowded Third Street.

Philippines May Oust Japanese Landholders

Special Prosecutor Goes To Davao To Undertake Proceedings

Manila, Jan. 27 (AP)—The Manila Daily Bulletin's correspondent reported today that a special prosecutor had arrived in Davao province to start ejectment proceedings within the next few days against a number of Japanese allegedly holding land illegally through Filipino dummies or otherwise.

Japanese nationals control the rich hemp-growing region in the province, located on the large southern island of Mindanao.

The correspondent reported the land involved in the prosecutor's planned action totaled 132,000 acres.

The last official census in 1939 showed Japanese in the province totaled 17,888, with 292,600 Filipinos and 112 Americans.

Lindbergh Has Dropped Most Of U. S. Positions

Retains Only Position As Reserve Colonel In Army Air Corps. Now Inactive

Washington, Jan. 27 (AP)—Charles A. Lindbergh, who last week testified before the House Foreign Affairs Committee against the Administration's "lend-lease" measure for aid to Britain, has severed all connection with Federal agencies except his reserve commission as a colonel in the Army Air Corps.

He draws compensation under that commission only while on active duty. He accepted a five-year renewal of the commission in the fall of 1937.

Last year he declined to allow his name to be considered for reelection to the National Advisory Committee for Aeronautics, and in December he withdrew from membership on the board of trustees of the Carnegie Institute of Washington.

He drew no compensation for serving in either of the two latter posts.

TO EYE WEST COAST BLIMP BASE SITES

Member Of Naval Commission Says Work Near Frisco May Start Soon

Recommendations For Boston And Norfolk-Hatteras Stations Made

[By the Associated Press]

San Francisco, Jan. 27—Capt. Charles E. Rosendahl, senior member of a three-man special naval commission studying sites for non-rigid airships, today said construction of a $5,000,000 base for lighter-than-air craft would probably get under way in the San Francisco Bay area within several weeks.

The commission, appointed by Frank Knox, Secretary of the Navy, arrived in San Francisco today to survey twenty-six proposed sites within fifty miles of the city.

Captain Rosendahl said the commission forwarded recommendations for two other bases to Washington. One is in the Boston area and the other in the Norfolk-Hatteras area.

Bill Being Prepared

These three are all contemplated under this year's naval air program. A bill now is being prepared for the appropriation of funds for the bases and for forty-eight non-rigid dirigibles authorized but not appropriated for in the previous Congress.

It would take twelve to fifteen months to build a base of the type he has in mind, said Captain Rosendahl, the navy's outstanding advocate of lighter-than-air ships.

While the navy has not announced delivery dates on its airships, four of which have already been ordered, the captain said the ships would be ready when the field is completed. He declined to say how many would be based on any of the three new stations.

To Have 300 Employes

Each of the three contemplated fields to be used exclusively by lighter-than-air ships would have around 300 civilian and naval employes. Each base, he said, would be self-sustaining with hangars, shops, barracks and quarters for unmarried officers.

The blimps will be used solely on the inshore patrol searching for submarines and mines, guarding shipping lanes and approaches to major harbors.

"The blimps, which are powered balloons," Captain Rosendahl said, "are able to investigate suspicious clues on the surface of the water and their vigilance would add much to the destruction of submarines. The inshore patrol would consist of fast mosquito boats, airplanes and airships.

Where Blimps Figure

"We don't expect enemy surface craft to get inside our shipping lanes. If they do, something is awfully sour somewhere else. But submarines can, and that's where the blimps figure."

Although the navy is tentatively considering construction of the largest rigid dirigible ever built, capable of ferrying planes across any ocean, Captain Rosendahl said he knew "nothing about the navy taking back the Sunnyvale base" near San Jose, California.

This airship base was turned over to the army after the navy's three big rigid dirigibles met disaster about five years ago. Now, rechristened Moffett Field, the base is the center of the army's West Coast air training.

NAVY TO USE NEW BERMUDA BASE SITE

Great Sound Location Will Be Developed.

Washington, Jan. 27 (A. P.).—The major United States naval base to be established in Bermuda will be built in Great Sound, it was learned authoritatively today, instead of at St. Davids Island, as originally planned. A dredging and filling project to transform the site into a seaplane base may convert Tuckers and Morgans islands, separated only by a narrow channel, into one.

The navy's original announcement was that seaplane and garrison establishments would be placed on St. David's Island around Ruths Bay and Riggs Bay. The navy retains that site, it was said, and may later establish an auxiliary base there.

Other establishments to be constructed at Bermuda with a $75,000,000 starting fund allotted by President Roosevelt include:

Landplane base on Long Bird Island and land around Rofes Bay; explosive storage warehouses on small islands along the eastern entrance to Castle Harbor; improvement of Castle Harbor.

HOOVER SAYS BELGIUM FACES STARK FAMINE

Reports No Nazi Food Supplies Will Be Within Reach In Month

Even Now Ration Is Far In Excess Of Stocks, He Asserts

JAN 27 1941

[By the Associated Press]

New York, Jan. 27—Herbert Hoover asserted today that "major food supplies to maintain any Belgian ration will be non-existent in a month."

The former President, issuing a statement through the office of the National Committee on Food for the Five Small Democracies, said he based his assertion on a report cabled from Brussels by three experts sent to Belgium to study the food situation.

No population could survive if the present theoretical per-person ration in Belgium "could be maintained—an dthis ration is not available," the former World War chairman of the Commission for Relief of Belgium said.

Half Pound Of Bread

Hoover said the present theoretical daily ration for each Belgian "consists of about one-half pound of bread, two ounces of sugar, about one and one-tenth pounds of potatoes and half an ounce of beans and peas.

"This ration, however, is no longer effective since only sixty per cent. of meats and fats, and twenty per cent. of potatoes, are distributed. Beans and peas are practically exhausted. Consequently today's actual ration is not much more than one third of that in Britain or Germany."

To Be Exhausted

Asserting breadstuffs will be exhausted by February 15 on the basis of the present ration, that hogs had been reduced from 1,100,000 to about 260,000 and that inroads were being made upon dairy herbs and breeding cattle to provide a small beef ration, hoover said:

"Minimum imports required before next August's harvest are estimated at 850,000 tons of breadstuffs, 157,000 tons of fats and meats, 180,000 tons of beans, peas and large amounts of potatoes. Our commission cables: 'Situation is serious. Outside help urgently needed.'"

In the War Zone

British on Watch for Sudden Blow By Hitler to Help Mussolini

JAN 27 1941

By DEWITT MACKENZIE.

When a chap is badly down on his luck all sorts of gossip are likely to be circulated about him, as witness Rome's denial of reports that there has been rioting in northern Italy, with German troops helping suppress the disorders.

There are several points of interest in connection with this story, and one of them is that while it is branded as false, it was born out of the mental attitude of a lot of Italy's neighbors. That is to say, the country is so hard hit both economically and militarily that many outsiders are expecting a collapse—hence the wild tales.

Then there is Berlin's denial of an uprising in Italy, accompanied by the tip (given inadvertently or otherwise) that German troops were cheered while passing through Milan yesterday en route to southern Italy. So it would seem that London was correct when it stated last night that Nazi forces were being sent into Italy.

An authoritative British source warned that reports of extensive unrest in Italy should be treated with reserve—and the British would know what is going on there if anybody, since they are actively engaged in trying to cause a popular upheaval against Mussolini. However, an informed source in the British capital said considerable numbers of Germans were being sent into Italy, ostensibly as air staffs, but allegedly to support the Fascist regime.

African Empire Collapsing.

Whatever may be the purpose of the Nazi troops, it will take a good deal more aid than that from Herr Hitler to pull his partner out of his difficulties. Reports from the battle fronts today indicate that Il Duce's African empire is continuing to collapse like a Scot's bag-pipe on a dying wail.

The British and their allies having bagged the important strategic port of Tobruk on the Libyan coast, already are in fighting contact with the small port of Derna, ninety-five miles to the west. The speed with which the British are proceeding in this drive across the desert is a fair indication of the straits to which Fascist Marshal Graziani has been reduced. His position is indeed desperate. Not only has he long been cut off from badly needed supplies and re-enforcements from Italy by the British blockade, but he has lost probably more than half his effectives as prisoners or casualties, in addition to mountains of supplies and equipment.

Meantime the British are lashing out at other Italian colonies. They have driven a wedge half way through Eritrea, have penetrated Somaliland and are assisting the natives of Ethiopia in their uprising to oust their Fascist overlords and restore little Emperor Haile Selassie to the throne of the Lions of Judah.

The Italian situation as a whole boils down to this: It's going to take heroic measures on the part of Herr Hitler to save the southern end of the Axis. Aerial support won't turn the trick at this stage, unless Der Fuehrer goes all out with it. That would mean relaxing his attack on Britain direct, an operation which also would lay the occupied countries and Germany open to the assault of the Royal Air Force.

London seems to think that the manner in which the Germans have been lying quiet for the last week is an ominous sign. The British suspect that Hitler is brewing something and is up to no good. That may represent the true situation. Hitler must strike somewhere soon, not only to relieve pressure on his partner, but to get at England before American aid gives her too much strength.

If the weather were right, Hitler might try his projected invasion of England. Turkey has just declared a mock state of war for four days in Istanbul, to get the people accustomed to combat conditions—recognition of the possibility that Germany might strike through the Balkans. Then there is the chance of assault on Gibraltar, or the occupation of Spain and perhaps Portugal. However, there is no definite indication yet of where Hitler will hit.

Texts of Day's War Communiques

British

CAIRO, Egypt, Jan. 27 (AP)—A communiqué of the British Middle East Command said today:

Libya: Operations in the Derna area are developing satisfactorily. Prisoners taken at Tobruk now number over 25,000, together with twenty-two medium tanks and twenty-eight light tanks. Enumeration of guns captured is proceeding.

Eritrea: Our forces are closing in on the enemy holding positions about Agordat and Barentu. Meanwhile, the enemy yesterday evacuated Um Hagar. This Italian column is being closely pursued in its retreat. Prisoners in our hands from these operations now number over 1,100.

Ethiopia: While operations in the Metemma area are progressing, further patriot [native] successes are reported in the interior.

Italian Somaliland: Successful encounters are reported by our patrols operating in enemy territory along the whole front.

A Royal Air Force communiqué today said:

Raids were carried out by bombing aircraft of the Royal Air Force yesterday on the airdrome at Barce [Libya]. Bombs fell near hangars and dispersed aircraft. Hits were also registered on adjacent buildings. A number of enemy aircraft on the ground were damaged.

An attack also was made on the landing ground at Derna.

Our fighters maintained patrols throughout the day and engagements took place with enemy fighters. Three CR-42's were shot down near Mekili [south of Derna] and two G-50's attacking our troops near Derna were sent down in flames, although protected by a number of enemy fighters.

On the landing ground near Mekili one S-79 was destroyed on the ground. One of our aircraft is missing.

In Italian East Africa continued support was given to the army in its advance in Eritrea. Bombs were dropped near a bridge at Tellina and motor transport was machine-gunned at Barentu by aircraft of a Rhodesian squadron.

Other aircraft of the same squadron attacked a motor transport convoy near Um Hagar and direct hits were registered. A landing ground in the Tellina-Barentu area was also bombed and motor transport machine-gunned.

Enemy aircraft flew over Malta on Jan. 25. Our fighters intercepted and chased one enemy aircraft back to Sicily, silencing the rear gunner and severely damaging the port engine.

Numerous reconnaissance flights were carried out on all fronts. From all the above operations our aircraft returned safely with the exception of one missing fighter in Libya.

LONDON, Jan. 27 (AP)—A joint communiqué of the Air Ministry and Ministry of Home Security today said:

There was some very slight air activity by the enemy during the early part of last night, but no bombs were dropped. Otherwise there is nothing to report.

The Ministries of Air and Home Security issued the following communiqué today:

Early this morning an enemy aircraft dropped several bombs on a northeast coast town. These caused little damage, but a few persons were seriously injured.

During the afternoon another enemy bomber crossed the east coast and dropped bombs which killed several persons. Some buildings were damaged. This bomber was shot down.

Greek

ATHENS, Tuesday, Jan. 28 (AP)—The Greek General Headquarters communiqué today said:

Local actions occurred. Some enemy positions were occupied. About ninety prisoners were taken and some automatic weapons have fallen into our hands. An enemy tank attack was repulsed with four of them destroyed.

The Ministry of Home Security said:

No raids in Greece.

Italian

ROME, Jan. 27 (AP)—The Italian High Command said in a communiqué today:

On the Greek front local actions and growing patrol activity were reported. Our planes dropped shrapnel bombs on enemy troops.

In Cyrenaica our troops inflicted considerable losses on enemy armored vehicles in lively fighting east and south of Derna. Our air force bombed, strafed and machine-gunned strong artillery and mechanized concentrations. Two English planes were shot down by our fighters.

In East Africa fighting continued on the Sudanese front with intense, continual, effective aid by our air detachments.

On the Kenya front our detachments surprised a strong enemy column, inflicting considerable losses.

German

BERLIN, Jan. 27 (AP)—The German High Command today issued the following communiqué:

Combat planes on Jan. 26 successfully attacked convoys of individual ships on the English southeast coast. Two direct hits on a merchantman near Oxfordness caused a violent explosion. Reconnaissance planes sighted a burning merchantman north of Great Yarmouth, which on the previous day had been attacked by a combat plane.

The enemy last night dropped incendiaries and a few explosives at several places in Western and Central Germany. Fires were quickly quenched and damage was immaterial. In the raid there were four dead and six injured among the civilian population. Three of our own planes are missing.

BOOTLEGGING BRINGS SEVERE PENALTIES IN FRANCE

BUT WOMEN FORM 'BOMB'
TO BUY CHIFFON HOSE (750)

(EDITOR'S NOTE: ASSOCIATED PRESS CORRESPONDENT ROY P.PORTER RETURNED RECENTLY FROM PARIS AFTER WORKING FOR SIX MONTHS IN THE GERMAN OCCUPIED ZONE OF FRANCE.)

BY ROY P.PORTER

(ADVANCE)-NEW YORK, JAN. 26-(AP)-PARISIANS WHO OBJECT TO RATIONING RESTRICTIONS AND HAVE ENOUGH MONEY TO SUPPORT THEMSELVES IN THE STYLE TO WHICH THEY ARE ACCUSTOMED TRY THE "BUY BOOTLEG" METHOD BUT IT'S DANGEROUS BUSINESS.

THAT'S BECAUSE UNDER THE LAW THE MAN WHO SELLS SOAP OR SILK STOCKINGS OR EVEN BEEFSTEAK ON PROHIBITED DAYS CAN BE FINED UP TO A MILLION DRANCS, CLOSED OUT AND SENT TO PRISON. AND THE BUYER MAY GET THE SAME STIFF TREATMENT IF CAUGHT WITH THE GOODS.

DESPITE THE DIFFICULTIES, SOME LITTLE BOULEVARD PEDDLERS HAVE BUILT UP PROFITABLE BUSINESSES IN CONTRABAND.

FOR EXAMPLE, AMERICAN CIGARETS VIRTUALLY DON'T EXIST IN PARIS, SINCE THEY'VE BEEN SMOKED UP OR HIDDEN AWAY AND NO MORE ARE COMING IN. BUT--IF YOU HAVE A FRIEND WHO KNOWS A FRIEND, YOU MAY GET A CARTON OF YOUR FAVORITE BRAND. YOU PAY NOT LESS THAN 25 FRANCS (55 CENTS) A PACKAGE. THE SAME GOES FOR SOME LOWER GRADE ENGLISH CIGARETS AND A FEW OF THE MILDER FRENCH BRANDS.

WOMEN HAVE ENTERED THE BOOTLEG SILK STOCKING INDUSTRY IN A BIG WAY. I HEARD RECENTLY OF SEVERAL WHO HAD FORMED A "MOB" DEALING IN CHIFFON HOSE--AT 125 FRANCS ($2.75), WHERE THE NORMAL PRICE, IF THERE WERE ANY LEFT, WOULD BE ABOUT 85 FRANCS ($1.87).

ONE OF THE BEST OF THE RACKETS IS IN SOAP AND SHAVING SOAP. A MAN I KNOW FOUND A FRIEND WHO WORKED IN A BAR WHO HAD ACCESS TO A STOCK OF SOAP--SEVERAL WEEL KNOWN AMERICAN BRANDS AND MORE FRENCH. HE BOUGHT TWO DOZEN CAKES AS HIS WINTER SUPPLY, AFTER THE SOAP RATIONING WAS ANNOUNCED. HE PAID 12 FRANCS (26 CENTS) A CAKE INSTEAD OF THE USUAL THREE FRANCS BUT WAS SO HAPPY TO FIND IT THAT HE TOLD SOME OF HIS BEST FRIENDS HE WAS PLANNING A BATHTUB PARTY FOR THE NEXT SATURDAY NIGHT--IF THERE WAS ANY HOT WATER.

GASOLINE--THAT MEANS REGULAR GASOLINE WITHOUT ALCOHOL--HAS BECOME BIG BUSINESS. THE PEOPLE WHO HAVE CARS AND PERMITS TO OPERATE THEM OFTEN FIND IT DIFFICULT TO GET GAS, EVEN AT AUTHORIZED SERVICE STATIONS DEALING IN OFFICIAL COUPON BOOKS.

A FOREIGN CORRESPONDENT GOT A TELEPHONE CALL ONE MORNING FROM A MAN WHO SAID HE HAD 1,500 GALLONS TO SELL. DID HE WANT SOME? THE CORRESPONDENT SAID SURE, HE'D LIKE ALL HE COULD PAY FOR, BUT HOT MUCH WAS IT. "ONLY 25 FRANCS (55 CENTS) - GALLON," CAME THE REPLY. "BUT YOU HAVE TO TAKE THE WHOLE CAR AT ONCE." THE DEAL PETERED OUT RIGHT THERE.

30.24—7203

OTHER CONTRABAND COMMODITIES INCLUDE BUTTER, PRICED AT 165 FRANCS FOR FIVE POUNDS OR MORE THAN 72 CENTS A POUND; SALAD OIL, NOW VERY RARE BECAUSE MOST OF IT COMES FROM FRENCH COLONIES IN AFRICA, AT 50 FRANCS A QUART ($1.10) INSTEAD OF NINE FRANCS OR 20 CENTS; AND SUCH MISCELLANEOUS ITEMS AS NAVY BEANS, DRIED SPLIT PEAS, LENTILS AND NOODLES, ALL SUBJECT TO FOOD RESTRICTIONS.

THE BOOTLEGGERS AND THE BUYERS SUFFER SEVERELY WHEN CAUGHT. THEY ARE DOUBLY GUILTY, FIRST BECAUSE THEY ARE DEALING IN CONTRABAND MERCHANDISE, AND SECOND, BECAUSE THEY VIOLATE THE RIGID REGULATION WHICH PROHIBITS RAISING OF PRICES WITHOUT OFFICIAL PERMISSION.

AND THEY MUST ANSWER TO CHARGES FROM TWO ADMINISTRATIONS AS WELL --THE FRENCH AUTHORITIES WHO CONTROL DIRECTLY THE DISTRIBUTION OF FOODSTUFFS AND THE GERMANS WHO PLAN THE RATIONING SCHEDULES ON THE BASIS OF EXISTING SUPPLIES WITH PERIODIC DECLARATIONS OF ALL STOCKS HELD IN WAREHOUSES.

FRENCH POLICE ARE ACTIVE IN RUNNING DOWN BOOTLEGGERS, CONFISCATING THEIR ILLEGAL STOCKS AND SEIZING CONSIGNMENTS DURING DELIVERY.

ONE WOMAN WAS CAUGHT WITH A SUITCASE FULL OF LINEN THREAD--HARD TO GET BECAUSE THE NORTHERN TEXTILE MILLS STILL ARE OPERATING AT ONLY A PART OF THEIR CAPACITY. SHE PLEADED INNOCENT AND WAS DISCHARGED ON THE GROUND THAT THREAD WAS NOT RATIONED; BUT SHE PAID A FINE ON THE CHARGE THAT SHE HAD VIOLATED THE HOARDING REGULATION.

IT'S ALL VERY MUCH ON THE Q.T.--BUT IF YOU'VE GOT A FRIEND WHO'S GOT A FRIEND.....

'STANDING ROOM ONLY'

IN HONGKONG

MILLION REFUGEES

OF CHINESE WAR

ENTER COLONY (620) (PIX SERVICED)

24

BY HOLAND HORGAARD

(ADVANCE)-NEW YORK, JAN 27-(AP)-FAR FROM THE MOTHER COUNTRY, BRITAIN'S RICH CROWN COLONY OF HONGKONG IS GETTING READY TO DEFEND HERSELF, WITH THE "STANDING ROOM ONLY" SIGN OUT. HER MOST DIFFICULT PROBLEM--FOOD SUPPLY---ALREADY IS COMPLICATED.

AT LEAST A MILLION REFUGEES FROM THE CHINESE-JAPANESE WAR HAVE CROWDED INTO HONGKONG WHICH BECAME A PART OF THE BRITISH EMPIRE EXACTLY 100 YEARS AGO THIS MONTH, TO JOIN HER NORMAL PEACETIME POPULATION OF A MILLION.

FEAR OF AN ATTACK FROM JAPAN, EVER-PRESENT THOUGHT IN HONGKONG SINCE THE JAPANESE BEGAN THEIR INVASION OF CHINA IN JULY, 1937, WAS HEIGHTENED LAST SEPT. 27 WHEN JAPAN FORMALLY ALLIED HERSELF WITH GERMANY AND ITALY, ENEMIES OF THE BRITISH EMPIRE.

BRITISH OFFICIALS IN THE COLONY ARE NOT LIKELY TO FORGET SOON THE CLAMOR IN THE JAPANESE PRESS THAT RESTORATION OF HONGKONG TO "CHINESE" HANDS BE A PART OF THE JAPANESE-SPONSORED "NEW ORDER OF EAST ASIA."

THE BRITISH BELIEVE ANY ATTEMPT TO SEIZE HONGKONG AND HER MASS OF MODERN FORTIFICATIONS WOULD BE LONG AND COSTLY.

BUT A PROLONGED SIEGE COULD BRING STAVATION TO THE MOUNTAINOUS ISLAND AND THE DENSELY POPULATED SETTLEMENTS ON THE NEARBY SOUTH CHINA COAST, WHICH TOGETHER FORM THE 391-SQUARE-MILE AREA OF THE COLONY. THE BARREN SLOPES YIELD NO FOOD AND HONGKONG MUST DEPEND ENTIRELY UPON COMMUNICATIONS BY SEA AND LAND NOT ONLY FOR FOOD BUT, IN RAINLESS SEASONS, EVEN FOR WATER.

ALARMED WHEN JAPAN STARTED SPREADING HER INVASION ALONG THE SOUTHERN COAST MORE THAN TWO YEARS AGO, HONGKONG SPEEDED WORK ON A $40,000,000 DEFENSE SYSTEM.

MORE BIG GUNS WERE PLACED ON HILLTOPS OVERLOOKING THE HARBOR THROUGH WHICH POURED A VAST TRADE FROM INTERIOR CHINA. ANTI-AIRCRAFT EMPLACEMENTS SURROUNDED THEM, AND CONCRETE PILLBOXES HOUSING MACHINE-GUNS BEGAN TO DOT THE SLOPES ABOVE THE BAY.

DIGGING OF DEEP TUNNELS IN THE ROCKY HILLS TO SERVE AS AIR RAID SHELTERS WAS BEGUN. THIS WORK STILL CONTINUES. HUNDREDS OF POWERFUL SEARCHLIGHTS ARE READY TO SPOT AIR RAIDERS.

AS EARLY AS 1938, PRACTICE BLACKOUTS WERE STAGED, AND HEAVY PENALTIES WERE PROVIDED FOR FAILURE TO EXTINGUISH LIGHTS WHEN ORDERED.

EVEN RESIDENTS KNOW LITTLE ABOUT THE GIANT BATTERIES MOUNTED ON THE ISLAND PEAK ABOVE HONGKONG AND IN THE HILLS BEHIND KOWLOON, COLONY PENINSULA JUTTING FROM THE MAINLAND.

THOSE BIG GUNS--SAID TO BE 16 AND 18-INCH CANNON OF GREATER RANGE THAN ANY SHIP-MOUNTED WEAPONS--WERE LANDED AND PUT IN PLACE AT NIGHT, WITH GUARDS KEEPING ALL CIVILIANS AT A DISTANCE.

HONGKONG CAME TO KNOW THE MEANING OF "WAR NERVES" ALMOST FROM THE OUTSET OF THE JAPANESE INVASION OF CHINA, AND THE DEADLY ROAR OF BOMBS AND GUNS WAS HEARD THERE AS LONG AGO AS JANUARY, 1938, WHEN JAPANESE WARSHIPS DUELED WITH CHINESE SHORE BATTERIES ONLY FOUR MILES AWAY.

THERE ARE REMINDERS OF THE NEARNESS OF WAR ON THE STREETS. TURBANED SIKH TROOPS FROM INDIA ARRIVE TO BOLSTER THE COLONY'S GARRISON. CHINESE SOLDIERS IN THE BRITISH ARMIES, DRESSED IN KHAKI, ARE A COMMON SIGHT.

ANOTHER REMINDER IS THE ALMOST TOTAL ABSENCE OF WHITE WOMEN. SEVERAL THOUSAND BRITISH WOMEN WERE TAKEN FROM HONGKONG TO AUSTRALIA LAST JULY WHEN THERE WAS ACUTE FEAR OF WAR WITH JAPAN.

ALTOGETHER, IT IS IN A DEFINITELY MARTIAL ATMOSPHERE THAT HONGKONG OBSERVES THIS MONTH THE 100TH ANNIVERSARY OF HER INCLUSION IN THE BRITISH EMPIRE. THE ISLAND FROM WHICH THE COLONY TAKES HER NAME WAS CEDED BY CHINA TO BRITAIN IN JANUARY, 1841, AFTER ENGLISH NAVAL COMMANDERS HAD SEEN THE IMMENSE COMMERCIAL AND MILITARY VALUE OF THE DEEP, SHELTERED HARBOR, USED AS A BASE DURING THE "OPIUM WAR."

(SPECIAL NEWS SERVICE ADVANCE FOR PMS OF MONDAY, JANUARY 27)

(ADVANCE)--NEW YORK SECOND ADD HONGKONG BY NORGAARD X X X "OPIUM WAR."

REALIZATION THAT THE ISLAND ALONE NEVER COULD BE DEFENDED EASILY INSPIRED OTHER BRITISH ACQUISITIONS ON THE MAINLAND. IN 1860, KOWLOON

30.24 — 7205

30.24 — 7205

PENINSULA, OPPOSITE THE ISLAND, WAS CEDED BY CHINA, AND IN 1898 A 99-YEAR LEASE GAVE TO BRITAIN ADDITIONAL ISLANDS AND MORE OF THE MAIN-LAND. WITH THEM WENT COMMAND OF THE HARBOR AND THE MOUTH OF THE CANTON RIVER, SOUTH CHINA'S GREAT COMMERCIAL THOROUGHFARE.

DEFENSE OF EAST INDIES

JAN 27 1941

ENORMOUS PROGRESS

MADE IN LAST YEAR (440)

(EDITOR'S NOTE: THE NETHERLANDS EAST INDIES, HOLLAND'S TREASURE OF RAW MATERIALS, ARE A CENTER OF INTEREST FOR JAPAN, BRITAIN AND THE UNITED STATES BECAUSE OF THE RUBBER, OIL, TIN AND OTHER PRODUCTS OF QUEEN WILHELMINA'S PACIFIC ISLANDS, FIVE TIMES THE AREA OF JAPAN BUT WITH SLIGHTLY LESS POPULATION. SINCE GERMAN INVASION OF THE MOTHER COUNTRY, THE INDIES HAVE MADE STRENUOUS EFFORTS TO BUILD UP THEIR DEFENSES.)

BY RELMAN MORIN

(ADVANCE)...BANDOENG, NETHERLANDS EAST INDIES, (CORRESPONDENCE OF THE ASSOCIATED PRESS)--DEFENSE OF THE EAST INDIES HAS BOILED DOWN TO A QUESTION OF MORE EQUIPMENT.

HIGHEST OFFICERS OF THE NETHERLANDS EAST INDIES ARMY AND AIR FORCE SAY FRANKLY THAT FROM THE STANDPOINT OF MATERIAL, THE ARMY IS NOT YET FULLY PREPARED, ALTHOUGH ENORMOUS PROGRESS HAS BEEN MADE IN THE LAST YEAR.

JAN 27 1941

GUNS, SHELLS, TANKS, ARMORED CARS AND AIRPLANES ARE NEEDED URGENTLY, THEY SAY, BEFORE THE GREATEST POTENTIAL EFFICIENCY OF THE FIGHTING FORCES CAN BE REACHED.

CONSIDERING ITS SIZE, THE ARMY LOOKS FORMIDABLE. AN EXTENSIVE TOUR OF THIS HUGE ARMY AND AIR BASE DISCLOSED THE GENERAL OUTLINES AND SOME CONCRETE PHASES OF THE DEFENSE PATTERN AND THE METHOD OF OPERATIONS IF THE ISLANDS ARE ATTACKED.

MILITARY SECRECY PRECLUDES THE DISCLOSURE OF DETAILS BUT THE PLAN GENERALLY IS DESCRIBED AS THIS:

A SYSTEM HAS BEEN DEVISED UNDER WHICH MOTORIZED CAVALRY AND INFANTRY WILL SPEED TO ANY POINT IN JAVA AOR SUMATRA ON SHORT NOTICE SHOULD ANY ATTACKING FORCE DISABLE THE BATTERIES, PIERCE THE SHORE DEFENSES AND EFFECT A LANDING -- OPERATIONS, INCIDENTALLY, WHICH THE DUTCH BELIEVE WOULD BE COSTLY IN MANPOWER IN VIEW OF THE SIZE OF THE NETHERLANDS EAST INDIES SUBMARINE FLEET AND AIR FORCE.

BOTH OF THE MAIN ISLANDS ARE CRISS-CROSSED BY A NETWORK OF HIGHWAYS CONSTRUCTED TO PERMIT RAPID MOVEMENT OF THE HEAVIEST MECHANIZED UNITS FOR FOLLOW-UP AND COUNTER-ATTACK OPERATIONS. MEANWHILE, THE AIR FORCE WOULD BOMB THE ENEMY LANDING PLACE.

THE DUTCH COMMANDERS DO NOT ASSERT THAT ALL THE ISLANDS IN THE GROUP CAN BE MADE INVULNERABLE AGAINST A LARGE, WELL-EQUIPPED FORCE, BUT THEY SEEM REASONABLY CERTAIN THAT THE MAIN ISLANDS OF JAVA AND SUMATRA CAN BE DEFENDED EVEN AGAINST THE STRONGEST FORCES OF THE MAJOR POWERS IF ADDITIONAL EQUIPMENT ARRIVES SOON ENOUGH.

"WE HAVE PLENTY OF MEN. GIVEN GUNS AND MATERIAL, WE CAN HOLD OUT." THAT IS THE ANSWER OF ALL BRANCHES OF THE SERVICE.

Britain Can Win if We Help—Marshall

HOUSE GROUP AGREES ON FOUR LIMITATIONS

Morgenthau Reveals British Citizens Have Arranged to Sell All Property Here to Finance War Contracts.

JAN 29 1941

Washington, Jan. 28 (A. P.).—Gen. George C. Marshall, Chief of Staff of the army, expressed the belief today that Great Britain could defeat Germany with the aid which the United States would give under the British aid bill now before Congress.

He gave this opinion at a press conference a short time after Secretary Morgenthau, appearing before the Senate Foreign Relations Committee, had stated bluntly that Britain, Greece and China "can't continue to fight" unless Congress enacts the bill.

After a meeting of Democratic members of the House Foreign Affairs Committee this afternoon Chairman Bloom announced a tentative agreement on four amendments to the bill, including one prohibiting the use of United States vessels as convoys.

The other proposed changes would limit the life of the powers granted President Roosevelt to lend or lease war supplies to two years, require the President to report to Congress all operations under the law and require him to consult with the Chief of Staff of the Army and the Chief of Naval operations prior to taking any action under the authority granted him by the administration bill.

Marshall Forecasts April Crisis.

Gen. Marshall, who had appeared before the House Foreign Affairs Committee earlier today, also told reporters that all indications were that Hitler would probably make an all out attempt to invade England tihs spring.

"Do you believe that Great Britain with the aid of the United States could whip Germany?" Gen. Marshall was asked.

"Yes," the Chief of Staff replied.

"Do you think she could defeat Germany with all aid except manpower?"

"I think so," Gen. Marshall replied. "That certainly is our hope."

Expects Big Attack in April.

The General then was asked specifically whether he believed that Britain could defeat Germany with the aid contemplated under the bill. He replied "Yes," but declined to elaborate his views.

Gen. Marshall said indications were that Germany probably would launch an offensive against Britain in April or May and that any attempt at an invasion undoubtedly would begin with a tremendous aerial attack. Without American aid, he declared, Britain's situation would be extremely hazardous.

"I think it's a serious situation—one of the most critical periods in the history of the world," the General continued.

Germany, he declared, had never yet exerted her full air power. The only way to get more planes to Britain is to expedite production, he said.

"Can any existing equipment be spared to Britain?" he was asked.

Can't Spare Army Equipment.

The army was not planning to spare it, Gen. Marshall said, adding, "We have a need for all the modern equipment that has been delivered to us."

Asked about the status of the United States Army Air Force, the Chief of Staff replied that it was adequate to hold off any enemy which could be visualized at the present moment under conditions existing at the present moment.

"And in event of a British defeat next month?" a reporter questioned.

"Insufficient," Gen. Marplied.

aid the army Air Corps had not yet completed the development of twenty-five air force groups, and a larger expansion to fifty-four groups would not be completed until April 1, 1942, at the earliest.

Quantity production of medium bombers, urgently needed because the army did not have modern planes of this type, is just now beginning, Gen. Marshall said. Deliveries on 384 Curtiss pursuit planes of an advanced model are scheduled to begin about February 1, the General said. He explained that the army had agreed last spring to accept these advanced model planes in lieu of other planes released to the British.

Secretary Morgenthau, said that British orders for 2,000 fighting planes were being held up for lack of dollar exchange, testified that British citizens have arranged to sell within twelve months "every bit" of the property they own in the United States to finance war contracts already placed here.

Astor Property to Go Too.

Senator Clark, Democrat, of Missouri, said he was interested in learning whether Lord and Lady Astor, who, he said he had been informed owned approximately $100,000,000 worth of real estate in New York, planned to sell their holdings.

"If Lord and Lady Astor own real estate in New York, their assets will be on the auction block along with all of the others," Mr. Morgenthau replied. He added, in response to another question by Senator Clark, that this would be true of property owned by England's King and any of his family.

He asserted too, during questioning, that "mentally" he had charged off "some time ago" Britain's multi-billion-dollar war debt to the United States.

Mr. Morgenthau said Britain had placed before the Treasury the "cold hard facts" that they were running out of money to pay for additional orders. He said it was up to Congress to decide quickly what should be done.

Puts It Up to Congress.

"If this bill doesn't pass Congress," he added solemnly, "they can't continue to fight. The decision rests with Congress whether Great Britain, China and Greece are to continue to fight."

Mr. Morgenthau testified that London's war material purchases virtually had stopped in December. Urging speedy approval of the British-aid bill, he said its necessity was demonstrated by a telephone conversation yesterday with William S. Knudsen, director of the Office of Production Management.

"Knudsen called me up," Secretary Morgenthau said, "and asked if something couldn't be done to permit the British to order 2,000 planes which they want but for which they haven't been able to place orders."

Plant Capacity Available.

Mr. Knudsen told him, Mr. Morgenthau said, that there was plant capacity available for the orders if they could only be placed.

In reply to questions from Senator La Follette, Progressive, of Wisconsin, Mr. Morgenthau explained that some plants had been tooled up for months to produce the types of planes wanted by the British and French. Unless the British could get credit soon, he said, these plants would be idle after April because they did not produce the types primarily desired by the United States Army and Navy.

The French and British, Mr. Morgenthau said, had spent "hundreds of millions of dollars" in this country to create plants for the particular types they want.

Mr. La Follette asked specifically whether the reason the British were holding up orders was that they lacked dollar exchange and could not purchase under present laws requiring cash payments.

"That's right," Mr. Morgenthau replied.

Britain's Old War Debt.

The Secretary made his statement about Britain's debt from the last war in response to a question by Senator Vandenberg, who said:

"I suspect you are prepared to charge those (British debts of the last war) off for keeps, aren't you?"

"Any time," Mr. Morgenthau replied, nodding his head. "I did some time ago—mentally."

Specific figures were not mentioned, but Treasury records show that the net amount owed by Britain on the principal of world war borrowings is $4,136,000,000. Unpaid interest brings the total to $5,728,821,000.

The British-aid bill would authorize President Roosevelt to make war materials available to Britain without immediate payment and, in effect, leave an accounting to a post-war settlement.

Cites Effect of Fall of France

Mr. Morgenthau testified prior to questioning that the fall of France had added heavily to Britain's liabilities and detracted greatly from her resources.

In this connection Mr. Morgenthau disclosed that French assets "frozen" by the Treasury since the defeat of France amounted to $1,593,000,000 and consisted largely of gold and securities, with very little real property.

The amount of British dollar exchange assets available for war purchases in the United States was put by Mr. Morgenthau at $1,811,000,000.

When Senator Connally of Texas asked whether the Treasury did not plan to continue to keep the French assets "frozen" for an indefinite period, Mr. Morgenthau said:

"We are guarding them closely."

Senator Connally remarked that he hoped they would be kept immobile, adding:

"To release these assets to the French, with the French Government in control of Germany, would just be giving aid to Germany."

Questioned on Debt Limit.

Senator Vandenberg brought up the administration proposal to increase the present limit on the national debt from $49,000,000,000 to $65,000,000,000. Mr. Morgenthau said he and Treasury aids believed that this increase would care for both the cost of the national defense program in this country and any aid extended to England under the pending bill.

"It should be adequate, as I see it today, to carry us up to June 30, 1942," the Secretary testified.

"In your field of responsibility, what can the President do under this bill, that he can't do today?" Mr. Vandenberg asked.

Before answering, Mr. Morgenthau turned and whispered with Treasury aids for several minutes, and then replied:

"The chief new power would be to make available to countries he decided, munitions and other war supplies on credit."

Senator Vandenberg asked whether this was not an "indirect" method of doing what might be done directly by amending the neutrality act, which bars credits to belligerents, and the Johnson act, which prohibits private loans to nations which have defaulted on debts to this country.

An Aside by Senator Glass.

"Not necessarily," Mr. Morgenthau replied slowly.

Once when Mr. Morgenthau paused before replying, Senator

30.24—7207

Glass of Virginia turned to Senator Byrnes of South Carolina and asked: "Why the devil do they oppose this bill?"

Senator Barkley, who had overheard, remarked: "They are pettifogging."

Presenting figures to show that the empire could pay for the orders already placed but has not "the dollars to take care of their additional needs," Mr. Morgenthau said:

"One vital factor in this drain of assets was the collapse of France last summer. The French had at least as much as the British in gold and dollar assets in this country; these reserves were available, together with the British, to pay for purchases here in the first nine months of the war.

"When the French collapse came, last June, the British took over all French contracts in this country, although they no longer had the help of French money to pay for them. British liabilities were doubled."

Estimate of British Depletion.

Referring frequently to intricate tables, the Secretary said that the British gold and other dollar assets were depleted by $2,316,000,000 in the first sixteen months of the war.

Mr. Morgenthau's testimony came after a White House conference last night at which President Roosevelt was reported to have told Republican and Democratic legislative leaders that while the bill would authorize him to "do anything under the sun," he had no intention of doing more under it than was deemed necessary by his army and navy advisers. One conference represented the President as being in a "very receptive mood" toward three of the major amendments which have been urged on Capitol Hill to curtain somewhat the bill's grant of powers.

Mr. Morgenthau said that the British now have available only $1,811,000,000 in gold and dollar exchange assets for war supply purchases in the United States. As against this, he testified, the British owe American manufacturers $1,400,000,000 on orders they already have placed in this country. Then, he added:

"It (the British Government) has enough gold and dollar exchange assets to meet these outstanding commitments, but the British just haven't got the dollars to take care of their additional needs."

Breakdown of English Assets.

Mr. Morgenthau told the committee that the figures which he was submitting were those which governments "normally keep confidential and closely guarded" but added that the British had consented to their release. These figures are the same as previously given the House Foreign Affairs Committee and revised in a letter to the committee from Mr. Morgenthau.

He broke down the gold and dollar exchange assets of the British as follows:

Gold, $292,000,000; official dollar balances, $54,000,000; private dollar balances, $305,000,000; marketable United States securities, $616,000,000; and direct and miscellaneous investments in the United States, $900,000,000.

From this, Mr. Morgenthau said, the British excluded $305,000,000 in private dollar assets necessary for the conduct of business, $30,000,000 in gold scattered in different parts of the world and $21,000,000 on account of "forward exchange contracts." This left, he deduced, $1,811,000,000 in gold and silver assets which the British regarded as available for purchases in this country.

"This war is now costing the British Government more than twelve million pounds sterling every day, or approximately 60 per cent of the national income," the Treasury head testified, "and this expenditure is steadily mounting. The British are raising about 40 per cent of this cost by taxing their people."

Immediate Problem Defined.

He concluded his formal statement with this assertion:

"The problem before us is not whether the British have resources; of course they have, all over the world. The problem is whether the British have got the dollars they need, or can get the dollars they need to spend in this country."

Senator Vandenberg asked Mr. Morgenthau about figures which he said he had read in the London Economist, reporting that the British had some £200,000,000 of gold in the Union of South Africa which could be sold to the United States for dollars.

"That doesn't check with the information we have as to the output of South African gold mines," Secretary Morgenthau said. "They are selling us their gold as rapidly as it is produced."

He added that he was convinced the figures he had presented showed a "true picture of the dollar assets the British can lay their hands on in the coming year, and I don't believe they are holding out on us."

Asked About Canada.

Senator Vandenberg asked why Canadian transactions were excluded from a table listing the British Empires dollar expenditures and receipts.

Mr. Morgenthau said the Canadian Government had not raised the question of credit in the United States and still was placing cash orders here. He added that the Canadian Government already was assisting the British by buying back its own securities.

Mr. Morgenthau replied in the affirmative when asked by Senator Connally whether it was not true that "not a dime" of American money had been supplied to Britain and that the British had paid "hard cash" for all war materials to date.

"As a matter of fact," Mr. Connally added, "the United States is not aiding Great Britain at all. The British simply buy from our manufacturers who make a profit on the orders."

"That's correct," oMrgenthau said.

"That's the idea some folks have of all possible aid to Britain," Senator Connally remarked.

LAMONT TAKES STAND FOR AID TO BRITAIN

Morgan Partner Asserts Business Is Opposed To Appeasement

Urges Lease-Lend Bill's Adoption In Talk To Merchants

[By the Associated Press]

New York, Jan. 28—Some 600 business leaders, members of the Merchants' Association of New York, applauded today a statement that "businessmen are dead set against appeasement," and heard a leading Wall Street figure urge adoption of the British-aid bill.

The speaker was Thomas W. Lamont, vice-chairman of the board of J. P. Morgan & Co., Inc., who said that "whatever amendments may be essential, Congress should formulate speedily and then pass the bill."

He said he did not regard "as of prime importance the form of bookkeeping to be adopted, be it lend lease, or gift, or all three."

"In the world crisis confronting us it would be most unfortunate for us to give the appearance of a country divided against itself," he said. "I do not believe we are so divided."

Doing All To Help President

Lamont said he was a lifelong Republican and in the late campaign was "strongly against the third term."

"But the campaign is over," he continued. "'We are in the midst of a world crisis. As a nation we cannot and must not be divided. I am doing everything in my power to help the present Administration and I will continue to do so. And again I urge national unity in support of the President and of plans for material aid to England and for our defense. . . .

"All Americans loathe war and a vast majority of us hope to avoid it. . . . At the same time we are not going to keep out of war just because we say we are going to keep out.

War Rests With Hitler

"The issue of war rests not with us, but with Hitler. He makes war when he pleases, how he pleases and against whom he pleases."

Lamont said that "for us deliberately to enter the war now is neither necessary nor desirable."

"Industry knows what war is and will work better without the confusion of a country at war," he declared. "I see no slackers in industry. Everybody is eager to render one hundred per cent. service."

Turning to the attitude of labor, Lamont said that "from the acquaintance that I have with several of the labor leaders, I shall be surprised if they show any lack of broad-minded cooperation."

He said he was "bothered by some of the current talk to the effect that business favors 'appeasement'."

Against Appeasement

"As a businessman speaking to businessmen I believe I represent the great consensus of our community when I say for myself and my friends and my acquaintances: businessmen are dead set against appeasement.

"Appeasement today means surrender. Appeasement would mean a prostrate England, a new lease on life for Hitler, an America unprepared and threatened by war on two oceans; burdened by prodigious armaments, our national economy completely regimented."

Proposed Changes

[By the Associated Press]

Washington, Jan. 28—Democratic and Republican members of the House Foreign Affairs Committee met separately today and announced afterward that they would submit to the full committee a number of amendments to the British aid bill.

Representative Bloom (Dem., N. Y.), chairman of the House group, said the Democrats tentatively had agreed on these four changes:

1. Forbidding United States vessels to convoy British ships.
2. Limiting to two years the powers of the President to lend, lease or otherwise dispose of war supplies.
3. Requiring the President to report to Congress all operations under the law.
4. Requiring the President to consult with the army chief of staff and the naval chief of operations before exercising powers granted him by the bill.

Representative Fish, (N. Y.), ranking Republican member of the committee, said the Republicans would submit the following seven amendments:

1. Prohibiting the President from giving away any part of the navy without the consent of Congress.
2. Prohibiting the President from sending convoys into war zones without consent of Congress.
3. Limiting the life of the legislation to one year.
4. Placing a $2,000,000,000 top on financial obligations that might be incurred.
5. Limiting and defining a section which provides that the bill shall supersede any existing statute with which it may be in conflict.
6. Prohibiting the building, repairing or outfitting of belligerent warships of any nation in either Government or private shipyards within the United States.
7. Requiring that the British give security for materials and equipment lent or leased to them until their funds are exhausted.

WASHINGTON, JAN. 28-(AP)-GREAT BRITAIN'S FIRST WAR AIM, AS DEFINED BY VISCOUNT HALIFAX, IS "TO WIN THE WAR," BUT THE NEWLY ARRIVED BRITISH AMBASSADOR SAID HE MIGHT ELABORATE "SOON" ON HIS NATION'S PURPOSES.

"I MAY GET AN OPPORTUNITY SOON OF SAYING SOMETHING IN PUBLIC ON THAT SUBJECT," HE TOLD NEWSMEN AT HIS FIRST FORMAL PRESS CONFERENCE HERE YESTERDAY.

TERSELY HE DESCRIBED BRITAIN'S "MAIN PEACE AIM" AS "TO RECONSTRUCT THE WORLD SO AS NOT TO HAVE ANOTHER" WAR.

HALIFAX DECLARED HIS GOVERNMENT HAD NO SECRET TREATIES CALLING FOR DISTRIBUTION OF TERRITORIES AFTER THE CONFLICT ENDS.

SENATORS NYE (R-ND) AND WHEELER (D-MONT) INTRODUCED A RESOLUTION YESTERDAY ASKING THE BELLIGERENTS TO DISCLOSE THEIR WAR AIMS AND TELL WHETHER ANY SECRET TREATIES EXISTED FOR "DIVISION OF TERRITORIAL SPOILS."

THE AMBASSADOR ASKED THE AMERICAN PEOPLE "TO FORM YOUR OWN OPINION ON HOW WE ARE STANDING UP AND MAKE UP YOUR OWN MINDS ON WHAT YOU ARE GOING TO DO TO HELP US."

FRENCH CAMEL CORPS CUTS DEEP INTO LIBYA

De Gaulle's Aid Reports 300-mile Advance North Across Desert From Equatorial Africa—Drive Opens Third Front.

Cairo, Jan. 28 (A. P.).—An Italian garrison has been driven from the important Fezzan oasis in southwestern Libya by Free French forces from the Chad region in Equatorial Africa, Gen. Georges Catroux reported by radio tonight.

This means a new drive against the Italians in the interior of Libya in conjunction with the British offensive along the Mediterranean coast in northern Libya and in East Africa.

Gen. Catroux, an aid of the Free French Commander Charles de Gaulle, said that a French camel corps detachment made the sudden stab deep into the Libyan interior and caught the Italians unaware.

Cross Desert by Night.

The detachment, he said, was assembled in the Chad region, on the Libyan frontier with Equatorial Africa, early this month.

Crossing the desert by night and hiding by day, he said, it reached Fezzan, 300 miles from its base, in mid-January and raided the regional capital, Marzouk, in a sudden, daring assault which caught its Fascist defenders by surprise.

[This drive, in effect, opens a new fighting front between Britain's two major offensives—in North Africa and East Africa. Although Britain's Imperial and Allied forces still are widely separated over about 2,000 miles of Africa, their offensives now are in an arc south and east from the Mediterranean coast through Libya, the heart of "the dark continent" in the Chad area and the bordering Anglo-Egyptian Sudan almost to the Red Sea in Italian Eritrea.]

Italian General Surrenders.

Meanwhile an Italian general was reported today to have surrendered personally to a British cavalry officer when British forces, charging with fixed bayonets down a hillside, pushed beyong Keru toward Agordat in Italian Eritrea.

On this front, the Middle East Command announced today that an additional 100 prisoners had been captured, "making a total of more than 1,200 taken there to date."

Neither the identity of the general nor the size of his command was disclosed in reports from the east African war theater, but 700 were said to have been taken in this one charge.

British Pass Keru.

British reports Sunday said that Keru had been passed in the drive, under intensive air support, toward Agordat. Keru is about eighteen miles inside Eritrea from the frontier with the Anglo-Egyptian Sudan and Agordat, an important rail center on which the British are now reported closing in, is about twenty-two miles farther east.

What started as an orderly withdrawal by the Italians from the Sudanese frontier region, British reports say, has now become a hurried retreat.

Italian prisoners are quoted as speaking of a severe gasoline shortage in Eritrea.

Derna Assault Near.

On the north African front, in Libya, British troops which captured Italy's stronghold of Tobruk less than a week ago were reported moving rapidly into position today for an assault on Derna, ninety-five miles to the west.

Dispatches from the Libyan front, which disclosed that the British had left only a skeleton force in Tobruk while closing in on Derna, reflected confidence in military circles that the town soon would be added to Gen. Sir Archibald P. Wavell's conquests.

Italian artillery was reported firing intermittently in an attempt to disrupt British preparations for an assault upon Derna, but military men expressed belief this show of resistance would do no more than delay its fall. The winding coastal road leading from Tobruk to Derna was described as seething with activity as the British moved up troops, ammunition, equipment and supplies for the attack with virtually no opposition from the Italian Air Force.

Base of Bomba Hard Hit.

British sources here were inclined to the belief that to avoid being driven out of Libya altogether the Italians would have to depend upon a final stand at Tripoli.

At the opposite end of the African battlefront, meanwhile, the British advance in Eritrea was reported to have severed the line of retreat of three or four Italian battalions withdrawing from Umm Hagar, some ten miles east of the Sudanese frontier. Cut off from supporting Eritrean forces, the Umm Hagar garrison was said to be retiring southward into Ethiopia, closely pursued by the British.

Umm Hagar was described as the last outpost on the Sudan-Eritrean front to be abandoned by the Italians. Further north, the British reported they had penetrated almost 80 miles into Eritrea to menace Agordat, on the railroad leading to the coast and the capital at Asmara. Between Umm Hagar and Agordat, another British column was said to be threatening Barentu after a sixty-mile drive from the frontier.

The British also claimed further penetration into Ethiopia from the Sudan, while Kenya

30.24— 7209

Colony patrols were said to be keeping the Italians under continued pressure on their Somaliland frontier.

An uprising of Ethiopian tribesmen was reported gaining headway.

A statement from R. A. F. headquarters said that burned-out wreckage of seven seaplanes and the twisted girders of two destroyed workshops were all that remain of the Italian seaplane base at Bomba, on the Libyan coast southeast of Derna, described as once a constant threat to British shipping.

"The decisive manner in which the bombers of the R. A. F. eliminated this threat is to be seen from the craters on the slipways," it reported. "The base lies at the extreme end of a narrow promontory and there is scarcely a square yard that has not been torn by the aerial bombardment."

Tunisia Reassured on Weygand.

Tangier, Spanish Morocco, Jan. 28 (A. P.). — Dispatches from Tunis said today that the authorities there had issued a communique declaring that there was no reason for alarm in connection with a visit to the French African Colony of Tunisia by Gen. Maxime Weygand, supreme commander of France's North African forces.

Referring to "exaggerated rumors" circulated in recent days, the communique said that "nothing abnormal is happening."

"The inhabitants should not see in Gen. Weygand's visit anything but the desire of the Government delegate to maintain contact with the Resident-General and other high authorities," it added.

ROME SEES GAINS AT DERNA

Reports British Driven Back—Naples, Catania Raided

ROME, Jan. 28 (AP)—Italian troops have driven back a British column in fighting east of Derna, Libya, inflicting losses on the invaders and capturing prisoners, the Italian High Command reported today.

Italian planes, meanwhile, were reported to have bombed and machine-gunned British armored units and infantry in the Derna zone, besides shooting down two Hurricane planes. Fighting still was continuing in that area, the communiqué declared.

In East Africa, it was said, native troops fighting with the Italians surprised a British outpost on the Kenya front, "inflicting considerable losses in men and materiel."

British tanks and armored cars on the same front were reported "effectively bombed" by Italian air formations. Two British planes were said to have been downed by Italian aircraft.

British planes raided Naples and Catania, Sicily, last night without causing important damage, the High Command reported. No casualties were caused in either raid, the communiqué said.

"Several" bombs were said to have been dropped by the raiders at Catania, site of airdromes from which German dive-bombers have been reported operating against the British Mediterranean fleet and Malta, but the High Command asserted laconically that they "caused no damage."

"Very slight damage" was acknowledged in the attack on Naples "and vicinity."

Nazis Tell of Malta Raid

The German radio broadcast a Berlin report of "another attack on Malta" by Nazi planes early yesterday, according to The Associated Press. It said Lucca Airport was considerably damaged by "a number of hits in and outside hangars."

De Gaullist Coup Opens Third Front To Menace Duce's Empire

[By the Associated Press]

Valletta, Malta, Jan. 28—Four Royal Air Force men were killed and nine wounded in air raids before dawn today.

Some Government property was damaged during the raids, which prompted four alerts in Malta.

[By the Associated Press]

Cairo, Jan. 28 — A Free French camel corps operating from Chad—the northern area of Equatorial Africa—has begun an offensive against the Italians in southwestern Libya, thus opening a third fighting front in an African struggle menacing the whole of the Fascist empire.

This new blow against the Italians was announced belatedly over the radio tonight by Gen. Georges Catroux, an associate of Gen. Charles de Gaulle, the supreme commander of all those Frenchmen who rejected the armistice with Germany and have been fighting on as Britain's allies.

Moved By Night, Hid By Day

The corps was assembled along the Libyan frontier early this month, he said, and crept slowly across the desert by night, hiding by day, until at last they met and drove out the Italian garrison in the important oasis of Fezzan.

The regional capital, Marzouk, was declared to have been raided in a fierce, sudden assault which took the Italian defenders wholly by surprise. The town is 300 miles from the French base in Chad, and lies some 700 miles to the southwest of Derna, Libya, where only today British Imperial forces were reported being rapidly reinforced for a general attack.

Corps Commander Killed

The camel corps commander, Col. Colonna Dornano, was said by General Catroux to have lost his life in the assault on Marzouk. The general moreover disclosed, without giving details, that Free Frenchmen also are operating in Ethiopian territory.

The third front active during today is 2,000 miles away to the southeast.

There, advancing British forces were reported to be closing in on the towns of Agordat and Barentu, in Italian Eritrea.

Italians Prepare Stand

Agordat is an essential rail center some forty miles within Eritrea, and there and at Barentu, military informants said, the disorganized Italians were preparing to make what stand they could.

About both towns the defense positions are known to be poor; nevertheless, the Royal Air Force was taking no chances and reported that British bombers had assaulted the Italian lines of communication to the rear, attacking the railroad stations of Keren and Aisha and railroad bridges and roads.

Towns' Capture Expected

British ground forces were reported advancing in strength and it appeared to be only a question of a short time before both towns fell.

Still other British troops were declared to be pursuing an Italian column, 3,000 to 4,000 strong, which had abandoned the post of Umm Hagar, near the Eritrean-Ethiopian border, and had taken flight into an area which is thronged with Ethiopian "patriots" aiding Britain.

Recapitulating recent operations in East Africa, the British announced the capture of an Italian general—the seventeenth of that rank to fall into British hands in the whole campaign—and the seizure in the Eritrean sector of an additional hundred prisoners, thus bringing to 1,200 the total taken there to date.

General Not Identified

The general was not identified, nor was the size of his command disclosed. It was stated that he had surrendered during a British bayonet charge.

The R. A. F., claiming continued control of the air over Libya, announced that the skeletons of seven burned seaplanes and the twisted girders of two smashed workshops were "all that remain" now of the Fascist seaplane base at Bomba, southeast of Derna. It once was a constant threat to British shipping.

AXIS PLANNING PUSH IN GREECE AND ALSO LIBYA

Germany Planning Now to Rush Economic Help to Italian Ally.

NAPLES BOMBED BY BRITISH

R. A. F. Also Again Attacks Base for Hitler's Dive Bombers on Island of Sicily.

Rome, Jan. 28 (A. P.).—Italian circles indicated today that military, economic and diplomatic cooperation between Germany and Italy was reaching a more intense phase in preparation for a joint onslaught intended to drive the British from the Mediterranean and set them back in North Africa.

Two spring offensives are in prospect—against the British in Africa and the Greeks in Albania—as a preliminary to a sudden surprise attempt to invade the British Isles themselves, and thereby end the war this year as the Nazis are planning to do, these informants said.

A stiffening in Italian resistance on the African and Albanian fronts was indicated by today's High Command communique, which said the British had been driven back in fighting east of Derna, Libyan port, and that Fascist warplanes had delivered violent attacks against the Greeks in Albania.

Air Attacks Admitted.

The High Command acknowledged that British warplanes had raided Naples and Catania, Sicily, last night. No casualties were caused in either raid, a communique declared.

Several bombs were said to have been dropped at Catania, site of airdromes from which German dive-bombers have been reported operating against the British Mediterranean Fleet and Malta, but the High Command asserted laconically that they caused no damage.

Very slight damage was acknowledged in the attack on Naples and vicinity.

Nazi Expert Negotiating.

In the Axis economic field, it was disclosed that Dr. Karl Clodius, German expert, is negotiating with the Italians. Observers here said he had agreed that Germany, instead of drawing on Italy as a base of supplies, is to send her increased foodstuffs and raw materials. With Germany sending millions of tons of coal into Italy each month along with considerable supplies of metal, lumber and chemicals, these sources said they look for the Nazis to find foodstuffs for the Italians in Hungary and Rumania and provide oil and synthetic gasoline from Germany.

The Fascists can count on the closest military co-operation from Germany for the final drive for victory, they asserted. These informants scouted reports abroad of disorders in Italy and declared that there was no visible sign of discontent among the people at the presence of the German forces. Friendship for the Geramn ally, it was asserted, extends through every layer of Italian life, even to the ruling House of Savoy.

Some observers believe too much was made abroad of Marshal Pietro Badoglio's resignation. They said they would not be surprised even to see Crown Prince Humbert become Chief of Staff of Italy's armed forces with Badoglio as special adviser and a ranking German general in a similar position to insure perfect coordination in the command of the war effort. In fact, such reports have been heard in political quarters here.

Ciano Joins Squadron.

Two more of Premier Mussolini's Ministers have gone to the front, it was announced today. They are Minister of Public Works Giuseppe Gorla and Minister of Education Giuseppe Bottai, who assumed command of Alpine troops in an unspecified zone of operations.

Foreign Minister Count Galeazzo Ciano was reported to have joined his bomber squadron last night and Minister of Guilds Renato Ricci and Minister of Popular Culture Alessandro Pavolini went to the front several days ago. In Count Ciano's absence, Filippo Ansuro, head of the Foreign Office staff, will be in charge at the Foreign Office.

The Government, meanwhile, ordered a seven-day week for railway freight handlers as a marked effort to adapt the Italian transportation system for war needs. A decree published in the Official Gazette suspending the weekly day off for these workers said the action was dictated by special necessities. The move supplemented a decree of January 17 authorizing railroads to restrict and speed up freight traffic to meet wartime demands. At that time freight traffic jams had been blamed for temporary shortages of food and fuel in some Italian cities.

Malta Attacked Again.

Berlin, Jan. 28 (A. P.).—A DNB dispatch from the Mediterranean said today that German battle planes had attacked Lucca airport on the island of Malta.

Rome Radio to "Retaliate"

ROME, Jan. 28 (AP)—The Giornale d'Italia announced today that Italy would retaliate to British "lies" about disorders in Italian cities with a radio counter-offensive of "authentic anti-British news."

Foreign observers are convinced that no disorders occurred. Not only did inhabitants of Milan and Turin laugh at the reports, but non-Italians closely watching Italy's situation felt they would have heard something of the disorders if any had occurred, so fast does news travel by grapevine in wartime.

So far as qualified observers know, the only German fighting men in Italy are air pilots with ground crews and auxiliary services, which a usually reliable source said numbered a few thousand at most.

As for disorders, foreigners find the cities completely calm without sign of discontent or any tension since the first setbacks in Greece and North Africa. One Italian summarized the people's feeling as follows:

"Unfortunately, we Italians usually don't wake up to the meaning of war until we receive a blow. But we react quickly and the reaction, stirring our loyal spirit rather than depressing us, carries us to victory."

ISLES COVETED BY AMERICA, GAYDA CHARGES

Rome Talks Of Possibility Of Nazis Sending Troops To Africa

Italians Say British Will Reach End Of Rope At Bengasi

[By the Associated Press]

Rome, Jan. 28—Virginio Gayda, Fascist editor accused the United States today of planning to establish air and naval bases in the Portuguese-owned Azores as a threat to Europe.

While Italy and Germany gave fresh evidence of consolidating plans to beat Britain this year, Gayda said they were paying "much attention to new moves by the United States which are turning toward the Azores."

"Eyes On The Azores"

His editorial, "eyes on the Azores," appearing in Il Giornale d'Italia, pointed to the strategic importance of the Azores as a refueling base for ships, a landing place for transatlantic planes and a central point for transoceanic telegraph cables.

He said America had been showing a suspicious interest in the islands, coveting them as part of her "vast, militaristic, imperial offensive" plan for "permanent armed vigilance over the continent of Europe."

"In reality, therefore," he wrote, "what the North American policy would like to picture as defense against alleged threats by the Axis powers is an action of menace and vigilance directed against the entire European continent."

Nazi Troops In Africa?

Foreign observers said there was a possibility of a German landing in North Africa, if necessary, in an attempt to drive a military wedge between Gen. Sir Archibald P. Wavell's British army in Libya and French forces to the west.

The British are expected in Rome to reach the end of their driving force when they get to Bengasi, more than 300 miles from the Egyptian border, with vast stretches of sand between them and their bases and more hundreds of miles of desert ahead.

Supply Lines Open

Fascists say also the Italians have their supply lines to Libya open again, with the British navy powerless to keep help from reaching Marshal Rodolfo Graziani when and if the Axis pools men, guns and tanks in Africa—as it has, already, pooled planes.

At any rate, Fascist observers declare that offensives in both North Africa and Albania may be expected in the spring, probably preliminary to an all-out attempt to invade the British Isles.

Foreigners suggest, also, the possibility of German diplomatic assistance in ending the war with Greece, as in the Russian-Finnish war. Some persons believe Greek reserves are so low that Athens might be persuaded to give up the fight under a new Italian drive.

Resistance Called Stiffer

Even today the high command communique indicated stiffer Italian resistance in both Africa and Albania, saying a British column had been repulsed near Derna; that a British post had been surprised by Italian native troops on the Kenya front and that "heavy losses" were inflicted on the Greeks in local actions.

Il Giornale d'Italia announced Italy would answer British "lies" about disorders in Italy by radio.

"Italy will pass to radio reprisals," the newspaper said. "It will flood the world with anti-British news—and authentic news—in twenty-seven languages."

GAYDA SAYS U. S. WANTS THE AZORES

Asserts It Is Part of Plan to Watch Over Europe

Rome, Jan. 28 (A. P.).—Fascist Editor Virginio Gayda accused the United States today of coveting the Azores as part of her "vast, militaristic, imperial offensive plan." That plan, Gayda wrote in Il Giornale d'Italia, aims at "permanent advanced vigilance over the continent of Europe."

He wrote that the United States had been showing "suspect interest" in the Azores, Portuguese archipelago in mid-Atlantic, for several months. It was significant, he added, that Wendell Willkie, during a halt there on his way to London, "paused to gather information on the life and position of the islands to augment a documentation of which it is said the United States recently has accumulated plenty."

"The United States evidently is attempting to push forward its plan for extending naval and air bases even nearer Europe in order to maintain ever closer and more active control," Gayda wrote.

"In reality, therefore, what the North American policy would like to picture as defense against alleged threats by the Axis Powers is an action of menace and vigilance directed against the entire European continent."

ITALIANS AGAIN THROWN BACK, ATHENS SAYS

2 New Counter-Attacks Declared Shattered By Greek Shock Troops

R. A. F. Scores Direct Hits On Fascist Military Stores At Elbasani

[By the Associated Press]

Athens, Wednesday, Jan. 29—Greek mountain troops shattered two fresh Italian counter-attacks north of Klisura yesterday and inflicted "heavy losses" on the Fascists, a Greek Government spokesman said early today.

"Our shock troops pushed the enemy from its defense positions and took another seventy prisoners, including a captain and considerable war material," he said.

"The day before the Italians used tanks in one of their counter-attacks, but lost three of them on the spot and a fourth was in flames as it turned and sped back to the rear. In the last few days we have taken at least one hundred prisoners, including an Alpini major."

Italian Planes Felled

The Greek high command reported two Italian planes were shot down.

One person was killed and ten wounded in a Salonika military hospital attacked by Italian aircraft, the Ministry of Home Security reported.

The British air force announced "several direct hits" in a bombing raid Monday on military buildings and stores at the Italian base of Elbasani in central Albania while Greek troops fought the counter-attacking Italians.

"Considerable damage was caused" at Elbasani, the R. A. F. said, "and the target was enveloped in smoke when the raiders left."

Italians Fight Fiercely

Supported by tanks and using mortars and hand grenades, the Italians fought fiercely in the Klisura counter-attack, an army communique said, before they fell back. An undisclosed number of prisoners and material were reported taken by the Greeks.

The communique said three Italian naval units shelled the village of Pikermi on the coast south of Chimara Sunday, but there were no casualties.

Heavy Italian Attack In North Is Reported

Bitolj, Yugoslavia (Near the Albanian Frontier), Jan. 28 (AP)—Italian forces have been attacking heavily since early morning along the northern Albania front from the region of the Shkumbin river to Lake Ochrida, border dispatches reported.

Fascist artillery was said to be pounding key Greek positions, but the Greeks were declared, nevertheless, to be holding their ground and inflicting heavy losses.

Despite heavy attacks in the Devoli Valley, supported by low-flying planes, the Italians were reported to have been unable to break through.

150 Italians Captured

The Greeks claim to have captured 150 men and two officers last night in one fighting sector.

The city of Phlorina is said to have suffered serious damage in Italian aerial bombings, the railway station and military depots having been among structures hit. Villages to the south of Phlorina, where the Greeks have munitions dumps and food stores, also were bombed.

British and Greek air forces retaliated and several planes were seen to crash in the resulting air battle.

British Bomb Elbasani.

Athens, Jan. 28 (A. P.).—A smashing raid on Italy's central Albanian base at Elbasani was announced by the British Air Command today, while the Greeks reported their land forces had hurled back wave after wave of counter-attacking Fascists north of Klisura. R. A. F. pilots returning from the raid yesterday on Elbasani, twenty miles southwest of Tirana, the Albanian capital, reported thick black smoke was boiling up from the target area when they headed back to their base.

Italian counter thrusts, led by tanks, and low-flying attacks by planes, which some observers believed to be German, were said to have failed to stop Greek gains in Central Albania. The Greek High Command declared four Italian tanks were destroyed and others driven back. About ninety prisoners and some automatic weapons were reported captured. The High Command said the Greeks pushed on into some of the positions from which the Italians attacked.

Second Hard Counter-attack.

A Government [illegible]sman said the Italian attempt yesterday to regain lost ground was the second hard counterattack repulsed in two days. Neither he nor the High Command identified the scene of the attack. The first was north of Klisura, where the Greeks are driving toward Berati, south of the Albanian capital.

[Reports reaching Bitolj, Yugoslavia, from the Albanian frontier said fighting all along the Albanian front was being intensified, with the center of action in the Klisura-Tepeleni sector. Along the coast the Greeks were said to have driven near Dukati, twenty-two miles from Valona and twelve miles from Valona Bay. On the northern front the Greeks were reported to have taken important peaks near Malina, ten miles west of Pogradetz.]

An Associated Press correspondent with the Greek troops on the Albanian front reported that planes resembling German Junkers had been bombing Greek troops and supply routes.

[German planes have been reported ferrying troops and supplies across the Adriatic to Italian forces in Albania. But neither Berlin nor Rome has said definitely that German planes are taking part in the Albanian fighting, though they have been operating in the Mediterranean against Malta and British vessels.]

The tactics used in these recent attacks on Greek troops were described as different from what Italian bombers have used on the same front.

Italians Attack Greeks.

Rome, Jan. 28 (A. P.).—Greek troop concentrations and motorized columns on the Albanian war front have been subjected to violent attacks by Italian warplanes, the Italian High Command reported today.

Ground operations, the daily communique said, were limited to local actions, in which the Italians inflicted heavy losses on the Greeks and captured prisoners and automatic arms.

4-DAY RESPITE FROM BOMBING IN LONDON ENDS

Nazis Drop Incendiaries And Explosives On City And Country

Four Alarms Heard During Day—Much Property Damage Reported

[By the Associated Press]

London, Jan. 28—German bombers ended London's four-day respite from raids with a shower of incendiaries and explosives which caused considerable damage to houses and brought the city's anti-aircraft defenses into vigorous action today.

German long-range guns also renewed shelling across the Dover Strait tonight.

The four alarms in London were the first since last Thursday, but the attacks, which ended before dark, ushered in the ninth night without a raid warning. The only after-dark activity was in western England where planes flew over one town.

One Woman Killed

Bombs landing in a residential area killed one woman, but otherwise there were no reports of serious casualties.

Three bombs fell in another district, one slanting into a playground twenty yards from a children's shelter.

Sheets of gray metal resembling parts of a plane wing or fuselage fell, leading to the belief that at least one raider had been shot down or damaged by anti-aircraft fire.

Most of the damage came during the fourth alarm. It closely followed a third caused by a lone plane which dropped a basket of fire bombs in a street. They were immediately extinguished.

Elsewhere Over England

Raiders were reported elsewhere over England. One swooped within 300 feet of the ground along the Kentish coast and dropped three bombs which demolished a cottage and severely damaged another. The occupants escaped with minor injuries.

Planes were reported to have machine-gunned a train in eastern England and dropped fire bombs and explosives on villages, whose inhabitants were said to have been fired upon when they fought the incendiaries.

The Government's communique tonight said the raids caused "no important damage" and "very few casualties."

LONDON IS BOMBED AFTER 5-DAY LULL; GROUND GUNS ROAR

Four Daylight Alarms Are Sounded — Casualties Reported as Light.

London, Jan. 28 (A. P.).—High explosive and fire bombs fell on London today, bringing back death and destruction to this city whose air raid alarm sirens had been silent since a daylight attack last Thursday.

Just before the fourth alarm of the day ended in late afternoon, anti-aircraft guns went into action against a plane droning high over the city out of sight above low-hanging clouds.

One woman, caught in the streets when a stick of bombs plunged into a residential area, was killed. Considerable damage was done to houses, but no other serious casualties were reported.

In another district three bombs fell. Two landed in the street and another slanted down into a playground twenty yards from a shelter filled with children.

The first two alarms passed without incident. The fire bombs were dropped by a lone raider during the third. Trolley cars and buses were stopped temporarily in one area while wardens, policemen and civilians quickly extinguished the flames with sand.

The fourth alarm sounded soon after the third, and planes were reported to have dropped bombs in other sections of England but without major damage.

A number of German planes, flying above the fog which blanketed the Strait of Dover, crossed the southeast coast during the day, all apparently following the same northwesterly course as they flew inland. Anti-aircraft guns fired, although the raiders could not be seen.

Train Is Machine-gunned.

One lone plane machine-gunned a train in eastern England this afternoon and dropped bombs. Villagers fighting incendiaries were said to have been machine-gunned and compelled to take cover behind dykes.

Another raider in the same district was reported to have machine-gunned a threshing unit moving along a road. Both raiders then sped out to sea.

German long-range guns on the French coast across the Dover Strait opened up again at dusk for the second consecutive night and shells dropped intermittently out of the fog curtain, but no casualties were reported.

Rail Facilities Bombed.

Berlin, Jan. 28 (A. P.).—DNB, the official German news agency, said today that German bombing planes had attacked English rail facilities north of Cambridge. Bomb hits damaged a freight station and train, it said.

Nazi Channel Guns Roar.

Berlin, Jan. 28 (A. P.).—Long range batteries in the occupied zones of France fired upon military objectives in southeast England yesterday, the High Command reported today. DNB, German official news agency, said the cross channel fire was directed at the harbor of Folkestone, eight miles southwest of Dover.

It said the shelling started yesterday afternoon and continued into the night.

No British planes were seen over Germany or German-occupied territory last night, the High Command said, but one British plane was reported downed yesterday. The High Command acknowledged the loss of one plane.

British Test New Night Fighters

Lull Gives R. A. F. a Chance to Experiment With Patrols of High-altitude Planes.

London, Jan. 28 (A. P.).—A prolonged lull in German aerial activity has given Great Britain an opportunity to carry out important experiments with new night fighter planes which she hopes eventually will prove the answer to the Nazi Air Forces's night raids, informed sources indicated today.

As the eighth successive night passed without a sign of German aircraft over London, these sources disclosed that night fighter pilots had been taking advantage of the respite to perfect their tactics through practice patrols. The number of night fighters available is being increased steadily, it was said, in anticipation of a large-scale resumption of Nazi air attacks in the spring. Military authorities attributed the present lull to the weather.

The new British night fighters are designed to operate at high altitudes to cope with bombing planes flying above the anti-aircraft barrage. They are described frankly as a weapon to counter the expected German invasion attempt.

Admit Vulnerability.

Strategists admit Britain's vulnerability to attacks in the darkness by which an invader might bomb out communications, and transport and land picked troops and saboteurs behind the British lines.

A military informant said:

"Despite the increasing successes of the night defenses, we won't feel we are getting out of the woods until we are bagging at least 10 per cent of the night raiders that come over. If we get to the point where we are knocking down 20 per cent, I think you would see pretty much of a check on night raids."

He refused to say how far the British are from their goal, but it was recalled that the best night the defenders had was January 19-20, when anti-aircraft gunners reported downing four raiders, and a night fighter bagged another. There probably were no more than 100 planes attacking that night, and this would be a 5 per cent score—still short of the goal.

Better Co-ordination.

Two factors are credited with resulting in better night action by the defenders:

New developments in co-ordination between anti-aircraft guns and night fighter or interception planes covering the sky against invaders with the aid of searchlights and predictors, and more longer range night fighters—some of them American types—which are able to make more extended patrols of their defense areas, but also sneak over the German advance bases occasionally to try to catch a bomber taking off or returning.

Ex-Government Official Advised To Enter Army

Food Ministry Secretary Accused Of Profiting On Czech Assets In Great Britain.

London, Jan. 28 (AP)—Robert John Boothby, who resigned as parliamentary secretary of the Food Ministry after he had been accused of realizing on Czech assets in Great Britain, was advised by Prime Minister Churchill today to follow the "path of service [illegible] wartime," and it was believed might join the army.

The implied suggestion that he enter the army came after the House of Commons termed Boothby's conduct "derogatory to the dignity of the House."

Boothby, 40 years old, argued that his action in attempting to get the Czech money out of Prague and into the hands of Czechs in London was "praiseworthy" because he kept such assets out of Germany.

The House unanimously approved a committee report, made last week, which declared Boothby had a financial interest of $96,000 in realization of the assets.

Tilea Sees German Defeat

Former Envoy to London Declares Rumanians Can Be Trusted.

LONDON, Jan. 28 (AP).—Viorel Virgil Tilea, former Rumanian Minister here, declared today that "95 per cent of Rumania is behind Britain" and predicted an early end to "the German conquest of Europe."

Tilea, who remained in England when he was removed from his post last fall, spoke before the Overseas League. He likened Germany's position today to that in the World War when, he said, it collapsed due to the incorporation of too many foreign nations."

EIRE INTRODUCES RIGID CENSORSHIP

All War News Must Be Submitted Before Filing.

London, Jan. 28 (A. P.).—The Irish Government has established a rigid press censorship forbidding correspondents to send out of the country uncensored reports of any event connected with the war.

News bearing on internal public order—"which happens or is alleged to have happened in or over the State or its territorial waters"—is similarly restricted, it was learned in London tonight.

An emergency powers order by the Eire Government, it was learned, warned that serious consequences would follow failure to comply with the regulations.

They forbid transmission outside Eire by "post, telegraph or telephone or other means messages intended for publication and relating to any event arising out of or connected with the war or internal public order which happens or is alleged to have happened in or over the State or its territorial waters, or relating to any actual or alleged attack on the State or to the supply of commodities in the State, without first submitting such message to any authorized person for censorship and having it passed."

Italian Captives May Go To England as Laborers

Some Already Sent to India; South Africa Asks 20,000

LONDON, Jan. 28 (AP).—War Secretary David Margesson told the House of Commons today that Great Britain contemplated bringing some Italian prisoners captured in Africa "to this country for agricultural work and possibly for other work where there is a shortage of British labor."

A "considerable number," he said, already had been sent to India, and "disposal of the remainder" had not yet been settled. British reports in Cairo have placed the total of Italian captives in the North and East African offensives at about 111,000.

A Reuters (British news agency) dispatch from Capetown said the South African government had agreed to accommodate 20,000 Italian prisoners from the western desert campaign in order to spare ships which would otherwise be needed to transport them to India. The British government, it was said, is paying all costs.

TRY U. S. FLU VACCINE

Members of British Health Ministry Inoculated.

London, Jan. 28 (A. P.).—Malcolm MacDonald, Minister of Health, and 350 men and women members of his ministry—about one-fourth of the whole staff—were inoculated today with experimental treatments of what was called a "new anti-flu vaccine" developed in the United States. All volunteered.

Recent Wave Of Cold In England Is Revealed

15-Foot Snowdrifts Piled Up In North Country—Some Wales Villages Cut Off For Days.

London, Jan. 28 (AP)—England recently experienced an intense cold wave in which 15-foot snowdrifts piled up in the north country and some villages in northern Wales were cut off for days.

During the cold snap, about which the censor banned publication of any information until today, it was difficult for auto transport to reach Scotland and the fast-flowing River Swale in Yorkshire was frozen over with a temperature of eight degrees, Fahrenheit, prevailing in that area.

The country west of London also suffered from the snow and trucks operating between Liverpool and London encountered drifts six to eight feet deep. Fifteen-foot drifts on the moors between Lancashire and Yorkshire had to be cut with plows. The snow and wind together forced disorganization of some rail transport in the same sector.

EMPRESS LINER REPORTED SAFE

London Hints Ship Was Not Torpedoed at All.

London, Jan. 28 (A. P.).—British naval authorities declared today that the 21,833-ton Empress of Australia was "safe in port" and declined to comment in any way upon the radio reports received in Miami, Fla., to the effect she had been torpedoed and shelled. One spokesman, however, said that the radio signals might have been a "German trick" to obtain the whereabouts of the vessel and that she was almost certainly in port at the time the attack was reported to have taken place.

Radio messages received by Tropical Radio in Miami, beginning at 10:36 P. M. Eastern standard time last night, told of an attack and gave a position about 200 miles off Dakar, Senegal.

Within less than nine hours, however, the British reported the 21,833-ton vessel "safe in port." The announcement, it was noted, did not say she had "arrived in port." Moreover it was asserted that the nearest usable British port is Freetown, West Africa, almost 800 miles from the reported position, a distance the ship could not have negotiated in so short a time.

Unofficially, it was reasoned here that the Germans might have faked the messages to get the British to disclose the whereabouts of the Empress, the British, however, in making their announcement, did not even say in what part of the world the liner is. She has been reported in use as a troopship.

In Miami, officials of Tropical Radio said they had no way of knowing whether the messages were genuine. A spokesman for the Federal Communications Commission said the commission would not investigate the source of the calls unless it was suspected that they came from within the United States.

NAZIS SUSPECTED IN LINER'S AID CALL

Empress Of Australia Safe In Port When Torpedo Report Was Made

[By the Associated Press]

London, Jan. 28—British naval authorities announced tersely today that the big war-converted liner Empress of Australia is "safe in port," and one source suggested that radio messages reporting her torpedoed and shelled might have been "a German trick."

The messages were received last night by the Miami (Fla.) station of Tropical Radio, which said they had no way of telling whether they were genuine.

Tell Of Shelling

Beginning at 10.36 P. M. (E.S.T.) the messages, over a period of about twenty minutes, gave a staccato account of a torpedo striking, of boats being lowered, of "deck awash," and of "being shelled again."

They gave the position: "About 200 miles from Dakar" in French West Africa.

In less than nine hours the British authorities announced the Empress was "safe in port." They declined to comment in any way on the reports of an attack, and it was noted that the announcement said nothing about the ship having "arrived in port."

Said To Have Been In Port

Subsequently, unofficial informants said the Empress almost certainly was in port at the time of the alleged attack; that she could not have reached Freetown, the nearest British port, in less than nine hours, and that it was possible a German ship or shore station somewhere had faked the calls in order to trick the British into giving out the Empress' whereabouts.

If this was the design, it failed. The British, with traditional Admiralty caution, did not even say what side of the world the Empress was on.

BRITISH SUBMARINE TRITON DESTROYED

Craft Which Attacked Convoy Has Been Sunk, Admiralty Reports

Three Swedish Vessels Are Sunk—One Was To Carry Sailors Home

[By the Associated Press]

London, Jan. 28—The loss of the British submarine Triton was announced tonight by the Admiralty.

The communique merely stated that the vessel was overdue and "must be considered lost."

Last April 10 the Triton attacked a convoy of German supply ships off the Norwegian coast, the Admiralty announcing at the time that four of her torpedoes had "found their mark."

The Triton, of 1,579 tons, normally carried a complement of fifty-three men.

Swedish Passenger Ship Bombed, Fired Off Britain

New York, Jan. 28 (AP)—The Swedish passenger ship Belgia, chartered by the Swedish Government to transport 200 Swedish sailors from England to their homeland has been set afire by air bombs and six crewmen are missing, the Swedish Foreign Office reported today.

The American-Swedish News Exchange said the Foreign Office reported that the 2,023-ton vessel was bombed while en route from one British port to another for repairs. Apparently the sailor-passengers had not boarded the vessel which had been guaranteed safe conduct for the voyage by belligerents.

Her captain, four officers, the chief stewardess and fourteen crewmen were rescued by a British warship before the Belgia ran aground in flames.

2 Other Swedish Ships Lost

London, Jan. 28 (AP)—A Stockholm radio broadcast heard today in London said two Swedish vessels, the 3,759-ton Valparaiso and the 4,575-ton Stureholm, were overdue and presumed lost.

The missing Stureholm was credited with saving sixty-five survivors of the British armed merchant cruiser Jervis Bay, which engaged in a suicidal battle November 5 with a German pocket battleship that attacked a thirty-eight-vessel convoy in mid-Atlantic.

58,212 TONS LOST

British Report on Sea War for Week Ending Jan. 19.

London, Jan. 28 (A. P.).—Merchant shipping losses during the week ending January 19 rose to 58,212 tons, the Admiralty reported today. Eleven ships were sunk by enemy action during the week, it said. They included five British, totaling 34,772 tons, and six Allied.

In the preceding week, Britain lost nine merchantmen, totaling 30,226 tons. The war's average is 62,000 tons weekly.

Berlin, Jan. 28 (A. P.).—A German plane scored a direct hit upon a small British merchantman in the Atlantic west of Ireland, the German High Command reported today. It did not give further details.

Raeder Places Foe's Sea Toll at 6,300,000 Tons

Nazi Naval Chief Reports on British Losses So Far; Calls U. S. Help Too Late

BERLIN, Jan. 28 (AP).—Grand Admiral Erich Raeder, Commander of the German Navy, told dock workers at Bremen today that German naval forces thus far have destroyed 6,300,000 tons of British shipping and that submarines have accounted for about two-thirds of this total. Ships destroyed by the air force were not included, the admiral said.

Raeder said the British admitted that 400,000 tons of their naval vessels had been destroyed, and commented, "we know how much they don't say."

Raeder declared that England was losing tonnage at a rate which inevitably must bring about her collapse. Great Britain herself cannot build ships as fast as the German Navy destroys them, Raeder said, adding that no amount of help Britain may get from abroad will be adequate.

"In view of the power of the German blows, any aid from abroad will come too late," he said.

Cambridge Railroad Raided

D. N. B., official German news agency, said German bombing planes had attacked English rail facilities north of Cambridge. Bomb hits damaged a freight station and train, it said.

A German plane scored a direct hit upon a small British merchantman in the Atlantic west of Ireland, the German high command reported. It did not give details.

No British planes were seen over Germany or German-occupied territory last night, it said, but one British plane was reported downed yesterday. The high command acknowledged the loss of one plane.

Long-range batteries in the occupied zone of France fired upon military objectives in southeast England yesterday, the high command reported. The official news agency said the cross-Channel fire was directed at the harbor of Folkestone, eight miles southwest of Dover. It said the shelling started yesterday afternoon and continued into the night.

964 Merchantmen Known Lost

WASHINGTON, Jan. 28 (AP).—The known toll of the war at sea was placed at 3,619,624 gross tons of merchant shipping in a Maritime Commission compilation today which recorded sharply lower losses than German or British figures.

The compilation, covering the period from Sept. 3, 1939, to Dec. 7, 1940, listed 964 merchant vessels reported lost and missing in the war. Because the announcement of some losses are withheld for military purposes, however, the list offered an imperfect basis for comparison with the rival claims of belligerents.

The commission's total included 436 British ships of 1,765,851 gross tons, with the tonnage of two of the vessels unknown; seventy German ships of 386,630 gross tons, and sixteen Italian ships of 82,618 gross tons.

The German high command, in a review of the first fourteen months of the war at sea, claimed that at least 7,162,200 tons of "enemy shipping or shipping usable by the enemy" had been sent to the bottom. Vessels sunk by mines or fighting ships were not included.

Unofficial British estimates, covering an additional two months, placed combined neutral and British losses at approximately 5,500,000 tons—a total rapidly approaching the record of 7,759,000 tons lost in the 1914-'18 World War period.

AT THE OUTBREAK OF THE WAR IN 1939, BRITAIN'S MERCHANT TONNAGE WAS MORE THAN 21,000,000. AS THE CONFLICT PROGRESSED, SHE ACQUIRED AN ADDITIONAL 8,000,000 TONS FROM ALLIED NATIONS, AND LAUNCHED ANOTHER 500,000 TONS OF NEW SHIPPING DURING THE FIRST YEAR, ACCORDING TO AVAILABLE INFORMATION.

REVOLT TRIAL IS UNDER WAY IN BUCHAREST

Malaxa Is Charged With Aiding and Abetting Iron Guard Riots

ANTONESCU DEMANDS ORDER

Prisoner Quoted as Saying Nazi Officer Was Shot With a Guardist's Revolver

Bucharest, Jan. 28 (A. P.).—M. Malaxa, wealthy Rumanian munitions magnate, was placed on trial today on a charge of aiding and abetting last week's Iron Guard revolt.

The trial started as Premier Gen. Ion Antonescu, from a sickbed, gave orders to his newly formed military government to take whatever steps were necessary to insure the maintenance of order throughout the country.

Soldiers, still on duty in Bucharest streets, were instructed to shoot on the spot, with no questions asked, any person found possessing a machine-gun. Police said that the Iron Guard Mayor of one provincial town had confessed he and his wife killed and robbed eighty persons.

Army headquarters announced that weapons already confiscated from captured rebels and their headquarters included 666 machine guns, 128 sawed-off shotguns, 2,844 rifles, 1,964 revolvers and some bayonets.

Passports Canceled.

In a drastic move to prevent the flight of rebel leaders, the Government ordered all Rumanian passports canceled. Any one desiring to cross the frontier must obtain a new visa. Any one attempting to leave otherwise will be arrested.

Malaxa's house, which had been taken over by the Iron Guard, was one of the most badly damaged during the revolt.

Dimitri Sarandos, charged with the assassination ten days ago of Major Doering of the German Army, was quoted today as having testified at his trial that the shooting was done with a revolver supplied by an Iron Guard policeman. According to officials, Sarandos is a native of Greece and now a naturalized Turkish citizen, who came to this country six months ago with a false passport he obtained in Mexico, where he earned his living as a circus performer and prize fighter. The police said they had found an American checkbook in his possession. Although he is reputed to know seven languages, he refuses to speak except in English and Greek.

According to his own story, Rumanian reports said, he argued with Doering over a love affair and the shooting was done with a service gun belonging to Emil Diaconu, a guardist.

In a raid on the home of former Vice-Premier Horia Sima, leader of the Iron Guard rebels, Communist documents were said to have been found. They are reported now under scrutiny of a tribunal. Official circles still insisted that Sima was under arrest, but Iron Guard associates say he is in flight.

One guardist official still at liberty said that five hours before Sima's "cease firing" order last week an airplane vanished from a private airport in Bucharest where the Iron Guard had six planes in readiness for action. He said it was presumed that some guard leaders attempted to escape from the country by air.

Much Money Found.

In raids on the Iron Guard's headquarters a large quantity of Rumanian currency was found, the army reported. In the Guard's Green House, where all archives were seized, the army said it found that 1,000,000,000 lei had been collected in an Iron Guard fund. (The lei is no longer quoted on the New York market; its last nominal quotation was .52 of a cent.)

Loot from pillaged homes already recovered is enough to fill seventy large motor trucks and includes food, furniture, clothing, radios and even bicycles, military men reported.

Forty additional industries were militarized, including shipyards, airplane factories and rubber factories.

A group of college professors issued an appeal to Bucharest university students, thousands of whom had joined an Iron Guard demonstration which preceded the revolution, to support Gen. the army reported. In the guard's

Sima In Flight, Friends Say; Under Arrest, Government Claims

[By the Associated Press]

Bucharest, Jan. 28—The Rumanian Government put a wealthy munitions manufacturer on trial today on charges that he furnished the tanks, arms and munitions which the Iron Guard used in its abortive revolution last week.

Government prosecutors said the industrialist, M. Malaxa, was being detained in a basement cell in the police barracks. They accuse him of allowing the rebels to convert his stone mansion in the heart of the city into a citadel during the revolt. The home virtually was wrecked by artillery before the rebels capitulated.

Antonescu Is Ill

Premier Gen. Ion Antonescu, confined to his home by illness, directed his new military Government meanwhile to do whatever was necessary to guarantee the maintenance of order throughout the country.

Iron Guard associates of Horia Sima, former Vice-Premier and chief of the Iron Guard, insisted that he was in flight, presumably by plane, while official circles reiterated that he was under arrest. Communist documents were reported found in his home.

Soldiers who patrol the streets were instructed to shoot on sight anyone possessing a machine gun.

Mayor's Confession

Police said the Iron Guard Mayor of one provincial town confessed that he and his wife killed and robbed eighty persons during the revolt.

The loot from pillaged homes and shops already recovered is enough to fill seventy large motor trucks, police said, and army headquarters announced nearly 6,000 weapons, including 666 machine guns, had been confiscated.

The Government ordered all Rumanian passports canceled to prevent flight of the rebel leaders, and agents were sent to all provincial towns to see that the "best citizens" took municipal posts.

Calinescu Tomb Blown Up

The tomb of Armand Calinescu, arch enemy of the Iron Guard who was blamed for the execution of thousands of its members in 1939, was dynamited by rebels during last week's revolt, it was disclosed tonight.

The explosion destroyed the stone crypt and bodies of the former Premier and his parents in the mausoleum at Curtea de Arges in Transylvania.

The Bucharest radio tonight announced restrictions on carrying weapons would be eased for anyone previously threatened by the Iron Guard. Such persons may carry firearms for self-protection provided they obtain permits from the military.

Willkie Calls on Commons

JAN 29 1941

Caught in Raid Alarm Without Helmet

LONDON, Jan. 28.—(AP)—Wendell L. Willkie visited the House of Commons today and sat in the distinguished visitor's gallery during an opposition attack on the government's suppression of the Daily Worker, Communist Party organ.

Caught earlier in the first air raid of his London visit without the steel helmet he brought from the United States, Willkie also got into the house without a gas mask—ordinarily required equipment for all entering there.

Attendants explained that he was allowed to enter without his mask because he is "only a temporary resident of London." Foreign press representatives and others in the same galleries always are required to carry masks.

While Willkie sat in a front row of the almost empty gallery for half an hour, Aneurin Bevan, Laborite, told the House that the suppression of the Daily Worker was driving the opposition to war underground and that soon Britain would need "a Gestapo" to combat such opposition.

VISITS BANK OF ENGLAND

There was no recognition of Willkie's visit from the floor.

Before going to Commons, Willkie visited the Bank of England and met Montagu Norman, the bank's governor. A crowd gathered outside cheered when he left.

Willkie said he had "an interesting discussion" with Norman.

His second day in London began later than schedule because of the necessity of reading a big sheaf of letters, telegrams and invitations received from all parts of England.

Members of his party said "nearly every mayor in England has written or wired asking him to pay his town a visit."

Anti-aircraft guns were blazing away during a half-hour conference Willkie held with Arthur Cardinal Hinsley, archbishop of Westminster, after leaving Commons.

The gunfire, in the fourth alert of the day, failed to interrupt the discussion between the man the London press is calling "America's private citizen No. 1" and Cardinal Hinsley, leader of Roman Catholicism in England.

It was understood their talk dealt mainly with the attitude of Britain's Roman Catholic population toward the war. Cardinal Hinsley recently broadcast strictures against nazism.

Willkie had started the second day of his visit in England with a visit to St. Paul's, where he described the damage done by bombs as "outrageous."

"Of course," he said, "it is impossible to say in view of this whether the Germans were deliberately aiming at the cathedral or not. They may have been going for something else. No one can tell. Nevertheless it is outrageous."

GETS BOMB FRAGMENTS

Willkie was given fragments of incendiary bombs by Dr. W. R. Matthews, dean of the cathedral, and stuffed them into his overcoat pocket.

The 1940 Republican presidential nominee, hailed as a "real guy" on his first busy round of the city, found invitations piling up today—from Buckingham Palace on down.

He is to meet King George, but the date was not disclosed.

Today Willkie planned to see more bomb-ravaged sections of London and meet a half dozen more British notables.

Men on his list included Clement Attlee, lord privy seal; Arthur Greenwood, minister without portfolio; Arthur Cardinal Hinsley, archbishop of Westminster; Sir Kingsley Wood, chancellor of the exchequer, and Lord Beaverbrook, minister of aircraft production.

The English press welcomed Willkie's enthusiastic curiosity and centered attention on what he might tell Americans back home when he returns to the United States.

Under the heading, "Veni, Vidi, Willkie," the News-Chronicle said in its lead editorial:

"As a lively observer of men and things, he should be able to take back to America, where his influence is very great, an accurate and impartial picture of Britain at war."

Willkie had brought a "tin hat" with him, but he had left it in his hotel room when four air alarms caught him on his rounds today. Churchill's helmets are more streamlined than Willkie's—a relic of the World War.

Nothing Disturbs Activity

"I guess when he saw I was traveling without one," Willkie said, "he thought we needed help."

Willkie plunged cheerfully about London during the day through four air raids, acting as if nothing out of the ordinary had happened and permitting nothing to disturb his strenuous schedule.

He had just stepped out of St. Paul's Cathedral when the day's initial warning sounded. He cocked an ear, smiled and said: "Fine! That's just fine!"

He inspected the bomb damage at St. Paul's and called it "outrageous"; talked with Montagu Norman, governor of the Bank of England; conferred with Sir Kingsley Wood, Chancellor of the Exchequer; sat for half an hour in Commons listening to debate; had a half-hour's conference with Arthur Cardinal Hinsley, Roman Catholic Archbishop of Westminster.

Attitude Of Catholics

It was understood that Willkie's discussion with the archbishop—who recently denounced Naziism—dealt with the attitude of Britain's Roman Catholics toward the war.

To a question whether American Catholics favored aid to Britain, Willkie replied:

"There is no distinction; there are no differences on the question in so far as racial or religious grounds are concerned."

Summing up his impressions, he declared:

"I cannot speak too highly of the way the British people are conducting themselves in this crisis. . . . I am particularly impressed with the calm, deliberate courage of everyone. It is all done without the fanfare of trumpets. That's the kind of stuff I admire.

Impressed By Commons

"Commons also has made a great impression on me. I was able to listen to a little of the debate. The fact that, right in the midst of this critical time, Parliament can go on discussing such questions as freedom of the press is a spectacle that is as magnificent as it is refreshing."

The question before Commons was an opposition motion to censure the Government for suppressing the Communist newspaper the Daily Worker. This motion was defeated, 323 to 6.

Willkie lunched at Commons with Clement Attlee, Lord Privy Seal, and Arthur Greenwood, Minister Without Portfolio, both leaders in the Labor party.

Will Tour Shelters

Tomorrow he will tour air-raid shelters.

Willkie had tea at the home of Lord and Lady Astor. Tonight he dined privately with Lord Beaverbrook, the Minister for Aircraft Production.

He disclosed that he had declined an invitation to broadcast "because I did not come here to talk or to try in any way to instruct you people. I have come here to learn things for myself."

London, Jan. 28—Wendell L. Willkie's visit today to the House of Commons without a gas mask—normally a requirement for admittance—brought a gesture of friendship from Prime Minister Churchill.

It was a package from which tumbled three gas masks and six new steel helmets. They were the Prime Minister's gifts to Willkie, two friends who accompanied him to Europe, John Cowles and Landon Thorne, and to three newspapermen who also flew over with him.

Capital Hears President May Offer Willkie Post

JAN 29 1941

Washington, Jan. 28 (AP)—Wendell L. Willkie's visit to England stirred speculation today that President Roosevelt might ask the Republican standard bearer to help him administer aid to Britain, Greece and China under the pending lease-lend bill.

Assuming that the bill will pass, some officails expressed belief that the job of administering assistance to the British, especially in the next few months, wold require the full time of the President or someone authorized to work directly under him.

The talk that Willkie might be given the post was prompted by several considerations. One was the fact that he was Mr. Roosevelt's opponent in the Presidential election last fall, and accordingly, is in a position to promote national unity in support of aid to Britain.

Another was his current trip to Eng-

U.S. May Have Two Envoys in Britain

WASHINGTON (AP)—Creation of the office of Minister in the United States Embassy in London and appointment of S. Clay Williams of North Carolina, to the post was reported today to be under consideration by President Roosevelt.

Williams, a lawyer and businessman, is chairman of the R. J. Reynolds Tobacco Co. His designation was believed likely to follow the nomination of John G. Winant, former Governor of New Hampshire, as Ambassador to Great Britain.

Winant's selection to succeed Joseph P. Kennedy has not been officially confirmed at the White House, but neither have reports he would be appointed been denied. Winant now is director of the International Labor Office with headquarters at Montreal.

It was reported the duties of the new Minister would be primarily administrative.

BRITAIN OUT TO CUT U.S.-RUSSIAN TRADE

Replacement of Goods Sent to Reich Is Seen.

London, Jan. 28 (A. P.).—Hugh Dalton, Minister of Economic Warfare, told Commons today that Russia was buying cotton, copper, machinery and wheat from the United States to replace huge consignments being sent from Russia to Germany.

He added that Great Britain hoped it might be possible to take some steps to reduce this traffic as a result of conversations now going on with the United States Government.

He cited a Russian purchase of 32,000 tons of cotton in the last quarter of 1940 while, he said, large quantities were being sent from the U. S. S. R. to Germany. He also said that the United States had sent 57,000 tons of copper and brass and 100,000 tons of wheat to Russia in 1940, compared with only negligible amounts in previous years.

"There is little evidence that United States exports to the Soviet Union are reaching Germany direct," he said, "but there is ample evidence that the Soviet is exporting Russian goods to Germany and replacing them by imports from the United States."

He said that United States exports of petroleum to Russia were 114,000 tons during eleven months of last year and added that both wheat and oil were commodities which the Soviet Government had undertaken to supply in large quantities under the recent trade agreement with Germany.

Exports of oil and oil-drilling machinery from the United States to Russia in the first eight months of 1940 were nearly double the 1938 total, he said.

British Say U.S. Could Tighten Blockade 40%

By Drew Middleton,
Associated Press Staff Writer

London, Jan. 28.—Economic war waged by the United States and Britain through the ministry of economic warfare's "control at source" strategy would speed the end of the war by increasing the efficiency of the blockade 40 per cent," a British economic expert declared today.

Cooperation between the two powers, he said, would sweep French, Swedish, Yugoslav, Russian and Japanese blockade runners from the seas, throttle the Italian air line from South America to Rome and leave the Axis without foreign cash balances, the expert said.

He reported that "talks are going on along these lines in Washington" and appealed for "cooperation as extensive in economic warfare as in the field of armaments to insure victory for democracy."

Would End Russian Ruse

Among the major leaks in the blockade which would be ended, he asserted, were 30,000 tons of United States cotton imported by Russia, in excess of normal imports, between October 15 and December 15, 1940, and 80,000 tons of copper through Japan and Russia in 1940 in excess of normal.

In this connection, Minister of Economic Warfare Hugh Dalton told the House of Commons today that Russia was buying oil, cotton, copper, machinery and wheat from the United States to replace huge consignments being sent from Russia to Germany.

(Viscount Halifax, British Ambassador, said in Washington today that he expected to take up with the State Department the question of exports to Russia, which Britain believes are replacing the Soviet shipments to Germany.

(Secretary of State Hull said the United States Government was seeking to determine to what extent American exports might be reaching certain belligerents through other countries. He appeared to regard Russian purchases of cotton and other products in this country as of small military importance, but indicated the Government was watching the situation closely.)

To Germany via France

One of the most important leaks at present, the economic expert said, are French ships carrying United States and South American produce from Martinique to Marseille and Toulon, in France. "Germany is taking between 70 and 80 per cent of these cargoes," he added.

The British program includes export control, preclusive purchasing, a shipping "club" and financial pressure. These have been added by Dalton to the blacklist and ship stoppage, which have operated since the start of the war but which lost force when the fall of France gave the depleted royal navy "an almost hopeless task" of controlling unaided the oceans of the world.

From South America quantities of copper, mercury, lead, scrap iron, mica, industrial diamonds, wool, cotton and hides were declared to be moving to Japan, with German and Japanese goods in return flooding South America.

Preclusive Purchasing

"We could stop this with American cooperation," the expert said. "The ships move up the east coast of South America, through the Panama Canal and across the Pacific. If we put naval units at Trinidad, they could jam traffic in a few weeks.

"But that is forbidden by the American neutrality zone."

Preclusive purchasing, the second step in the British program, was explained as the British purchase of export surpluses in neutral countries which otherwise sell their surplus to the Axis, or Japan and Russia for transfer to the Axis.

Under the British shipping "club" plan, ships joining the club are given port facilities, such as bunkering, water, clearing papers and credits in any port of the British Empire in return for a guarantee that they will carry no goods for the Axis or for reexport to the Axis. At present 200 United States ships were said to be members of the club.

HALIFAX SEES SUPPLY LEAK

Will Take Up Question of Exports to Russia.

JAN 30 1941

Washington, Jan. 28 (A. P.).—Viscount Halifax, the British Ambassador, said today that he expected to take up with the State Department in the immediate future the question of exports to Russia which Britain believes are replacing Soviet shipments to Germany.

He talked with reporters after a conference of nearly an hour with Sumner Welles, Under-Secretary of State, whom he had met in London during Mr. Welles's fact-finding mission for President Roosevelt to European capitals last spring.

Secretary Hull previously had indicated that exports to Russia were insufficient to be of any great military value to Germany.

Lord Halifax said there has been a considerable amount of American goods shipped to Russia and that there may be more in the future.

"That movement of goods," Lord Halifax said, "is one of the things we will have to check on."

Replying to questions, the Ambassador said he believed that the goods were reaching Germany through the shipment of necessary supplies from Russia as goods arrived at Vladivostok to replenish Soviet stocks.

Sees Other Shipments.

Lord Halifax said that he believed shipments also were being made to Russia from various Latin American countries.

Asked why the British had not instituted a blockade of Vladivostok, Russia's great Pacific port, the Ambassador replied that presented other problems which would have to be taken into consideration.

In reply to another question, Lord Halifax said that cotton was an important product in the manufacture of munitions.

"If the figures on cotton shipments are substantial," he added, "they probably would be discussed with this Government."

Secretary Hull told his press conference that the Government continuously was studying possible benefits to belligerents, direct or indirect, through United States exports.

30.24— 7215

Mr. Hull told his press conference, however, his information indicated that the increase of Russian cotton purchases in the United States in recent months was comparatively small.

Also, Secretary Hull said there apparently had been some misunderstanding as to the lifting of the moral embargo on airplanes and other equipment to Soviet Russia. He described this action as largely psychological, explaining that all commodities covered by the moral embargo had since been brought under export control.

WASHINGTON, JAN 28-(AP)-THE POSSIBILITY AROSE TONIGHT THAT AMERICAN TRADE WITH SOVIET RUSSIA MIGHT BE CURTAILED FURTHER AFTER BRITISH OFFICIALS CLAIMED THAT IMPORTANT MILITARY SUPPLIES WERE "LEAKING" INTO GERMANY THROUGH RUSSIA.

JAN 29 1941

RUSSIAN PURCHASES OF COTTON IN THE UNITED STATES, WHICH AMOUNTED TO APPROXIMATELY 140,000 BALES DURING THE LAST THREE MONTHS OF 1940, APPEARED TO BE BRITAIN'S CHIEF CONCERN. THE BRITISH GOVERNMENT DISCLOSED THAT IT WAS SEEKING THROUGH DIPLOMATIC CONVERSATIONS HERE TO REDUCE THIS TRAFFIC.

SECRETARY OF STATE HULL SAID THE UNITED STATES GOVERNMENT WAS SEEKING TO DETERMINE TO WHAT EXTENT AMERICAN EXPORTS MIGHT BE REACHING CERTAIN BELLIGERENTS THROUGH OTHER COUNTRIES. HE APPEARED TO REGARD RUSSIAN PURCHASES OF COTTON AND OTHER PRODUCTS IN THIS COUNTRY AS OF SMALL MILITARY IMPORTANCE, BUT INDICATED THE GOVERNMENT WAS WATCHING THE SITUATION CLOSELY.

HUGH DALTON, BRITISH MINISTER OF ECONOMIC WARFARE, TOLD THE HOUSE OF COMMONS IN LONDON THAT RUSSIAN PURCHASES IN THE UNITED STATES WERE BECOMING A MATTER OF CONCERN AND THAT IT WAS HOPED "IT MAY BE POSSIBLE TO TAKE SOME STEPS TO REDUCE THIS TRAFFIC."

HE ADDED THAT THERE WAS "LITTLE EVIDENCE THAT UNITED STATES EXPORTS TO THE SOVIET ARE REACHING GERMANY DIRECT BUT THERE IS AMPLE EVIDENCE THAT THE SOVIET IS EXPORTING RUSSIAN GOODS TO GERMANY AND REPLACING THEM BY IMPORTS FROM THE UNITED STATES."

DALTON CITED COTTON AS AMONG THE PRINCIPAL COMMODITIES OF CONCERN.

GOVERNMENT FIGURES HERE SHOWED THAT RUSSIA HAD BOUGHT VIRTUALLY NO COTTON FROM THE UNITED STATES UNTIL LAST OCTOBER. COTTON IS AN IMPORTANT COMMODITY IN THE MANUFACTURE OF MUNITIONS BUT IT IS NOT SUBJECT TO EXPORT CONTROL AS A STRATEGIC DEFENSE MATERIAL.

VISCOUNT HALIFAX, BRITISH AMBASSADOR, ALSO EXPRESSED THE BELIEF DURING A CALL AT THE STATE DEPARTMENT TODAY THAT CONSIDERABLE AMOUNT OF MATERIALS WAS REACHING GERMANYTHROUGH RUSSIA AND HE SAID A QUESTION THAT WOULD HAVE TO BE CONSIDERED WAS HOW TO STOP THIS LEAKAGE.

JAN 29 1941

DALTON NAMED COPPER AS ANOTHER PRODUCT WHICH RUSSIA HAD BEEN BUYING IN THE UNITED STATES. THIS RECENTLY WAS BROUGHT UNDER THE EXPORT CONTROL SYSTEM.

Alibert Quits French Cabinet

Barthelmy Named New Minister of Justice —Petain Gets Vast New Power.

Vichy, Jan. 28 (A. P.).—Resignation of Raphael Alibert as Minister of Justice in the French Government and appointment of Joseph Barthelemy as his successor were announced today in an official decree.

Alibert's resignation was due to "reasons of health," the same reason given for his absence from the last two Cabinet councils, according to an official explanation. Barthelemy is a faculty member of the Paris Law School.

Political circles also forecast other Cabinet changes, which they said probably would include removal of Rene Belin as Minister of Labor and elimination of Jacques Chevalier as Minister of Youth and Education.

It was reported Belin's duties would be shared by two men—one to be in charge of industrial production, the other of labor.

Petain Gets New Power.

In another governmental development, a far-reaching decree giving Chief of State Marshal Philippe Petain authority to prosecute and punish misdeeds of past, present and future French officeholders was promulgated last night. The new edict, centering vast and unprecedented powers in Marshal Petain, wiped out an old constitutional ban on retroactive laws. It permits him to investigate personally any charges of wrong-doing by high officials in the last ten years.

He thus is empowered to move directly against three former premiers and other members of former French administrations awaiting Supreme Court trials on war guilt and other charges.

Pledges of allegiance to the person of the Chief of State are required under the decree from all ministers, high dignitaries and State officials, who will be responsible with their persons and property for fulfilling their duties in the interests of the State.

An official commentary issued when the decree was under preparation said:

"The regime of irresponsibility is over. The State appears now as a hierarchy with a chief at the head who commands and must be obeyed . . . men who accept responsibility now stake their liberty, their goods and their lives."

Punishment Decreed.

If investigation by Petain supports charges against any official, the offender may be required to make restitution, and may be deprived of his civil rights and put under house surveillance or administrative internment or be detained in a fortified enclosure.

Among one-time French officials against whom Marshal Petain conceivably could move under his new powers are former Premier Paul Reynaud, accused of embezzling public funds; former Premiers Edouard Daladier and Leon Blum, former Generalissimo Gustave Gamelin, former Ministers Pierre Cot and Georges Mandel and others accused of betraying their duties.

Action taken by the Chief of State against offenders, it was announced, "will not exclude further action through legal channels."

Nicol Arrives in Martinique

FORT DE FRANCE, Martinique Jan. 27 (del yed) (AP).—Yves Nicol the Vichy government's newly appointed Governor of Martinique, arrived today to take over his post. Nicol, former administrator in the Cameroons, succeeds Governor Henri Bresolles.

Province of Silesia Divided by Hitler

BERLIN (AP)—Silesia—Germany's largest and most populous province—was split today into two new provinces "to assure political leadership and administration" for its 7,500,000 inhabitants.

Under an order of Reichsfuehrer Hitler, the new provinces are Upper Silesia, with Kattowitz the capital, and Lower Silesia, with Breslau the capital.

Fritz Bracht, 41, became Governor of Upper Silesia and Karl Hanke, 37, of the lower province.

The provinces, in Eastern Germany, are an important mining and manufacturing area.

100 Norse Prisoners Reported Sent To Reich

Group Sentenced By Nazi War Courts For Political Offenses, Oslo Says

Stockholm, Jan. 28 (AP)—One hundred Norwegian prisoners sentenced by German war courts for political offenses have been sent to Germany and more are to follow soon, it was reported from Oslo tonight.

Shipment of a trainload of Norwegian workers to Germany was postponed last Thursday because of "technical reasons," the real reason, according to Oslo reports, was that German enlistment of workers failed. Now new methods are to be introduced in an effort to obtain 5,000 Norwegian workers for Germany before April

A broadcast from the Karl Johans theater in Oslo yesterday was broken off when demonstrations occurred in the theater. The radio stations remained silent 25 minutes without offering any explanation.

Himmler Visiting Oslo

BERLIN, Jan. 28 (AP).—D. N. B. official German news agency, said in a dispatch from Oslo today that the chief of German police, Heinrich Himmler, had arrived in the Norwegian capital for a stay of several days. The purpose of his visit was not disclosed.

Goering Has Talk With Japanese General

Berlin, Jan. 28 (A. P.).—Reichsmarshal Hermann Goering conferred today with Lieut.-Gen. Tomoyuki Yamashita and other officers of a Japanese mission here to discuss military co-operation under the German-Italian-Japanese lliance.

Hitler's Condolences Sent to Csaky's Widow

Berlin, Jan. 28 (A. P.).—Adolf Hitler and Foreign Minister Joachim von Ribbentrop sent telegrams of condolence today to Admiral Horthy, Regent of Hungary, and Countess Csaky, widow of Hungarian Foreign Minister Istvan Csaky, who died January 27.

NAZI DINES GREEK ENVOY

Athens Minister Guest Of Von Der Schulenburg At Moscow

Moscow, Jan. 28 (AP)—Greek Minister Diamantopoulos was a guest of Count Friedrich Werner von Der Schulenburg, German Ambassador, at a dinner in the embassy last night.

Other guests of the German Ambassador included A. I. Mikoyan, Russian Foreign Trade Commissar; Andrei Y. Vyshinsky, Vice-Commissar of Foreign Affairs; Laurence A. Steinhardt, United States Ambassador, and Juhu K. Paasikivi, Finnish Minister.

PARRAN REACHES LISBON

Surgeon General And Five Experts To Study London Defense

Lisbon, Portugal, Jan. 28 (AP)—Dr. Thomas Parran, United States surgeon general, and a party of five experts arrived here today aboard the S S. Excalibur en route to London to study the British defense organization.

Dr. Parran said the group would spend months in England surveying the health services and social assistance among other things.

King of Denmark Gives Heat Secret

By the Associated Press.

COPENHAGEN (via Berlin), Jan. 28.—King Christian shows Denmark how to keep warm through a cold winter when coal is scarce.

Asked by a woman how he managed at the age of 70 to take daily horseback rides even in the bitterest cold, the Danish soverign replied:

"I put old newspapers inside my overcoat. That way I keep warm."

Australia To Store Food

Sydney, Australia, Jan. 28 (AP)—Sir Earle Page, Australian Minister of Commerce, told a conference of agricultural experts at Canberra today that production must be kept at present levels to help meet Britain's needs.

He said that although Britain is short of ships to carry produce, food can be stored while Britain is tightening her belt, then shipped as soon as war circumstances release extra tonnage.

Netherlands Legation Issues Funds Warning

New York, Jan. 28 (AP)—The Royal Netherlands Legation today formally requested bankers and brokers in the United States to refrain from answering requests emanating from German-occupied Netherlands territory for information concerning securities and other property held here in the name of Dutch interests.

"The request for such information may have been sent under duress," the legation said. "The supplying of the information to parties in the occupied territory of the Netherlands may be harmful to the true owners of the accounts and it may also cause injury to the national interests of the Government of the Netherlands."

The legation recalled that title to such accounts is now vested by royal decree in the state of the Netherlands as represented by the Royal Netherlands Government exercising its functions in London.

A spokesman for the legation explained certain requests would be honored if the Dutch officials believed they represented the desires of the real owners.

Financial quarters estimated that Netherlands interests are now probably the largest foreign owners of United States securities since the recent heavy liquidation of British holdings. The total of Dutch holdings has been calculated as high as $1,500,000,000, but it was pointed out such estimate could be wide of the mark because of the absence of full and accurate information.

FIGHTING GOES ON DESPITE ARMISTICE

Thailand Charges French Fired for an Hour.

Bangkok, Jan. 28 (A. P.).—The Bangkok radio charged today that French forces opened fire against Thailand despite an order for cessation, at 10 A. M. today, of hostilities between French Indo-China and Thailand. It asserted the French opened fire at various sectors along the Mekong River as well as the eastern and northeastern fronts.

The gunfire continued an hour after the armistice order became effective, it said. It was said Thai forces did not retaliate.

Shanghai, Jan. 28 (A. P.).—Representatives of Thailand and French Indo-China will meet at Saigon tomorrow with a Japanese mediator to settle the conditions of an armistice effective today in the Thai-Indo-Chinese frontier fight.

The Japanese mediator, Major-Gen. Raishiro Sumita, will act as chairman. Besides fixing terms of the armistice the representatives will make an effort to reach an accord on the border dispute. Thailand claims parts of the provinces of Cambodia and Laos, which she contends France took from her.

Regardless of the outcome of the negotiations, responsible foreign quarters n Shanghai expressed the belief that one result would be further Japanese penetration of southern Indo-China.

These persons said Japan probably would try to gain control of the important naval base at Cam-Rann Bay, often mentioned here as valuable to Japan in any blockade of the British in the Far East, or for naval action in the East Indies area.

JAPANESE ADVANCE INTO INDO-CHINA

Troops Occupy Important Market Town Only 35 Miles From Capital

Tokyo Troopships Reported Sighted Off Coast—Warships Also There

[By the Associated Press]

Saigon, French Indo-China Wednesday, Jan. 29—Japanese troop transports were reported sighted off the coast south of here today as new Japanese military came from Indo-China.

In northern Tonking province Japanese troops occupied the important market town of Haiduong, thirty-five miles east of the capital, Hanoi, and on the road to Haiphong—chief seaport of the region. This occupation was said to violate the September agreement of the Japanese with the Hanoi Government, which did not provide for a base in Haiduong.

Meanwhile, a flotilla of Japanese warships continued to ride at anchor at Cap St. Jacques, with the troop transports reported to be steaming to join them. The warships included two cruisers, an aircraft carrier and two torpedo boats.

The Japanese cruiser Katori and a destroyer were tied up at the Saigon Bund.

Heavy Fighting Flares Anew In Indo-China

Bangkok, Thailand, Jan. 28 (AP)—Heavy fighting flared anew along the border between Thailand and French-Indo-China today, the Thai high command announced, as a result of what it charged were continued "warlike operations" by the French after the cease-firing dead line stipulated in a Japanese-arranged truce.

For three hours after the hostilities were to have stopped at 10 A. M. (11 P. M., Monday, E.S.T.), the high command asserted, the French kept up their violation of the truce. Then, it said. Thai troops began fighting again "in retaliation."

Many prisoners were taken by Thai forces today and the French were repulsed everywhere, the high command said. It added that Japan had been informed of the turn of events.

Besides arranging terms of the armistice, it was said the negotiators would make an effort to reconcile the territorial dispute which led to the undeclared war.

'Avigation' Playing Part In U. S. Defense Effort

Airplane Position Finding Aloft Being Taught New Crop Pilots

MIAMI, Fla. (AP)—The War Department has 450 young men in training here for "avigation" as part of the national defense effort. They are learning to spot stars in the sky to guide American warplanes.

Avigation—a corruption of the word navigation to denote position-finding aloft—is as much a part of military flight as firing machine guns or pulling bomb release levers.

It is infinitely more complicated than learning the operation of throttles, flaps and control wheels.

Bombers must be directed to their destinations, and brought home again, in the absence of radio aids.

Here at Pan-American Airways' aerial gateway to Latin America, company navigators have taken army cadets in charge. In three flying class rooms, transoceanic clippers fitted with 10 study rooms each, the students learn to establish an airplane's course by dead reckoning, radio direction and celestial avigation.

From Civil Life

Students in the course, which lasts 12 weeks, are chosen from civil life in much the same manner as the flying cadets who are sent to the 18 primary training centers to create a pilot reservoir.

They are between 20 and 27 years old, and priority is given to graduates of accredited colleges with engineering degrees. Second priority is given to college graduates who have had mathematics—including plane geormetry, algebra and trigonometry—and third to those with two years of college work and the requisite mathematics.

Pan-American Airways was chosen to direct the study course because of its 14-year record of transoceanic flying, begun in the Caribbean.

Cadets are quartered at San Sebastian Hall at the University of Miami, and are under the command of Captain F. H. Goodrich, regular army. Directing the training is Captain Carl M. Dewey, head of the company's navigation section.

Bad weather flights over distances of hundreds of miles have become commonplace in the European war. Night operations must be conducted frequently without radio because a broadcasting station provides as much guidance for enemy as for friend.

Exceptions

There have been exceptions. The Germans have projected criss-cross radio beams above points in England, but radio aids for bomber crews have been the exception rather than the rule.

The Army Air Corps for years has been alive to the need for celestial avigation, and Langley Field, Va., an air corps base, boasts of one officer who can establish a plane's position—in spite of speeds of 250 to 300 miles an hour—with an accuracy which stumps even the men in the cockpit.

Dead reckoning means plotting a course to allow for speed, altitude and the drift-effect of winds. Celestial position-finding depends on the use of complicated charts carrying the relative positions of the moon, sun, stars and planets at stated periods. A computing machine, first used by Howard Hughes on his round-the-world flight in 1938, now is simplifying celestial avigation.

Radio position-finding covers the use of radio beam "highways" and triangulation. Two ground radio stations are used in triangulation, and the position of the plane is established by determining the angles in the imaginary triangle of which the plane is the apex.

Signaling Motor and New 'Ear' Ready to Smash Night Raids

R. A. F. Works Out System Whereby Pursuit Planes Ride Their Own Beams Directly to Nazi Bombers

By MORGAN M. BEATTY

WASHINGTON, Jan. 28 (AP).—An airplane motor that broadcasts radio signals and a new super-sensitive radio ear capable of listening to plane motors many miles away are instruments the British Army has worked out to swat Nazi bombers in the dark.

But so many thousands of the new gadgets are required and so many thousands of crews must be trained in mathematics, radio and complex teamwork that it may be months before sure-fire results are obtained. Even so, two or three German bombers are often bagged by the new radio system on every big night raid.

That's the gist of confidential reports coming back to America from the scene of night air war over the British Isles. Oddly enough, the system is a modern counterpart of a crude method developed by British-born American Ace Harold Hartney at the fag end of the World War. Mr. Hartney actually downed a German bomber with his system in 1918.

How Idea Works Out

The modern idea, not to give away any secrets, works out, roughly, like this:

The whole countryside in England, especially along the channel coast, is peppered with small, portable radio stations equipped with gadgets capable of picking up the radio beams the German bomb crews ride to their targets over Britain.

The Germans broadcast two beams to the target. Say the target is Coventry from, say, Brest, France. Another is broadcast from Brussels. The German bomber rides one or the other of these, then, when he picks up the other one at maximum intensity, he's obviously over Coventry. If there's more than one target in one night, then more than one set of beams are broadcast, each set a little different.

Can Spot Enemy 25 Miles Away

The little portable stations are also equipped with the new super-sensitive radio ear that can hear enemy motors 25 or more miles away.

As soon as the ground stations begin to pick up the German beams and the German motors, they report back to a central mapping and radio headquarters where all these sounds and their intensities are plotted on a map of the British Isles. In a very few minutes, the German beams show up on the map and so does the approximate spot where the enemy planes are going to reach English territory.

By the time both the target and the progress of the planes are plottable, the mapping and radio headquarters notifies radio observation squadrons near the target. The planes are equipped with the same listening devices as the ground stations and serve to check principally on the German plane motors and speeds.

Fighters Sent Aloft

Once the headquarters people are satisfied they will be able to spot the approximate position of the German planes, say a half hour in advance, they notify a fighter squadron of a possible contact point and send out their own beam for that point for the fighter squadron to ride.

Sometimes the fighters miss the enemy in the dark. In this work the radio broadcasting motor is extremely essential. All the night-flying British squadrons are equipped with them. Without them, the various radio listening posts on the ground and in the air could not distinguish between their own friendly planes and the hostile motors of the enemy.

The friendly motor broadcasts signals automatically at fixed intervals. The timing of these clicks tells the listener he's hearing friendly craft. Antiaircraft guns stationed near the radio listening posts thus know, too, when to let go and when to hold their fire.

WILL BUILD AIRPORT ON FISHERS ISLAND

WPA Allots $245,533 for It in New York City Defense

WASHINGTON, Jan. 28 (AP)—The Work Projects Administration announced today its approval of an allocation of $245,533 for development of a military airport at Fort Wright, off the northeastern tip of Long Island.

Situated on Fishers Island, in Suffolk County, the military reservation is the last link in a chain of outer fortifications guarding New York City. The British fleet was based in the near-by waters during the War of 1812.

Army authorities said there was no military airfield on the island now.

Building of an airport there has been advocated by the commanding officer at Fort Wright as a defense project.

WPA officials said that provision was made for the use of relief labor from Connecticut if necessary. The island is in Long Island Sound, slightly east of New London, Conn.

U. S. Transport Hits Canadian Reef, 3 Missing

Woman Among 57 Saved; Army Ship Was Carrying Supplies to Alaska Base

VICTORIA, B. C., Jan. 28 (AP).—Three seamen tossed from a capsizing lifeboat were reported missing tonight after earlier word that all sixty passengers and crewmen of the grounded United States Army transport Kvichak had reached shore safely.

The gunboat Charleston, flagship of the United States Navy's Alaskan sector, radioed that Rosendo Cacris, Alfred Peralata and William O. Reeves were believed lost. They disappeared soon after the 1,200-ton vessel, carrying Alaskan Army base supplies from Seattle, grounded on treacherous rocks of the "inside passage" late last night. Other lifeboats carried the passengers and most of the crew safely ashore despite the darkness and the swirling waters.

Tonight, as heavy seas flooded over the deck of the wrecked ship, Capt. W. W. Williamson and twelve members of his crew remained aboard voluntarily.

The Charleston, meantime, reported it was proceeding to Ketchikan with the passengers, including one woman, and the remaining crewmen.

Earlier the Coast Guard cutter Nemaha, arriving at the wreck scene—Sisters Rocks, 150 miles south of Prince Ruppert, B. C.—had radioed that all were safe.

Part of the crew had remained aboard during the night while the others and the passengers huddled ashore awaiting rescue craft. A small power boat arrived at the scene soon after daybreak and the Charleston hove to off shore soon after noon.

These radio messages told of the night's happenings after the first SOS was sent. One told of the lifeboat which capsized, and added: "Men and woman in water. Don't know how many. Getting them aboard as fast as possible." (The Army reported only one woman, Mrs. David Wisley, accompanying her husband to the Annette Island airfield near Ketchikan, was aboard.)

Further messages told of waves crashing over the ship, water pouring into the radio room and that the ship was "breaking up and leaking quite a bit."

Troop Landing Again Delayed At St. John's

U. S. Transport Kept Outside Newfoundland Harbor Narrows By Heavy Mist

St. John's, Newfoundland, Jan. 28 (AP)—The United States troop transport Edmond B. Alexander, loaded with soldiers to man the new defense bases in Newfoundland, delayed again today its entrty into St. John's harbor because of poor visibility.

The Alexander arrived here several days ago from New York, but has not negotiated the narrows, where there is a clearance of only fifteen feet on each side, because of storms.

These abated this morning and the ship approached the narrows, but steamed back to the outer bay when mists obscured the passage.

In the War Zone

Definition of War Aims at Present Declared Difficult for Either Side

By DEWITT MACKENZIE.

It was in the cards that the discussions revolving about the lease-lend bill and our all-out program of aid for Britain should inspire efforts, such as that marked by the Nye-Wheeler resolution introduced in the Senate, to get the belligerents to declare their war aims.

Such information would, of course, provide invaluable guidance for America. Possibly in recognition of this, Britain's new envoy to Washington, Lord Halifax, yesterday indicated that he might soon define his country's war aims for the first time. He reiterated that the No. 1 aim is to win the war.

However, the trend of the conflict would indicate that neither Lord Halifax nor any one else will be able at this juncture to lay down war aims which would be useful for the negotiated peace that some people are pressing for.

The position as I see it is that the war must reach its big crisis before there is the slightest use in raising the question of peace terms. The combatants still have to iron out the question of whether Hitler can invade and crush England or whether the flower of German youth will be sunk in the channel.

Alternative Results.

This climax may come at any time and isn't likely to be delayed much beyond the arrival of the good spring weather—unless the Nazi chieftain decides that the task is too big for him. It is always possible that he will have to abandon this gamble and depend on his submarine campaign to strangle Britain, but he won't give up the invasion idea unless absolutely forced to. If he makes his attack we shall get one or two results:

1. Hitler will succeed and the war will to all intents be over, even if Churchill should be able to carry out his promise of transferring his Government and navy to Canada.

2. The Germans will be terribly defeated and flung back onto the Continent, whereupon the conflict will continue indefinitely—maybe for years—until one side or the other is squeezed so hard that civilian morale cracks.

If we arrive at the second situation, as many experts now believe quite possible, there might be a chance of getting the belligerents to consider a negotiated peace. Britain would then be in a more favorable position, but would still have to make concessions which might give Hitler the living space which he originally claimed.

Hitler's Latest Demands.

Actually we have little to go on now in the way of concrete war aims. Hitler's latest declaration may be found in the terms of the triple alliance among Germany, Italy and Japan. Under that pact the Berlin-Rome Axis is to have domination of Africa and all Europe, barring Turkey and European Asia. Japan gets the Far East, and to Russia is assigned the vast territories between Japan's sphere and Europe.

Churchill has done little talking, though we know in general terms that Britain originally proposed to free the European countries which have been deprived of their liberty by the Germans.

One very definite and striking war aim has been laid down by Churchill:

"We seek to beat the life and soul out of Hitler and Hitlerism—that alone."

CAIRO, Egypt, Jan. 28 (AP)—A British headquarters communiqué issued at Cairo today follows:

Libya: The concentration of our forces in the Derna area is continuing.

Eritrea: While operations in the Agordat-Barentu area are progressing satisfactorily, our mobile troops continue to press Italian forces retreating from Um Hagar. A further 100 prisoners have been captured, making a total of over 1,200 up to date.

Ethiopia: East of Metemma the situation remains unchanged.

Italian Somaliland: Our patrols have again been active.

The Royal Air Force at Cairo issued the following communiqué:

Bomber aircraft of the R. A. F. continued their attack on enemy stores, landing grounds and lines of communication in Italian East Africa, Albania and Libya yesterday.

At Elbasan a force of bombers carried out another raid on military buildings and stores in the town, registering several direct hits. Considerable damage was caused and the target was enveloped in smoke when the raiders left.

In Italian East Africa our aircraft attacked railway stations at Cheren and Aisha, seventy miles southwest of Jibuti, and the railway bridge and road east of Adarte, where the road was struck and bombs fell close to the bridge.

Stores and warehouses at Assab and dispersed enemy aircraft at Gura were bombed.

Our fighters carried out offensive patrols without encountering any of the enemy.

The landing ground at Apollonia, Libya, was raided on Jan. 26 and again yesterday.

From all operations our aircraft returned safely.

LONDON, Jan. 28 (AP)—The British Air Ministry and Ministry of Home Security issued this communiqué tonight:

This morning an enemy aircraft dropped bombs at several points in the eastern counties, causing little damage and no casualties.

During this afternoon a number of enemy aircraft have crossed the south coast and flown over the southeast of England. They dropped bombs through the clouds, but no important damage is reported and there were very few casualties.

The British Admiralty issued this communiqué today:

It is now known that on Saturday, Jan. 25, an enemy aircraft was engaged by His Majesty's trawlers Strathrannock (temporary skipper, A. S. Ladd, R.N.R.), Galvania (temporary skipper, M. P. Peck, R. N. R.), and Philippe (skipper, J. Slater, R. N. R.) and was seen to be repeatedly hit. Crippled and on fire, the enemy jettisoned his bombs and disappeared into the mist in an easterly direction.

Attacks were made by aircraft on shipping off the east coast. In addition to a JU.-88 [Junkers bomber] shot down by His Majesty's trawler Galvania, His Majesty's ship Wallace (Lieut. Com. E. G. Heywood-Lonsdale, R. N.) and His Majesty's drifters Fisher Boy (skipper, G. W. Brown, R. N. R.) and Reids (skipper, G. R. Ovenstone, R. N. R.) were in action with the enemy, and it is known at least two aircraft, a Messerschmitt 110 and a JU.-88, were destroyed by them.

One body and one injured prisoner were recovered from the wreckage of one aircraft. From the other, which was shot down in flames, there were no survivors. No damage or casualties were sustained by His Majesty's ships.

Enemy aircraft were also successfully engaged by the guns of merchantmen, and one enemy aircraft, type not mentioned, was destroyed by them. One vessel received some damage from a near miss, but reached port in safety.

Greek

ATHENS, Greece, Jan. 28 (AP)—The Greek Command issued the following communiqué tonight:

There were local operations. Some prisoners were taken. Two enemy aircraft were shot down by our anti-aircraft fire.

A communiqué of the Greek Ministry of Home Security follows:

Enemy aviation bombed Salonika. Its objective was a military hospital, on which bombs were dropped. One person was killed at the hospital and ten wounded, among them four nurses.

Bombs also were dropped by an enemy plane on a rural area in Macedonia, but there were no casualties and there was no damage.

Italian

ROME, Jan. 28 (AP)—The Italian High Command issued the following communiqué today:

On the Greek front we inflicted heavy losses on the enemy and captured prisoners and automatic arms in local actions.

Our air detachments carried out violent offensive actions against enemy motorized columns, troop concentrations and military preparations.

In Cyrenaica, fighting continues east of Derna. Our troops repulsed an enemy column, inflicting losses and capturing prisoners.

Our air force bombed and machine-gunned enemy armored units and infantry. Our fighter planes shot down two Hurricane planes in an air battle.

In East Africa on the Kenya front, our Dubats [native troops] surprised an enemy post, inflicting considerable losses in men and material.

Our air formations effectively bombed enemy tanks and armored cars. Our fighter planes shot down a Gloster plane. Another plane was shot down by our scouting planes.

Enemy planes raided Catania the night of Jan. 27, dropping several bombs, which caused no damage or victims. Another raid on Naples and its vicinity caused very slight damage and no victims.

German

BERLIN, Jan. 28 (AP)—The German High Command issued the following communiqué today:

At sea, west of Ireland, a long-distance bomber scored a direct hit on a small merchantman. One British harbor was mined.

Long-range batteries, during

Plane Output Doubled In '40

[By the Associated Press]

Washington, Jan. 28 — The nation's aircraft industry reported today that it produced $544,440,000 worth of airplanes, engines and propellers last year, more than double the 1939 production.

Col. John H. Jouett, president of the Aeronautical Chamber of Commerce, Inc., said that if the output of accessories branches were added in, total production reached $625,000,000.

Plant facilities are being expanded for a "vastly greater" output in 1941, Jouett said.

A few hours before the aeronautical group made public its revised production figures, Walter D. Fuller, president of the National Association of Manufacturers, delivered a generally cheerful report on the progress of the industrial defense program in general.

Fuller told the Women's Patriotic Conference on National Defense, in session here, that "a survey of hundreds of manufacturers with defense contracts shows that on ninety-three per cent of these contracts industry will meet or beat specified delivery dates."

WASHINGTON, JAN 28-(AP)-GERMANY CAN MUSTER 36,000 FIGHTING PLANES, INCLUDING PROBABLY A SECRET NEW PURSUIT SHIP, FOR AN ALL-OUT ASSAULT ON ENGLAND IN THE SPRING, WELL-INFORMED SOURCES HERE INDICATED TODAY.

RELIABLE INFORMATION WAS THAT THE NAZIS COULD PUT INTO THE AIR 18,000 FIGHTERS AND BOMBERS IN 31 DIVISIONS AGGREGATING 1,200 SQUADRONS AND AT THE SAME TIME HOLD 100 PER CENT REPLACEMENTS FOR PLANES AND PILOTS IN RESERVE.

THE LIKELIHOOD THAT GERMANY HAD DEVELOPED A NEW PURSUIT PLANE SECRETLY TO PROVIDE AN ELEMENT OF SURPRISE IN ANY INVASION ATTEMPT WAS SEEN IN THE CIRCUMSTANCE THAT GERMANY HAS NOT BROUGHT OUT A NEW TYPE PURSUIT PLANE SINCE 1937.

JAN 29 1941

ANOTHER SURPRISE MIGHT BE THE USE OF TORPEDO PLANES AGAINST SHIPPING CONVOYS. GERMANY'S BRIEF USE OF SUCH PLANES IN THE PAST WAS REGARDED AS QUITE EVIDENTLY AN EXPERIMENT.

GERMANY WAS ESTIMATED TO HAVE ABOUT A 4 TO 1 ADVANTAGE OVER GREAT BRITAIN IN THE AIR, BASED NOT MERELY ON RELATIVE NUMBERS OF PLANES BUT ON ALL FACTORS CONTRIBUTING TO AERIAL STRENGTH. ONE FACTOR IN BRITAIN'S FAVOR IS HER CONCENTRATION OF PURSUIT PLANES OVER A LIMITED AREA. A FACTOR FOR GERMANY IS THE CONCENTRATION OF TARGETS IN ENGLAND WHEREAS THEY ARE COMPARATIVELY SCATTERED IN GERMANY.

THE POSSIBILITY THAT GAS MIGHT BE USED IN AN INVASION ATTEMPT WAS MENTIONED AS ONE OF THE UNCERTAIN ELEMENTS MAKING IT DIFFICULT TO CALCULATE THE CHANCES OF GERMAN SUCCESS.

NAZI FLYER MAY GET YEAR IN JAIL

Sole Penalty Indicated Is for Illegal Entry.

Syracuse, Jan. 28 (A. P.).—Ralph L. Emmons, United States Attorney, announced today he was under instructions from Washington to take no court action at present in the case of Baron Franz von Werra, escaped German war pilot.

The twenty-six-year-old flyer, Mr. Emmons said, appeared to be protected by international law following his flight from a Canadian prison train across the St. Lawrence River to Ogdensburg.

One Federal official asserted that because Von Werra is an escaped prisoner of war in a neutral country, he must be deported to the country of which he is a citizen.

Officials said the first offense for illegal entry is a misdemeanor and action is taken without indictment. The maximum sentence is one year in jail, after which, in Von Werra's case, he could, after deportation proceedings, be interned at Ellis Island for the duration of the war.

The police said a warrant had been filed by Canadian officials charging Von Werra with theft of the $35 boat in which he crossed the river. He was reported in seclusion in New York city, where he went after posting $5,000 bail. He is to appear Thursday before a Federal Grand Jury in Albany.

WASHINGTON, JAN 28-(AP)-THE GERMAN EMBASSY SAID TODAY THAT BARON FRANZ VON WERRA, GERMAN FLIER WHO ESCAPED FROM A CANADIAN PRISON TRAIN, WAS PREPARED TO TURN OVER $35 TO AMERICAN AUTHORITIES FOR THE ROWBOAT HE USED IN CROSSING THE ST.LAWRENCE RIVER INTO THE UNITED STATES.

THE EMBASSY, HOWEVER, MAINTAINED THAT VON WERRA HAD NOT COMMITTED A THEFT. ITS STATEMENT FOLLOWED WORD FROM OGDENSBURG, N.Y., THAT CANADIAN AUTHORITIES HAD FILED A WARRANT CHARGING THEFT OF THE BOAT.

"THIS ASTONISHING CHARGE," THE EMBASSY SAID, "DOES NOT STAND UP EITHER UNDER CIVIC (CORRECT) OR MILITARY LAW AS PRACTICED IN MOST NATIONS. AS A PRISONER OF WAR, BARON FRANZ VON WERRA WAS JUSTIFIED IN ATTEMPTING ESCAPE AND TO USE ALL REASONABLE MEANS AT HIS COMMAND TO EFFECT SUCH AN ESCAPE. NOR CAN THE MERE USE OF A SMALL ROWBOAT WITH NO INTENTION OF APPROPRIATING IT TO HIMSELF OR KEEPING IT BEYOND ITS USE AS A MEANS OF TRANSPORTATION TO CROSS THE RIVER BE CONSIDERED AS THEFT."

THE EMBASSY ADDED HOWEVER, THAT SINCE CANADIAN AUTHORITIES "ARE SO GREATLY CONCERNED ABOUT THE BOAT" BARON VON WERRA HOLDS $35 AT THE DISPOSAL OF AMERICAN AUTHORITIES "SO THAT WHATEVER RESTITUTION THE BRIEF USE OF THE BOAT IN THE JUDGMENT OF THE CANADIAN AUTHORITIES MIGHT REQUIRE, BE MADE PROMPTLY."

NAZI SOLDIER'S WIFE PATIENT IN WAR'S GRIP

Works All Day in Factory, but Cares for Her Children Also.

HUSBAND IS A CRAFTSMAN

Routine of Her Daily Life Is Described in Article Dealing With Germany of Today.

(This is the first of six stories on the conditions under which the Germans face life today.)

By ANGUS THUERMER

Berlin, Jan. 23 (A. P.).—War's hampering grip is felt in all phases of life these days, but especially stern is the lot of the wife of the small craftsman. Germany's pride—the master craftsman, be he optical worker, tool expert, or cabinetmaker—is a man of self-respect.

The war is putting him and his family on their mettle. It's not just a matter of doing without French champagne or storing the car away, as it is with wealthier fellow citizens. With him it gets down to brass tacks.

Let's visit Frau B's home.

Frau B, a genuine Berliner—meaning she was born somewhere else—came to Berlin at the age of 16, when her father died, and eight years ago, when she was 23, married a young carpenter.

For a while they lived on the outskirts of town, but moved into the city to save commuting time. Frau B gave up working, and in 1937 a second child was born. Last year, however, wanting to help out the family income, she went back to work at her former job in the mailing department of a chemical factory. Her husband was drafted last April. Since then she has kept going alone.

Calls for Her Son.

In the evening she leaves the factory, stops at the kindergarten run by the Nazi welfare organization and picks up the little son she left there in the morning on the way to work. Continuing home, she stops at the milk shop and gets a pint in a saucepan she left early in the morning. At the meat market she asks the butcher to save her some hamburger for the next day, then has the baker snip off 500 grams worth of bread on her ration card in exchange for a loaf.

It's a five-minute additional walk home. Through the great front door over a dark court we go into a rear wing, up to the fifth floor.

Clothes Ready for Raid.

The apartment consists of a 25-square-foot vestibule, a kitchen 8 by 12, a living-sleeping room 15 by 12. Two bags stand in the entry way, one containing the family's papers and the other some pieces of table silver, along with clothes ready to be taken down into the cellar in case of an air-raid alarm.

The walls of the kitchen are painted bright blue. At the left of the door stands a coal range with two cooking holes, and near it a gas ring.

At the back of the kitchen is a little chest. On top of it are an alarm clock and a picture of Hitler. Scattered elsewhere around the room are provisions, a medicine chest, a flashlight for blackouts and three books from the lending library. In the bedroom, papered in yellow, hangs a picture of Frau B and her husband taken at their wedding before a justice of the peace.

Stove Heats Room.

There are two hickory beds, a crib and a sofa, on which her eight-year-old daughter sleeps. There is a round table in the center of the room. At one side there is a large clothes closet, behind which is stowed a sewing machine and a vacuum cleaner. The room is heated by a high porcelain stove with decorated tiles.

As Frau B arrives home, the Nazi block leader, a woman from next door, is distributing food cards for the next month. The block leader tells about how an evacuation train is going to take her daughter Ingrid to her grandparents in East Prussia, and the two women talk about how happy the grandparents will be, the unlikelihood of R. A. F. flyers reaching East Prussia, and the good news that geese will be available for food.

Blackout Papers on Windows.

In the bedroom, blackout papers are hanging over the windows. It is still dark when Frau B leaves in the morning and dark when she gets home, so there is no occasion for taking them down during the day.

The stove is cold and the beds still unmade, because of the rush in the morning to get the children dressed and to school and kindergarten, after which Frau B has a twenty-minute street-car ride to get to the chemical factory by 8. The first job in the evenings is to get the big stove roaring. In twenty minutes the room is warmed up. Frau B has been rationed twenty hundredweight of coal briquettes for the winter, and thinks it will easily carry her through.

Since the war began she has received permits to buy a pair of slippers, a pair of shoes and a coat. Then with the clothing card—on the point system—she was able to buy a pair of bloomers, four yards of wool material, some knitting wool and six pairs of slightly defective stockings, which counted only half the regular number of points. In the cellar, during air-raid alarms, she knits stockings for the children and herself.

Works Eight Hours.

Frau B works eight hours at the chemical plant, part of the time on her feet. Despite tough going, she doesn't complain, but leaves no doubt in the observer's mind that if circumstances permitted she's rather stay home than go to the plant. With the Government's allowance for the wages her husband would earn if he were not in the army, plus her own wage, her income is about 300 marks ($120) a month.

As the wife of a soldier, she doesn't have to pay taxes on her 75-pfennig-an-hour (30 cents) wage, but some is taken off for German workers' health work. Every fourth Sunday brings a one-dish dinner so that she can contribute 50 pfennigs to a relief fund.

Also Helps Her Mother.

30.24— 7225

Her rent is 23.80 marks ($11.12) a month, and gas and light come to 5 marks every two months. Food takes up 30 marks ($12) a week, and care of the children 4.30 marks ($1.72). Frau B helps her mother out with a contribution of about 30 marks a month now and then sends her husband a 10-mark note, and pays fire insurance premiums.

She hasn't been able to save much, but hopes to be able to start a postal savings account. The life Frau B leads is like that of many other German women who "fill their places in an unchangeable and unshakable consciousness of duty," as the newspaper Das Reich puts it.

NAZI NIGHT LIFE PRODUCES MORE SCARF DANCERS

But Blondes Discover It's Hard to Compete With Cabaret Menus.

GRAND OPERA HOLDING OWN

All in Show Business Must Get Licenses From Goebbels—Some Acts Censored.

(This is the second of six stories on the conditions under which the Germans face life today.)

By PRESTON GROVER.

Berlin, Jan. 24 (A. P.).—German night life under war still ranges from grand opera to nudity but even in some of the hotter spots, it's not the entertainment that gets your undivided attention—it's the food. The blondest scarf dancer will go half unnoticed in competition with a plate of potatoes and a portion of roast veal.

War-time regulations and British airmen have upset night life no end—driving it into the homes after 9:30 P. M., whereas the cabarets used to grind on throughout the night.

The first class acts used to get under way about 11 P. M. Now, because of air raids, the cabarets and other places are packed by 5 P. M. with soldiers, civilians and embassy folk. The show hits its peak about 9:30 o'clock and then the customers scatter, lest they be caught by an alarm and forced to spend several hours in a cold, strange public raid shedter.

A Cabaret in the Home.

Often the cabaret entertainers move on to a private dwelling to repeat their acts on through the night. There is no curfew or closing hours at home, except that you can't let any light show through the windows.

Grand opera seems to be holding its own, but nude shows are growing in popularity, as is usual in war.

Berlin has a few slightly naughty shows, Munich has perhaps more and Vienna still more. One American reported having seen five in Munich, the dancers being big and buxom.

Although public entertainment is limited in time, it certainly isn't limited in popularity, because the Germans have few other places to spend their earnings. They can't buy many clothes; these are tightly rationed. They don't own or are unable to operate automobiles; the gasoline must be saved for the bombers.

Because of this restriction on automobiles few fine gowns are to be seen in entertainment centers. Taxis are prohibited from taking people to and from theaters. And golden slippers don't look or feel so appropriate aboard an unheated street car on a blustery night.

Dr. Goebbels Is the Boss.

Germany's show business is all nicely regulated by Dr. Joseph Goebbels of the Propaganda Ministry. The title of his department is not merely propaganda, but Ministry for Propaganda and Public Enlightenment.

That last part is important. The finest German opera soprano down to the humblest chorine must get a license to perform in public from his ministry. No strip tease act can go on that doesn't conform to regulations. Nor can a new play begin without his permission. That goes for films, too.

One girl entertainer whose act packed in the customers has a license that is running out. Her long suit has been English and French gags and dances. Those don't go these days; her new act must be strictly German and Aryan.

Another youth we know has an act with ten trained dogs. He has his troubles. The official in his district from whom he gets meat and dog food has no love either for night clubs or dogs. It's a constant battle for dog rations, and he's been going around begging his friends to save bones and scraps to hold his act together.

Foreign Events Popular.

Short as the hours of an entertainer, his pay is fairly good. The girl who is being forced to think up a new act has been taking in about 100 marks ($40) per night. Of course, taxes take a third or more of it, but she gets along nicely.

Then, too, show people get an extra clothing allowance. They couldn't do so well on just one new dress a year as the average frau is expected to do.

In Nation Socialist Germany every available man and woman is expected to do productive work. That means either bringing up children or perhaps working in factory or on the farm.

But entertainers are considered within the bracket of useful work. Naturally, public entertainment has its place in helping to keep up national morale during a war.

Despite the refrain of "Germany for Germans," foreigners are fairly popular as escorts—since they seem to have extra food tickets. A fourth secretary of legation for instance can take a girl to dinner without asking her to plunk down her own meat tickets. That's really lavish here.

Nazis in Cities Short of Food, But the Farmers Eat Plenty

Absence of Men in Army Is Only Indication in Small Towns That Nation Is at War

Bootlegging Revived.

(This is the third of six stories on the conditions under which the Germans face life today).

By ERNEST G. FISCHER.

Dresden, Jan. 25 (A. P.).—Bootlegging has been revived in the German farm belt. While Berlin and other cities strain under rigid rationing, the rural areas apparently are living off the fat of the land. Residents of farm hamlets feel sorry for city dwellers who stand in food lines by day and run to air raid shelters by night.

"Except for the fact that many of our boys are away with the troops, we hardly know there is a war," was an expression frequently heard during a recent tour of farm villages in the Dresden area.

Dresden residents proudly declared that bombs have not broken so much as one piece of chinaware here. Rationing is carried out, rather strictly, but in the small towns buxom waitresses still hand out liberal helpings.

If there is any grumbling, one can her it around the Stammtisch, the table reserved at the town tavern for regular guests. To gain admittance to this mystic circle one must be well known to the clique that assembles there. During the evening, between numerous rounds of beer (all Dutch treats) the butcher, the baker and the candlestick maker arrive and depart without ceremony except for the usual "Heil Hitler!"

Some things one hears around the Stammtisch would make the Gestapo's ears tingle.

Some Milder Remarks.

To quote some of the milder remarks a tailor one night asserted: "I use three pounds of meat a week—one pound fundamentally is too little. Since I have been getting only one pound of meat per week I lost twenty pounds of flesh."

Setting aside his beer mug, he thrust his fists into his trousers to show how much his waistline had shrunk.

"And while I am making suits for others I haven't got enough to make a pair of pants for myself," he concluded.

The butcher complained that geese could be had at no less than 20 marks (about $8) each, far above the governmentally pegged prices. The innkeeper added that he could not make both ends meet when the price of a goose dinner was fixed at 2 marks, 50 pfennigs (about $1).

The traveling salesman had a suggestion: "Why not charge 2 marks 50 for the goose dinner and 50 pfennigs for the soup, 50 pfennigs for potatoes? Everybody else does."

Restrictions on Hogs.

In the midst of hog-killing time, the farmers were discussing a revision in governmental regulations. It has come to the point where farmers are allowed to keep for their own family use an entire hog. The catch is that each member of the family should allow himself only two pounds of pork per week. When the porker has been consumed at that rate—not before—the farmer is permitted to butcher another hog.

Heretofore, the rule has been to deliver to Government stores 250 pounds from each hog butchered, at stipulated prices. A 500-pound hog left the farmer with 250 pounds for family use and when that was gone he could butcher again.

Depend on farmers' ingenuity to find some loophole in new restrictions. There is a regulation that all milk must be delivered to Government dairies. There the farmer is issued his family's ration of butter. Under the law he is not supposed to churn any butter on his own premises.

Plenty of Butter Some Places.

Spending the night at various farm homes I heard a "clunk, clunk" from the kitchen which sounded suspiciously like an old-fashioned churn and this wayfarer, who in his boyhood did the churning chore on a Texas farm, got the definite impression that illicit churning was being done in the Saxon hills. To say the least there is plenty of butter in "them thar hills."

Another thing difficult for the best-trained Government expert is to look old bossy straight in the eye and tell her how much milk she is yielding. Bottles of milk, which probably cannot find their way into trade channels, almost certainly flow down the rural gullet.

A reminder of American prohibition days is "korn," a rye product which is suggestive of the "corn" in vogue during America's prohibition period. This liquor is legal, but its potency is such that even the most patriotic burgher is likely to say illegal things around the Stammtisch. The beer, which remains of fairly good quality and of more than pre-war alcoholic content, is considered a good chaser for "korn."

Like American prohibition too, enforcement is left to local authorities. If the Burgomeister likes convival company at the closing hour at the Stammtisch, the closing hour for that particular tavern may be flexible. This correspondent stopped at wayside taverns where drinks and songs flowed freely until the wee small hours—long after Berliners were tucked in their feather beds or shivering in air raid shelters.

Mysterious Structures.

Mysterious structures have been erected. They are off the beaten paths, frequently atop some hill. Nearby residents refer to such a plant as a "noodle factory" or a "chocolate factory" or some other equally nondescriptive appelation. Even the farmers who till the fields around the mystery buildings profess ignorance of their functions.

As long as victory looms and farmers' sons come safely home there is no inclination to question Nazi activity.

Among twenty hamlets visited in Saxony during a month's tour by rail, bus and a foot, three can be taken as representative of comparative casualties in this war and the world war.

Dittersbach, a town of about 1,800 souls, has sixty-two men with the armed forces and not a single man has been lost. Pockau, with a population of 3,400 had 300 men in the military service in 1914-18, of whom forty were killed. In this war, with 265 men in the service, four are dead.

The neighboring farms and industrial town of Lengefeld had about 400 men in service during the world war. The war material memorial lists 118 dead. Thus far in this war only one man has been killed from among 300 with the colors.

Weather As Important As Food To Berlin Hostess

ART. IV

JAN 29 1941

By LOUIS P. LOCHNER, Chief of Associated Press Berlin Bureau

Berlin, Jan. 27—Social life in Germany, so far as it continues to exist in wartime, is determined by two considerations:

1. Will the British come with their bombers?

2. What gastronomic entertainment can I afford my guests?

Both considerations have a necessary corollary: Invitations are issued only a day or two before a scheduled event.

As regards possible visits by bombers from England, every prospective host studies the weather carefully and tries to make out some sort of a guess for the immediate future. He must be his own prophet, for weather reports are military secrets, and the press no longer carries them.

If he is convinced that today's torrent of rain is likely to continue for the next two or three days, the host may decide to invite his guests for an evening of conviviality on the assumption that his "English cousins" won't come in such weather.

If he isn't sure of the weather, he may deem it the part of wisdom to invite guests to arrive as early as 4.30 P. M., in the expectation they can depart in time to anticipate possible air-raid alarms. If there is one thing a visitor dislikes, it is to be caught between his hosts' home and his own in some strange shelter.

And that's where another rub comes in. Relatively few persons are masters of their own time and can afford to leave their jobs or offices in mid-afternoon, hence automatically many people invite others only for Sunday afternoons, only to find that some whom they hoped most to see have already accepted invitations elsewhere.

Shelter Entertainment

Supposing the host's calculations are wrong: that means taking his guests into a raid shelter with him. Before inviting anyone for an evening, therefore, the host must plan in advance on possible entertainment accommodations down below for his guests.

Even though no air alarms occur, entertaining is not an easy matter. That was true all through the first year of the war when air raids were almost unknown in most sections of the Reich; it is equally true today.

Here is where the genius of the housewife comes in, for her problem is that of providing hospitality in a country which is on a strict ration basis.

I remember reading a story a few months ago of a princess of the royal Danish house who took ration cards with her to some social affair in Copenhagen and offered a certain number of coupons to her host.

Here is Germany, I have encountered nothing of the kind. German hosts would feel insulted if you tried to contribute even your ration card to the family budget.

Share A Duck

Anybody living under normal conditions can hardly appreciate what it means for a hostess to give a real dinner nowadays, not that there isn't enough food in Germany to be satisfied, but rationing means a strict limitation to a person of what is necessary.

Hence, if your hostess produces a complete meal, it means in all likelihood that her family has short-changed itself for weeks in order, little by little, to save up enough butter, vegetables, sugar and potatoes, and that it generously shares the lucky windfall of having obtained, say, a goose or chicken from some friend out in the country.

So, one nice day you wake up to hear the telephone ringing and some friend saying: "Could you come over for dinner the day after tomorrow? We managed to get a duck today and we'd like to have you share it with us. Please excuse my inviting you on such short notice, but, of course, I couldn't make arrangements until I was certain of the bird."

No Fruit Juices

There is still plenty of wine and thin wartime beer around to complete that part of the menu. Teetotalers, however, must likely as not drink plain water, for fruit juices are a thing of the past, at least in the winter time.

It was months ago that the average German tasted real tea.

That goes for coffee, too.

Germans probably have a greater yearning for coffee than any other people on earth and to have to do without it is a genuine hardship for many. The "ersatz" of barley is something quite different from coffee even though it bears the same proud name.

We, as Americans, are in a fortunate position, being able to obtain coffee because we can pay for it in foreign money. Good old American dollars have lost none of their potency as an international medium of exchange.

On more than one occasion, when inviting friends, I have informed my guests that we would like to have them over for a cup of real coffee. With an almost pathetic eagerness they would say:

"What, real coffee? Of course we'll come."

"Half And Half"

I never know whether to feel flattered or humbled. I only know that coffee is my best sales argument. Speaking of coffee, in a fashionable hotel I heard the following:

A guest called a waiter:

"Tell me, how is your coffee?"

And the waiter replied:

"Oh, not so bad. Half and half."

"What?" was the happy and delighted rejoinder of the guest, "half real coffee and half ersatz? That's fine. Bring me a big cupful."

"Sorry mein Herr," the waiter confessed, realizing he had carried a joke too far. "I meant half summer barley and half winter barley."

Some months ago the new Brazilian Ambassador tried to present himself to Berlin officialdom and society by giving an afternoon reception. He was amazed to find that virtually nobody sent regrets—his list, far larger than the actual number of guests he at first expected, ran into the hundreds.

Ersatz Served

"I am looking forward to the Brazilian Embassy reception," one friend told me. "I haven't had a cup of real coffee in months."

The poor man did not know that the shipment of coffee direct from Brazil, intended for this party, had been lost somewhere between Lisbon and Berlin. The Brazilian Embassy apparently telephoned all over Europe, both to trace the lost coffee and, if possible, to provide a substitute order. But it was of no avail, and guests who came in anticipation of being served real coffee were disappointed.

Tea also is nonexistent, but it is surprising how many palatable ersatz teas have been devised from various herbs. Peppermint tea, for instance, seems to enjoy considerable popularity. The Germans, however, have been greater coffee drinkers than tea imbibers.

But to get back to the wartime dinner: Of what good is chicken or turkey if you haven't any fats or butter in which to fry them? Thus you must be sure to compliment your hostess for the self-sacrifice of herself and her family in giving up most of their monthly fat rations for one dinner.

Vegetables are another problem. Often your hostess drags out her last few tins of canned vegetables, carefully saved over from peace days to entertain guests.

And what about dessert? Despite German alliances and friendship with Italy and Spain, oranges, grapefruit and apples, if they reach Germany at all, seldom get as far northward as the capital—so count on no fresh fruit for dessert.

Cakes? Well, cream is at a premium. So you need expect no creamy frosting, much less whipped cream. Eggs are so scarce that you must feel deeply flattered and honored if your hosts serve cake that bears evidence of having eggs as an ingredient. It means that the family must go without eggs the rest of the month.

Germany is noted for wines, so the simplest form of entertainment—yet one that seems to go very well in war time—is to "come for a glass of wine," and it isn't one glass, either.

Blisters on Fingers and---

Americans Remaining in Berlin Have Special War-Developed Characteristics

BY ALVIN STEINKOPF

BERLIN (AP)—There are still some American men in Berlin.

They may be encountered in restaurants along Unter den Linden vainly trying to understand and straighten out the confusion of their ration tickets. And if a group of Americans is seen with their heads together, whispering and exchanging telephone numbers the chances are they are scheming a plot to import some flashlight batteries.

Batteries are scarce, and the blackouts very dark.

American men in war-time Berlin usually are fairly easy to recognize. In the first place they don't wear badges in this thoroughly bebadged city. The second mark of identification is blisters on the fingers. They come from touching hot frying pans and other clumsy conduct in the kitchen. The reason is that there are very few American wives in this war capital.

Reason for It All

Restaurants being what they are, the American whose job keeps him here does some fantastic experimenting in the kitchen. Perhaps with some ham and eggs which the faithful wife has managed to send in from Denmark, Yugoslavia or Switzerland.

For wives, while absent, still remain useful. They are in Stockholm, Budapest, Bern and Rome, browbeating customs authorities and interviewing Ministers of State to get them to make exceptions to almost universal laws against sending food into Germany.

The forlorn American man is rather badly treated by the rationing system. It's not that there isn't enough food. But the chances are the American man who doesn't have some determined woman with a lot of elbows fighting for his interests at the grocery and meat market doesn't get everything to which he is entitled.

Why Some Miss

The very fact that an American remains in Berlin at all implies that he is pretty busy about something, and that the requirements of his job make it impossible to drop everything just to eat at some specific minute. So lots of meals are missed. And a meal missed is gone forever.

So the little kitchen assumes great importance. If our wives abroad attend to their jobs as they are supposed to and contrive to smuggle us a ham in someone's diplomatic pouch we eat much better. Balkan diplomatic pouches work the best, although Latin-American pouches have their points.

The United States pouch is no good—it's too ethical.

Doing things in a German kitchen isn't as simple as it might be, even after the shopping is done.

All in the Dark

There is no pastry flour. Flour is to be had in adequate quantities, but it's regimented, and no matter how one stirs it the result—for an American man, at least—is always approximately German dark bread.

There is spaghetti, which is a great comfort because nothing much can go wrong with it. Occasionally there are noodles, which are handy because one can grate up the cheese which one forgot about last Summer and which has turned hard as stone, and with a little judicious sprinkling one can make something which would probably be called au gratin.

Many German substitutes get a workout in the kitchen, and some of them are very good. Real spices are rare, but the substitutes, save that for pepper, are excellent. Substitute chocolate, however, leaves something to be desired. There is enough sugar—if one doesn't insist on making fudge.

Butter is scarce, and there wouldn't be much fat in the diet if it weren't for those industrious wives abroad.

Often it's a question whether the cleaning woman who runs in for a hour should be given the scanty piece of soap, or whether the laundry should be sent out. One must supply soap, or soap ration tickets, with the dirty clothes.

Usually the laundry wins with the result that the lone American's home is neglected proportionately. But one fools the laundry, too. The mileage of a shirt has been increased considerably by war conditions, and the thing to do with a sheet which is getting dim is to turn it over.

It's All Very Stiff and Solemn in Some Berlin Raid Shelters

Hands Must Be Kissed and Titles Used Correctly—Regulars Decorate Corners—Jews Are Put in Corridors.

(This is the last of six stories on the conditions under which the Germans face life today.)

JAN 29 1941

By LOUIS P. LOCHNER.

Berlin, Jan. 27 (A. P.).—There is something solemn, almost ritualistic about the air raid shelter in our apartment house—a building with ten large flats. I've put my foot into it more than once because I don't tack the right title onto the right man.

There are, for instance, a retired chief of personnel of the Reichsbank and a retired judge of the Supreme Military Court. The first is called Herr Reichsbankrat; the second, Herr Reichsmilitaergerichtsrat.

Now the former Reichsbank personnel chief carries himself like a soldier, while the former military court judge, with his black sealskin coat, looks like a banker to me. Can I be blamed if I mix them up?

Falls in Hand-kissing Test.

The two men don't seem to mind so much as their wives. It's bad enough that I don't get the titles right, but I ought also to kiss the two old ladies' hands as I say "Guten abend, Frau Reichsmilitaegerichtsrat" or "Guten abend, Frau Reichsbankrat." And this I have never learned to do, despite twenty years' residence in Germany.

Nazis, since coming to power, have dinned into the people's ears that a woman is not entitled to her husband's title, and theoretically I might say "Guten abend, Frau So-and-So." But the custom of sharing titles with wives seems so deeply ingrained as to be ineradicable.

Then there is the tall officer who recently was promoted from major to lieutenant-colonel. That is something I am prone to forget and the whole shelter gives me a dirty look when I call him "Herr Major."

Let It Go at "Heil Hitler."

The only crowd who hit it off well are half a dozen regular Nazi party members. They say "Heil Hitler" to each other and to everybody else. That's that. Our air protection warden, a pensioned civil service official, does his best to perpetuate the solemnity of the shelter. He makes all his announcements in a sonorous, important, almost dramatic, tone of voice. We get the creeps when he outlines what punishments we face if we leave the shelter without permission or before three members of our community have climbed six flights into the attic after every "all clear" to make sure no incendiary bombs have fallen on the premises.

Obviously, joking seems out of place when the noise of falling bombs and anti-aircraft guns penetrates even our shelter. Besides, conversation is supposed to be subdued, so as not to disturb sleepers.

Some Shelters More Gay.

Yet we are better off than persons in some shelters. A few houses from ours, for instance, is a determined woman of the prewar suffragette type who functions as an air-raid warden. She makes all of the sixty-odd persons in her shelter observe absolute silence. Of a military mind, she even insists that the community be lined up like a company of soldiers.

"We feel like chickens perched on roosting poles," sighed a friend of mine, "but what can we do about it? The shelter warden is clothed with police powers."

Yet I've known some shelters where the warden was anything but solemn. One night my wife and I were caught in a shelter opposite a fashionable club. As the men and women, all in evening clothes, joined us, they played card games.

How an Alarm Works Out.

Technically, here is how an air-raid alarm works out: Sirens sound long enough before the arrival of British planes to enable every one to dress and gather up valuables and provisions. At first everybody had to hurry down into the shelters, but now only the warden and his staff must report below immediately.

So must the Jewish members of the community, if there be any. Jews are not permitted in the general shelters; they are put in the corridor and no non-Jew is allowed to speak to them. The reason given for their immediate appearance is that they might give flashlight signals.

We look like emigrants when we wend our way downward with our bedding. By a sort of gentleman's agreement, we occupy the same relative position in the shelter we occupied the first night, when everybody ganged up with the neighbors he liked best.

Shelter Becomes a Library.

After the ceremony of handshaking, life settles down to reading, subdued gossiping and snoring.

At first the shelter was barren, but gradually each family began to beautify its particular corner with pictures. At first, too, persons rushed into shelters in pajamas and bath robes, but this was discouraged not only on æsthetic grounds but also because a successful bombing might leave us homeless just as we stood.

What joy when finally the "all clear" sounds. People who only a few minutes before seemed grouchy suddenly brighten up. A sort of carnival spirit seizes the community as it waits for its designated representatives to complete their inspection of the attic.

So happy is everybody at last to retire to the warmth of bed that dignity is forgotten, handshakes are dispensed with and a general bee-line ensues for one's own habitat.

Elizabeth, Working Hard At Being A Queen, Brightens London Life With Her Ready Smile

By GODFREY H. P. ANDERSON
AP Feature Service

LONDON—Picking her way on high-heeled shoes through broken glass, charred wood and rubble, Queen Elizabeth still can smile as she accompanies King George on wearying tours of Britain's battered cities.

She smiled in the opening hour of the war when she sat with her husband in a gasproof bomb shelter under Buckingham Palace as sirens shrilled their first warning. Publicly, at least, she kept smiling when her home was bombed twice, her children sent to the country, and her nation was threatened with defeat.

The queen has a three-fold task in this war—guarding the comfort and health of her husband against the fatigues and perils of his wartime duties, inspecting and encouraging Britain's women units as they help their menfolk fight, and running smoothly the largest household in the land under wartime conditions and with rationed food.

No Uniforms For Her

Although she is commandant-in-chief of the three principal women's services — Women's Royal Naval Service, the Auxiliary Territorial Service and the Women's Auxiliary Air Force—she consistently declines to wear a uniform. She leaves to her sister-in-law, the Duchess of Kent, the Princess Royal and the Duchess of Gloucester, that means of honoring the respective services.

Every week she meets with the women of the royal household in the blue drawing room of Buckingham Palace, where Victoria danced as a young queen, to help them knit woolen materials for the troops.

In peacetime, the royal program for each day is minutely planned weeks and months ahead. Now the queen often accompanies her husband on impromptu tours of bombed sections to cheer and comfort the wounded or evacuees.

The Scottish Housewife

Elizabeth never lets the war interfere with her visits. Once an air raid alert sounded just as she was about to leave Buckingham Palace for a disabled serviceman's exhibition. She rode through to the west end in an armored car tucked behind the khaki-clad driver, a trip which later she admitted she enjoyed thoroughly.

With a gray velvet gas mask container on one arm, she appears in hospitals, barracks, police stations and evacuees' billets with a smile for everyone and a special word for children.

Often the practical training of the Scottish housewife shows through the dignity of the queen. She will take the lids off saucepans in the kitchens and sniff the contents. Once while visiting a hostel for Polish seamen, she said, "I hope they all eat porridge with salt and not sugar." Porridge with salt is the Scottish way.

After eating a six-cent luncheon of stewed beef, potatoes and a jam tart with evacuees in Sussex, the queen visited children from South London who were playing the game of "putting baby to bed."

"Don't forget to wash behind the ears," she advised 4-year-old Shirley Sleet, who was bathing a doll.

When Elizabeth noticed east end evacuees billeted near Windsor had no place in which to keep their clothes, she sent a quantity of solid Victorian furniture from the castle and, for the first time since Victoria's death, the rafters echoed to changed words of the national anthem—"God save the queen."

Wounded Men Enjoy Visits

As a mother herself ("I know, I have two daughters," she is fond of saying), the queen always is interested in the welfare of children.

She keeps the two little princesses away from London now because "I think it is good for the children to go to the country, especially those of school age."

In a munitions factory she said she would like to be trained in such work. "What is more," she added, "I believe I could manage it."

But the moment when Britons love their smiling queen the most comes when she tiptoes through a hospital ward filled with wounded men, pausing at most of the cots to chat, moving silently past those where patients sleep, asking a nurse to lower a blind because the sun troubles a man's eyes. And when she comes to a screen behind which a mutilated face lies, she never flinches but goes through and gives a cheering word to him as well.

BAN ON USE OF NAVY FOR CONVOY SERVICE IS REJECTED IN HOUSE

Committee Approves Amendment Stating Lend-Lease Does Not 'Authorize Or Permit' Such Duty

June 30, 1943, Deadline on Measure, Periodic Reports To Congress, Army Consultations Provided

By The Associated Press

WASHINGTON, Jan. 29—A proposal to place an outright ban on the use of United States naval vessels to convoy supplies to Britain was rejected by the House foreign affairs committee today as it neared the end of its consideration of the lease-lend program for aiding countries battling the Axis.

The committee did, however, approve an amendment stating that the measure neither authorizes nor permits the use of American vessels as convoys.

This action was taken with the approval of administration members, and Chairman Bloom (D-N.Y.) later explained that if the Constitution or any existing statute authorizes the President to order the navy to escort duty, this power would not be affected by the language agreed upon.

Stimson Opposes Ban.

Representative Mundt (R-S.D.) unsuccessfully offered the amendment specifically prohibiting convoy duty. Secretary of War Stimson, testifying before a Senate committee earlier, had opposed such a ban, saying that "no one can tell what will happen in the course of this war which is going on in Europe and getting nearer and nearer, in its effects, to this country every day."

Under the Constitution, he said, the President has power to direct naval movements, and the power ought not to be limited by Congress, even by implication.

The House committee also adopted an amendment stating that Presidential powers conferred in the lease-lend bill shall expire June 30, 1943, except that the President shall have power to carry out a contract or agreement with a foreign government made before July 1, 1943.

Calls for Periodic Reports.

Another amendment approved requires the President to make periodic reports to Congress on the progress of the lease-lend program, except that he is not required to transmit information "he deems incompatible with the public interest to disclose."

Still another amendment approved, as explained by committeemen, would require the President to consult the army chief of staff and the chief of naval operations before sending abroad any material which had not been manufactured or procured specifically for a foreign government.

This appeared to signify that materials produced for the United States armed forces could not be shipped to Britain or any other foreign government without consultation.

Senate Hears Stimson.

While the committee was acting, its counterpart at the other end of the Capitol, the Senate committee on foreign relations, was hearing Stimson. He said that in the event of a British collapse the bill might prove the means of salvaging the remains of the British navy, through its provision that the President may open United States ports for the repair of belligerent vessels of those countries whose defense is vital to that of this nation.

"This is a very important point," he said slowly. "In case of disaster to Britain—which none of us wants to happen—this bill might be the means by which we can save the remnants of the British fleet."

The House committee was in session all day, and this evening Chairman Bloom said it had very little to do before taking final action on the measure. The amendments agreed to were formulated yesterday at a meeting of the Democratic members of the committee, and apparently were acceptable to the administration.

Numerous amendments were offered by Representative Fish (R-NY), Mundt, and other Republicans, but were uniformly disapproved. Both Fish and Bloom, however, declined to answer when asked whether the voting in the committee had followed party lines.

STIMSON TESTIFIES BEFORE SENATORS

Secretary Says Bill Could Preserve Part of Navy if Britain Falls.

BY GIVING USE OF OUR PORTS

He Tells Senators Measure Buys Time for Us to Arm—Opposes Ban on Convoying.

Washington, Jan. 29 (A. P.).—Secretary Stimson testified today that "in case of disaster to Britain" the administration's British aid bill "might be the means by which we could save some of the remnants of the British fleet."

The Secretary of War appeared before the Senate Foreign Relations Committee in an all-day hearing.

Replying to a question by Senator Byrnes of South Carolina, Mr. Stimson said belligerent warships now could remain in American ports for repairs only twenty-four hours. Under the aid-to-Britain bill, he testified, such vessels could remain indefinitely if the President approved.

"This is a very important point," Mr. Stimson declared. "In case of disaster to Britain—which none of us want to happen—this bill might be the means by which we can save the remnants of the British fleet."

Earlier, Mr. Stimson defined the objective of the aid-to-Britain bill as the purchase of time—"the time necessary to arm and protect ourselves."

The United States is forced to buy the time, he declared, "and we are buying time from the only nation which can sell us that time."

Believes Axis Is Vulnerable.

Appearing before the Senate Foreign Relations Committee, the War Department chief renewed his advocacy of the legislation to meet "the extraordinary emergency which the aggressor nations have created for this country."

In a formal statement he marshaled his additional arguments for the bill under these headings:

That Great Britain, given help, was in a position to prevail;

That the Axis Powers were vulnerable in many respects;

That international law justifies, rather than forbids, full aid to Britain, and

That the bill is not dictatorial, but the proper action of a democratic government.

Secretary Stimson, in his testimony, predicted that Great Britain would face a crisis this spring and summer. If she survives, he said, "the probability of an ultimate solution in favor of the democracies would be overwhelming."

"The passage of this bill," he interjected, "will go far to stiffen the morale necessary for her to survive that crisis."

Sees Italy in Trouble.

Speaking of Axis "vulnerability," Mr. Stimson said that "Italy is already in serious straits," and that the German army "is spread out very thin already in Italy and Rumania, and in Norway we begin to hear the creaks of the strain under which German power is laboring."

The Japanese army, he continued, was spread out even thinner than the German, and the country was economically strained.

If Great Britain survives the next several months, he said, "the Axis Powers cannot indefinitely hold even the European world in slavery," for they would be without the sea power and the control of the air would be against them.

Turning to the legal questions, Mr. Stimson cited the action of the International Law Association in interpreting the Kellogg-Briand pact. The association held that if one signatory to the pact was attacked by another, the other signatories, without any breach of international law, may come to the aid of the attacked nation with money, supplies and even armed forces. He pointed out that the Axis nations, as well as the United States and Britain signed this pact.

Would Be Using Powers.

Congress, he said, would be exercising its powers by establishing the national policies in the present situation. "But Congress," he added, "can neither consider nor decide each and every transaction that may be necessary successfully to execute these policies." That required executive action, and Mr. Stimson said that he could conceive of no more appropriate person for that responsibility than President Roosevelt.

Under questioning, Mr. Stimson said that an expected spring crisis in the German-British war "does not mean that Germany will be able to terminate the war immediately."

"A crisis probably will exist for some time to come," he said. "Our great material help will come later to enable Great Britain to do what military men call 'take the initiative.'"

"The most dangerous position a nation can be in is to be purely on the defense. Most of our aid will come the latter part of the year or in 1942."

Asked About 'Casualty Tags.'

Senator Vandenberg read a published report that the army had contracted for 4,500,000 of what he termed "casualty tags" which would be used "in identifying men killed or wounded in battle."

"Isn't that total a little beyond your present needs?" Mr. Vandenberg asked.

Mr. Stimson said he was not familiar with the contract, but that he would look into it.

To Mr. Vandenberg's suggestion that the bill be amended to list the countries which would receive American aid, Mr. Stimson replied that "the war abroad moves with such dramatic quickness it (such an amendment) might cause embarrassment."

"Do you think, for instance, that Congress now would write in a provision for aid to certain portions of North Africa?" Secretary Stimson asked. "Yet that might be vital."

He did not elaborate.

Mr. Stimson said he personally was "strongly opposed" to amending the administration's bill to prohibit the use of American naval vessels to convoy war shipments.

"No one can tell what will happen in the course of this war which is going on in Europe today and getting nearer and nearer, in its effects, to this country every day," he said.

As Commander-in-Chief of the Army and Navy, he added, the President has the power to direct movements of the navy. The Secretary added:

"I think that for the Congress now to introduce a provision which, even if only by implication, sought to fetter a power which has existed in the President for 150 years would be a very unfortunate thing."

"You would have no doubt," asked Senator La Follette, Progressive, of Wisconsin, "that if convoys were begun we would be in the war?"

"I have no such assurance," Mr. Stimson replied. "It's all speculation."

Mr. Stimson added he would have "no objection" to amending the legislation to require the President to make period reports to Congress on the progress of British aid and to provide a definite expiration date for the program.

Mr. La Follette, referring to another section of the bill giving the President authority to purchase arms and other war materials produced in foreign nations, asked:

"Under this provision, could we finance the whole British war effort by buying their production and leasing or lending it back to them?"

"That's an assumption that never entered my less intelligent head, Senator," the witness replied.

MORGENTHAU ASKS A SIXTEEN-BILLION RISE IN DEBT LIMIT

He Says Treasury's Power to Borrow Will End in Four Months.

Washington, Jan. 29 (A. P.).—Secretary of the Treasury Morgenthau said today that the Treasury would have used all of its borrowing powers in four months, and appealed for an increase in the Federal debt limit from $49,000,000,000 to $65,000,000,000.

Testifying in support of a bill to make the increase, he told the House Ways and Means Committee that his department had plans for the sale of "securities attractive to all classes of investors, to satisfy the overwhelming desire on the part of nearly every man, woman, and child to make some direct and tangible contribution to the national defense."

Almost Used Up.

Although not describing these securities in detail, he said that the bill would permit the Treasury to issue small denomination savings bonds and savings certificates as well as the regular types of securities. Treasury officials previously had indicated consideration of $5 bonds and 25-cent savings stamps.

On January 1, Mr. Morgenthau said, the Treasury had used up all but $887,000,000 of its $45,000,- 000,000 general borrowing power and all but $2,764,000,000 of its special defense borrowing authority.

"These combined balances (of borrowing authority)," he continued, "provide the Treasury with borrowing authority sufficient only for the next four months, and even in that period we would be greatly restricted in our financing operations."

Mr. Morgenthau said the increase in the debt limit was necessitated by the $28,500,000,000 defense program outlined in President Roosevelt's recent budget. He made no mention, however, of additional borrowing which might be necessitated if Congress passes the administration's lease-lend bill for aid to Britain.

A major objective of his borrowing program, the Secretary explained, would be to sell securities to the general public rather than banks because it is highly desirable to avoid further increases of deposits as far as possible. The Federal Reserve System recently said bank purchases of Government securities tended to increase bank deposits.

"In times such as these," Mr. Morgenthau said, "it is imperative that the Government borrow as much as possible from real savers rather than from banks."

He also said that the defense program gave an additional argument for his repeated request, contained in the pending bill, to remove all Federal tax exemptions from future Federal securities. He said that exemption features on Government securities benefited principally persons of large incomes and such preferential treatment to this latter class is incompatible with democratic financing of the defense program.

Defense Is Paramount.

Saying that our whole economy should be concentrated on national defense, Secretary Morgenthau reiterated recommendations that other types of Federal expenditures should be re-examined with a magnifying glass to make certain that no more funds are granted than are absolutely essential.

As for the sale of small securities to the general public, he said:

"The Treasury would be authorized to issue stamps or provide other means to evidence payment for savings bonds and savings certificates. This would permit the Treasury to carry on a program encouraging more popular participation in the financing.

"In this connection the Treasury wishes to be able to offer securities of a character which should facilitate and promote thrift and savings. We hope that a substantial part of the defense program for which we have to borrow funds can be financed out of the real savings of the people."

Should Last Until 1942.

When Chairman Doughton inquired how long the new debt limit would be adequate, Mr. Morgenthau said:

"We feel that with the situation as of today the $65,000,000,000 ought to take care of the outgo up to and including June 30, 1942."

He added that the $16,000,000,000 increase would be used for national defense, asserting that expected revenues would be adequate to pay for ordinary Government expenses.

The Secretary agreed with Mr. Doughton that any new taxes could be used to help defray the expenses of national defense. On the existing tax basis the budget forecast a deficit on June 30, 1942, of $9,210,093,049.

Taxes Not Discussed.

There was no indication in Mr. Morgenthau's statement of how long a $65,000,000,000 limit would suffice, but President Roosevelt a few weeks ago estimated that without counting borrowing which may be necessary in expanded aid to England, the debt would rise to $58,367,065,056 by June 30, 1942. At present the debt is $45,183,549,488.

The Secretary also failed to discuss proposals for additional taxes to help pay for the defense program and reduce the budgeted $9,210,093,049 deficit for the next fiscal year.

His request for authority to issue savings stamps and certificates was reminiscent of similar securities sold by the Treasury during the world war, when children generally bought stamps and certificates while their parents bought bonds in the Liberty and Victory loan campaigns.

Law to Limit Strikes on Naval Projects And Bar Coercion Is Proposed by Vinson

Bill Prohibits Defense Contractors From Changing Rates and Hours—Work Halted at Wright Field.

Washington, Jan. 29 (A. P.).—Legislation to curb strikes on naval defense projects and outlaw efforts to compel workers on such projects to join or refrain from joining labor unions was introduced today by Representative Vinson, Democrat, of Georgia, chairman of the House Naval Committee.

The measure, patterned in some respects after the national (railway) mediation act, would make strikes on naval projects unlawful until thirty days after a naval defense labor board had filed a report on the merits of the dispute.

Naval contractors involved would be prohibited from making any change in wage rates or other working conditions of their employees during the same period.

Mr. Vinson, who has a reputation for getting his bills through the House, said the anti-strike measure would make it unlawful for any naval contractor "by discrimination" to encourage or discourage membership of his employees in any labor organization during the existence of the current national emergency.

Other Prohibitions.

It also would forbid any one to attempt to force workers to join labor organizations as a condition or prerequisite of employment on naval projects. The latter provision would affect the practice of defense workers being required to pay initiation fees to labor unions before being permitted to work.

The bill also would outlaw the employment or retention by naval contractors of persons advocating the overthrow of the Government by force, and persons who belong to or solicit membership in subversive organizations or who distribute propaganda advocating the overthrow of the Government by violence.

Wilfull violation of the bill's provisions would be punishable by a fine of not more than $5,000 or imprisonment for not more than a year, or both.

Although Mr. Vinson said that the measure dealt solely with naval defense contractors and their employees, the definition of such contractors included any one engaged in the production of arms, implements of war, articles or supplies.

The legislation, its author said, would require parties to a labor dispute to give each other notice in writing of their claims and to direct them to "exhaust every possible means of settling their disputes without stoppage of work." Voluntary conciliation and mediation through existing agencies would be urged, failing which the dispute would be investigated by the board.

A quite similar arrangement under the national mediation act has kept the railroad industry's employee-management relations comparatively tranquil.

Work Is Held Up.

Dayton, Ohio, Jan. 29 (A. P.).—Work on the $1,550,000 Army Air Corps expansion program at Wright Field was halted today as A. F. L. affiliated construction workers struck in protest against the employment of four non-A. F. L. electrical workers.

Col. Lester Miller, field commandant, said that Isaac Penner, president of the Penner Installation company of New York, contended that the electrical workers were C. I. O. unionists.

Spokesmen for the A. F. L. Dayton Building Trades Council said that between 400 and 500 members of affiliated unions were affected.

"Penner told me his company is under contract with the C. I. O. and must use C. I. O. labor any place in the United States," said Col. Miller. "Dayton is an A. F. L. community, so it's a fight. I have reported to the War Department that it is a jurisdictional dispute."

John Breidenbach, president of the Dayton Building Trades Council, who announced the strike, said that the A. F. L. no-strike policy on defense projects did not apply.

"The A. F. L. agreed there would be no strikes on defense projects because of jurisdictional disputes, but that policy does not apply here because the Pener company used non-union workers," Breidenbach said.

Breidenbach asserted that after company officials declined to do anything about it he had no alternative but to call the strike. "The next move is up to them," he added. The Dayton council is composed of twenty-seven unions.

An aid of William Green, A. F. L. president, said at Washington that he had not heard of the strike. Building trades department officers are en route to Miami for their mid-winter meeting on February 5, he added.

Col. Miller said Col. Don L. Hutchins, quartermaster, reported steelworkers working on a wind tunnel declared they "were not in sympathy with the strike," but that suspension of other operations caused them to leave the field.

The strikers left the Government property and did not establish a picket line.

Col. Miller said he was informed the Penner concern, working under a supply contract and not construction contract, had employed four men to install electrical equipment.

METAXAS DIES; KORIZIS NAMED GREEK PREMIER

JAN 30 1941

Dictator Bequeaths Hope for Victory to the New Government.

THROAT INFECTION IS FATAL

He Was Treated by British Naval Doctor—German Physician Was En Route.

Athens, Jan. 29 (A. P.).—Gen. John Metaxas, Premier and Dictator of Greece for nearly five years, died today of a throat infection at the age of 70 years, bequeathing his hope of victory over Italy to a government swiftly reorganized and dedicated to that purpose.

The strong man of Greece, ill for only three weeks, regained consciousness just before he died, it was said, and, knowing that the end was near, addressed these words to the Minister of Home Security, Constantine Maniandakis, at his bedside: "So there is no hope whatever? You understand, Costa, it is not for myself that I mind, but I place my hope in the Greeks."

Costa was the general's familiar form of Constantine.

Body Taken to Cathedral.

Thousands stood in a cold, drizzling rain to see Premier Metaxas's cortege move slowly through the streets to the Athens Cathedral, where his body will lie in state until the funeral on Friday. The plain oak coffin was borne on a caisson drawn by an armored gun carrier.

Shortly after his death—at 6:20 A. M. (11:20 P. M., Tuesday, New York time)—King George II called a meeting of the Cabinet and announced his choice of Alexandros Korizis, fifty-five-year-old Governor of the National Bank, to succeed Gen. Metaxas. In addition to being Premier Mr. Korizis will also hold the other portfolios of his predecessor—Foreign Affairs, War, Aviation, Navy and Education. All members of the Metaxas Cabinet continued in their old positions.

Social Reforms to Continue.

The King issued proclamations to the people and the fighting forces, pledging continuation of the war until victory and, after that, the "serving and promoting of the working classes which constitute the productive power of the nation."

Gen. Metaxas's illness first appeared on January 7 with attacks of dizziness. At first these were thought to be results of fatigue, but medical examination indicated that he had a kidney ailment. He returned to work, however, and apparently was in improving health when a tonsil infection developed. Still it was thought the condition was not serious and he continued to work. However, on January 19 Gen. Metaxas became worse after the removal of his tonsils. He remained in bed until death. On Sunday his situation was pronounced serious and he was given a blood transfusion Monday afternoon. Two more transfusions were given yesterday.

The chief physician of the British Mediterranean fleet flew to Athens from Crete to assist his Greek doctors and a German specialist was en route from Vienna when the dictator died.

Mr. Korizis and the Ministers took the oath of allegiance in the presence of the monarch at 10 A. M. (3 A. M. New York time), just three hours and forty minutes after Gen. Metaxas had died at his home in Kiphissia, a suburb of Athens, following a throat operation. He had been ill only since Saturday.

[Censorship forbade disclosure of the immediate cause of death, but diplomats in Berne said that Gen. Metaxas died of heart disease. Also today, DNB, the German official news agency, said in a dispatch from Belgrade that, in addition to the Premiership, Mr. Coryozis

Friend of Dead Metaxas Named Premier of Greece

ALEXANDROS KORIZIS BECOMES LEADER

Chosen by King George to Succeed Man Called "Chief for Life"

Athens, Jan. 29.—(AP)—Gen. John Metaxas, who dictated to Greece in peace and directed its aggressive defense in war, died early today, whispering: "It is not for myself that I mind, but I place my hope in the Greeks."

"Premier for life," he died of a throat infection in his suburban home in Kiphissia, while his soldiers were fighting in Albania, on the snow-covered soil of the Italians who invaded them.

Metaxas, 70, had been secretly ill for three weeks.

To his countrymen he was a modern miltiades, the spiritual counterpart of the hero who led the Athenians to victory against the invading Persians at the Battle of Marathon.

King George II, with whose approval Metaxas obtained dictatorial powers by a coup d'etat Aug. 4, 1936, quickly named a tall and studious banker, Alexandros Korizis, to be premier.

Colleague of Metaxas

Korizis, 55, a close colleague of Metaxas but lacking any extensive army or political experience, also will hold Metaxas's other portfolios of war, aviation, foreign affairs, navy and education.

Moreover, he is pledged to carry out to the letter Metaxas's own program of "victory over the enemy and afterwards, serving and promoting the welfare of the working classes, which constitute the productive power of the nation."

(Metaxas's death was viewed elsewhere in the Balkans as the heaviest blow Greece could suffer. In Belgrade, political circles termed him almost irreplaceable.

(It appeared that, since the new Premier lacks military knowledge, it will be largely up to Generalissimo Alexander Papagos, the Greek military commander-in-chief, to fight off the Italians, with British counsel and aid

C) January 7. General Metaxas had attacks of dizziness, and a medical examination indicated a kidney ailment. He went back to work, however, until a tonsil infection developed. He was not even then greatly concerned, but his condition became worse and he went to bed January 19, never again to rise.

Gets Blood Transfusions

Last Sunday his condition became really grave and in the next two days he was given three blood transfusions.

The chief physician of the British fleet flew from Crete to his bedside and, ironically, a German specialist was enroute from Vienna when he died.

Last evening he was given the last sacrament.

Shortly before he died he recovered consciousness and his last words were addressed to the Minister of Home Security, Constantine Maniandakis, who was by his bed.

"So there is no hope whatever?" he murmured. "You understand, Costa, it is not for myself that I mind. But I place my hope in the Greeks."

King George exhorted Greek soldiers to continue to the utmost "the struggle for our altars and homes" and referred to Metaxas as "he, who with my consent, said a proud 'no' to the brazen invaders on the historic dawn of Oct. 28."

(In Rome, the Fascist press recorded "for history" that Metaxas "provoked war against Italy.")

To the armed forces he said: "The loss is hard for all of us, very hard, but the Greece of which he (Metaxas) dreamed is eternal and immortal. * * * We must make up for this hard loss by strengthening our will, our decision, our daring and our insistence that justice is on our side and therefore we shall win.

"His Soul Will Rejoice"

"If the man we are mourning shall not have the joy of seeing our triumph achieved, his soul will rejoice when, from its heavenly height, it sees our arms crowned with glory. * * *

"We shall fight like one man. * * * Victory is ours."

National mourning was decreed and all flags drooped at half staff throughout Greece. The funeral will be Friday, and until then Metaxas's body will lie in state in the Athens Cathedral.

Metaxas was an acknowledged military genius, a German-trained soldier, a confirmed royalist and never a friend of liberalism. He opposed Greek entry into the World War on the side of the Allies, but lived to call the British to his aid when the Italian invaders struck in 1940.

For 40 years in and out of authority and exile, he achieved real power with the death of the republic and the return of King George II to the throne.

inherited the Ministries of Foreign Affairs, War and Air.]

King George's proclamation said that the new government would carry on with no change of policy, especially as it affected the war with Italy. The Greek people, the proclamation added, received "the sad news calmly and with absolute confidence in the King, and the Government is decided to carry on the victorious struggle."

Plea to Germany Reported.

Belgrade, Jan. 29 (A. P.).—Greece was reported today to have turned to Germany for medical help to save the life of her dictator-Premier, Gen. John Metaxas—but too late. Diplomats here said that the Greek Government asked the German legation at Athens to send a German specialist to the stricken Premier's bedside by plane. Before the approval arrived, Gen. Metaxas was dead.

Gen. Metaxas was reported here to have chosen his own successor, Alexander Coryozis, who was approved by King George II after the Premier's death. It was said that Gen. Metaxas became ill last week and underwent a blood transfusion yesterday, after which he rallied and joked and talked politics before he finally weakened. Mr. Coryozis held the portfolio of National Economy in the first Metaxas government for two years. Governor of the National Bank of Greece, he is also an author and economist.

Political spokesmen here said that Gen. Metaxas's death was the heaviest blow Greece could have suffered and that he was almost irreplaceable in the present circumstances of the war with Italy. Flags were at half-staff in Athens and newspapers appeared with black borders.

Accused of Arming Greece.

Rome, Jan. 29 (A. P.).—In the first Fascist comment published on the death of the Greek Premier, Gen. John Metaxas, Il Giornale d'Italia said today that it was recording for history that Gen. Metaxas provoked war against Italy by making Greece offensively armed against Italians. "It is not without significance," it added, "that his death follows shortly that of Chamberlain, the Briton who started the European war."

Says Greeks Will Fight On.

When word of the death of Premier Gen. John Metaxas was received today at the office of Nicholas Lely, Greek consul-general, he said he felt certain that the Greeks, under the new Premier and with the co-operation of all elements, will continue the same military, political and social program.

No flags were displayed at the office of the consul-general because a clause in the office lease forbids their display at any time.

Called Military Genius.

Gen. Metaxas, a veteran soldier and military genius, had held dictatorial powers in the Greek Government with the approval of King George II since August 4, 1936, when he engineered the coup d'etat which gave his country an authoritarian regime. He was proclaimed Premier for life on July 30, 1938.

Military experts have given him much of the credit for Greece's successful stand against the Italian invasion, which began on October 28 and was turned into a retreat into Albania. Early in his career he was regarded in some quarters as somewhat pro-German, but he repudiated any such sympathies in his role as leader of Greece and there was no doubt of his pro-British leanings after the European situation had flared into open war in September, 1939.

Trained in Germany.

Born in Cephalonia in 1871, of a family which became historic in Venetian times, Gen. Metaxas had five years of study in the Greek Military College before he entered the army and he was a captain of engineers in the disastrous war with Turkey which followed Greece's attempt to occupy Crete in 1897.

That experience convinced Capt. Metaxas he needed further training. He enrolled in the German Military Academy at Berlin. There he acquired the nickname of Little Moltke because of the excellent record he made. He used his new knowledge to good effect as assistant chief of staff in the Balkan wars of 1911 and 1912. In world war days he was Chief of Staff. He opposed the entry of Greece into the war, and when the Greeks joined the Allies in 1916 he was accused by the French of using irregulars against them in Macedonia. He fled to Corsica.

Meanwhile King Constantine had been forced to abdicate in favor of his son Alexander, but when the later died in 1920 he resumed the throne and called his favorite general back to Greece. Gen. Metaxas then opposed the 1922 campaign in Syria which resulted in complete defeat by the Turks and the second ousting of Constantine. But on Constantine's death in 1923 he headed a royalist counter-revolt. It was promptly squelched and Gen. Metaxas fled again, this time in a fishing smack to Italy.

George II, successor of Constantine, was forced off the throne in December, 1923. A few months later Gen. Metaxas came back to Greece with more moderate monarchical ideas and won a seat in Parliament. With the formation of the Greek republic in 1925 he joined other Royalists in a steady opposition to the Venizelos liberals, and after seven years the combination won control of Parliament in 1932 and formed a coalition cabinet, with Little John as Minister of the Interior. He was holding this post when, in March, 1934, the Greek Government, at the behest of the United States, had ordered Samuel Insull, fugitive Chicago financier, to leave the country. Little John was in charge of the nation's police. In the midst of preparations to deport Insull, the latter, on March 15, fled. The disappearance caused a deep stir and the next day Gen. Mataxas resigned. He was out of office until March 2, 1935.

Then the Venizelists started a well-organized revolt and he went back in the Cabinet as Minister without portfolio. The coup of October, 1935, headed by Gen. George Kondylis, brought King George back to the throne. Constantine Demerjdis was made Premier with Gen. Metaxas as Vice-President of the Council of State. Gen. Kondylis died suddenly on January 31, 1936, Mr. Demerjdis succumbed to apoplexy on April 13, and Gen. Metaxas was named head of the Government on April 28. A bit more than three months later he became dictator.

Korizis the Antithesis.

No military man, the fifty-five-year-old Korizis is the complete antithesis of the man he succeeded, in both background and appearance. In contrast to Metaxas's long military career, his only connection with the army was as a captain of artillery in the Balkan wars of 1912.

With Metaxas gone, he is credited by Greeks with knowing more about the affairs of his country than any other man living. For years he was one of the little dictator's closest behind-the-scenes collaborators.

Born on the island of Poros, near Salonika, he studied law, but found the field of finance more to his liking. He became vice-governor of the National Bank of Greece in 1928 and its governor in 1939. The only Cabinet post he held before was that of Minister of Health in 1936.

One of the busiest men in Athens, he has been known to work around the clock. Since the war with Italy began he has had little time to spend with his wife, two daughters and son.

GERMAN ARMY NOW IS SPREAD OVER BIG AREA

Early Invasion Attempt May Be Abandoned, Says British Authority

Thrust, If Any, Expected "Before U.S. Aid Becomes Too Pronounced"

By DREW MIDDLETON
Associated Press Correspondent

London, Jan. 29—A British military authority suggested today that the expected early attempt of the Germans to invade England might be abandoned because of the necessity of giving large-scale help to the Italians and the exigencies of Nazi military adventures in the Balkans.

If the Germans do try the thrust across the Channel, he added, they will time it to begin "before American aid becomes too pronounced."

As to the Balkans, the informant declared that Nazi mechanics and technical troops in civilian dress were preparing air fields in Bulgaria and that there were eight to ten German divisions in Rumania.

Nazis Spread Over Vast Area

These preparations, he added, might signal a Nazi drive southward to Salonika to isolate the Greeks in Albania and, with a strong concentration of bombers, to atempt to close the Mediterranean to large British convoys.

Despite all this, he said that the German army, vast as it is, is spread out from Narvik to Massena and from Brest to Bucharest and has large garrisons—for example, seventy divisions in Poland—that are "in ticklish position."

Surveys Military Situation

This authority, surveying the military situation, said he saw it thus:

THE BATTLE OF BRITAIN—When and if the invasion comes, it probably will be accompanied by attacks on Ireland for diversion, but "the real danger spot" is on the southeast coast from the Wash to Southampton, where the offensive would have the support of fighter aircraft from French bases. They might land, said the spokesman, "but we will blow 'em off the beaches."

SPAIN—Indications are that the Spanish will not give the Germans a free passage through to attack Gibraltar and drive into North Africa. Formal opposition by the battered Spanish army might be slight. But "certain plans have been made to meet eventualities."

Says French Would Fight

FRANCE—The Germans might occupy the rest of France, but should they do this "it is possible that French forces in the colonial empire, plus the fleet, would fight from outside bases."

TURKEY—Will fight if the Germans move on Salonika "and we are in a position to give her considerable help."

ITALY—"Germany cannot afford to let her fall out of the war. As a result, German troops and aircraft are moving through Italy in considerable numbers."

NORTH AFRICA—General Sir Archibald P. Wavell, the British commander, "can no longer afford to take the chances he did, because of the presence of the German air force. The matter of supporting Wavell has become more difficult.

Hinged On Single Division

This authority said the developing attack on Derna, Libya, slowed down momentarily because the British had encountered stronger opposition than they expected at the road junction of Mekili—seventy to eighty Italian tanks and parts of two Italian divisions.

He disclosed that Britain's thus far victorious African campaign had hinged at the start on the swing of a single armored division to the rear of Sidi Barrani, Egypt.

"Its orders," he said, "were to go and guard the road back to Sidi; it had supplies for five days. If Sidi hadn't fallen in five days we'd have withdrawn our troops and the whole campaign would have been abandoned for the time."

BRITAIN CALLS MORE; SERVICE DEPENDS ON JOB

Exemptions From Military Duty To Be Given On Basis Of Work Done

Women To Be Placed In Some Posts As Men Are Shifted Elsewhere

[By the Associated Press]

London, Jan. 29—Great Britain called men of 18 to 19 and 37 to 40 to the colors today and announced that future exceptions to military service would depend more on the actual job a man is doing than on his age or listed occupation.

Employers will be required to advise the Labor Ministry whether employes should be put on a list of "protected" work which will be defined in consultation with the supply services.

The plan is intended to help in finding out whether many persons now on the reserved lists could help the war effort more elsewhere. Some disturbances in non-essential industries were predicted.

To Be Replaced By Women

The number of people taken out of industry will depend to a great degree, however, on whether they can be replaced by women who have been listed among the first to be called in the imminent labor draft.

Before the end of the war, it was predicted, there would not be a man working at a job a woman can do.

In calling the youths of 18 to 19 to register February 22, arrangements were being made to place on the reserved lists those with exceptional scientific talents and technical knowledge and possibly all medical and dental students.

No registration date was fixed for the 37-to-40-year-old group.

To Call Bachelor Girls

Britain's bachelor girls and retired shipbuilders probably will be among the first groups called up in the projected labor draft.

The basic principles of the program were agreed upon by representatives of union employers and labor who met with Ernest Bevin, Minister of Labor, and other officials.

Pending the actual call-up, Bevin will issue appeals for volunteers for specific industries. First on this list are shipbuilders who have retired or gone into other fields—a reflection of Britain's concern over offsetting large shipping losses.

On the feminine side of the draft, unemployed girls will be put to work first, with the next summons going to those working in non-essential industries.

Willkie Tours London Shelters During Raid

Moved To Tears, He Says, At Display Of Britons' Pluck Under Bombing. To Curtail Trip, Starting Home Next Week

[By the Associated Press]

London, Jan. 29—Wendell L. Willkie visited five sprawling air-raid shelters here tonight in the midst of a German attack and said he was moved to tears at the sight of the public's pluck.

"I am a pretty tough fellow," he said, "but I had to turn my head away from these people to keep from downright bubbling over."

Mr. Willkie, who is curtailing his visit to England and starting for home next week, declared he would be "delighted" to appear before the Senate committee hearing on the lease-lend bill in Washington when told that Senator Nye had said he should be heard.

Again Without A Helmet

Mr. Willkie was recognized easily and cheered wildly when he appeared at the Ministry of Home Security—again without a helmet.

"He's the big fellow in the white hat," the people called to one another.

He had brought one helmet from America, and was given another by Prime Minister Winston Churchill.

Herbert Morrison, the Minister, shook hands with him, reminded him there was an air raid on and it was the duty of everybody to carry a helmet and gas mask.

Smilingly Mr. Willkie accepted both from Mr. Morrison.

On his round of the public shelters Willkie was accompanied by Ellen Wilkinson, a member of Parliament, Malcolm MacDonald, Health Minister, and Alderman Charles W. Key.

German planes were overhead on two occasions as the Republican leader emerged from shelters.

At one place a young woman edged her way through a swarm of people around Willkie and said "Come see my baby."

"The baby must not have been over a week old," Willkie said later.

They Shout, "We Are Not Down"

In another shelter he talked with a man over 70 years old.

"He told me," declared Mr. Willkie, "that he would sleep in a shelter forever if it would help win the war."

In all the places he visited the people shouted such things as:

"We are not down."

"They won't get us down."

Mr. Willkie declared he found things better than he had expected.

"Some fellow gave me a drink of his coffee, and I must say it was better than some in the fancy hotels."

Many Cheers For America

There were many cheers for America, he said, some of the people shouting: "'Send us all you have got.'"

A man with a harmonica played "The Star-Spangled Banner" when Willkie entered one shelter, and the crowd joined in the singing.

"Go home and tell them we can take it," one old woman said, patting him on the back.

Mr. Willkie indicated he would visit northern England and "Hell's Corner," the much bombed and shelled Dover area, next week before he cuts short his stay in England.

He laughed at a query as to whether threatened German invasion was causing him to leave earlier than he had expected.

"Nothing like that," he said. "It's just a question of making plane schedules."

To Walk About London Alone

Expressing his appreciation for the British Government's help in arranging his daily touring schedules, Mr. Willkie said he planned to go about London by himself tomorrow.

"I just want to get out, walk around and get talked to," Mr. Willkie explained.

His shortened stay may prevent him from making a trip to Ireland to see Prime Minister Eamon de Valera, as he originally planned.

Today Mr. Willkie received thirty-five British newspaperwomen at a press conference in his hotel.

Wants To See Exiled Monarchs

Perched on a coffee table in his room, Mr. Willkie expressed a desire to see the exiled monarchs King Haakon of Norway and Queen Wilhelmina of the Netherlands. Asked if he knew either one, he replied:

"No, but I know another queen," then disclosed he had talked to Mrs. Willkie by transatlantic telephone twice since he reached London.

Sees Protesting Women

Earlier Mr. Willkie witnessed a demonstration of sixty banner-waving women protesting food policies.

"Down with oatmeal eyewash . . . get rid of Lord Woolton" (Minister of Food) read some of the banners in the demonstration, obviously timed for his arrival at a hotel for luncheon.

After attending a trades union council meeting with Ernest Bevin, Minister of Labor, Mr. Willkie said he was impressed by the attitude of British workmen.

"There was not one dissenting voice and I was assured the same applied throughout the trade union movement," he said.

Later he went to his hotel for an interview with Dr. Quo Tai-chi, Chinese Ambassador to London.

Willkie also attended a Trades Union Council meeting and later said he was impressed most by the attitude of British labor at the meeting.

"There was not one dissenting voice, and I was assured the same applied throughout the trade-union movement," he said. "They look upon this not as an imperialistic war but as a war for the liberation of all working men."

No Visit To Germany

Willkie disclosed that he planned to go to the north of England Monday and Tuesday.

Asked if he would visit Germany, he grinned and said: "I shall be going straight home when I have seen all I want to see in England."

Willkie may have to abandon his plans to visit Ireland because of the pressure of time, authoritative British sources declared.

These sources said Willkie's stay here may have to be curtailed because of the pressure of applications for transportation facilities.

It was indicated Willkie might leave for home sometime next week.

Willkie Sees Protests On Food

[By the Associated Press]

London, Jan. 29—Wendell Willkie witnessed today a demonstration of sixty banner-waving women protesting Government food policies in a hotel where he was scheduled to lunch.

"Down with oatmeal eye-wash. . . . Get rid of Lord Woolton." . . . said some of the banners. Lord Woolton is Minister of Food. The demonstration was timed obviously to coincide with the American visitor's arrival.

Minor Scuffles

Willkie stepped on a landing above the milling women, removed his hat and watched. Hotel employes removed the demonstrators after a few minor scuffles.

Company for the luncheon with Willkie included Sir Robert Kindersley and other business leaders.

This afternoon Willkie visited headquarters of the Polish Government in exile and talked with Gen. Wladyslaw Sikorski, Polish Premier and War Minister.

Greetings To Poles

"My sympathies are one hundred per cent. with the Polish people," he said upon leaving Sikorski. To a Polish newspaper woman he said: "Send your people my greetings."

RAIDLESS NIGHTS END FOR LONDON

Alarm Sounds After Lull of Nine Nights.

London, Jan. 29 (A. P.).—London's first night air raid warning after nine raidless nights sounded through the capital area shortly after dark fell this evening. It was the earliest night alarm in several weeks.

German planes were reported over western and northeastern sections of England tonight.

At least five persons were reported killed when three bombs were dropped in daylight raiding along the Thames Estuary. Machine guns also were heard.

This stir followed a comparatively quiet night in which bad weather kept R. A. F. home forces aground and restricted German operations to the flight of a few planes over the English west coast, apparently on a mine-laying expedition.

30.24— 7233

The weather over the Strait of Dover was thick. A choppy sea was swept by a strong southeasterly wind.

The Government disclosed that twelve persons were killed and six injured in Britain last week when various unexploded missiles went off after being picked up, mostly by souvenir hunters.

London Bombed, Dover Shelled

[By the Associated Press]

London, Thursday, Jan. 30—German bombers returned to the attack on London last night, their first raid in ten nights, on the eve of the eighth anniversary of Adolf Hitler's assumption of power in the Reich, and Nazi big guns simultaneously bombarded the Dover Strait from across the English Channel.

In Dover there were no known casualties.

The aerial assault here was intermittent for four hours; the all-clear came before 10 P. M. Explosives, flares and fire bombs fell.

Nazis In Widespread Raids

Other areas of Britain were hit in a widespread, if scattered, assault. German planes appeared over the western and northern sections of England, East Anglia, central Scotland and the northeast coast.

In a southeast town several houses were smashed by bombs, and there were casualties.

A heavy bomb that hit an officers' house adjoining a hospital in the London area caused undetermined casualties. One body was recovered, and the hospital staff sought to free those feared trapped.

A train in East Anglia was reported machine-gunned.

Streets Machine-Gunned

In one northeast coastal town machine-gun bullets spattered in the streets just as the people ran at dusk to the air-raid shelters.

Here, there were periods of silence and then the heavy, accustomed detonation of exploding bombs and the howl of the anti-aircraft guns.

It was the earliest night alarm in weeks and it came soon after the usual blackout had descended upon the city.

The day had been one of scattered, stabbing German forays. At least five persons were reported killed by three bombs dropped by daylight raiders along the Thames estuary.

London Damage Slight

Bombs fell, too, at two points in the outskirts of London itself, but it was said officially that in these instances there were "very few casualties."

An unofficial check after the bombers had departed from London last night indicated that casualties here were not numerous and damage was slight.

In one area, the anti-aircraft guns were credited with holding the raiders off completely; in another watchers were so effective that although incendiaries came down thickly not a single fire was started.

Empire to Receive Churchill Posters

London, Jan. 29 (A. P.).—Thousands of posters with a larger-than-life size portrait of Prime Minister Churchill are being made for distribution throughout the British Empire.

Mr. Churchill, wearing a black hat and smiling grimly, is shown against a background of the English countryside, with a column of tanks moving across it and a squadron of fighting planes overhead.

Posters carry the phrase, "Let us go forward!" translated into every language spoken in the empire.

Britain Sending Expert To Sell Property In U. S. To Buy Arms

Sir Edward Peacock Will Knock Down Businesses Controlled By Britons To Highest Bidders

[By the Associated Press]

London, Jan. 29—Britain disclosed tonight she is about to tap her last big nestegg of dollar resources in the United States—British owned and controlled business enterprise—to buy warplanes, ships, tanks and munitions.

A Treasury statement said the Government had spent "a very great proportion" of its gold and was selling United States securities "steadily."

Now, it was asserted, the Treasury plans to get dollars to meet purchases in America from the sale of British-owned businesses in the United States and United States companies which are controlled by Britons' shares.

A leading expert on such matters, Sir Edward Peacock, will arrive in the United States shortly, and he is expected to knock down such British businesses and companies to the highest bidders.

A Treasury spokesman said he was unable to give the value of these resources because their shares are not listed on the Stock Exchange and "probably the owners themselves do not know what they worth at the market."

Sir Edward is a director of the Bank of England and of Baring Brothers & Co., a banking company.

The Treasury said that "in the light of material already supplied and contemplated by the United States of America, it may now be freely published that his Majesty's Government have realized and disposed of a very great proportion of their gold holdings and are steadily realizing on the American securities owned by their nationals at every opportunity.

"More Difficult Problem"

"A more difficult problem is presented by investments, such as business in the United States and United States companies controlled by companies in this country, whose shares are not quoted on the Stock Exchange.

"His Majesty's Government are resolved to make the best possible use of these investments, and, with this end in view, they have requested Sir Edward Peacock, who has great experience in such matters, to go over to the United States and examine the possibilities on the spot.

"Sir Edward Peacock will reach America very shortly."

Many Large Companies To Be Affected By Deal

New York, Jan. 29 (AP)—Transfer to American ownership of United States subsidiaries or branches of British-owned companies would involve many properties and a large amount of capital, informed financial sources said today.

Among the larger companies mentioned for possible sale were American Viscose Corporation, controlled by Courtalds, Ltd., of London; Brown & Williamson Tobacco Corporation, a subsidiary of British-American Tobacco, and the American properties of Distillers Company, Ltd.

Reports that Lever Brothers and Unilever, $104,000,000 British soap concern, might figure in proposed deals were not credited in informed quarters. American subsidiaries of the company were no longer considered "British-owned" it was said.

In Many Lines

With operations directed from head offices in the British Empire the American subsidiaries and branches are engaged in many manufacturing and trading lines, including paper, chemicals, rope and twine, clothing, whisky, linens, door fittings, rubber, beef cubes, foods, cosmetics, woolens, china, clays and upholstery fabrics.

Washington reports recently said it was expected plans for the shift of ownership would be through a gradual transfer to certain investing companies later to be followed by distribution of the shares to the public.

For a year or more there has been an almost continuous flow of liquidation of British-owned American securities to raise dollars for war purchases. Some of the selling has gone through the New York Stock Exchange, but the larger share, including many big blocks of stocks, has been redistributed through the "over-the-counter" market.

British Shown Realizing On American Securities

LONDON, Jan. 29 (AP).—The Treasury announced tonight that the British government had "realized and disposed of" a "very great proportion" of its gold holdings and was "steadily realizing" on American securities.

The Treasury statement said that Sir Edward Peacock, a director of the Bank of England and of Baring Brothers & Co., a banking company, was going to the United States to "examine the possibilities" of sale of businesses in the United States and United States companies controlled by the British, shares of which are not quoted on the Stock Exchange.

Speculators Buy Up Bombed London Sites

London, Jan. 29 (A. P.).—A committee is being set up to check land speculation by brokers buying up bombed sites to resell to municipalities after the war, the Government announced today in the House of Commons.

A. C. B. S. broadcast from London said that the fire-ruined city or financial section of London was undergoing the "most hectic land speculation activity in its history."

"The speculators hope that, when the time comes for reconstruction in London," said the broadcaster, "they will be able to name their own price for the land which they have snapped up while it remained useless."

Dangerous Souvenirs

London, Jan. 29 (AP)—The Government disclosed tonight that twelve persons were killed and six injured in Britain last week when various unexploded "missiles" picked up, mostly by souvenir hunters went off.

DE VALERA WARNS OF CURBS ON FOOD

Announces Rationing Of Tea, Tells Country It Must "Prepare For Worst"

Premier Declares Nation Will Remain In Danger Of Attack Until Peace

[By the Associated Press]

Dublin, Jan. 29—Eamon de Valera, Ireland's Brooklyn-born Premier, told the nation by radio tonight that it must "prepare for the worst" on the question of imported supplies and announced rationing of tea for the Irish.

The Government announced that tea supplies to the public would be restricted to three-fourths the quantity normally sold until a rationing system can be arranged.

It was officially suggested to retailers that they limit sales to two ounces a week for adults and one ounce for children.

The Prime Minister also said gasoline would be available only for doctors, clergymen and essential services for the time being.

In Danger Until Peace

De Valera said Ireland had been in danger of military attack and would remain in danger until peace returned to Europe.

"The other danger, now, is the economic one," he went on. "The belligerents in blockading each other are blockading us.

"We have not a moment to lose in preparing for the worst in regard to all those supplies that come to us from abroad. . . . It would be foolish if we prepared for anything less than the worst."

Not Enough Wheat

The Premier said Ireland's wheat reserves barely were enough to carry the country through until after the next harvest, and he urged substitution of potatoes for flour in Irish diets.

He warned farmers that cattle would have to be slaughtered unless they grow the fodder that formerly came from abroad.

Young people were urged to drink more milk, less tea.

Britain's War: All Classes Affected

London, Jan. 29 (AP)—Conferees seeking means to accelerate Great Britain's war production outlined a general plan today to draft thousands of single women 18 years of age and older from drawing rooms, slums and servants' quarters into war-goods factories.

Union employers agreed to the broad principles of the Government's proposal in meeting with Minister of Labor Ernest Bevin, Sir Andrew Duncan, Minister of Supply; A. V. Alexander, First Lord of the Admiralty; Lord Beaverbrook, Minister for Aircraft Production, and Capt. Oliver Lyttleton, president of the Board of Trade.

Actual Methods Sought

Actual methods for bringing women into the factories to speed arms output were the specific problems before a war production conference of representatives of the Government, the British Employers' Association and the Trades Union Congress.

From their deliberations may come definite steps toward carrying out the plan to draft both women and men for esential factory work, first announced January 22 by Labor Minister Ernest Bevin.

Intensification of Britain's production program accompanied British proposals for tightening the sea blockade against Germany and Italy through United States cooperation.

An economic expert said last night that joint action by the United States on a "control at source" system would "speed the end of the war by increasing efficiency of the blockade forty per cent."

He reported "talks are going on along these lines in Washington."

Seeks Guarantees

Labor has been seeking guarantees that those taken into war plants would find their old jobs open when the war ends, along with a pledge that working conditions and bargaining rights sacrificed would be restored after the emergency.

There have been complaints from labor sources also that thus far the Government has given no hint of plans to conscript wealth, even though it possesses authority to draft both money and manpower.

In addition to the broad outline Bevin gave Parliament of his proposal to register the worker population, the Minister of Labor has given employers and employes groups details in secret. It is reported reliably that bringing thousands more women into factories is one objective of these plans.

Outspoken Critic

One of the most outspoken critics of the production program has been Lord Winterton, who declared in Commons that although the nation was on the eve of "thunderous and earth-shaking events," Bevin's plan suggested that Britain had "ample time and that all this was a great social experiment."

Another criticism came from the Manchester Guardian, which said "the Government hasn't yet got far with its manpower plan and is still boggling at some of the fundamentals."

Prime Minister Churchill himself has acknowledged there was "an awful lot of things which could be done better."

Commenting on a report yesterday of Hugh Dalton, Minister of Economic Warfare, that Soviet Russia was buying cotton, copper, machinery and wheat from the United States to replace consignments sent to Germany, an economic expert said both Russia and Germany were buying industrial machinery on a "sky-is-the-limit scale."

He added that the two countries hope to get $40,000,000 worth of such machinery by import in 1941, of which $4,000,000 would be for "oil-drilling equipment which no one else but the United States can supply."

Germans Reported in Bulgaria

British Expert Expects Attack on Greece—See Peril of Invasion Eased.

London, Jan. 29 (A. P.).—A British military authority said today that German infiltration into Rumania and Bulgaria, and German air aid to Italy had become so extensive that the very real danger of an invasion of Great Britain may be averted.

He declared that German mechanics and technical troops in civilian dress were preparing air fields in Bulgaria and that there were from eight to ten German divisions in Rumania. The German mechanized division numbers 11,000 men and the infantry division 15,000.

This informant expressed the opinion that these preparations might mean a German drive southward to Salonika, in eastern Greece, thus isolating the Greek Army fighting the Italians in Albania. This concentration, plus the diversion to Italian soil of strong units of the air force, "which are close to the route through the Mediterranean for large convoys of our sea forces," might well avert the long contemplated invasion of Great Britain, he said.

"But air fields established in France make it certain that the Germans could shift fighters back to the coast for attack on this country whenever the High Command felt the danger in the Mediterranean had abated," he added.

He said the attempted invasion of Great Britain probably would be accompanied by attacks on Ireland as a diversion, but the real danger spot is the southeast coast of England from the Wash to Southampton, where the Germans would have the support of fighter aircraft from French bases.

Heavy Losses on Both Sides.

Bitolj, Yugoslavia, Jan. 29 (A. P.).—Italian bayonet attacks on Greek positions in the Devoli River Valley and Greek assaults on Italian positions in the Skumbi River Valley were reported tonight, but the battlefront in Albania was said to be generally unaltered.

Positions changed several times in the Devoli Valley, with heavy losses on both sides. The Greeks, however, were said to hold several heights won in the last fighting of the day.

In the Skumbi valley the fighting was on the Greeks' initiative, but Italian artillery was said to have broken up their thrusts. There also losses were heavy on both sides, according to advices reaching the border.

The upper reaches of these two rivers are the principal sectors of the northernmost front in Albania, where the Greeks threaten Elbasani and Berati. The British air force was said to have bombed those places today.

Rome Claims Gains.

Rome, Jan. 29 (A. P.).—Important positions along the Albanian battle front have been wrested from the Greeks, the Italian High Command reported today. Prisoners and arms were said to have been taken by the Italians in local actions.

The communique added that the Italian Air Force struck heavily at Salonika and at the railway from Salonika to Athens, that five enemy planes were shot down and that two Italian planes were lost.

Greeks Smash Foe's Attacks.

Athens, Jan. 29 (A. P.).—The Greeks were today reported to have beaten back two more counter-attacks from bolstered Italian forces north of Klisura. A Government spokesman said the Italians, fighting desperately to smash the Greek thrust into central Albania toward Berati, suffered heavy losses and were driven from some of their positions.

Berlin Says Italians Repulse British Attacks

Berlin, Jan. 29 (AP)—The Italian high command has announced the repulse of an attack by a British armored division south of Derna, Libya, with "heavy losses" to the attackers, DNB reports.

In East Africa, DNB declared, the Italian high command reported a British attack had been repulsed in the Gallabat area on the Sudanese front, while Fascist attacks were said to have caused the British to fall back on the Kenya Colony border.

British air raids on Asmara, capital of Eritrea, were said to have caused no damage.

HITLER TO TALK TO ALL GERMAN PEOPLE TODAY

Speech On 8th Anniversary Of Rise To Power To Be Broadcast Twice

Usual Holiday On This Date Is Forbidden By Special Decree

JAN 30 1941

No Nazi Flags

Washington, Jan. 29 (AP)—German buildings in the United States or in Germany itself will not fly the Nazi flag tomorrow in observance of the eighth anniversary of Adolf Hitler's rise to the Chancellorship.

The custom of flying the flag will be dispensed with this year because of the war, a German Embassy spokesman said.

[By the Associated Press]

Berlin, Thursday, Jan. 30—Adolf Hitler will address the German people at 4.30 P. M. (9.30 A. M. E.S.T.) today on this eighth anniversary of Der Tag when the Nazis rose to complete power in the Reich.

This was announced by the German press, which said:

"Today, the day of the nationalist revolution, the Führer will talk to the German people. The address will be carried on all German radios at 4.30 o'clock.

Will Be Broadcast Again

"Following the news reports the address will be repeated at 8.20 P. M." By special decree, the usual holiday was forbidden. Children were ordered to report to their school classes, workers to their jobs.

Marshal Hermann Wilhelm Goering issued a statement in connection with the anniversary, saying:

"Our victorious military force protects the freedom and greatness of a united people and assures its future. All that is the accomplishment of the Führer."

Parade In Peacetime

In peacetimes after an address by Adolf Hitler there usually has been a dramatic torchlight parade in Berlin and Storm Troops have tramped along the Wilhelmstrasse past the Führer on his balcony.

On the last anniversary, Hitler scornfully ridiculed assertions that he had designs on North or South America. He told the party members at the Sportspalast that France and England were about to get a taste of the fight "they asked for."

The major American networks said they did not plan to carry the Hitler broadcast.

HITLER TALK IN DOUBT

No Announcement About His Usual Jan. 30 Speech.

Berlin, Jan. 29 (A. P.).—Authorized spokesmen said tonight that "nothing is known of any projected talk by Adolf Hitler tomorrow."

During peacetime it was customary for him to talk on January 30, the anniversary of the Nazis coming to power.

The German radio will broadcast a "historical review" which possibly may contain bits of old Hitler addresses.

BERLIN, Jan. 29 (AP).—Fuehrer Adolf Hitler received Gen. Karoly Bartha, Hungarian Minister of War, today in the new Reich Chancellery. The meeting took place in the presence of Gen. Field Marshal Wilhelm Keitel, Germany's chief of the high command of the armed forces.

New Nazi Film Of War in West Keeps Secrets

Vast Mechanized Army Is Shown, but Not Way It Cracked Strong Defenses

BERLIN, Jan. 29 (AP).—The German high command's documentary film, "Victory in the West," was shown today to the press, but it left unanswered the question whether Germany has a secret weapon.

The film account of France's defeat revealed a huge amount of mechanical war equipment which clicked with almost unbelievable precision. How it went to work on such tough defenses as the Maginot Line and Belgium's supposedly invincible fortress Eben Emael remained the high command's secret, however.

The film indicated that the German triumph in the West was no walkover, that there was spirited resistance by the French, especially in the Maginot Line, and by the British and Belgians.

The German air force appeared to have had things its own way, and vast German ground movements were shown as undisturbed by enemy flyers.

German predominance in heavy artillery, the fleetness and mobility of her mechanized forces and the precise co-operation of all arms of the service were strikingly pictured.

Some shots showed flame throwers in action.

It was asserted that the film was not a posed picture or enacted by professional players. Numerous photographers of the German Army's propaganda companies who made the records were said to have lost their lives.

Ship Losses

JAN 30 1941

[By the Associated Press]

Berlin, Jan. 29—Long-range German bombers sank a 4,600-ton "enemy merchant ship" west of Ireland and badly damaged two other ships, the German high command reported today.

A German submarine was credited with sinking 11,500 tons of shipping.

Long-range guns were reported to have shelled "war-essential objectives in southeast England."

The daily war bulletin said no British planes penetrated Reich territory or German-occupied regions yesterday or last night. One German plane was reported missing.

The high command said "war-vital" objectives in London were bombed by German combat planes attacking singly. Rail facilities in a city in eastern England were reported hit.

RAEDER HOLDS WAR WILL BE WON AT SEA

Nazi Naval Chief Sees Ship Losses Dooming Britain.

JAN 30 1941

Berlin, Jan. 29 (A. P.).—Grand Admiral Erich Raeder's prediction of German victory through British shipping losses was hailed by the German press today with headlines declaring "England to Meet Inevitable Downfall" and "Every Help From Ooutside Comes Too Late for England."

The Commander-in-Chief of the German Navy told Bremen dock workers yesterday that the German Navy has thus far destroyed 6,300,000 tons of British shipping, not counting what the German air force has done. Adding that the British admit that 400,000 tons of their naval vessels have been destroyed, he commented, "We know how much they don't say."

[Informed British spokesmen said on January 3 that roughly 4,500,000 tons of British, Allied and neutral shipping had been lost in the sixteen months of war. The war's average of British merchant shipping destroyed is 62,000 tons a week, according to British Admiralty figures.]

"In view of the power of the German blows, any aid from abroad will come too late," Admiral Raeder said. "The entire fighting strength of the navy, in possession of new bases, can now be used against essential overseas imports to England. These supplies are assailed everywhere, in the Atlantic, the Indian and the Pacific oceans. No power on earth can arrest this destiny (England's downfall.")

Italy Lifts Ban On Broadcaster

Rome, Jan. 29 (AP)—The Foreign Ministry notified the United States Embassy today that Cecil Brown, of the Columbia Broadcasting System, had received permission to resume broadcasting for two months. The permission is subject to renewal at that time.

Use of Italy's radio facilities was denied Brown January 23 because of the "general attitude" of his broadcasts. An appeal from that order was filed through the embassy.

GAYDA WARNS U. S. IT IS RISKING WAR

JAN 30 1941

Declares Aid to Britain Violates Neutrality.

Rome, Jan. 29 (A. P.).—Virginio Gayda, foremost editorial spokesman for Fascist Italy, declared today that the United States policy of aiding Britain is a violation of neutrality likely to involve the United States in war through "legitimate reaction" of the Axis Powers.

"The increase of American aid to England, far from not drawing the United States into war, brings her nearer the conflict by deliberate plan," he wrote in Il Giornale d'Italia.

The United States, he declared, should not believe she can continue this policy "without finding some unforeseen and quite unpleasant reaction at the end of the path."

Gayda said that "Cordell Hull must have known that the policy of the North American Government long has been violating the elementary principles of neutrality."

"Violation of neutrality without provocation becomes aggressive," he continued. "As such it exposes one to the legitimate danger—we say legitimate—of reaction from the offended Powers."

He asserted that transfer of American destroyers to Britain was an example of "open violation of international law" and drew a distinction between Washington's position and the "non-belligerency" which Italy used to define her position before she declared war last June 10. The Italian policy, he said, was justified by the Axis alliance with Germany and controversial questions pending between Italy and the Allies.

"These two reasons do not exist for the United States," Gayda asserted. "But North American policy already is far beyond that of non-belligerence. It already is on the edge of waging war."

FASCISTS REPORT CHEERS FOR NAZIS

JAN 30 1941

Pro-German Rallies Held in North Italian Cities.

Rome, Jan. 29 (A. P.).—The Fascist press today hailed popular demonstrations of enthusiasm in Milan, Turin and Verona as giving the lie to reports that the people of those cities are hostile to the war. Fascists in all three places paraded last night and cheered Premier Mussolini, Adolf Hitler and the armed forces of Germany, and the demonstrations were described as the spontaneous reaction to nonsense published abroad that German troops had quelled rioting in the north of Italy.

In each of the cities provincial party leaders addressed crowds, expressing devotion to Mussolini and scorn for the foreign reports casting doubt on the patriotic attitude of their supporters. Telegrams assuring Il Duce of the solidarity of North Italian Fascists were sent from all three cities.

Mussolini's newspaper, Il Popolo d' Italia of Milan, said that the reaction was precisely what such stupidities (the foreign reports) merited. "Shameful lies," the paper said, "have provided the occasion for once more giving vent to the passion which animates our people, and to its faith in Il Duce, which, if possible, is deeper than ever."

Federal Secretary Andrew Ippolito, Fascist leader in the Milan province, sent Mussolini this telegram:

"Your warrior revolutionary at Milan laughs at the transoceanic press, now obliged to adopt the most grotesque libels. It proudly salutes the indissoluble force of the Axis and, in stern harmony, its productive industriousness is entirely dedicated to inevitable victory."

Similar messages were sent from Turin and Milan.

Reports of rioting were broadcast by the Columbia Broadcasting System last Saturday on the basis of dispatches from its Belgrade correspondent.

HITLER'S MINISTER OF JUSTICE DEAD

Guertner Decreed Heavy Fine Against Jews.

Berlin, Jan. 29 (A. P.).—The German Minister of Justice, Franz Guertner, died at his home here last night after a short illness, an official announcement disclosed today. He was 59 years old, and was Minister of Justice since 1932. He held office in the Von Papen and Schleicher Cabinets and was reappointed by Adolf Hitler in 1933. Der Fuehrer bestowed membership in the Nazi party upon him in 1937.

In 1934 Dr. Guertner inaugurated the People's Court to deal with cases of high treason and espionage. One of his most far-reaching decrees required German Jews to raise and pay a billion-mark fine in reprisal for the assassination of Ernst vom Rath, a member of the German embassy staff in Paris, by a Jew in November, 1938.

Dr. Guertner's death was said to have been caused by influenza and a weak heart.

On July 20, 1935, Dr. Guertner issued a warning to Roman Catholic priests to refrain from comment in the pulpit on the intensified Nazi campaign against what he called political Catholicism. His directions to State prosecutors read in part: "They are ordered to oppose all political Catholicism which aims at the disintegration of the State and all actions aiming at the division of the people, and to fight them without regard of persons and position, but with calm determination and emphatic vigor, also with deliberation in view of the acute possibilities of injustice."

The decree later stated, "Quick proof of misdeeds must be followed by even quicker punishment."

370 LIVES LOST IN BUCHAREST

Figures on Revolt Issued as Trials Are Begun.

JAN 30 1941

Bucharest, Jan. 29 (A. P.).—(Passed by the military censor).—The first official figures on casualties in last week's revolt, given out by the Ministry of the Interior, said that the Bucharest death toll alone included 370 men and women who were killed in Baneasa Forest, on the edge of the city, or died in hospitals. It said that 444 wounded were carried to Bucharest hospitals, and that the known dead in the provinces were fourteen army men. Thirty-two civilians were listed as injured.

Among the dead was a prosecuting magistrate, reported killed in the line of duty, and a reserve army lieutenant said to have been serving in Iron Guard ranks.

Among the first prisoners sentenced by court martial for participating in the revolt were seventeen students at the Army School for Aviation Officers. They were sentenced to terms ranging up to ten years' hard labor, or solitary confinement. No death sentence has been announced publicly.

Iron Guard Leaders Accused.

An agricultural expert said to have led one band of marauders testified that none of their pillaging was undertaken on personal initiative, but all had been ordered by high ranking Iron Guard officials.

He said these officials told the marauders when and where to carry on acts of terrorism.

Another prisoner said he had put on a military uniform, commandeered a truck and looted numerous houses and shops. A woman servant told of turning the keys to her master's mansion over to Iron Guardsmen, who ransacked the place.

Iron Guard mayors of two suburban towns were charged with an endless series of murders of Christians and Jews alike, and with looting the homes of their victims. They were said to have confessed calling to their offices wealthy factory and shop owners and forcing them with pistols to sign quit-claim deeds to all their property.

Sends Message to Hitler.

Rumania's new Minister of War, meanwhile, sent a message to the German Gen. Hansen, saluting him as "Comrade" and assuring him: "I will support with force the useful collaboration between the Rumanian and German armies, begun with such great loyalty by the military mission under your command."

The Rumanian Premier, Gen. Ion Antonescu, said in a message to Adolf Hitler that, at the height of the crisis, he had told the Rumanian people he was given strength by the knowledge that "the loyal shadow of the German Fuehrer stands behind me." Hitler replied with "Warmest wishes that the Rumanian internal situation may grow calm again so that the development of your nation will continue."

Nazi Troops Get Supplies.

Berlin, Jan. 29 (A. P.).—A Bucharest dispatch to DNB, the official German news agency, said today that German troops in Rumania are now receiving more supplies from the Reich "so that no problems of division of supplies arise and no economic injury is done" in areas where large bodies of German troops are concentrated.

Rumania Warned To Keep Peace At Home For Year

Bucharest, Jan. 29 (AP)—Rumania was warned today by her pro-German newspapers to declare immediately a one-year truce upon all ideological conflicts "because of the international situation."

Another article predicted that "the motorized German army will sweep through the Balkan peninsula like a hurricane within a short time to deliver a blow so crushing that the enemy will never recover its sense."

Both of these were written from Rome by Panfil Seicaru, Balkan editor who is reputed to have close Axis connections.

The Ministry of the Interior announced that casualties in the Iron Guard revolt last week totaled 370 dead and 444 wounded in Bucharest alone.

Gen. Ion Antonescu and his new military Government removed Iron Guard leader Greceanu, Minister to Guardist's Home Raided

The house of Radu Ghineau, a Guardist and now Minister to Spain, was raided, a great quantity of documents was seized and Ghineau's mother was taken into custody.

All metallurgical industries were militarized.

A special list issued tonight showed that 498 Iron Guardists had been arrested thus far for fomenting last week's revolution, but the names of Horia Sima, the Iron Guard leader, and most of his important associates did not appear.

No official announcement has yet been made about Sima's whereabouts, although two days ago it was reported that he was in custody.

Among those in hand were Radu Gyr, director of the National Theater, and Colonel Zavoianu, a former police prefect.

Army Commander Resigns

General Coroama, commander of the First Army Corps, resigned and no reason for his action was given.

Rumania's most anti-Semitic paper blamed the rebellion on "a Communist rabble dressed in green shirts who carried their hatred to the utmost ferocity with a bloodthirstiness peculiar to Communism."

HORIA SIMA'S FATE STILL A MYSTERY

Bucharest, Jan. 29 (A. No official announcement has been made about M. Sima's fate and he has been reported variously as in custody and in flight.

R. A. F. Sets Fires at Naples

Attack Is Part of Big Air Offensive Mostly Supporting Ground Forces in Africa.

Cairo, Jan. 29 (A. P.).—The airdrome, the central railway junction and a freight assembly yard at Naples were splotched with fires when the R. A. F. finished its Monday night raid there, the British announced tonight.

The Naples attack was but one phase of a widespread air offensive being carried on, mostly in support of land forces in Africa.

British fighting planes were said by the communique to have machine-gunned "the retreating enemy" between Derna and Barce in Libya. Barce is about 100 miles west of Derna, on the road to Bengasi.

British West of Derna.

Meanwhile, with British motorized units so deep within Libya that Italy's hold on the whole eastern part of that colony was reported jeopardized, General Headquarters announced an increasing pressure on Derna.

Advance units of Britain's army on wheels and caterpillar treads were said to be operating south and west of Derna, while the main forces maneuvered and massed for an assault on the coastal town, ninety-five miles west of fallen Tobruk and 175 miles from the Egyptian frontier.

The GHQ communique confined itself succinctly to the report: "Our pressure on enemy forces in the Derna region is increasing." The full picture of the penetration came from unofficial sources.

At the same time, Free French forces, which were disclosed last night to have driven more than 200 miles into southwestern Libya from Equatorial Africa, captured the oasis of Fazzan and routed the Italian garrison at Marzouk, presented the Italians with the necessity of guarding their rear against attack.

Military observers here were vague as to the ultimate objective of the Free French drive, but agreed that its immediate effect was to turn the Libyan campaign into a two-front war. This accomplishment was viewed here as the first real fruits of the raising of the Free French flag over French Equatorial Africa late last August—a move hailed at the time as of great strategic importance.

Strength of Force Unknown.

There was no indication here of how many men Gen. Charles de Gaulle, Free French leader, had thrown into action. But it has been estimated he has assembled altogether some 35,000 troops, and it was believed here a large proportion of these was co-operating in the African campaign.

Gen. Georges Catroux, in immediate command of the De Gaulle forces in Equatorial Africa, disclosed last night that some of his men were operating on the Ethiopian front as well as in Libya, but gave no details.

The British estimated that they already control about 100,000 miles of Libyan territory as a result of the campaign which began December 8 with the capture of the Italian advance post at Sidi Barrani in Egypt.

The British General Headquarters summed up briefly the operations on the East African front, hundreds of miles from Libya's sandy wastelands.

Operations in the Agordat-Barentu sector of Italian Eritrea, about eighty miles inside the Sudan border, were said to be "developing" and seventy-three additional prisoners were claimed in the pursuit of Italians withdrawing from Umm Hagar.

The situation on the Ethiopian front was reported unchanged, but vigorous patrol activity was noted in numerous areas across the enemy frontier in Italian Somaliland.

1,000 German Airmen And Technicians Declared Stationed In Libya

Captives Flock To Tobruk. R. A. F. Strafes Italians Far Behind Derna

[By the Associated Press]

London, Thursday, Jan. 30—A military authority declared early today that the British Army of the Nile was aiming in the "near future" at the capture of Bengasi, the westernmost Italian post holding on the "hump" of Libya.

He did not disclose how far the British forces had penetrated beyond besieged Derna.

By LARRY ALLEN
Associated Press Correspondent

Aboard a British Warship at Tobruk, Libya, Jan. 29—Approximately 1,000 German technicians and airmen now are stationed in Libya to aid the Italians against the British, an Italian prisoner said tonight.

The technicians represent the majority of Germans and the "German dive-bomber pilots have been raiding the British army and fleet," he said.

This prisoner was one of thousands pouring into Tobruk to board British transports shuttling steadily between this captured Fascist port and Egyptian bases.

Anzacs "Very Rough With Us"

Many of these prisoners talked eagerly when they saw the American correspondent's insignia on my uniform.

One, who said his father lived in New York, said:

"The Australians are good men, but they were very rough with us."

The Fascist prisoners did not seem surprised when they were told the British estimated they had taken nearly 130,000 Italians since the push westward started from Sidi Barrani, Egypt.

75,000 Taken To Egyptian Ports

The British estimated that their transports already had removed 20,000 prisoners from the Tobruk area, boosting to 75,000 the total transported to Egyptian ports.

Officers appeared confident here that thousands more would be captured in the operations against Derna, ninety-five miles west of here.

Enough war supplies have been seized, they said, almost to equip the entire British army in Libya. British doctors said they found enough surgical dressings alone to last the Australians for a year.

Tobruk Buildings Battered

Most of Tobruk's buildings are standing, but are battered and perforated by thousands of shells and machine-gun bullets.

When the British forces began their operations intended to reduce Derna, columns of Italian troops were leaving areas west of Tobruk in lorries bound for that town. They were caught in furious attacks by the Australians near Derna and are said to have surrendered in masses.

Wreckage Of 17 Italian Ships

Reports received here say that 10,000 Italians have been taken in the British drive westward from Tobruk.

In Tobruk harbor is the wreckage of seventeen Italian ships sunk or damaged by British bombing and British shelling—including the old cruiser San Giorgio and three destroyers whose masts stick up from the water. The passenger steamer Liguria is still burning.

Retreat Indicates Next Italian Stand At Bengasi

Cairo, Jan. 29 (AP)—Royal Air Force planes leading the way for the British desert forces aimed at a cleanup of the Libyan port of Derna were reported by the R. A. F. command today to have ground-strafed Fascist troops retreating all the way to Barce, one hundred miles west of the menaced town.

With British mechanized forces reported operating south and west of Derna and threatening Italy's hold on all eastern Libya, the Fascist retreat indicated Mussolini's men apparently had decided against making a fight of it at Derna.

Stand At Bengasi Expected

Instead, observers here believed the Italians would keep on past Barce and make a stand at Bengasi, 150 miles beyond Derna on the western side of the Cirenaican hump which juts into the Mediterranean.

"Our pressure on enemy forces in the Derna region is increasing," was all today's G. H. Q. communique had to say of the land operations in Libya.

But the R. A. F. command, giving more details, said that, in addition to strafing the retreating Italians, its planes ranged over the Libyan sands providing protection for the advancing desert fighters.

11 Italian Planes Abandoned

On the landing field at Martuba, near Derna, R. A. F. pilots said they found eleven Italian planes abandoned and unserviceable. Three others were spotted near by, damaged in earlier machine-gunning and bombing attacks.

The air activity in Libya was but one phase of the latest R. A. F. assaults, which included raids upon Italian outposts on two other African fronts and night attacks upon Naples, western Italian port, and Axis air bases on the island of Sicily.

Raids On Naples And Sicily

Fires and explosions were reported started at Naples airdrome, the central railway junction and marshaling yards there. On Sicily, British pilots said they started fires and explosions at Catani airdrome, used as a base for German dive-bombers preying on Britain's Mediterranean shipping, and at near-by Comiso.

Hundreds of miles down in Africa, the Middle East command reported, operations in the Agordat-Barentu sector of Italian Eritrea, about eighty miles from the Sudan border, were "developing." The capture of seventy-three more prisoners was credited to British forces pursuing Fascists retreating from Umm Hagar.

In Italian Somaliland

"Vigorous patrol activity" was said to be continuing in many areas inside Italian Somaliland. On the Ethiopian front the situation was described as "unchanged."

On all the African fronts the R. A. F. command said that its pilots and those of the South African air force supported the ground troops and that from all these forays every participating plane returned safely.

Italian Rout In Moyale Area

Nairobi, Kenya, Jan. 29 (AP)—The South African command announced tonight that a patrol in armored cars had routed an Italian force in the area of Moyale, which is near the Ethiopian frontier, and that a Fascist counter-attack had been beaten off.

Italian casualties were estimated at twenty to thirty killed.

British Armored Division Beaten Back, Rome Says

Rome, Jan. 29 (AP)—A British armored division striking into Libya south of the port of Derna was beaten back by Italian troops, the high command reported today, with "noteworthy losses."

The high command's communique said Fascist flyers participated in attacks on armored detachments and motorized columns without interruption by British planes.

Air formations also were said to have taken an active part in attacks on British forces in East Africa.

A British attack was beaten back in the Gallabat sector along the Sudanese-Ethiopian frontier, the high command said, and Italian troops attacked other British forces along the Kenya frontier.

British airplanes were said to have attempted to raid Asmara, capital of Eritrea, "without causing damage."

JAPANESE SEIZE ANOTHER TOWN IN INDO-CHINA

Report of Troopships Off Southern Coast Causes Anxiety at Saigon.

VIOLATION OF PACT ALLEGED

Meanwhile Armistice Talks With Siamese Are Still Awaited in Spite of Broken Truce.

JAN 30 1941

Saigon, Jan. 29 (A. P.).—Reports of new Japanese military moves in the north and south of French Indo-China heightened anxiety here today pending Japanese-led negotiations over the recent frontier fighting between Indo-China and Thailand (Siam). It was said that Japanese troop ships had been seen apparently headed for a rendezvous with warships off the south coast of Indo-China. In the north, other Japanese forces moved into the market town of Haiduong, which is within thirty-five miles of the capital at Hanoi.

Fighting continued as late as 1 P. M. yesterday along the disputed Siamese border, where an armistice was to have become effective three hours earlier, but there was no move to call off the discussions between representatives of both countries in search of a peaceful settlement. Each side blamed the other for continuance of the hostilities. The Japanse cruiser Katori, aboard which the negotiators arranged to meet Gen. Raishiro Sumita, the Japanese negotiator, was tied up at the Saigon water front.

Called Violation of Pact.

There was no explanation here of the concentration of Japanese warships off Cap St. Jacques, 50 miles southeast of Saigon. The ships were identified as an aircraft carrier, two cruisers and two torpedo boats. The Japanese troop movement in the north was declared by the French here to be an unprovoked violation of the Franco-Japanese pact worked out at the Hanoi conference of September 22. That agreement, over which an alleged misunderstanding touched off a clash betwen French and Japanese troops along the northern frontier, granted Japan the use of three air bases in northern Indo-China and the right to land a limited number of troops at Haiphong, the port east of Hanoi, and to garrison the air bases with 6,000 troops.

Dispatches from Hanoi said that Franco-Japanese trade negotiations at Tokio have already resulted in an agreement to export urgently needed rice to Japan, but that little other progress had been made. An informant arriving from Tokio, where he was associated closely with the French trade mission, said it was doubtful if the negotiations would be concluded in less than two months. Despite increased Japanese pressure, he added, the conference had been unable to reach an accord on exports of Indo-China's coal, ores and rubber, which Japan wants.

ARMISTICE TALKS BEGUN AT SAIGON

FIGHTING STILL REPORTED

Nationalist Sentiment Runs High in Bangkok—French Honor Naval Officer

SAIGON, French Indo-China, Jan. 29 (AP)—Armistice negotiations between Thailand [Siam] and French Indo-China opened this afternoon aboard the Japanese cruiser Natori.

Seven Japanese, six French and six Thai representatives held a forty-five-minute session and it was reported that the armistice document would be signed tomorrow. This would formalize a cessation of border hostilities pending a Japanese-mediated peace settlement at Tokyo.

The head French negotiator was Georges Gautier, Resident Superior and Director of the Cabinet of Governor General Admiral Jean Decoux.

Japanese naval units in the Saigon vicinity on the occasion of the negotiations were reported by a witness arriving by boat at Saigon to include, besides the Natori, a seaplane tender, two torpedo boats, an armored cruiser and a naval oil tanker—eight miles off Cap St. Jacques, about forty miles southeast of Saigon.

Saigon itself is on the Saigon River, easily navigable for the Natori.

Seaplanes from the Japanese tender manoeuvred over the Saigon area this afternoon after the Japanese had notified French officials.

Japanese Army officers were brought by plane this morning from Hanoi, where Japan has an air base. The planes landed about the same time that another Japanese plane brought a second group of Thai negotiators from Bangkok.

Rally Called in Bangkok

BANGKOK, Thailand, Jan. 29 (AP)—With fighting still reported from the frontier of French Indo-China, the Thai Cabinet met in secret deliberation today and the Thai "Blood Party," a patriotic organization, called a public rally for tomorrow to give voice to "the national desire."

A Thai delegation already has flown to Saigon to negotiate an armistice pending settlement of the border dispute with the French colony under Japanese mediation.

The Bangkok press unanimously accused the French of "insincerity and treachery" in continuing the fighting, which was to have stopped by agreement yesterday morning. Influential dailies urged Thailand to carry forward her military operations.

French Officer Promoted

VICHY, France, Jan. 29 (AP)—Captain Berenger, commander of a French squadron that fought the Thai fleet on Jan. 17 in the Gulf of Siam, was promoted today to the rank of rear admiral for his "feats of war."

Two Thai warships were reported sunk and another damaged in the battle.

JAPANESE DENIAL

Hanoi, French Indo-China, Thursday, Jan. 30.—(AP)—Japanese officials denied today that troops now at Haiduong, 35 miles north of here, intended to occupy that town permanently. Three thousand troops which arrived there last week were said to be replacements for garrisons which Indo-China has permitted the Japanese. The barracks at Haiphong, where the Japanese have been granted permission to land a "limited" number of troops, were full, it was explained.

The committee is headed by Henry du Moulin, high in the councils of Petain. It includes farmers, publicity experts, industrialists, Deputies, workers, professors and writers. One of the group is the aviator-writer, Antoine de Saint-Exupery.

Mme. Schiaparelli Regrets Incident

VICHY, Jan. 29 (A. P.).—Mme. Elsa Schiaparelli, fashion designer, said today that the confiscation by British authorities at Bermuda of vitamin units she was carrying to France was "merely an administrative error on the part of one official." She said she regretted "the incident has been made an issue."

A tin containing 10,000 units of vitamin A and 3,000 units of vitamin B, intended as an American gift to the Friends Service Committee in Paris, was confiscated from Mme. Schiaparelli on January 6 at Hamilton. The Colonial Secretary's office announced on January 13 that the units had been released for shipment to unoccupied France.

Fifth Column Activity Is Outlawed In Cuba

Decree Dissolves Organizations With International Connections Engaged In Propaganda

Havana, Jan. 29 (AP)—Fifth-column activity and anti-democratic manifestations were formally outlawed in Cuba by a drastic decree signed tonight by President Fulgencio Batista.

The decree outlaws and dissolves all organizations with international connections engaging in propaganda against Cuba; forbids, except in the case of embassies and consulates, the use of flags and insignia contrary to American democratic policies; prohibits all anthems and characteristic salutes of totalitarian regimes; prohibits, without censorship, the use of mails, telegraph and radio for totalitarian propaganda; nullifies all permits to use firearms issued prior to this date, and provides for deportation of foreigners engaged in anti-democratic activities.

It was understood the decree would be enforced immediately to dissolve the Spanish Falangist group here and would lead to the outlawing of the Communist party in Cuba.

TROOPS LAND AT BASE

U. S. Commander Calls On Newfoundland Officials.

St. Johns, Newfoundland, Jan. 29 (A. P.).—The United States troop transport Edmond B. Alexander, bearing soldiers who will man the defense base under construction here, eased through the narrow channel into St. Johns harbor today and was moored at her special berth.

The site for the base, which will include facilities for land, air and sea forces, was leased by Great Britain to the United States. The Edmond B. Alexander, 21,000-ton former German liner, will be used as a floating barracks for the troops until living quarters are completed ashore.

Col. Maurice Welty, United States garrison commander, called on Gov. Sir Humphrey Walwyn, representative of King George and commander-in-chief of Newfoundland's armed forces, and other officials.

Entrance of the Edmond B. Alexander into the harbor had been delayed four days because of bad weather.

Bombed Craft Maneuvered To Keep Wind Ahead—Freighter Shekatika Reported Sunk

New York, Jan. 29 (AP)—The New York Maritime Register said today that the 5,458-ton British freighter Shekatika, built in 1936, had been torpedoed and sunk off the Irish coast. The crew was reported saved.

The refrigerated British meat ship Beacon Grange, 10,119 tons, was reported to have been hit directly by two bombs which set her stern afire. By maneuvering to keep the wind ahead of the ship the crew beached the vessel in England and subdued the flames after six days, saving the cargo in the fore holds.

Retired Marine Major Says Japan To Attack British Singapore Base

Los Angeles, Jan. 29 (AP)—Major Evans Fordyce Carlson, U. S. M. C. (retired), veteran of eight year's service in China, predicted today that Japan would attack Great Britain's Singapore naval base within ninety days, coincident with Germany's expected assault upon England.

After his retirement, Major Carlson spent many months traveling through China, including Japanese-occupied territory, and three months with the Eighth Chinese Route army.

"Last September China was very low," he said, "low in morale, food and supplies. But then came a $100,000,000 loan from the United States and the situation changed overnight. What China needs now are trained executives and technicians and equipment of all sorts."

'HANFSTAENGL JR.' IN ARMY

Harvard Man, Son of Ex-Nazi, Enlists in American Forces

CAMBRIDGE, Mass., Jan. 29 (AP)—Egon Hanfstaengl, 19, Harvard sophomore and son of a former Nazi official, disclosed tonight that he had enlisted in the United States Army.

His father, Ernst Franz Hanfstaengl, broke with Adolf Hitler before the start of the war and fled to England, where he was interned when hostilities started.

Young Hanfstaengl, who said he had been receiving letters from his father from "somewhere in Canada," told newsmen that he "hoped his enlistment would be an example for other Germans in America to find out for certain which side they are on."

The Harvard student was born in this country and is a citizen. His mother was the former Helen Niemeyer of Elmhurst, L. I.

Austrian Doctor Loses American Citizenship For Aid To Graf Spee

Sacramento, Cal., Jan. 29 (AP)—The citizenship of Dr. Herman Frederick Erben, a native of Austria, was revoked today at the request of a United States Attorney who said his previous activities included service aboard the supply ship for the ill-fated German cruiser, Graf Spee.

Federal Judge Martin I. Welsh upheld the charge of Frank J. Hennessy, United States District Attorney, that Dr. Erben in his application for naturalization and petition for citizenship "made false statements concerning material facts relating to absences from the United States subsequent to his original entry March 10, 1924."

Dr. Erben came to this country first on an invitation from the Rockefeller Foundation for research purposes.

Hennessy, in his brief, stated Dr. Erben's activities varied from a surgeon with the International Brigade in a hospital in Madrid, Spain, to medical officer aboard the supply ship of the Graf Spee.

AXIS WITHDRAWS FUNDS FROM U. S.

Fear of Having American Cash 'Frozen' Cited For Action by Germany, Italy

WASHINGTON, Jan. 29 (AP)—Fear of having their American funds "frozen," the Treasury said today, caused Germany to withdraw $2,393,000 and Italy $8,727,000 from the United States in October.

The Treasury commented that the withdrawals "apparently were activated by expectation of new exchange control orders."

For several months, rumors have been heard that the administration might freeze the funds of all nations as it has those of France and other German-occupied countries. More recently, this step has been reported authoritatively to be under consideration in connection with "economic defense" moves which might be coordinated under a new agency.

The Axis powers derived the funds that they withdrew largely from the sale of $3,297,000 worth of American securities. The rest was taken out of bank accounts.

This left Germany $9,054,000 and Italy $19,381,000 of short-term assets—bank accounts or other assets quickly convertible into cash. No statement was made on any long term assets they had. Nor was data available on withdrawals since October, since the Treasury publishes international capital movement figures only after three months.

England, France, Holland, Canada and Latin America also withdrew funds from the United States during October but these were offset by Switzerland's adding $12,329,000 to its funds here.

U. S. Asks Corporations to Drop Pro-Axis Aids in Latin America

'House Cleaning' of Business Personnel Aims to Stop Help to Germany; Ban Is Sought on Trans-Shipment of Exports Originating Here

By The Associated Press

WASHINGTON, Jan. 29.—The United States government, it was learned today, has instituted an aggressive drive to have American firms "house clean" their Latin-American branches of all anti-American or pro-Axis personnel.

Convinced by confidential reports of widespread subversive activities in most of the twenty American republics, the State Department and other vitally interested government agencies are applying "diplomatic pressure" to enlist the help of export industries in combating the situation.

The objects of the "house cleaning" fall into two general classes:

1. Employees or agents of United States oil, steel, automobile, electrical supply and other firms in Latin America who are considered potential fifth columnists or who have engaged in anti-American or pro-Axis propaganda and other activities, often financed by money derived from their American connections.

2. Firms or individuals in South and Central American nations who sell or tranship materials obtained from the United States to the Axis powers or any other foreign country that would be unable to obtain the supplies direct from the United States because of export restrictions. (Latin-American countries are able to obtain such supplies because hemisphere nations are specifically exempt from virtually all export embargoes.)

The "house cleaning" campaign, it was learned, already has brought about the discharge of a number of agents and employees suspected of hostile allegiance and operations.

Other American firms are now investigating their personnel in Latin America as a prelude to what was called "de-Germanizing" the staffs. Those ousted will be replaced either by employees from the United States or loyal citizens of the American republic in which the branches are located.

Firms which violate President Roosevelt's embargo proclamations by shipping war materials to areas outside those for which they have licenses may be denied future licenses, it was understood.

The State Department, it was learned, has compiled a list of individuals and firms in the twenty coutries, who are "suspect" either of anti-American or pro-Axis propaganda and activities, or of supplying American materials to the Axis powers.

From Mexico alone, it was understood, the American Embassy and Consulates forwarded a list of approximately 300 individuals and firms, including several against whom there were direct charges of pro-Axis activities.

The individual cases are under investigation and are being discussed with the home offices of the United States firms concerned. Much of the material and many of the firm names involved were secured in a four-month Pan-American survey by investigators for Nelson Rockefeller's Commercial and Cultural Relations Office. Highlights of the survey included the charges that:

Some United States firms were being duped by anti-American employees in branch offices who used profits and advertising appropriations for anti-American propaganda in newspapers and radio.

Agencies for United States products were in the hands of firms and individuals "known to support objectives contrary to the best interests of the American republics."

Many commercial representatives use their offices as "centers for the distribution of anti-American literature and propaganda."

Axis Threat in Mediterranean Declared Designed to Encourage Italian People

By DEWITT MACKENZIE.

There is no reason to look with undue suspicion at the Fascist disclosure that Italy and Germany are extending their economic and military co-operation in preparation for an effort to drive the British from the Mediterranean by assaults in Africa and against Greece—all this being preliminary to an attempted invasion of England itself.

This information about the hand-in-glove closeness of the Axis partners is intended more for the consumption of the people of Italy than for the outside world. It is a further indication that Rome is pretty feverish and that Dr. Hitler is trying to keep the temperature down.

So far as the military threat goes, Britain should welcome that. The chief weapon which Hitler can bring into operation is air power, and this will tend to weaken his aerial offensive against England. That is a dangerous experiment, for it will give the Britons a chance to get set for the projected Nazi invasion. It will be strange if Hitler goes very far in drawing on the resources of his western front.

The Axis partners likely will stage offensives in the Mediterranean, but they must certainly do so with the knowledge that so far as Italy's African empire is concerned, they are trying to close the barn door after the horse has escaped. What is left of Marshal Graziani's once great Libyan army is incapable of a serious offensive even if it is rescued.

Air Power Insufficient.

Air power alone can't do Graziani much good at this late stage. For that matter, nothing has happened thus far in the war to demonstrate that warplanes have any mysterious power over surface warships, and British naval experts claim they have little fear that the Axis can smash a hole in the British blockade which has cut Italy's African colonies off from supplies and re-enforcements.

The sensational drive of a Free French camel corps from Chad across the burning desert into southwestern Libya to capture the strategic oasis of Fezzan from the Fascists is a sensational contribution to the African warfare. It adds to Graziani's worries. However, to my mind the moral effect of this operation far exceeds the military value.

As regards Albania, I think the Greeks may encounter some hard knocks when the spring comes, unless the British are able to re-enforce them heavily.

Of even more importance than the military operations is the presence in Italy of the German economic expert, Dr. Karl Clodius. It is said that Germany, instead of getting supplies from Italy, is to ship essentials of many kinds in an effort to bolster Italy's serious economic position.

This situation, and the serious threat to Britain's supplies through the German submarine campaign, emphasize that resources rather than sheer military might are likely to win this war in the long run.

Communiques

British

CAIRO, Egypt, Jan. 29 (AP)—Royal Air Force headquarters issued this communiqué today:

During the night of Jan. 27-28 bombers of the Royal Air Force carried out a heavy raid on the Capo di Chino Airdrome [at Naples]. Bombs fell on a large building, setting it on fire, and other fires were started on the airdrome.

The central railway junction and marshalling yard at Naples were also attacked, fires and a violent explosion being caused between the station and the junction.

On the same night Catania Airdrome was raided, bombs bursting on the main runway and among buildings on the south side of the airdrome. Fires were caused and one aircraft on the ground was burnt out.

Comiso also was visited. The bombing there started fires among buildings, followed by six violent explosions which were seen by our aircraft raiding Catania.

In Libya yesterday air activity was mainly confined to protective fighter patrols for our advancing troops and ground strafing of the retreating enemy between Derna and Barce.

On the Martuba landing ground eleven S-79s [Italian planes] were found abandoned and in unserviceable condition. Three enemy fighters were discovered near by, also damaged by our earlier bombing and machine-gunning of the airdrome.

In Albania fighter aircraft on patrol in the Klisura area encountered a number of enemy aircraft and several were damaged.

An important railway bridge and railway junction west of Cheren, Eritrea, were successively attacked. General air support was given to our troops in their offensive in the Agordat area.

Aircraft of the South African Air Force on Jan. 27 carried out raids in the Moyale area [on the Kenya-Ethiopian frontier] and many high-explosive and incendiary bombs were dropped. The result was not fully observed, owing to weather conditions.

Numerous reconnaissance flights were made on all fronts. From all operations our aircraft returned safely.

In the communiqué of Jan. 27 it was stated that one of our fighter aircraft operating in Libya was missing. It is now known the pilot of this aircraft made a successful descent and was subsequently found with only minor injuries.

NAIROBI, Kenya, Jan. 29 (AP)—The British headquarters here issued the following communiqué today:

Strong patrols have crossed the frontier into Italian Somaliland at many points. Slight opposition from Banda units [native levies] was encountered. The operations are continuing.

On Jan. 27 the South African Air Force bombed the Sololo area.

ATHENS, Jan. 29 (AP)—The British Royal Air Force issued this communiqué tonight:

A formation of our fighter aircraft, engaged in offensive patrol of Southern Albania yesterday, encountered a number of enemy bombers. Our aircraft at once attacked and shot down one enemy bomber in flames, while several others were damaged. Enemy positions were broken up and successfully deflected from their targets.

All our aircraft returned safely.

LONDON, Jan. 29 (AP)—The Air and Home Security Ministries issued this communiqué today:

During last night there was slight enemy activity off our west coast. No bombs have been reported.

Another communiqué issued by the two Ministries:

This morning an enemy aircraft dropped bombs at two points on the outskirts of London. Little damage was done and very few casualties were caused.

Greek

ATHENS, Jan. 29 (AP)—The Greek High Command issued this communiqué today:

Restricted successful activity [in Albania].

The Ministry of Home Security communiqué:

No raids on Greece today.

Italian

ROME, Jan. 29 (AP)—The Italian High Command issued the following communiqué today:

On the Greek front actions of a local character brought us into possession of an important position. We took prisoners and captured arms.

At several sectors of the front our air force effectively shared in the attack. Intensively and uninterruptedly it bombed enemy railway tracks and defense establishments, as well as troop concentrations.

Military objectives at Salonika and the railway line to Athens were also effectively bombed. In an air fight five enemy planes were shot down. Two of our airplanes did not return.

In Cyrenaica [in Libya] south of Derna an attack by an enemy armored division was beaten back by our troops. Noteworthy losses were inflicted on the enemy. Our air formations uninterruptedly bombed and fired at armored detachments and motor-car columns.

In East Africa an enemy attack was warded off in the Gallabat sector. On the Kenya front our troops repeatedly attacked the enemy, forcing him to retreat. Our air formations effectively bombed enemy motor-car columns and troop concentrations.

British airplanes undertook a raid on Asmara [in Eritrea] without causing damage. A British airplane that machine-gunned natives in a Somaliland village was shot down by our anti-aircraft fire.

German

BERLIN, Jan. 29 (AP)—Today's German High Command communiqué:

A submarine has sunk 11,500 tons of enemy shipping space.

In the course of armed reconnaissance flights individual combat planes successfully dropped incendiaries and explosives on war-vital objectives in London. Hits also were scored on rail facilities in an eastern English city.

In the sea region west of Ireland long-distance bombers sank an enemy merchantman of 4,600 tons and badly damaged two additional merchantmen.

Long-range army artillery again shelled war-essential objectives in Southeast England.

Enemy planes penetrated neither Reich territory nor occupied regions yesterday and last night.

One of our own planes is missing.

$2,500,000 Measure for Munitions Plants Introduced

MANILA, P. I., Jan. 30 (Thursday) (AP).—A bill proposing an initial appropriation of $2,500,000 for construction of munitions plants in the Philippine Islands was introduced in the National Assembly today.

The bill, first of a series of expected defense measures, would empower the Secretary of National Defense to construct and operate munitions plants. Its sponsors said that recent defeats of small nations, the methods of modern warfare and the possibility of a blockade of the Philippines should serve as warning to prepare "for war-time defense."

Hitler Says He'll Sink U.S. Ships Aiding Britain, Victory This Year; Lend-Lease Bill Reported to House by 17-8 Vote

Fuehrer 'Has No Quarrel With U. S.' but Will Stand No 'Interference'

Attempts to Divide Axis Called 'Idiotic'

Speech in Sportspalast to 18,000 Nazis Gives No Hint of His Next Move

By The Associated Press

BERLIN, Jan. 30.—Fuehrer Adolf Hitler declared today that American help would be of no avail to Great Britain and that every ship, "with or without convoy," approaching that country within range of German torpedoes would be attacked.

At a climactic point in a speech at the Berlin Sportspalast Hitler remarked that Britain hoped for help from abroad, "from America." There was a tense silence. He went on:

"I can only say this: We have, from the beginning, put every possibility into our calculations. That the German people have no quarrel with the American people is clear to everybody who does not want consciously to twist the facts and claim its opposite.

"Never yet has Germany sponsored interests on the American continent, except that it helped to fight for the liberty of that continent.

"If the states of that continent, however, now attempt possibly to interfere with the European conflict, then the war aims will change even faster. Then all Europe will rise in its own defense.

He Wants "No Deception"

"Let there be no deception about one fact: Whoever believes he can help England must at all events know one thing:

"Every ship, with or without convoy, that comes within range of our torpedo tubes will be torpedoed.

"We are engaged in a war which we did not desire. On the contrary, one cannot stretch his hand out to the other fellow more than we did. When, however, others are looking for a fight, and aim at extirpating the German nation, then they are in for a terrific surprise."

The immense Sportspalast, filled with 18,000 Nazi party men and government officials to celebrate the eighth anniversary of Hitler's accession to power, rumbled with applause and cheering at this juncture.

Hitler did not enlarge on the torpedoing threat, but the interpretation by authorized sources was that he thereby called world attention, with renewed emphasis, to Germany's officially declared blockade of Britain. The most authoritative interpretation was that the United States need be in no way concerned so long as American ships, in accordance with American neutrality legislation, remained outside British waters.

Scores U. S. Intercession

The general impression gained by Hitler's listeners from the references to America and the anti-British passages in the speech was that Hitler meant to imply that his determination to smash British power was not in the least influenced by anything the United States might or might not do.

There was not the slightest intimation of Germany's next military move, aside from the reference to the war on shipping and a reiteration that "there will be victory within the year."

The reference to Britain's desire for American help and an assertion, earlier in the speech, that certain Americans had held Germany guiltless of the events which led to the World War were Hitler's only mention of the United States. He asserted that Britain's fate was sealed and that help for her now would only have the effect of intensifying Germany's blows.

Hitler wore a field-gray military tunic such as he wore on the morning of Sept. 1, 1939, the day the war started. He said then that he would not discard it unless in death or victory. He appeared in an almost jolly mood and in the best of health. The speech was broadcast to Germany and to the rest of the world.

Says Britain Incites Others

Other assertions by Der Fuehrer today included these:

That Britain seeks to "incite nations against nations" to preserve "the pretense of being a world power."

That there are signs in other countries, such as Britain, that a "social crisis is beginning," and that at the end of the war a "social conscience" will start to assert itself in all the world.

That no nation can break Germany's position on the European continent; "where we are standing, nobody can crowd us off."

That Germany, "when the hour comes," will land a decisive blow against Britain; "wherever we can strike at England we shall strike."

That "idiotic" efforts to divide Germany and Italy had failed; "let no one invent revolutions in Milan, but look out so there will not be revolutions in their own countries."

That Germany is self-sufficient in food and raw materials; "there will be no hunger."

That Germany will open an intensified war on shipping in the spring; "U-boat warfare will begin this spring, and out opponent will realize there also that we haven't slept."

"The year 1941, Hitler said, "will be a historic year of the great new order for Europe."

Assails English Robbery

Hitler devoted twenty-five minutes to an attack n Britain, referring to what he called her "sham democracy" and creaation of an empire by 300 years of "robbery." He said the concentration camp was "an English, not a German, invention."

Other portions of the speech were devoted to his customary attacks on the Versailles Treaty, and to the causes and eects of the World War, and a great portion to recounting the Nazi rise to power.

Hitler frequently made jokes, such as:

"An English statesman figured out . . . that in 1940 I made seven mistakes. . . . I made 724 mistakes, but my opponents made 4,385,000."

There was more laughing today than is usual when Hitler makes a speech.

The chief audience demonstration came when Hitler invited a manifestation of confidence in him. It was when he said an "idiotic effort" had been made by a British leader to separate the Italian people from Premier Benito Mussolini.

He said it was possible that "some lord" might try to "create a cleavage" between the German people and himself, but, he added, any one trying that would not understand the German people. Thereupon the thousands in the hall sprang to their feet, with arms outstretched in the Nazi salute, and shouted excitedly for several minutes.

HITLER WARNS U. S. AGAINST AIDING BRITAIN

Declares All Europe Will Rise In Defense If America Interferes

Asserts He Will Torpedo All Vessels Approaching British Waters

[By the Associated Press]

Berlin, Jan. 30—Adolf Hitler declared today that American help would be of no avail to Britain and that every ship "with or without convoy" approaching England within the range of German torpedoes would be attacked.

As to British hopes of help from America, he went on:

"I can only say this: We have from the beginning put every possibility into our calculations. That the German people have no quarrel with the American people is clear to everybody who doesn't want consciously to twist the facts and claim its opposite.

"Never yet has Germany sponsored interests on the American continent except that it helped to fight for the liberty of this continent.

"Will Rise In Own Defense"

"If the states of this continent, however, now attempt possibly to interfere with the European conflict, then the war aims will change even faster. Then all Europe will rise in its own defense.

"Let there be no deception about one fact: Whoever believes he can help England must at all events know one thing:

"Every ship, with or without convoy, that comes within range of our torpedo tubes will be torpedoed. We are engaged in a war which we didn't desire. On the contrary, one cannot stretch his hand out to the other fellow more often than we did. When, however, others are looking for a fight and aim at extirpating the German nation, then they are in for a terrific surprise."

Says He Sought Peace

"To England I stretched out my hand again and again. It was the cardinal point of my program to arrive at an understanding with the English people.

"There were no points at issue. There was merely one single point: The return of German colonies, and in that connection I said, 'We want to solve this by negotiation. Even time is no element.'

"For England these (colonies) have no purpose, for she has 40,000,000 square kilometers. What is she doing with them? Nothing whatever.

Assurances Of Wilson

"It is, however, the spirit of the old usurers not to want to yield up what they possess. I didn't demand anything that formerly belonged to Englishmen, but merely what they robbed from us in 1918 and 1919 in contradiction to solemn assurances of the American President, Wilson.

"Again and again I stretched out my hand to the Englishmen. Nevertheless everything was in vain. The reasons are quite clear to us: Germany's unification was a stumbling block.

"They hate our state, irrespective of how it is constituted, whether imperial or National Socialist, democratic or authoritarian.

"Secondly, above all they hate the social resurgence of this Reich. To the gentlemen on this side and the other side of the ocean I can say but one thing: The world of an awakening social conscience will at long last prove the most successful one. We have proofs for the fact that in other countries also cries in this realm are beginning to set in. . . .

U. S. Must Stay Away

This was authoritatively interpreted to mean that the United States need not be concerned so long as American ships, in accordance with American neutrality legislation, remained outside British waters.

The Sportspalast, filled with 18,000 Nazi party men and Government officials celebrating the eighth anniversary of Hitler's rise to power, roared with applause.

Wearing the field gray tunic which he wore on the day war broke out and pledged not to discard save in death or victory, Hitler appeared in amiable mood and in the best of health.

He declared that Britain was finished. He ridiculed suggestions that Italy might be falling away from Germany, and asserted that neither by blockade nor by any other possibility "even remotely thinkable" could Germany's victory be denied.

"Our Bill Will Be Paid"

"These gentlemen," he said challengingly of the British, "may rest convinced:

"Our bill is a total bill and it will be paid at the end of the war point by point, square kilometer by square kilometer!"

These were among his other assertions:

". . . I have rearmed, and that, too, mightily. The German people know it today, but they don't by any means know everything."

"To the gentlemen on this side and the other side of the ocean I can say but one thing—the world of an awakening social conscience will at long last prove the most successful one. We have proofs for the fact that in other countries, also, cries in this realm are beginning to set in."

"Chased Away"

" . . . England was chased away from the Continent. Now, I've read several times that the Englishmen have the intention somewhere to begin with a great offensive. I have but one wish, namely, that they please tell me that beforehand. I'll then have that region evacuated beforehand. I'd like very much to spare them the difficulty of landing."

Germany, Hitler went on, is "standing here on this Continent and wherever we stand nobody can ever force us out. We've created certain bases for ourselves, and when the hour comes we'll set out for decisive blows."

Speaks Of Duce's Failures

He spoke of "the few failures of our partner (Italy)," and said that if Englishmen thought they would achieve victory through those circumstances "then I fail to understand Englishmen."

He advised the British not to "put much stock in the Balkans as possible helpers, adding:

"Wherever England puts in an appearance we will attack her and we are strong enough to do so."

Hunger could not operate against the Germans, he said. ". . . German people will never starve. Rather the English will do so." Even in raw materials, he went on, the Reich had "provided everything."

Made 724 Mistakes

"Perhaps, finally, others are placing their hope in hunger. We knew from the beginning that, of course, there can be no surplus in wartime. But German people will never starve. Rather the English will do so.

"Lack of raw material?

"There, too, we have provided everything. Hence, the four years' plan. . . . Then they say: Yes, but the mistakes that they are making—good God, who doesn't make mistakes? I read this morning that an English mister figured out by some method—I don't know where he got it from—that during 1940 I made seven mistakes.

"Seven mistakes!

"The man was in error. I afterward figured it out. I didn't make seven mistakes, but 724. But I figured further: And my opponents made 4,385,000 mistakes.

"We will get along with our mistakes all right. . . . And if my opponents do as many clever things as in the past year, then I'm satisfied also."

U-Boat War To Start Soon

Saying that Germany entered this year with "defense forces equipped as never before in German history," he added the challenge:

"At sea, U-boat warfare will begin this spring and our opponent will realize there also that we haven't slept. The Luftwaffe will likewise make its presentations. The entire armed forces will compel the decision. . . ."

The year, he went on, would be a "historic" one for the "great new order for Europe," with a program "opening up the world to all, eliminating preferential rights for individuals and breaking the tyranny of certain peoples.

"Finally, this year will help really to render secure the foundations for understanding of peoples and thereby for reconciliation of nations.

Recalls Prophecy

"I don't want to avoid referring to what I already said on September 1, 1939, in the German Reichstag, namely that, if the rest of the world really should be forced into a general war by Jewry, the whole of Jewdom will have ceased playing a role in Europe.

"Let them laugh about that today if they wish. The coming months and years will prove that here too I prophesied correctly.

"Already you see our racial creed is finding roots in one people after another.

Calls For War On Jews

"I am hoping that even those peoples who today are lined up in enmity against us will one day recognize their greater domestic enemy and that they will then yet enter into one front side by side with us—a front of Aryan humanity against international Jewish exploitation and corruption of peoples.

"The past year was a year of the greatest successes, albeit also of great sacrifices.

"Even though the number of dead and wounded is small compared with previous wars, nevertheless the sacrifice is heavy for the individuals involved.

"Our entire affection, love and care belong to those who had to bring this sacrifice. They suffered what generations before had to sacrifice. The nation has worked in all fields of human endeavor, especially the German frau has rendered service as ersatz for man.

Asks God's Help

"A wonderful community spirit has seized our people. That this spirit may during the coming year remain with us in all its vigor shall be the wish of this day. That we want to work for this community spirit shall be our pledge.

". . . That God may not desert us in the struggle of the coming year shall be our faith and hope.

"Deutschland! Seig Heil!

GERMANS TO TORPEDO SHIPS HELPING ENEMY

Fuehrer Prepared to Meet Assistance of England—Avers He Has No Quarrel With the American People.

Berlin, Jan. 30 (A. P.).—Adolf Hitler said today that "Germany has no quarrel with the American people," but he declared that if "non-European Powers try to intervene here, Europe will rise. Every ship that comes within the reach of our torpedoes will be torpedoed."

JAN 31 1941

"We are now fully prepared for whatever may happen in relation with America's help," he said.

These words drew the longest applause of his entire one hour and thirty-two-minute speech in Berlin's great Sportspalast, where Nazi party men and the Government celebrated the eighth anniversary of Hitler's rise to power.

"Germany never attacked the American continent," Hitler said. Then followed, to a tumult of cheering, his reference to non-European intervention and the torpedoing.

The official Berlin radio's English version of this passage was:

"That the German people have nothing against the United States people is clear to every one who does not intentionally twist the truth. Germany has never represented (claimed?) interests on the American continent, except that Germans fought for liberty on that continent. If now the States on that continent should try intervening perhaps in the European conflict then aims will change all the quicker. Then Europe will defend itself.

"He who thinks he can assist England must, above all, know one thing: Every vessel, regardless of whether with or without escort, which comes before our torpedo tubes will be torpedoed!"

Promises Victory Within the Year.

For his immediate hearers and the entire nation at its radios he predicted "victory within the year."

"The period lying behind us has already practically decided this war. France has been defeated and England crowded off the Continent," he said, in the shadow of banners saying, "Victory Is With Our Colors."

"We are standing on this continent and where we are standing nobody can crowd us off. When the hour comes, we will land a decisive blow."

Turning to the British he asked:

"What are they hoping for? For America.

"I can only say we have calculated every possibility. There will be victory within the year. Germany has no quarrel with the American people. . . .

JAN 31 1941

Says Germany Is Full of Fight.

"This time you do not find a weakened Germany, but one that is highly mobilized and full of fight.

"As regards Italy, let no one invent revolutions in Milan, but let them rather look out so there will not be revolutions in their own countries.

He scoffed at the notion of "defections in the Axis" and the imminence of defeat for Italy.

"When Italy sent squadrons of airplanes to help us in the war against England, they said that Germany was in need of help," he said. "And now that German airplanes are in the south of Italy they say that Germany is taking over Italy.

"All I can say is this: we are going to hit at England wherever we can hit her. Let them realize that this is not a small fracas; it is a total war which will never end until total destruction of England has been accomplished."

"Maybe they have hopes in relation to the Balkans," he said. "It doesn't matter. I repeat, we shall attack England wherever there is an opportunity, and we are more than strong enough to do it."

He assured the nation that Germany would have no lack of food or raw materials.

"It is England that has to be afraid of that danger," he declared.

Referring to reports he said he had heard of an English offensive "somewhere," the Fuehrer said: "I wish they would let me know in advance, so I could make the landing of the expeditionary force a little easy for them.

"Whatever they plan and whatever they have in mind is not going to make the slightest bit of difference to us."

Out to Settle Scores.

"Whenever we can strike at England we shall strike. Neither here nor in Italy can anybody scare anybody with his inventions. We will settle scores, square mile for square mile, the Duce and I are neither Jews nor monsters.

"Wherever England puts in an appearance we will attack her and we are strong enough to do so. Perhaps they are hoping for other States they can drag in. I do not know, but you who know me will realize that every contingency has, in a matter-of-fact manner, been calculated. Perhaps they are counting on hunger. We have organized our life rationally. There never will be hunger and no lack of raw materials.

Draws Laugh from Crowd.

"They undertook an idiotic attempt to bring a cleavage between the Duce and the Italian people. Another lord might come and try to separate me from the German people; others have tried that and failed. . . .

"This generation is full of fight. Blow for blow we will return and if the world were full of devils we would succeed anyway.

"One English statesman figures out I have made seven mistakes in the past year. I check up and found I had made 724 mistakes, but my enemies 4,385,000."

There was laughter at this juncture.

"We are entering upon a new year with the defense force equipped as never before in German history. We are working ceaselessly on improvements. This spring the U-boat fight will begin. It will show we have not been asleep. The air force will properly continue to introduce itself. Our production continues. What others are planning is already a reality with us.

"This will be the historical year of the new order in Europe. Tyranny will be abolished. The world will be open to all. The foundations for real understanding of peoples will be laid.

"My prediction of September, 1939, will come true: That the Jews' role is ended. People after people are sharing our racial conceptions. There will be a front of Aryan humanity against international Jewish profiteers.

"Let our prayer be that God grant us victory this year."

With those words the man on whom the late President Paul von Hindenburg conferred the chancellorship just eight years ago today finished his address.

Attacks Britain.

Hitler devoted twenty-five minutes of his speech to an attack on the British Empire, which he called the product of 300 years of robbery and Britain herself the most "anti-social" State in the world—"a paradise for a few, continuous misery for the masses."

Britain, he said, might have to come to Germany one day "to study our social program." He asserted there is "evidence that in other countries, such as England, a social crisis is beginning." He called British democracy "mere sham" and said the British dare not "institute a plebiscite among her own peoples to determine whether they desire to belong to the empire."

Then he added:

"Concentration camps were an English, not a German, invention."

He declared that "The lie is constantly spread around the world that the authoritarian States want to conquer the world," but actually, he said, "Our enemies are the ones who have the lust of conquest."

He charged Britain with wishing to maintain supremacy over Germany, Italy and Japan.

"To keep up the pretence of being a world Power," he said, "Britain must now incite nations against nations outside Europe, for within Europe she no longer has anything to say."

Hitler in boasting of the armed power of Germany said that the Reich had "armed and armed and armed" and that his opponents did not realize "that they haven't even seen anything of our strength."

"One should never tell everything one has up one's sleeve," he added.

"I wonder what they would say if they really knew how well armed we are, how many things we still have that are a thousand times as strong as the strength we have already displayed."

Speaks of Roosevelt.

Addressing the German nation, he said:

"Eight years ago nobody was ready to believe in the ultimate survival of our Government."

Conditions at the time, he said, were the direct result of the way the last world war was concluded.

"In discussing the details I don't want to go into personalities," he said. "The American President, Roosevelt, himself stated that the conditions in Germany could not be placed at the door of the German people themselves."

He described what he termed Germany's "natural desires . . . to be with the outside world," and added that Germany's desire "to import and to export was as natural as that which motivated England in expanding her empire."

He said the "type of government . . . responsible for Britain's imperialism certainly . . . is not a democratic Government, when we consider the multitudes of people who are languishing in prison in India, Egypt and elsewhere."

Hitler said it was "important for us to emphasize again and again the injustice of a small nation like England ruling over so large a portion of the earth's surface."

British rule, he said, had been perpetuated "not on the basis of an ideal but solely as a result of British power-politics," and that "Great Britain was unable to tolerate the co-existence of Germany."

Refers to Woodrow Wilson.

Since 1871, Hitler said, England had been "trying to break (Germany) up."

"It is here that the reasons must be found for the last world war."

Germany had not been conquered since 1871 "by force of arms," he went on, blaming the loss of the war in 1918 on "faults and mistakes . . . by a group of leaders within the German Reich."

The "blind faith which the German people felt for the other democracies of the world," he said, was the "last reason for her downfall at that time."

"Promise after promise was made to Germany," he declared, "beginning with high-sounding statements of the then American President, Wilson. And none of them has been kept."

Hitler declared he had been acting as a result of the mandate given to him by the German nation as a whole. He termed the rise of national socialism a peaceful accomplishment "without bloodshed—without breaking a single window," and added that everything he had done was with one aim—that of "bringing about the destruction and cancellation of the Treaty of Versailles."

Assails Democracies.

Efforts to achieve this purpose through peaceful means, he said, were unsuccessful.

"The democracies, and principally England, tried to talk us out of it. But they used persuasion such as might have been successful with the men who ruled Germany prior to the days of National Socialism. The big mistake they made, however, was the fact that these methods could not be successful with the new Germany."

He came to the realization, he said, that "conference tables could never accomplish what we had to accomplish, and thus I simply decided to leave the conference tables and to proceed alone."

He declared that when he noticed that people "like Churchill, Eden and others" were again bent on the "same old policy of disorganization and destruction, I decided that armament would be the only answer to them."

Then, he asserted, "they didn't believe that I meant business. They were simply foolish. And when a man is a fool, he believes that every one else is foolish too."

Interprets Ship Warning.

In reference to Hitler's statement on torpedoing ships, authorized Nazi spokesmen held that he intended to give a renewed warning that any ship entering the blockaded zones, well-known to all the navies of the world and about which all neutral Powers had been advised, would be torpedoed, irrespective of nationality. As the American neutrality law now stands, American ships are not permitted to enter the danger zones and this warning naturally creates no new situation so far as America is concerned, they added.

Hitler was appointed Chancellor of Germany by President Paul von Hindenburg on the morning of January 30, 1933, after his Nazi party had captured 229 seats in the Reichstag, enough to insure that no Cabinet could be formed without his cooperation. He immediately dissolved the Reichstag and won a majority in the new elections, whereupon the Reichstag granted him dictatorial powers.

Then, on the death of President von Hindenburg on August 2, 1934, Hitler took over the presidency also and assumed the titles of Fuehrer and Reichskanzler (Leader and Chancellor).

The customary peace-time flag displays and columns of marching men were dispensed with today as they were last year, because of the war. On the 1940 anniversary, Hitler spoke from the sportspalast, telling his party that France and England would get a taste of the fight they had asked for.

British See Little Value In Hitler's Speech

London, Jan. 30 (A. P.).—Informed British quarters described Adolf Hitler's speech today as one "full of generalities and a lot of petty points in comparison with recent powerful utterances of President Roosevelt."

They said that they regarded the German leader's words as merely a pep talk along familiar lines, "but one offering no solid ground of comfort for the German people."

JAN 31 194

land and Belgium broke down after a few days. England was chased away from the continent.

Now I've read several times that the Englishmen have the intention somewhere to begin with a great offensive. I've but one wish, namely, that they please tell me that beforehand. I'll then have that region evacuated beforehand. I'd like very much to spare them the difficulty of landing.

What, after all, are the Englishmen expecting? We're standing here on this continent, and where we are standing nobody can crowd us off. We've created certain bases for ourselves, and when the hour comes we'll set out for decisive blows.

That we have improved our time these gentlemen will take cognizance of historically during the present year. What are they hoping for? For help from elsewhere? From America?

"No Quarrel With Americans"

I can only say this: We have from the beginning put every possibility into our calculations. That the German people have no quarrel with the American people is clear to everybody who doesn't want consciously to twist the facts and claim its opposite.

Never yet has Germany sponsored interests on the American continent except that it helped to fight for the liberty of that continent.

If he states of that continent, however, now attempt possibly to interfere with the European conflict, then the war aims (Zielsetzung) will change even faster. Then all Europe will rise in its own defense.

Let there be no deception about one fact: Whoever believes he can help England must at all events know one thing:

Every ship, with or without convoy, that comes within range of our torpedo tubes will be torpedoed.

We're engaged in a war which we did not desire. On the contrary, one cannot stretch his hand out to the other fellow oftener than we did.

When, however, others are looking for a fight and aim at extirpating the German nation, then they are in for a terrific surprise.

This time they do not encounter a fatigued Germany as in the World War.

If, however, other hopes prevail, I can only say I do not understand them.

Italian Collapse Denied

If the assertion is made that Italy will fall off, let no one invent revolutions in Milan, but look out so there will be no revolutions in their own quarters.

The relationship of Germany and Italy is looked upon by these states in the way they are accustomed to look upon their own relationships.

With the democracies, if one helps the other it always demands something for that favor. For example, strategic bases, which are then occupied by them.

When Italian flying squadrons were stationed on the Atlantic coast, English newspapers opined that Italy was meddling with our methods of enducting the war and that she had demanded a base for the future on that Atlantic in return therefor. Now that German soldiers are in Sicily, they claim that Germany likely will seize Sicily.

The gentlemen may rest assured: With tricks like that one cannot move a single person either in Germany or Italy. They are showing above all that these other gentlemen do not comprehend the meaning of this war, which we do, however, comprehend: Wherever we can strike at England, we shall strike.

"Our Bill Is a Total Bill"

If, however, they now already see proof of their victory in the few failures of our partner, then I fail to understand Englishmen Hitherto they have always seen nothing but proof of their own great victory in their own failures.

These gentlemen may rest convinced: Our bill is a total bill, and it will be paid at the end of the war point by point, square kilometer by square kilometer.

And there is another point of which they may be convinced, the Duce and I, we, too, are neither Jews nor jobbers. If we two clasp hands, that's a handclasp of men who possess honor. That, I hope, will become clear to these gentlemen during the course of this year.

Perhaps they are also hoping for the Balkans. I wouldn't put much stock in that either, for one thing is certain: Wherever England puts in an appearance, we will attack her, and we are strong enough to do so.

Perhaps they are placing their hopes in other states whom they might yet drag in. I can give but one assurance: Every possibility that is even remotely thinkable we have placed in our calculations. At the end stands our victory.

"Germans Will Never Starve"

Perhaps, finally, others are placing their hope in hunger. We knew from the beginning that, of course, there can be no surplus in war time. But the German people will never starve. Rather, the English will do so.

Lack of raw material? There, too, we have provided for everything. Hence the Four-Year Plan.

Then they say: Yes, but the mistakes that they are making—good God, who doesn't make mistakes? I read this morning that an English statesman figured out by some method, I don't know where he got it from, that during 1940 I made seven mistakes.

Seven mistakes!!

The man was in error. I afterward figured it out. I didn't make seven mistakes, but 724; but I figured further: And my opponents made 4,385,000 mistakes.

We will get along with our mistakes all right . . . and if my opponents do as many clever things as in the last year, then I'm satisfied also.

Stronger Than Ever

And so we are entering upon the ne wyear with defense forces equipped as never before in German history.

On land, the number of divisions has been increased mightily. The tremendous and unique experience of war has been taken advantage of by leaders and men. Much work has been done and is continuing ceaselessly. Our equipment has been improved. Our opponents will see how it has been improved.

At sea, U-boat warfare will begin this spring, and our opponent will realize there also that we haven't slept.

The Luftwaffe will likewise make its presentations.

The entire armed forces will compel the decision.

Our production has increased mightily in all realms. What others are planning has become reality with us. The German people stand prepared behind their leadership, trustful in its armed force and ready to bear whatever fate happens to decree.

The year 1941 will—of this I am convinced—be a historic year of the great new order for Europe.

The program can be none other than opening up the world to all, eliminating preferential rights for individuals and breaking the tryranny of certain peoples.

Foresees Reconciliation

Finally, this year will help really to render secure the foundations for understanding of peoples and thereby for reconciliation of nations.

I don't want to avoid referring to what I already said on Sept. 1, 1939, in the German Reichstag, namely, that if the rest of the world really should be forced into a general war by Jewry, the whole of Jewdom will have ceased playing a role in Europe.

Let them laugh about that today if they wish. The coming months and years will prove that here, too, I prophesied correctly.

Already you see our racial creed is finding roots in one people after another.

I am hoping that even those peoples who today are lined up in enmity against us will one day recognize their greater domestic enemy, and that they will then yet enter into one front side by side with us—a front of an Aryan humanity against international Jewish exploitation and corruption of peoples.

Forcing German People To Throw Off Nazis Declared War's Aim

Britain And America Will Fight To Bitter End, Says BBC Broadcast

[By the Associated Press]

New York, Jan. 30—The British Broadcasting Corporation in a German-language broadcast tonight gave the "British people's answer" to Adolf Hitler's speech by predicting that the "free people of Britain and America will fight this war to the bitter end," to force the German people "to throw off the Nazis."

The broadcast heard here by CBS said:

"The Führer now is no longer the protector of western culture against Communism, he no longer is the understanding German patriot who once asserted that when the shackles of the Versailles treaty have been broken, Germany will be satisfied. . . .

Echo Hitler's Declaration

"He said . . . National Socialism has to destroy Great Britain or National Socialism will be destroyed by Great Britain.

"We English completely conform with this declaration, and we believe that the American people also will agree with Hitler in this point. The world cannot remain split into two strong groups, one democratic and the other group authoritarian. . . . And today, Hitler, under the frantic applause of his party followers, declared war on all the free peoples of the world in the name of Germany, Italy and Japan. . . .

Prophesy Nazidom's Collapse

"But there is one thing more to say. . . . Look across the Atlantic and watch how the free peoples in the New World are stirring. Look around in Europe and look how the oppressed peoples stir and how they prepare for that day which will liberate them from Hitler's robber order.

"Hitler is right; this war will end with collapse and a revolution on one side or the other, and we in Great Britain will make our prophsey:

"The free peoples of Great Britain and of America will fight this war to the bitter end, and, to use Hitler's own words, the German people will do all that which is necessary for its own interests, which is that it will be forced to throw off the Nazis."

Must End Nazi Scourge Forever, Says Newall

Ottawa, Jan. 30 (AP)—Sir Cyril Newall, Governor-General-designate of New Zealand and marshal of the Royal Air Force, said today "unless we can get as quickly as possible everything that can be spared from this continent our triumph over Germany may be delayed."

"When the day of triumph comes," he said, "I sincerely trust we won't do the same as we did after the last war.

Too Lenient Last Time, He Says

"Then we were inclined to be too lenient and too forgiving. This time we must put our heel down and put an end to this Nazi scourge for all time."

Sir Cyril said he was convinced that Germany seriously attempted to invade Britain last September but failed because of the R. A. F. mastery of the air.

"If he (Germany) tries again he will get another hiding . . . the British populace is ready to fight him from door to door if necessary."

Hitler's 8th Anniversary; Has Reached Many Goals

JOHN H. MARTIN

Promises Victory to Germany This Year. Health Apparently Excellent

JAN 31 1941

NEW YORK (AP)—Hitler has promised his people complete victory over their foes this year—his ninth in power.

The leader who transformed a defeated, humiliated nation into a mighty fighting machine now dominating most of Europe has made many promises since he became Germany's Chancellor eight years ago today.

The record shows he has kept many of them.

The earliest and best source for National Socialist objectives, Hitler's own autobiography, "Mein Kampf" (My Struggle), gave this general scheme:

Germany was to grow strong at home by elimination of all Jewish elements and Communism, by abolition of parliament, other divergent-thought groups; by uniting all German people through a racial superiority doctrine; by increasing the birth rate, and finally, the construction of a formidable military machine.

Was to Destroy France

France, a "mortal enemy" of the German people, was to be destroyed. Russia was pictured as a state originally organized by German genius ruling over an inferior Slavic people, but held under heel by Bolshevist Jews. Russia was to be saved by the German sword, argued the book, thus necessitating eastward expansion.

Austria was to be assimilated. British friendship was to be maintained. Prospective allies were seen in Britain and Italy.

Nearly all these goals have been achieved by Hitler's armies, and embellished, too. Half of France and half of Poland are occupied by Germany, all of Austria, Czechoslovakia, Denmark, Norway, Holland, Belgium and Luxembourg. Nazi troops also occupy Rumania.

Britain Remains a Snag

An ally was gained in Mussolini's Italy, but British friendship not only was lost but that empire remains the snag to Axis victory.

Late editions of "Mein Kampf" have eased the passages concerning Russia since Germany signed the non-aggresion treaty with the Soviets to pave the way for the invasion and division of Poland.

The drive against the Jews began soon after the Nazis took over power. Communism was wiped out or driven underground. The Nazis had a party purge in June, 1934, which took an acknowledged toll of 70 lives.

German secret rearmament, especially in airplanes, began early in the Nazi regime. Soon conscription was decreed, in violation of the Versailles Treaty.

Molded Childrens' Ideas

In addition to the train of emigres leaving Germany because of Jewish or part-Jewish birth, there went also those whose ideas clashed with the Nazi creed. Unswerving loyalty to the Fuehrer was demanded of every German.

The Hitler youth movement, by which the Nazis thus far have molded the ideas of one whole generation of German children, now numbers 7,500,000. All are taught Nazi conceptions of history, all trained to unquestioning obedience to der Fuehrer.

Hitler made of the workaday shovel a shining symbol in the organization of his labor battalions who cleared swamp lands, built highways across the Reich and worked the farm lands for a few cents a day. The roads were ready when the army was. They made easy the march into Holland, Belgium, Poland and Austria.

Concentration Camps

Concentration camps came to Germany with the rise of National Socialism. There could be no split allegiances, hence friction with the church.

But the rise of Hitlerism primarily was a measure of Germany's post-war disillusionment. The people had been broken by years of privation under the World War blockade. There were 2,000,000 dead. The Kaiser's soldiers came home to face street fighting, Allied occupation of their land, reparations, the loss of their colonies, inflation and collapse.

With the trappings of mysticism and the tactics of an old-time revivalist, Hitler raked these wounds and roused a nation. His theme was "Germany reborn."

France Debated, Didn't Move

France and Britain had plenty of post-war troubles. Their conservative, anti-Communist elements shared Germany's professed hatred of Russia and manifested sympathy with Germany's desire to shelter all German minorities within the Reich.

Germany's first foreign policy triumph was the Anglo-German naval pact in 1935 which astounded France. In effect, Britain with one hand granted Germany a legal fleet one-third as large as her own and with the other condemned Germany for creating an illegal army. The pact aided in shattering the "united front" formed at Stresa by Britain, France and Italy.

Germany next marched her troops into the demilitarized Rhineland. France debated but didn't move.

Move Into Austria

Hitler, who loves music, was attending the Bayreuth music festival in 1934 when Vienna Nazis killed little Chancellor Dollfuss of Austria in an unsuccessful revolt.

Four years later the Nazi Army moved into Austria.

The Sudetenland, via the Munich conference, next fell to Germany, and Prime Minister Chamberlain of Britain thought he had "peace in our time."

The remainder of Czechoslovakia was taken over the following Spring. Next, "atrocities," charged to Poles, on the German minority in Poland swept onto the front pages of the controlled German press, and Poland was invaded and conquered in September, 1939.

France's army nibbled at the strong German defense wall in the west, and Britain began moving troops to France as the major war settled into a Winter stalemate.

With the Spring the German armies overran Scandinavia, the Low Countries and France. France's army, considered by many the finest in Europe, collapsed, and Britain became a besieged island.

In his fight for a new world order Hitler has characterized himself as a champion of the "have-not" nations, and predicted a victory of "German labor" over "world gold."

As for the long-expected invasion attempt on Britain, he has told Britain and his own people to "be patient," that the "final blow" would be delivered at the right moment.

Since the defeat of France, he has extended his military and economic pact with Italy to include Japan. Article three of this treaty provides that any new nation entering either the European or Asiatic conflicts must meet the combined might of all three. Germany denied the pact is aimed at the United States.

Despite this pact, however, neither Germany nor Japan has entered the war against Greece, whose army has thrown Italian troops back into Albania.

Only recently, with Italy's plight in Italian Libya growing worse under the westward offensive of the British, Germany sent air aid to Italian Mediterranean bases.

The health of Hitler, a constant concern of Britain, apparently is excellent. He has thrived as his nation has grown.

He has put on weight, grown thicker in the waist and the neck. He eats almost no meat, has fruit for breakfast and vegetables for the other two meals. He does not smoke and until recently never was known to drink anything save tea or water. Now he indulges occasionally in an especially brewed light 1½ per cent beer.

George Says Hitler Tried To Still Nazi Fear of U.S.

Speech Pictured as an Effort to Offset Aid-Britain Bill

WASHINGTON, Jan. 30 (AP).—Senator Walter F. George, Democrat, of Georgia, chairman of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee, said he thought Fuehrer Adolf Hitler's speech today at Berlin "undoubtedly was made to reassure the German people that the pending lease-lend bill was not unexpected by the German government. Its obvious purpose was to bring reassurance to the German people."

Senator George called the speech also a warning that Germany would treat as ships of a belligerent any American vessels sent to Great Britain with supplies. The neutrality act at present bans such use of American shipping, but possible use of American naval units to convoy supply ships is a point of issue in the continuing discussions of the aid-to-Britain bill.

Senator Claude Pepper, Democrat, of Florida, a member of the Foreign Relations Committee, said: "That speech will gain support for our bill. It is not news to us that Mr. Hitler is against us. However, American foreign policy is made in accordance with our interests—not Mr. Hitler's interests."

Another member of the committee, Senator Frederick Van Nuys, Democrat, of Indiana, asserted that Hitler's statement was "a perfectly natural one" for Hitler and would "not affect our situation in the least."

HOUSE CLEARING WAY FOR AID BILL DEBATE

Committee Recommends Measure's Passage —Leaders Expect Quick Approval —Martin to Oppose It.

Washington, Jan. 30 (A. P.).—The administration's British-aid bill was approved by the House Foreign Affairs Committee today after efforts to write in a financial limit had been beaten.

The committee's action cleared the way for House debate on the measure, beginning probably on Monday.

The vote on final approval was taken quickly after the committee had defeated a proposal to place a $2,000,000,000 limit on transactions under the bill.

Representative Martin of Massachusetts, Republican leader in the House, announced that he would not support the legislation in its present form and that he considered the four amendments written in by the committee to be merely window dressing.

Republicans to Caucus.

He also said that Republican members of the House would hold a conference on the bill tomorrow. No canvass will be made of the Republicans as to how they will vote, he added, because it is not being made a partisan matter.

Describing his own position, Mr. Martin said:

"I wouldn't support the lease-lend bill as it came out of the committee. It's got to have more substantial amendments than it has.

"I wouldn't support a bill that would give aid to England, such as a $2,000,000,000 loan, without giving extraordinary powers to the President."

When the committee session broke up Chairman Bloom announced that the bill was reported out for House action with four major amendments adopted yesterday, but he declined to disclose the vote by which the committee gave its approval, saying, "You'll have to ask individual members about that."

Others reported that the vote was 17 to 8.

Mr. Bloom disclosed that in the last few minutes of its meeting the committee had rejected six amendments, ranging from an entirely new bill based on loans of money to Great Britain to a proposal to strike out a section authorizing the Secretaries of War and Navy to acquire arms and ammunition in a foreign country.

The four amendments which were approved by the committee would:

Limit the operation of the bill to the period ending June 30, 1943.

Require the President to consult with army and navy chiefs before disposing of any war material produced specifically for the defense of the United States.

Require the President to report to Congress at least every ninety days on transactions under the bill, except that he would not have to disclose information he considered incompatible with the public interest.

Provide specifically that nothing in the bill grants any power for the President to order naval vessels into service to escort cargo convoys.

Hopes Country Is Pleased.

Commenting on the amendments, Mr. Bloom said:

"The action of the committee in reporting out the bill with these amendments meets the objections that were made and should satisfy the public that a majority of the committee wanted to be fair in presenting a bill that the country could be satisfied with."

The convoy amendment, the chairman continued, could not be made any more explicit.

"We just expressed the thought of the committee that this bill will not give the President the right to use convoys if he doesn't already have it," he explained.

Committee leaders will ask the rules committee tomorrow for legislative right of way for the measure, Mr. Bloom said. House leaders planned to call it up for debate Monday and they predicted a final vote by the night of February 7. Speaker Rayburn said he saw no reason why the House should alter the bill and he expressed belief all debate could be completed in five days.

Of amendments rejected by the committee this morning Mr. Bloom said that two were offered by Representatives Fish, Republican, of New York, and Mundt, Republican, of South Dakota, each of whom tried to substitute a new British-aid bill based on outright loans to Great Britain. Mr. Mundt and Representative Eaton, Republican, of New Jersey, reported that each sought to put a $2,000,000,000 limit on transactions under the bill.

out of war rather than to get us into it.

"It is also the judgment of your committee that the bill provides the most efficient way of supplying all possible material aid to those countries which are resisting aggression.

"It accomplishes this objective in a manner which is best for our national defense and wholly consistent with the constitution and international law."

Broad Authority

The pending lease-lend measure would have give President Roosevelt broad authority to have military supplies manufactured here or elsewhere, with the Treasury, subject to later congressional appropriations footing the bill. The President then, in his discretion, could sell, lease, lend or "otherwise dispose of" the products to nations' whose defense he considered essential to the defense of the United States.

The committee's report was a lengthy document, first of all urging the House to approve the bill and then proceding to a minute analysis of the measure and of the amendments which the committee, with the approval of administration leaders, attached to it.

Calling the provisions empowering the President to lend or otherwise dispose of war materials the "most important" single clause of the bill, the committee went on to say:

"It authorizes the disposition by this government to any nation whose defense is vital to the defence of the United States of any defense article upon those terms and conditions which the President deems satisfactory.

Military Advice

"As to defense articles which are not specifically manufactured or procured on behalf of such a foreign government, the disposition can only be made after consultation with the chief of naval operations and Commander in Chief of the Army and Navy."

At another point, in dealing with the definitions of "defense articles" the committee said the term includes "not only all arms, munitions, and implements of war, but also other commodities such as cotton, wheat, and all other agricultural products which may be necessary for defense purposes." It added:

"This term does not include men nor does any other provision of the bill deal with the utilization of our armed forces."

Turning to a provision empowering the President to provide repair facilities for vessels of a belligerent democracy and for outfitting such vessels, the committee noted—a point which has received much discussion—that the bill does not "in any way enlarge or modify the powers of the government to requisition . . . foreign ships interned in our ports."

Laws Suspended

The committee noted that the bill employs the phrase "notwithstanding the provisions of any other law" in numerous places, and said that conflicting laws were not repealed by that language but "suspended" to make it possible to carry out the purpose of the measure effectively. This had reference particularly to its use in connection with the President's powers to dispose of war materials.

"Also," the report continued, "the present bill, by empowering the President to authorize the secretary of the navy, for example, to build or procure torpedo boats specifically for a belligerent whose defense is vital to our defense and to release them for export, would prevail over Section 3 of the act of June 15, 1917 (40 stat. 222), which now makes it unlawful to send out of the United States a vessel of war built for a belligerent.

Wage Hour Laws Stand

"Similarly, the present bill as amended, would prevail over the act of June 28, 1892, as amended (27 stat. 321; 45 stat. 988) which authorizes the secretary of war in his discretion, if he deems it to be in the public good, to lease, for a period not exceeding five years and revokable at any time, such property of the United States under his control as may not at the time be required for public use. Under the terms of the present bill, the President, after consultation with the chief of staff of the army, could authorize the secretary of war to lease property, over which the secretary of war has control, which would not be revocable at the option of the secretary of war.

"The expression 'notwithstanding the provisions of any other law' when read together with the whole of the bill, as amended, does not in any way modify, repeal, or change such legislation as the Walsh-Healey act, the wages and hours law, the eight-hour law, the Wagner act, or other similar provisions of domestic law because there is no inconsistency between them and this bill. These laws continue in full force and effect and are in no way affected by this bill. Insofar as the powers granted by subsection (1) of section 3 are concerned, giving the Secretary of War, the Secretary of the Navy, or the head of any other department or agency, when authorized by the President, the power to manufacture or procure defense articles, no discretion is given to waive domestic legislation of the kind mentioned.

Credits Not Authorized

"The expression 'notwithstanding the provisions of any other law' does not repeal the Johnson act. By its specific terms and by its spirit, that act does not apply to this government or to a public corporation created by special authorization of Congress or to a public corporation controlled by the government. The Johnson act only prohibits the extensions of credit by individuals or private corporations to a foreign country which has defaulted on its debt to the United States.

This bill does not in any way authorize the extension of credits by private individuals to any foreign country which has defaulted on its debt to the United States; it simply sets up a method for supplying material aid, in the interests of our national defense, on a straight government-to-government basis.

Neutrality Law Stands

"Nor does this bill repeal the provisions of the neutrality act of 1939, which by its terms is applicable to private persons and corporations and not to the government itself."

Taking up the question of repayment for or replacement of the military supplies that would be loaned or leased to Great Britain under the measure, the committee said the measure empowered the President to require payment in "rubber, tin, the transfer of defense plants owned (by Great Britain) in this country or any other direct or indirect benefit to" the United States.

"The compelling need for this provision," it added, "is the fact that Britain, for example, only has enough assets which can be converted into dollars in both this country and abroad to pay for orders already placed in this country. According to the testimony of the Secretary of the Treasury, Britain does not have available assets convertible into dollars which can be used to place further orders or to acquire further defense articles in this country.

Powers Flexible

"The flexibility granted by this provision to the chief executive, who is, by the constitution, the Commander in Chief of the Army and Navy, is intended to enable him to act quickly and decisively in the best interests of this nation.

"It is conceivable that our national security may be materially furthered by supplying certain defending countries, such as Britain, for example, with certain war equipment without repayment in kind or property or any benefit other than that Britain actually uses it in the defense of the British Isles, thereby furthering our own national defense.

"Where the interests of our national defense are consistent with requiring payment for defense articles, for example, in tin, rubber, or other property, the Chief Executive of this government undoubtedly will make the best bargain possible for this country.

"Under this bill, this government would be empowered to transfer to Britain, for example, certain defense articles for use in the defense of the British Isles resulting in a benefit to the United States in that if Britain is successful in her gallant defense of our civilization our defense expenditures are likely to be reduced, or if Britain's ability to hold out is merely enhanced, we thus obtain valuable time adequately to prepare.

"In the opinion of your committee, this would be one of the kinds of benefits contemplated by the bill. However, this power is discretionary and not mandatory. In addition to such benefit, the government, of course, can require payment in kind or property."

Abstract on Committee Report on Lease-Lend Plan

By The Associated Press

An abstract of the majority report of the House foreign affairs committee on the lease-lend bill follows:

"In the considered opinion of your committee the bill as amended squarely meets these objectives of our national policy. It is the considered view of your committee, insofar as human minds can evaluate the situation, that the probable effect of the bill will be to keep us out of the war and to keep us from getting into it.

"In the judgment of your committee the bill as amended will be the most effective means of keeping us out of war.

"The bill as amended will be the most efficient way of supplying all possible material aid to those countries which are resisting aggression.

"It accomplishes this objective in a manner which is best for our national defense and wholly consistent with the constitution and international law.

Military Advice

"As to defense articles which are not specifically manufactured or procured on behalf of such a foreign government, the disposition can only be made after consultation with the chief of naval operations or the chief of staff of the army, or both.

"This provision, in a manner wholly consistent with our constitution, gives the flexibility necessary to meet the fast changing situation in the war abroad in order that our own national defense interests may be served best. It places this power of negotiation and disposition in the President, the Chief Executive with a lightning defense" against lightning war by passing the British-aid bill.

Says Nazis Fear to Declare War.

It was under questioning by Senator Johnson, Republican, of California, that Mr. Gerard said he favored a declaration of war against Germany. But he added that such a declaration would not actually be necessary if the President received the powers provided in the British-aid measure.

The United States, he said, "already has committed enough unneutral acts to warrant Germany in declaring war on us. But they don't do it because they are afraid of the effect on their own people."

"I think the American people, like the British, would rather die standing and free than kneeling in appeasement before the Nazis," Mr. Gerard declared.

"We are faced by what they call a blitz war—a lighting war—and this bill provides a lightning defense. This is no time for parley and meetings. We can

Gerard for War if Bill Loses

Tells Senators Nazis Will Seize Mexico and Loose Blitz Attack if Britain Falls.

Washington, Jan. 30 (A. P.).—James W. Gerard, former Ambassador to Germany, announcing that he favored a declaration of war against Germany, predicted today that the Nazis would seize Mexico if Great Britain were defeated.

Supporting the administration's British-aid bill, Mr. Gerard, who served as Ambassador to Germany from 1913 to 1917, told the Senate Foreign Relations Committee that if Germany is victorious "we will meet the first shock of her attack in the countries to the south of us."

Germany and Italy now are sending vast sums to Mexico and other Latin American countries, he said, adding that if Germany wins the war in Europe, Mexico will be seized by the Nazis.

Mr. Gerard said he could see no hope for a negotiated peace in the war and he urged that Congress furnish this country trust our President with these powers—powers which he may have to exercise at a moment's notice if the world and our civilization is to be saved."

Bitter Times Forecast.

Mr. Gerard testified at a brief open session of the Senate committee. Secretary of War Stimson was called to appear at a closed session later in the day to give a detailed statement on the amount and kind of American aid already furnished to Great Britain.

Mr. Gerard forecast bitter times ahead.

"If Britain loses," he said, "the Nazis may take the British fleet, threatening the life of thousands of hostages or the destruction of all towns. In any event, they can build a great fleet with their resources, added to those of Belgium, Holland and France. The German fleet before the last war almost equalled the British.

"Give the power to our President. Do not let the world think that he has not our entire support. Unity is the watchword as a Blitz defense to a Blitz war."

Senator Johnson asserted that even if no actual declaration of war was made the course Mr. Gerard advocated would mean open warfare.

"It would be actual war and they would declare it, wouldn't they?" Mr. Johnson demanded.

"That depends on what the President does under this bill," the former envoy replied.

"You don't know what the President will do under the bill, do you?" Senator Johnson shot back.

"Certainly not," Mr. Gerard replied.

As to Attack in South.

He said that if Germany defeated Great Britain, Latin American countries would "face attack immediately."

"They couldn't resist without our help, could they?" asked Senator Barkley.

Mr. Gerard said he thought they could not and he expressed the belief the United States would join in the conflict at once.

Many Germans, loyal to their Fatherland, inhabit South American countries, Mr. Gerard continued, and Germany would use these to aid in penetrating Latin America. After the war Germany would hold South American countries "in an iron grip," he said.

"Then," he remarked, "we would have to live by taking in each other's washing."

Warns That Reich Hates Us.

"Don't think," the witness continued, "that if Germany wins she is going to send a ship over here bearing garlands and flowers. They hate us.

"Remember, too, that this man Hitler is an extraordinary man—a man with a wonderful sense of timing and he has the people behind him.

30.24— 7251 , 30.24—7251

"It's wishful thinking to believe that a revolution can succeed in either Germany or Italy. The only place it could come is in the army, and do you think a successful army, occupying enemy territory, will revolt?"

"We are up against an awful problem," Mr. Gerard asserted, "and only a bill such as this, giving the President immediate powers, can save Britain and save the world."

Dr. Niebuhr Praises Bill.

Dr. Reinhold Niebuhr of the Union Theological Seminary, New York, told the committee at its afternoon session that he considered the administration's bill a "statesmanlike" measure which combined the two objectives of keeping out of war and yet helping the democracies fight totalitarianism.

"Is it your belief that this bill will keep us out of war?" asked Senator Johnson.

"I should hope so," the witness replied.

"Even if it didn't have the effect you would be for it wouldn't you?" Mr. Johnson asked. Dr. Niebuhr said that he would.

He said in response to further questioning that he thought there might be "worse terrors" than war.

Senator Clark, Democrat, of Missouri, asked Dr. Niebuhr, who had testified that he was a minister of the Evangelical Reformed Church, whether he would have any objection to bearing arms if the United States went to war.

"I don't believe in clerical exemptions," the witness replied.

Mr. Clark then brought out through questioning that Dr. Niebuhr was 25 years old at the time of the world war and had not served in the United States military forces.

Dr. Niebuhr said the Nazis had "achieved something so close to pure evil" that it seemed imperative that the United States should make every effort short of war to prevent a Nazi victory.

"Were the Nazis to control Europe for only a decade," he said, "they would destroy some nations beyond all hope of reconstruction."

$16,000,000,000 DEBT INCREASE GETS APPROVAL

Ways and Means Group Gives Tentative Backing to Plan.

SERVICES MUST CURB BUYING

Morgenthau Says Factories Can't Produce All Equipment They Desire.

Washington, Jan. 30 (A. P.).—Chairman Doughton, Democrat, of North Carolina, announced today that the House Ways and Means Committee had agreed tentatively to recommend legislation increasing the public debt limit from $49,000,000,000 to $65,000,000,000 and making most future Government securities subject to Federal taxation.

Production Limits Spending.

Secretary Morgenthau said today that army and navy plans for great purchases were overly optimistic and that a $65,000,000,000 public debt limit should cover all needs of the next fiscal year, regardless of requirements of the aid-to-Britain program.

"If Congress passes the lease-lending bill, and I am sure they will," he said at a press conference, "whatever orders are placed by the army and navy, the productive capacity of the country is such that they will not be able to draw on the Treasury in excess of the President's program whatever the amount of British aid turns out to be."

He explained that he had several reasons for believing the proposed debt limit, which he advocated in a House hearing yesterday, would be sufficient.

These included:

1. "I think the army and navy estimates of expenditures are optimistic. Their eyes are bigger than their stomachs."

2. If the army and navy do spend as much as they expect, the President has estimated the debt on June 30, 1942, will be about $58,000,000,000, and with a $65,000,000,000 limit, "we will have a $7,000,000,000 cushion to take care of the British."

3. The productive capacity of the country is limited so that it might be impossible for both the army and navy and the British to buy all they want to buy, and one or the other might have to reduce its requirements accordingly.

The Secretary declined flatly to give any indication of how large the British aid program might be.

No Pressure Selling.

Mr. Morgenthau ordered a "no high pressure" rule for the Treasury's forthcoming campaign to borrow several billion dollars to finance the defense program.

Indicating that he wanted no repetition of world war scorn of persons who fail to buy Government securities, the Secretary read to reporters a Treasury memorandum which said in part:

"In bringing these offerings to public attention, we contemplate no campaign of high pressure salesmanship or propaganda.

"We have made a careful study of the liberty loan and war savings campaigns and the present British savings movement. I hope that we can profit from their experience."

He indicated, further, that no quick decision on methods would be made, since he said he was leaving next week for a week's rest with friends in Arizona.

AID TO BRITAIN HELD U. S. STEP OF LEAST PERIL

Under Secretary Replies To Japanese Charges On Far East Policy

Declares Defense Line In Pacific Fixed With Eye To Others' Actions

[By the Associated Press]

New York, Jan. 30—Questioning whether a negotiated peace now would "be worth the paper on which it was written," Sumner Welles, Under Secretary of State, declared tonight than an Axis victory in Europe would lead to economic and political attacks on South America and then a "physical invasion" of that area.

He described this as a more imminent danger than an "immediate attack directed against continental United States" and asserted that "the menace to our security through the passage of the control of the high seas to unfriendly hands is to my mind overwhelmingly apparent."

Addresses N. Y. U. Alumni

In an address to the Alumni Association of the New York University School of Law, Welles declared that this nation must be prepared in its own self-defense to render Great Britain, China and Greece "all necessary assistance which America can produce."

"The provisions of the legislation now pending in the Congress (the lease-lend measure), if enacted into law, would greatly facilitate that task," he said.

Answers Accusations

Welles answered accusations of Japanese leaders that the United States is "pursuing an aggressive policy in the Far East" and that "we have placed our line of defense in the western Pacific."

Denying that the United States was seeking to extend "its hegemony or jurisdiction in the Pacific area," Welles said "those lines of defense are fixed solely by what we estimate is required, in the light of such policies and acts by others, to insure the inviolability and the safety of our territory."

Cites Invaded Countries

With reference to a negotiated peace in Europe, Welles cited countries invaded by Germany in violation, he said, of "binding assurances." Then he asked:

"Under conditions in Europe today could American public opinion conceivably favor a negotiation for peace which would sanction the continued enslavement of the nations now occupied by German military forces?

"But, more than that, the negotiation of any lasting peace must be predicated upon the sincere desire of all the parties to such a settlement to abide by the agreements reached and to carry out the pledges which they make."

Sees "Probable Sequence"

Taking up "arguments that no successful crossing of the Atlantic by a hostile air power or a hostile invading force could be undertaken so long as we are properly prepared to defend ourselves," Welles said:

"Those who take this point of view seem to envision ultimate danger to the United States in the event of a victory by the Axis powers solely in the nature of an immediate attack directed against continental United States.

"They overlook, I believe, a more probable and a more logical sequence of events."

Export To Europe

He pointed out that other American republics depend "to the extent of one-half of their total exports upon the European market," and continued:

"Under the German barter system, with all of its complicated and attendant political manipulation, the Axis powers would inevitably attempt to impose a commercial and financial stranglehold upon these neighbors of ours and would at the same time commence immediately to undertake that same policy of commercial concessions which has been carried out in so many instances in their dealings with the smaller nations of Europe.

Then Invasion, He Says

"If, as a result of this combination of pressure and penetration, the successful conquerors of other continents were enabled to find receptive elements in the populations of some of the South American nations, it would not be long before subversive movements on a large scale would be undertaken.

"Should these prove successful, physical invasion would soon follow."

The United States, he said, would "undertake to join our neighbors in the defense of the Americas," but he added that this would be difficult "until and unless our own sea power had reached the full total now planned or under construction and were thus prepared to guard two oceans."

Urges All Aid

Welles concurred with President Roosevelt and Secretary Hull that "every course which the United States may today pursue is necessarily fraught with danger."

But he declared the course least fraught with danger and "most likely to make it possible for the American people to stay out of war" was to increase production of armaments and make them available on an ever-increasing scale to Great Britain, China and Greece.

REVEALS GREETING TO LORD HALIFAX

State Department Publishes Roosevelt's Words.

Washington, Jan. 30 (A. P.).—President Roosevelt has assured Viscount Halifax, the new British Ambassador, of "our firm determination to continue on an ever-increasing scale of assistance to Great Britain and to make available munitions and supplies now flowing from the rapidly expanding industrial facilities of the United States."

This assurance was given in an exchange of remarks between the President and the Ambassador in connection with the presentation of his letters of credence. Lord Halifax, in taking up his duties, told the President that American assistance to Great Britain was assuming ever-increasing importance.

"That assistance has already been invaluable," said Lord Halifax, "and its continuance, as your nation speedily develops its unrivaled industrial strength, will assuredly secure the triumph of the cause on which you no less than we are resolved."

The exchange of remarks, which took place when President Roosevelt greeted the Ambassador on his arrival at Annapolis last Friday, was made public today by the State Department.

DERNA IS TAKEN AS BRITISH PUSH ON FOR BENGASI

Axis Planes Raid Suez Canal Area, but No Damage Is Reported.

WAVELL SPEEDS UP DRIVE

Army of the Nile Wants to Rout Italians Before Nazi Aid Is on Large Scale.

Cairo, Jan. 30 (A. P.).—British and Australian troops entered Derna, Libya, today after overcoming the fiercest resistance yet shown by the Italians in all the desert campaign. Less than 10,000 Fascists were in the town, but they had fought stubbornly for four days.

Derna's fall had been announced by the British command without detail.

"The capture of Derna was completed this morning," the GHQ communique said briefly in announcing the fall of this stronghold, 175 miles west of the Egyptian frontier.

Meanwhile, word reached here that Axis warplanes raided the Suez Canal area this morning, but British reports said the bombs caused no casualties and no damage.

With British mechanized forces already operating beyond Derna, the next objective of Gen. Sir Archibald P. Wavell's desert fighters appeared to be Bengasi, 150 miles farther west of Derna. The fall of Derna followed British capture of Bardia on January 5 and Tobruk on January 22.

On the Eritrean front, today's communique said the concentration of British forces in the Agordat-Barentu sector was "proceeding smoothly in spite of distances and physical difficulties, which have been overcome."

In Italian Somaliland, farther to the south, operations were reported progressing in in support of advance which have penetrated deep into that Italian colony.

Intense patrol activity, it added, is continuing east of Metemma on the Ethiopian front.

Stiff Resistance at Derna.

All of these operations were declared by British sources here to be under way in the hope of cracking Italy's colonial empire wide open before German intervention in the Middle East can materialize on a large scale.

Edward Kennedy, Associated Press correspondent who witnessed the opening of British operations before Derna, said the Imperial forces ran into stiff Italian opposition. The Fascists made a determined effort to delay the British outside the town, he said, to give them time to throw up a defensive line some miles to the west of Derna.

In a daylong battle against heavy Italian artillery fire, Australian infantry made a three-mile advance to a point within few miles of the port. By sundown one battery of Italian guns, which had given the most trouble, were said to have been silenced, while fire from other batteries gradually diminished.

While Derna had no great ring of fortifications like Tobruk and Bardia and no large garrison, three forts on ridges dominating the approach to the town bristled with big guns which poured thousands of shells into the ranks of the attackers.

Italian prisoners captured west of Tobruk were quoted as saying that about 1,000 Nazi airmen and technicians have already arrived in Libya, and military spokesmen, linking this information with reports of German infiltrations into Italy and recent Nazi aerial activities in the Mediterranean, predicted that a joint Axis offensive aimed at smashing British naval mastery of the Mediterranean was imminent.

In their drive westward from Tobruk the British are reported to have captured 10,000 additional prisoners, bringing the total taken so far in the North African campaign to nearly 130,000. Columns of Italian troops leaving the areas west of Tobruk in motor trucks were said to have been trapped by the swift-moving Australian forces before they could reach Derna.

Anzac Setback Reported.

Rome, Jan. 30 (A. P.).—The Italians have repulsed the British forces in East Africa, and at one point have reoccupied a position previously captured by an Australian contingent, the Italian High Command announced today.

Intense activity of Italian artillery, patrols and motorized units was reported in eastern Libya, where the fighting has been centered in the area west of Tobruk. Italian planes were said to be active in support of the Fascist ground forces there.

The High Command acknowledged that British air raids on several Italian air bases in East Africa had caused slight damage, but reported one raider shot down. On the southern front in East Africa, the communique declared, the Italians attacked "in three different sectors and put the enemy columns to flight," while prisoners and arms were reported taken by the Italian forces that dislodged the Australian unit on the northern front.

Derna Taken By British in 4-Day Battle

10,000 Italians Beaten in Libya; Greeks Repel Albania Counter-Attack

By The Associated Press

CAIRO, Jan. 30.—The third major Italian bastion to fall in Libya—Derna, 175 miles west of the Egyptian frontier—was occupied today by British imperial troops after four days of the bitterest resistance offered by the Fascists in the whole of the North African campaign.

Derna's fall was announced by the British Middle East command in a single casual sentence: "The capture of Derna was completed this morning."

The town had been defended by fewer than 10,000 Italians, British sources in Cairo disclosed, but they fought with a violence encountered nowhere else in Gen. Sir Archibald P. Wavell's thrust to the west.

While the British consolidated their position in Derna, mechanized units struck on toward Bengasi, 150 miles westward across Cyrenaica.

Authoritative reports received by Some of the forces defending Derna were believed to have been able toward the end to withdraw westward, but of this there was no positive confirmation.

The battle for Derna was no set piece and did not follow the pattern of previous British victories in the Libyan campaign. The town never was wholly surrounded, and from the first day of the general attack, when British armored forces racing from Tobruk reached Derna's outskirts, the Italians resisted strongly.

100,000 Italian Troops

The initial clash of tanks went in British favor, but the Italians retired behind ridges outside Derna and continuously and heavily shelled the British main forces. These artillery duels were followed by two days of heavy ground fighting.

Exactly how many men Marshal Rodolfo Graziani, the Italian commander in North Africa, might have to resist the British advance was not known here, but informants said there could be scarcely more than 100,000 first-line Italian troops left in Libya. Of these roughly half are understood to be stationed around Tripoli watching French Tunisia, whose commander in chief, Gen. Maxime Weygand, is assumed here not to have said his last word. The remaining half stand somewhere in the Libyan coastal area into which the British now are pushing on.

On the fronts in East Africa the British reported their forces in Italian Eritrea were concentrating behind some 4,000 Italians who had retreated in the Agordat-Barentu sector and were believed preparing to make a stand.

British operations were declared to be progressing "in all sectors" in Italian Somaliland. On the Ethiopian front intense patrol activity east of Metemma was reported.

The Egyptian Minister of the Interior acknowledged that Axis

Suez Area Bombed

The Egyptian Minister of the Interior acknowledged that Axis planes had bombed the area of the Suez Canal today, but declared there were no casualties and no damage.

Derna's fall was announced by the British command in a single casual sentence—"the capture of Derna was completed this morning."

It was Edward Kennedy, an Associated Press war correspondent, who reported in delayed dispatches from the front that the British had run into the strongest opposition yet seen in the campaign.

First "Real Counter-Attacks"

For the first time in the entire Libyan campaign, Kennedy wrote from the front, the Italians had tried to launch "real counter-attacks" which, though speedily crushed, indicated that the Fascists had only now recovered from the shock of British successes beginning at Sidi Barrani, Egypt.

Fascist aircraft operated in some force, he said, and seemed to show "a new will to fight."

As a sidelight to the fighting, Kennedy reported that two Italian prisoners insisted that Gen. Annibale (Electric Whiskers) Bergonzoli, whom the British have called a fugitive, was in command of the defense of Derna and had been commissioned to organize a new line behind it in a final attempt to halt the British drive and save Bengasi.

Greeks Renew Their Advance

ATHENS, Jan. 30 (AP). — Greek troops, on the offensive again after beating off a week of Italian counter-attacks, were reported tonight to have wrested new positions from the Fascists in the Albanian mountains north of Klisura.

Military advices said the Greeks, who observed brief front-line memorial services for their dead leader, Premier Gen. John Metaxas, forced the Italians to abandon their own counter-thrusts and withdraw hastily to new positions.

For a week Italian Gen. Ugo Cavallero's forces were said to have stabbed at the Greek lines to feel out weak positions, and not only failed but disclosed weak points in their own defenses. In this time, the Greeks said, Italian casualties numbered twenty for every one of their own.

A government spokesman said four recent Italian counter-attacks were crushed by artillery and automatic rifle fire. At one point, he said, the Fascists left behind their dead, wounded, many prisoners and much war equipment. In two days the Greeks took 200 prisoners, he declared.

Greek airmen downed two Italian planes, and anti-aircraft batteries were credited with destroying two more.

One report reaching Athens said the Italian liner Rex had steamed into Trieste with a load of wounded from the Albanian front.

On the home front, the new government headed by Alexandros Korizis began functioning while the populace paid tribute to Gen. Metaxas, who died yesterday. Thousands stood for hours in the rain in front of Athens Cathedral to file past his bier. Public places will be closed during the funeral tomorrow, and the government forbade the broadcasting of music until after the services.

British Build Tobruk Base

Clear Away Mines and Sunken Ships

By LARRY ALLEN

ABOARD A BRITISH WARSHIP AT TOBRUK, Jan. 30 (AP).—To maintain the momentum of the British drive across Libya, the Royal Navy and Engineers are swiftly rehabilitating this captured port and are turning it into an advance supply base—more than 200 miles west of the nearest railhead, at Mersa Matruh.

Their first task after Tobruk fell Jan. 22 was the removal of Italian mines guarding the harbor. Next the British turned to clearing away 17 sunken Italian ships, which menaced transports coming in with supplies and moving out with thousands of Fascist prisoners.

Use of this harbor brings the British fleet 400 miles west from its big base at Alexandria.

Rome Reports Victorious Counter-Attack On Eritrea Front

[By the Associated Press]

Rome, Jan. 30—A united offensive against Britain which will make previous operations resemble "only preliminary episodes" was predicted by Fascist editorial spokesmen tonight as the high command reported victories by Italian troops counter-attacking in Eritrea.

Giovanni Ansaldo, editor of Foreign Minister Count Galeazzo Ciano's newspaper Telegrafo, in Leghorn, told the armed forces that Premier Mussolini and Adolf Hitler "would make the decisions soon for the attacks against the British."

Ansaldo's Threat

Speaking over the radio shortly before Hitler's promise of an Axis victory in 1941 was rebroadcast in Italy, Ansaldo indicated the new offensive would be timed to render United States help to Britain futile.

"The Italian and German peoples are well resolved not to let themselves give way to British capitalism, even if it appeals to the other side," Ansaldo said.

U. S. "Already A Belligerent"

The influential Resto Del Carlino, of Bologna, expressing the current Fascist view that the United States "already can be considered a belligerent," warned of graver complications "whenever the Roosevelt plan of increased aid to England is voted."

United States entrance into the conflict, the newspaper said, "will have no advantage for England."

British "Put In Flight"

British forces, including an Australian unit which was dislodged from a previously captured position, "were put to flight in Eritrea," the war communique said.

Prisoners and arms were reported taken in the attack on the Australians in the northern sector, while in the south the bulletin said British columns were routed in three places.

Plane Shot Down

"Our air formations intensively bombed enemy motorized units, troops and positions," the communique continued. One British plane was reported shot down in raids causing "slight damage" to Italian bases.

In Libya, the high command said, British forces were subjected to heavy artillery shelling west of Tobruk, "actively aided by our aviation."

[The communique did not mention specifically Derna, which the British officially announced they captured this morning.]

Bad weather was said to have hampered operations on the Greek front, where prisoners and arms were reported taken in large patrol actions.

Dover Balloon Barrage Raided

Nazis Make Heaviest Assault on That Target Since Summer—Wilhelmshaven Bombed.

London, Jan. 30 (A. P.).—German fighter planes slashed at the Dover balloon barrage today in the heaviest assault on that target since last summer, while other raiders bombed London and outlying districts of Great Britain in the most persistent daylight attacks of recent weeks. Several deaths were reported in the London area.

Some of the big silver bags over Dover were shot down by planes which attacked under cover of a thick fog and low-hanging clouds. Dover residents took to cover as the unseen raiders sent the balloons blazing down.

For half an hour the planes ranged over the "hell corner" of the Kent coast. Anti-aircraft and machine-gun batteries sent up a thundering barrage.

Three Alarms in London.

Three daylight alerts sounded in London and the Ministry of Home Security announced that some shops and houses in the capital were damaged but that casualties were few. Most of the raiders blasting at the inland points came singly. One German plane was shot down, the Government announced.

London's alarms all sounded by midafternoon and before the Government's statement was issued there were reports of several deaths in one suburb. The third all-clear sounded just before tonight's blackout time.

All of the crew of a German bomber were reported killed when the plane was brought down over Essex.

In another London area, shoppers threw themselves to the ground or took refuge in doorways as bombs fell. Shops and a school were damaged, but no one was reported killed there. A lone wolf raider bombed an East Midlands village and then, it was reported, machine-gunned the streets. That town, too, escaped with no fatalities.

Two children were reported killed by a fire bomb in the London area, and Exchange Telegraph, the British news agency, said that a German plane was shot down in flames this afternoon near St. Osyth, Essex. The police were said to have captured the pilot.

A low-flying raider machine-gunned another part of East Anglia, dropping two bombs which caused some damage; and the anti-aircraft batteries along the Kentish coast were kept busy firing at German planes coming across the strait.

Wilhelmshaven Raided Again.

The German naval base at Wilhelmshaven was attacked by British bombers during the night, an official announcement said today. Other targets in northwest Germany were also bombed and all the attacking planes returned safely, the communique added.

It was the first attack in several nights on Wilhelmshaven, which has hitherto been the target of more than forty raids. Hanover, railway and industrial center of northwest Germany, was assaulted last Monday night when the Royal Air Force resumed its attacks on supply centers of the Nazi war machine after a weather-enforced lull.

Last night London was raided by night for the first time in ten days. The alarm lasted for four hours, during which the assault was intermittent. The Government said a few persons were killed and others injured, and that most of the high explosive and incendiary bombs dropped fell in London and surrounding districts, though raiders were also reported over East Anglia, the west and north of England and central Scotland.

An officers' house adjoining a London hospital was hit, causing an undetermined number of casualties. One body was recovered and the hospital staff worked to free persons believed to have been trapped. On the other hand, several houses were said to have been demolished in a southeast town and in one northwest town machine-gun bullets sprayed the streets just as citizens ran for the shelters.

Meanwhile today, a dense fog blotted out the Strait of Dover. An easterly wind was blowing. The German long-range guns in France opened fire on Dover shortly before daybreak, but there was only a brief burst and no casualties were reported.

Numerous Persons Killed.

Berlin, Jan. 30 (A. P.).—Numerous civilians were killed and wounded when British war planes attacked two localities on the northwest coast of Germany during the night, the German High Command reported today, adding, however, that the damage was slight and limited exclusively to residential sections and a work camp. The areas raided were not specified.

Meanwhile, the communique reported, strong German combat squadrons carried out overnight attacks on war-vital objectives around London, raining explosives and fire bombs on the capital area. The Nazis also were said to have attacked industrial plants on the east coast and in central England, and to have bombed targets in southeast England in the course of armed reconnaisance.

Long-range German artillery shelled military targets on the English southeast coast, the communique added, and a German plane reported missing yesterday was said to have since returned to her base.

DNB, the official German news agency, reported that two German patrol boats a few nights ago destroyed three British speed boats which attempted a surprise attack off the German-occupied coast of France. DNB said that the German boats permitted the British to come close but at the last minute lifted anchors and moved out of the way of approaching torpedoes. They then pursued the British craft and destroyed them after a hot fight, the agency added.

Birmingham Raid Deaths Listed

LONDON, Jan. 30 (AP).—Several members of the staff of Birmingham University and some "unusually brilliant students" were killed by bombs which damaged university buildings during air raids, the annual report of Dr. R. E. Priestly, vice-chancellor, disclosed today. The dates of the raids were not given.

Bomb Strikes School In Midlands—R. A. F. Hammers Wilhelmshaven

[By the Associated Press]

London, Jan. 30—German bombers stabbed at London, Dover, the eastern Midlands and southeast England today with the heaviest daylight raids in weeks, shooting down some of the big bags in Dover's balloon barrage and causing an undetermined number of casualties.

Three alerts were sounded in the capital up to dusk. The Ministry of Home Security announced that some shops and houses were damaged. Officers' quarters adjoining a London hospital were struck and several persons were believed to have been buried in the wreckage. One body was recovered.

Bomber Crew Killed

All members of the crew of a German bomber were killed when the plane was shot down over Essex.

In one district a school was reported hit and in the east Midlands, Britons said, a low-flying raider machine-gunned a village street, with no reported casualties.

Royal Air Force bombers struck at objectives in northwestern Germany during the night, an official announcement said, with the big naval base at Wilhelmshaven bearing the brunt.

[The German high command said a number of civilians were killed in the British attacks, but added that damage was "slight."]

200 Fire Bombs Dropped

More than 200 incendiaries started several fires in the working-class district of an English town, but all were reported to have been extinguished quickly.

The planes came over, many of them singly, despite low-hanging clouds and a heavy fog, and for thirty minutes ranged over the Dover area. Several of the silver balloons were brought down, despite intense anti-aircraft fire.

The Luftwaffe failed to follow up the day raiding with night attacks. At a late hour there were no reports of activity in any part of the country, even though there was less fog on the Strait of Dover and visibility was much better than in the day.

Met Little Opposition, Nazi Bombers Report

Berlin, Friday, Jan. 31 (AP)—German flyers returning from a night raid on London were quoted early today as saying they had met no anti-aircraft fire until they were one minute's flying time from the heart of the city.

They were declared to have dropped bombs without opposition from British night chasers.

Several German machines appeared back home with ice on the wings.

Raiders who flew to London Wednesday night reported belatedly that they had shot down seven barrage balloons.

Willkie Toasts Future In Inner Temple Ruins

LONDON, Jan. 30 (AP).—Ruins of what was once the Middle Temple caused Wendell L. Willkie to shake his head sadly today. He said damage to the library of the Inner Temple—destroyed by German bombers—and to the Hall was "unbelievable."

In an undamaged part of the Hall he accepted a glass of brandy from the Temple cellars. He raised the glass slowly to his lips in a toast "to the restoration of the Temple."

Willkie Visits Pub And Stands Treat

[By the Associated Press]

London, Jan. 30—Wendell L. Willkie had his way today, paying an unescorted call on London's oft-quoted man-in-the-street and man-in-the-pub, drinking and talking with the "boys" and playing darts—the last with a losing score—and serving beer in one pub.

The American visitor jammed considerable of London into his tour. He is curtailing his visit, starting for home next week.

Beaten At Darts

He said he would be "delighted" to appear before the United States Senate committee hearing on the aid-to-Britain bill when he was told that Senator Gerald P. Nye, isolationist leader, had said Willkie should be heard.

At one place Willkie visited, the public house (saloon) proprietor, Harry Phillips, watched Willkie play darts with a loafing laborer and in celebration broke out a bottle of 1929 champagne.

The man easily defeated Willkie who commented: "This guy's too good."

Then the champagne was produced.

"I was going to keep this for Armistice Day," Phillips said. "But you are as good as Armistice Day and we'll open the bottle together."

Asked Behind Bar

The dart-throwing laborer stood by, almost unable to comprehend his victory.

"Blimey! I'm going all international," he said.

At the first place visited, also a pub Willkie was readily recognized by a group of soldiers and other customers. The proprietor invited him behind the bar.

Willkie ordered a round of beer for the "boys" and then, at their suggestion, he pulled the tap and served.

Lunching With Simon

He talked with the men about war living conditions and allied topics.

Laborers jammed in at the lunch hour, and the bigger the crowd, the bigger Willkie's smile.

"Step up, boys," he invited.

As he made ready to lunch with Lord Simon, the Lord Chancellor, Willkie commented:

"Yes, sir, I'm getting some good information."

NIGHT LEAD WILLKIE (BUDGET)

BY EDDY GILMORE

LONDON, JAN 30-(AP)-AMBULANCE AND FIRE STATIONS WILL BE STUDIED AT FIRST HAND TOMORROW NIGHT BY WENDELL L.WILLKIE, WHO CAME HERE TO SEE FOR HIMSELF HOW BADLY BRITAIN NEEDS UNITED STATES AID FOR HER WAR EFFORT.

WILLKIE SAID HE WOULD LEAVE FOR THE PROVINCES SUNDAY NIGHT OR MONDAY, GOING TO COVENTRY, MANCHESTER, SHEFFIELD AND BIRMINGHAM IF POSSIBLE, AND WOULD START FOR HOME THE MIDDLE OF NEXT WEEK.

THE AMERICAN SAID THIS CURTAILMENT OF HIS VISIT HAD NOTHING TO DO WITH GETTING HOME TO TESTIFY ON THE AID-TO-BRITAIN BILL. WHEN WILLKIE WAS INFORMED THAT SENATOR GERALD P.NYE, ISOLATIONIST LEADER, HAD SAID HE OUGHT TO BE HEARD, WILLKIE SAID HE WOULD BE "DELIGHTED" TO APPEAR AT THE UNITED STATES SENATE COMMITTEE HEARING ON THE BILL.

"AS I SAID BEFORE I LEFT THE UNITED STATES I AM PERFECTLY WILLING TO TESTIFY BEFORE THE HOUSE OR SENATE COMMITTEE AT ANY TIME," HE COMMENTED. "IN FACT I'D LIKE TO."

WILLKIE MADE AN UNESCORTED CALL ON LONDON'S MAN-IN-THE-STREET AND THE MAN-IN-THE-PUB TODAY, DRINKING AND TALKING WITH "THE BOYS" AND PLAYING A LOSING GAME OF DARTS.

HARRY PHILLIPS, PROPRIETOR OF THE SALOON WHERE WILLKIE PLAYED DARTS WITH AN IDLE LABORER, BROKE OUT A BOTTLE OF CHAMPAGNE, 1929 VINTAGE, TO CELEBRATE THE VISIT.

THE MAN WHO BEAT WILLKIE AT DARTS LOOKED HAPPY AND ASTONISHED.

"BLIMEY! I'M GOING ALL INTERNATIONAL," HE SAID.

WILLKIE SAID LATER HIS OPPONENT WAS "TOO GOOD."

"ALSO HE KNEW THE RULES, AND THERE'S SOMETHING TO THAT," HE SAID.

AT THE FIRST PUB WILLKIE VISITED THE PROPRIETOR INVITED HIM TO COME BEHIND THE BAR. A GROUP OF SOLDIERS RECOGNIZED WILLKIE AND HE ORDERED A ROUND OF BEER. AT THEIR SUGGESTION HE PULLED THE TAP AND SERVED.

WILLKIE SAID LATER HE HAD DISCUSSED WITH OFFICIALS THE THINGS MOST NEEDED BY BRITAIN, BUT WOULD NOT TALK ON THIS SUBJECT UNTIL HIS RETURN TO THE UNITED STATES.

GREEKS CAPTURE ALBANIAN HEIGHTS

Blow Halts Italian Thrust and Carries Further.

Athens, Jan. 30 (A. P.).—A strong attack by the Greek forces north of Klisura was reported today to have halted an Italian counter-attack at least temporarily, forcing the Italians to resume defensive tactics.

The Geeks said that their forces not only thwarted the Italian thrusts but advanced their own lines to new heights in that central Albanian sector. Starting at dawn yesterday, the Greeks were reported to have taken the offensive after the Italians had made several reconnaissance thrusts in an effort to feel out weak points in the Greek lines.

One Greek report from the front said that, in the counter-attacks launched by Italian Gen. Ugo Cavallero the last week, the Italians had lost twenty men for every Greek casualty. A Greek dispatch reaching Athens said the big Italian liner Rex had arrived at Trieste with a load of wounded troops.

Meanwhile thousands of persons after waiting in the rain, filed passed the flag-draped bier of Premier Gen. John Metaxas today to pay tribute to the man who had headed the Greek Government since August 4, 1936—longer than any other man in recent times. Gen. Metaxas will be buried here tomorrow.

Transition to the new Government was smooth and swift. Alexandros Korizis, appointed by King George II to the premiership, took up his duties a few hours after Gen. Metaxas died yesterday.

Rome, Jan. 30 (A. P.).—The capture of Greek prisoners and arms by Italian troops in sharp patrol actions on the Albanian front was today reported by the Italian High Command. Operations were hampered by bad weather, the communique said, and it was indicated that the Italians were using considerable numbers of men in the patrol skirmishes.

Greek Soldier Is A Little Guy Who Battles For A Holy Cause

Evzone Described As Fighter Who Quarrels With Officers But Will Die To Gain His Objective

By J. WES GALLAGHER
Associated Press Correspondent

With the Greek Army in Albania, Jan. 30—The Greek soldier who has rocked the invading Italian back on his heels is a whiskery little guy who wrangles with his superior officers almost to the point of fisticuffs, then expends his anger on the Fascist foeman with his officer showing the way.

The Greek soldier fights old-style with rifle, bayonet and hand grenade, for the Greek army is probably the least mechanized in Europe.

If he is punned as a "lady from Hellas," from the fact that the Evzones still are identified with the ballet-skirts they sometimes wear on parade, his ferocity must be measured on the Amazonian scale.

Faced Mechanized Army

He faced an Italian army mechanized to the last gadget after the German model. Tanks, scout cars, gun carriers, caterpillar troop carriers, rolling kitchens, mobile hospitals and columns of Diesel supply trucks carried the Italians to Ioannina, inside Greece, in October. Now they are halfway back to the sea in the high country of central Albania.

And the reason they are back there lies in the little man with the six-week beard and a towel tied around his ears to keep them from freezing.

30.24—7255

The average Greek soldier is small. If he has been long at the front, he sports a mustache and beard—snow won't make shaving lather. His naturally dark complexion has been burned shades darker by the glare of sun on snow and the lash of icy winds. When he squats in the lee of a protecting rock to gossip with his squad his dark eyes flash.

Equipment Scarce

Equipment is scarce. A Greek soldier is considered well equipped when he has a uniform that encases but rarely fits him, a rifle with bayonet, a festoon of hand grenades, knapsack containing hard bread, cheese and olives and two blankets.

Until hundreds of casualties resulted from frozen feet and hands, few soldiers had mittens or wool socks—and some still have none.

Thus equipped, he is ready to get into the fighting—but before he starts up the last ridge there probably will be arguments.

The Greek army is probably the most democratic in the world. Each man from general to rawest recruit is an individualist.

Argue Behind Lines

Behind the lines, privates argue hotly and loudly with their superior officers up to and including colonels over the execution of orders. I have often tried to picture the impact of one of these discussions on a top sergeant of the United States Army.

The argument is carried on almost beard to beard. They gesticulate, and voices rise to a pitch where one expects blows to follow. But, finally the private gives in with a mighty, ear-high shrug of his shoulders clearly expressing his opinion of the business—then goes in and carries out the order with all his might.

No Leave Since Start Of War

Well led, many of these soldiers have been in the front lines without leave since the first day of the war. They march day after day over incredibly difficult terrain with hard bread and cheese rations.

Their clothing coated with ice, heads wrapped with towels to keep ears and cheeks from freezing, they have fought their way up mountain slopes against enemy fire and bitter winds lashing down from the peaks.

When they fell exhausted after grueling days without sleep, they dropped into shallow holes scooped in the snow, wrapping themselves in frosted blankets for a few hours sleep. When they awakened, they went on again.

Fight For Holy Cause

Outshadowing all other factors in the success of the Greek army against Italy's motorized forces and air auxiliary has been the apparent willingness of Greek soldiers to die, if need be, to gain their objective.

This, simply, is due to their unshakable belief that they fight for a holy cause.

"God is with us," they say as you meet them on the road.

Just as often as they voice indignation over the Italians invading their homeland, they bring up the matter of the Greek cruiser Helle.

Fight To Death For Metaxas

Athens, Jan. 30 (AP) — Greek warriors, on the offensive again after beating off a week of fierce Italian counter-attacks, were reported tonight to have wrested new positions from the Fascists in the rugged Albanian mountains north of Klisura.

Military advices said the Greeks, pausing only long enough to pledge themselves to a fight unto death at brief front-line memorial services for their dead leader, Premier Gen. John Metaxas, lashed out with such fury that the Italians were forced to abandon their own counter-thrusts and withdraw hastily to new positions.

Talks Nearing Conclusion

SAIGON, French Indo-China, Jan. 30 (AP)—Under Japanese mediators, delegates representing Thailand and French Indo-China sped armistice negotiations toward a conclusion tonight to clear the decks for Tokyo talks on final peace and other questions involving their future.

Informed quarters predicted that the current negotiations would be terminated tomorrow, with the delegates signing an agreement aboard the flag-bedecked Japanese cruiser Natori, which is anchored in Saigon harbor. These quarters forecast, furthermore, that the terms would be "cut and dried" and Japanese-dictated.

Just what other questions would be considered in Tokyo remained undisclosed tonight, but it was considered in some quarters that they would include the future status of Thailand and Indo-China in Japan's plans for spreading her influence to Southeast Asia.

Commanding almost as much attention as the negotiations were reports circulated in responsible quarters that three Japanese ships—the Tottori Maru, Saigon Maru and Bangkok Maru—had been withdrawn from service between Saigon and Singapore last month and put to hauling Japanese munitions to Bangkok, the Thai capital. It was said that these stores were for Japan's "future use." There was no further explanation.

In addition to the Natori, a Japanese light cruiser is tied up here, and six other Japanese warships—two cruisers, two aircraft carriers and two torpedo boats—have been reported concentrated off Cape Saint-Jacques, fifty miles southeast of Saigon.

Minor Skirmishes Go On

BANGKOK, Thailand, Jan. 30 (AP)—Cessation of hostilities on the border of Indo-China except for minor skirmishes was announced by the Thai High Command today.

Thai casualties in the frontier conflict, which began two months ago, were estimated by the High Command at 100 killed and 300 wounded—said to be insignificant compared with French losses.

The end of the fighting, a communiqué declared, left Thai troops in possession of the entire east bank of the Mekong River—a region included in the original Thai territorial demands. Farther south, it was said, Thai troops have penetrated twenty-five miles into the Province of Cambodia.

Bombs Injure French Consul

NAZIS REVEAL CONCERN OVER LAVAL DELAY

Fakir of Ipi, Thorn to British, Accused of Aiding Axis Agents

Nazi Propaganda Filtering From Afghanistan Into Northwest India Line

BOMBAY, Jan. 30 (AP).—The Fakir of Ipi, who has conducted a religious war against the British for many years, was reported in advices from the northwest frontier today to be in touch with Axis influences in Afghanistan. The reports, these advices said, were based partly on the fact that German leaflets emanating from Afghanistan were filtering into the northwest frontier area, where the Fakir, Mirga Ali Khan, has a tribal following.

Never Caught by British

Tall, spare and wild-eyed, with a full-blown beard and red-dyed hair, the forty-year-old Fakir of Ipi has been hunted by British soldiers on foot, on horseback, in armored cars and in airplanes, but never has been caught.

Son of a caravan driver, he worked as a coolie in the bazaars of Peshawar, in northwestern India, until he took up religion (he is a Mahometan) and became a fanatical scourge of the "infidel" British. He has been blamed for murder and rapine in the peaceful villages below his mountain stronghold, but to his followers he is "the champion of Islam," "the Firebrand" and "the Holy Man of the Sulaiman Mountains."

In 1937 the British sent a force that eventually totaled 40,000 men after the fakir and his marauding band. Hundreds of his followers were killed, but the fakir, in 1938 escaped into Afghanistan. In 1939 he aroused further concern when it was reported that he was toying with the idea of a federation of tribes and a Moslem state between the Northwest Frontier province of India and Afghanistan. Nothing came of it. Late in 1939, the Berlin radio reported that Soviet Russia was stirring up the holy man to new disorders.

Express Astonishment He and Petain Are Not Working Closer.

SEE RAPPROCHEMENT SLOWED

Foreign Office Spokesmen Hail French Editorials Urging Return to Cabinet.

Berlin, Jan. 30 (A. P.).—Authorized Foreign Office spokesmen expressed astonishment and concern today over the failure of French Chief of State Philippe Petain and his former Foreign Minister Pierre Laval to get together more closely than indicated by their recent talk. They observed that a question is justified as to whether the French-German rapprochement, as envisaged in the meeting between Adolf Hitler and Marshal Petain, is to be actively pursued.

The question arose when a correspondent asked what the Foreign Office thought of a series of editorials appearing in the French press in the German occupied area which asked why Laval is not back in the Cabinet. Without doing more than stating that nothing has happened recently to indicate vigorous pursuance of rapprochement policies, authorized spokesmen said nevertheless that these questions asked by the French press were decidedly justified.

To the Foreign Office, they said, Laval is the principal exponent of the French-German policy. While declining to mix in domestic French affairs which resulted in the elimination of Laval from the Cabinet, the German Government is watching development with interest and apprehension, it was explained.

At first, these spokesmen continued, the German Government was inclined to view the misunderstanding between Petain and Laval as a mere episode. Now, they added, this character of the affair is disappearing steadily.

It has had no practical repercussions, however, so far as trade and other relations between France and Germany are conterned, these sources concluded.

Calls Situation Tense.

Vichy, Jan. 30 (A. P.).—The Paris edition of the newspaper Paris-Soir said today "there is no more collaboration between Vichy and Berlin."

The paper which has no connection with the original Paris-Soir now published in Lyons, described the situation as "very tense" and said "confidence between Berlin and the Vichy governments has ceased to exist."

Jean Lachaire, writing in the newspaper Nouveau Temps, also published in Paris, said only a government of "almost entirely new faces, including those who were removed from the palace by a detestable plot," would be capable of resuming the collaboration policy.

Red Army Intensifies War-Training Program

Order for 1941 Asks 'Utmost Results' by Next Fall

MOSCOW, Jan. 30 (AP).—Marshal Simeon K. Timoshenko, Commissar of Defense, called for intensification of the campaign for reconstruction of the Red Army in "an order for the 1941 training year" issued today.

The marshal notified Soviet commanders to "achieve the utmost results by autumn," when army maneuvers usually are held. "Teach your troops only what is necessary for war and only in the way it is done in war," he directed as the main underlying principle.

Late Foreign Minister Lauded

Budapest, Hungary, Jan. 30 (AP)—Premier Count Paul Teleky eulogized the late Foreign Minister Istvan Csaky as a statesman vitally instrumental in regaining territory for Hungary in a funeral oration in Parliament today.

The hearse carrying the body of Csaky, who died Monday, was followed by Regent Admiral Nicholas Horthy, Government leaders and the nobility through streets decked with black flags.

War Minister General Koroly Bartha, en route from a conference in Berlin, was the only high Government official absent.

Yugoslavia Curbs Activity Of 2 U.S. Correspondents

Italian Protest Over Riot Story Brings Restrictions

BELGRADE, Jan. 30 (AP).—The Yugoslav Foreign Office has restricted the activity of two American correspondents after a vigorous protest by the Italian government over their accounts of reported riots in Italy.

Winston Burdett, Columbia Broadcasting System correspondent, who sent a story of an alleged demonstration in Milan, was barred from use of the telephone for seven days and use of the radio indefinitely.

Ray Brock, "New York Times" correspondent, was refused permission to use the telephone for seven days.

Neither was deprived of cable facilities, but their stories were made subject to pre-censorship.

Arthur Bliss Lane, American Minister to Yugoslavia, acted as intermediary.

TRIESTE, Jan. 30 (AP).—Demonstrating Italians carrying flags and placards proclaiming their devotion to Premier Benito Mussolini paraded in the streets here today and were addressed by Fascist party leaders.

BUCHAREST SEIZES 2000 FOR REVOLT

52 Women Held Among Leaders in Riots.

Bucharest, Jan. 30 (Passed by Military Censor) (A. P.).—More than 2,000 leaders of last week's rebellion in Rumania, including fifty-two gun women, have been arrested in Bucharest alone, it was announced officially today, and 32,635 machine-guns, rifles, revolvers and hand grenades, and nearly 400,000 rounds of ammunition have been seized.

A list of 498 Iron Guardsmen arrested for their part in the revolution was issued last night. It did not contain the name of Vice-Premier Horia Sima, the Guard leader who had previously been reported in custody.

A communique declared that pamphlets seized in one Iron Guard headquarters proved that the rebellion was based on communistic terroristic principles.

Oscar Kaufmann, Rumanian banker who has fled to London, was meanwhile placed on trial in absentia, accused of unlawfully exporting $97,000 of American money.

Sert to Paint Vich Murals

Will Replace Cathedral Decorations Lost in 1936 Fire

BARCELONA, Jan. 30 (AP).—Jose Maria Sert, well known Spanish painter, has been engaged to paint murals in the Vich Cathedral to replace those destroyed by fire in 1936

The paintings, which will depict episodes of the Spanish civil war and religious themes, are to cover some 3,500 square yards and be filled with larger than lifesize figures.

The cathedral at Vich, forty miles north of Barcelona, is one of the oldest in Spain.

Cuba Curbs Fascists, Reds

Spanish Falangists Hardest Hit by Ban on Propaganda

HAVANA, Jan. 30 (AP).—The Cuban government barred all forms of Falangist, Nazi and Communist propaganda activities under a decree today. The Spanish Falangist group is most affected because the party is not now recognized legally by the government.

Official circles said the Spanish government, at Cuba's request, had ordered the recall of Consul-General Genaro Riestra. The Cuban Senate asked the recall, asserting Riestra had attempted to aid organization of the Spanish Falange (Fascist party) in this country.

New Party in South Africa

Afrikaner Organization to Follow Anti-War Policy

CAPETOWN, Union of South Africa, Jan. 30 (AP).—The formation of a new political group named the Afrikaner party which will follow the broad outlines of Gen. J. B. M. Hertzog's anti-war policy was announced today.

The party is composed of ten Assemblymen and three Senators, who separated from the Reunited Nationalist party, the leadership of which Hertzog resigned last month following differences of opinion with influential members.

Dr. D. F. Malan was elected leader of the Reunited Nationalists, succing Hertzog.

No Rum Ration in London

Fire Fighters Must Depend on Wool Underwear to Keep Warm

LONDON, Jan. 30 (AP).—"Woolies," not rum, will keep England's fire fighters warm during the winter months.

Home Secretary Herbert Morrison, asked in the House of Commons today if he would arrange to ration rum to the firemen, said he did not propose to do so.

Viscountess Astor interrupted, saying, "Though rum may warm people it doesn't make them more alert."

"I think," Morrison added, "an issue of warm underclothing would be better."

Dutch Submarine Lost

Netherlands Government in Exile Says Craft Was on War Duty

LONDON, Jan. 30 (AP).—The Netherlands government in exile announced today the loss of one of its submarines on war service. The name of the submarine and the nature of the operations in which it was engaged were not disclosed. It was the second undersea boat the Dutch have lost since they joined the British. The loss of the first was announced last Dec. 9.

The sinking of the British trawler Pelton was reported tonight by the Admiralty.

GRAND NATIONAL OFF

Famous Steeplechase Won't Be Run This Year.

London, Jan. 30 (A. P.).—For the first time since its inception 104 years ago, the Grand National Steeplechase will not be run this year, it was disclosed today by Herbert Morrison, Home Secretary.

Questioned in the House of Commons by D. L. Lipson of Cheltenham, the Home Secretary said that he had concluded that a substitute race at Cheltenham was undesirable.

The Grand National over the Aintree course is said to be the world's greatest test of stamina and jumping ability for horses. The course is four mil[illegible] 856 [illegible]ds long.

1,000 MORE TO JOIN REFUGEES' COLONY

Intergovernmental Committee Told of Plans for Sosua Site in Dominican Republic

$125,000 IS CONTRIBUTED

Rosenwald Family Donates Sum to Project Because of Its 'Constructive Work'

CIUDAD TRUJILLO, Dominican Republic, Jan. 30 (AP)—The Intergovernmental Committee for the settlement of European refugees in the Western Hemisphere was told today that 1,000 additional settlers would be established this year at the Sosua Colony in the Dominican Republic.

The report was made by James N. Rosenberg of New York, president of the Dominican Republic Settlement Association, as the committee representing thirty-two nations, including the United States and Britain, opened a convention here.

The Sosua Colony was set up through the cooperation of Generalissimo Rafael L. Trujillo, former President of the Dominican Republic. Mr. Rosenberg said the colony already had 750 acres under cultivation, worked by 300 refugees. He described the colony as a success and said that its plan was to grow cocoanuts, cocoa, castor beans and other products that could find a market in the United States.

The settlement association's capital was more than $1,000,000, Mr. Rosenberg said, and expenses were running $1,000 weekly in the republic.

Speakers included President Troncoso de la Concha, Robert T. Pell of the United States State Department, Alexander S. Patterson, British Minister; Armand Baron, French Minister; George Warren, Secretary of the Refugee Committee established by President Roosevelt, and Alfred Wagg, secretary of the Intergovernmental Committee.

All speakers expressed thanks to President Roosevelt for bringing about the 1938 Evian conference of Refugees, which led to formation of the Intergovernmental Committee.

6 FIRMS INDICTED FOR CONTROL OF U. S. MAGNESIUM

German and American Concerns Accused Of Hindering Defense

Supply Shortage and High Price Laid to 'Unlawful' Foreign Curbs on Output

By The Associated Press

NEW YORK, Jan. 30—A conspiracy to restrict and stifle domestic production of magnesium, resulting in delay and impediment of the defense program, was charged today against a combination of American and German firms.

A federal grand jury which returned the indictments against six corporations and nine of their officers said its purpose was "to destroy unlawful foreign restrictions on domestic production of magnesium for defense purposes."

The Justice Department described the indictments as part of a general investigation of commercial restrictions on materials essential to national defense and said "the inquiry has shown startling evidence of German influence in domestic industries essential to national defense."

Curb on Production

The Justice Department said as a result of the alleged conspiracy there were inadequate facilities for the production of magnesium; that the development and use of magnesium and its products in the manufacture of airplanes and other products had been restricted; that there was a serious shortage of foundry facilities for the fabrication of magnesium products; that the price of magnesium in the United Staets has been maintained at artificially and unreasonably high levels, and that magnesium exported was sold at prices lower than to domestic users.

The department's statement said that the result has been "that the production of aircraft and other defense material in which the use of magnesium is necessary has been seriously impeded and delayed . . ."

Magnesium was described as particularly valuable for use in place of aluminum in airplane construction, capable of giving a plane as much strength as aluminum with one-third less weight.

Named as Defendants

Named in the indictments were the Aluminum Company of America, the Dow Chemical Company, the American Magnesium Corporation, the Magnesium Development Company, the General Aniline and Film Company and the I. G. Farbenindustrie (commonly known as the German Dye Trust).

Individuals named were: Arthur V. Davis, chairman of the board, Aluminum Company of America; Roy A. Hunt, president; Irving W. Wilson, vice-president, and Wilfred D. Keith, of the corporation's patent division; Willard H. Dow, president, and Earl W. Bennett, vice-president, of the Dow Chemical Company, Karl Hochswenderm, president of the Magnesium Development Company, and two members of the managing board of directors of I. G. Farbenindustrie, Herman Schmitz and Gustav Postor.

Denials of any wrong-doing came from I. W. Wilson, president of the American Magnesium Corporation and a vice-president of the Aluminum Company of America; from Willard H. Dow, president of the Dow Chemical Company, and from the General Aniline and Film Company.

Interned Nazi Seamen Go to New Mexico Camp

Captain and 37 of Columbus's Crew Shifted From Coast

FORT STANTON, N. M., Jan. 30 (AP).—Capt. William Daehne, of the scuttled German liner Columbus, and thirty-seven of his crew were brought today to an internment camp in the southern New Mexico mountains.

"I will remain with my men except for one trip to bring the rest of them in two or three weeks," Capt. Daehne said.

The rest of the Columbus's crew of more than 400 is at Angel Island, in San Francisco Bay. They were held after destroying their ship in the South Atlantic to evade capture by the British in December, 1939.

Neither border patrolmen nor Federal Bureau of Investigation agents who accompanied the Germans on the train trip were armed.

U-BOAT REPORTED SEEN OFF ST. JOHN'S

Ship Says "Suspicious Submarine" Was Sighted 60 Miles From Newfoundland

Call Is First Indication Nazi Underseas Craft Are Operating In That Area

FEB 1 1941

[By the Associated Press]

New York, Jan. 30—The British freighter Sheaf Crown radioed tonight that she had sighted a "suspicious submarine" approximately sixty miles east of St. John's, Newfoundland.

The 4,868-ton Sheaf Crown last was reported leaving Baltimore December 18 for Land's End, England.

The call was the first indication that Axis submarines might be operating in this area at the northern end of the Grand Banks and outside the Pan-American neutrality belt.

Canada Has No Subs

The Canadian navy has no submarines. United States naval officials here said they could not reveal movements of underseas craft but it was unlikely any would be operating that far north.

St. John's is the site of one of the naval bases leased by the United States from the British. Work has begun there and troops and supplies were aboard the United States Army transport Edmund B. Alexander, which anchored in St. John's harbor yesterday.

Maritime circles expressed the belief that it would be possible for a large ocean-going submarine to operate in that vicinity. Germany reportedly has built a number of such craft.

During the World War the famous German submarine Deutschland made two twenty-day trips to the United States and returned to Germany with commercial cargoes.

Active Off U. S. In World War

Before America entered the war in 1917 the fighting submarine U-53 also stopped in an East Coast port. On her outward voyage she sank six Allied and neutral contraband ships a few miles at sea. Before the war ended, German submarines picked off ninety-one ships in American coastal waters.

There have been numerous reports of Nazi submarine activity in the last year in the Caribbean and off the coast of South America.

Last April South American naval circles heard reports that a submarine flotilla had reached the waters of the western Atlantic to do what the pocket battleship Graf Spee failed to accomplish—cut the foodline to England from South America.

The same month the crew of the British tanker El Ciervo expressed the belief that they had sunk a U-boat in a fight off Trinidad. In July a large, unidentified submarine, accompanied by a tanker, was reported sighted in the Straits of Magellan, heading for the Atlantic.

Roosevelt, 59, Calls Natal Days Happier Under Free Philosophy

By The Associated Press

WASHINGTON, Jan. 30.—President Roosevelt suggested to his countrymen tonight that American birthdays were happier this year than they would have been otherwise "because all of us are still living under a free people's philosophy."

He spoke from the White House by radio to thank those from coast to coast who were observing his own fifty-ninth birthday by attending parties, balls and other activities to raise money to combat infantile paralysis. To all who labored "in this great cause," he voiced his gratitude "from the bottom of my heart."

But Mr. Roosevelt said it was not a completely happy birthday for him because "these are not completely happy days for any of us in the world."

"Shall we say," he continued, "that American birthdays this year are being made at least happier than they would otherwise be because all of us are still living under a free people's philosophy?"

Mr. Roosevelt, besides making the radio talk, cut one of his seven birthday cakes at the eighteenth annual reunion of the Cuff-Links Boys at the White House, while thousands of communities made merry that handicapped children might be happier.

Barn dances at crossroads and formal balls in big cities helped to finance a campaign against infantile paralysis, a movement to which Mr. Roosevelt has dedicated each birthday since he became President. Others dined, went to shows or gathered in private parties.

Funds from the affairs went to the National Foundation for Infantile Paralysis, which expends half in the home community where victims were raised and half in scientific research.

It was announced that the annual campaign for funds to combat infantile paralysis, which is climaxed with Mr. Roosevelt's birthday, had brought $58,000 in dimes to the White House up to noon yesterday. Last year the comparable figure was more than $100,000. But it was explained that instead of a national "March of Dimes," the national foundation had localized the campaign this year so that the various participating communities were sponsoring local "Miles of Dimes."

National headquarters advised the White House that total contributions throughout the country thus far were in excess of last year's.

At the Warm Springs Foundation in Georgia, frequently visited by President Roosevelt, the patients dined around a cake "iced" with dimes contributed toward the fight that infantile paralysis might ultimately be conquered.

In the family dining room at the White House there was a swapping of old campaign tales—tales that date back to 1920, when Mr. Roosevelt ran unsuccessfully for Vice-President, for among the guests were five of the eight men who went through it with him.

These men were the original "Cuff-Links Boys"—so named because at the end of that campaign the candidate gave each a pair of cuff links—and since 1923 they have held a reunion on Mr. Roosevelt's birthday.

Two, Stephen Early and Marvin McIntyre, are now Presidential secretaries. Others include Charles McCarthy, a Washington attorney; James P. Sullivan, now with the New Haven Railroad, and Stanley Presnosil, one of the reporters who covered that early campaign trip.

The group years ago voted honorary membership to a friend of all, Kirke Simpson, of The Associated Press. He was present along with the President's former law partner, Basil O'Connor; his Hyde Park, N. Y., neighbor, Henry Morgenthau, Secretary of the Treasury, and the President's brother-in-law, G. Hall Roosevelt.

Mrs. Roosevelt watched as the President cut this extra-special cake—a gold one frosted in white and candleless. Other women guests included Helen M. Gahagan, actress; Mrs. Robert Baker, daughter of the late Louis Howe, Presidential secretary, and Cuff-Links member, and Mrs. Morgenthau.

Mrs. Roosevelt, with the aid of a motorcycle police escort that whisked her through heavy traffic, visited three of the five birthday balls in the capital—all within the space of an hour.

Celebrities here to enliven dances and two theatrical shows included Clifton Fadiman, the quick-tongued master of ceremonies of "Information Please"; Alice Marble, tennis star; Tommy Harmon, Michigan's football hero; Wallace Beery, Deanna Durbin, Glen Ford, Lana Turner, Maureen O'Hara, Helen Vinson, Jean Hersholt and a host of others from stage and screen.

The stars were entertained at a dinner at the Willard Hotel. At lunch they were guests at the White House—and the President shared another of his cakes.

Text of Address

The text of the President's address follows:

"From the bottom of my heart I thank all of you—every man and woman and child who has labored with my old friends, Basil O'Connor and Keith Morgan, in this great cause. And let me, at the outset, also give you my thanks in behalf of all those victims of infantile paralysis to whom this celebration tonight spells new hope and new courage.

"Most of all, I am grateful to America—for reaffirming at this hour America's humanity, America's active concern for its children. This is the eighth birthday in a row which all of you have made an occasion for joining hands in this national humanitarian effort.

"I cannot say, as you can well understand, that this is for me a completely happy birthday. These are not completely happy days for any of us in the world. Shall we say that American birthdays this year are being made at least happier than they would otherwise be because all of us are still living under a free peoples' philosophy?

"It is not only that the lights of peace blaze in our great cities and glow in our towns and villages—that laughter and music still ring out from coast to coast—that we will return to safe beds tonight.

"It is not that we feel no concern for the plight of free peoples elsewhere in the world; that we do not hope that they may continue the freedom of their governments and their ways of life in the days to come.

"It is because we believe in and insist on the right of the helpless and the weak and the crippled everywhere to play their part in life—and survive.

"It is because we know instinctively that this right of the unfortunate comes under our free peoples' philosophy from the bottom up, and can never be imposed from the top down.

"I do have satisfaction on this birthday of mine because of the fact that definite progress has been made in these past twenty years on a national scale in the fight against infantile paralysis. In a very broad but definite sense, this fight is a true part of the national defense of America.

"I have always tried to remember that the particular problem of infantile paralysis does call for a truly national fight. We have it in every state of the Union. We are at last organizing adequately to fight it.

"We have had to face the necessity of uniting medical scientists and doctors and nurses and public health officers and the general public into a unique offensive—and the battle year by year is gaining greater success.

"The year-in-year-out campaign culminating on each January thirtieth has had the support of almost every one—from those who give large sums down to the school children who contribute their pennies. Clearly, unquestionably, we are winning the fight—winning it, thanks to all of you.

"And so, to all of you I give my own thanks for the rarest birthday present of all—the gift of your charity, your kindliness to each other and to the nation."

The President's physician, Rear Admiral Ross T. McIntire, described him as "in top physical condition."

Guam Celebrates Early

GUAM, Jan. 30 (AP).—This United States aviation outpost in the far Pacific claimed the honor of opening the first ball to celebrate President Roosevelt's birthday and to raise money for the fight against infantile paralysis.

While most residents of the United States were asleep, some 200 participants began to dance at 9 p. m. The guests were mostly employees of Pan American Airways, whose clippers stop here en route from California to Manila.

War Department Rejects Ford Bid Because Of Labor Dispute

Company, Low Bidder On Truck Contract, Declines To Accept Certain Working Clauses

FEB 1 1941

[By the Associated Press]

Washington, Jan. 30—In an action believed to set a precedent, the War Department today rejected a bid from the Ford Motor Company for a contract involving 11,781 half-ton trucks because, it said, Ford "excepted as to the labor clauses."

The Ford company submitted the lowest bid among 155 firms which sought the contract, but the award was made to the Fargo Motor Corporation, of Detroit. The Fargo bid was $10,298,128. The Ford figure was not disclosed tonight.

Last month it was announced that every invitation for bids for the procurement of military supplies must contain a clause saying that a statement of labor policy adopted by the defense commission and approved by President Roosevelt shall be the guide in the awarding of contracts.

Compliance Demanded

This statement of policy had asserted that all work done under defense contracts should be in compliance with Federal statutes (such as the Wagner Act, the Walsh-Healey Act, setting labor standards for Government contractors, and the Wage-Hour Act).

A regulation issued December 17, 1940, said "all work executed under any such contract . . . will be carried out in compliance with the provisions of the statement of labor policy relative to overtime pay and in compliance with Federal statutory provisions affecting labor wherever such provisions are applicable, as well as with State and local statutes affecting labor relations, hours of work, wages, workmen's compensation, safety and sanitation."

It was not disclosed just what part of the "labor clauses" Ford considered objectionable. The Ford company has been engaged in a battle in the courts with the National Labor Relations Board, which has accused it of violating the Wagner Act.

Sidney Hillman, vice-president of the CIO and associate director of the Office of Production Management, objected last year to the award of a $1,387,500 order for 1,500 midget scout cars to the Ford company, on the ground that the contract lacked certain labor safeguards.

The War Department, however, allowed the contract to stand. The company also has been given a $122,323,030 contract for airplane engines, over CIO protests.

CIO Contention

The CIO has contended that since the company has been declared a violator of the Wagner Act by the Labor Board, it should not receive defense contracts.

William S. Knudsen, director of the Office of Production Management, took the position some time ago, however, that the sole fact that the Labor Board had declared a company guilty should not prove a bar to a defense contract pending adjudication of the labor dispute in the courts.

A case involving Ford and the Wagner Act is now in litigation before he Supreme Court. A Labor Board order declaring the company in violation of the act and directing it to cease alleged interference with its employes' collective bargaining rights was upheld, except in one particular, by the Sixth Federal Circuit Court.

The company appealed to the Supreme Court, and the Justice Department, in a brief filed today, urged that the appeal be denied.

Ford Lawyer Assails Rejection Of Contract

Detroit, Jan. 30 (AP)—The War Department's rejection of a Ford Motor Company bid on a defense contract because of company objections to "labor clauses" brought criticism tonight from a Ford representative and approbation from a CIO union official.

I. A. Capizzi, attorney for the Ford company, charged that inclusion of certain labor clauses was "strictly an arbitrary action taken at the insistence of labor groups" and said that the company would enter "the same objections" if invited to bid on other defense contracts containing "the same restrictions."

Wins CIO Praise

Michael F. Widman, Jr., chairman of the Ford organizing campaign of the United Auto Workers (CIO), said the War Department's rejection of the Ford bid meant that the Government "has come around in practice to its professed position that violators of the law are not entitled to Government contracts."

"The Ford Motor Company," Widman said, "has been the most flagrant violator of labor legislation and is now brought to book."

Capizzi mentioned no specific labor clauses in the contract, but said they were drawn in such a manner as to allow the contract to be "jeopardized by the acts of any individual worker."

"We would have had to assign a watchman for every two employes," Capizzi said. "A violation of any of the laws, by anyone in the plant, might have been cause for cancellation of the contract.

Sees No Need For Clause

"There is no need for that, and if future invitations to bid on defense contracts contain the same restrictions we'll certainly make the same objections."

The Ford attorney said "labor groups have the ear of certain officials in Washington, whereas the Ford Motor Company does not." He said he had been told that the labor clauses were inserted in the contract at the demand of Sidney Hillman, associate director of the Office of Production Management and vice-president of the CIO.

"If Congress had intended those laws to be inserted in defense contracts," Capizzi said, "it would have said so. But to date the only thing Congress has demanded is compliance with the Walsh-Healy Act. All the rest is purely arbitrary."

Was Lowest Bid

Capizzi disclosed that the Ford bid on the contract in question was $250,000 lower than that of the Fargo Motor Corporation of Detroit, which was awarded the contract on a bid of $10,298,128. The contract relates to 11,781 half-ton trucks.

"The company," Capizzi added, "was not tooled for this particular job. We would have retooled at no extra cost to the Government, and the Government, besides saving the $250,000, would have had available, in effect, a new plant prepared for other defense production."

In his statement, Widman said:

"The huge defense contracts previously awarded to the Ford Motor Company by the Government ought now to be canceled and given to employers who are willing to obey the law and abide by the labor policies laid down last September by the defense commission and approved by the President."

U. S. To Back Export Of Wheat To Mexico

Bids Invited For Purchase Of Grain From Stocks Owned By Government

Washington, Jan. 30 (AP)—The Agriculture Department took steps today to subsidize the export of a quantity of American wheat to Mexico.

It asked exporters to submit bids Monday for the purchase of wheat from Government-owned stocks for export to Mexico. Officials declined to say what quantity might be shipped under this program. Some indicated, however, it might be between 1,000,000 and 3,000,000 bushels.

The wheat which would be exported under this program has been acquired by the department under its grower loan operations.

Officials said that the Mexican offer did not indicate that the department was embarking upon a broad effort to dispose of surplus wheat in world markets.

Najera Flies Home On U. S. Agreement

Called by Mexican President for Conference Following Welles Talks

MEXICO CITY (AP)—Ambassador Francisco Castillo Najera sped home from Washington by plane today for conferences which informed sources said were preparatory to signing an agreement settling all outstanding issues between Mexico and the United States.

The ambassador was summoned to confer with President Avila Camacho following conversations with United States Undersecretary of State Welles regarding settlement of claims arising from Mexican exproriation of lands owned by United States citizens. He talked with Welles before his hurried departure from Washington last night.

(In Washington the conversations between Castillo Najera and Welles were understood to have covered proposals for a mutual defense system similar to that between the United States and Canada.

(Whether any contemplated agreement would involve settlement of claims by United States oil companies for properties expropriated by Mexico in 1938 was not disclosed either in Mexico City or Washington.)

Since 1927 Mexico has expropriated 5,000,000 acres of American-owned land—an issue that has been handled apart from the oil expropriation.

Gayda's Threat of Trouble to U. S. Fails to Carry Conviction at Present

By DEWITT MACKENZIE.

The declaration by Virginio Gayda, authoritative spokesman for Fascism, that America's aid for Britain is a violation of neutrality likely to involve us in war through legitimate reaction of the Axis Powers, is in the nature of a threat or, shall we say, a promise of plentiful trouble.

Gayda, who professionally reads the mind of Mussolini, says in effect that the time is coming when Italy and Germany will call us to account if we don't watch our step.

One would think that Italy, weakened as it is by defeats and economic distress, wasn't in a position to tangle with the United States but, of course, Gayda regards himself as speaking also in the name of Germany, which unquestionably is a mighty Power.

The purpose of this effort to frighten us obviously is to hamstring a program of all-out aid for the Allies. That brings us very logically to the question of what specific line the Axis may be expected to take if we continue helping Britain. Is there a possibility that Mussolini and Hitler will force us into the war? It would be a rash gamble, and one far removed from the usual military acumen of Germany, to drag us into the fray before the battle of Britain had been decided.

What Hitler Fears Most.

I think we have a right to assume that the thing Hitler fears most in the immediate future is involvement of any part of the United States Navy in the European war.

The entrance of an American fleet would tend to nullify the U-boat campaign on which the Fuehrer is banking so much. It would provide a powerful counter to Axis operations in the Mediterranean. It would be a millstone about the neck of any Nazi force attempting an invasion across the English Channel.

It therefore sounds like horsesense for the Axis not to crack down on us before the big invasion. What might happen after that would depend on circumstances, and we have little thus far for guidance in making a guess.

Nazi Grand Admiral Raeder's prediction of German victory through British shipping losses would seem to be a tacit admission that the air arm hasn't the strength to turn the trick. It's up to the German submarine fleet. Certainly the U-boat campaign is causing the Allies more concern now than bombing.

Shipping Loss Record.

Admiral Raeder says his war vessels thus far have sunk 6,300,000 tons of British shipping, not counting what the air force has destroyed. Berlin on October 3 claimed that the air force had sunk 2,000,000. Thus, not allowing for sinkings since then, we have a total claim of 8,300,000 tons—as against 7,831,000 tons of British commercial shipping sunk in the fifty-one months of the world war when England was almost starved out.

The German figures exceed the British. Informed sources in London on January 3 said about 4,500,000 tons of British, Allied and neutral shipping had been sunk in the sixteen months of war.

Whatever the truth, the British Minister of Shipping the other day declared that Britain faces serious danger, and that at the present rate of sinkings the day may come when her power to import will not equal her needs. However, he said Britain would beat this threat, and added a graphic line which seemed to parallel the German thought:

"The battle of 1941 will be the battle of the seas."

There's no present reason to question this estimate and to my mind that is a potent reason why Hitler won't want to see us in the European war with our navy for the time being at least.

Communiques

British

CAIRO, Egypt, Jan. 30 (AP)—British General Headquarters issued this communiqué today:

Libya—The capture of Derna was completed this morning.

Eritrea—In the Agordat-Barentu sector the concentration of our forces is proceeding smoothly in spite of distances and physical difficulties, which have been overcome largely by the work of capable mechanical transport companies.

Ethiopia—Intensive patrolling continues east of Metemma.

Italian Somaliland—In all sectors work is progressing on improving forward roads in support of our advance patrols, whose activities across the frontier are advancing unabated.

LONDON, Jan. 30 (AP)—The Air and Home Security Ministries issued this communiqué today:

There was small-scale enemy activity over this country last night for a few hours after dark. High-explosive and incendiary bombs were dropped and these fell mostly in London and the surrounding districts.

The resulting fires were quickly put out. Damage from high-explosive bombs was not extensive and was confined mainly to houses, but a few people were killed and others injured.

Earlier in the evening bombs were dropped on a town in the Northeast and on a town in the West. No damage or casualties resulted.

Another communiqué issued by the two Ministries:

During the day single enemy aircraft have dropped bombs in the London area and parts of Southeast England and East Anglia. Some houses and shops were damaged, but the number of casualties so far reported is small.

One enemy aircraft has been destroyed.

A Ministry of Home Security communiqué stated:

Further reports of today's raids show that bombs were dropped in a town in the East Midlands. Some damage was done to buildings, but there were few casualties.

ATHENS, Jan. 30 (AP)—British Royal Air Force Headquarters issued this communiqué today:

It is now confirmed that, in addition to the enemy bombers shot down in flames during an engagement between a number of enemy bombers and a formation of our fighter aircraft Jan. 28, as reported in yesterday's communiqué, a second Italian aircraft which was damaged in the course of the engagement crashed on Greek territory.

Netherland

LONDON, Jan. 30 (AP)—The Netherland Government issued this communiqué today:

The London headquarters of the Royal Netherland Navy regret to announce the loss of a Netherland submarine in Allied war operations. The next of kin have been informed through the agency of the International Red Cross.

Greek

ATHENS, Jan. 30 (AP)—The Greek High Command issued this communiqué today:

Local successful action [in Albania]. Some enemy positions were occupied and about 200 prisoners, including seven officers, taken.

The Ministry of Home Security communiqué:

No raids on Greece today.

Italian

ROME, Jan. 30 (AP)—The Italian High Command issued this communiqué today:

Bad weather hampered operations on the Greek front. In actions by large patrols we captured prisoners and arms.

In Cyrenaica [in Libya] there was intense activity by artillery, patrols and motorized nuclei, actively aided by our aviation.

In East Africa on the northern front we repulsed an Australian detachment, reoccupying a place it had reached and capturing prisoners and arms. On the southern front we attacked in three different sectors and put enemy columns to flight.

Our air formations intensively bombed enemy motorized units, troops and positions. The English Air Force raided several air bases, causing slight damage. An enemy fighter was shot down.

German

BERLIN, Jan. 30 (AP)—Today's German High Command communiqué:

In the course of armed reconnaissance over the British Isles the Luftwaffe attacked industrial plants on the East Coast and Middle England as well as Southeast England.

Long-range army artillery shelled military targets in Southeast England.

Strong combat squadrons attacked war-vital objectives around London during the night of Jan. 30 and dropped explosive and incendiary bombs.

The same night the enemy dropped bombs in two spots on the Northwest German coast, which hit exclusively residential sections and a work camp. Numerous civilians were killed or wounded. Damage done was slight.

The plane announced as missing in yesterday's communiqué has since then returned.

KNOX TELLS NAZI PLAN TO ATTACK BRITAIN WITH NEW PLANE AND GAS; DAY RAIDS ON LONDON INCREASING

KNOX REPORTS NAZIS POISED FOR INVASION

Says They Watch Long Range Forecasts for Favorable Weather to Attack Britain —Fears Use of Gas in Big Way.

FEB 1 1941

Washington, Jan. 31 (A. P.).—Secretary of the Navy Knox testified today that this Government had information the Nazis now were watching long-range weather forecasts for a period of extended good weather in which to launch an invasion of England.

Appearing before the Senate Foreign Relations Committee in support of the administration's British-aid bill, the Secretary said there were certain menacing developments which indicated that a very grave crisis would come within sixty or ninety days.

These developments, he said, centered around two things:

That the German Air Force had changed its tactics from indiscriminate bombing of London in a fruitless effort to break the British people's morale to the "far more effective" bombing of industrial centers.

That the British yet have been unable to find any successful convoy method of combating increased German submarine activity.

"Right now," the Colonel told the committee, "they are watching the long-range weather forecasts for a period when they will have good weather for a long enough time."

In discussing the possibility of an imminent crisis, Col. Knox declared that "we fear they (the Germans) also are contemplating in a big way the use of gas." He did not elaborate.

Obeys the President.

In the questioning of Secretary Knox, Senator Nye, Republican, of North Dakota, asked whether the witness agreed that an American move to convoy supplies to Britain would be an act of war and Col. Knox nodded assent.

"Would you change your mind if the President ordered convoys?" the North Dakota Senator asked.

"Certainly," Col. Knox replied firmly.

"Would you change your mind about its being an act of war?" Mr. Nye insisted.

"I'm the Secretary of the Navy," the witness replied. "The President is my commander-in-chief. I do what he tells me."

Senator Nye and Col. Knox fell into a discussion of Woodrow Wilson's policies prior to the world war and those of the present administration. At one point Mr. Nye started:

"It still is not clear to me. . . ."

Senator Connally, Democrat, of Texas, interrupted:

"Mr. Chairman, the witness has answered the question. Everybody here knows that the Senator from North Dakota is a Wilson hater, a Wilson vilifier and a Wilson calumniator."

"I deny each and every one of those assertions," Senator Nye responded.

Search for New Plane Design.

Col. Knox also declared that there had been a "lull" in German airplane production in the last month or two, during which, he said, American and British plants had produced more planes than the German plants. This was due, he declared, to a "desperate" German search for a "new type of ship that will make all of the airplanes in the air now obsolete."

The British, too, he described as "desperately seking" such a new design, adding that this was one reason why American plant production capacity should be increased rapidly.

"Then," he said, "if we find some design that will make every other plane in the world obsolete, we can turn them out by the hundreds."

Senator Gillette, Democrat, of Iowa, asked Col. Knox whether it weren't true that even a strong navy would have difficulty in overcoming shore batteries.

"That's what makes the attempted invasion of England so dubious," Col. Knox replied.

Mr. Gillette asked about a speech in which Grand Admiral Raeder of the German Navy recently said that Germany planned to become a world navy Power. When Mr. Gillette referred to the speech as "bombastic," Col. Knox said:

"All through this war, we have heard things come out of Germany and we have said they couldn't be done and in thirty or ninety days they are done." He cited the invasion of Norway and the destruction of the French Army as two examples of this.

"When they talk blusteringly and boastfully," he said, 'I don't believe them but I get my armor ready."

Why the Rush? Gillette Asks.

Senator Gillette remarked to Col. Knox that a Cabinet member had informed the committee that Britain, due to developments in the Mediterranean and Africa, was in much better position to resist an invasion than it had been four or five months ago. Both Secretary of State Hull and Secretary of War Stimson have testified in closed committee sessions, but Mr. Gillette did not say whom he was quoting.

The Iowa Senator said the Cabinet member revealed that there had been an abortive attempt to infiltrate German troops into Bulgaria. Russia, he said it was disclosed, had lent its influence to maintain Bulgaria's independent status.

German attempts to gain use of the French fleet and French naval bases also had been unsuccessful, Mr. Gillette said the testimony indicated. In addition, he said the committee was informed that a Nazi plan to attack Gibraltar through Spain was abandoned because of opposition by the Spanish Government and the lack of food supplies in Spain.

This whole situation, Mr. Gillette continued, had worked to the disadvantage of Hitler and had made Great Britain's position better. Why then, Mr. Gillette asked, was the administration insisting that passage of the pending bill should be "a matter of hours."

Col. Knox said he was "not at all sure" that Germany did not have the military power to "correct" the Mediterranean situation, from a Nazi standpoint. Despite all of this, he said, the German invasion army on the French coast had been maintained without reduction, invasion bombardments had been practiced and plans seemed to be going ahead for the attempt.

"There is everything to indicate," the witness declared, "that Mr. Hitler has not let his gaze be diverted in any way from the one objective of invading England.

Oppose Negotiated Peace.

Col. Knox said it was wild fancy to believe that a negotiated peace now could bring stability to Europe. He recalled a recent suggestion for a negotiated peace by Col. Charles A. Lindbergh and mentioned Col. Lindbergh's assertion that the United States was not vulnerable to attack.

"I have the greatest respect for Col. Lindbergh," Col. Knox declared. "He has great knowledge of commercial aviation, but his knowledge of military aviation has been slight. The conclusions he has drawn indicate that lack of knowledge."

Asserting that it was wild fancy to talk of a negotiated peace, he added:

"A negotiated peace can bring stability only when a military stalemate has existed for a long time and the participants have reasonable confidence that the terms of the peace will be faithfully executed.

"I doubt that the British people would accept any German assurances at their face value."

Asserting that the Western Hemisphere would be in grave danger of invasion if the Nazi were victorious over Britain, Col. Knox made the point often stated by other administration witnesses, that the United States needed time to build ships, train crews, develop bases and enlarge its army.

"Only Great Britain and its fleet can give us that time and they need our help to survive," he said. "If Great Britain is defeated we must be fully prepared to repel attempts by Germany to seize bases on this side of the Atlantic.

"I believe a victorious Germany would move over to this hemisphere just as soon as she could gain the strength to do so."

Col. Knox said he was convinced that defeat of Britain would "definitely carry with it the destruction of the British fleet or its transfer to Germany to be used against us as soon as Germany trained the men to man it."

The United States might build, he said, a navy and army capable of turning back any Nazi threat to this hemisphere, but the cost and the sacrifices would be great.

Latin America, the witness added, offered possibilities of an indirect attack if the Nazis won undisputed control of Europe. This might come, he said, first through economic penetration followed by economic dependency. The next step, he predicted, would be political integration, the gaining of political control and infiltration into the Latin American fighting forces.

Not Approving Britain's Past.

Concluding a prepared statement, Col. Knox said:

"I believe that our people now are determined to put forth their full efforts for saving themselves from the burdens of future militarism and war, and from an overturn of American life. I believe they want this bill to pass."

Senator Pepper, Democrat, of Florida, asked Col. Knox whether it was not true that Congress, in enacting the British-aid legislation, would not necessarily be approving all past British policies.

Replying affirmatively, the Navy Secretary added that as an example he believed "the present sorry state of world affairs had its beginning in 1931, when Britain failed to support us in maintaining the nine-Power pact."

This country urged enforcement of the pact, which envisioned maintenace of the status quo in the Far East, when Japan invaded Manchuria in 1931.

Secretary Knox's Statement to Senate Group on the Dangerous World Outlook

By The Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 31—Following is the text of Secretary Knox's statement before the Senate Foreign Relations Committee today:

FEB 1 - 1941

Before coming here, our chairman advised me that he would permit me to develop further some of the points which I made in my statement before the House Foreign Affairs Committee on Bill 1776, Lend-Lease Bill.

I do not propose to make any direct comment on the testimony that Colonel Lindbergh gave before the House Committee, except in so far as my entire statement today can be considered a refutation of the argument Colonel Lindbergh made.

I respect Colonel Lindbergh's knowledge and ability concerning commercial aviation. However, his experience with military aviation has been slight, and I consider his statements pertaining to the strategic employment of military aviation as disclosing his lack of knowledge on this subject.

His conclusions concerning the national position of the United States, and its unavoidable ties with the positions of the Great Powers of Europe and Asia, are conclusions with which I am unable to agree.

Peace Idea "Wild Fancy"

Colonel Lindbergh's idea that it might be possible now to effect a stable negotiated peace between Great Britain and Germany is a wild fancy. A negotiated peace without victory can be effected only when a military stalemate has existed for a long time, and under conditions where the belligerents feel a reasonable degree of confidence that the peace terms will be faithfully executed.

In Europe the military situation is far from stable, and I believe that there are few British who would care to accept German peace commitments at their face value.

I should like to quote thr[ee] short paragraphs from my st[a]ment given before the H[ouse] Committee:

"To keep our land secur[ity] must prevent the establish[ment] of strong aggressive mi[litary] power in any part of the World. We can keep non-[American] military power out [of the] hemisphere only th[rough] able to control the s[eas] round its shores. Once we lose the power to control even a part of those seas, inevitably the wars of Europe and Asia will be transferred to the Americas.

"We need time to build ships and to train their crews. We need time to build up our outlying bases so that we can operate our fleets as a screen for our continent. We need time to train our armies, to accumulate war stores, to gear our industry for defense.

"Only Great Britain and its fleet can give us that time, and they need our help to survive."

I reiterate here my belief that the chief question that confronts us is whether we shall now take steps to keep Europe's wars in Europe or shall drift along and permit those wars to be transferred to the Americas.

We need time to get ready to meet out at sea a strong, aggressive Germany, if we are to keep the fighting away from the lands of this hemisphere. You may remember that in my statement before the House Committee I gave a comparative table of naval tonnage which might oppose us, both in the immediate future and over the next several years, if Britain does not survive Germany's attack.

"No Time to Waste"

I would not have you draw the implication from my statement and from those figures that I fear that the United States will not fully realize in time the danger that threatens them. But they have no time to waste and must act at once.

In public speeches I have warned the American people that if Britain is defeated we ought then to be fully prepared to repel attempts by Germany to seize bases on this side of the Atlantic.

Germany would use these bases either to attack us directly or else first to establish herself solidly in South America. Many of our people and many of the speakers who have opposed giving ample aid to Great Britain apparently believe it fantastic to think that there is any real danger of invasion.

I disagree with such people, and believe that a victorious Germany would move over to this hemisphere just as soon as she could accumulate the strength to do so, and certainly very soon, unless we now take the steps to check her career of reckless aggression.

Admiral General Raeder, Chief of the German Navy, recently made a speech to the shipyard workers in Bremen.

The significant portion of his speech, to the United States, was a promise that after the war Germany would have—I quote—"A fleet developed and enlarged to a size befitting a world power, and overseas naval bases where there would be plenty of work of all kinds."

There can be little doubt as to German ambitions for world sea power in the event of victory.

The existence of the British Navy and a balance of power in Europe have operated to give us military security against aggressions from that region. For many years we actually have had the benefits of a two-ocean navy, instead of only the one-ocean navy that flies the American flag. The defeat of Great Britain would definitely carry with it the destruction of the British fleet or would transer it to German hands, to be used against us when Germany has trained German naval personnel to operate it.

Even were there no danger of invasion—and I may say that I believe building up our Navy and our Army in the way we are now doing will give us the means to defeat invasion, provided we have the time to complete our plans—I repeat, even if there were no danger of invasion, I ask the committee whether they can face calmly the prospect of all of Europe completely dominated by the Hitler regime?

Question to Decide

The question to decide is: would we rather see Europe dominated by a democratic system or would we rather see Europe dominated by a Hitler system?

What would be our relative position under those very different sets of circumstances? If the Hitler system is victorious, can any of us imagine that we can return freely to the ways of the peace which we have known in the past? For my part, I believe that so long as the Hitler system endures we will be forced to maintain a tremendous Navy and a very large Army in order to continue any sort of national existence.

I well realize the sacrifices that our people will have to make to maintain their liberties in such a world, and I believe that we should now do everything that we can do to keep the British Commonwealth of nations from being overcome by the terrible new system of government that has arisen in Germany. For myself, I prefer to live in a world governed by a victorious democracy rather than be a victorious Hitler.

Suppose, contrary to my own view, we concentrate our full effort on building up our ships, and troops, and aircraft, and stand aside and accept the chance of a complete German victory over Britain. As I understand their arguments, that is the course that the opponents of the lend-lease plan would have this government pursue.

I am ready to admit that we might be able to arm ourselves so heavily that it would become impossible for the Axis powers to bring their military power directly against us across the seas, and to defeat us here in our own territory. The costs of such armaments would be great, and they would bear very heavily upon our people. But let us admit, for the sake of the argument, that we could bear these burdens, and that we could build up the fleets and armies we would need to fend off a direct invasion. Would we, then, be safe from Axis attack?

I say that no, decidedly, we would not be safe. The Nazi method is plain to all, and it is to win by any means, direct to indirect.

As to Latin America

Latin America has great potential wealth, principally in raw materials. Its natural customer is Europe, because the United States can only consume a part of the Latin-American exports. Heretofore Great Britain, Germany, Italy and other European nations have competed for the greater part of these exports, and the competition has been to the advantage of our neighbors. But with the Nazis in supreme control there would be but one European customer.

We can be very sure that the devious diplomatic, economic and political methods which Germany has employed toward all the countries near her would also in the future be employed in the regions to the south of us.

First would come economic penetration, next economic dependence, then political immigration and political interference. After that we would see the establishment of puppet regimes under Nazi or native control, and finally the arming of those countries, and their military domination by Nazis. The cycle would be complete. European militarism would be established in a world that has had the atmosphere of peace and freedom.

Whether the methods are direct or indirect, this hemisphere is now in grave danger of foreign invasion.

Aside from reasons of national safety, we have many other selfish reasons for desiring to see the British nation continue in existence. The type of civilization that has been developed in the United Kingdom has conditioned the development of American civilization. Our social, our economic, and our political systems were brought to this New World many years ago as transplantations from the British systems. Close personal contacts and a constant exchange of ideas between the American and the British peoples have nourished the sturdy growth of the American national life whose roots lie embedded in British soil.

Senator Gillette asked Col. Knox how soon he thought the Axis Powers could attack the United States if they were victorious in Europe and the witness replied:

"I don't believe they could come here tomorrow, but there is a potential danger. They would have to establish bases in South America first. If the Axis Powers controlled the seas, as they would in case of destruction of the British fleet, it wouldn't take very long" to establish a South American base."

Wishes Guam Were Fortified.

Mr. Gillette then asked whether for ten years American strategy had contemplated that no effort would be made to defend the Philippines. He got this reply:

"We have calculated and studied the problem, and admitted the difficulty of it (Philippine defense). But it has never been thrust aside."

When Senator Gillette recalled demands for fortifying the tiny island of Guam in the West Pacific—demands turned down in Congress lest Japan be affronted—Col. Knox remarked: "I wish to God it were fortified now."

Senator Nye asked whether, if the aid provided in the bill were "insufficient," the United States would have to go even further.

"That's possible," the Secretary responded. "But we do know this: If we don't do what we propose in this bill we will certainly have to fight some time."

At another point, he interrupted a series of questions by Mr. Nye regarding future policy by remarking that this nation would "fight against what the Nazis offer as long as there is a man left alive in America."

Questioned on Bombsight.

Mr. Nye asked whether the aid legislation would permit the President to release secret military equipment, such as the new bombsight, to Britain. After Col. Knox said it would, Senator Nye asked whether the bombsight had been released and the witness replied negatively.

To further questions, Col. Knox said he would not like to see the Johnson act, forbidding private loans to war debt defaulters, destroyed or circumvented.

"My attitude toward England in her present crisis," Col. Knox continued, "is not due to any silly idea of sentiment. We are helping ourselves—we are gaining time to defend ourselves.

"Once we have a fleet superior to any combination on the high seas, then the Westren Hemisphere will be safe."

Col. Knox added he believed the European war would be over before the United States could have an "adequate" defense. He said this country should help Britain as long as the war lasted, and said the cost of such aid "will be infinitely less than the cost involved if the Nazis win."

30,24-7263

30.24—M263

From a cultural standpoint it would be a calamity for us if British life were uprooted and replaced by a Nazi growth. Even those of our citizens whose lineage leads back to parts of the world other than Britain must feel that their greatest benefits from life in this country are connected with stability of the institutions which Britain originated and which we have adapted to our own form of civilization.

I have a high appreciation of the keen sense of national strategy inherent in the American character, and I believe that our people now are determined to put forth their full efforts for saving Britain and thus saving themselves from the burdens of future militarism and war, and from an overturn of American life. I believe they want this bill to pass.

"The President shall do that which in his judgment is best for the defense of the country, all laws international and national to the contrary notwithstanding."

A Defense Bill, Says Bloom.

Representative Luther A. Johnson, Democrat, of Texas, undertook to reply.

"Yes, we are delegating powers——" he started to say.

"War powers," Mr. Cox interrupted to say.

"—— delegating war powers he does not now have."

"Is this a peacetime measure or a war bill?" Mr. Cox asked.

Aid Bill Goes to House Floor

Momentous Debate Begins Monday—No Limit on Number of Amendments.

Washington, Jan. 31 (A. P.).—The administration's British-aid bill was sent to the House floor today for a momentous debate starting Monday.

After a brief hearing, the House Rules Committee gave the bill a legislative right-of-way under procedure calling for three days of general debate and permitting the unlimited offering of amendments.

Committee members said the action was by voice vote advocating such a course, Representative Sol Bloom, Democrat, of New York, chairman of the Foreign Affairs Committee, had stated frankly that the United States was "not neutral" but "just as neutral as any other nation."

In the Rules Committee, as well as in the Foreign Relations Committee, there was talk of the possibility of the United States getting into war through the legislation's admitted purpose of helping one side in warfare. Representative Cox of the Rules Committee, in fact, said he was supporting it "on the basis that it's a war measure," and Representative Michener, Republican, of Michigan, suggested that the bill be shortened to read:

"Why, it's a defense bill," Chairman Bloom replied.

"How can any self-respecting Congressman support this as a peacetime bill?" Mr. Cox asked.

The lease-lend legislation went to the Rules Committee carrying the strongly phrased indorsement of the majority members of the Foreign Affairs Committee who declared that its prompt enactment "is of the highest importance to the vital interests of our country—and even of our civilization."

The majority set forth its views in a 5,000-word formal report issued last night after the committee approved the bill by a 17-to-8 vote.

Makes Three Claims.

The report made these three claims for the bill:

It would not get the United States into war;

It provided the best method of giving aid to nations resisting aggression, and

It accomplished that purpose in the manner best suited for national defense.

AID BILL SPEEDED BY RULE IN HOUSE

Right of Way Granted, Debate Starts Monday With Prospect of Final Passage by Friday

8 of 10 Republicans in Foreign Affair Group Propose Loan of 2 Billion to Britain

FEB 1 - 1941

Special to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 31—Administration leaders in the House pushed forward today their plans to bring the Lease-Lend Bill to the floor next week.

They obtained, by unanimous vote of the rules committee, a grant of procedure whereby general debate will begi non Monday with a prospect of final passage by next Friday night.

The special rule which will make H. R. 1776 the pending business of the House is known in Congressional parlance as "wide open."

Specifically, it waves all points of order, so that amendments may be offered, whether or not strictly germane to the measure.

The general debate will occupy the first three days of the week, and th ereading for amendment will start on Thursday.

About two dozen amendments were offered and rejected during the executive sessions of the Foreign Affairs Committee. All of these an dprobably many more will be offered from the floor.

Minority Offer Substitute

Meantime, eight of the ten Republican members of the Foreign Affairs Committee filed with the House a dissenting report on the bill, urging substitution of a plan to lend Great Britain $2,000,000,000 for the purchase of war materials.

The report was signed by Representatives Eaton of New Jersey, Rogers of Massachusetts, Fish of New York, Chiperfield of Illionis, Vorys and Bolton of Ohio, Jonkman of Michigan and Mundt of South Dakota.

Representative Stearns of New Hampshire, who favors the measure, declined to join in opposing it and Representative Tinkman of Massachusetts would not sign the report because he considered it too tame an indictment of the Administration proposal.

Minority Report on Lease-Lend Bill

By The Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 31—The text of the minority report of the House Foreign Affairs Committee on the lease-lend bill is as follows:

We are for all aid to Britain short of war, and short of sacrificing our own defense and our own freedom. The British, in their valiant struggle which has aroused our deepest sympathy, need planes, guns and war material.

We are for this objective without delay. We believe this objective can be accomplished without granting enormous power to the President, which the founders of the Republic wisely decreed should remain with Congress as the representatives of the people. If there is any delay in reaching this objective it would be caused by this unprecedented bid for Presidential power.

We would willingly support a straightforward bill which would grant Britain two billion dollars' worth of credit.

This would eliminate the step of giving the President absolute power over every concern in this country manufacturing war materials. This would not permit him to be the director of the war in England, a position which is fraught with greater danger to the American people. If we assume the direction of the war, we underwrite the success of the war. The ultimate result must be the American people will pay the full cost of the war, and that means we will be obligated to put our material resources and our men into the struggle.

Granting credits which England needs will fully meet the situation of today and it will lessen materially the likelihood of our going into the war. Our naval and military experts agree that our nation is in no danger of attack; that with our vast resources and geographical position our situation is not comparable to that of nations of continental Eutrope.

This power requested is too much to give any man at a time when the country is at peace. As Secretary Cordell Hull once said:

"This is too much power for a bad man to have, or for a good man to want."

WHAT IS NEEDED

We have been given two reasons for new laws: (1) Britain is running short, not of money, not of assets, but of dollar exchange. (2) We need to coordinate British procurement with our own defense efforts.

WHAT THIS BILL DOESN'T DO

This bill does not provide dollar exchange for Britain, and is not needed to procure coordination of our defense efforts.

This bill will not provide any additional war supplies for aid to Britain within the sixty or ninety days of her alleged crisis, unless the President uses the power provided to dispose of part of our arms or our Navy, which he and his Cabinet officers have specifically denied they could spare.

There has been much talk of "restrictive" committee amendments. The amendments adopted do not prohibit our convoying merchantmen, do not require our Army or Navy officers to determine our own defense needs, do not place a constitutional two-year limitation on the life of the bill.

WHAT THIS BILL DOES

Using the slogan of "Aid to Britain," and under the title of "promoting defense," this bill gives the President unlimited, unprecedented and unpredictable powers, literally to seize anything in this country and to give it to any other country, without limit in law. He may sell or give away our Navy, our planes, our arms, our secrets and use any proceeds from such sales for similar purposes; he need come to Congress only for appropriations to restore our Navy, our planes, our arms

John Bassett Moore, world famous authority on international and constitutional law, says:

"The pending bill assumes to transfer the war-making power from the Congress, where the Constitution lodges it, to the Executive * * *. The tide of totalitarianism in government * * * has not only reached our shores, but has gone far to destroy constitutional barriers, which, once broken down, are not likely to be restored."

Remember, we cannot repeal war, we cannot repeal bankruptcy, and we cannot repeal dictatorship. Under this bill we surrender our democratic way of life now for fear of a future threat to our democratic way of life. The oldest and last constitutional democracy surrenders its freedom under the pretext of avoiding war, with the probable result that the newest dictatorship will soon go to war.

OUR PROPOSAL

We have offered in committee, and will offer again on the floor, the following constructive, democratic program to aid Britain and to keep us out of war:

1. A two-billion-dollar credit to Britain, to be used in this country for purchasing arms when her dollar balance for this purpose is exhausted, requiring reasonable collateral security if available.

2. Permit the sale by our government of arms to Britain only when our highest Army and Navy officers certify in writing such arms are not necessary for our national defense.

3. A one-year time limit on all extraordinary powers. Congress meets again next year and can easily extend the time limit if our interests require it.

4. Provide that no vessels of the United States Navy shall be disposed of without the consent of Congress.

5. Prohibit the use of our ports for repair bases for belligerent ships. We must not bring the war to American ports.

6. Prohibit the use of American vessels to transfer exports to belligerents.

7. Prohibit the convoying of merchantmen by our Navy. One sunken ship might plunge us into war.

Our program would permit the coordination of all foreign purchases through the Office of Production Management, instead of making the President the director general of the war in Europe. Our government now has power to fix priorities and forbid exports, so no additional powers are needed to enforce coordination.

At our hearings Mr. Knudsen was asked: "You have sufficient power now to coordinate the procurement of materials?" Mr. Knudsen answered "Yes."

If instead of coordination we demand domination, if we assume what Secretary Stimson called "the general strategy" of the war we assume the responsibility for its outcome, and that leads to sending an expeditionary force overseas.

Congress should specify the nations to receive aid. To leave it wide open would mean the President could, now that we have lifted the moral embargo, give aid to Russia, by sending planes and war materials. Congress is to be in session for some months. It can extend aid to other countries if it is necessary.

CONCLUSION

This is the most important and far-reaching bill this House as ever considered. It involves a complete change in the way of life of our Republic, both internal and in our foreign relations. We should face this legislation calmly and courageously as intelligent patriots, without panic or partisanship. We do not solve these problems merely by passing them all on to one man. Control of the purse and control of the war-making power belongs to Congress. The safety and security of the American people demand they remain with Congress.

Calls Statement Comprehensive.

He (the Senator) said it was inevitable, the President replied.

Asked whether he was told that Senator Wheeler favored such domination, he replied with a question of his own—what does one do if he has made up his mind that something is inevitable?

Inevitable, Mr. Roosevelt said, is a pretty comprehensive word.

The matter of Dr. Dodd's report came up when a reporter told of reading his diary in a magazine. The reporter said it spoke of the dinner at Mr. Tugwell's home and declared that a Senator, who was not named, had advocated Nazi domination of Europe.

The Chief Executive parried questions for a time, until some one remarked that Dr. Dodd's son had said the Senator was Wheeler.

Mr. Roosevelt said he did not care to comment on the incident, explaining that he was appearing* rather, in the role of a corroborating witness.

Asked whether he had reason to believe that Senator Wheeler still held the same view, Mr. Roosevelt dismissed the question by declaring it was iffy.

Senator Wheeler was out of Washington tonight and his office staff said they did not know where he could be reached for comment on President Roosevelt's remarks at his press conference today. Senator Wheeler, who has been suffering with a cold, departed several days ago for a brief rest, it was said, and left no forwarding address.

But Senator Gerald P. Nye, Republican, of North Dakota, who also has been a strong critic of the President's plan for aiding Great Britain, had this to say:

"Senator Wheeler will have to speak for himself, as I expect he can ably do. But this looks to me like some more effort to smear a great non-interventionist as a Nazi sympathizer, which we know Wheeler not to be."

During the President's press conference a reporter quoted Ambassador Dodd's son as saying that Senator Carter Glass, Democrat, of Virginia, also attended the Tugwell dinner. Mr. Roosevelt made no comment on this. Senator Glass later told reporters that "I never was in the home of Rex Tugwell in my life."

Roosevelt Heard Wheeler Saw Nazi Rule Inevitable in 1935

President Says He Was Told Senator's View by Dodd Day After Discussion Around Tugwell's Table.

FEB 1 1941

Washington, Jan. 31 (A. P.).—President Roosevelt asserted today that the late Dr. William E. Dodd, who was Ambassador to Germany, had told him in 1934 or 1935 that Senator Wheeler, Democrat, of Montana, had said Nazi domination of Europe was inevitable.

As the story unfolded through questions at a press conference, Mr. Roosevelt related that Dr. Dodd had told him this after attending a dinner at the home of Rexford G. Tugwell, former administration official, at which Senator Wheeler was present.

The President said, furthermore, that he had been informed there was mention of the safety of the United States lying in the taking over of Canada, Mexico and five Central American republics.

"Is it asserted here," a reporter inquired, 'that Senator Wheeler advocated Nazi domination of Europe?"

Paraphrasing the remarks and questions of reporters, the President said their story was that Dr. Dodd had dined at Mr. Tugwell's home and had said in his diary afterward that he had talked with several people, one of whom Dr. Dodd's son said was Senator Wheeler.

His story, Mr. Roosevelt said, was that Dr. Dodd had told him the same thing the next day.

Asked whether the matter of the reference to Nazi domination had come up in the conversation, Mr. Roosevelt responded that it did and that Dr. Dodd had told him about it directly.

Roosevelt Says He'll Draft Plants If Necessary to Defend Nation

Cites Policy in Comment on Ford's Loss of Army Truck Order Through Hillman's Labor Clause; Ford Offers Defense Production 'at Cost'

By The Associated Press

WASHINGTON, Jan. 31.—Questioned today concerning contract difficulties between the Ford Motor Company and the War Department, President Roosevelt said the government was prepared to take over any factory in the country if that action became necessary for national defense.

At the Chief Executive's press conference a reporter brought up yesterday's disclosure that the Ford company had been denied a $10,000,000 contract for Army trucks because it took exception to certain labor clauses in the invitation for bids, although the Ford bid was the lowest.

The newsman asked whether the government was prepared to take over the company if such a step were essential to defense. Mr. Roosevelt replied that if the word Ford were left out and any plant substituted for it in the question, the answer would be yes.

There was no indication, however, whether Mr. Roosevelt believed it actually would be necessary to commandeer any plant.

By way of comment on the War Department's action in denying the contract, Mr. Ford said today that he was ready to build defense materials "at cost if other manufacturers will do the same."

The automobile manufacturer telephoned this statement from his winter home in Georgia to company headquarters in Detroit, while in Washington a War Department spokesman said that withholding the contract from the Ford company did not necessarily mean that a provision requiring compliance with all labor laws would be included in all future Army contracts.

Robert P. Patterson, Under Secretary of War, told a Congressional committee that the department was considering inclusion of such a requirement in all future contracts, but that the matter was "still in the making." He said, too, that the department was not ready to recommend "coercive" legislation to curb labor disputes on defense projects.

Hillman Got Clause Put In

The labor clause was put into the Ford contract, Mr. Patterson testified under questioning, at the request of Sidney Hillman, associate director of the Office of Production Management.

Harry H. Bennett, personnel director of the Ford company, said Mr. Ford made this statement in advancing his offer:

"There ought not to be any quibbling about bidding on defense contracts. All companies ought to do what the government wants them to do without making profit. Nobody should make any profit on defense production, anyway. It's profit in the manufacture of war materials that causes war."

The War Department announced last night that it had awarded a $10,298,128 truck contract to the Fargo Motor Corporation, of Detroit, a Chrysler affiliate, rather than to the Ford company, whose bid was $250,000 lower. Officials said this was done because the Ford company had taken exception to a provision which had been included in all the department's invitations for bids since Nov. 17. That provision stated that the bids must be subject to a circular signed by Gen. George C. Marshall, Army Chief of Staff, saying that all work executed under the contract should comply "with Federal statutory provisions affecting labor wherever such provisions are applicable."

The department held that the exception noted by the Ford company amounted to a change in specifications and that the Fargo company was the lowest bidder complying fully with the terms specified in the call for bids.

Counsel for the Ford company issued a statement saying that the company was obviously going to obey all the laws but that "arbitrary inclusion" of the controversial clause could give the government the power to cancel the contract and bring suit.

Explains Defense Contracts

When Mr. Patterson, the department's procurement chief, testified before the House Military Committee today, Representative J. Parnell Thomas, Republican, of New Jersey, asked why the truck contract had been refused to the Ford company.

"That's one of my particular headaches," Mr. Patterson replied.

In response to questions, he testified that labor provisions had been included in the contract at the request of Mr. Hillman.

Representative Thomas asked why the provision was not included in contracts previously awarded to the Ford company for $122,323,000 of airplane engines and $2,000,000 for truck and passenger automobiles.

"The others were negotiated contracts," Mr. Patterson replied.

This raised a question as to whether the department, if it wished to place additional orders with Ford for the equipment which it believed unavailable from other sources, might enter into other negotiated contracts without the labor policy specifications.

Negotiated contracts, which are permitted by existing law, are worked out by the department and producers without advertising and competitive bidding.

It was indicated that there was a possibility that Mr. Ford might lose additional future contracts for motor vehicles if he continued to take exception to the labor provision. Department officials said that about 10 per cent of the motor vehicles required for an army of 1,400,000 men were yet to be placed under contract.

The Congress of Industrial Organizations, of which Mr. Hillman is a vice-president, has protested repeatedly in the past against the award of defense contracts to the Ford company. That company has been declared by the National Labor Relations Board to be a violator of the national labor relations act, and the board's decision has been upheld in part and overturned in part by a Circuit Court of Appeals. The company's appeal from adverse court rulings is now before the Supreme Court.

Ford Would Build at Cost.

Detroit, Jan. 31 (A. P.).—Henry Ford said in a telephone conversation from his winter home in Georgia today that he would build war defense materials at cost if other manufacturers would do the same. He made the statement in commenting on published reports that the Ford company had been refused a contract for army trucks because of certain labor clauses to which the company objected.

Harry H. Bennett, personnel director of the Ford company, quoted the manufacturer as saying:

"There ought not be any quibbling about bidding on defense contracts. All companies ought to do what the Government wants them to do without making profit.

"Nobody should make any profit on defense production anyway. It's profit in the manufacture of war materials that causes war."

ROOSEVELT WEIGHS PATENT CONTROL

Says Government Has Right to Take Over Factories.

Washington, Jan. 31 (A. P.).—President Roosevelt disclosed today that he had been discussing with the Cabinet the question of the Government taking over patent rights to further the defense program.

He told his press conference that the Government clearly had the right under existing law to take control of factories if they were needed, but that there was some question whether there was enough authority to do the same with patent properties.

Patents, he said, are as essential to the manufacture of defense products as plants, and the matter of their acquisition is something that is being studied. He said that was one of the things that had been touched on in a Cabinet meeting preceding his press conference.

His discussion of the subject was prompted by a question. A reporter asked whether he would advocate changing the patent laws to prevent a recurrence of patent combining, such as that against which the Department of Justice now is taking action. Mr. Roosevelt did not reply directly to the inquiry. In responding to another inquiry, the President said he believed the Government should take over any plant handling defense orders if that action were essential.

DEFENSE TO HAVE CHOICE OF TOOLS

No Deliveries to Be Made Without OPM Approval.

Washington, Jan. 31 (A. P.).—E. R. Stettinius Jr., director of priorities for the Office of Production Management, said today that all machine tool builders had been requested not to deliver machine tools to any customers after February 28 unless that customer obtained a priority rating from the OPM.

"The effect of this action," a statement from the priorities division said, "will be to give the defense program first call on the total output of the machine tool industry."

HOUSE VOTES FUNDS FOR U. S. AGENCIES

$1,404,275,838 Appropriation Sent to Senate.

Washington, Jan. 31 (A. P.).—A $1,404,275,838 appropriation bill to finance independent governmental agencies was passed today by the House after the defeat of an effort to slash $25,000,000 from the total. The measure goes to the Senate.

The House also rejected an amendment designed to revamp the present method of hiring seamen for the American Merchant Marine through union hiring halls and give ship captains complete freedom in the matter. As approved finally, the bill's total was $9,244,500 below the budget estimates, through the inclusion of numerous defense items and a new fund of $125,000,000 for President Roosevelt's use in meeting emergencies boosted in approximately $145,000,000 above last year's appropriations for similar purposes.

Among the major items in the bill were $608,693,162 for the Veterans administration; $160,000,000 in cash and $180,000,000 in contract authorizations for the Maritime Commission to carry on its fifty-ships-a-year construction program; $69,800,000 for the Tennessee Valley Authority's dam-construction program; $33,500,000 for the selective service system's administration and $13,601,000 for the National Advisory Committee for Aeronautics. A motion by Representative Taber, Republican, of New York, to accomplish the $25,000,000 reduction was lost 192 to 141.

SHIP BILL ADVANCES

Senate Committee Accepts House Measure.

Washington, Jan. 31 (A. P.).—The Senate appropriations committee approved today a $350,000,000 emergency program for the construction of 200 steel cargo vessels.

The committee recommended enactment of House-approved legislation which would appropriate $313,500,000 to be used with $36,500,000 available from other sources for building the ships and constructing new ship yards.

EXPECTS HITLER BLOW

Halifax Thinks Nazis Must Try Invasion Soon.

Washington, Jan. 31 (A. P.).—Lord Halifax, British ambassador to the United States, said today that European developments indicated that Hitler would have to "have a go at an invasion of England soon."

Paying a call on Chairman George of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee, Lord Halifax told reporters subsequently that it was "hard to see how Hitler can stand still."

He was questioned about a statement by Secretary of the Navy Knox before the Foreign Relations Committee today. Col. Knox had said he thought a crisis for Britain was imminent in from sixty to ninety days.

"I have no information on the number of days," Lord Halifax said, "but the situation developing in Italy, the Balkans and internal conditions in Germany make it seem necessary that Hitler have a go at it soon."

BRITAIN HELD EAGER FOR NAZI INVASION

Banker, Here on Clipper, Says Nation Is Well Prepared to Repel an Attack

EXPECTS ASSAULT SOON

Arrives With Fellow-Director to Dispose of England's Fixed Assets in the U. S.

NEW YORK JAN 31 (TIMES)

Britain not only expects invasion "soon" but is prepared and even eager for it as well as confident that the German attempt will fail, according to Sir Edward R. Peacock, English banker, and an American observer who arrived yesterday on the Yankee Clipper.

Sir Edward, a director of the Bank of England and of Baring Brothers & Co., arrived with John C. H. Williams, also a director of the Bank of England, to dispose of British fixed assets in this country, the proceeds of which would be used to meet war purchases in the United States.

Both Sir Edward and Fred Bate, chief of the London staff of the National Broadcasting Company, who bore scars of a recent air raid, spoke of Britain's confidence and determination in the face of invasion threats. Sir Edward was asked if he thought an attacking Nazi force would be "thrown back into the sea."

"We kept them out when we weren't very ready and we certainly can do it now when we are," he replied with typical British calmness.

What Authorities Expect

Sir Edward, when asked if he thought invasion was near, said his opinion "really carries no weight," but added:

"When I left the authorities expected an invasion soon. We think they (the Germans) will have a try at it."

Mr. Bate, who is here for a rest, described the British as "getting madder and tougher slowly."

"One thing you hear everybody saying is that they wish the Germans would attempt an invasion," Mr. Bate said. "They want it."

Mr. Bate was injured in the bombing of the NBC offices recently, as he was preparing a broadcast at 11 o'clock at night. He described the blast as being "like all of London pouring through the window."

Sir Edward was unable to discuss details of his mission here. He will confer with Secretary of the Treasury Henry Morgenthau Jr. and Sir Frederick Phillips, British Under-Secretary of the Treasury, who is now in Washington.

He said he did not know the value of British holdings in this country or how long his visit would last. He had been asked, he explained, to come here "in a hurry" two weeks ago and had been delayed in Lisbon.

"I am going to try to find out what can be done immediately in order to pay for the things we need now," Sir Edward explained. "British negotiable securities in this country have been on sale for a long time. Then there are the fixed assets, such as American subsidiaries of British concerns. The problem of selling these assets is more obscure."

Pleased by Aid to Britain

Mr. Williams, when asked for comment on aid to Britain, replied that "the effort has already started and it is a very fine one."

Major Frank A. Armstrong of the United States Army Air Corps returned after spending three months in Europe as an observer. He would not discuss his mission. Another passenger, Hugh H. Clegg, a Federal Bureau of Investigation agent, who had been to Britain, was equally reticent.

The other two of the clipper's seven passengers were Orris A. Gates, State Department courier, and James B. Massey, Pan American Airways employe. The clipper carried 2,446 pounds of mail.

Captain R. O. D. Sullivan, who set the ship down on the water at 1:42 P. M., a few minutes ahead of schedule, reported an uneventful trip except that he had broken the clipper flight record from Horta to Berumda by covering the distance in fourteen and a half hours.

The Dixie Clipper will depart from La Guardia Field at 8:30 A. M. today, flying over a new route that will touch Europe, Africa, South America and Puerto Rico.

Navy to Build Huge Warships at Brooklyn

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, Jan. 31.—The Navy Department plans to double shipbuilding facilities of the Brooklyn Navy Yard, Mayor F. H. La Guardia says, by building at a cost of approximately $15,000,000 two new drydocks, each big enough to permit construction of 45,000-ton battleships.

At present there are four drydocks at the yard, none big enough to accommodate ships of more than 35,000 tons.

ASKS 200,000 AIR FLIVVERS

Col. Turner Would Use Them for Home Defense.

Indianapolis, Jan. 31 (A. P.).—Col. Roscoe Turner, the nation's No. 1 speed flyer, proposed today the formation of an armada of 200,000 converted flivver planes manned by private pilots for home defense.

Col. Turner, acknowledged the country's leading speedster by the National Aeronautic Association, said in an interview that such a force could be established and equipped in a year and a half, and could repel invasion by land or sea.

He expressed the belief that the 30,000 or more light two-place planes already in use in the United States could be increased to 200,000 in that period by a step-up in production.

"The cheapest military plane you've got is around $35,000," he said. "You can get these little ships in bunches like bananas for $2,000 apiece."

In the same eighteen-month period, he contended, the Civil Aeronautics Board could expand the number of private pilots through an enlarged training program. He said there were 45,000 at present.

Col. Turner suggested that each two-place plane be converted into a single-seater, with the second seat fitted with a rack for a 100-pound bomb or two fifty-pounders and the cockpit inclosed with fifty pounds of armor plate.

Even without bombsights, he said, such planes would be effective with projectiles dropped from 1,000 to 1,500 feet.

"Send them out in droves and you can blow any invading army to pieces before it got a start," he asserted. "You could fight off any ground forces from any direction."

He proposed that the Government buy or lease such planes, provide airports, and hire pilots for an organization similar to the National Guard.

"By creating this flivver-plane army," he said, "you could release all of the high-speed, high-powered fighting planes and long distance bombers for offensive duty."

ITALY REJECTS U. S. BOMBING PROTEST

Curt Reply From Rome Spurning American Criticism Revealed In Capital

Two Were Killed And Two Hurt In Attack Last Summer On Mission In Sudan

[By the Associated Press]

Washington, Jan. 31—The State Department made public today a strong protest to Italy for an air attack on a mission in the Anglo-Egyptian Sudan last summer and a curt reply rejecting the American Government's criticism of the Italian armed forces.

Two Americans, Dr. and Mrs. Robert Grieve, were killed and two others, Mr. and Mrs. Kenneth Oglesby, were wounded in what the United States note described as a "brutal unprovoked attack" by Italian airplanes August 23.

After an extended investigation by the American Legation at Cairo, the United States lodged a protest with Italy November 1 which asked for punishment of those "guilty of an outrage."

Italian Interim Reply

The Italian Foreign Office submitted an interim reply November 6 which said detailed information had been requested from military authorities but because of the distant locality in which the attack occurred, a report probably would not be received for some time.

The Italian note also said that the American protest "contains criticisms of the Italian armed forces which cannot but be rejected in toto."

The State Department said no further communication had been received from the Italian Government.

Administration Seeks To Speed Inter-American Bank Plan

Will Ask Congress To Push Legislation For Institution To Bolster Hemisphere Economy

FEB 1 - 1941

[By the Associated Press]

Washington, Jan. 31—As a further step in strengthening Western Hemisphere economy, the Administration is preparing to ask Congress soon, it was learned today, to hasten establishment of an inter-American bank.

Eight other American republics have signified their intention of participating in the project, which may become the chief intergovernmental medium for stabilizing the economy and currency of Latin-American nations.

Organization of the bank awaits Senate ratification of the convention, and Congressional authorization of this Government's financial subscription in the institution which is to have a minimum capital of $100,000,000.

Confer On Final Details

Governmental officials have been conferring this week on final details of the plan preparatory to requesting speedy action by Congress.

The Inter-American bank plan grew out of the Panama conference of American foreign ministers in 1939. It calls for a minimum United States contribution of $5,000,000 to the bank's capital and equal or smaller amounts from the other participating countries. Those which have indicated their intention of participating are Brazil, Mexico, Dominican Republic, Colombia, Nicaragua, Ecuador, Bolivia and Paraguay.

Under the proposed charter, on which officials have been working, the bank would have broad powers in helping to stabilize currencies, promoting industrial development in the Americas, and otherwise strengthening the economic system of the various countries.

Has Wide Powers

It would grant loans or credits to governments or individuals or guarantee loans.

The bank was expected to function in close collaboration with the American Export-Import Bank, which received a $500,000,000 authorization from Congress last year for assisting other American republics as an economic defense measure.

Of this amount, only about one-fifth has been used thus far because, officials said, some of the more distressing economic conditions foreseen as an outgrowth of the war have not yet developed.

U. S. OBSERVER INJURED BY NAZI BOMB IN LONDON

Major Robert Williams, Off Duty, Hit By Fragment. May Lose Sight Of Eye

German Raiders Inflict Considerable Casualties In Daylight Raids

FEB 1 - 1941

[By the Associated Press]

London, Jan. 31—German raiders, flying singly but in impressive total numbers, inflicted numerous casualties in London today, including Major Robert Williams, United States air observer, who was seriously injured.

Major Williams was taken to a hospital and fears were expressed that he might lose the sight of one eye. He was injured by a fragment from a one-hundred-pound bomb.

The censor authorized publication of the statement that Major Williams "was not on duty when hit."

Native Of Texas

A native of Albany, Texas, the 39-year-old major was the first American military casualty in this war since Capt. Robert M. Losey, assistant United States military attache at Stockholm, was killed in a German bombing raid at Dombas, Norway, April 21, 1940.

Three hospitals and a number of other buildings were hit.

The Luftwaffe switched from its former night tactics, using clouds instead of darkness to hide its movements, strewing high explosive and fire bombs over many London areas, apparently without aiming at specific targets. Other such raids were made on the east Midlands, southern and southwest England.

Raiders Follow Each Other

There were many more attackers in the air today than on the two previous days of before-dark assault. They followed one another at short distances to form wave attacks similar to the method favored heretofore at night.

At times today brusts of machine-gun fire were heard from low-flying planes apparently trying to shoot down London's barrage balloons.

Of the three London hospitals damaged, one received a direct hit. The Government acknowledged damage to other buildings and a small number of fires, but said the number of dead and wounded was not large.

Wounded Treated Near By

The direct hit came while persons injured by bombs falling in near-by streets were being given first-aid treatment. Some members of the staff were injured seriously and patients sustained minor injuries.

Other bombs fell in a London square—further identification was not permitted—and in surrounding streets, wrecking two shops and heavily damaging several others.

While this, the third straight day of persistent daylight attacks, was in progress, Prime Minister Churchill took Harry L. Hopkins, President Roosevelt's special emissary, on a three-hour tour of Britain's biggest naval base at Portsmouth and led dockworkers in a vociferous "Three cheers for the President of the United States."

Churchill Encouraged

He introduced Hopkins to Portsmouth city officials as "the envoy and friend of President Roosevelt, that great statesman and friend of freedom and democracy," and added: "One cannot help feeling enormously encouraged by the spirit of the ever-growing movement of aid to Britain which we see laying hold of the mighty masses in the United States."

Despite the difficulty of spotting the high-flying raiders above the clouds, British fighters were credited officially with shooting down two attacking bombers.

One of the downed raiders was shot out of the clouds at Plumpton, near Lewes in Sussex, and the other was sent plunging into the sea off Porthcurno, in Cornwall.

A native of Albany, Texas, the 39-year-old major was the first American military casualty in this war since Capt. Robert M. Losey, assistant United States military attaché at Stockholm, was killed in a German bombing raid at Dombas, Norway, on April 21, 1940.

Williams a Native of Texas.

Washington, Jan. 31 (A. P.).—Major Robert B. Williams, army air observer injured in a London air raid, was sent to England after having served at Langley Field, Virginia.

A native of Albany, Tex., Major Williams is 39. He entered the Air Corps in 1923 on his graduation from Texas A. and M. College, and in his subsequent military career has served at Mitchel Field, New York; March Field, California, and in the Panama Canal Zone.

He was an instructor at the army's training center at Randolph Field, Texas, in 1932-32, and has graduated from the Air Corps Tactical School and the army's command and general staff school.

Nazis Are Firing Shells Over Ten Miles Inland

Deal, England, Jan. 31 (AP)—German guns along the coast of France have been lobbing shells ten or eleven miles inland from the Kent coast in the last three days, but the random shots have been falling mostly in open country.

One, however, knocked down a church steeple near Canterbury.

"The shells fall intermittently," said one observer. "Nobody is paying any attention to them."

Most of the previous shelling has been confined to the Dover Straits, harbors and the actual coastline itself. Dover is twenty-three miles from France; hence, the shells now have been fired a distance of thirty-four miles.

U. S. Air Aide in London Wounded by Bomb; Major Williams May Lose Sight of One Eye

By The Associated Press.

LONDON, Jan. 31—Major Robert B. Williams, United States air observer, was injured seriously today by a high explosive bomb during a German air raid.

Major Williams was taken to a hospital and fears were expressed that he may lose the sight of one eye.

The bomb which wounded him flung glass and debris. Observers said it must have been a 100-pound missile.

The censor authorized publication of the statement that Major Williams "was not on duty when hit."

Day Raiders Damage 3 London Hospitals

FEB 1 - 1941

[By the Associated Press]

London, Jan. 31—Three London hospitals were reported damaged by German bombs, one from a direct hit, today in afternoon raids by single German planes.

Official accounts acknowledged damage to other buildings and houses and a small number of fires, but said the number of casualties was "not large."

Two German bombers were officially reported shot down.

Several Of Staff Hurt

In the hospital directly hit, some of the staff were injured seriously and some patients suffered minor injuries. Persons injured by bombs falling in nearby streets were being admitted to the hospital when it was struck. The first-aid work proceeded.

The attack repeated the pattern of those yesterday and the day before, the attackers slipping through a cover of clouds to drop explosive and fire bombs, apparently without aiming at specific targets. There had been no alerts overnight.

One raider was reported shot down near Lewes, in Sussex, and another in the sea off Porthcurno, in Cornwall, indicating the wide extent of the forays.

The raiders, bolder and more numerous than on the previous days, seemed, however, still to be operating singly.

Balloons Target, Belief

Two explosives and several incendiaries fell in one London street. In another area, several bursts of machine-gun fire from low flying planes were heard. The raiders were believed to be trying to shoot down barrage balloons.

Bombs which fell on a London square—further identification was forbidden—and in surrounding streets wrecked two shops and severely damaged others. One plunged with a violent splash into a water tank.

A number of incendiaries fell near a huge sand pile where workmen were filling bags for just such an emergency. Some messenger boys, loafing nearby, helped scoop up the sand and extinguish the bombs.

Chapel Demolished

In an East Anglian town a Congregational chapel was reported demolished and many houses damaged. One woman was said to have been killed in this eastern England action when a bomber, having cleaned its rack, returned, skimming housetops and strafing the streets.

A London source expressed belief that the Germans were using the day raids to learn weather conditions for more numerous night raiders and also to determine whether the British were using murky weather to shield changes in the positions of military forces.

The supposed machine-gun attack above the clouds on the barrage balloons—London's aerial stockade against hostile bombers—indicated a repetition of yesterday's assaults on the cable-moored bags here and at Dover. (The German high command said today twelve had been shot down yesterday in the two areas.)

British warplane destruction was more than 11 to 1 compared to that of the Axis powers during January, according to figures published today, and the ratio from the start of the war was said to be almost four to one in Britain's favor.

These were the figures on losses:

For January—Britain, 32; the Axis powers, 371.

Since the Start of the War—Britain, 848, of which 427 pilots were saved; the Axis powers, 3,068, not including losses caused by coastal command planes.

January Record

Although half the January nights have been raidless, thirteen German raiders were said to have been shot down over Britain in darkness and only eleven were claimed during daylight.

British losses included eighteen bombers on night raids in western Europe, one reconnaissance plane and one fighter off the south coast.

The score in the western desert during January is not fully tallied, but according to available figures 45 Italian planes were downed in battle, two were damaged and 209 were destroyed on the ground. British losses were listed as seven.

Elsewhere, 44 Axis planes were said to have been destroyed in the Malta region, compared with a British loss of three, and between 30 and 40 at the German-used base at Catania, Sicily, compared with a loss of two British raiders.

Trawlers Hit, Fire Plane

The British trawlers Charmouth and Rattray reported shooting down a large German plane which bombed and machine-gunned them today.

The trawlers, identified as fishing boats, were taking in their trawls when the bomber circled above them and dropped a stick of high explosive bombs.

When the attacker swooped and machine-gunned the small boats, it was said, the fishermen returned the fire and finally drove the plane away in flames. It was reported to have plunged into the sea some miles away.

None of the bombs struck the trawlers and it was said no casualties resulted from the machine-gunning.

Bad weather which kept German air raiders from Britain last night was said also to have prevented any major operations against Germany by the Royal Air Force.

Weather conditions over the continent, it was reported, obscured targets and endangered take-offs and landings.

Plane Above Clouds

The thin-bodied German plane crossed the coast above the cover of clouds.

The first time the guns went into action Willkie was standing at the end of the eastern arm of Dover harbor, about twenty miles from the German-occupied French coast.

Sees Rescue Float

The visitor also was shown articles taken from a German rescue float which recently was picked up after it had broken its Channel moorings.

Anti-invasion guns mounted at the extreme end of the harbor fired several rounds for him to see.

After inspecting a giant gun named "Winnie" for Winston Churchill, Willkie drove back to London.

To See Midlands

Willkie came to Dover unaccompanied by newspapermen, but press representatives attended his doings here. At London the Ministry of Information had said that because of the nature of what he was to be shown "we must exclude the press."

It was announced that Willkie would visit Coventry and Birmingham, two of the most heavily bombed cities, on a Sunday trip into the midlands.

"Very impressive," was the way he summed up the British defenses closest to the Nazi-held French coast only twenty-two miles across the Channel.

Willkie Sees Fighting At 'Hell's Corner'

FEB 1 - 1941

[By the Associated Press]

Dover, England, Jan. 31 — Mud-splashed and weary after a day in Britain's front line on the Channel, Wendell L. Willkie declared late today that British defenses against invasion appeared "very impressive and I wouldn't like to be the German attacking them."

He remarked that he had seen "some slight shelling" across the Channel, but that "it didn't amount to anything."

"The defenses exceeded my expectations in many ways," he said. 'I think the Germans have a tough job on their hands."

Twice during an inspection of "Hell's Corner"—the Dover defenses—Willkie saw anti-aircraft guns in action against a Dornier "flying pencil."

Willkie Gets Taste Of Nazi Shelling In British 'Hell Corner'

Dover, England, Jan. 31 (AP)—Splashing through the mud of Britain's front lines in this "hell's corner," Wendell L. Willkie witnessed some "slight" cross-Channel shelling today, watched anti-aircraft guns in action against a Nazi raider and concluded: "I wouldn't like to be the German attacking these invasion defenses."

Willkie's shoes and clothes were crusted with mud after his tour, and he was weary but full of enthusiasm for Britain's preparations against the day when Adolf Hitler's legions might attempt to set foot on British soil.

"THEY EXCEEDED MY EXPECTATIONS IN MANY WAYS," HE SAID. "I THINK THE GERMANS HAVE A TOUGH JOB ON THEIR HANDS."

WHILE HE WAS STANDING AT THE EASTERN END OF DOVER HARBOR, ANTI-AIRCRAFT BATTERIES WENT INTO ACTION AGAINST A DORNIER "FLYING PENCIL." ANTI-INVASION GUNS AT THE EXTREME END OF THE HARBOR ALSO FIRED SEVERAL ROUNDS FOR HIS BENEFIT.

AFTER LOOKING OVER A GIANT SHORE GUN NAMED "WINNIE," FOR PRIME MINISTER WINSTON CHURCHILL, HE DROVE BACK TO LONDON.

WILLKIE WILL SPEND THE WEEK-END IN THE COUNTRY, BUT REFUSED TO SAY WHO HIS HOSTS WOULD BE. HE EXPECTED TO BE IN COVENTRY SUNDAY TO "SEE WHAT INDUSTRIAL PRODUCTION LOOKS LIKE AFTER THE SEVERE BOMBING THERE."

AN INFORMED SOURCE SAID THAT SECRETARY OF STATE HULL HAD ASKED WILLKIE TO RETURN TO THE UNITED STATES AS SOON AS POSSIBLE TO TESTIFY BEFORE THE SENATE FOREIGN AFFAIRS COMMITTEE ON THE AID-TO-BRITAIN BILL.

WILLKIE PLANS TO LEAVE LONDON TUESDAY NIGHT AND DEPART FROM BRITAIN WEDNESDAY MORNING.

WILLKIE SEES GUNS

Gets Close View of British Coastal Defenses.

London, Jan. 31 (A. P.).—Wendell L. Willkie inspected some of Britain's coastal defenses today. For the first time since he came to England, newspaper men were left behind.

The Ministry of Information explained that the nature of what Mr. Willkie was to see was such that "we must exclude the press."

Hopkins Visits Portsmouth

PORTSMOUTH, England, Jan. 31. (AP). — Prime Minister Winston Churchill toured this British naval base for three hours today, accompanied by Harry L. Hopkins, President Roosevelt's special emissary, and led dockyard workers in a vociferous "three cheers for the President of the United States."

To the Portsmouth city fathers he introduced Mr. Hopkins as "the envoy and friend of President Roosevelt, that great statesman and friend of freedom and democracy," and added: "One cannot help feeling enormously encouraged by the spirit of the ever-growing movement of aid to Britain which we see laying hold of the mighty masses of the United States."

Standing in front of a ship, the Prime Minister then called for the three cheers for Mr. Roosevelt. The workers responded with a roar of "hip, hip, hoorays."

With Mr. Hopkins and Mrs. Churchill, the Prime Minister climbed across the docks and delved through the bomb-hit areas of the city. Everywhere crowds greeted him with shouts of "good old Winnie!" and his invariable reply was "good luck to you all!"

Earlier Mr. Churchill visited Southampton. There he asked a crowd of civil defense workers: "Are we downhearted?"

"No!" they thundered.

Speaking to the City Council and Lord Mayor, Mr. Churchill declared the events in Libya and Albania had shown "the rottenness and weakness" of the Nazi-Fascist regime so far as Italy was concerned—the Fascists were forced to bring in the Nazis to rescue and rule them.

Add Portsmouth x x x them.

"All this gives us encouragement to face the long hard ordeals which lie before us; but to which we shall not be found unequal. We shall come through. We cannot tell when, we cannot tell how, but we'll come through. When we have done so, we shall have the right to say that we live in an age that in all the long history of Britain was the most filled with glorious achievements and the most graced by duties dones."

Join Us In Battling Italy, De Gaulle Asks Weygand's Men

Calls On French Troops In Africa To Throw Off "Shameful" Inertia And Help Him In War

FEB 1 - 1941

[By the Associated Press]

London, Jan. 31—The Free French commander, Gen. Charles de Gaulle, called today upon the unbeaten French armies under Gen. Maxime Weygand in north and west Africa to throw off their "shameful" inertia and help "complete the conquest of Italian Libya."

"Don't you see it is up to you?" he asked, in a French-language broadcast over the British Broadcasting Company's facilities.

Game Not Finished, He Says

It was an appeal for the Weygand forces, sizable, well-armed, but immobilized by their loyalty to Vichy and their recognition of the French-German armistice, to strike at Libya from Tunisia on the west, just as the British and Free French units are piercing that desert colony from the east.

"The game is not finished," de Gaulle declared. "The great battle of the Mediterranean will suddenly increase in scope like a powder dump when set on fire."

If the battle is lost, he went on, "French independence will vanish forever," but if it is won, "the fate of our enemies will be sealed."

Appeals For United Stand

He told of the "heroic deeds" of the Free French troops now fighting in Libya and Ethiopia and declared:

"Generals, officers, men of French Africa! My comrades in arms! Let us stand together. Are you going to stay inactive with arms at your side, humiliated, broken-spirited, when the fate of France and her empire is being decided within range of your guns? . . . Are you not going to break, as we have done for France's service and the honor of our arms, the shameful watchword of inertia?"

There have been Axis indications that Germans and Italians might send warships and troops to Bizerte, Tunisia, if the Weygand armies made any such move as that urged by de Gaulle.

According to CBS, the British radio quoting Radio Algiers, said Weygand would broadcast from Algiers Saturday night to all French Africa. It appeared possible he would answer de Gaulle.

PLEA BY DE GAULLE

Asks French African Army to Re-enter the War.

London, Jan. 31 (A. P.).—Gen. Charles de Gaulle, Free French chieftain, appealed tonight to the French Army in North Africa under Gen. Maxime Weygand to reenter the war and aid in completion of the conquest of Italian Libya.

In a broadcast by the BBC addressed to the French people, Gen. De Gaulle said that "the game is not finished."

"The great battle of the Mediterranean will increase in scope, like a fire in a powder dump," he said, adding that the fate of France was bound closely with the outcome of the battle.

LONDON FIRST ADD DE GAULLE X X X THE BATTLE.

IF BRITAIN LOSES THE BATTLE, "FRENCH INDEPENDENCE WILL VANISH FOREVER," SAID DE GAULLE, BUT IF SHE WINS "THE FATE OF OUR ENEMIES WILL BE SEALED. X X X THE LATIN SEA (MEDITERRANEAN) OFFERS A STARTING POINT FOR OPERATIONS WHICH WILL MAKE A VICTORY POSSIBLE."

HE PAID TRIBUTE TO THE "FREE FRENCH" FORCES FIGHTING NOW IN AFRICA ALONG WITH THE BRITISH AND SAID:

"GENERALS, OFFICERS AND MEN OF FRENCH AFRICA! MY COMRADES IN ARMS! LET US STAND TOGETHER. . . . DON'T YOU SEE IT IS UP TO YOU, THE COMPLETION OF THE CONQUEST OF ITALIAN LIBYA? ARE YOU NOT GOING TO BREAK, AS WE HAVE DONE FOR FRANCE'S SERVICE AND THE HONOR OF OUR ARMS, THE SHAMEFUL WATCHWORD OF INERTIA?"

NEW YORKER JOINS WOMEN'S WAR UNIT

Francis Blake Is Only Male in British Outfit.

London, Jan. 31 (A. P.).—W. V. S. designates Women's Volunteer Service in this war, but Francis S. Blake, the 28-year-old son of a New York stock broker, wears the initials on his shoulder and is the only male member of that service in England. Mr. Blake had spent several years in England, and when the war started cast about for something to do, but found most avenues blocked because he was an alien. Civil defense, the Red Cross and other units said "No." So he turned to the W. V. S. and was accepted.

Each day now he drives a truck through the countryside, carrying anything from bandages to babies. Sometimes his load consists of heavy bales of blankets, and women comrades seem to appreciate his help. Passers-by smile when they see the W. V. S. on his shoulder, but it is no joke to Mr. Blake. There is now some talk of presenting him with a suit of the green herringbone tweed used by all the other members of the service, but he will wear trousers, not skirts.

Mr. Blake married the former Barbara Stracey Clitherow, a cousin of Lord Templemore and of Lord Hothfield.

George's illness was serious, but his car was blocked by drifted snow at several places along the 200-mile route.

At one village policemen and cottagers cut a pathway for 5 miles and at another home guards and children turned out to extricate Lloyd George's automobile.

Dame Lloyd George died January 20. The husband and two sons attended the funeral January 23. At the time it was said that "road mishaps" and "obstructions" barred Lloyd George's way home.

The Cheshire Cheese To Reopen in London

London, Jan. 31 (A. P.).—Ye Olde Cheshire Cheese, the famous Fleet street eating place, familiar to many Americans, expects to resume business next week. It survived a bombing and fire raid, but was damaged by a fire on January 23 when a rat chewed a wire and caused a short circuit.

Among other things, one of the world's biggest punch bowls was lost. Chairs used by Charles Dickens, Samuel Johnson and Oliver Goldsmith, among the patrons of the place in past centuries, were burned but can be repaired. A portrait of Dr. Johnson is believed ruined, and the long-preserved wax for Goldsmith's wig went up in flames.

British Alarms to Show Nature of Missiles

London, Jan. 31 (A. P.).—The Ministry of Home Security announced today that it had decided to distinguish between alarms for high explosives and fire bombs dropped from raiding planes.

When incendiaries are falling, air raid wardens, policemen and firewatchers will blow a series of short, sharp blasts on their whistles.

Until now such signals have accompanied the air raid sirens to warn of imminent danger or planes overhead. From now on long whistle blasts will reenforce or replace the general siren signal.

Berlin Says Planes Sank Ship Far At Sea

[By the Associated Press]

Berlin, Jan. 31—Long-range German warplanes were reported by the Nazi high command today to have sunk the 3,677-ton merchant ship Austvard 250 miles off Donegal, Ireland, and another smaller vessel near the mouth of the Humber river on the English east coast.

(Lloyd's register lists the Austvard as a 3,677-ton vessel of Norwegian registry.)

A German submarine also was credited with sinking 20,000 tons of "enemy merchant shipping space."

Sailors Complained Here

(Nine sailors aboard the motorship Austvard attempted to break their contracts in Federal Court in Baltimore last August, protesting they had been "ill-treated" when their skipper left a convoy and refused to keep a zig-zag course to avoid submarines.

(They also said travel in belligerent waters had become more dangerous since they signed on. The court ruled against them and they were obliged to sail for Liverpool.

(The vessel had been trading between England and Norfolk, Baltimore and other Eastern ports.)

"Audacious Attacks"

German authorities also reported two other merchant ships attacked by long-range Nazi bombers and both so heavily hit they were assumed to have been lost. Both were described as of about 5,000 tons.

One was said to have been attacked about ninety miles west of the Hebrides and the other about 250 miles off Scotland.

During daylight raids on southeast England yesterday, a communique said, individual Nazi planes made "audacious attacks" on "airports, troops, camps, anti-aircraft positions, automobile columns, factories and rail lines."

In one attack, delivered from low altitude, the war bulletin said bombs were dropped among combat planes of the Bristol-Blenheim type standing on an airdrome.

Five Balloons Downed

Bombs were said to have exploded a munitions dump on a drill ground southeast of London and factory buildings were reported destroyed east of Cambridge. Five barrage balloons were reported shot down at Dover. All German aircraft were said to have returned to base.

Long-range German guns also shelled "war essential objectives" in southeast England, the high command said.

There was no air activity by either side last night, the Germans said.

"Germany has overlooked no possibility to expand her U-boat weapon both materially and as regards personnel in the best manner imaginable," the service said today.

"That applies not only to the number but also to the training of submarine crews, which cannot be surpassed."

Say Hitler Meant Combat Zone.

Authorized sources reiterated emphatically that Hitler referred only to ships reaching the English combat zone when he spoke of torpedoing vessels at sight.

The Fuehrer, in his anniversary speech yesterday, said:

"Let there be no deception about one fact: Whoever believes he can help England must at all events know one thing:

"Every ship, with or without convoy, that comes within range of our torpedo tubes will be torpedoed."

The authorized sources said the entire context of the speech showed no other interpretation was possible. They acknowledged, however, that the warning to neutrals also was addressed to the United States not to send ships convoyed or otherwise into this combat zone.

Question of War on Greece.

One correspondent inquired whether Hitler's assertion that the axis would now strike at England wherever she put in an appearance meant Germany would declare war on Greece.

Authorized sources said naturally they could not be more authoritative than Hitler himself and left it to each correspondent to do his own interpreting.

The general impression gained, however, was that German relations with Greece would continue on the present basis of non-belligerency.

"A rational world can take it seriously only as a revelation of dangerous delusions of a disordered mind," said the Daily Telegraph.

The Times said "America was once more warned of the dire consequences of giving assistance to Britain," but added, "the tone of the warning showed a prudent disinclination to challenge American opinion * * *."

The Daily Express comment was: "You may anger Americans by threats. You won't scare them. Swiftly Roosevelt gave Hitler evidence of that by releasing to the world the text of his week-old message to Lord Halifax (new British Ambassador to the United States). It is a pledge of warm friendliness to Britain."

Both the Times and the Laborite Daily Herald suggested the Fuehrer's speech was intended for German home consumption. The Herald added, "It has no resemblance to reality. It is pure fantasy."

The British Broadcasting Corp., in a German-language broadcast heard by C. B. S. in New York last night, remarked: "Hitler is right; this war will end with collapse and a revolution on one side or on the other, and we in Great Britain make our prophecy' The free peoples of Great Britain and of America will fight this war to the bitter end, and, to use Hitler's own words, the German people will do all that which is necessary for its own interests, which is that it will be forced to throw off the Nazis."

The article, signed by one Federico de Madrid, was in sharp contrast to recent editorials attacking the United States for alleged designs on South America.

Germans Want Flandin Ousted, Laval Recalled

Nazi-Controlled Press Warns 'Anglophile' Vichy It Faces a 'Peace of Destruction'

VICHY, Jan. 31 (AP).—The political situation in France was nearing a new crisis tonight, with informed persons saying that Pierre-Etienne Flandin, the Foreign Minister, might have to resign.

Newspapers in German-occupied Paris continued their campaign against the Vichy government as now constituted and said that German officials took the stand that Flandin was one of those responsible for the departure from the government last month of Pierre Laval, who has been Vice-Premier, Foreign Minister and political heir to Chief of State Marshal Henri Petain.

The Germans were represented also as feeling that collaboration between Germany and France would be impossible unless Laval returned to a place in the government. They were said to feel that the Vichy government's policy at present was "anglophile."

[Authorized Foreign Ministry sources at Berlin, on Thursday, deployed the failure of Marshal Petain to get together with Laval more closely than was indicated by their recent talk.]

Thus far, Fernand de Brinon, the Vichy government's envoy to the occupying authorities, has not come here from Paris as expected, and it still is unknown when Fuehrer Adolf Hitler's expected note on the question of collaboration will be brought to Vichy.

FLANDIN MAY QUIT PETAIN'S CABINET

Nazis Blame Him for Laval Ouster—Tension Rises.

Vichy, Jan 31 (A. P.).—Informed persons here said tonight that there was a strong possibility Pierre-Etienne Flandin would resign as Foreign Minister as newspapers in German-occupied Paris continued a campaign against the Vichy Government. It was said that German officials of the occupied territory took the stand that Flandin was one of those responsible for the ousting of Pierre Laval, former Foreign Minister and Vice-Premier, from the Vichy Government.

The Germans also were believed to take the position that German-French collaboration would be impossible unless Laval returned to the Government and other changes were made in the Cabinet.

In informed quarters it was said that the Germans considered the present Vichy regime's policy friendly to Britain and that collaboration could not be resumed under present conditions. Observers expressed the belief that the French political situation was nearing a new crisis, but would not predict when a new move was to be expected.

Hitler Replies to Petain.

The British radio, in a broadcast picked up here today by CBS, announced that Adolf Hitler's representative in Paris was reported to have handed over to the envoy of the Vichy Government, Hitler's reply to the message sent him on December 25 by Marshal Petain. The reply was said to be brief.

R. A. F. BOMBS BASE 120 MILES WEST OF DERNA

Reports Direct Hits On Hangars Of Italian Airdrome At Barce

Nigerian Troops Help To Harry Fascist Forces In Somaliland

[By the Associated Press]

Cairo, Egypt, Jan. 31—Advanced British striking forces, bombers and motorized troops, operated west of the fallen Italian base of Derna toward Bengasi today, methodically clearing the way for the expected general assault upon that important naval center and capital of eastern Libya.

Official news was scarce, but it appeared that the same program that reduced Bardia and Tobruk, and yesterday Derna, was at work again—dashes of reconnaissance and attrition by Britain's dusty tanks and an endless offensive patrol of the air by British bombers.

Italian Base Bombed

The Royal Air Force told of a heavy bombardment of the Italian air base at Barce, 120 miles beyond Derna on the road to Bengasi, announcing that its daylong activities of yesterday had been "mainly focused" on that military settlement.

The airdrome was declared to have been attacked repeatedly, and direct hits were claimed on a series of hangars and other buildings. A single Italian plane was reported downed.

The British command itself covered its activities on every front—from Libya to the fighting along the frontier areas of Italian Somaliland 2,000 miles to the south—in ten words:

"On all fronts operations continue to develop to our advantage."

Offensive In Somaliland

From Kenya itself it was reported that Nigerian troops operating in the coastal sector had joined the British in harrying the Italians in Italian Somaliland, destroying the village of Kiamboni and meeting not a single Fascist soldier.

The town, said to have been a center of Italian native troop activity, was reported burned by the Nigerians, who were aided in the operation by ships of the Kenya coastal defenses, which transported troops.

The R. A. F. reported here new bombing attacks upon Moyale, which lies in the Kenya-Ethiopian zone of fighting. Italian artillery and infantry positions were attacked.

Other planes bombed and machine-gunned Italian posts and buildings in Moyale itself, the communique said.

Stiff resistance encountered at Derna, which fell yesterday after four days of the fiercest fighting of the North African campaign, warned the British that the going may prove increasingly hard.

The belief prevailed in military circles here that the Italians, who have been rolled backward across 250 miles of arid, sandy terrain in the past 53 days, intend to make a determined stand in an effort to save Bengasi—a city of 50,000, important as a naval base and the capital of Eastern Libya.

Face Heart-Breaking Retreat.

Military strategists pointed out that Marshal Rodolfo Graziani's troops must stop the British at Bengasi or face the alternative of a heart-breaking retreat along the Gulf of Sirte—an inhospitable waste of desert and rocks stretching all the way to Tripolitania.

Belief that the Italians might make a stand at Bengasi was enhanced by the fact it is only 500 miles from the Sicilian airdromes from which German dive bombers began operating recently.

In their favor, however, the British contend, is the fact that the country between Derna and Bengasi has more and better roads than territory so far conquered, which would facilitate the movement of their mechanized units.

It was uncertain here how many men Marshal Graziani has at his disposal to defend Bengasi. Reports from the front indicated that the Derna garrison consisted of about 10,000 men, and it was presumed that many of these had retreated westward before the British entered the town.

There was no indication that the British had cut the coastal road beyond Derna before the final assault and the communique announcing its capture made no mention of prisoners.

Bengasi Is Britons' Next Objective

CAIRO, Egypt, Jan. 31 (AP).—British operations on all African fronts were reported today by general headquarters to be developing "to our advantage."

The British Army of the Nile had turned its back on the Eastern Libyan wastelands after driving the Italians from Derna and pressed on westward and southwestward through the fertile upland country with Bengasi as its next objective.

The Royal Air Force announced a heavy bombardment yesterday of the Italian airdrome at Barce, on the road from Derna to Bengasi.

The Libyan activities of the R. A. F. were centered on Barce, 50 miles west of Derna, the communique said. In several attacks hits were observed on hangars and other buildings around the air field, the report continued, and an Italian plane was shot down by a fighter escorting the British bombers.

East African Air Operations.

In air operations against East Africa the British reported dive attacks with heavy explosive and incendiary bombs on Italian artillery and infantry positions in the Moyale area of the British Kenya colony, a section of borderland held for months by Italian invaders from Ethiopia.

Advance Continues Toward Apollonia, British Report

Army Declared Closing In on Moyale, Where Italians Make Stand

By the Associated Press.

LONDON, Jan. 31.—Authoritative quarters said today British troops were continuing to advance along the Libyan coast from Derna toward Apollonia, 40 miles to the west.

On the Kenya front in East Africa British troops were reported closing in on Moyale, where the Italians were said to be making a stand. (Moyale is a Kenya colony frontier post opposite Ethiopia.)

London military circles said they had no confirmation of foreign reports that Italian troops had abandoned Tepeleni on the central Albanian front, but said it was possible they had been forced to do so to avoid being cut off by the Greeks.

The British said their forces were advancing also in the Sudan area of operations, where they have been driving across Italian Eritrea, and in Italian Somaliland.

The pressure in Eritrea, they said, continues against Agordat and Barentu and the Italians were still falling back in the Umm Hagar district, in Southern Eritrea near the border with Ethiopia.

British circles said British forces in Italian Somaliland were "well inside the border and there doesn't appear to be much opposition."

Somali Village Captured.

Nairobi, Kenya Colony, Jan. 31 (A. P.).—British African troops from Nigeria, operating from the coastal sector of Kenya, have pushed into the southern part of Italian Somaliland and destroyed the village of Kiamboni, British dispatches said today. No Italian troops were encountered, the reports said.

This sector is some 200 miles south of the El Wak area, where British forces previously had penetrated Italian Somaliland.

Occupation Of Derna Acknowledged By Rome

Rome, Jan. 31 (AP)—The Italian high command announced today that Fascist forces had abandoned Derna and withdrawn to the west and south to avoid being surrounded.

The daily war bulletin also reported that German planes, which have been reported cooperating with the Italians in the Mediterranean, had bombed the Suez Canal yesterday.

[A dispatch from Cairo yesterday reported an air attack on the Suez Canal area but said no damage or casualties had resulted.]

Attack "Smothered"

The forces which withdrew from Derna, the high command said, made a stand in new positions and "smothered" an attack by Australian motorized units.

Fascist air squadrons bombed British mechanized forces in the Derna region and shot down two planes, it was said.

On the northern front in East Africa (presumably in Eritrea or northern Ethiopia), the Italians said they had repulsed British attacks and inflicted "considerable losses."

"Our bomber and fighter detachments exerted themselves," the communique declared, "bombing batteries, troops and motor vehicles."

A British plane was said to have been forced to land on an Italian air field in East Africa, where the crew was captured.

British warplanes were reported to have raided an unidentified place in eastern Libya, "killing three, wounding several and causing slight material damage."

Heaps of Italian Dead And Wounded Found

ATHENS, Jan. 31 (AP).—Greek forces, pushing forward in the area north of Klisura were reported today to have found heaps of Italian dead and many wounded in abandoned Fascist positions.

A Greek spokesman said four Italian counterattacks had been repulsed with 200 Italian prisoners taken in two days and later reports from the Albanian front said the charges had such disastrous results that Italian commanders had to call off the offensive action in order to reorganize their forces.

Some Fascist units were said to have lost as many as half their men. Among their captives, the Greeks said, were several officers, all belonging to units freshly arrived from Italy. Much war material, including machine guns and automatic rifles, also was seized, the spokesman asserted.

Border reports from Bitolj, Yugoslavia, said the Italians had used tanks in the Klisura region but that the machines bogged down in the soft ground and had difficulty in getting back to their bases.

GREEKS ROUT ITALIAN FORCE IN COAST AREA

Fascists' Counter-Attack "Met Fate Worse Than Any," Athens Says

200 Prisoners, Including 7 Officers, Reported Taken In Assault

By MAX WERTELSON

New Positions Taken

ATHENS, Saturday, Feb. 1 (AP)—The taking of Italian positions "of great importance" in mountains nearly 6,000 feet high and the smashing of an Italian tank counter-attack at another point on the rugged Albanian front were announced early today by the Greek High Command.

Earlier, the Greek military spokesman had said that the latest Italian counter-assault, in the coastal sector, "met a fate worse than any" of the series recently attempted. Large Italian forces were used, he asserted.

The attacking troops were repulsed with such heavy losses that they retreated in confusion and have not had time to reorganize their positions, the spokesman said.

"These Fascist troops were pursued by us and we succeeded in occupying a mountain 1,500 meters high, beyond the positions from which the Italians launched this counter-attack," he said.

Also Repulsed Farther North

At another point the Greeks occupied a height of some 2,000 meters and farther to the north "repulsed the Italians from a height of 1,600 meters," the spokesman stated.

Two hundred Italian prisoners, including seven officers, were declared to have been taken in the last of the series of frustrated Italian assaults.

Greek forces were reported advancing rapidly north of Klisura.

Termed Major Setback

As a result of what were called important gains, the Greeks were reported able to move their artillery to new positions. Details coming from the front fill in a picture of what the Greeks call a major setback to the Fascist forces.

[Editor's Note—An Associated Press dispatch from Belgrade reports that Italian troops have withdrawn from the Tepeleni, but there has been no confirmation of this from Athens.]

Greek military dispatches told of Greek troops striking, while the Italians still were demoralized after four costly counter-attacks, and pushing beyond the Fascists' starting point.

Dead And Wounded Abandoned

They said heaps of dead and many wounded were found in the abandoned Italian positions. A Greek physician in charge of sanitation in one sector said his men had buried 650 Italians at one point where a Fascist charge had been tried unsuccessfully.

Some Italian units were said to have lost as many as half their men. Among 200 prisoners taken in two days, a Greek spokesman declared, were several officers from units newly arrived in Albania.

In a severe snowstorm which prevented use of air forces, these reports said, the Greeks launched their attack under an artillery barrage aimed at preventing the Italians from reorganizing after their thrusts had been so heavily resisted that Italian commanders had to halt offensive action.

Rites Held For Metaxas

On other fronts, Greek sources said the situation was satisfactory, but activities were only of local nature.

Premier General John Metaxas, who died Wednesday, was buried today after a funeral at the cathedral conducted by the Metropolitan of Athens, head of the Greek Church, and attended by the royal family, the Cabinet, high military officers and members of the diplomatic corps.

Rome, Jan. 31 (A. P.).—Effective air attacks on Greek bridges, roads and batteries were reported today by the Italian High Command, which also said that troops and motor columns were attacked with shrapnel bombs and machine gun fire, and that one Italian plane failed to return.

On land, it said, there was artillery activity.

ITALIANS LOSE SHIP

Submarine Attacks 3 Supply Craft in Adriatic.

Belgrade, Jan. 31 (A. P.).—Reports from Bar, on the Yugoslav coast, near the Albanian border, said tonight that an unidentified submarine had attacked three Italian supply ships in the Adriatic and was believed to have sunk one.

The submarine was said to have fired several torpedoes. The freighter Renunzio and one other escaped to Bar, but the third Italian ship was reported missing.

ITALIANS REPORTED QUITTING TEPELENI

Belgrade, Jan. 31 (A. P.).—Military men reported today that the Italians had withdrawn from Tepeleni, on the Central Albanian battle front, a key point in the Greek drive toward Valona.

Reports received in the Yugoslav border town of Bitolj, said that the Italians had used tanks in recent ill-fated counter-attacks in the Klisura region, just east of Tepeleni, but that the machines bogged down in the soft ground and had difficulty in getting back to their bases.

Thousands in Greece Line Streets to Pay Tribute.

Athens, Jan. 31 (A. P.).—The late Premier John Metaxas was buried today after a funeral at the cathedral. The service was conducted by the Metropolitan of Athens, the head of the Greek Church.

A two-mile-long procession wound to the cemetery through streets lined by thousands who waited for hours to pay tribute to Metaxas, who died Wednesday.

Washington, Jan. 31 (A. P.).—Secretary Hull today described the death of Premier John Metaxas as a "great loss to Greece in the hour of her struggle for freedom." In a message to his successor, Alexander Korizis, Mr. Hull said:

"It is with a profound sense of sorrow that I have learned of the death of his Excellency, Gen. John Metaxas, Prime Minister of Greece. Please accept my most sincere sympathy in this great loss to Greece in the hour of her struggle for freedom."

VORONOFF PROPERTY HELD

Italians Seize All in Country—His Wife Mme. Lupescu's Kin

ROME, Jan. 31 (AP)—The Turin newspaper Gazetta del Popolo reported today that the government had seized all property in Italy of Dr. Serge Voronoff, 74-year-old physician and research scientist, who formerly resided and maintained a monkey farm at Chateau Bordighera, near the French frontier. The reason for the action was not reported.

Dr. Voronoff and his 26-year-old wife, who, The Associated Press noted, is a cousin of Magda Lupescu, friend of former King Carol of Rumania, reached New York last Sept. 6. Dr. Voronoff said then that his laboratory, at Menton, France, was partly in Italian-occupied France and partly in the unoccupied zone.

Italian Forces Held Stronger

ROME, Jan. 31 (AP)—Virginio Gayda, authoritative Fascist editor, said today that Italy's land, sea and air forces, as well as Germany's, had grown since Italy entered the war and "will soon show their efficiency."

His statement in the Giornale d'Italia refrained from details to avoid "prematurely informing the enemy."

War Communiques

German

BERLIN, Jan. 31 (AP).—The German high command communique:

A submarine sank 20,000 tons of empty shipping space.

Our combat planes made rolling attacks (Thursday) on war vital objectives in London, where incendiaries and explosives were dropped.

Audacious attacks were made by individual planes from the lowest altitude directed against airports, troops, camps, anti-aircraft positions, automobile columns, factories and rail lines in southeast England. In this action bomb hits were scored between parked combat planes of the Bristol-Blenheim type. A munitions dump exploded on a drill ground northeast of London. Bombs destroyed factory buildings east of Cambridge, near Stortford and at Nottingham.

The 3,677-ton merchantman Austvard was sunk 400 kilometers (250 miles) west of Donegal Bay. One smaller ship was sunk south of Humber Mouth.

Long-range army artillery continued the shelling of war essential industries in southeast England.

The enemy penetrated neither the Reich's territory nor the occupied region.

German pursuit planes downed five barrage balloons over Dover and seven over London. One of our own planes is missing.

British

LONDON, Jan. 31 (AP).—Tonight's Air Ministry-Home Security Ministry communique:

Today enemy aircraft operating singly have dropped bombs through the clouds at several points in the London area and at a few other places in the southern part of England. In the London area some houses and other buildings were damaged and a small number of fires caused by incendiary bombs. The number of casualties reported was not large. Elsewhere little damage was done and there were few casualties.

Two enemy bombers have been destroyed.

CAIRO, Jan. 31 (AP).—The British Middle East headquarters communique:

On all fronts operations continue to develop to our advantage.

The Royal Air Force Middle East command communique:

Royal Air Force activities yesterday were mainly focussed on the enemy airdrome at Barce, which was attacked several times by R. A. F. bombers. The airdrome, which is situated on the main road between Derna and Bengasi, was heavily bombed. Direct hits were observed on hangars and other buildings around the airdrome. A CR-42 was shot down in flames by one of our fighter aircraft.

In East Africa aircraft dived on a bridge on the Mega-Neghelli Road and straddled it with bombs. In the Moyale area another squadron made dive attacks on Italian artillery and infantry positions, dropping high explosive and incendiary bombs. Other aircraft bombed and machine-gunned enemy posts and buildings at Movale.

During a reconnaissance flight one of our aircraft which was attacked by a CR-42 drove off the enemy fighter and then dived and machine-gunned four Capronis on an airdrome.

From all these operations our aircraft returned safely, with the exception of one fighter which has been reported missing.

Greek

ATHENS, Feb. 1 (Saturday) (AP).—The Greek command issued the following communique early today:

Our troops conducted operations yesterday in a mountainous region more than 1,900 meters high. Enemy positions of great importance were occupied and about 150 prisoners were taken.

At another point of the front, an enemy attempt to attack by tanks was shattered at the start.

A communique of the Ministry of Home Security:

There were no raids on Greece.

As a result of bombing raids by enemy aviation on territory occupied by our army in Albania, a house used as an air-raid shelter was wrecked. From the debris were recovered four bodies of men, twelve of women, nine of which were girls between six and twelve years old, and one body of a baby.

Italian

ROME, Jan. 31 (AP).—The Italian high command communique:

On the Greek front artillery activity was reported. Bombers and fighter formations carried out effective offensive actions against enemy bridges, roads and batteries. Troops and motor columns were attacked with shrapnel bombs and machine gunned from low altitude. One of our planes failed to return.

In Cirenaica (Libya) the high command ordered evacuation of Derna in order to prevent encirclement of our positions and moved troops immediately west and south, where our detachments smothered an attack by Australian motorized troops. Our aerial formations bombed English mechanized units. Our fighters shot down two planes.

The enemy raided a place in Cirenaica, killing three, wounding several and causing slight material damage.

In East Africa in various battles on the northern front we repulsed enemy attacks, inflicting considerable losses. Our bomber and fighter detachments exerted themselves, bombing batteries, troops and motor vehicles. Another English plane was forced to land on one of our fields. The crew was made prisoner.

German Air Corps planes effectively bombed Suez and Ismailia.

BELGIAN FOOD SHORTAGE HELD WORST SINCE '14

Hoover Commission Reports Need For Wheat As Most Pressing

Medical Supplies, Canned Foods And Milk Listed By Investigators

[By the Associated Press]

Brussels (via Berlin), Jan. 31—Belgium's shortage of food and medical supplies is in many respects greater than it was after the 1914 German occupation, members of the Hoover Inquiry on European Human Needs said today.

On the basis of information it said had come from many sources, the committee listed Belgians needs in order of urgency as:

Wheat, canned foods and especially milk, meat, oil, iodine, cod liver oil and clothing.

30.24-7273

30.24-7273

Need For Wheat Stressed

The committee, headed by Frederic Dorsey Stephens, departed for Berlin after exhaustive studies in which it was aided in Belgium and Holland by Belgian, Dutch and German authorities.

The need for wheat appeared most pressing. Some is coming in from Russia, Germany and France, it was said, but it was estimated by some that 300,000 additional tons would be required before the 1941 harvest to increase rations to the point regarded as adequate for scanty, but sufficient, nourishment.

The descriptions of the situation in Belgium, as given to the committee, varied from a picture of hopelessness to the opinion in some quarters that with the cooperation of all neighboring countries and possibly the United States the emergency might be met.

Difficulties Of Transport Cited

Stephens, in view of the difficulties of transport and the question of British and German views toward extending American aid to Belgium, made no prediction as to what the United States would be able to do.

The committee sought answers to seven questions and was able to get part of the information sought.

What quantities of food had been requisitioned by the battling armies?
What are the present food stocks?
How is the present relief system working?
How much food was taken by the German authorities?
How much food did the Germans bring in?
How was the 1940 harvest, in view of the times?
What were the prospects for supplies from continental countries?

Loss Put At 30,000 Tons

The questions were not fully answered, but one estimate was that 30,000 tons of wheat were destroyed by the German, English and French armies.

There was no reliable data on the quantities taken by the occupation authorities, it was stated.

The Germans were said to have brought into Belgium 20,000 tons of rye and 41,000 tons of wheat. Limited quantities of grain are received from Russia, but a Belgian delegation now is in Russia to try to stimulate shipments for which Belgium hopes to pay with machinery. Transport is the great problem.

Reserve About 41,000 Tons

The wheat reserve, it was stated, by February 16 will be about 41,000 tons, which is considerably less than in the corresponding time of the World War occupation.

Potato stocks were estimated at 500,000 tons. As to meat, it was stated that to maintain the present ration of one and a half ounces daily 150,000 tons were needed, whereas cattle stocks were estimated at 112,000 tons.

The butter shortage was described as such that the present fat and butter ration is a half ounce against a normal consumption of an ounce and a half.

Mission Reaches Berlin

BERLIN, Jan. 31 (AP).—The Hoover committee inquiring into European food needs, headed by Frederic Dorsey Stephens, arrived here tonight for interviews with German authorities and members of the American Embassy staff.

NEEDS OF BELGIUM PUT UP TO AMERICA

Wheat Sought Urgently to Prevent Famine.

FEB 1 - 1941

Brussels (via Berlin), Jan. 31 (A. P.).—Members of the Hoover inquiry committee on European human needs said today that they had been told the Belgian shortage of food and medical supplies in many respects was greater than after the German occupation in 1914.

Belgium needs urgently these things, in the order named, they were informed: Wheat, canned goods (especially milk), meat, oil, iodine, cod liver oil and clothing.

The committee, headed by Frederic Dorsey Stephens, left for Berlin after studies of the situation in both Belgium and the Netherlands. They were aided by the Belgian, Dutch and German authorities.

The need for wheat was said to be the most pressing. Some is coming in from Russia, Germany and France, the committeemen were told, but much more will be required—perhaps 300,000 tons additional before the 1941 harvest to increase rations to a point regarded as adequate for scanty but sufficient nourishment for the population.

Descriptions of the situation in Belgium, given to the committee, ranged from a drab picture of hopelessness to an opinion in some quarters that, with the cooperation of all neighboring countries, and posibly the United States, the emergency may be met without undue suffering.

In view of difficulties of transport and the divergent German and British views about American aid to Belgium, Mr. Stephens would make no prediction as to what the United States would be able to do.

DONOVAN ARRIVES TO INSPECT TURKEY

American Flown There by British Attache.

Istanbul, Jan. 31 (A. P.).—Col. William J. Donovan, unofficial American observer touring the Near East, arrived here today by plane from Athens to consult Turkish leaders at Ankara.

His plane was piloted by Lord Forbes, assistant British air attache at Athens. This flight was taken as emphasizing Britain's interest in his tour.

Col. Donovan left the airport immediately for the American consulate, where Lieut.-Gen. Sir James Handyside Marshall-Cornwall, head of a group of British officers in Turkey since January 13 for staff conferences and inspection, waited to confer with him.

Further indicating British interest in Col. Donovan's mission was the tour of the Libyan battle front they arranged for him while he was in Africa. He witnessed part of the successful siege of Tobruk.

The American planned to leave by train tonight for Ankara, where he said he would remain two or three days. He expected to interview President Ismet Inonu, Foreign Minister Sukru Saracoglu and Premier Refik Saydam.

THAILAND GETS AREAS IN PACT ENDING CLASH

Indo-China Border Warfare Closed With Signing Of Armistice

Japanese-Drafted Act Sets Neutral Zone And Limits Naval Movements

FEB 1 - 1941

BY FRANK L. MARTIN JR.
[By the Associated Press]

Saigon, French Indo-China, Jan. 31—Thailand (Siam) and French Indo-China ended four months of undeclared warfare along their 1,000-mile jungle-covered border today with an armistice drafted by Japanese mediators and signed at 6 P. M. aboard the Japanese light cruiser Natori.

The agreement left Thai forces in possession of several areas in Cambodia, southern Indo-China, and one section in Laos, in the north.

It established a neutral zone extending ten kilometers (6.21 miles) on either side of a line fixed as the front at the official hour of cessation of hostilities, 10 A. M. Tuesday, although fighting actually continued some hours longer.

To Negotiate At Tokyo

This is to be the demarcation line pending signature of a peace treaty to be negotiated at Tokyo with Japan as mediator. The Thai forces had pushed well into Cambodia at several points and into Laos in one district.

Thailand claims territory in both provinces, which she says the French snatched from her half a century ago.

As the French and Thai delegates signed, the Natori swung at anchor in the Saigon river, near this city, winter administrative seat of the colony.

Other Ships Reported Near By

Other Japanese warships have been reported off Cap St. Jacques, fifty miles south of here.

Thailand's long-standing claims to portions of Cambodia and Laos set off the intermittent fighting late in September. Hundreds of soldiers on both sides have been reported killed, many towns bombed from the air, and naval forces have clashed in the Gulf of Siam, with both sides claiming to have sunk one or more units of the other's fleet.

The armistice stipulates that:

Within seventy-two hours of the signing, infantry of both sides shall be withdrawn from the demarcation line which roughly parallels the boundary except for the points of Thai penetration.

Line Set For Navies

Neither navy shall cross a line extended from the border into the Gulf of Siam, and planes are to be held at least twenty kilometers (12.42 miles) in the rear of the armistice lines.

No date for the beginning of the Tokyo peace negotiations was set in the armistice, which stipulated that the cessation of hostilities may be prolonged indefinitely.

Final Conferences Scheduled In Tokyo

[By the Asso

Saigon, French Indo-China, Jan. 31—With Japanese military mediators looking on and a Japanese naval force standing by, representatives of Thailand (Siam) and French Indo-China signed an armistice at 6 P. M. today, ending four months of intermittent fighting along their common border.

The pact merely established the positions of the opposing forces, pending peace negotiations under Japanese mediation at Tokyo, it was said by the participating officials.

Troops Withdrawn

The armistice provided that infantry of both armies should be withdrawn ten kilometers (6.21 miles) behind the positions occupied at 10 A. M. January 28, the hour officially set for cessation of hostilities (which, however, continued until some hours later).

The lines thus fixed follows the border except at several points where the Thai forces had penetrated into Cambodia, at the southern end of the front, and one similar point in Laos to the north.

The two navies were forbidden to cross a line extended from the border out into the Gulf of Siam, while aircraft were ordered held at least twenty kilometers (12.42 miles) behind the armistice line.

Japanese To Supervise

Troops are to be withdrawn within seventy-two hours of the signing. The armistice set no time limit for the Tokyo peace negotiations to begin or be completed.

The Japanese delegates, headed by Maj. Gen. Raishiro Sumita, were authorized to supervise execution of the armistice agreement.

Japanese Naval Units Explained

SHANGHAI, Jan. 31 (AP)—A Japanese naval spokesman today described the recent concentration of Japanese naval units off Southern Indo-China as "a necessity in connection with the armistice negotiations." He declined to amplify this statement and said he was not informed whether Japan as mediator would "guarantee" enforcement of the armistic terms.

The Japanese naval concentration had enhanced belief in some quarters that further Japanese activities in Indo-China were imminent. Reports from Saigon said two Japanese cruisers, two aircraft carriers and two torpedo boats were lying off the coast.

Quezon Looks To U. S. To Defend Philippines

Commonwealth President Says Its Man Power And Resources Are At Washington's Disposal

Manila, Jan. 31 (AP)—The man power and material resources of the Philippines are at the disposal of the United States in the world emergency, Manuel Quezon, commonwealth President, tonight told the National Assembly.

While pointing out that the islands were doing everything possible in connection with the national defense program, Quezon stressed that "with our own resources alone we are in no position to defend ourselves.

"Defense of our country remains primarily the responsibility of the United States. This is as it should be, because as long as the Philippines are under the American flag, it rests exclusively with the United States to determine whether the commonwealth shall be at peace or war."

The Philippines are to become independent in 1946.

JAPAN'S NEW ENVOY STOPS IN HONOLULU

Admiral Nomura Says He Is Coming To U. S. For Peace

[By the Associated Press]

Honolulu, Jan. 31—Admiral Kichisaburo Nomura, en route to Washington as the new Japanese Ambassador to the United States, said today "my most ardent wish is not to have Japan and the United States at war."

In the distance as he spoke were the two destroyers which joined his ship, the Kamakura Maru, last night and escorted her to Honolulu as a good-will gesture. Admiral Nomura said he was "greatly honored" by the escort.

"I am going to the United States for peace and not for war," he asserted. "There must be an understanding on both sides. The reestablishment of good relations is most important not only to Japan but also, perhaps, to your country, too."

Wants Better Trade Relations

Admiral Nomura said one purpose of his mission was to establish better trade relations with the United States. To a question as to whether he would attempt to negotiate a new trade treaty with the United States, he replied:

"Once we tried. Certainly we wish to have better trade relations."

The tripartite treaty between Japan, Germany and Italy was brought up and he was asked if Japan would adhere to it if the United States should go to war with Germany.

"I am sorry to say I cannot answer that question," he replied. "The Government decided it (the tripartite pact) and the Japanese people must abide by it."

Advises Japanese-Americans

Nomura told the Japanese newsmen present that American-born Japanese "should be good loyal Americans and alien Japanese in the United States should be calm, law-abiding and good residents of America."

After the interview the Ambassador was greeted by Admiral James O. Richardson, commander in chief of the United States fleet, and Lieut. Gen. Charles D. Herron, commander of the Hawaiian Department.

German Freighter Sails Out of Chile

Talcahuano, Chile, Jan. 31 (A. P.).—The 7,132-ton German freighter Portland, laden with 10,000 tons of oil, cereals and minerals, sailed today for an unannounced destination after having lain in Chilean waters since soon after the outbreak of war.

Maritime circles expressed the belief that the Portland would head for Japan in an attempt to evade the British blockade. She recently was overhauled in drydock here.

Brazil Bars Propaganda.

Rio de Janeiro, Jan. 31 (A. P.).—The Brazilian Government announced today that all printed or written matter adjudged to be propaganda for or against any of the belligerent Powers would be barred from the mails.

LAND FOR REFUGEES

50,000 Acres Are Donated in Dominican Republic.

Ciudad Trujillo, Jan. 31 (A. P.).—James Rosenberg, president of the Dominican Republic Settlement Association, told the intergovernmental committee for the establishment of refugees in the Western Hemisphere today that Gen. Rafael L. Trujillo, former Dominican President, has donated 50,000 additional acres of land for refugee colonization.

Gen. Trujillo previously had donated a large tract for the Sosua colony, on which the settlement association has established 300 refugees. The additional property is near Sosua, but a higher altitude.

Committee delegates, representing thirty-two nations, will leave tomorrow to inspect Sosua, returning on Monday.

Editor Deported by Panama.

Cristobal, Jan. 31 (A. P.).—William Scott, New Zealand editor of the newspaper Panama American, sailed as a deportee from Panama aboard the steamship Talamanca for New York today. He was deported on orders of President Arnulfo Arias, who charged Scott with meddling in internal politics. Scott denied the charges.

Axis Subs Are Reported Off Newfoundland

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, Jan. 31.—A radio report from a British freighter indicates big ocean-going axis submarines may be operating east of St. Johns, Newfoundland, site of one of the naval bases leased by the United States from Britain.

The 4,868-ton Sheaf Crown reported last night she had sighted a "suspicious submarine" approximately 60 miles east of St. Johns. No further word from her was heard.

Canada has no submarines, and it was believed unlikely that any United States underseas craft would be operating that far north.

In the past year there have been several reports of Nazi submarine activity in the Caribbean and off the coast of South America, but this was the first hint of operations at the northern end of the Great Banks, outside the pan-American neutrality belt.

During the World War German submarines picked off 91 ships in American coastal waters.

11 Puerto Ricans Held For Failing To Register

Counsel To One Would Withdraw Because Client Says U. S. Does Not Legally Hold Country

San Juan, Puerto Rico, Jan. 31 (AP)—Eleven Puerto Rican Nationalists, arraigned today for failure to register for selective service, pleaded innocent and bail was fixed by Judge C. C. Wyche at $1,000.

Victor M. Gomez, counsel for one defendant, petitioned for permission to withdraw from the case because his client insisted that the only argument that should be used was the contention that the United States does not legally hold Puerto Rico.

Such a notion, said the lawyer, violated his own creed of devotion to the United States and his desire to cooperate in the defense programs.

Gold Braid Replaced

Ottawa, Jan. 31 (AP)—Yellow silk lace produced in Canadian factories will replace gold braid on the cuffs of officers in the Royal Canadian Navy.

"It may not be so fancy," a navy spokesman said, "but it will be as effective and it may be a worth-while economy."

Canada formerly imported the greater part of her gold braid from France but that source vanished with France's capitulation last June.

The loss threatened a hitch in naval uniform production for a time until the lace was suggested.

Kunze and Aids Are Sentenced

Get 12 to 14 Months in Prison and Fines in Jersey Race Hatred Law Case.

Newton, N. J., Jan. 31 (A. P.).—Wilhelm Kunze, national leader of the German-American Bund, and eight bund associates were sentenced today to serve from one year to fourteen months in State prison on charges of violating New Jersey's race hatred law.

Two of them were also fined $2,000 each and the other seven $1,000 each.

The men had been indicted on charges of making or permitting anti-Semitic speeches at the bund's Camp Nordland, in Andover Township. They elected to file a demurrer, challenging the constitutionality of the law and denying the seriousness of the charges, instead of standing trial.

Defendants Will Appeal.

Judge John C. Losey of the Sussex County court overruled the demurrer on January 7 and imposed the sentences today. A motion of appeal was immediately filed.

Those sentenced with Kunze were:

August Klapprott of Andover, the bund's Eastern regional leader, whose territory reaches to Florida. He was one of those fined $2,000.

30,247-75

30.24— 7275

Matthias Kohler of Irvington, N. J., bund treasurer, also fined $2,000.

The Rev. John C. Eitting of Union City, State bund secretary.

Richard Schiele of Paterson, Camp Nordland trustee.

Paul Schaarschmidt of Paterson, also a trustee.

Carl Schipphorst of Glen Rock, a trustee.

George Neuppert of Cliffside Park, a trustee.

Leonard D. Clark of New York, writer for a bund publication.

All but Clark were given prison sentences and $1,000 fines on charges of permitting the speeches. Clark was sentenced for making one, while Klapprott and Kohler were assessed the additional fines for making others.

Judge Losey released all in $2,000 bail each pending an appeal to the State Supreme Court. None of the bund officers or Clark showed any emotion as sentence was imposed, nor was there any demonstration by the crowd composed largely of residents of this rural, northwestern New Jersey county.

Keegan Trial Date Set.

Present for the sentencing was Wilbur V. Keegan of West New York, attorney for the bund, who was indicted with the others, but who elected the setting of a trial date, then a Federal court challenge of the law. Federal Judge Guy L. Fake, in Newark yesterday, set February 14 for a hearing on Keegan's move to enjoin the Sessex authorities from trying him.

"It seems to be conceded," Judge Losey told the defendants, "that the purpose of the German-American Bund is to attain ascendancy over the Jews."

He pointed out that the Constitution guaranteed freedom of worship and added there is no room in this country for anything contrary to this document.

Hamilton, Bermuda, Jan. 31 — The original dozen censors sent here by Britain — known as "the twelve apostles"—has grown today to a battalion of 700 men and women who know how to do a thing or two with pencil and shears.

The army of censors and censorettes, whose task it is to read other people's mail and intercept anything going to the enemy, have taken over two of Bermuda's largest hotels, one for their work and the other to house them.

Spending Helps Island Business

The money they spend has brought a small boom to this island, which in normal times gets the tourists' dollars.

Their chief task is to examine both mail and passengers aboard ships calling here on transatlantic trips—and they catch them both ways.

When, for instance, an American Export liner heaves to just outside the islands, a dozen or more men and women clamber aboard from a contraband control tender.

And when they've finished with you—or your mail—you've been thoroughly censored. Some speak and read fifteen languages.

The censors boast that they do not hold up the mails. They say that mail usually is placed aboard the next boat, unless it turns out to be "interesting." In the case of clippers, it sometimes is put back on the same plane.

Observer Warns Against Regarding Threats by Hitler Too Lightly

By DEWITT MACKENZIE.

The consensus of the British press today that Hitler's threat to the United States won't scare Americans is a factual statement which probably the Nazi chief himself wouldn't dispute, although his hope obviously was to weaken any program of all-out aid for the Allies.

The statement by one paper that Hitler's pronouncement "is pure fantasy" and "has no resemblance to reality" can scarcely represent the general view. It strikes me that it would be highly dangerous to adopt that attitude toward an enemy much less powerful than Germany.

However, Churchill has made it clear many times over that he doesn't underestimate the Nazi menace. Hitler isn't playing at war with wooden soldiers, and it is wise to note that while he undoubtedly does his share of bluffing, he generally has considerable in reserve to back his bluff. The British appeals for quick help from America, and our own race for defensive arming, indicate plainly enough how Washington and London regard the German claims.

France as Object Lesson.

I have drawn attention to this because it seems to me that if we are to keep our perspective it is essential that we don't fall into the habit of underestimating the strength or the stated intentions of the Nazis. One reason that France lies crushed is because both she and England underestimated the threat from east of the Rhine.

One of the most interesting and important passages in Hitler's speech was his statement that U-boat warfare will begin this spring. This, coming on top of Nazi Grand Admiral Raeder's prediction of German victory through British shipping losses, would seem to be shifting the emphasis from the Nazi Air Force to the submarine drive.

In other words, the air fleet, on which the Nazis have been placing their chief reliance to knock England out, has proved wanting. The Luftwaffe, as Hitler remarked, will also be on the job, but it is patent that the Nazi High Command has had to shift its tactics.

The Nazi air arm has been unable to establish supremacy over the Royal Air Force. Indeed, the comparative strength of the British fleet has grown so rapidly—with the help of America—that I understand the command of the R. A. F. figures its actual fighting strength is now close to that of the Germans, although the latter have many more planes.

Planes Better Equipped.

The reason for this is that the planes which the British are turning out are said to be on the whole more up to date and better equipped than those of the Germans. That doesn't seem to make sense until we note that the Nazis are employing mass production and their industries are all set for certain types of planes, whereas the British have started from scratch and, because they are manufacturing various types in many plants, they can keep the models up to date.

With mass production it is impossible to make quick changes in the construction of a complicated machine like an airplane. In order to make any material alteration, a whole vast plant has to be realigned.

The Germans, though, are said to have been turning out submarines successfully by mass production, and it is to this arm that they now turn.

Canada Presses Manpower, Money Into New Patterns

FEB 1 - 1941 JAN 31

By WADE WERNER

OTTAWA — (Correspondence of the Associated Press) — Canada's money and manpower are being pressed into new patterns as the nation hardens its economy to meet the shock of war.

This hardening process manifests itself basically in three ways:

1. Mobilization and distribution of manpower.

2. Stabilization of prices and wages.

3. Drastic diversion of purchasing power away from luxury goods toward war materials.

During the 12 months beginning April 1, it is estimated more than 293,000 men will have to be taken from peacetime pursuits to supply the needs of war industry or the armed forces. Of these about 117,000 will go into the army, navy or air force; the rest are needed to man war-essential factories, presently being built and scheduled to get into production during the war.

NEED SPECIALISTS

Most of the men taken into the armed forces will be trained in the usual way for the specific functions of the various units; the navy and air force, however, have found it necessary to make special efforts to recruit sufficient skilled mechanics, radio specialists and the like.

But the needs of war industry cannot be met merely by drawing on the available supply of skilled workers. There is already a scarcity of machinists, patternmakers, shipyard workers, toolmakers, tinsmiths, chemists and so on, and the shortage normally would become more acute as more and more factories go into production.

To some extent the demand for skilled workers can be met by shifting men from non-essential industries to war industries. For instance, there are chemists presently employed by cosmetics manufacturers who can be taken out of the lipstick and beauty-cream trade and put to work making explosives.

In preparation for such moves, a census of non-essential industries is being prepared, showing the number and location of skilled workers who can be transferred as the need arises.

FARM LABOR SHORTAGE

Plans also are being discussed for transfer of farm workers from the Western provinces to the industrial East, where enough men have been leaving farms for factories to create a shortage of agricultural labor.

To forestall the really critical shortage likely to develop when all the new munitions, explosives, aircraft and cannon factories are ready for operation, a large-scale plan for training of 100,000 skilled workers during 1941 has been adopted. Many of the older skilled workers with long experience are expected to fit in as instructors in vocational schools or factory training centers when the plan is in full operation. About 200 factories already are operating plant schools.

The plan is to pay trainees enough to live on while they are learning. Single persons attending vocational schools will receive $3 a week if they are living at home, and from $7 to $9 if living away from home. Heads of families will receive $12 a week. In the plant schools trainees will be paid on an hourly basis: 20 cents an hour for the first 30 days, 25 cents an hour for the second 30 days, and so up to 35 cents an hour. They will work a 48-hour week.

Putting manpower in the right place is only part of the immense job of readjusting the nation for war. Prices and wages are to be kept from running wild—at least that is the non-inflationary policy on which Prime Minister W. L. Mackenzie King and his colleagues base their war-economy measures.

STABILIZE WAGES WITH PRICES

So the price of butter has been pegged, to prevent profiteering; rents have been "frozen" at the January, 1940, level; and a determined effort is being made to stabilize wages in line with prices.

Arbitrary "freezing" of wages, it was felt, might easily work hardship on the lower brackets in some fields of labor; on the other hand, the government wants to avoid successive upward changes in the price level due to successive upward revision of wages in some of the war-boomed industries.

Such wage increases were threatening to become a problem from two angles: war-essential factories were bidding against one another for skilled workers in certain lines; on the other hand, there were strikes for higher pay. The government took action to discourage competitive bidding between employers; at the same time a plan was evolved for safeguarding the worker from increased living costs during the war.

Under this arrangement wage scales prevalent during the period 1926-29 are taken as a desirable level at which to stabilize wages. It is conceded, however, that living costs in certain sections of the country, if not in all sections, may rise to an extent justifying at least temporary increases in wages. Therefore provision has been made for authorizing "cost of living" bonuses where there has been an increase of at least five per cent in the price level.

COST OF LIVING BONUS

For instance, after an investigation by government experts, a cost of living bonus of 18 cents a day recently was granted to workers in Alberta and British Columbia coal mines. The bonus applies only to the period between Jan. 1 and April 30, 1941, after which it may be revised upward or downward, according to the findings of government experts at that time.

Early in the war the government used its extraordinary powers under the war measures act to extend the scope of the industrial disputes investigation law to cover not only mines and certain public utilities, but any capital-labor dispute involving war contracts.

Under this law workers may not strike and employers may not lock them out until the questions in dispute have been investigated by a board of conciliation. In a further effort to avoid disputes likely to hamper war production it has been the policy of the government to insert in all war cantracts minimum wage and maximum hour schedules drawn up in consultation between the Department of Labor and other government departments involved.

In some cases government authority has been used to increase the length of the working day and the working week, but only where the work to be done is declared an "emergency project."

DISCOURAGE LUXURY BUYING

The third factor in the government's war-economy program is the discouragement of luxury buying and the diversion of such purchasing power into war-essential spending through increased taxation and invesment of private savings in war bonds and war savings certificates. An embargo has been enacted against most luxury goods formerly imported from the United States—including everything from automobiles to mouth-organs; the Dominion income tax rates have been drastically boosted, and an intensive campaign is being waged to persuade citizens to invest every spare cent in war savings certificates.

Behind this spartan policy is the government's conviction that while sacrificing comforts and luxuries may be an unpleasant way to finance the war, the alternative method of inflation is in the long run the cruelest—for it would destroy the value of the nation's currency and, in effect, cancel life-insurance policies and all other contracts based on a stable currency.

WASHINGTON, JAN. 31-(AP)-THE DUAL STRAIN OF WAR AND DISLOCATED TRADE, DIPLOMATIC SOURCES SAID TODAY, MAY BECOME SO INTENSE ON JAPAN'S ECONOMIC STRUCTURE THAT REALIZATION OF JAPANESE DREAMS OF "A NEW ORDER" IN THE FAR EAST MUST BE INDEFINITELY POSTPONED.

FEB 1 - 1941

BECAUSE OF THE INCREASINGLY CRITICAL STATE OF AFFAIRS, IT WAS SAID, JAPAN MAY FEEL COMPELLED TO TAKE "DRASTIC STEPS" IN AN EFFORT TO REMEDY THE COUNTRY'S ECONOMIC POSITION. THE DIPLOMATIC SOURCES BASED THEIR OPINIONS ON AUTHORITATIVE INFORMATION RECENTLY RECEIVED.

FEB 1 - 1941

AS EXAMPLES OF WHAT TO EXPECT IN EVENT OF A "DRASTIC STEPS" DECISION, THESE SOURCES CITED JAPAN'S ARMED INTERVENTION IN FRENCH INDO-CHINA, THE STRONG PRESSURE ON THE NETHERLANDS EAST INDIES FOR EXTENSIVE ECONOMIC CONCESSIONS, AND THE DIPLOMATIC PUSH TO ESTABLISH A JAPANESE-DOMINATED "EAST ASIA ECONOMIC SPHERE".

AMERICAN OFFICIALS ARE INTERESTED IN THE EFFECT THAT DECREASING TRADE AND INCREASING ECONOMIC STRESS MAY HAVE ON JAPAN'S POLICIES AND ACTIONS IN VIEW OF POSSIBLE REPERCUSSIONS ON AMERICAN-JAPANESE RELATIONS.

FOREIGN TRADE STATISTICS REVEAL, OFFICIALS HERE REPORTED, THAT, DESPITE FRANTIC EFFORTS TO TURN THE TIDE, JAPANESE EXPORTS TO GOLD-PAYING COUNTRIES HAVE BEEN STEADILY DECREASING TO AN EXTENT THAT GREATLY DIMINISHES JAPAN'S ABILITY TO PURCHASE ESSENTIAL RAW MATERIALS IN MANY COUNTRIES.

JAPAN'S SERIOUS NEED OF OIL, COTTON AND OTHER COMMODITIES FOR INDUSTRIAL AS WELL AS WARTIME PRODUCTION IN THE FACE OF ITS DRASTICALLY REDUCED PURCHASING POWER, IT WAS REPORTED CONSEQUENTLY MAY BECOME THE PARAMOUNT CONSIDERATION IN JAPAN'S FUTURE POLICY TOWARD THE SOUTH SEA AREAS WHICH POSSESS SUCH A STORE OF STRATEGIC AND RAW MATERIALS.
